The Lost Will; OR, LOVE TRIUMPHS AT LAST!

CHAPTER III.

SCARCELY anyone in the little crowd had heard Norton's cry; no one had distinguished the words; they were all intently gazing on the famous Mr. Chalfont as he made his way to his motor-car. Nora grasped her father's arm and looked at him anxiously. He seemed to be gasping for breath, fighting against an almost uncontrollable emotion; but suddenly his manner changed; he became strangely calm and self-possessed, and, as he drew back a little, he nodded to Nora reassuringly; but his eyes never moved from Mr. Chalfont's broad back. The two gentlemen entered the motor-car and were driven away, the little crowd began to melt; but Norton waited and, stepping forward, addressed the hotel porter, who stood looking after the car with a proprietorial air, as if he had staged the whole thing and was satisfied with his work.

"Can you tell me the name of that gentleman who has just driven away?" asked Norton; and, to Nora's surprise, though his voice was somewhat hoarse and strained, he was still calm.

"That's Mr. Chalfont—the great Mr. Chalfont," replied the porter, with a tolerant smile.

"The great Mr. Chalfont?" repeated Norton, as if he were learning a lesson, his eyes fixed on the porter's face. "Excuse me, I'm a stranger to London, and I never heard of the gentleman. I can see that he's somebody of importance—the crowd and the cheering—what is he?"

"What isn't he? would be a better question, and easier to answer," replied the porter, looking down with a superior smile on the giant figure and the thin, wasted face of his interlocutor. "He's a very great man indeed; just been giving a dinner. A famous City gent. You must be a stranger not to have heard of Mr. Chalfont."

"Yes; it's my fault," said Norton, almost meekly. "Do you happen to know where he lives? Excuse me for asking, but"—he glanced up with a smile of simple cunning—"I happen to be an inventor; yes, an inventor, you know, and I should like to see him."

"That's easier said than done," remarked the porter, with a shake of the head. "I don't know where his offices are, but he lives at his place in Surrey, Chertson Hall."

"Thank you, thank you," said Norton, and he allowed Nora to draw him away. His grey, set face, his strange and unnatural calmness frightened her, and she hailed a taxi-cab; he made no remonstrance, but entered at once. On the journey home he maintained an absolute silence, merely nodding in response to her anxious inquiries; he seemed lost in thought, and she noticed that the brooding, restless expression had left his face and that one of calculation and resolution had taken its place. When they reached home she got him into his chair and filled his pipe, and mixed him some whisky and water; he accepted these attentions absently, and sat smoking and gazing at the fire for some time, while she, watching him covertly, bustled herself noisily about the room. Presently he called to her and pointed to the chair opposite, and she sat down.

"I'm going to tell you something, Nora," he said; "something I've kept all these years—"

"Not to-night, father; you're tired and ill," she said. "Tell me in the morning, after you've had a good night's rest."

"What I'm going to tell you about," he went on, ignoring her remonstrance, "happened a long time ago, before you were born. We were out Ballarat way, your mother and me. You don't remember her; she died a few weeks after your birth. You're like her. She was a good wife to me; all through the hard times—and Heaven knows they were hard!—she never said a word of complaint. But I don't want to talk about her. It's something else. I was a prospector, and we were out, she and I, in the new gold district. That was in the early days; before they'd got mining down to a system; it was a rough-and-ready business then. You went out on the tramp, with your tools on your shoulder, and just chased your luck and knowledge."

He paused for a moment, his mind evidently going back and brooding over the past.

"There's a lot goes to the making up of a good prospector; it's a kind of gift; a matter of instinct; you might almost say smell. You find yourself in a gulch, one just like any other gulch, with nothing particular about it; but, before you've got a hundred yards, you know, if you're a prospector of the right sort, that there's gold there. It isn't the look of the ground, it isn't the rocks, or the colour of the banks, it's just instinct. I was in such a gulch one evening when the feeling came over me that I was going to hit it. I stopped the cart—I had your mother with me, we'd got a cart—and I pitched the tent there and then. We were down almost to the last bag of flour that night; I'd scarcely a penny in the world, but the weather was warm and we'd clothes, and food enough for a week or two, at any rate. I started prospecting the next morning and I came upon the gold, almost right away."

Nora made a murmur of sympathy.

"Yes, it was there all right enough; placer, easy to get at. But I knew by what we call indications that there was a lot of it below the surface, and I was afraid that we shouldn't get at it and clear it before the news spread. Oh, we were there by ourselves," he said, answering Nora's look; "but the news of gold spreads as soon as it's found; it's 'most as if the birds carried the news, as if it was borne on the wind; you simply can't hide it. So I wasn't surprised when, one evening, I see a man coming down the side of the mountain. He looked like a sundowner. I rested on my pick and waited for him. He was a chap about my own age, sturdy and well set up, and I spoke him well, though there was something about him, a hunted kind of look—I can't explain—which didn't take my fancy. He said he was out prospecting, like me; that he'd had no luck and was half-starving. I took him to the camp and I made a clean breast of it; it wouldn't have been any use doing otherwise; for I could see, by the way he shot his eyes at the digging, that he saw I'd struck the gold. It wasn't long before you were due, and your mother was anxious and ailing; but she made him welcome in the way of the country, and she cooked food for him; he ate like a wolf, trying not to do so; and while he ate I made my kind of plan, and I told him it while he smoked over the fire. I said I'd found the gold all right, and I offered to make him a partner; we was to share like and like, from the very next day. I told him who I was and what I'd been doing; but he didn't let on much about himself; and that I didn't like, because out there, as you know, men are pretty free-spoken—unless they've got something up agin 'em."

Nora mimed him another weak glass of whisky and water and he took a drink and went on, in the same low, almost monotonous voice, as if he were repeating something he had rehearsed many times.

"I'd had fairish kind of luck before Bradshaw came—that was his name—but it set in with a rush from the very day he joined us; we got a'most frightened—at least, I did—at the amount of stuff we raised; and we worked like demons all through the sweating day, and sometimes, when there was a moon, far into the night; for we both of us knew that we shouldn't have the place to ourselves for long. Besides, I was getting anxious about your mother; I wanted to take her to one of the big camps where there'd be a doctor; and one night I told him this and said that we'd have a square-up. We'd got a fortune—a big fortune—buried in a hole in the tent, and I arranged that next day we'd divide it; I'd take my share with me; he could come along too with his or he could stay on and work the diggings till your mother was well

"Father!" uttered Nora, with tender pity.

"On the top of his pannikin I found a piece of paper. Here it is; I've got it still."

With a hand that shook he took an envelope of waterproof from his pocket, and drew out a dirty piece of paper.

"This is it!" He read in a low, strained voice:

"I've thought better of it, partner. I'm going on to Shallow Camp, and I'll send a doctor and a woman down; it's better for your missus than traveling in her condition. I've taken the swag because I don't mean to come back; there are reasons. You'll soon make it up. Your partner, Bradshaw."

Norton folded up the paper carefully in its wrappings and as carefully returned it to his pocket. There was silence for a moment as he sat and stared at the fire with his hollow eyes; then Nora murmured painfully:

"Mother!"

enough for me to bring her back. He said he thought he'd stay and look after the place. I told your mother this when I went into her tent, and she seemed pleased that Bradshaw wasn't going with us; for somehow, though she'd never said a word against him, I knew that she didn't fancy him; perhaps it was a way he had of sitting silent and brooding for hours, or that trick of his of starting and going for his revolver if he heard a sudden noise—a bit of rock tumbling down, or the cry of a bird."

Nora was leaning forward, her hands clasped on her lap, her eyes looking straight before her; she was thinking of that mother whom she had never known.

"I left Bradshaw sitting smoking over the fire, and I went to bed and slept as a man sleeps when he has been working through the whole of the sweltering day with scarcely time to snatch a meal."

He paused, his face seemed to grow greyer, his lips twitched, and he bit hard on his pipe.

"When I went out in the morning, Bradshaw wasn't there; he wasn't in the living tent, nor at the diggings. He had gone."

"Gone!" echoed Nora, with the apprehension of what was coming.

"He'd taken the horse and cart; and"—his voice grew hoarse and he stretched out his clenched hand—"and he'd taken the gold; all but one little bag of dust, a hundred-thousandth part of the whole."

"Father!" uttered Nora, with tender pity.

WAR REVIEW.

British and French veterans have made another victorious and successful smash at the Hindenburg line, sweeping forward on a front of 25 miles. They went ahead several miles making many prisoners. The most important aspect of the advance is that it makes more certain the capture of St. Quentin, which the Germans have been ordered to hold at all costs. The important place is virtually surrounded on three sides and its fall seems only a matter of days. Field Marshal Haig's third and fourth armies charged the trench system occupied by the British before they were pushed back by the Teutonic flood last March. They captured in wide sectors the outer defences of the Hindenburg line. The British assault was over a front of 16 miles, from Holme west of St. Quentin to Gouzeaucourt north of Epehy. In their advance which reached a depth of more than six miles at some points, they took more than 6,000 prisoners. Not only did the blow bring nearer the capture of St. Quentin, which the Germans are struggling desperately to hold, but it went far towards wiping out the only bulge in the British line, which resembles a salient. Epehy, at the apex of the bend, has been taken, and the same fate has befallen Gouzeaucourt and Hargricourt, which stood at the ends of the wings. The importance which the Germans attached to the territory wrested from them, is indicated by the announcement that they launched determined counter-attacks as soon as they could be organized, from Hargricourt to the Orignion Rebutel. The success of their efforts remains somewhat obscure, but it is not believed they can recover the ground they have lost. While the French advance was less spectacular than that of the British with whom they co-operated, they were equally successful in gaining their objectives. They moved forward on a front of six miles to a average depth of 1 1/2 miles, and an addition of several hundred prisoners was made to the British bag. They now hold the southern outskirts of Contescourt, less than three miles from the suburbs of St. Quentin. This city, where the troops of Von Goeben scored a great victory in 1871, is one of the buttresses of the Douai-Cambrai-St. Quentin, LaPere-Laon line, beyond which it has been announced the Germans would not fall back. With the French in the outskirts of LaPere, with St. Quentin invested, and with the British battling doggedly for Cambrai, the great Hindenburg defence system is in danger of being

WAR REVIEW.

British and French veterans have made another victorious and successful smash at the Hindenburg line, sweeping forward on a front of 22 miles. They went ahead several miles taking many prisoners. The most important aspect of the advance is that it makes more certain the capture of St. Quentin, which the Germans have been ordered to hold at all costs. This important place is virtually surrounded on three sides and its fall seems only a matter of days. Field Marshal Haig's third and fourth armies charged the trench system occupied by the British before they were pushed back by the Teutonic flood last March. They captured in wide sectors the outer defences of the Hindenburg line. The British assault was over a front of 16 miles, from Holnon west of St. Quentin to Gouzeaucourt, north of Epehy. In their advance which reached a depth of more than six miles at some points, they took more than 6,000 prisoners. Not only did the blow bring nearer the capture of St. Quentin, which the Germans are struggling desperately to hold, but it went far towards wiping out the only bulge in the British line, which resembles a salient. Epehy, at the apex of the bend, has been taken, and the same fate has befallen Gouzeaucourt and Hagricourt, which stood at the ends of the wings. The importance which the Germans attached to the territory wrested from them, is indicated by the announcement that they launched determined counter-attacks as soon as they could be organized from Hagricourt to the Ouzon Rivulet. The success of their efforts remains somewhat obscure, but it is not believed they can recover the ground they have lost. While the French advance was less spectacular than that of the British with whom they co-operated, they were equally successful in gaining their objectives. They moved forward on a front of six miles to a average depth of 1 1/2 miles, and an addition of several hundred prisoners was made to the British bag. They now hold the southern outskirts of Contescourt, less than three miles from the suburbs of St. Quentin. This city, where the troops of Von Geisler scored a great victory in 1917, is one of the buttresses of the Douai-Cambrai St. Quentin, LaFere-Laon line, beyond which it has been announced the Germans would not fall back. With the French in the outskirts of LaFere, with St. Quentin invested, and with the British battling doggedly for Cambrai, the great Hindenburg defence system is in danger of being breached at three of its strongest points. Once ousted from it the Teutons will have back of them no strong fortifications until they reach the Maubege defences. The taking of St. Quentin remains a difficult task, however, for the Germans are in strong defensive positions and a captured order from General Von Morgen to the importance of the terrain they hold. He orders them not to yield another foot of ground in the imminent decisive battles. While the British and French were forging ahead relentlessly to the west, the Serbs and the French in Macedonia were making more emphatic their defeat of the Bulgars who have been reinforced by German troops. There is every indication that the offensive in the Near East is of major proportions and that it will develop to the limit. It has widened to the west of Sokolo and east of Veterenk until the front extends over 16 miles. The Allies have penetrated at some points a distance of ten miles. The resistance of King Ferdinand's troops is weakening as they are forced back. While Marshal Foch was following his policy of striking at widely separated points along the battle line the day was one of comparative quiet for General Pershing's field army. There was no activity of consequence on their front beyond the usual artillery and patrol activity.

BRITISH CAPTURES.

LONDON, Sept. 18. In their attack northwest of St. Quentin to-day the British have captured 3,000 prisoners and a number of guns including a complete battery with horses. The French also made an attack on the right.

VILLAGES TAKEN.

LONDON, Sept. 18. The British have penetrated the enemy line northwest of St. Quentin to a depth of three miles and captured more than 6,000 prisoners. Field Marshal Haig reports to-night. The British have captured Fresnoy Le Petit, Berthaucourt and Pontru and the Australians have occupied Le Verguer, Vilerent, and Hargicourt. The high ground south of Gouzeaucourt has been carried by the British, who reached the outskirts of Villers, Gulsain and occupied Ganche Wood. Templeux le Guerard, Ronsony, Epehy and Peziere have also been taken, the troops penetrating to a great depth along the line.

BELGIUM REJECTS OFFER.

PARIS, Sept. 18. (Havas.)—The Belgian Government after consultation with their Allies, according to the Petit Parisien, has decided to refuse without elaboration the reported offer of a separate peace made by Germany.

BRITISH ATTACK.

LONDON, Sept. 18. British forces attacked this morning northwest of St. Quentin, according to an official report from Field Marshal Haig received at the war office this morning. The village of Holnon, three miles northwest of St. Quentin, has been captured by the British.

SEAPLANES DRIVEN OFF.

LONDON, Sept. 18. Five enemy seaplanes which approached the east coast of England were driven off by four British machines, one enemy machine being destroyed. The statement reads: During the last 48 hours the Royal Air Force contingents working with the navy have dropped thirteen tons of bombs on the docks at Bruges and on the Maria Alter air drome. Eleven enemy machines and a kite balloon were destroyed and seven machines driven down out of control. Four of our machines are missing. A formation of five enemy seaplanes approaching the east coast was met and engaged by two seaplanes and two airplanes. One German machine was destroyed, the others retiring eastward.

HUGHES' TRIBUTE TO SOLDIERS.

LONDON, Sept. 18. Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.—Speaking at the Savoy hotel here to Australian and New Zealand press delegates, at which Lord Beaverbrook and other distinguished visitors were present, Premier Hughes, of Australia, referring to his recent visit to the front said that he had travelled over the battlefields which had been made famous by the glorious deeds of the soldiers of Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Britain and America. He had been privileged to witness the mer and had seen them covered with laurels of victory. He had learned at what cost they had won victory. He had seen the country over which they had to pass a land now after German occupation of unpeppable desolation.

MURDER IN THE FIRST DEGREE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18. Charles E. Chapin, city editor of the New York Evening World, who confessed to having shot and killed his wife two days ago, and failed to carry out his plan to kill himself also, was to-day indicted for murder in the first degree.

BRITISH AIRMEN'S WORK.

LONDON, Sept. 18. British Army and Navy aviators in the last 48 hours have dropped thirteen tons of bombs on the docks at Bruges and a German air drome in Belgium, says an official statement from the Admiralty to-day. In air fighting 11 German airplanes were destroyed.

A BERLIN DENIAL.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 17. Nothing is known in competent circles in Berlin regarding the London report, that Germany has made a separate peace proposal to Belgium, according to despatches received here from Berlin.

GOOD WORK IN MACEDONIA.

PARIS, Sept. 17. The allied forces on the Macedonian front have penetrated to a depth of nearly four and a half miles on a front of fifteen and one half miles, and have captured four thousand prisoners, including one staff colonel. According to an official statement issued to-night by the war office, thirty guns, numerous mine throwers and machine guns and considerable booty have also been taken.

DRAWING UP PEACE RESOLUTION.

LONDON, Sept. 18. It is rumoured in Berlin that when the Reichstag meets there will be another peace demonstration similar to that of July 1917. According to so Amsterdam despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company it is said that the terms of a peace resolution are now being drawn up by the majority leaders in consultation with the Imperial Chancellor. The Reichstag will convene on November 5.

CREW LAND SAFELY.

LONDON, Sept. 18. Members of the crew of the American steamship Dora which was torpedoed and sunk on Sept. 4 were landed at an Irish port on Tuesday by an American steamer.

THE IMPORTANCE OF LORRAINE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17. A prediction that if the rich iron ore of Lorraine is left in the hands of the Germans, that country will launch a new big war within the next ten or fifteen years, was made by Marcel Knecht, a member of the French High Commission in an address here to-night. If Germany had not taken in 1871 and again in 1914, the two parts of Lorraine, Germany would not have had iron and steel enough to furnish munitions of war against the world, he said.

GERMANY COMPLAINS.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 18. The Rheinische Westphalian Zeitung of Essen, complains bitterly over the impotence of the Austrian Government in the face of the separatist tendencies of the Slav races. The newspaper says that since Great Britain and the United States have recognized the Czechoslovaks the agitation for the establishment of an independent Slav State has risen to unprecedented heights, and that the Austrian Government seems unwilling to take action against the traitors.

ITALY'S EFFORTS.

PARIS, Sept. 17. (Havas.)—Premier Orlando, of Italy, arrived here this morning. He was received by Premier Clemenceau and the Italian Ambassadors. "My country's efforts in the war are worthy of being well known," said the Premier of Italy to the correspondent of the Matin. "Go into our country districts and you will no longer see any men of military age. Women, old men and children do all the work in the fields. They even repair the roads. We have fully mobilized our effective without restrictions of any kind. Our financial effort has been no less extensive, and I need not speak of the industrial and economic effort which is so difficult for a country possessing none of the raw materials requisite for war manufactures."

PRISONERS DISCOURAGED.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE LORRAINE FRONT, Sept. 17. (By the A.P.)—German and Austrian prisoners taken in the recent advance by the Allies in this sector, displayed great interest when they learned of the Austrian peace suggestions. When the news reached the camps where they were taken after their capture they made no effort to conceal their discouragement, when assured by the American soldiers that peace is a long way off unless Germany is willing to admit she is beaten. Stories told by the prisoners nearly all indicate a lack of harmony between the Austrians and Germans, and reflect the lowered morale of the Central Powers. The prisoners' conversations show that they realize the hopelessness of success and their belief that they are fighting for some object which to them is apparently not clear. Individually the captured men are in good condition. They are well clothed, well fed and healthy.

THE AMERICAN EXPOSURE.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. The betrayal of Roumania and the elaborate advance plans of Germany and her Russian Bolshevik tools for suppressing and murdering loyal Roumanians, Russians and Poles are exposed in detail by to-day's chapter of the astounding secret Russian documents which the American Government is giving to the public. Other instalments of the series have described how the Bolshevik leaders, Lenin and Trotsky, and their associates were bought by the Germans for millions in gold, and engineered their bloody overthrow of Russia for the benefit of their masters. Now the story is told of how while the Brest-Litovsk peace conference farce was still in progress the Bolsheviks were sending hired agents into Roumania to disorganize the armies of Russia's ally, dethrone the Roumanian king and turn loose the German armies occupied there for service in a great offensive on the western front. The second phase of the latest disclosure shows the Bolsheviks at German direction undertaking not to kill refractory Russian Generals but to shoot individually and wholesale Polish soldiers who were refusing to be sold to the Germans and particularly keeping the field against their enemies. One of the documents transmits orders from the German intelligence service to take most decisive measures to shoot en masse against Polish troops and to institute surveillance of institutions and persons, including the Roman Catholic Polish clergy. Explanatory notes by Edgar Sisson, who obtained the documents and many details lacking in the papers, include a story of how the Roumanian minister barely escaped as-assassination after being arrested by the Bolsheviks and released through the efforts of Ambassador Francis and other diplomats.

NELD, CASUALTIES.

OTTAWA, Sept. 18. Casualties in infantry, wounded, S. Smith, St. John's, Nfld.; J. Maher, St. John's, Nfld.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Sept. 18. As a result of our operations yesterday, on the southern portion of the battlefront, we gained possession of Holnon village, with several prisoners. This morning our troops attacked northwest of St. Quentin. Yesterday evening the enemy attacked at Meuvres, under cover of a heavy artillery barrage, and pressed our troops back to the western outskirts of the village. By a successful local operation carried out during the night we advanced our line slightly immediately south of the LaBasse Canal.

AVIATION IN ST. MIHIEL BATTLE.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE LORRAINE FRONT, Sept. 17. (By the A. P.)—Aviation played a large part in the Allied offensive in Lorraine, as is indicated by a summary of the first four days of the battle, in spite of the rain, which before the battle had transformed air-dromes into seas of mud, and which during the combat had handicapped the aviators. During two of the four days the airmen were highly successful. During the fighting they made more than 5,300 sorties, the summary showing that the machines were aloft for an aggregate of four thousand hours. During this time enemy airdromes were so thoroughly bombed that the Germans were not able to do much of anything in the air fighting.

RUSSIAN GENERAL SHOT.

LONDON, Sept. 18. General Soukhomlinoff, Minister of War in the Russian Imperial Cabinet from 1909 to 1915, was court-martialed on September 3 and shot on the same day, according to a Petrograd despatch, printed in the newspapers of Vienna and transmitted here by the Exchange Telegraph Company. General Soukhomlinoff on September 26, 1917, was sentenced by a Petrograd court to hard labor for life after his conviction on the charges of high treason, abuse of confidence and fraud. The General's wife was acquitted. MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES GARDEN IN COW.

The War.

To-day's is another budget of good news. Haig's successful blow between Cambrai and St. Quentin has brought the British fairly up to the Hindenburg line, though at the moment of writing German counter-attacks appear to be in progress. When it is remembered what a determined stand the Germans are now making, how essential to victory or defeat the possession of one height or one heap of ruins that was once a village may be, and how joyfully we hailed two years ago every little advance of our arms in the battle of the Somme, we will not make the mistake of taking such successes too much for granted, merely because they are registered in yards or furlongs when we have lately been accustomed to measure our progress in miles, and that daily. The situation is now such that the yards may well mean much more than the miles a few weeks ago.

The British now hold Holnon, north of St. Quentin, and the French Centre-court, south of it. Little places both probably mere piles of brick and mortar now—and not to be found on most maps, but more important for the moment than many more pretentious names. St. Quentin, literally vital to the German defence, is commanded from two sides. It has not fallen yet and it may long before it does—witness the history of Lens for eighteen months past. The line must be smashed or bent well back above and below it before that can happen. There is, happily, bright promise that it will happen contained in the advance further north. Hargicourt, which the British also have taken, stands midway between Cambrai and St. Quentin, and unless we are mistaken marks a point as far east as the Allies have yet gone on this front since 1914. One thing at any rate is certain; the battle for the Hindenburg line has opened in earnest and is not likely to end or abate until that line is broken forever and has passed into history.

Quite as inspiring as these successes is the news from Macedonia. This is no light skirmish on the part of the French and Serbians. It is in all probability the opening stage of the long-postponed offensive having for its object, however far distant, the elimination of Bulgaria and Turkey. The recent Italian advance in the Albatian mountains was its logical and necessary prelude, preparing the ground for a blow at the enemy's flank when the front should have given way. It has given way already. The region of the attack, just east of Monastir at the opening of the great Varar Valley, is a critical part of the Bulgarian defence system. It is too early yet to know whether the attack, if it continues to succeed, will turn east, with the object of flanking the formidable positions on the Struma, or continue up through Serbia towards Uskub and Nish, but the latter alternative seems the more probable. Developments will soon make the point clear.

The reason and significance of this fresh offensive are to be seen in the report, made simultaneously, that Bulgarian troops have been moved to the western front. They will be moved back again. The Allies see a last bo-fore them that condition in the military theatre as a whole for which they have been striving since the Marne, and which they had indeed brought about in 1916 when the Russian collapse set them back again to the starting point. The Germans can only defend their extended lines by reinforcements moved laterally from one part of it to another. If the Allies are now held up in Macedonia it will only be because such reinforcements have been moved thither and opposed to them, when we shall inevitably see the effect elsewhere. Consonantly with this now obvious strategy, it will not be surprising, though at this late season it is not very likely, if the Italians should undertake a sudden offensive along the whole Piave front. Finally, no stronger proof could be wanted that the weakness of Germany's military position in Russia and the east generally. It would hardly have been undertaken, with Russia and Roumania unable to lend any assistance, if Germany were not almost equally impotent to lend effective support to the defence. The Bulgarians must fight it out alone, and it remains to be seen how they will fare.

Championship Football.

The championship of the Newfoundland Football League for 1918, the most important year in the history of the league, as the object of the games was to procure funds for the W. P. A., will be decided to-night, when the E. I. and B. I. S. will try results. Should the C. E. I. draw or win they will win the cup, medals and championship, but should the B. I. S. draw they lose, and if they win the championship is theirs. The game starts at 8 sharp and as the proceeds will go to the W. P. A. a large attendance is anticipated.

Players are requested to be on time so the game may be finished before as possible, to wear shirts of the team colors. The following will likely be the line up in to-night's game: Aided, Tait, backs; Drover, Hallett, Stick, halves; Burgess, Stick, Jerrett, Chafe, Hennebury, forwards.

B. I. S.—Phelan, goal; Power, Dugan, halves; Fox, Rawlins, Thompson, halves; Simms, Brien, Kavanagh, Phelan, Kelly, forwards.

AVIATORS DO GOOD WORK.

LONDON, To-day. British Army and Navy aviators, in the last 48 hours, have dropped thirteen tons of bombs on the docks at Bruges, and a German airbase in Belgium, says an official statement from the Admiralty. In air fighting eleven German airplanes were destroyed. Five enemy seaplanes which approached the East Coast of England were driven off by four British machines, one enemy machine being destroyed. Three hostile airplanes were brought down inside the British lines last night, according to the official statement on aviation. Fourteen enemy machines were destroyed, altogether and five others were driven down out of control.

ITALIAN OFFICIAL.

ROME, Sept. 18. The official communication from Italian Headquarters to-day says: North of Monte Grappa five enemy counter attacks in an east-west direction, yesterday morning, was 442; twenty machine guns were also taken. On the slopes of Monte Nozolo, south east of Mori, there was lively fighting between reconnoitering parties; in the Ordi Valley a hostile outpost was captured. The enemy artillery was particularly active along the Piave in the Montello Region and near Fagari.

U.S.A. GREAT ARMY.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. An army of 4,800,000 by next July, after all deductions have been made for casualties and rejections, is what the enlarged American military program calls for. General March explained this to the House Appropriations Committee in discussing the new seven billion dollar army estimates. There are now about 2,500,000 men under arms in General March and the plan is to call 2,700,000 of the new draft registrants to the colors between now and July.

BAD TREATMENT RECEIVED BY BRITISH PRISONERS.

GENEVA, Sept. 18. Released from a military prison in Bulgaria, sixty British soldiers, including seven officers, have arrived here in a very weakened condition. It is apparent that their sufferings had been more severe than those of Allied prisoners in Germany and Austria. One of the officers in speaking of the treatment he received, declared that Bulgarians would remain Orinetsa and would never become civilized and Europeanized. He said the country was beginning to be starved owing to the exploitation of foodstuffs by Germany. Throughout Bulgaria, he added, feeling against the domineering Germans was increasing.

5 AMERICAN PLANES MISSING.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. Five American planes are missing as a result of an attack by a superior German force during a bombing expedition in Lorraine, General Persh reported in to-day's communication received to-night by the War Department.

BOLSHEVIKS RETREATING.

LONDON, Sept. 18. Bolshevik forces are retreating on both the northern and southern fronts, according to a Stockholm dispatch to the Daily Mail. The dispatch says that a telegram had been received in Stockholm from Moscow stating that the Czech-Slovak staff held the city of Samara which the Bolsheviki recently claimed to have retaken.

OBJECTIVE REACHED.

PARIS, Sept. 18. The following official statement dealing with operations on the Macedonian front was issued to-night by the war office: Despite important reinforcements, hastily brought forward by the enemy, who defended his new positions stubbornly, the offensive of the Allied armies continued successfully on the 17th. All objectives fixed for the day were reached.

for the day were reached. Attacks developed on a front of about 35 kilometres and progress was made to a depth of 15 kilometres at certain points. Serbian troops operating with French and Greek detachments took, after a violent assault, 45 villages, including Zovik and Stravina, and the heights of Bolchichto and Bohlchichto north of the river Gradeshnitza and the village of Gradeshnitza, which was advanced northeast of Kozjak and took a foothold on the hills of Kuch-Kvo. To the east they have crossed the Peres and occupied the Massif of Topoles. The booty captured was considerable; more than fifty cannon, of which twenty were heavy pieces, fell into our hands. The number of prisoners is increasing unceasingly. The Allied airmen dominated completely over the enemy and aided greatly in the battle by attacking enemy troops.

TORIC LENSES

ARE MORE BECOMING THAN FLAT LENSES.

The edges of Toric Lenses do not show as prominently as those of flat lenses. They fit in close to your eyes. You will find Torics much more becoming and useful. They give you a wider, clearer field vision. You should know about Toric Lenses. Let us explain them.

"We Shall Strive Only to Achieve Victory."

BRAVE WORDS OF LIEUT. HEDLEY GOODYEAR, ON THE EVE OF BATTLE—HIS LAST LETTERS TO HIS PARENTS.

France, Aug. 7, 1918.
Dearest Mother—This is the evening before the attack, and my thoughts are with you all at home. But my backward glance is wistful only because of memories, and because of the sorrow which would further darken your lives should anything befall me in to-morrow's fray. Otherwise my eyes are fixed on to-morrow with hope for mankind and with visions of a new world. A blow will be struck to-morrow which will definitely mark the turn of the tide. It will be one of a grand series of victories which will humble the selfish and barbarous Prussian and exalt the hearts of those who are suffering for freedom. I have no misgivings for myself in to-morrow's encounter. It does not matter whether I survive or fall, a great triumph is certain, and I shall take part in it. I shall strike a blow for freedom, along with thousands of others who count personal safety as nothing when freedom is at stake. In a few moments I shall make the final address to my men, and shall strengthen their hearts, if they need strengthening, with the language of men of war. We shall strive only to achieve victory. We shall not hold our own lives dear.

The hour is all the more dramatic for me, because for the first time since I came to France, I am close to the spot consecrated by the blood of our own gallant dead. It was here that noble Raymond fell, and Joe and Kenneth shed their blood for freedom's cause. I trust to be as faithful as they.
I do not think for a moment that I shall not return from the field of honour, but in case I should not, give my last blessing to father, and my latest thanks for all he did for me. Give my blessing to Roland and his family, and to the others who survive me. I have no regrets and no fear of to-morrow. I should not choose to change places with anyone in the world just now, except, perhaps, General Foch!
How glad I am that at last the hour has come for me to taste vengeance! I shall be my mother's and father's son to-morrow.
Again, God bless you all.
Your boy,
(Sgd.) HEDLEY.

France, Aug. 17th, 1918.
Dear Mother O Mine—The last letter I wrote you was before the big show, and as it was written in a hurry, I forgot to number it; however, it was No. two (2) and the date was August 8th. It has not been possible to write until now. I did manage to salvage a piece of paper and an envelope to send word to Joe to cable that I was all right.

When the big show is over, at least as far as we know. You need have no further fear for my safety, the Hun can't get me. I was on most intimate relations with him this time, but did not get a scratch. My friend John Palmer says I'm reserved for hanging. It was a great day, and the company to which I belong distinguished itself. There seems to be a Providence disposed to order things with justice. Strangely enough, I found myself the only officer left in the company early in the fight. When we neared our final objective, which was a wood, we found it full of the enemy. I had eight machine guns and over a hundred of the best troops in the world at my command. I ordered every gun to open up and every rifle to operate on the blue beasts in front of us and overcome their fire. It took us ten minutes to gain superiority of fire. At the end of that time I saw signs of breaking on the part of the Hun; some of them threw up their hands and came toward us, others beat it to the rear, but the bulk of them stuck to their guns. I thought the moment opportune to charge, so I gave the word and the boys went in with the bayonet. We did not count the dead and wounded, but they were numerous. We took 90 un wounded prisoners, 14 machine guns, two trench mortars, and all sorts of loot. The wood had been used as a reserve camp; we found literally barrels of booze of all kinds, and vast quantities of stores—rifles, ammunition, revolvers, field glasses, etc. We had three officers in my company hit early in the fight; thus I was left in sole command, and in a position to wreak the full measure of my wrath upon the Kaiser's Huns. I had no mercy—until they quit fighting, then I did not have the heart to shoot them. I even gave all my water to their wounded and nearly famished myself. But it was a great day, and we were terrible in our charge. The boys yelled like fiends as they landed on top of the Boche. He surely had his match that day.
I have just a moment to finish this up.

Hope to get leave soon, and shall see Daisy and the boys. Give my love to father, and tell him I struck for him also on the 9th.
Don't worry about me. I am Hun proof.
Best love. Your boy,
(Sgd.) HEDLEY.

Motor Accident.

At 2 p.m. yesterday a seaman engaged at the Mount Pearl Marconi Station had several of his ribs broken and otherwise injured when a motor car in which he was driving, crashed into a rail on Brookfield Bridge. Two other naval men were in the car but fortunately escaped serious injury. Dr. Duncan, of the Inshore Asylum, was sent for and hurrying to the scene did everything possible to relieve the sufferer. The ambulance was phoned for to convey the injured man to the hospital, and arrived in record time. The accident is attributed to the gear of the car being displaced suddenly.

Multiplying by Ten Millions.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

My cross-wise neighbor was just putting on the potatoes to boil when I dropped in to see her the other afternoon. There were only four potatoes in the pan as her family consists of herself and her husband. I'd really rather peel them first," she said, "but I know I ought to wait till they are cooked because they say that wastes less of the potato and helps win the war. And yet sometimes it seems silly when the difference on four potatoes is so infinitesimal. I have to keep reminding myself what my cousin says. She is a private secretary at a conservation bureau and she says that I mustn't ever look at any little saving by itself but I must multiply them all by ten millions and then I'll realize how much they really do count."

I took that phrase home with me "Multiplying by ten million."

The Difference Between Victory and Defeat. Truly it is a phrase which every one of us ought to think on every day when we question as to whether some small sacrifice, some minor conservation, is worth while. Viewed by themselves, these often look rather foolish, but look at them through the magnifying glass of "multiply by ten million" and how do they loom up? Big enough to make the difference between victory and defeat.

Perhaps you think that is just a piece of rhetoric. Let me tell you something on the bare chance you have not already read it.

When the British Food Controller heard in the fall of 1917 that the American wheat surplus had been used up, he called Mr. Hoover, "We are beaten; the war is over."

The United States had at that time barely enough wheat for its own use if it had continued to use wheat as before the war. But when Hoover with the Controller's words ringing in his ears, appealed to the United States, saying that the Allies must have 75,000,000 more bushels of wheat the country rallied to the call and by economy and abstinence managed to send not merely the seventy-five million bushels but ten millions more. And this out of a supply that would once have been thought not more than adequate for themselves. The Wheat to Win the War Was Saved in Millions of Homes. Now that wheat was saved in single pounds in individual homes all over the country. It was these small savings multiplied by ten million that have actually made this summer's fortitude of victory possible. In the same way the United States sent the Allies an increase of eight hundred and forty million pounds of meats and fats over the preceding year though its own supply was rather smaller than usual. In the paper this morning I read that many tons of sugar have been saved by the abolishing of patriotic restaurants and hotels of the open sugar bowl. Whenever you wonder if a small saving, a minor conservation is worth while, just multiply it by ten million and then decide.

St. Joseph's, Levis, July 14, 1903. Minard's Liniment Co., Limited. Gentlemen,—I was badly kicked by my horse last May, and after using several preparations on my leg nothing would do. My leg was black as jet. I was laid up in bed for a fortnight and could not walk. After using three bottles of your MINARD'S LINIMENT I was perfectly cured, so that I could start on the road. JOS. DUBES, Commercial Traveller.

Fads and Fashions Small hats may have uneven brims. Some skirts are merely a matter of drapery. Heavy silk cord fringe is noticeably smart. Satin blouses may be worn with cloth skirts. Brick, terra cotta and copper are popular colors. Printed chiffon for gowns is very fashionable.

THE QUESTION. It isn't shall we weep or smile? It isn't shall we suffer pain? The only thought for you and me is, shall the best of us remain. It isn't must our treasures pass? A greater question now we face, shall tyranny take freedom's place? It isn't we have done enough? Each giver now must give his all. We shall be shamed as free born men if once the flags of freedom fall. As guardians of the truth, we stand; this is no time to count the cost. The world goes back to savage ways the moment that our cause is lost. It isn't shall we live or die? The choice is now 'twixt wrong and right. It isn't shall we stay or go? Each one of us must share the fight. The splendor of a thousand years of honest thought and manly strife Lies in the blank at this hour. We must not grieve the gift of life. The question is, shall freedom live, or shall the grim, dark past return? Shall we stand by a coward race, as Liberty's cathedrals burn? Must future ages start anew amid a blackened, ruined heap To claim the freedom that was ours and win the goals we failed to keep?

DAYTIME MAKEUP. Nowadays the world looks with much leniency on the gentle art of making up. Every woman has her vanity outfit which includes at least a powder puff and a bit of dry rouge. Ten or fifteen minutes is none too long to give to the daily making up process. Twenty to thirty minutes is a safer length of time, and one should have a dressing table set in a strong light, and provided with a low stool or chair on which one may sit and leisurely effect the work. A triple mirror is also a great assistance. Lacking this, make frequent use of the hand-glass and study the face from all angles. Many a clever make up quite indistinguishable from the front, is painfully apparent from a side view a little to the rear. The sharp demarcation of make up and untouched skin near the ear and cheekbone, giving away the cherished secret. The wise woman uses little make up in daylight hours—just a dusting of powder to take off the shine with perhaps a wee touch of dry rouge on the cheekbones. The powder must be carefully blended at the edges, especially if the skin be a bit sallow in the region of cheekbone and ear. In this day of low collars it is well to powder the throat lightly also, since few throats, after the twenties, are white enough to compete with a powdered face. Pink powder is apparent in daylight. Dead white powder is trying to all types, but there are shades of cream and flesh that are very satisfactory. Go to a reliable shop for your make up preparations. Get the best expert advice as to kinds and shades, and be willing to pay a good price. Cheap and badly selected preparations are almost certain to be detected at once, and even though there is no shame in touching up, and though you know your friends know you do it and they know you know they do it too, nobody wants to be a spectacle to criticism.

Bad Boys But Good Men.

Ne'er-do-weels Who Made Good. Because a boy has had a bad school record, there is no reason to suppose he is beyond hope. What, for instance, was the early record of that brilliant preacher and abject of Scottish churchmen, Dr. Chalmers? The man who, more than any other, influenced the church of his day, the man who rescued thousands from squalor and unhappiness, whose plans for the social betterment of the masses were attended by results hardly surpassed by the world's philanthropists, was in his early days a perfect ne'er-do-weel; was pronounced, hopeless by more teachers than one; and in the long run was ignominiously dismissed from school as incorrigible and worthless! Isaac Barrow, who turned out so splendid and noble-hearted a man, was, when a boy at Charterhouse, notorious chiefly for his stormy temper, proverbial idleness as a scholar, and pugnacious habits; and such unhappiness did he cause his parents that his father was wont to declare that "if it pleased God to take from him any of his children, he hoped it would be Isaac."

When the Duke of Wellington was a boy he gave his mother so much trouble that on one occasion she bitterly exclaimed, when asked what his future was to be: "He had better go into the Army. A lad like that is only fit food for the bullets!" Take again the case of Clive, the man who, according to Pitt, was a heaven-born general, the military genius whose victory at Plassey is rightly esteemed one of the decisive battles of the world. There was hardly a day he was not in trouble. Years after his rise to fame and fortune, grey-beards used to describe how, defiant of all authority and deaf to the warnings alike of friends and advisers, he climbed the steeple of the village church, utterly unmoved by the slightest thought of fear, though a single error might at any moment have meant his death—Til-Bis.

THE FAKERS. How doth the busy little Hun delight to pass the bunk, and claim a victory is won, when he is knocked kerplunk! The general whose cumbersome name winds up with burg or dorf, still claims to have a giant's frame, when he is shown a dwarf. When Foch or Haig in battle fail, the fact is not denied; these brave men rise and say, "The tail has traveled with the hide." They want the folks at home to know the truth, and give it flat; if they are beaten by the foe, they let it go at that. But Prussian leaders cannot trust the folks at home, it seems; they feed them up, until the bust, on fakes and hopjoints. How doth the busy little Hun his whiskers streaked with foam, hand the puff to the ton, to feed the folks at home! But when the facts at least leak in, I wonder what they'll say; will they just wear a foolish grin, in their accustomed way? Or will their spirits soar and not, and grumble like a house afire, and have some prince's shot? "Dumb driven cattle" is their name if they, with patient eyes forever watch the hocus game, the carnival of lies.

H. M. S. Briton.

HOME OF THE BOYS IN BLUE.

Wednesday afternoon the Telegram reporter had the pleasure of being shown through H. M. S. Briton, at the Dock, where everything appertaining to the ship was explained to us.

Our guide was very courteous and we desire to thank him for his trouble in showing us around. The ship was not always called the Briton as is generally known, but was formerly the Calypso. However, the Admiralty wanted the name to apply to a new sea-going cruiser and calling it, substituted "Briton."

She was launched on the 7th of June, 1888, at Chatham Yard, England, so that she is now 30 years old. She carried 16 guns 330 crew, made up of command, officers and men.

She is now used as a training ship for the cadets of the Royal Naval Reserve. She is also on the first deck and contains a large canteen (cool) range. There is a regular cook in charge of this, of course. The canteen is on the port side of the same deck, and here, cigarettes, tobacco, fruits, tinned goods, drinks and food are sold. As there is no duty on the cigarettes and tobacco the men may purchase them much cheaper than elsewhere, and it is here they have the advantage over their military brothers-in-arms. The canteen is opened from 12 to 1 and from 4 to 5.

There are four guns aboard the ship, two on either side, all 8 inch guns. In addition there is a small portable 3-inch gun which is used for practice. Three large tanks of water are "aged" for the port and starboard sides, which would be used in case of fire; they are kept continually filled. An interesting item of the first deck is the gun which was used against St. John's in 1762. It was captured by the English sailors. Possibly if this old cannon could speak it would tell many stirring tales of fighting days gone by.

On the second deck, directly under the captain's quarters, are the Fleet Captain's quarters, Fleet Surgeon's and Lieutenant's quarters. Adjacent to those are the chief gunner's, and warrant officers' offices. The officers' galleys is in the stern of the ship also, and a special table, which is used, tends to their wants. Then comes the men's mess room. It is a large room, midships, containing six long tables, the tables are in the mess room, the starboard. Forward of the men's mess is the petty officers' quarters. The reserve men, or ordinary sailors sleep in the hammocks in the room, which they hang in rows. The daily routine is as follows: At 6.25, hammock stowers, whose duty it is to stow away the hammocks, for they are taken down every day, are called and at 6.30, the men are called, and lash up their hammocks, the stowers stow them on the first deck. At 6.45 each man has a mug of cocoa. At 7.15, the quarters clean guns, reserve men fall in, while the orderlies clean the mess room. The orderlies are two men appointed daily, whose duty it is to bring the food down to the mess room from the galley. Breakfast is at 8 o'clock. The men are tidy and brush up for this, and at 8.45, pipes are taken out and smoked, while the orderlies and sweepers clean up mess, deck and flats. The remainder fall in, and clean up the upper decks. Prayers are at 9 o'clock, then instruction, and then the ship's company carries on work. At 10.15, stand easy; 10.30, begin again; 11.25, pack-up (i.e. stop work); and at 11.28 reserve men fall in; 11.30, clean-up decks; 11.45, the orderlies go to the galleys, and bring down to the mess, and place the spit kids (spitpoons); dinner at 12.00; 1.05 out pipes, orderlies clean out spit kids, and clean up mess deck; 2.20, stand easy; 2.30, carry on; 3.35 pack up; the reserve men fall in at 3.38; at 3.50, clean up decks; at 4.00, evening quarters, fire drill, and bring down hammocks to mess room; 4.15, the orderlies go to galley and place spit kids; tea at 4.30; after tea the men shift into night clothing, which may be an old suit; 7.00, the liberty men fall in and have supper, making the fifth meal for the day; 8.30 the reserve men fall in and clean up mess decks and flats; 8.55 clean up mess deck for rounds, lights out, and at 9 o'clock they pipe down, and all must be turned in by then.

Only half of the crew can be off at a time, each half taking alternate turns. Those who are ashore have not got to be aboard until 12, or 7 the next morning, according to when they went out. The food is as follows: Breakfast, bread and tea; Dinner, cooked beef, potatoes, turnips, cabbage, and pudding; Tea and Supper, same as breakfast. The men may purchase anything in the canteen and bring it to the mess. The ship is lighted by electricity, and the telephone is installed there. It is undoubtedly an interesting ship, and a visit to her is well worth taking.

What About These Coal Shares?

The opportunity is a good one, $25,000.00 worth of stock has been placed on the market, and to the purchaser of each one of these shares three extra shares are given free of cost.

This makes the purchaser of each one dollar share the owner of four fully paid up shares in the company. The company also guarantees that none of the above shares will be subject to any further call.

The opportunity to invest is open to everybody. Get busy before it is too late; no bonus shares will be given after the present allotment is disposed of.

You can't lose. Invest to-day. For every single dollar you invest in this proposition you get four 1 dollar shares in return.

Fifty-seven others have been placed and one hundred and forty-five old students promoted to good paying positions during the past year, and what this school has done for the students can do for others during the next year that is commencing this week.

The Evening Classes, however, will not re-open until October, but the school should be present at the opening day of the first term.

Man Injured.

Mr. Stephen Bright, foreman of W. Clouston's tinsmith shop, had his foot seriously injured yesterday afternoon at the Dry Dock premises when a bar of iron fell from a flat car that was being shunted and struck him on the instep. The injured man was attended by the doctor of H. M. Briton and was later driven to his home in a cab. Mr. Bright was seeing his daughter off, who returns to Labrador to continue teaching in the Cartwright Mission.

The Canadian Anglican Synod.

The Synod in joint session in the afternoon received Rev. Canon Smart, of the Cathedral at St. John's, Nfld., who presented a letter of greeting from his Bishop to the Canadian Church. Archbishop Thorneycroft, who introduced him, referred to the fact that it was the first time in its synodical history that the Canadian Church had received a representative of the Church in Newfoundland.

Canon Smart in his address said he sincerely hoped it would be the last; he hoped the next Newfoundland representative who came would come with his Bishop as part of the great Church of Canada.

The Bishop of Calgary, in reply, paid tribute to the gallantry of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment, and declared his pleasure to hear that the Church in Newfoundland was thinking of union with that of Canada.

Rev. Canon Thacker, of London, Ontario, representing the Lower House, said no Canadian soldier need be ashamed to stand by the side of a soldier from Newfoundland.

The Canadian Church, he said, would never raise a little finger to interfere with the autonomy of Newfoundland, but whenever in the presence of God they sought admission, the door stood wide open, a sentiment which was repeated by the Primate. —Montreal Daily Star.

First Thames Steamboat.

The first attempt at steam navigation on the historic Thames was made 117 years ago, several years before Fulton made his memorable trip on the Hudson in the Clermont. This epochal trial trip was dismissed with a few lines by the London newspapers. The most extended account was as follows: "An experiment took place on the River Thames for the purpose of working a barge or any other heavy craft against tide by means of a steam engine of a very simple construction. The moment the engine was set to work the barge was brought about, answering her helm quickly; and she made way against a strong current, at the rate of two miles and a half an hour." This steam craft was a mere makeshift, and not to be considered a real steamboat. The centenary of steam navigation, on the Thames was celebrated in 1915, as it was in 1815 that one Dodd brought a steam vessel from Glasgow to London. Since then the Thames has never been without steam vessels.

THIRTY-FOUR YEARS SERVICE.

Constable Chas. Ward at the police station, passed his 34th year in the Royal Newfoundland Constabulary yesterday.

Note From Mrs. Whelan.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—I want to contradict some statements made by Mrs. Earle, President of the Girls' N.L.W.A., in your paper on Monday. I am referring to the girl that worked in the Ropewalk, and is living with me. How she could make the statement that I turned the girl out of doors because she could not pay me more than $3.30 a week, is more than I can understand. Up to two years ago the girl had been living with a woman who had adopted her. When this woman died I took pity on her condition; and I gave her a home. Of her own free will she worked there off and on as she liked, and so far as I know she was well treated there, anyway she never complained of her work or her boss. At times I found her hard to manage, and I got her into the Belvedere Orphanage. She ran away from there twice, but she always came back to me. For a few weeks she was in service with a woman on Water Street, and ran away from there. I am always been willing to do the best I could for her, for I pitied her. Last week on the morning when my own children started for school after the holidays, she decided to go with them. My husband was at home at the time, and he said "Trixie, you can go to school if you want to, but wouldn't it be better for you to go back to work for a couple of weeks since it is the price of a pair of boots for yourself for the winter?" She said, "No, I am going to school," and she went, and she has been going ever since. It is a falsehood for Mrs. Earle to say I would not keep her for $3.30 a week. I am keeping her now for nothing, and she can always have a home with me as long as I can afford to keep her. Mrs. Earle is wrong about her age; she is between 15 and 16 years. Now, Mr. Editor, don't you think it a shame for a lady like Mrs. Earle to make such a charge against me in the papers? It would not have taken much trouble to learn the rights of the story. The girl left work of her own free will, she went to school for her own free will, and she has been there ever since the first day she went since the holidays. I am willing for her to go to school and intend doing the best I can for her, and that is more than Mrs. Earle or anyone else is likely to do for her. All I have said is the truth, and my neighbors can prove it. Yours truly, MRS. MARY WHELAN, Ropewalk Range, Sept. 18, 1918.

Wedding Bells.

KELLY-COURTNEY.
The marriage of No. 188 Pre. John J. Kelly, one of the "Blue Puttees" boys and Miss Alice Courtney was celebrated Tuesday, September 17th, at the R. C. Cathedral by the Rt. Rev. Mons. McDermott, V.G. The bride who was beautifully attired in cream Parisian lace and blue satin was attended by her sister, Miss Iris Courtney, and Miss Nance Marie Kelly, sister of the groom. The groom was supported by Mr. Richard Courtney of the employ of Parker and Monroo. After the ceremony the wedding party proceeded to the home of the bride's parents where a supper was partaken of, and at 10 p.m. left for Portugal Cove where the honeymoon will be spent, taking with them the best wishes of their many friends. The presents received were numerous and costly.

PEARCE-MARTIN.
A very pretty wedding took place at St. George's Church of England, Sarnia, Canada, when Ethel, eldest daughter of W. J. Martin, statistical clerk, Colonial Secretary's Department, St. John's, Newfoundland, became the bride of Fred. Pearce, Sarnia, son of W. H. Pearce, of Marquette, Mich. The marriage service was conducted by Rev. F. G. Newton, Rector of St. John's Church of England, in the absence of Canon Davis. The bride, who was given away by Mr. H. M. Pousette, wore a gown of duchess satin draped with nine and picture hat. Miss Emily Kate Pearce, sister of the groom, in bisque taffeta and black velvet picture hat, attended the bride, and Mr. Frank Pearce, brother of the groom, acted as groomsmen. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Pearce left for Toronto and points east. On their return they will live at 454 George Street, Sarnia. The groom is a popular business man being a member of the Auto Tire Repair Co., and has hosts of friends who will wish he and his bride every happiness. —"Canadian Observer," Sarnia.

A Baby's Skin

What is so beautiful as baby's soft, smooth, velvety skin? How is it to be kept free from chafing, irritation and distressing eczema? This is every mother's question. Many have found the answer in the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Applied after the bath, this soothing, healing ointment overcomes irritation of the skin and prevents the development of eczema and other annoying skin diseases.

Sims Praises British.

Admiral Tells U. S. Fighters in London America is not Doing it All.
London, Sept. 1.—Vice-Admiral William S. Sims, commander of the American naval forces in the war zone, delivered an address last night to American soldiers and sailors who were entertained in London by H. E. Sothern and Mary Anderson in "Macbeth." The commander declared the Germans had discovered that American soldiers were not just men thrust into uniforms and sent off in ships, but were fighting propositions. He added: "But don't you chaps get sticking out your chests and going around thinking America is doing it all. I want to tell you here and now that what is being done by this tiny little island is wonderful. The British fleet is protecting us and supporting us and getting us to the front."

Confidence With New-Type Good years

The family in a motor car fitted with Goodyear new-type tyres travels in serene confidence.

Quite apart from the distinction conferred upon any car by such equipment is another and larger satisfaction: The sure knowledge that whatever the occasion, these are tyres abundantly able to meet it, whether in point of comfort, quality or endurance.

(From a Little People.)
At your decree we die or live,
Our goods are yours to burn or bind,
Our honor, which we would not give,
You cannot take. Ah! fools and blind.

What conquest gives you Innocence,
What mastery a heart unstained,
Your power is but impotence,
Your gain—what is it if you have gained?

What though your ships should ride
The seas,
Your armies sweep from tide to tide?
Man lives by higher things than these,
You shall go back unsatisfied.

And not to-morrow or to-day,
The scales are set, the balance told;
They still have judgment who let ray
Their Christ for glory or for gold.

The fruits of victory are sweet—
Ride on in arrogance, to meet
The Angel with the flaming sword!

A Metal Which Fights.

The chemists tell us that aluminium is one of the commonest minerals, though it is never found in a free state. Much the same applies to its use in our fleet-building yards. No engineer would dream of using the soft, white metal alone, but in alloy with copper and steel it enters into every part of a warship, from the gun-sights and the wireless tripes to the engine-beds and the keel-plates. Every class of ship is dependent for its success on aluminium.

Aluminium is an all-British product; its ores are drawn from the mountains of Antrim, reduced by the electricity generated by a wild Highland stream, carried to the Clyde for mixture with this metal or that, and then cast or machined to the required shape and size.

An engine-bed of aluminium-steel is one-third the weight of an all-steel product for the same purpose. The standing parts of marine engines can be equally reduced—a fact of immense importance in torpedo craft and submarines at least.

Aluminium, however, has faults and limitations which science is gradually removing. The mineral will not weld. The two ends of a broken rod will not run together, but will set up a third zone which causes weak jointing.

The helmets which are used in our trenches as a protection against snipers and shrapnel contain a considerable proportion of aluminium.

Kaiser as Profiteer.

The Kaiser's greatest war profits come from the Krupp gun-works at Essen. Just how large his holdings are cannot be determined, as the Krupp concern refused to show its books in the recent profiteering investigation conducted by the Reichstag, and that body has no power to enforce its demands. The statement, however, is made on the authority of Geneva bankers who recently returned from Frankfurt that the Kaiser before the war had been a large shareholder in Krupp's; in fact, one of the largest holders of the shares next to Frau Bertha Krupp von Bohlen. Since the war began the Kaiser is said to have increased his shares in the works by purchases amounting to £5,000,000.

That the Kaiser, long before the present war, was an enormously wealthy man was nowhere denied. As King of Prussia he enjoyed a Civil List of £850,000 a year. He is the greatest landowner in Prussia, and has an immense private income. His grandfather left him a fortune of £2,500,000. He has many castles and palaces in various parts of Germany, upon which he has expended immense sums. He bore practically the entire expense of maintaining and conducting the Imperial opera in Berlin, and when he travelled on his magnificently-equipped railway train it cost him £10 a mile.

Citizen of Honour.

The King of the Belgians has conferred upon Mr. Hoover, the American Food Controller, the title of "Citizen of Honor and Friend of the Belgian Nation."

This distinction, which is quite unprecedented, has been conferred on Mr. Hoover in recognition of the great services rendered by him to the stricken population of Belgium, and in view also of the fact that as a member of the United States Government Mr. Hoover is unable to accept any decoration or title of nobility.
