CHATHAM, N. B., DECEMBER 11, 1890.

A Model Canadian Conservative.

Hon. Mr. Chapleau, who is the "free lance" of Sir John A. Macdonald's government, in which he is Secretary of State, caused quite a sensation last week by references which he made to the trade situation.

"We are told that we can find markets abroad. Why, free trade England can hardly sell its cotton in its own market. A fine piece of cotton print was brought to me the other day, for they won't sell elsewhere, and it's useless for the government to keep up the delusive policy of remote foreign markets. And the same is true to a large extent of our other products. Their natural outlet and their only outlet is to the United States."

Mr. Jones' views are not those of a political theorist, but of one who understands the foreign markets from actual business with them. When he says that the West Indies and other remote markets can absorb some of our Canadian products, yet are not the natural market which the United States affords, he says just what every practical business man believes, but we of the maritime provinces, went last into confederation, believing the assurance of one political leader in respect to the perpetuation of a low tariff, instead of securing substantial guarantees thereof, or compensation for the departure that has been made from unwritten conditions of the compact.

Mr. Chapleau was a consistent man, he would endeavor to give effect to the views he expressed, but he is one of those ornate pleasers in Canadian public life, who has a certain following because his ready tongue makes him feared by able men, and he has the habit of kicking over the traces whenever he thinks his own advancement will be secured in the process of quieting him. Mr. Chapleau is a political Orie, but has a method in his foppery, notwithstanding.

Candidates, etc. And, now, the St. John Gazette, through the medium of its Ottawa telegraphist, settles it as follows, under date of 6th inst. It is authoritatively learned that the Hon. Michael Adams will oppose the Hon. Peter Mitchell in Northumberland at the next general election.

But the "authoritative" telegrapher must learn that the scope of the people's choice is to be widened, for, on the same date, a local conservative organ declared that Mr. Adams or two other gentlemen, whose names it mentioned, "for some other man" would be the conservative candidate. These conservative wire-pullers are very much worried, just now, over the question of Northumberland's candidates for Ottawa in the next election, but we hope the liberals of the county will not allow themselves to be hoodwinked by them. The game now is to deceive the liberal voters by making them believe that there is some understanding between leading men of the party and leading conservatives in reference to the next election. Certain so-called liberals are, perhaps, more to blame than the conservative wire-pullers for such reports being believed, for, having doubts of their own integrity in such matters, they are ready to believe the first rumors set afloat concerning others.

Our information is that there will be no election this winter, and our advice to our friends of the liberal party is that they keep their own counsel and be careful not to permit themselves to be betrayed into the trap that is being craftily constructed for them out of all these election rumors and stories about their leading men going over to the conservative party, etc. There never was a time when the liberals of Northumberland were stronger than they are to-day. It is true that a few who once claimed to belong to the party, have done their best, for personal reasons, to weaken it, but, on the other hand, the so-called conservative party is broken up into several hostile camps, and it may be said that there is no such party. The trouble with them is that they have too many leaders and too few followers. They have not, however, a man who has shown capacity to lead anywhere but to defeat, and whose inspiring gentlemen are so presumptuous as to indicate that the liberals of the County are ranging themselves under their banners, they ought to be snubbed. So far as the ADVANCE is concerned it proposes to stand by the liberals of the County as in the past. When an election is in sight—when isn't just yet—it will have something to say about candidates, and feels that the liberals of Northumberland will have more sense than to be hoodwinked by either straight conservatives or mugwumps. Northumberland is a liberal county, and in the next House of Commons ought to be represented by a resident independent liberal.

The Natural Market of the Maritime Provinces. People who read the conservative papers are accustomed to find mention of Hon. A. G. Jones of Halifax, who was Minister of Militia in the MacKenzie Government, coupled with annexation and disloyalty in different forms. Those acquainted with Mr. Jones know him as a fearless exponent of Canadian sentiment, an earnest advocate of Maritime interests and a loyal citizen. He was interviewed the other day by a representative of the Detroit Evening News and, being asked if there was not considerable annexation sentiment in Nova Scotia said: "Yes, there is some annexation sentiment in Nova Scotia, but it is much scattered and it has never risen to the dignity of being a principle or a party issue. There are some having an annexation tendency in the remote counties, and some are not considered, but the feeling is very limited and is seldom outspoken. What you find, however, is a general feeling throughout Nova Scotia in favor of trade relations with the United States and in disfavor of the McKinley bill or any other measure to direct public relations in this locality to the rest of such relations."

"Our products here are mainly coal, fish, iron, potatoes, lime and a few other articles of export. We are so situated geographically that New England has taken a good share of these products. Our fish, for instance, are peculiarly in demand through New England, and we cannot sell them anywhere else. Our potatoes are not sold here, but they are sold in the West Indies, and we ship them to West India shippers. Only a short time since I sent some of our fish to an Ottawa merchant, and they sent us word that there was little or no demand for them; they might take 20 or 30 quintals. Why, we ship lots of 2,000 quintals to the West Indies, and they are sold there. We must have the United States market for our fish, for they won't sell elsewhere, and it's useless for the government to keep up the delusive policy of remote foreign markets. And the same is true to a large extent of our other products. Their natural outlet and their only outlet is to the United States."

Trans-Atlantic Lumber Shipments.

The lumber shipments from Miramichi to the United Kingdom, Continent, Australia, etc., for the season just closed, were as follows:—

Table with columns: Name of Shipper, No. of Vessels, Total Tons, etc. Includes entries for J. B. Snowball, D. A. H. & Co., etc.

In addition to the above Mr. Snowball shipped 14 tons of birch timber and 33,000 laths to U. K. Miramichi shipped 22,000,000 a. f. l. this year than last. The trans-Atlantic shipments, for the season, from Richibucto, together with those from Bathurst to July last, were as follows:—

Table with columns: Name of Shipper, No. of Vessels, Total Tons, etc. Includes entries for J. & J. Juelin, Geo. McLeod, etc.

The trans-Atlantic lumber shipments, of Dalhousie, for the season of 1890, were as follows:—

Table with columns: Name of Shipper, No. of Vessels, Total Tons, etc. Includes entries for Geo. McLeod & Co., W. M. Mackay, etc.

The North Shore shipments may be put, in round numbers, at 132,000,000 a. f. l. for 1890, against 162,000,000 last year, a falling off of 30,000,000 a. f. l. St. John's shipments up to 1st December this year were 132,608,616 a. f. l., against 180,167,488 a. f. l. for the corresponding period last year—a falling off, not only of the full statistics this week, but will give them after the holiday rush is over.

Commendable Enterprise. Newcastle is to be congratulated on the go-ahead spirit manifested by its business men through their Mercantile and Manufacturing Association. Jas. Brown, Esq., president occupied the chair at last Monday evening's meeting, and amongst the subjects discussed was the following, as reported in the Advocate:—

Discussion as to the best way of booming the industry was next in order. The introduction of manufactures was discussed and the advisability of offering a bonus to manufacturers to come to Newcastle. Pure, fresh water could be had in abundance by boring from one hundred to one thousand feet, which shipping facilities by rail and by water during the season of navigation were all that could be required. It was pointed out that with a representation in the Municipal Council of two from this parish we could not carry the question of a bonus to a manufacturing concern, as other parties while paying but a small share of the county taxation had an equal voice with those paying the greater part of the taxation and hence it was necessary that the town be incorporated so that it could run its business affairs to suit itself, and Mr. J. D. Craghan gave notice of motion that on next Monday evening he would move that steps be taken to have the town of Newcastle incorporated. The discussion on this question was an animated one, some objecting to it because of the increased expense and in consequence additional taxation, while others argued that they could better pay double taxation and not have their town something than have it run in the half dead and alive way it was at present.

ble that the clauses of the McKinley bill which injure Canadian trade would have been defeated.

The Irish Question.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The Nationalist members of the House of Commons met again to-day to further consider the question of Mr. Parnell's leadership. Mr. Parnell occupied the chair. Mr. Clancy offered his amendment, which provided that, in view of the difference of opinion between Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Parnell as to the accuracy of the latter's recollection of the suggestions made to him by Mr. Gladstone at the Hawarden meeting a year ago, the party might be instructed to obtain from Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Morley and Sir William Vernon-Harcourt, before any further consideration of the main question, information on the departure from the bill of 1885, made by Mr. Gladstone in his suggestions affecting the control of the Irish constabulary and the settlement of the land question.

A prolonged debate took place on the amendment. Mr. Parnell intimated that if the party took the responsibility of his shoulders, and would insist upon the Liberal leader promising to carry an acceptable home rule bill through the House of Commons in the face of all opposition, he would retire from the leadership. He asked the meeting to accept Mr. Clancy's resolution, whereupon, he said, the alliance between the Nationalists and the Liberal would be renewed.

Mr. Healy refused to submit to Mr. Parnell's stipulations. He declared that they were even beyond the lines of the compromise suggested yesterday's meeting. Mr. Sexton declared that the majority of the members were firmly determined to adhere to the main question and would insist upon Mr. Parnell's resignation.

The committee has sent a letter to Mr. Gladstone asking him to open negotiations on a future home rule bill. Mr. Gladstone expressed his willingness to interchange views with the committee, but reserved the right to choose the members with whom to negotiate. It is reported that Mr. Parnell promised to abide by the decision of the majority on the value of Mr. Gladstone's assurances, at the meeting of his adherents on Wednesday night.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Yesterday morning the committee appointed by the Irish members of parliament to confer with Gladstone obtained an interview with Gladstone. He had declined to accept Parnell's suggestion that he summons Morley and Sir Wm. Harcourt to receive the joint delegation of the two sections of the Irish party, and the colleagues of the Liberal leader were not present at the meeting. Gladstone objected to the wording of the Clancy resolution and suggested a modification. He desired no reference to be made to the question of Parnell's leadership. Gladstone's proposals to the Nationalist meeting. An amicable discussion followed and the Clancy resolution was rescinded by a unanimous vote.

Redmond introduced a resolution authorizing Henry, Redmond, Healy and Sexton to request a conference with Gladstone for the purpose of representing the views of the Irish party and requesting that an invitation be given them regarding the intentions of Gladstone and his colleagues with respect to certain details connected with the land question and Irish constabulary in the event of home rule being granted.

Sexton seconded the motion, which was carried with only two opposing votes—Clancy and Barry. The meeting then adjourned, the adjournment immediately sought Gladstone and impacted him to the role resolution. Gladstone at once convoked an informal meeting of all his colleagues with whom he could confer in view of the departure of the Irish party's representatives. Gladstone intimated through the party that he intended to interview with the Irish delegation was unnecessary, their resolution and written statement of committee having put him in full possession of the facts.

The Nationalists members postponed a further reply until a day when it was expected to be received from Gladstone. The Telegraph says: "Under any circumstances Parnell will go to Ireland in a blaze of glory. If he remains at the head of the Nationalist party he will be stronger than ever because of the proofs he has given of his personal power." Mr. Healy will still lead the party by virtue of his political genius and the fact that he controls the money chest.

The Times says: "Gladstone has openly abandoned the position if moral elevation he assumed lately. If he rejects Parnell's proposals he confirms Parnell's position as leader of the Irish party." The Standard says: "The bulk of the Liberal, including some of Gladstone's prominent supporters, are opposed to his negotiations with the Nationalists." At the Irish party's meeting the reading of Gladstone's letter was greeted with cheers by the section of the party opposing Parnell and with ironical cries by his supporters. A stormy debate followed. Barry, Sexton and Healy made a determined attempt to bring about a final settlement of the question. They insisted that there be an immediate division of the members on the main question before the meeting, viz., the retirement of Parnell from the leadership of the party. Finally Sexton gave Parnell his ultimatum, to the effect that if a decision on this question was delayed by the chairman (Parnell) after 5 o'clock this evening the majority of the representatives of the party would hold a meeting of their own and depose him from office. A scene of great excitement followed this announcement. At 2:45 a recess was taken for half an hour. On the resumption of the meeting Mr. Abraham moved that Parnell vacate the chairmanship of the party. Parnell refused to allow the motion to be put, whereupon McCarthy, followed by 44 other members, left the room. An exciting incident arose from Parnell's refusal to put Abraham's motion. As a written resolution to the same effect was being handed in by Justin McCarthy, Parnell leaned across the table, struck McCarthy's hand, seized the resolution, and tore it into pieces. Parnell's eldest son, Justin McCarthy, a son of Justice McCarthy, arose from his seat and denounced Parnell as an insulter of his father and an enemy to his country. He declared
