Barbigo Note.

John Connell has returned from Boston where he had been attending the Sportsman's Show. He says he had a great time.

Post Master Doyle was in town Saturday last and made no delay on account of the bad ice. While hitching his team he made a mistake by taking Mr. Thomas Walker's bride and putting it on Jim McDonald's horse, started for home and got his own horse. Mr. Doyle will have to be more careful in the future.

John Carroll who has returned home says he had a high, wild and lively time in the whirlwind camp.

Michael Kenah, collector of dog taxes, met with a serious accident while performing his duty. He fell on the ice on Stony Hill and broke two of his ribs.

Thomas Doyle is about leaving for Mill Bank to spend the summer season. We wish him every success.

It is rumored here that one of John Doyle's fair daughters is about changing her name.

It is expected steam driving will soon commence here. There is a large quantity of lumber on the Barbigo.

OTTAWA, April 10th, 1898.

Years—14. Nays—52.

This is the record of the Senate vote in the Yukon contract. It was stated in last week's letter that the bill was defeated. The doom is now complete. Had the vote been taken a week or two earlier the majority might have been smaller. Had the discussion continued a week longer it would have been greater. Every day brought additional proof that the bargain was reckless if not corrupt. Every day brought evidence that the service which the country was asked to purchase at the price of 5,000 square miles of picked gold lands might have been obtained without subsidy. Every day showed that the people of Canada were looking to the Senate to protect them from the disaster. These incidents were not offset by daily threats of Government press, especially the violent warnings of the paper which Mr. Greenfield bought for Mr. Tarte. Mr. Mills, who leads the Government in the Senate, spoke with force and ability in favor of the deal, and made perhaps the strongest plea that could be made in favor of so bad a measure. In closing he solely urged his fellow members not to leave the Yukon exposed to the rapids, perils of navigation, biopisals, pestilence and other horrors from which Mackenzie and Mann were the appointed and only protectors.

A CHANGE OF BASE.

The fellow members did not seem to be impressed with these terrors. But the next day Senator Lough was prepared to do something about it. The man from Calgary offered for second reading a bill incorporating a railway company to construct a line from Pyramid Harbor on the Pacific to the Yukon river at a point hundreds of miles nearer the Klondike than the river is reached by the Government route. The company is not to offer a subsidy of money or land. It only wants to be allowed to build. Now Mr. Mills, who on Wednesday was so concerned lest the Yukon charter would have no road, opposed this charter on Thursday, and he is no more giving away these gold lands that he will not allow any man to build a railway for nothing. Strange to say, on the same day that Mr. Mills was protesting against chartering a railway with a United States connection, Mr. Blair was forthrightly making the Railway Committee a charter to Mr. Corbin's line into West Kootenay. This line crosses from Washington State and taps the best gold fields on the British Columbia border. The charter is opposed on the ground that Corbin's road will give the trade of these gold fields to the industries and producers of the United States. Last year Parliament voted $3,600,000 for the Crow's Nest Railway, on the statement of the Ministers of Railways and Sir Richard Cartwright, that this connection would capture the Kootenay trade for Canada. This year the same Minister of Railways supports a charter to a foreign corporation whose purpose is to take to the States the very trade which his bill of last year was intended to wrest from that country. And while he is making his fight his colleague is refusing a charter to a Yukon line because it touches territory that may belong to the United States.

THE FRANCHISE BILL.

Ninety-seven to forty-eight was the vote of the Commons on the Franchise Bill. This was the record on an amendment proposed by Mr. Powell, of Westmorland, favoring a simple franchise, but affirming that no system would be satisfactory which did not preserve federal control over both the basis of suffrage and the votes' lists. Speaking in this amendment Mr. McNeill, Mr. Gillis, Mr. Bell, Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, Mr. McLean and other members made strong pleas for a national idea in federal elections. The provincial, or little Canada idea, however, prevailed, and the general principle of the bill was amended. At a later stage Mr. McNeill and Mr. Mills described the wrong inflicted by the methods practiced in Nova Scotia, while Mr. Bennett, Mr. Clancy, Mr. Taylor and others told the story of provincial methods in Ontario. The Committee stage has not yet passed.

THE ESTIMATES.

The budget speech promised for last week did not arrive. Mr. Furling explained that the members who expected it on Friday had somehow got a wrong impression. The fact is they got it by accepting the statement of the premier that Friday would be budget day. The house, knowing the premier's record, should have inferred that the budget would be given some other day, and that would have been correct. Meanwhile the estimates for the year beginning next July have been brought down. The little book shows that the government expects to spend $4,912,971 during next year. A comparison of this estimate with last year's expenditure is not yet possible, for there are always supplementary estimates. It is enough to say that the first estimate for next year asks for more money on current account than the first estimate of last year called for, and a good deal more than the late government asked. It will be seen that as yet nothing worth mentioning has come of the pledges of economy with which the ministers came into power. Yet there is one economy that deserves special mention. It is in

SAVINGS BANK INTEREST.

Two years ago when the change of Government took place, the Government was paying to depositors three and a-half per cent on their savings. The former or mechanic or the working girl with $800 in the Post Office or Government Savings Bank has an income of $21 a year. A year ago the present Government reduced the rate to three per cent. This year there is a further reduction to two and a-half per cent. The $800 deposit will now produce only $15 a year, a clear loss to the depositor of $6 a year, or nearly one-third of the income. It will be necessary for the owner of the bank-book to save and deposit $240 more in order to get the $21 income. The humble capitalist has, however, the satisfaction of knowing that the change is in the interest of the banks, and is made at the request of bankers. The banks which lend money at 8 per cent. like to borrow money at three per cent. or less. They cannot do so while the Government pays more, and so they constantly urge the Government to reduce the rate. So it happens that while the government pays to rich English investors two dollars and fifty cents a year on $92, it pays to a Canadian working man or woman the same sum for the use of $100. So it also happens that while, by a bargain made last year, the Minister of Railways is paying $100,000 a year to the Grand Trunk Railway by way of interest on $2,000,000, the Finance Minister pays exactly $60,000 to the savings bank depositors on the same amount deposited. There can be no custom for the Government to pay savings bank depositors a little higher rate than was paid to other creditors. By the new system depositors get less interest than is paid to any other creditors. The Government saves $500,000 a year by the two reductions, but depositors lose it.

NEWSPAPERS POSTAGE.

On Friday, another new thing was announced. For sixteen years the people of Canada have had their newspapers carried free through the mail. The Postmaster General has now introduced a measure imposing a postage rate of half a cent per pound on all newspapers carried to the subscribers or others, and living more than ten miles from the place of publication. The bill comes into effect as to half the proposed rate next January. After the following July the half cent rate is to be enforced. On the other hand Mr. Mulock proposes to reduce the letter postage from three cents to two cents. No date is fixed for this change but it goes into effect by royal proclamation whenever the Government deems expedient. Mr. Mulock explained that the weight of newspapers carried free had nearly doubled in less than ten years.

Sir Charles Tupper does not share Mr. Mulock's fears from the fact that so many newspapers are read. He infers that the people desire more knowledge, and that the press is supplying their needs. In a few hours remarks Sir Charles pointed out that the Ministers, finding that the people were learning too much about their blunders and ineptitudes, had concluded to shut off the sources of information by suppressing the newspapers. He found this proceeding more creditable to their wisdom than to their courage. Mr. Taylor, of Leeds, got close to the point when he said that 90 per cent of the letters on which the rate was reduced were written by business men, while 90 per cent of the papers which would now have to pay postage were mailed to the farmers. The new plan would blow for the farmers.

THE PREMIER'S PROMISE.

This measure should, according to promise have been down a fortnight or how much longer it may be held up no one can say. But it does seem certain that when it comes it will not be for a simple year and a half vote for a year's prohibition. It will rather be a complicated sort of Catch-22 with a mixture of taxation as well as of prohibition.

NOTES.

Mr. Davin proposes to take a vote on his resolution that "Good faith with the western farmer requires that agricultural implements be admitted free." In his speech he showed plainly enough that the promise was made, and even prohibitionists will probably vote that good faith requires a man to keep his promise. Mr. Davin says that the western members supporting the government came to Ottawa to destroy the chances of Ontario society that they were spending much of their time with their dancing masters. He raised a good laugh by referring to the new Avenue Laurier at Hull which leads to a grave yard and ends.

The biggest deputation of the year was here Tuesday. There were 248 Eastern Ontario men in it, and they all come to beg the Government to prevent the people of Michigan and New York from conveying Ontario Natural Gas across the border. They say that the supply will soon be exhausted if the International Gas Main is not suppressed.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is feeling the effects of party dissensions and cabinet disputes. He was not much in the house last week. Sir Charles Tupper seems to be more than equal to the strain on him. This conservative party in the house is united and in high spirit. The suggestion of some of the government orators that Sir Charles may resign the leadership of the Opposition has no foundation. Still Sir Charles may be ambitious enough to desire harder work than he is now doing in opposing this Government.

Correspondence.
To the Editor of the Union Advocate,
Dear Sir:-

In looking over the last issue of the Advocate I read a letter signed by H. Linton in which he charges me with being unnecessarily brutal in making an arrest. Now, sir, in self defence I wish to state the actual facts.

On the night in question I had seen John Ryan early in the evening, very much under the influence of liquor, but as he was interfering with no one at that time I let him alone. Two hours after I was sent for and told that he was drunk and creating a disturbance on the street in front of the Commercial Hotel.

I found him drunk and using language likely to make trouble and I arrested him. He went with me quietly until we got to the high-way road. Then I said, "Jack, the best thing you can do is to go home." He said, "no, you have arrested me, now put me in." I said, "all right in you will go." He then went quietly till we got to the Court House. There he said, "I am not going into the jail to-night, you are not able to put me in, so I will go home. It will be better for himself if he would go quietly, because in he had to go. Just at this

Temperance A HELPFUL HUSBAND.

Nearly thirty years ago, when I was president of the Woman's College in Evanston, Miss Jessie Brown was the leading favorite student whose ability, high character, tactful manners and good looks served to smooth the path of innovation by which the gentler sex was admitted to our University.

She was the daughter of one of our 'best families' in the highest sense of that term. Her father was a Christian lawyer, her mother prominent in philanthropic work, and their home was the centre of a delightful circle, who 'did good and not evil'.

What can we do right here and now to help the cause of temperance? The first person I sought was Jessie Brown, who cooperated warmly with me in an effort to bring the new outlook within and outside of the recreation room. An autograph album was procured in which we signed the pledge, and she circulated it among her friends.

After we commenced our home life he began to consider what part his wife could take in the arena of his ministerial life. The care of the home and the five children who came to gladden our hearts was work for any woman, physically, but considering the mind and soul of more importance.

My Dear Miss Willard-You ask me to tell you a little about my life and its work since I left the dear old college days and the classroom where we were associated as teacher and pupil.

As you know, I was the first girl to enter the preparatory school classes when the doors of the university were thrown open to girls by that noble-minded man, Dr. E. O. Haven, then president of the Northwestern University.

It was in the sophomore year that I began my temperance work by asking my classmates to sign the triple pledge.

But you'll be very careful of it? said Lucy, whose heart was beginning to sink within her.

Of course I will, said Maria Hart. And they took their leave, and with them went our poor little Lucy's peace of mind.

The next day but one a parcel was left at the door for Mrs. Evelyn by a disreputable-looking little boy. Norah carried it up and laid it on Lucy's bed.

It was the pink silk dress, creased and crumpled, with a note pinned to it in Maria Hart's coarse handwriting.

Dear Lucy: I return the dress. Had the Misfortune to spill a little ice-cream on the side-breast, but have took it out with Benzeno, so Noe one would know. I am much obliged, and remaine your affectionate MAMA.

With a fainting heart Lucy unrolled the parcel and saw the dress was ruined; what the oleaginous stream of ice cream had commenced the daubs of benzine had finished most effectually.

Lucy burst into tears, and, sinking down in a chair, hid her face in her hands. 'I knew it was wrong,' she sobbed. 'Oh, why, why did I allow myself to be over persuaded? I have proved myself unworthy to be trusted. I shall be dismissed without a reference, and mother's heart will be broken.'

Mrs. Evelyn came back the next day. Lucy met her with a face like a ghost. 'Why, child, what is the matter?' said Mrs. Evelyn kindly.

And Lucy, with a faltering voice, told the whole truth, exulting herself in one particular. 'Of course you'll discharge me, ma'am, said Lucy, 'but if you'll be so good as to wait I know mother'll pay the value of the dress in installments out of her wages, and I'll make it good for her when I get another place-if ever I do!'

And venturing to glance through her tears into Mrs. Evelyn's face she saw that it had not hardened into the stony anger she had expected to behold. Mrs. Evelyn laid her hand kindly on the shrinking shoulder.

'Lucy,' said she, 'you have had a lesson. See that you profit by it in the future.'

Then-then you will not discharge me? fluttered Lucy, scarcely able to believe in her own good fortune.

No, said Mrs. Evelyn, kindly 'not this time. For your mother's sake, Lucy-and also for your own-I will give you another trial.'

So poor Lucy Lee kept her place, after all, and Mrs. Evelyn has no cause to regret her leniency. For Lucy needed no more than that one lesson to teach her that 'the way of the transgressor is hard.'

come, as he said, 'an all-round woman.' Every Sunday, for six months, we stayed at the noon class-meeting, where he expected me to pray aloud. I had never been taught that part of Christian service. If my course failed and only a few sentences came, he finished the petition, and grew more tender and helpful as he saw my evident distress.

Then my husband planned missionary meetings for Sunday evenings, when he encouraged me to read papers which I had carefully written, and he had criticized with unfeeling impartiality. I will admit that I had rewritten them with many tears, feeling that I could never measure up to his ideal. But I tried hard, and the people said, 'How easy it is for you.' I was always told the topic of the prayer-meeting on that morning with the quiet remark, 'You might want to say something, just try and help me out. Sometimes he would tell me two months before-hand that there would be a temperance or missionary meeting in the church and I might do well to study such a topic.

I took a deep interest in his studies. If I could not get the entire church service I slipped in for the sermon, because I hid sat up until one and two o'clock in the morning hearing it read and amended, and I would know by my feelings how the people received it, so the preacher thought. My husband always kept me by his side after the church services, thus I was introduced to all the strangers and shook hands with nearly all the people the minister met. In this way, although often confined by home care from call upon the people, I met them on the Sabbath and knew them by face and name at least. After services at night we would walk, for then the children were safely asleep and there was no likelihood of any one calling, and we learned to know the shadows and dark places in the heart history of the town. At these times we talked over the events of the day and studied the social problems. I learned much of what I know of the evils of intemperance from these midnight walks and talks. I understood why my husband took the extreme position he did on all the moral questions of the day, and realized more keenly than any other bearer what it cost him when he unfolded the mistakes and wounds of the human heart.

Mr. Hilton helped me to study woman's responsibilities and privileges and the needs of mothers and children so that, as he said, 'when you are fifty and gray-headed you will be fitted to teach others.'

Putting into practice in my own family whatever theories or helps I might find, with such an adviser and example before me, with the motto of our home, 'Sweetness and Light,' engraven upon my heart, when God took from my side my great-hearted husband, I felt that I would like to help others and give to them some of the inspiration which had come from our close companionship.

And I want to say that any good man can help his wife cultivate herself. My brain work did not detract from my love of home. In fact, I took more pains to have the everyday duties perfectly done. Many little superfluities can be omitted. One must be healthy and wise to make life a pleasure. Clean, healthy children, a sunshiny atmosphere in the home, and heart and mind companionship in the marriage relationship will, with God's blessing, insure true help to the world and highest pleasure in life.

Lovingly yours in the work for Christ, 'JESSIE BROWN HILTON.'

Selected Literature. LUCY'S LESSON.

'I think I can trust you, Lucy,' said Mrs. Evelyn.

'I hope so, ma'am,' said Lucy Lee, coloring and playing nervously with the string of her apron.

Lucy Lee was the daughter of Mrs. Evelyn's housekeeper, the girl who aspired to the coveted position of 'own maid' to that lady, when the present incumbent had married the ex-coachman-an event in 'high life above stairs' which was soon about to transpire.

And a proud little lassie Lucy was, as she fluttered about the house, in the first days of Mrs. Evelyn's absence. Mrs. Evelyn had trusted her, and Mrs. Evelyn should see that she was worthy of the confidence reposed in her.

But the third evening Norah, the cook, who took charge of the lower regions of the house, called to her up the back stairs: 'Lucy, there's two girls here to see you!'

'Oh!' said Lucy, 'I think likely it's Maria Hart and Nelly Peabody. Please ask them up into the sewing-room, Norah.'

Maria Hart was a waitress in a ladies' restaurant. Nelly Peabody worked in a hoop-skirt factory, but to judge by their cheap finery, plumes and jet chains, one would have imagined them to be independently well off.

Lucy welcomed them with a smile. They had all three been at the ward school together, and in her unsophisticated little heart, Lucy thought their raiment splendid.

'So you're all alone, Lucy?' said Miss Hart.

'Yes,' said Lucy smiling, 'all alone.'

'Beau comes to see you often?' giggled Nelly.

'Oh, I haven't any beau,' answered innocent Lucy.

'Maria has, though,' said Nelly Peabody. 'Got engaged last week. He drives the baker's wagon and wears the sweetest moustache.'

'Is it really true?' said Lucy, looking admiringly at Maria.

'Yes, simpered Maria, 'its true. He asked me to go to the Seven Masker's ball tomorrow night.'

'Are you going?' asked Lucy, thinking Maria Hart must be the happiest girl in the world.

'Yes, I'm going,' said Miss Hart, 'and that's why I've come here. I must have a decent dress to wear, and I've spent my wages, every cent.'

'But I can't lend you anything, said Lucy in a flurry. 'I haven't a dollar.'

'Oh, pshaw!' said Maria; 'I don't want you to lend me any money, you poor little chick! Only Helen Raymond wore the sweetest canary-colored silk, trimmed with real black lace, at the Antelope ball last month, and she

CURES THE WORLD Rheumatism Banished Like Magic.

A Marvellous Statement - Relief from One Dose.

Mr. E. W. Sherman, proprietor of the Sherman House, Morrisburg, Ont. is known by thousands of Canadians, hence the following statement from Mr. Sherman will be read with great interest and pleasure.

'I have been cured of rheumatism of ten years' standing in three days. One bottle of SOUTH AMERICAN RHEUMATIC CURE performed this most remarkable cure.

The effects of the first dose of South American Rheumatic Cure were truly wonderful. I have only taken one bottle of the remedy, and now haven't any pain of rheumatism in my system. It did me more good than all the doctors I ever did in my life.'
