Only a Beggar; —BUT— A Queen Among Women

CHAPTER VIII.
She could not help thinking of him. He was so unlike other young men she had met. That air of his, of serene conviction that the world had been made for him; the perfectly self-possessed manner in which he took it for granted that every one was in the best of humor with him; that life was a case of "roses, roses all the way," impressed her. It had been more than pleasant to listen to his deep, musical voice, to look at his handsome face, to note the unconscious ease and grace which marked his every movement. Even the admission of his faults, the candor which took it for granted that every one knew he was good for nothing, told in his favor; for Diana, young and inexperienced as she was, knew that most men are given to putting their best goods in the front window. But Lord Dalesford seemed to say: "Here I am—no good. But, all the same, you've got to like me, you know."

And how much and generally he was liked! It was evident that Lady Mabel adored him; that Bertie regarded him as the model of manliness; that even Lady Selina was fond and proud of him. What a pity it was, thought Diana, that he should waste his days in the dissipation to which smaller men were given!

As for Dalesford's reflections, they shall not be set down. Indeed, he himself would have found it difficult to do so; but he paced up and down the terrace long after the others had gone to their rooms, and, smoking hard, recalled the beautiful face, the violet eyes, that had met his so modestly; the voice that recalled the night he had first heard it; and when, at last, he turned into the house, he murmured: "She is peerless; there is no one like her, no one!"

"I'm going to row down to Rivermead," he said to Mabel, the following afternoon. "You can come, if you like."

"Mabel had far better employ her time hemming those handkerchiefs," Lady Selina remarked severely. But Mabel knew that this was not to be taken as a command, and she was down at the boat quite as soon as Dalesford.

He pulled down stream almost silently, only half listening to Mabel's chatter. "Oh, they're paying tennis!" she said, as they came in sight of Rivermead lawn. "And, of course, that Selby boy is there," she added, with the tolerant contempt with which a girl regards the seniority of a lad who is only a year or two older than herself. "Tennis! I'm glad I told them to put our shoes in. Here we are, Miss Bourne! We can make a foursome, can't we?"

"Might one suggest that it would be as well to wait until you are asked?" said Dalesford, as he fastened the boat, and took Diana's hand. She came toward them, with a smile, and without, she fervently hoped, a blush; but the blush was there, and it heightened her loveliness in Dalesford's eyes. He had thought she must surely have looked her best last night, in her "war-paint and feathers," as Mabel had put it; but he questioned whether she did not look still more beautiful in her plain white dress and simple hat, which accentuated her slight figure and sweet, girlish loveliness. And there was a hint of shyness in her greeting which was too subtly delicious for expression, like the fragrance of the flowers amid which she moved.

"None the worse for last night's dissipation, I trust!" he said, holding her hand a moment or two longer than was necessary. "Slides?" to Bertie. "Oh, I'll play with Miss Bourne, if she'll accept me for a partner."

"What nonsense!" Mabel began to reprobate, but, catching Dalesford's eye, she added hastily: "All right! But you'll have to play your best, Mr. Selby—if you've got a best. From what I saw of your play as I came down the river—"

"Now, you two!" Dalesford broke in laughingly. "If you are going to squabble, we shall beat you easily."

Dalesford was, of course, a good player; as Bertie had said, he was good at most games; but he played very badly that afternoon, for his heart was all a-quiver with the proximity of the slight figure that moved so swiftly, so easily, with the sound of the laughing voice that contended over the score. Diana was absorbed in the game, and yet she was conscious of a novel sense of enjoyment; surely, the sun shone more brightly, the birds sang more sweetly, the perfume of the flowers was sweeter than it had been half an hour ago!

They played until Aunt Mary came out, followed by a couple of maids, with the tea; then the girls sank, breathless, into rustic chairs, and Dalesford dropped onto the grass at their feet, leaving Bertie to hand the cups and bread and butter. Strangely enough, no one of them proposed to renew the game; and, presently, Bertie and Mabel wandered across to the fruit garden, Aunt Mary went back to the house, and Diana and Dalesford were left alone.

"It's just the right time for the river," he said. "Shall we go?" Diana looked round for the other two. "I'll call them," she said. But, before she could do so, he remarked: "Oh, let them alone. They'll be much happier with the peaches!" And, after a moment's hesitation, Diana rose, and they went down to the boat.

She leaned back in the soft-cushioned seat, and Dalesford let the boat slowly drift with the stream, now and again taking a pull at the sculls, sitting half sideways, but only half, so that he could see the lovely face opposite him. The mystic beauty of the water and sky wooed them to silence, and for some minutes they drifted without speaking; but presently, with the skill of the man of the world, he led her into talking, and got her to tell him of her travels, of the famous places she had seen, and then, he made a comment, or asked a question which drew her on; and, as he listened, he felt as if she were all unconsciously revealing her sweet, unstained nature, as if he were looking at a vision of the "pure womanhood" of whose existence he had been hitherto skeptical. With the admiration that stirred his senses was a reverence which thrilled him with an aching of the heart for his own unworthiness. With an almost audible sigh, he turned the boat round.

"I feel as if I had been with you on your travels," he said. Strange, I've been all over the same ground, but I didn't see so much in it. And now you are going to settle down? I'm glad. Must I begin to pull?" he asked regretfully, as Diana looked at her watch. "The time has passed very quickly. I wonder whether you would join us in a picnic to-morrow?"

"Not to-morrow," she said, a trifle wistfully. "I am going to read Mrs. Baker's little girl; she has been ill, and declares that a fairy-story, a real fairy-story, does her more good than beef-tea and Jellies."

"Oh," he said casually. "And who may Mrs. Baker be?"

"She lives in the cottage with the green shutters, at the end of South Lane," replied Diana unsuspectingly.

And she was still unsuspecting that they had met by anything more than chance when she saw him sauntering up the lane next afternoon.

"Let me carry your basket," he said, after they had exchanged greetings.

"But you were going the other way," she reminded him.

"Was I?" he said. "All ways are the same to me. That's the great advantage of being a lazy man, with no object in life. Now's the time to read me a lesson on the wickedness of sheer indolence."

Diana laughed. "Why should I?" she said frankly. He looked rather discomfited for a moment, then he retorted:

"I was under the impression that it was the duty of the 'good person' like yourself to speak the word in season."

Diana looked at him gravely. "I wonder why nearly everybody scoffs at goodness," she said very gently.

"Sour grapes," he responded. "Some of us couldn't be, if we tried. But I wasn't scoffing, by the way. No! Is this Mrs. Butcher's—Baker's? What's her name? I suppose I may be allowed to wait for you?"

Diana looked her surprise. "Why, I shall be twenty minutes, or half an hour," she informed him.

"Well, I can endure my own company for as long as that," he said. "I'll sit on the bank there, and smoke, or go to sleep, while your read to that lucky young person inside. What's she done that she should have a beautiful—amiable young lady to read fairy-tales to her?"

"She has been ill," said Diana. "Oh! And, up to the present moment, I have been under the foolish impression that health was a blessing," he remarked, addressing the sky.

Diana went into the cottage, and up to the sick room, where the convalescent child greeted her with affectionate eagerness.

"Why, Mary, what beautiful grapes!" Diana exclaimed, casting an eye on a basketful on the table.

Mary flushed, and pursed her lips, with an air of great secrecy. "Yes, miss, aren't they lovely? But I mustn't tell you who gave them to me. I promised!"

"Promises are sacred, Mary, and I won't even try and guess. But, really, I'm almost ashamed to put my poor peaches beside them. Never mind! Here they are!"

She took out the contents of her basket, and read her fairy-story; and, having tucked up the child cozily, went down-stairs, where the mother was waiting to express her gratitude.

"And it do seem, miss, as if your goodness to Mary, was catching, for another of the gentry has been to see her, and he brought her the loveliest bunch of grapes—There, now! Tut! tut! she broke off penitently. "And I promised not to tell! I can't think how it slipped out, miss—that I can't."

"I don't suppose it is of much consequence," Mrs. Baker," said Diana, with a tone of shy pleasure in her voice, and she was still smiling as she left the cottage; but the smile was driven off as she came to the figure lying on the bank.

He sprang up to meet her, and flung the cigarette away.

"You said twenty minutes," he remarked, with an air of long-suffering patience. "You have been gone two hours and a quarter."

"Exactly five-and-twenty minutes," corrected Diana, looking at her watch. "Did you cut the grapes yourself, Lord Dalesford?"

He glanced at her shame-facedly, then laughed.

"So Mrs. Butcher—Baker betrayed me?" he said. "Well, it's not the first good action I've been guilty of, and I'll try and not do it again—if you'll let me off with the option of a fine."

"Yes, I will," she said, her eyes beaming on him. "There is an old man, an old woodman, in the next cottage but one. His great and crying need is tobacco—"

Dalesford groaned. "Oh, I say! Well, I'll send him some cigars."

"No," said Diana, in a matter-of-fact way; "cigars are no good. I tried him with some, and he said that he couldn't taste them. It must be tobacco—that very black stuff, like old rope. And you mustn't send it; you must take it, because he likes to hear some one talk."

"Talk!" he echoed, with dismay. "Why, what on earth could I have to say to him?"

"Tell him about—the shooting. Oh, anything that will interest him."

"I will," he said grimly. "I'll tell him about a certain dame sans merced, who sets her devoted adherents impossible tasks. What's the man's name?"

HEAVY GUN FIRING HEARD.
LONDON, Nov. 5. Heavy gun-firing was reported off the Yorkshire Coast this afternoon.

THAT NAVAL ENGAGEMENT.
SANTIAGO, Chili, Nov. 5. No further news has been received here concerning the naval engagement off the coast of Chili last Sunday, in which German and British warships participated. No British warship has come in so far as known here to any Chilean port, or has any wreckage been found on the coast. The only information in the hands of the British Legation here is that from German sources.

LATEST FROM CHILL.
VALPARAISO, Nov. 5. It is learned that the British cruiser Glasgow and the transport Oranor escaped after the naval engagement with Germans off the Chilean coast on Sunday. Wireless messages from the Glasgow, calling for the British cruiser Good Hope, were intercepted. The latter did not reply. It is believed that the Good Hope and the British cruiser Monmouth with their total crews, were lost. The whereabouts of the German cruisers Leipzig and Blücher are not known.

SUNK BY MINE.
LONDON, Nov. 5. The British mine-sweeper Mary, was sunk by a mine in the North Sea to-day. Six of the crew of fourteen were rescued. The survivors landed at Lowestoft.

STRENGTHENING THEIR FORCES.
OTTAWA, Nov. 5. The Government has decided still further to strengthen Canada's forces for active service, by at once mobilizing four regiments of Mounted Rifles, one in Ontario, one in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, one in Alberta and one in British Columbia. Such troops are not being used in France, the men being demounted and posted in the trenches, but, later on, they may play an important part outside Europe, perhaps in Egypt.

FURTHER RECRUITING.
MONTREAL, Nov. 5. Orders were received here this morning from Militia Headquarters at Ottawa to recruit for one Battery of Field Artillery and one Field Ambulance. This means an additional force of 384 men and 193 horses from this division.

WILL SOON SEE ACTIVE SERVICE.
LONDON, Nov. 5. That the Canadian troops need not be detached much longer at Salisbury Plain, is the opinion of the London Daily Telegraph, which, commenting on the King's inspection, says: "Now that their training is all but complete, the time has almost come for them to join the fighting line. They could have no better send off than the praise and encouragement from their Sovereign and the Minister of War."

ARRESTED AT HALIFAX.
HALIFAX, Nov. 5. An immigration department interpreter here named Arthur Lauf, has been arrested for espionage. A complete wireless outfit was found in his room.

LONDON, Nov. 5. Britain to-day formally annexed the Island of Cyprus in the Mediterranean Sea, which nominally formed a part of the Turkish Empire. The defensive alliance between Britain

Women's Ailments Caused by Neglect.

Proper Treatment Will Quickly Bring Back Robust Health and Good Spirits.

Women are on the whole more sickly than men. One reason is that their system is more complicated; another and more important reason is they put off measures of relief too long. At the beginning, constipation is the cause of nine-tenths of women's ailments. The blood becomes weak and polluted—the nerves suffer and a run-down condition takes root. Because of their mildness of action as a system regulator, no medicine for women can compare with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The kidneys quickly respond to the remedial action of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and the result is as you would expect—pain in the back and side, shortness of breath and bad color disappear—the functions of the body then operate naturally, congestion and pain are prevented and perfect health returns.

"Thousands of happy women say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the greatest and best blood-purifier, the finest complexion renewer, the most certain regulating medicine known. Sold by all druggists and storekeepers, 25c. per box, five for $1.00 postpaid. The Cartharothoene Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

and Turkey having become annulled by the outbreak of the war, the British Government has decided it to be necessary to appropriate the island, in order that proper provision might be made for its Government and for its protection. The island, since the Anglo-Turkish convention of 1878, has been occupied and administered by Britain, though it had remained under the suzerainty of the Sultan.

SITUATION STILL UNCHANGED.
HAVRE, Nov. 6. The Belgian Government issues the following statement: "Belgian advance detachments which have progressed as far as Lombertzyde, towards the Yser between Saint George Capelle and Tarvaite, could only advance with great difficulty owing to poor roads, and the inundated country. They were also harassed constantly by the infantry and machine gun fire of the enemy. The enemy still occupies Saint George Capelle and the farms located on the left bank of the Yser in the neighborhood of Schoorbakke. South of Dixmude the Germans made an attack last night in the direction of Bixschote Bridge. They failed in the attempt and were forced to evacuate completely the village of Bixschote to the south of Zandane. The enemy continued to attack with greatest violence along the front of the Allies between Hallebroeke and Messines. All our positions have been held, and at certain points the Allies have progressed, notably towards Hallebecke and Wytez-Charte. In the region of Armentieres south of Lys, the situation remains the same."

PERSIA REMAINS NEUTRAL.
LONDON, Nov. 6.—(Official.)—Persia has presented all the Powers a note announcing strict neutrality. The statement says: "Persia, now that the confederation has extended to her territory, renews assurances of strict neutrality, and asks for the good offices of Britain to prevent the neutral soil of Persia from becoming a theatre of war."

A GERMAN REPORT.
BERLIN, Nov. 6. The German headquarters issued the following statement yesterday: "Yesterday the Belgians, assisted by the British and French troops, made a fierce attack by way of Neuport between the sea and inundations, but they were easily repulsed. Near Ypres, southwest of Lille and south of Berry-au-Bac in the Argonne region of the Vosges, our attacks are progressing. In the eastern theatre of war there have been no material events."

TURKS REPULSE RUSSIANS.
AMSTERDAM, via London, Nov. 6. The following Turkish official statement is contained in a despatch from Constantinople: "The Russians are now strengthening their positions near the frontier, but have been repulsed completely from Karaklisso and Teehan districts. During the bombardment of the entrance to the Dardanelles the hostile fleet fired 240 shells without causing material damage. Our forts fired only ten shots."

Football Game For Patriotic Fund.

The students of the City Colleges, acting upon the suggestion of their teachers, have arranged an interesting football match for to-morrow afternoon, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the Patriotic Fund. The contesting teams will be the St. Bon's, the inter-collegiate champions for 1914, and a mixed eleven composed of players selected from the Methodist and Bishop Feild College teams.

The line up of the teams will be as follows:—
Champions (St. Bon's).—Brown, goal; Fox, Kennedy, backs; Dubour-dieu, McGrath, Burke, halves; Devine, Kelly, Callahan, Clouston, Keegan, forwards.

Allied Forces (B. F. C. and Meth.)—Tilley, goal; Curtis, Butler, backs; Mews, Stick, Halfyard, halves; Prapnell, Jerret, Hunt, Woods, Forbes, forwards.

The game will start at 3 p.m. An admission fee of five cents will be charged, with an additional fee of 5 cents for the grand stand. The game promises to be most interesting, as both teams are equally balanced. As the cause is a laudable and deserving one, the promoters of the game may be assured of a large attendance.

Fishery Reports.

Oct. 24th. From F. R. Dinham, (Eagle Point to Mall Bay)—One schooner arrived from the banks but none from the Labrador. There is no bait and prospects are nil. The catch to date is 8315 qts. with 130 for the last week. No boats, dories or skiffs are fishing.

Oct. 31st. From J. F. Williams, (Bay Bulls South Head to Long Pt.)—The total catch is 4,740 qts. and for last week 40. Twenty dories and skiffs and ten motor boats are still fishing. Prospects are very poor owing to the scarcity of bait. Only little herring can be obtained.

Oct. 31st. From Geo. Vey, (Fortune)—Cod is very scarce and the shore fishery is practically over for the season. Only a few herring can be obtained, not sufficient for bait purposes. The weather recently has been rough, the prevailing winds being S. to S. E. strong accompanied by rain and fog. Only 10 dories are now fishing. The total catch is 1,356 qts. and for last week, 27.

A Happy Child In Just A Few Hours

When cross, constipated or if feverish give "California Syrup of Figs" then don't worry.

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs" because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered. When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it can not cause injury. No difference what age your little one— if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomachache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle. Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

Red Cross Ships.
The S. S. Stephano got away for Halifax and New York last midnight. The S. S. Florizel is due to arrive here Monday next from Liverpool and will resume the Red Cross service on Wednesday.

Arrivals at Burgeo.
The following banking schooners have arrived at Burgeo during the past week:—
Gertrude L., 22 men, with 928 qts.;
Kmd., 14 men, with 915 quintals;
and the Hazel, 16 men, with 418 qts.

Extracts From Letter

From one of the Wild, Contingent.

"Florizel,"
Devonport,
Oct. 19th, '14.
We have had no leave since coming to England, owing, I think, to not having proper uniforms. We were given our khaki caps on Friday and were measured for our uniforms.

Devonport is a fine place and the people did cheer us as we came into the harbor. We went for a tramp yesterday and saw the best part of Devonport. Some of the shops and houses are grand. When we landed the people gave us cigarettes, apples and chocolates. While on our tramp a big Canadian officer (a chaplain) called out "good luck to you, I'm a Newfoundland too." His name, I have since learned, is Wells.

We are alongside a Canadian troopship with 300 fine big fellows on board. I saw them drill and don't think they can do any better than our bunch.

Hr. Grace Notes.

The schr. Nelson, Capt. Thomas Noseworthy, arrived from Labrador last night. There are still a couple of other schooners on the way, and no doubt delayed by the unfavorable weather.

The Kyle arrived yesterday morning en route to Labrador, for possibly her last trip for the season.

A number of Carbonar and North Shore men arrived from Sydney by yesterday afternoon's train. The men say that every day finds labor scarcer, and these men thought it wise to return home at once.

Mr. W. Seekins and several others of the Bay Roberts Cable staff, arrived by train yesterday, and returned to Bay Roberts in the afternoon by motor boat.

The concert given on Tuesday night by the young ladies and gentlemen in aid of the Women's Patriotic Fund, was a grand success, and the sum of nearly $58.00 was realized. The singing, the acting, recitations and in fact the whole programme was most creditably accomplished, and the object was a very worthy one. The participants are worthy of congratulation on their efforts.

Mrs. Dugald Munn left for St. John's by yesterday afternoon's train, and will reside there for the winter.

The schr. Cleopatra, E. Taylor, master, is ready to leave for Catalina with a load of coal from the Harbor Grace Coal Co.

An apparently enjoyable birthday party was celebrated in the east end yesterday, more enjoyable possibly for the participants than for the neighbors who were forced to listen to not edifying language.

The first touch of winter visited us this morning when the ground became covered with snow. It soon turned mild, however, and is now very sloppy walking.

The Scandal of the Paymaster's Department. A Remedy Demanded and Demanded at Once!

We have been and are still strong in our opinion that it is the duty of Newfoundland to respond to the call for men both for the Army and Navy, just as it is the duty of the men of England and other parts of the Empire to respond and to respond quickly to the call. About 1,000 men have already left our shores and are now doing their duty to their King and country. A large number of the men who were in training at Pleasantville when they received their pay paid it over or most of it over to their wives, mothers or others who were more or less dependent on them. Since these men left by the S.S. Florizel the dependents have not received any part of the pay on which they were relying. There are women and children in this city at present in severe straits and who have made efforts many times to get this deferred pay and have not yet received a cent since the Florizel left. If there is one duty more incumbent on a Paymaster than another, it is the duty to look after the wives, children and other dependents of those who have offered their lives for the country. Many of these men have thrown up good jobs to do their "bit" for their country, and it is the least we can do for them to see that those dependent on them do not starve. A particular case was given to us this morning where two sons wrote their mother saying they were each allowing her Four Dollars a week. The stupidity of the business is that the Government is providing pay for our soldiers, and owing to mismanagement, that pay has not been available since the volunteer contingent left. A form was drafted, and the understanding was that each man would sign it before he left. This was not done. We do not know the reason. In any case, it should have been done. It should have been provided of everything else. For the first care should have been the provision for those left behind by our fighters, and every chance of any dependent being brought to the verge of want should have been avoided at all costs. A paymaster had been appointed soon after the contingent was embodied, and he was provided with three persons to help him. These forms were not filled in, and the contingent left without any authority being left behind them for the payment of part of the pay to dependents. Then it was arranged that the forms should be filled up while the contingent were crossing the Atlantic and then sent back here. Whether this was done or not we have not

Committee of the Patriotic Committee authorizing the payment to him of an extra Five Dollars a day. He is thus receiving Eight Dollars and seventy-five cents ($8.75) a day, or $3,200 a year. Now, why should he be receiving more than double the pay and allowance of a Canadian paymaster. It will be interesting also to contrast this rate of pay with that of paymasters in the Royal Navy. An Assistant Paymaster begins at £19, and rises to £210. A Paymaster begins at £255 and rises to £602. The paymaster of our forces is receiving at starting more than twice the amount he would secure if he had been promoted from Assistant Paymaster and was commencing as Paymaster in the Navy. He is receiving more than a paymaster receives who had risen to the highest seniority as Paymaster, and gets within $200 a year as much as the Paymaster-in-Chief of the whole Royal Navy. We pay the Deputy Finance Minister who has charge of the whole of our expenditure $1,800 a year, and $3,200 to the man who is looking after the payments in connection with the Contingent. We pay $2,000 to the Auditor General who controls the whole of our expenditure, and $2,000 to Capt. Timevell. We pay $1,200 to the Assistant Auditor General, who has a much more responsible position, and more than two and a half times the amount to the Paymaster of our forces, and all while wives, children, mothers and sisters of our soldiers are crying out for the money which is due to them, and which is necessary to feed and house them, and all because the Paymaster's forms were not filled up before the Contingent left. In the name of the people who have sent these soldiers, in the name of soldiers who have gone to fight at the front, in the name of the wives, children, mothers and other dependents left behind, we demand a speedy remedy. We demand that provisional payment be made immediately to these dependents. We insist on the rescission of the Order-in-Council making these extravagant allowances to Captain Timevell, and the placing of his rate of pay at not more than Canada allows. What will recompense a Canadian paymaster should recompense ours. This should be done, and done immediately.

ROUT OF THE GERMANS.

LONDON, To-day. A correspondent to the Daily Mail in North France under date November 5th, describes the relief felt in Dunkirk, Calais and the neighbouring towns and villages at the retreat of the Germans which he declares amounts to nothing less than a rout. He says the German right is smashed like a fallen wine glass, guns, stores, rifles and even prisoners were abandoned in a rush from this fatal battlefield. The chance of the Germans was well on the wane, when the flooding of their positions came as a climax of disaster. There is now left no more than a handful of the German force which met its fate at the Yser. Thirty thousand Germans, say the Belgians, have been put out of fight on this line. Not a single gun remains on this of the River and unburied dead, drowned and wounded with the memory of all the trains of wounded that left for the firing line in recent days, lead one to think that there is no overting of the enemy's loss there must be many thousands of prisoners.

CEMENT!

To Ensure Protection.

An interesting feature of the report of Mr. F. Langley, on the city's water supply, is the suggestion with regard to fire protection. The inadequacy of the existing system has been often demonstrated during the progress of a big fire, but in the event of a fire occurring in both ends of the city at the same time this town would be in imminent danger. He submits a full report on the matter of complete fire protection, the principal feature of which is the proposal of laying a 29-inch main along Duckworth Street, to act as a storage reservoir in case of such an emergency, as before stated. At present the water mains on Water Street are only 6-inch pipes, and are altogether too small. The cost of a complete water service that would guarantee adequate fire protection would be about $168,000 less $20,000 which the Commission has already figured on for an improvement of the system.

Sulphate of Ammonia.

St. John's Gas Light Company.
Dear Sir,—I have analyzed a sample of Sulphate of Ammonia made at your Works, and I found 20.5 per cent of NITROGEN, Sulphates of Ammonia and Nitrate of Soda are the two principal Nitrogen manure.
Sulphate of Ammonia is less soluble than Nitrate of Soda, consequently it is a safer manure to use during a wet season.

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, Oct. 14th, 1914.
LONDON AND THE WAR.

After dark, when the streets of London are dimly illumined and the searchlights are flashing in the sky, it is not difficult to realize that we are at war. During the day, however, London is pretty much as it generally is, except perhaps in Whitehall. In what may be called the head centre of Imperial administration every other man one meets is in uniform. Officers of the Navy and the Army come and go in large, though not very elegant, motor cars which carry the letters "O.H.M.S." prominently displayed upon them. More uniforms are in fact to be seen at the War Office and the Admiralty than I can remember ever seeing. Motor cycle despatch riders, looking very smart with their khaki showing through their silky oilskins, dart in and out of the slower traffic in a way which would, in peace time give even a London crossing policeman nerves. These are not days of peace, however, but days of war, and the representatives of the Army and the Navy are freely and gladly given the right of way everywhere. At the War Office there are chairs in the archway leading to the court, and on these the wives of soldiers sit, with their children grouped about them, waiting patiently on "news." It is obviously not easy for them to be anything but downhearted. Still, they bear up wonderfully even when the "news" is bad.

answer was unhesitating. "The man who has inspired all the modern teaching of German history and trained scores of the professors—Treitschke." It is difficult for anybody who has been trained to regard history as radiating out from England to see it from the point of view of another nation. But briefly Treitschke represented the German Empire, not as a modern State forty years old as we think of it, but as a revival of the old Germanic State which had disappeared for centuries owing to a long paralysis of the race. The effect of this teaching in creating the notion of an age-long pre-destined German ascendancy, interrupted by a phase of decadence, must have been to encourage the ambitious conception which is now so remarkable in German politics. Treitschke swung Germany round to see the national history in a new aspect and on a grandiose scale. That accounts for part of the Megalomania.

THE PINCH IN GERMANY.

Recent German newspapers I have received show that the pinch of war is being severely felt. Not only have a large number of wholesale manufacturers shut down their factories, but there are complaints that retail trade has practically ceased. The reason for this is not at once obvious, but it lies in the fact that most of the able-bodied men are on active service and therefore withdrawn from wage-earning, while their women dependents who are left at home are allowed the miserable pittance by the State of 9 marks per month, with 2 marks for each child. On these terms it is practically impossible to buy sufficient food without private resources or drawing on savings, and savings cannot be drawn out of every bank. For that reason nothing is available for any shopping except food, and no shops except the cheap bakers are doing any trade. It must of course be remembered that the families of men at the front live rent free during war time, but this means the rationing for the time of the rentier class, whose spending power in the shops is reduced to nothing. A curious illustration of the collapse of industry is given from the tailoring and dress-making trades, where it is reported that most of the customers who were having clothes made to order when war broke out at once went to the shops, cancelled the completion of the order, took the goods to be finished at home, and offered to pay for as much of the work as had been done. In this particular trade great distress has been caused by this panic measure.

REAPING A RICH HARVEST.

British manufacturers of electrical appliances are experiencing a very busy time. In the past immense quantities of electrical goods, ranging from complicated and expensive machines used in electro-medical treatment to the cheap pocket lamps, so dear to the hearts of Boy Scout age, have come from Germany. But now our own workshops are working night and day in order to meet the demand. Makers of electro-medical apparatus affirm that there is no reason whatever why British firms should not get this trade and keep it. In producing appliances for X ray work there is no new problem to solve, and there appears to be no reason why hospitals and medical practitioners should not rely upon British electricians to supply all the requirements in respect of electro-medical apparatus. In the matter of pocket lamps and electrical novelties British makers are reaping a rich harvest. Hitherto the larger proportion of these goods have been supplied by Germany, and as this market is closed British firms are flooded with orders, the present being the time when retail dealers begin to take in their stocks to supply the Christmas trade.

Have You an Itchy Spot?

Somewhere on your body? If so, attend to it at once. In Eczema—and Itchy spots, whether dry and scurfy, or moist and inclined to "weep," are generally eczematous—delays are foolish, allowing the disease to spread and affect more of the good skin. Your best chance for a cure is to use Zylex, which will give almost instant relief, and if used in the earlier stages of the trouble will almost certainly bring a cure, and in any event will greatly ameliorate the trouble. Ask your druggist about it. Price 50c. a box. Zylex Soap, 25c. a cake.

Three Generals Shot.

London, Oct. 23.—A News agency despatch from Petrograd, which is unconfirmed from any other source, says that a German officer who was taken prisoner declares that the three German Generals responsible for the disaster to the German arms at Augustoff were court-martialed and shot. The officer, according to this story, showed a copy of a general order by the Emperor expressing most intense indignation over the surrender of Augustoff and ordering the recapture of the position under a penalty of death.

NAMES FOR BATTLES.

The nomenclature of war is out of date. When a single battle is fought on a line of a hundred and fifty miles long it is difficult to give it a geographical name. The battle of the Marne could be so called only because the center of decisive action was on that river. As for the present battle the newspapers began by calling it the battle of the Aisne for a similar reason. But here further difficulties arose. In the first place, the battle has lasted twenty-nine days, and a modern newspaper gets tired of repeating the same headline twenty-nine times. One impatient journal has for some time used the name "The Battle of the Rivers," presumably because the Somme, the Oise, the Aisne and the Meuse all come into the scheme of operations. But the title does not really mean very much. Most battles are battles of the rivers. Then this one has developed into a more or less static condition of equilibrium along most of the line, with only the tail wagging fiercely. If geography is to give the name the present title should apparently be the "Battle of the Belgian Frontier." But there is no satisfaction to be got out of geography. It looks as if we shall be forced to invent a new system of names altogether. Readers of newspapers see battles graphically as a plotted curve that wriggles like a skewered eel. It is difficult to think of them as fought at this or that place or along a line to which a geographical name can be given.

HYMNS FOR WAR TIME.

For a selection of hymns for use during the war the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge has cast its net wide, and brought into requisition some writers not usually thought of in this connection. In their booklet entitled "In Hoc Signo," that has been sent out, I find hymns by Milton, Bunyan, Whittier, Kipling, John Addington Symonds and Macaulay. Two popular Scottish favorites, "Pray that Jerusalem may have" and Dr. Matheson's "O love that will not let me go," have a place in the collection, as well as the National Anthem, "God Bless our native land," and "God save the people." The Archbishop of Canterbury in a foreword expresses his conviction that the book will be "widely welcomed and most profitably used." The catholic spirit in which the selection has been made fully merits this commendation.

THE TEACHING OF TREITSCHKE.

There have been a good many explanations of the origin of contemporary German opinion on politics. The military despots acting through the press, philosophers, historians, have all been found guilty by one writer or another. Some writers have mingled all of them into one heterogeneous group united for the full purpose of creating monstrous doctrines. Doubtless all the people whose names are so glibly associated have contributed in their various ways to make Pan-Germanism. But many of them would be astonished to find themselves put into the same prisoner's dock with those to whom we have so hurriedly linked these. During a conversation recently with an English scholar who is well acquainted with German thought, and who studied in Berlin twenty years ago, I asked the rather large question—Who was more than anybody else responsible for the present political complexion of German thought? The Painting the House.

By RUTH CAMERON.

There are many things that even after painstaking effort to get the other fellow's point of view, I simply cannot understand. A nd one is why people paint their houses pink or blue.

In an ideal location, nestling in among the fir trees on a beautiful upland road which I frequently traverse, is a small old fashioned house. No, I take back that word "nestling." It doesn't nestle, it shrinks away from the fir and they from it, for the house is painted a bright, salmon pink.

The road is a favorite drive on which we always take our visitors, and I do not think one of them fails to express surprise and distaste at that unfortunate house. Yet someone must have admired it, else it would not have been painted that miserable color.

The whole question of house painting is a very interesting one to me. I think the color and paint condition of a house has more to do with its power to attract or repel than any other single factor. The girl with nondescript features but a fresh, pretty color is usually hailed as a pretty girl by the casual observer; whereas the girl with well cut features but a pale or muddy skin is passed by without notice. And so it is with houses. The thoughtful observer may appreciate good lines, but the casual passerby will never be attracted to a house if its fine lines are obscured by ugly or dingy paint.

Of course the whole question of painting is a question of personal preference. Yet there are canons of good taste and of bad taste here as in everything.

Personally I like a white house best. "Paint it white," is always my cry. But a letter friend with whom I have been discussing this subject presents a point of view which is worth considering.

"Don't paint your house white unless the lines are perfect,—it will look like a tombstone. And don't outline the windows of a dark house with white. That is a common error and is so ugly. If they do not plumb you see it instantly. A window is not generally a thing of beauty in shape; why should each one be outlined and strike the eye first. It is like sewing the seams of a black dress with white cotton—they must be perfectly straight, and even then, who wants to see the shape of the seams?"

Anything that blends with the outside world is right for a house color. The harmonious shades of brown and green, and of course that exquisite shade of gray which weather worn shingles assume, will make a house become a graceful and rightful part of the landscape instead of standing stiffly aloof from it.

Though space presses I cannot close without including another hint which my letter friend, a woman of wide experience in home making passes on. "Tramp in the path," she says in regard to the color to paint the piazza floor, "and scrape your shoes on the porch floor,—then have the painter match the color so that every careless person's foot prints will not show."

Lord Kitchener and the Boy.

Ambitious to become a soldier, a Ramsgate boy, Reginald Smith, whose father and five uncles served with the colors, ran away from home and walked to London. He called first at Buckingham Palace and then at New Scotland Yard, where he asked to see Lord Kitchener. By chance Lord Kitchener called at Scotland Yard at the same time and was stopped by the boy, who told him that he wanted to enlist.

Putting the boy on the shoulder, Lord Kitchener said: "You're too young, sonny; wait until you get older."

The boy, whose father works at Ramsgate Railway Station, is to be sent to a military school so that his ambition may be realized.

Ira Thomas.

Red McGhee says: Yes, Ballston Spa is on the map. But don't it seem a handicap to have one's birthplace there? Well that's where Thomas first saw light in eighty-one, one winter night. They say he yelled for fair. He yells some yet at first or third Mack slips him the word to do a coachin' turn. From Ballston Spa when twenty-one young Thomas beat it. Twa'n't no fun to work that butter churn.

Some lad, he was. Stood six feet two an' had the beef an' muscle, too, to star behind the plate. Hartford an' Newark had him first. With Providence he next rehearsed, then struck his big league gait. New York, Detroit, his schedule went before ol' Mack got on his scent an' landed him with cash. He made a star right off the bat, but no one was surprised at that 'cause Connie don't buy trash.

His size, his eye, his ol' right arm, his battin' prowess boded harm to all the other clubs. Last year his hand went bad an' when they gave him charge o' green young men he made stars out o' dubs. An' now when Mack goes sick or lame ol' Ira steers the Mackmen's game in this year's pennant hunt. We're not forgettin' Schang or Lapp, but Ira is the battery chap who oughta rank out front.

Stop Coughing.

It's quite as foolish as it is annoying to keep on coughing since "PHOROTONE COUGH MIXTURE" is guaranteed to soothe and heal the irritated parts at once, and to rapidly destroy the very cause of this aggravating nuisance. Hundreds of persons are complaining every day about the cough or cold they have had for a long time, and they are not able to get rid of it.

Don't let a cough or cold hang on to you day after day, and run the chance of catching and developing the "cough" that is not easy to throw off. You will avoid all this worry (about the cough or cold you have) by obtaining "Phorotone Cough Mixture" at once.

Sold at Stafford's Drug Store, Theatre Hill, and Stafford's Pharmacy, Duckworth Street. Price 25c; postage 5 cts. extra.

Household Notes

A large hole cut higher up in a chimney means a distinct saving of heat.

It is a great comfort to a child to have small furniture in its own little room.

Dried vegetables have to be cooked longer than others to make them digestible.

To prevent valuable vases from tipping over and breaking, fill them with sand.

Jelly may easily take the place of cranberry sauce in the Thanksgiving dinner.

Read candle shades are easy to make, and excellent from a decorative point of view.

If gold fish become ill, the chances are it is due to overfeeding or lack of cleanliness.

Mix your soapsuds and do your washing with brains, and see how much easier it is.

In washing, always try to have the water the same temperature throughout the wash.

To clean stained eggs for shipping, place them in vinegar and wipe off on a cotton cloth.

Marvels can be done with the old portieres, couch and table covers, by dyeing them a new shade.

If the contents of the garbage can are drenched with kerosene daily, it will discourage the flies.

Always, if possible, cook the pumpkin the day before the Thanksgiving pies are to be made.

Don't forget that if you leave non-safety matches about, mice may nibble them and start a fire.

Don't wash stockings after other clothes, such as hannels, unless you want them covered with lint.

"Lizbeth."

"Lizbeth" an interesting love story produced by the I. M. P. Photo-Play Company is the head liner at the Crescent Picture Palace this week end. Clara Merceveau and Wm. Shea are the principals engaged in this fine domestic drama.

The Powers Company give us "The Sea Urelin," this story is enacted in a fishing village; some of the scenes are very exciting especially when the two fishermen, in spite of the girl's entreaties, grapple in the boat and overturn her; the photography of this picture is very fine.

Bob Leonard and Margerite Fischer, the great Rex actors, feature in "A Woman's Folly," a story of wonderful heart interest.

A comedy film, "The Only Child," Lady Spookum engages a French artist to paint Bay Snookum's portrait, he teases his best but can't do it. Another comedy mixed in with a clever love story is "Pawnee Romance"; Missessaire Bob goes west for excitement and gets plenty of it.

Frederick Kestelbs, tenor, sings: "Till the Sands of the Desert Grow Cold." Don't miss this great show at the popular Crescent.

Another Great Circus Act.

Last night the Frog Man and Serpentello, gave one of their finest acts before a large and delighted audience. They showed some wonderful high jumping, an act that must have cost them years of training to accomplish. The Rossley pictures are giving great satisfaction, and to-night they are changed again. Fatal Shooting Accident Yesterday.

The victim of the shooting accident, which occurred at the Gaff Topsails railway for many years.

He, with two of his companions named Sparkes and Dave were in the vicinity of the Topsails partridge shooting, while going through the woods he fell, and the gun which he was carrying exploded, the discharge entering his abdomen. His companions hurried to his assistance, but the wound proved fatal and he expired half an hour after the occurrence. The Reid Mtd. Company, upon being notified of his death, immediately made arrangements for confining the remains, which arrived in the city by today's express.

The deceased was a trusted employee of the Street Car Service and was well known in the city. He leaves a widow and several children to whom the Telegram extends sincere sympathy.

Another Fatal Accident

Last evening the Minister of Justice was apprised by Magistrate Way, of Harbor Breton, that James Douglas, belonging to Pushthrough, had met with a fatal accident. A large stick fell on him the previous day and he succumbed to his injuries.

Wonderful Film at the Nickel Theatre.

THE MASTER OF THE MINE.

The week-end programme at the Nickel Theatre this evening is composed of the best pictures obtainable and patrons are assured of a pleasant time. No better arranged films have ever been given in St. John's. The feature picture which is by the talented Vitagraph Co. is in itself well worth the admission fee. It is entitled: "The Master of the Mine" and all the company's star artists in the cast. A melo-dramatic social play it has all the strong points of the wonderful story it is. It tells of two fathers who are anxious for their children to marry. Be sure and see the ending. The acting of all, that could be desired while the scenes and costumes are elaborate. This film had a great run in New York, and is still in demand there. The beautiful city of San Francisco and its environments make a charming travelogue which is well worth seeing. "Dynamite, the New Farm Hands" is an educational picture of great value. There are three bright comedies:—"The Race," the "Catch of the Season" and "The Golf Game and the Bonnet." In the last the celebrated comedian John Bunny is the principal actor. Mr. Huskins sang: "When I Dream of Old Erin" and made a big hit. He will repeat it this evening and those who have not yet heard it should not fail to attend. There will be a big matinee for children to-morrow with an extra reel for the children. Be sure and send them.

Wedding Bells.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Cathedral last night by the Rev. Canon White, when Mr. James Gush led to the altar Miss Mary Crocker, eldest daughter of Wm. Crocker, of Spencer Street. The bride was attired in a cream serge dress with hat to match, and was supported by her sister, Miss Florence Crocker, while Mr. Harold Moore supported the groom. The bride was given away by her uncle, Mr. William Littlejohn. The only jewellery worn was a pearl necklace, the gift of Master Cliff Patterson. The happy couple left for the Goules.

Heart Interest Stories of the War.

AN OFFICER'S PLUCKY ACT.

Private D. Schofield, of the first Cheshires, who has just returned to his home at Newport, and who was wounded in a battle not far from Mons, tells the following story:

A German aeroplane flying over our heads was the first intimation of the proximity of the enemy. Our artillery were quite unable to bring it down, but suddenly from behind us a French aeroplane rose like a shot and hovered above the German which was at that time flying from end to end of our trenches. What really happened I cannot tell, but shots were exchanged between the aeroplanes, and the next thing we saw was the German aeroplane spin round as if all control of the machine had been lost, and come down with a sickening crash just behind our trenches. By this time the German artillery had found the range, and opened a murderous fire upon us, which was kept up for hours. Before we heard the "retire" they came within 400 yards of our trenches.

We retired on a road, and here I saw a brave deed performed by a lieutenant of the A company. I only know his nickname, which was "Winkepoop." He had been shot through the right leg and left foot and on that road we cut off his boots and attempted roughly to bandage his wounds. As he rose to his feet he saw one of our privates in distress about fifteen yards away and seizing his gun he rushed or hobbled forward to bring him in, which he managed to do on his back under a murderous fire from the enemy. Having dropped his rifle and sword in this courageous act, he made his way back for them, and we missed him after that, and indeed, he has not been seen since.

IN A TIGHT CORNER.

Private Alexander Anderson, of the 2nd Battalion of the Royal Scots, who has returned wounded to Aberdeen, gave the following account of his experience at Mons to a "Scotsman" representative:

The shrapnel, he said, did the most damage. The German infantry could not hit the place they belong to. We could not help hitting them. We saw them first about 800 yards away, and they came along in bunches just like a crowd leaving a football match. Our Maxims simply struck them down, and I will guarantee that for every man that fell on our side they lost ten or twelve. It was rapid firing and we gave it to them hot. None in our trench was killed, and we had only five or six including myself, injured with shrapnel. A piece of shrapnel struck me on the top of the left ankle about half past seven o'clock, cutting thro' my boot and making me feel a little queer. I bandaged it up and went off with the others when the orders came to retire about one o'clock on the Monday morning. There was no flames by that time and the Germans big guns had been blazing about all night. We had been in a tight corner—two regiments against thousands, as most of us believe—and I would like to say a word for our captain, Captain Hill Whitson. In the trenches on Sunday night he was walking about with his revolver, ready for anything, and cheering us up while the shrapnel played about our position. Well, as I said, we had to retire. We went back three or four miles. The first regiment we saw was the Gordons, and I took particular notice that they had a German prisoner in the front of their ranks.

BEST SUMMER HOLIDAY.

A Corporal in the Motor Cycle Section of the Royal Engineers, who enlisted for the war, writes:

Last night the enemy made an attempt to get through to our base in armed motors. Myself and two other motor cyclists were sent but to look for them. It was a pitch-black night with a thick fog. One of our men got in touch with them and was pursued. He made for a bridge which had been mined by the engineers and that was the end of the Germans. The German artillery is rotten. Last Saturday three batteries bombarded an entrenched British battalion for two hours and only seven men were killed. The noise was simply deafening, but so little effect had the fire that the men shouted with laughter and held their caps up on the end of their rifles to give the German gunners a bit of encouragement. This is really the best summer holiday I have had for a long time.

A Good Time to Change

If you have been using a mixture of cream of tartar and soda for quick baking you will find it profitable, because of the increasingly high price of cream of tartar, to use Royal Baking Powder instead.

It will pay you to do this because the price of Royal, which is made from highly refined cream of tartar, has not been changed, and because you will find it in every way more satisfactory than the use of homemade mixtures to which you have been accustomed. Royal Baking Powder is famous for its absolute purity and its reliability as a quick raising agent.

Farewell Party.

AT THE INSTITUTE.

A number of lady friends of Miss Sophia Shaw, late of Bald's employ, who leaves shortly for Boston, gave a farewell party at the Girls' Department of the Seaman's Institute last night. Miss Shaw has been residing at the Institute for some time and the occasion of her departure called forth the little surprise party, organized by the other young lady residents. Upwards of thirty ladies were present, including several young ladies from the city.

The affair took the form of a tea and entertainment, and was presided over by Miss Bennett, the Matron of the Institute. An interesting programme of vocal and instrumental music and games was carried out, which was thoroughly enjoyed. Miss Shaw received many expressions of the girls' good wishes, couched in language that would do credit to any after dinner speaker. The singing of Auld Lang Syne and the National Anthem brought the happy event to a close.

HOW THE KARSRUHE WORKED IT.

CARDIFF, To-day.

An officer of the Cardiff steamer Cornish City, which was sunk by the German cruiser Karsruhe in the Atlantic, says the Germans had a depot on an island off the North coast of Brazil, and that with this base and with powerful wireless apparatus on their ships they were well informed concerning movements of British steamers and cruisers.

GERMANS HAVE WIRELESS STATION IN AMERICA.

LEWISTON, Maine, To-day.

Developments during the past forty-eight hours, indicate that Germany's location of a wireless station in America is somewhere near Bar Harbor. These developments bear out the contention of British and French Ambassadors that such a plant existed, also that a leading New York newspaper has been fitted with a plant and in turn has been giving inside information from the German side of the battle line.

THE VALPARAISO MYSTERY—STORY THAT B.M.S. GOOD HOPE WAS NOT IN THE FIGHT.

HALIFAX, To-day.

There were many rumors in Halifax that word had been received from the naval authorities and others that there was no truth in the Valparaiso story of the naval battle. There was nothing in these rumors. No word was received giving any official confirmation or denial. A despatch came from Santiago that no British ships had put in at any Chilean port after the alleged battle. The message from Santiago says: News is still lacking to-night concerning the whereabouts of five British and German vessels, which were among those participating in the naval engagement off the Chilean coast last Sunday night. These ships are the British cruisers Monmouth, Good Hope, Glasgow, the British transport Oranito and the German cruisers Leipzig and Bremen. A despatch was received from Valparaiso giving details of the alleged battle. The London correspondent of the Associated Press credited the result of the naval battle off the Chilean coast between the British and the German

German Gun-Beds.

Platforms suitable as emplacements for heavy siege guns and surreptitiously constructed in times of peace by German residents in their private grounds have been discovered, too late, outside great fortresses in Belgium and France. These conveniently situated emplacements, made leisurely in advance for the German artillery and well known to the German commanders, contributed to the rapid capture of Mauberge and the successful bombardment of Antwerp.

Wedding Bells.

On Sunday, Nov. 1st, a pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Mary's when Mr. Francis Lee, of Riverhead, was joined in holy wedlock to Miss Annie Kain, a highly esteemed young lady of Briggs. The bride, who was very prettily attired in a costume of navy blue silk voile, with hat to match, was attended by Mrs. J. D. Burke (St. Mary's), and Miss Rose Fagan, Riverhead. Mr. Frank Healey and Mr. James Hearn ably supported the groom. At about three o'clock in the afternoon the happy couple and their immediate friends drove to "The Harbour" where the Rev. Pastor was waiting to tie the nuptial knot. After the ceremony was completed and the bride and groom heartily congratulated, the whole party enjoyed the drive homeward where they arrived about six p.m. Some twenty couple then sat down to a sumptuous repast and did ample justice to the good things provided. The younger members of the party then enjoyed themselves in singing and dancing. During the whole of Sunday the settlement was gay with bunting flags were flying from many houses; this together with the fact that the bride received numerous presents, shows that the young couple were very highly esteemed.

McMurdo's Store News.

FRIDAY, Nov. 6, 1914.

During this damp, chilly weather, of which we have a considerable amount every fall, not a few need some lozenge to keep away colds and throat and bronchial irritation. A lozenge is in many cases the most efficient, as it is the readiest means of combating the tendency towards throat and bronchial trouble. One lozenge which is very soothing to the mucous membrane of the parts in question, is our Pine Tree Lozenge. If you are at all liable to throat or bronchial irritation, the investment of twenty-five cents in a box of McMurdo's Pine Tree Lozenges will pay you a handsome dividend in health and comfort. Why not try a box?

Why Tars Wear Blue and White!

The selection of blue and white as the color of our naval uniform came about in a curious way. In the middle of the 18th Century it was decided to have a regular uniform for the Navy, and the then Admiral of the Fleet was summoned to attend a meeting to settle on the color. The Admiral was for blue and red, these being the national colors. But the Duke of Bedford, who was present, spoke up and said that the King, George II., had seen the Duchess of Bedford riding in a habit of blue faced with white and that the color of this dress had so taken His Majesty's fancy that he had appointed it to be the color of the uniform of the Royal Navy.

Since that time the Royal Navy Blue has become a standard, and we are pleased to announce to all British subjects everywhere that in the dyeing of garments to this color we give complete satisfaction.

Visited London.

Mr. Ralph Andrews, late of the Public Health Office, who is now with the First Newfoundland Regiment, at Salisbury Plain, writing to a friend here intimates in his letter that our regiment were going to be granted leave of absence in a couple of days time to visit London, besides the boys were granted the concession of a half fare to travel. Mr. Andrews letter was dated October 22nd, and, it is therefore assumed that his visit to the big English city has taken place.

Why Tars Wear Blue and White!

The selection of blue and white as the color of our naval uniform came about in a curious way. In the middle of the 18th Century it was decided to have a regular uniform for the Navy, and the then Admiral of the Fleet was summoned to attend a meeting to settle on the color. The Admiral was for blue and red, these being the national colors. But the Duke of Bedford, who was present, spoke up and said that the King, George II., had seen the Duchess of Bedford riding in a habit of blue faced with white and that the color of this dress had so taken His Majesty's fancy that he had appointed it to be the color of the uniform of the Royal Navy.

Since that time the Royal Navy Blue has become a standard, and we are pleased to announce to all British subjects everywhere that in the dyeing of garments to this color we give complete satisfaction.

Yours very truly,
JOS. S. MUNN,
Hon. Treasurer Fin. Com.
METZ.

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old St. John's."

Metz, which is anxiously waiting to discover whether to shout "Hoch der Kaiser" or "Vive la France" at the close of the war is the capital of Lorraine and has been located under the scrimmage line of almost every first-class European war. It is a quaint town of 60,000 people and was there when history rolled up its sleeves and began the job of writing up Europe. Sixty thousand people is not much of a population to accumulate in 2,000 years, but when it is considered that the people of Metz have had to knock off work every few years and dodge cannon balls and other unhealthful missiles the town has done very well.

Metz has belonged to a great many nations and kings, but until 1870 it had one great pride. It has never been captured by siege. Army after army marched against its citadel and bombarded it with whatever was handy, but in the end the enemy always retired full of dents, while Metz gave its ancient war cry, and continued to do business at the old stand. In 1870, however, the Prussian army encountered 150,000 French in the vicinity of Metz and after a few days drove them into the city and then sat down around it. This was too much for Metz. It could keep off the foe, but it could not feed its defenders. At the end of two months horse meat could only be afforded by the aristocracy and Metz surrendered.

Since 1870 Metz has been a great German fort and its principal occupation has been to take care of its garrison of 25,000 men. It manufactures beer, shoes, guns and artificial flowers and entertains many tourists, who come to see its great cathedral, the old gates in the city walls and the mediaeval streets lined with houses which have been weak in the knees for the last three hundred years. It is completely surrounded with huge German forts and the easiest way to get into chronic and very serious trouble, even in times of peace, is to wander out to one of these forts and take a shot at it—not with a gun, but a camera.

Metz is now almost entirely German, and its French inhabitants have to go down cellar behind the woodpile in order to shrug their shoulders or perform other national rites in safety.

Makes Hair Grow

The time to take care of your hair is when you have hair to take care of. If your hair is getting thin, gradually falling out, it cannot be long before the spot appears. The greatest remedy to stop the hair from falling is SALTIVA. First discovered in England, SALTIVA has been nourishment to the hair roots and acts so quickly that people are amazed. It destroys the dandruff germ, the little pest that snags the life that should go to the hair from the roots.
