Poetry.

AUNT TABITHA.

BY OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

Whatever I do and whatever I say, Aunt Tabitha tells me that isn't the way;
When she was a girl (forty summers ago.) Aunt Tabitha tells me they never did so.

Dear Aunt! If I only would take her advice!
But I like my own way; and I find it so nice!
And besides I forget half the things I am told;
But they all will come back to me—when I am old.

If a youth passes by, it may happen, no doubt,
He may chance to look in as I chance to look out;
She would never endure an impertinent stare—
It is horrid she says, and I mustn't sit there.

A walk in the moonlight has pleasures, I own,
But it isn't quite safe to be walking alone;
So I take a lad's arm,—just for safety, you know;
But Aunt Tabitha tells me they did not do so.

How wicked we are, and how good they were then!
They kept at arm's length those detestable men;
What an era of virtue she lived in—
But stay—Were the men all such rogues in Aunt Tabitha's day?

If the men were so wicked I'll ask my papa
How he dared to propose to my darling mamma; Was he like the rest of them? Goodness! Who knows?
And what shall I say, if a wretch should propose?

I am thinking if Aunt knew so little of sin,
What a wonder Aunt Tabitha's aunt must have been!
And her grand-aunt—it scares me—how shockingly and That we girls of to-day are so frightfully bad!

A martyr will save us, and nothing else can;
Let me perish to rescue some wretched young man!
Though when to the altar a victim I Aunt Tabitha'll tell me she never did so!

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

SUMMERSIDE—APPEARANCE OF CHAR-LOTTE TOWN—GARISH HEARSE—RITUALISM—A PERFECT GARDEN—THE LUNATIC ASYLUM—FAL-CONWOOD, &c., &c.

[The following article was prepared some time since by A. J. Hickman, Esq., Dorchester, for the CHIGNEC-TO POST. Its appearance was unavoidably delayed, and we take the liberty of pruning it of some local incidents which are now uninteresting, and conduct our readers at once to Summerside. Ed.]

From the water it presents quite a town-like appearance, the proper medley of wharfs, houses and spires, the regular stretch of streets and the presence of active business people.
Its hotel accommodations is good, I am told, its wharves substantial, costly affairs, reaching far out into the sea. Its population and the number of its buildings are increasing with wonderful rapidity. Although ship-building is not as active there as at present as it has been, yet in addition to one new vessel launched at there were seven others in sight upon the stocks of various sizes from a full-rigged ship down. I need scarcely mention that the Summerside oysters are particularly excellent and large. Truly, as a gentleman remarked it is a "smart" little town.

Leaving Summerside at about 11 a. m. we were in Charlottetown at four in the afternoon. This town has an excellent land-lock harbor approached through a passage of respectable width outside, and through which the navigation is somewhat intricate on account of shoal places marked by buoys. Situate at the mouth of the beautiful and picturesque Hillsborough river, sloping gently to the shore, the town certainly presents a very pretty appearance from the water. Its appearance is denoted first merely by the spires of churches and by public buildings, which appear above the point of land that partially conceals the town. This rounded it opens into full view, impressing you at once with the natural beauty of its situation, the excellent artistic effect of its buildings, its charming seclusion, and the complete protection afforded by its harbor against the fierce storms of the Straits. For the pleasure afforded me by all this, I found a proper compensating misery in the way I was jostled and hurried upon landing, and by the non-appearance of any coaches, save one antiquated affair painted white and red, and looking like a garish hearse with seats running all around the inside. It was conspicuously well ventilated and correspondingly uncomfortable. The days was cold.

My nose and those of my fellow travellers blue. Very apologetic were we all at the happy co-operation of national colors, thus presented by us and the coach. I don't think our enthusiasm could even be truthfully called modest. Upon sober reflection I think we were cross. Arrived at the hotel, I speedily grew better natured over a blazing coal fire, and amused myself after awhile in deciphering the signs on the houses across the way, one of which announced in rare orthography that "T. Malone" was "hence" to sell spirits—liquors, another that P.
Connolly kept the "Eastern House."

This last gentleman had evidently followed a blind guide in the shape of his pronunciation. A word for my hotel, before I go further, I had heard that the hotels at Charlottetown were not good. My experience teaches the contrary. The hotel kept by Miss Rankine is good.
I stopped at Charlottetown ten days and was most agreeably impressed. In proportion to its population (about 1000) the town is extensive in area. Its situation is excellent not only for mere appearance, but for purposes of drainage, &c. It is built out with almost mathematical accuracy, the streets being all at right angles, with each other, and very broad, broader, than those of most cities, but there is marked lack of modern improvement, visible, especially in the want of sewerage, and macadamized streets, of which there are but a very few. To appreciate properly the latter want you have to consider the red loaming soil almost entirely free from stone, which under the influence of the heavy Autumn rains speedily becomes a paste mud, so deep and tenacious as to be almost impassable, with ordinary driving vehicles. Being nominally however, these discomforts are apparently not despairing to the citizens, and I am told, that even the dignitaries of the place in the humility begotten of necessity sometimes return from balls and such evening festivities in the most commonplace two wheeled carts. With commendable enterprise, however, they have macadamized some of the streets, and for some considerable distance the roads leading out of town, a work of no small cost when we consider that the stone has all to be imported from Nova Scotia.

The side-walks are of wood, except short pieces in front of a few buildings, which are of stone, and the result probably of private enterprise.
People have their religious creeds in Charlottetown, as they do everywhere else, and the advent of pure ritualism was welcomed there sometime ago. St. Peter's Church re-joices in the sense of form and the absence of Christianity. Man and wife were content formerly to worship side by side, but there religious etiquette has been so strict, that Conventualism must be observed in the worship of God as well as of lesser Kings, par consequent, the properly fashionable barrier has been erected and the men do their devotions upon one side of the church, and the women upon the other. The service was entirely choral, and did their work with decorous formalism and trained intonation. The performance certainly was a most remarkable one in an artistic point of view.

The homage of the heart which was in olden time given by "God be merciful to me a sinner" would seem now to require a far more elegant lip service, and the teachings and ritual of the poor "man of sorrows" have been so improved upon as scarcely to be recognizable. But then he was only the son of a poor carpenter, and lived in a very plain solution page. Private confession and ausult to any extent. One of the Charlottetown, is Owen Connolly, Esq., who bids fair in his speculations to be for this city what A. T.
Stewart is for New York. He has already amassed a fortune dealing in the article of pork. For a warehouse he has an immense wooden building, some 150 feet in length, by 40 feet in width, and height respectively, to which he is now putting a brick addition 75 feet square. He has a large general store on the much larger following than the hybrid child whose followers worship at St. Peter's. The country round is really a perfect garden. It is com-dered with rows of beautiful trees, planted there, than have been naturally. I fancy this is the case in some instances at least. The vision is enchanted by quiet little spots of rustic beauty or by great stretches of landscape made up of gently sloping hills, undulating meadow and winding river. Smiling farms rendering comparison pleasant, beautiful, country residences partially hidden among the trees, vistas of beauty where through the forest is seen the silvery glimmer of the river, such are the sights afforded by a drive into the country from Charlottetown. The Lunatic Asylum is some distance from the town, and I saw with one or two exceptions a terribly mad lot of inmates. Their Keeper, an Englishman, and his daughter, kept them apparently under thorough control. The building is a plain one of brick, is situated in a conveniently retired spot not far from the water. Falconwood, the residence of Sir John A. McDonald, during his stay upon the island, the summer before last, should be mentioned. I can scarcely imagine a place better adapted to the wants of an invalid during a long convalescence. The approach to it is through a thick grove of beautiful trees, whose variety and careless tangled growth would seem to be that of the original forest. A romantic carriage road leads gracefully through the wood to the substantial spacious brick house, situated at a short distance from the banks of the Hillsborough river, and far removed from the town, of which you have an excellent view from the Stock farm a little further to the North East. The house was built I believe by an English gentleman, and possesses a great number of rooms and is unex-ceptional at present. The sweet sylvan beauty of Falconwood, its delicious retirement, the noble river that flows its south Eastern boundary, smiling merrily to the sunshine, gleaming through the trees a broad line of silver under the light of the gentle moon, all these combine to make it a most charming and aristocratic spot, where a convalescent might dream, the sunny days of summer away in perfect rest, finding sympathy in the all pervading hush of the place. Silently happy is the hope of the health that comes slowly and surely back to him. The most noticeable public buildings in Charlottetown, are the Colonial buildings the new Court House and Post Office (not yet completed), the Catholic Cathedral, a wooden building the Convent, the Wesleyan Academy and a new building, built if I remember rightly, for some fellowship among the Catholics. Except the Colonial building and Cathedral, these buildings are built of brick, the front of the Court House, &c., being faced with marble, with stone settings about the windows and doors.

This is a compact, handsome edifice, three stories high and surmounted by a Cupola containing an addition to the Court Room and Post Office, suitable apartments for the Judges and Barristers and offices for the register of deeds, and of the officials. The Court Room is spacious and lofty, with neatly corniced ceiling, from the roof a most magnificent view of the town and surrounding country is obtainable. The Colonial building is built of stone, with stately pillared portico. Its exterior entirely puts to shame that unsightly wooden erection, known as the House of Assembly of New Brunswick, but the Chambers in the latter of both the lower and upper houses, are much more spacious and better appointed for the ease and comfort of the state-burdened legislators. In this building are also the offices of the different heads of departments as a rule, the poorest paid of public servants in the world can probably produce. From the significant station on the roof a view is to be had almost equal to that from the neighboring Court House.

I was told the potato and wheat crops were a failure upon the island last year, but that the oat crop was good. During my stay there was not much shipping in the harbor, and produce dealers had not commenced sending to any extent. One of the most remarkable solicitors men in Charlottetown, is Owen Connolly,
Esq., who bids fair in his specula-
tions to be for this city what A. T.

principal street in the town, and is at present actively engaged in building wharves, to give him the proper facilities for carrying on a large fish trade with his other business.

The "Railway ring" was the all important topic of conversation during my stay in the island. Modern politics seem to have been well studied by the people there. They have learned thoroughly the difference between the "m's" and the "o's," although save in some instances of shabby honor and poor pay with out distinction, the distinction is really one of "a difference." The Press of the island is eminently advanced in upon ground of public questions, vesting the national principles; direct, and in a purely of party prejudiceism consulting of unalloyed patriotism and the interests of the individuals, E. G., those of private "Railway rings," discussion of Mr. O'Brien has derived.

Mr. O'Brien has derived notoriety, as a would-be martyr of modern tyranny, his mar-will not probably be long cherished in the meantime the railroad built by the arch plotters (so called) whose corporate name is the "railway ring," thus made an instrument in the hands of an insatiable Providence, for the accomplishment of much good. With the era of increased steam communication by land and sea—P. E. island is undoubtedly destined to be a favorite watering place for tourists. Charlottetown with its splendid back country, the harbor and many other attractions, will in time advance to the position of a city among cities, but the advance will be slow in the face of nature's obstacle, viz: the barrier of ice which shuts the harbor in the winter and makes her communication with the outer world most uncertain and dangerous.

GINGERBREAD.

BY DR. GINGER.

I do not propose furnishing a recipe for the benefit of confectioners and housekeepers; nor indulging in a learned dissertation on the origin, history, or manufacture of the above named wholesome and popular article of food. I know nothing, worth mentioning, about cookery in general, nor about the baking of gingerbread in particular. It is true this need not prevent my favoring the public with a description of the process, or indeed of a new process greatly superior to any which has been hitherto discovered. Even if I know nothing about it through the ordinary channels, viz: cookery books experience, and I can at least do as the German did when required to write an essay on the Rhinoceros, or some such animal, and evolve a recipe out of the depths of my own inner consciousness. I should certainly have one advantage over our oft quoted German friend, inasmuch as I have assimilated a considerable quantity of gingerbread in my time, which he is not likely to have done in the case of his Rhinoceros. However that may be, the readers of this paper will be taught nothing about literal gingerbread, by Ginger. (I deem it due to myself to guard against ill-natured misunderstanding, by protesting that the expression which concludes the last sentence is not to be regarded as a piece of slang, but simply as referring to the non de plume, under which these remarks are penned.) But it may reasonably be asked, what then is the meaning of the title "Gingerbread," which heads this article? I hasten to explain that it is used in a meta-phorical figurative sense. The excellent periodical for which this is written, supplies its patrons with a considerable variety of mental aliment. Its weekly feast of reason includes intellectual food to suit various tastes and different degrees of intellectual development. Its editor, for example, skins the surface of things in general, to gratify the appetite of those who are saup-or-fish-ally inclined. He supplies in his leading articles, the piece de resistance, the substantial roast beef or leg of mutton. He does not neglect to furnish, in interesting and amusing stories, the mental plum-pudding or apple-pie, so generally relished by young or old. In the poets corner he lays out a rich desert of fruit, bou-bons and confections. Nor do these viands by any means exhaust the bill-of-fare. Correspondents add all sorts of items to the least—sometimes goose, not without a sufficiency of sauce,—sometimes a little game —sometimes a piece of cheek. It is not necessary to detain the reader by further particularizing the countless diversities of literary pabulum served up for the reading public in the columns of the press, from highly seasoned dishes of sensational scandal to the trifles of wit and humor "nuts to crack" of local gossip, and the puff paste of the advertisements. Suffice it to say that it is my purpose to offer occasionally a piece of gingerbread as a humble and perhaps rather incongruous contribution towards this rich repast.

Gingerbread is a very plain and simple kind of cake, but it is capable of many variations, such as hard gingerbread and soft, ginger nuts and ginger snaps, and in some countries is backed in all sorts of fantastic patterns, and decorated with the gaudiest, most captivating colours.
But in its form it is, in itself, that gilding which is painted on and a recede. Poise, nutritious and often partake of it of refined taste the richest fruit-cake, preference to fore encouraged to my that my gingerbread may suit the tastes of a few, and I have at least the reas-ing assurance that it will leave no headache behind it, nor produce any of the agonies of indigestion.

In these days of a teeming press, when "of making books there is no end," people who read at all are tempted to flit about like the bees from blossom to blossom in the garden of current literature. But un-happily the transient sips of knowledge thus obtained are seldom stored in the cells of memory, and still more unhappily there is often poison gathered with the honey or instead of it. Even if the countless bad books, which are perpetually dispensation on all sides their pestilential odors, be scrupulously left untouched, still a habit of mental dissipation is easily contracted, which enervates the reasoning faculties, produces a dreamy vagueness of ideas, and indisposes the mind for serious and consecutive thought. By all means then let me urge the readers of this article to pay some attention to their mental diet, if they do not wish to suffer from mental dyspepsia.
I am far from recommending gingerbread as a regular or frequent regimen, but I do recommend a daily allowance of wholesome, instructive, profitable reading, and a rare and very sparing indulgence in the captivating delights of the light literature of the day. Scientific men think they have discovered a remarkable connection between national food and national characteristics. They consider that in nations which neglect the due administration of nitrogenous and non-nitrogenous aliments, feeding, for example, too exclusively on potatoes, like the Irish, or on rice, like the Hindoos, idle habits, &c., the poverty of the masses, are the inevitable result. And this no doubt holds equally true, and involves equally important consequences when applied to mental diet.
Some ingenious, if not practical, statesman, has suggested that the chronic state of faction and discontent in Ireland, which British Legislation seems so unable to overcome, would be at once allayed by supplying each citizen with a full allowance of beef for his potatoes. Let us take care to keep up always a due proportion between labour and relaxation in the intellectual man, as well as in the physical, that we may maintain that most desirable condition, "mens sana in corpore sano."

The Louisville Courier-Journal informs a correspondent that Nilsson was not the one who fought at Trafalgar.

"God made us men" was inscribed upon a wagon filled with women at the Fiftieth Amendment jubilee in Louisville.

A Nantucket storekeeper advertises for sale, "Quart bowls, of all sorts and sizes; ninepence apiece,
and various prices."

Eye glasses are now worn for style.

Round waists are entirely out of date.

Large sleeve buttons are coming in again.

Some dressmakers are now beginning to require forty yards of silk for a dress. It is the last load, we all know which breaks the camel's back.

A new style of opera cloak is of white cashmere elaborately embroidered, and trimmed with a trimming of floss silk to imitate feathers.

The fashion of black patches of court-plaster upon the cheek of beauty is again in high vogue, and receives the usual amount of ridicule.

Magic garters are among the novelties of the season—so called, because they are also adapted to be worn as neck-ties.

EUREKA.—We have pondered long and earnestly over the fate of trunks, of trunks in the hands of baggage masters—trunks liable to be smas-ed. Our object has been to devise some method whereby a man or woman could secure their personal effects while travelling, without carrying them in a burglar-proof safe.
We have it: label them "Nitro Glycerine; handle with care." If this dodge gets stale after a while, just put a pound or two in your trunk, and then let them smash. If the savage lives to be of any further service to a railroad company after fooling around with your goods, he will probably be more careful.

A wretch who would trifle with a man's feeling after this fashion, deserves to be shot with a charge of rock salt. Here is the way one was played on a friend of ours recently.
He was met in the street by an acquaintance, who said, "I've just been up to your house, and learned that your mother-in-law died this morning, and has left you something. I congratulate you." Our friend hurried home, with fond anticipations of finding himself heir to twenty thousand dollars. His feelings may be imagined when his wife informed him that the old lady had got her hair died that morning, and that he was heir to the bill for the dyeing.
Since then the facetious fellow crosses the street when the victim of the fuel joke appears in sight.

TELEGRAPHY.—In England, all telegraph lines are now owned by the government, and short messages sent to any part of the kingdom for twenty-five cents.
The government telegrams what are called postal telegrams, bearing a twenty-five cent stamp, bearing this card you write your message.
On telegraph message, and "ite your the lamp-post letter box, it in carrier delivers it to the telegraph department, and the message promptly forwarded to its destination. The English government has been petitioned to purchase all the submarine telegraph cables leading from England.

A gentleman of a slightly irritable temper, called out loudly for some hot water from his bedroom, and was unanswered. Seizing a small bureau he shoved it before him to the head of the stairs, and sent it whirling, end over end, to the "ball below." The crash was loud enough to bring out mother, daughter, and all the servants. The head of the family was seated at the top of the stairs, elbows on knees, chin resting in hands.

"Oh, father! what is the matter?" asked the frightened daughter.

"Matter!" said the old man, "why here I have been a callin' and callin' for yer high on an hour, and now I've telegraphed for yer, that's all."

A Nantucket storekeeper adver-
tises for sale, "Quart bowls, of all
sorts and sizes; ninepence apiece,
and various prices."

style.

date.

Some dressmakers are now begin-
back.

A new style of opera cloak is of
white cashmere elaborately embroi-
of floss silk to imitate feathers.

THE EURHETORIAN.

The Eurihetorian has all respectable sociological pretensions, an "organ"—"Eurihetorian Argosy," which paper was read by Mr. G. J. Bond. It abounded in articles satiric and scraphic, poetic and epigramatic. It was newsy with locals, sparkling with wit, and was well received. The last on the programme before adjournment was the chorus and solo—"The Alpine Echo," solo by Miss E. Black.

MR. EDITOR:—

Yours, Sincerely,

THE METHODIST CONFERENCE which has been in Session in New York, has omitted its annual assault upon popular amusements. A Committee on that subject while condemning generally those that are demoralizing, recommended that the whole matter be left to the judgement of Church members themselves — thereby displaying a degree of liberality most in consonance with Protestant ideas.

Gleanings.
Roman sashes and neckties are fashionable.
A new style of goods just imported is called satin de laine.
Black street saques, braided with white, are going out of favor.
All you can get out of those young Moncton hunters now, is a grunt.
Flowing sleeves are the rage, but are sometimes worn over coat sleeves.
Silks of very pale, but decided tints, are most admired for party dresses.
Very neat lockets of Roman gold, engraved with monograms, are in market.
Some one describes a wedding as a grand mixture of tears, toasts, trunks, and trousseau.
The latest style of looped overskirt resembles the top of an old-fashioned parlor organ.
Sleeveless lace socks are very stylish, worn with light silk dresses, for the house or full dress.
Striped velvet and satin dresses are very much in vogue for street wear, over black or brown silk dresses.
Velvet house jackets, in all shades, blue, claret, green, brown and olive, trimmed with gold braid, are fashionable.
A lady editor in the East says that if men want their children to look like them, the fewer jaunts they make to California the better.
