EARLY IN THE SEASON WEPREDICTED EARLY IN THE SEASON WEPREDICTED that the real estate market in city realty would be extremely active, and the many transactions on the local market prove that our prognostication was well founded. Even through our office alone over $100,000 worth of real estate has been sold. The tendency among buyers is still towards further investments. The extremely low rates now being paid on savings bank deposits will have a tendency also of increasing investments in real estate. To meet this looked-for demand we have secured a number of very eligible properties. We can only mention a few in this list, but if you will call at our office we will be pleased to give you call at our office we will be pleased to give you full particulars of any property you think might be suitable for your requirements. We mention a few:

The Situation Up to Date.

The situation cannot be said to have undergone much change since our last

One or two members of the City Council and Citizens' Committee great desire for what one of them grandiloquently termed an "ultimatum." We are not aware that they were empowered to issue "ultimatums." What they were chiefly appointed to do was to try to mediate between the parties and get them together. The public are doing their own business in the "ultimatum" line, and doing it pretty effectually,

If the public had thought the committee were going into the manufacture of ultimatums, they would have insisted on an equal number of the representatives of the great mass of the people being on the committee.

The striking employes offer to accept full and fair arbitration; and by the finding, no matter what it is, they are prepared to stand or fall. But the Company-though it was promised on their behalf that the statement of what they were willing to concede would be put in writinghave not fulfilled the promise made.

No matter, therefore, how adroitly the Company may dodge, they are, practically, refusing the men's offer of real arbitration.

It now remains for the City Council to stand up to the Company like men, in insistence that the Golden Rule of Arbitration be at once brought into

PASSED AWAY

Death of Hon. William B. Ives, M.P.

for Sherbrooke, Que. [Special to The Advertiser per C. P. R.] Ottawa, July 15.-Hon. W. B. Ives died at St. Luke's Hospital at 11:40 a.m. today, from paralysis.

Following closely on the lamentable death of the late Senator Sanford, the Conservative party suffers a severe loss in the demise of another able and emi-nent leader. Hon. William Bullock Ives was born in Compton, Que., Nov. 17, 1341. He was called to the bar in 1857, practiced for many years Sherbrooke, and was made a Q. C. by the Marquis of Lorne in 1880. Besides practicing his profession, the deceased was interested in a number of business enterprises. After serving as mayor of Sherbrooke, he was, in 1878, elected to the Dominion House of member fo Richmond and Wolfe, holding the sea till 1891, when he was returned f Sherbrooke, which city he represent at the time of his death. Lad of Fifteen Saves the Lives of Five Ottawa Ladies. [Special to The Advertiser per C.P.R.] Ottawa, July 15.-Gordon Heron, son of the late Mayor Heron, inland revenue department, and grandson of the late Gordon Brown, who was for so many years connected with Toronto Globe, performed an act of heroism which entitles him to the consideration of the Humane Society.

Young Heron is but 15 years old. He went out with a plank to five ladies who were drowning in the Gatineau River near Chelsea, got them on to it and carried them to the Ottawa side of the river, the current being too strong to return. Two river men were on the bank, but offered no assistance. All five ladies belong to Ottawa. The ladies rescued were Mrs. J. E. Cox, Mrs. J. F. Garrow, Miss Georgina Kirby, Miss Hilda Kirby and Miss Hazel Christie, of Ottawa. Three of them, while bathing, got beyond their depth, and the other two went to their assistance. They were drawn into the swift current, and were about to give up, when young Heron put out from the shorew ith a plank.

Trades and Labor Council Passes Strong Resolutions.

Postponed Labor Demonstration Takes Place Monday Night-Workingmen's Wives to Organize.

A largely attended meeting of the Trades and Labor Council was held last night. The meeting was called for the purpose of considering matters in connection with the street car strike. It was the unanimous feeling of the delegates that the street car men should entertain no proposition from the company that did not place every striker back at work. It was announced that the strikers' wives had organized to help on the fight and to raise funds. The Trades and Labor Council determined to take steps to enlist the co-operation of the wives of the union men, and through them to enlist the sympathy and support of the women of the city and the working girls in the factories by the formation of a Home Defense Union, the members of which will wear badges and assist the wives and daughters of the strikers to mold public opinion, raise funds and help in the struggle. The proposition raised great enthusiasm among the delegates, and there is no doubt it will be energetically pushed and such an association formed. Arrangements were made to carry out the big labor demonstration next Monday night, postponed from last Monday night. All the organized labor bodies in the city will form on Dufferin avenue, at Victoria Park, and parade to the Jubilee rink, where it is expected W. D. Mahon and others will give short ad-

ST. MARYS OLD BOYS' REUNION

Eighty Places Will Be Represented-$1,000 for Prizes and Attractions -Local Contingent Completes Arrangements.

The St. Marys Old Boys of this city, numbering about 40, met in the City Hall last night and completed final arrangements for their reunion in that town on Wednesday, July 19. The members were all very enthusiastic about their visit to the town of their youth. A large crowd will go from London, while other Canadian cities will be well represented. The people of St. Marys are preparing a great welcome for the Old Boys, and they never do things by halves. A monster tade procession will be held in the morning, and in the afternoon a big demonstration. One thousand dollars has been offered in prizes. The band competition promises to be keen, as there is a large number of entries. The first prize is $175. Races, a tug-of-war, hose-reel contests, balloon ascensions, fireworks and many other first class attractions are on the pregramme. The G. T. R. will issue first-class return tickets to St. Marys from all points within a radius of 75 miles at single firstclass fare, good going on p.m trains, July 18 and on all trains on July 19, good to return on or before July 20, at 1899. Bands in uniform will be charged two thirds of single fare for the round trip. The return fare from London is 65 cents. The committee at St. Marys have received notification that about 80 cities, towns and villages will have representatives present.

Charley Collins and Pete Lohman exchanged pleasantries in the ninth. If the Hams beat 'em out again today the street car strike in London be forgotten. Lohman should sign some of London's street car conductors. They are good strikers. Pete Lohman was a crestfallen young man when he packed up his bats and started for home. The Cockneys are helpless without that gang of London rowdies which always infest Tecumseh Park. Bert Elton sprang into the air like a two-year-old panther when he made that double play all alone in the fifth. Reed is an improvement over How-

We extend to them our most sincere sympathy in their present overwhelming affliction. CHANGES IN THE LEAFS.

Guelph Herald: On paper, at least, the present make-up of the Maple Leaf team looks to be the strongest of the season. Warner has been released, and Pete Tibald, who arrived in the city last night, went to Woodstock with the team this morning, to play third base. Kostal, the midget pitcher, has also been handed his walking ticket. The little fellow pitched good ball, especially in the early part of the season, and the baseball public had confidence in him. But as regularly as he made his appearance in the box the team behind him played a rank game. This was becoming too common, and Manager Black, to end matters, released Kostal. The move will generally be accepted as a wise one. With Tibald and Wagner in the game, the Leafs should develop into an aggregation of sluggers. There is not a weak hitter in the team now. Sechrist's shift to right garden acted like a dose of spring compound. He began to field brilliantly and hit the ball like a batting fiend. If Black's men are fortunate enough to win a few games at once, the race for the pennant will be hot. Kostal will likely go back to Mansfield, whence he came. Tibald can make the distance to first base faster than any other man in the Canadian League.

House of Commons May Finish by Aug. 1-Senate Passes the G. T. R. Agreement.

Ottawa, July 15.-Hope that the 1st of August may see the end of the present session is not altogether extinct, although it is by no means so strong as it was a week ago.

On Monday evening the supplementary estimates for the present year will be brought down, when it will be found that the amounts asked for public works will not be so large as has been prophesied by the Conservative press. The government will probably offer to pay a portion of the cost of building the Quebec bridge, but it is unlikely that the administration will go so far as to undertake the cost of constructing the bridge at the public expense

Sir Wilfrid announced yesterday that the senate resolution embodying the government's policy in respect to the Upper House, will be presented on Monday night, but that it is not the intention to press a discussion then and there. It is the belief that the resolutions when submitted to the House of Commons will not be found to contain material for a prolonged controversy, although, of course, there are certain members of the opposition who may be expected to make a stiff fight against any remodeling of the constitution of the Upper House.

Since the opening of the session more than 8,000 columns of Hansard have been filled with the speeches of gentlemen of the commons, and it is likely that the figure will be near the 10,000 mark, what with morning sittings and Saturday sittings, before the talking is finished for this year.

THE RAILWAY BILL. The government's bill, as amended by the senate, in connection with the extension of the Intercolonial to Montreal, has virtually passed the senate, being put through the committee stage last evening. The period of notice for the abrogation of the traffic arrangement will be six months. The bill now stands for its third reading on Tuesday next. In committee, the minister of justice offered to accept an amendment to clause 40, giving the minister of railways power to terminate the traffic agreement on twelve months' notice.

After Mr. Blair had again announced that he expected to have a fourteenfoot channel ready for vessels to pass through on Sept. 1, the vote for the Galops Canal was passed. Mr. Blair's announcement was received with cheers. The canals are not quite finished, but the contractors are being spurred to do their utmost. The votes for the interior department, department, geological survey, Dominion lands and government of the Northwest, and several other items in connection with the department of the interior, were passed. Mr. Sifton gave statistics to show the improvement of the Indians under the administration of the department. Then, as to education, they had 273 schools, with a total attendance of 9.880 pupils, with an average of 50 per cent of daily attendance 91 were under the auspices of the Roman Catholic Church, 88 Church of England, 42 Methodist, 12 Presbyterian, and 1 Moravian. Mr. Sifton said he was not extending the number of industrial schools, believing that they did not produce results commensurate with their expense, because it was unreasenable to expect that the Indian could, after he had received his technical training, compete with white men in mechanical pursuits. Holding this opinion, he was extending the boarding school system, which was less ex-

During the discussion Mr. Sifton announced that owing to the opposition of the half-breeds and the necessity for prompt action in making treaties for extinguishing the Indian titles in Athabasca district, which could not be effected until the half-breed claims were satisfied, the half-breed commissioners had been obliged to amend the form of scrip issued to the half-breeds, so that it could be readily transferred,

How to End the Strike

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

Apparently the citizens' committee and street railway company have come to a dead-lock, and it looks as if the fight must go on. Happily, I have got a suggestion or plan, that if carried out would end the whole trouble. People that understand the situation would naturally say there is a large amount of egotism in that assertion. Well, my plan is this: Let there be a special meeting of the council, and to insure a full attendance, let the notice state the object of the meeting is to appoint a deputation to go to Ottawa. When the meeting is conven-ed have some alderman who helped to elect the present member, move a resolution that a large deputation wait on our sitting M.P. and ask him to resign his seat in parliament so as to bring on a city election. Of course, for reasons hereafter stated our obliging M.P. would consent to sacrifice himself. Then the left wing of the deputation could secure the promise of the government to bring on an election immediately. Now for the re-sults. Hand-shaking and pleasant inquiries about our health would im-mediately spring up. Every man would be "a mon for a that." There would be no discrimination as to the vehicles. If we couldn't get a dray to ride in it would make no difference, private buggies, gladstones, kensing-tons, coupes or democrats would be tons, coupes or democrats would be free for all. The fellows with a gravel pit up their sleeves would be choice company. The police magistrate would get a rest for he would have no one before him. Ham bones and beer up attic stairs would draw that crowd. Mr. Ginge's shop would run overtime on pig's feet alone. The great four thousand horny-handed sons of toil and strikers so dear to the worthy mayor's maternal heart would mount the social scale and sit among the noble four hundred. His worship's Maxim would be relegated to behind the ramparts on the first concession line as not a thing of necessity in canvassing for votes among the workshops. The government would have to do something and the least share they could take in the social, civic, political and economic reunion of London would be to charge up the thousands of dollars accumulating for Mr. Everett's -a good indication of the progress of the movement. Of 273 Indian schools, summer camps. And now, what would on their swords and disembowel themlieve, in China, it is the opium-chewing managers—and, of course, if he were away there would be no strike.

Now, I am sure the bulge on your columns will not permit any further expansion of the list of benefits growing out of the simple metter of a new term. ing out of the simple matter of a parliamentary election, and it only remains for the parties interested to carry their part of the plan and as our transferred, not translated, preacher (he was great on transfers) used to shout: "Say! Say! Wouldn't it be glorious?" Yours truly. J. H. McMECHAN.

SUCCESS OF A YOUNG LADY ARTIST.

Miss Kussner, the young American who has achieved a high reputation in Europe and America as a miniature painter, recently returned here from Russia, where she had most interesting experiences. She went to St. Petersburg to paint a miniature of the Grand Duchess Vladimir, and had only been there a few days when she was summoned to the winter palace to paint a likeness of the czarina. Before she had finished the czar ordered a miniature of himself.

SIMPLICITY OF THE RUSSIAN

COURT. Miss Kussner speaks with much enthusiasm of the kindness and consideration with which she was treated by the imperial court, and of the simplicity and unaffectedness of their staff. Her first sittings were at the winter palace, St. Petersburg, and the last at the summer villa at Zarskoe-Selo. While the palaces bristled with soldiers all he wanted from his cold storage and police, both the emperor and empress almost daily drove out unattended, even by a footman. Both of their majesties are immensely popular with the people. The czar gave Miss Kussner eight or nine sittings of several hours each, and talked most freely with

ANTI-AMERICAN FEELING IN MADRID.

A private letter from Madrid says the feeling there against Americans is growing very bitter on account of the Philippines prisoners, and the position of Americans at Madrid is very un-pleasant. When Mrs. Bellamy Storer, wife of the United States minister, recently saw the queen-regent, the latter, with tears in her eyes, said: "What is summer camps. ADMIRAL DEWEY'S RECEPTION. According to information obtained from British naval sources, Admiral Dewey's reception at the various British stations was no more cordial and no different in any way from that accorded to the admirals of other fleets. Admiral Dewey's visit to the Island of Malta is likely to be very quiet. The governor is in deep mourning, owing to the death of his wife, and the British fleet left Malta last Sunday on its summer cruise, and half of the officers of the garrison and English residents are absent, the former on furlough and the latter visiting or traveling on the continent.

CROKER WON'T BE MISSED. According to the Man-of-the-World, the mid-week edition of the Sporting Times and recognized sporting authority, Mr. Richard Croker has signally failed in his avowed object of "knock ing the stuffin' out of Tattersall's and that when he returns to the United States "he will not be missed." Thompson, who rowed that day both for the Grand and Stewards, waited for Ashe to get clear away and then went in pursuit and won a great race at the post by a foot. Then the Thames men claimed the decision on a foul. Such an incident is a reminder that we are not without spot or blemish, and that the amateur Rowing Association definition of amateur not insure sportsmanship. I should not be surprised if Ashe never rowed under the Thames Rowing Club's colors. HORSE TALK.

The sale of Haggin's yearlings at Newmarket Thursday attracted much attention, and realized £10,789, averaging £121. In only one instance was a really good price reached, namely 1,850 guineas for a gold Finch-Fleurette colt. The late W. Bruce Seaton's American yearlings averaged 127 guineas. On Thursday a number of yearlings were bought by Purcell Gilpin, who will train and race them here for Mr. Wm. C. Whitney.

Truth says: "There has been a great deal of crack-brained trumpeting about American-bred yearlings. A mighty fuss was raised about a large consignment of yearlings from the United States sold at Newmarket last autumn, when high prices were realized, but not one of the animals which changed hands has won a race so far and appear to be practically worthless for racing purposes. asinine enthusiasts indulge in laudatory rants about American horses, because Sir William Lord Beresford won a number of important races with animals from the United States, they forget his horses were all bred by Mr. Lorillard, who has the finest stud in

DEPEW HOME FROM EUROPE

Great Britain Founded on a Rock-A Contrast to the Continent.

Chauncey Depew has just returned from Europe. In an interview the records his impressions of the trouble in France, and adds:

"From the turmoil of the continent,

England and everything in Great Britain seems founded on the rock. The contrast impressed me as never before with the conservatism and solidity of English finances, society, institutions, polities and people. Nothing changes as one goes back year by year. You are received with the same cordial hospitality. You will find your friends just as you left them. The landlord gives you the same rooms in your hotel, the waiter puts on the tables, if you arrive without giving an order, the same things you had seen when he last served you, and politicians are discussing ing the week long has been tropical, with unflagging zeal and interest the same questions. The same two old sailors who held out their hats to you past, and the heat has given a final on the footpath between the station and blow to the waning season. Everyone the field at Ascot 20 years ago sing the is hurrying to the country; even the same songs and shout 'Good luck to you, gentlemen,' in the same cheery way, and except that the wooden leg gets sometimes on the right instead of the left, they are the same old salts they were when they came out of the hospital after the victory at Trafalgar. I do not mean there is no progress, for there is steady development in every department of human interest and activities. Slowly but surely, liberal ideas crystallize into laws. You see it in the extension of the suffrage; in the enlarged powers of local government; in measures for the welfare of the working people and the old and helpless. The Conservatives after four years of power are getting careless, and in a little bill which nobody seems to understand and which amounts to little in itself they are giving the Liberals a chance to appeal to the religious prejudices of the country against further powers to the Established Church. The Liberals are longing and hoping for the hundred seats which would give them at the next election a working majority outside the uncertainty of a reliance on the Irish members. The friendship for the United States is warmer, more pronounced and more universal than ever. "That jolly tar and gallant gentleman, Captain Sir Edward Chichester, who stood so firmly by Admiral Dewey at Manila, made a capital speech at the dinner to Mark Twain by the White Friars. He paid the highest compliments to the American officers and men, and told this story: His ship got out of fresh meat. Dewey let him have supply. When his ship came to Hong Kong an English official said to one of Chichester's petty officers, a fat fellow, 'How did you get on at the Philippines?' 'Oh, we got out of meat.' 'Well, you seem to have fared pretty well, anyhow.' 'Oh, yes,' said the fat sailor, slapping his stomach with great satisfaction, 'Dewey did it.' Ambassador Choate is growing in popularity, and will prove one of the most successful of the distinguished representatives we have sent to Great Britain."

SIR HENRY IRVING'S JOKE. Sir Henry Irving is always Sir Henry Irving, whether on or off the stage. So marked is his individuality that during his latest visit to this country, a New York practical joker addressed a letter to him, the envelope of which contained merely a pen-and-ink portrait of the actor and his hotel address. The letter was promptly delivered by the hotel clerk, and a reporter to whom the wag confided his joke followed to learn the effect.
"A-a-a-h!" mused the actor, "this deserves an answer." Thereupon he seated himself at his desk and indited an ironical letter of thanks and inclosed it in an envelope. "You don't know the address?"

"It does not matter," returned Sir

Henry, "I think this will reach him without difficulty." On the envelope he had drawn the face of a donkey with a padr of enormous ears, the ends of which covered the paper from corner to corner.

The Aberdeen Free Press of a recent date says: What is undoubtedly the finest piece of shooting that has been seen at any meeting of the kind, and what is probably a record among volunteers, was witnessed between 7 and 8 o'clock in the evening at the 200 yards range. About that time the light was dull and the wind somewhat un-steady—conditions which made the performance all the more remarkable. Armorer-Sergeant J. E. Martin, of the Glasgow Highlanders, of the Martin rifle fame, shot for the Ladies' Gold Cross, making only 32, but finishing with three bulls. The United States Upholsterers Want an 8-Hour Day.

The Detroit Street Railway Situation-Connaut Dockmen's Demands Conceded.

Detroit, July 15 .- The executive committee of the Upholsterers' International Union, together with five delegates representing local unions throughout the country, adjourned yesterday after a five days' conference in this city. They decided to demand the use of the union label on all union-made upholstered furniture. This demand will be formally served upon all manufacturers. The employers of upholsterers will also be formally noti-fied that on and after Sept. 1 they will demand that nine hours instead of ten constitute a day's work. The conference also passed a resolution condemning prison-made goods. They tell of cases where boy prisoners are contracting to turn out two couches a day at a payment of 25 cents a day. This is competition that the union does not intend to permit if resolutions and agitation can correct the abuse. The conference voted unanimously in condemnation of the strike which the New York local union is now urging against the National Parlor Suite Company, who introduced a novelty tufting machine which threatened to throw out many men.

DETROIT. Detroit, July 15.-Walking Delegate McLeod, of the Street Railway Employes' Association, is being subjected to the criticism of some of the men, it is said, because he is not energetic and insistent enough in bringing the agreement to an issue, and there are hints that he is mingling too much in Pingree and Tom Johnson politics. Mc-Lead denies that he is mixing in politics any more than is necessary, and says that he attended the council meeting simply to secure some con-cessions for his organization. He does not favor a strike except as a last resort, and in this way is acting as the servant of the union, which voted unanimously at Wednesday night's meeting to hold off for a week.

UNIFORM STIPEND WANTED. Buffalo, July 15.—At yesterday's session of the International Association of 'Longshorengen, the matter of securing a uniform scale of wages for the coal handlers of Burfalo was referred to the incoming executive board. It is proposed to make the wages at all the coal docks the same. A resultition prohibiting strikes without the sanction of the executive board was unanimous ly passed. A resolution against discrimination on account of nationality was adopted. A resolution to make the rate for steam shovel operators $2 a day was referred to the incoming board. It was claimed that in some cities these operators get $3.

KILLED BY A KISSING BUG. Waterloo, Ia., July 15.—Mary Vaughn, 18 years old, of Cedar Falls, is dead from the effects of a bite on the lip from what is supposed to have been a "kissing bug." Her face and head was so swollen as to be unrecognizable, and the swelling extended to the upper part of the body. She was bitten a week ago.

The Police Investigation. The Advertiser does not intend to prejudge the case which has been pened up by the resignation of Police Sergt. Jenkins. The implied charges n Mr. Jenkins' letter call for a seachng investigation, which should be ppenly conducted, in justice to all parties, and to satisfy the public mind. t would be better to delegate the inquiry to a body other than the Police Commissioners, who, owing to their intimate relations with the police offistals, might feel a delicacy about acting as their inquisitors and judges. The British in South Africa. Any one who will take the trouble to consider the significance of the facts and dates in the following table of fluctuating British policy in South Africa during the past hundred years will be in a position to understand one root cause of the trouble with the South African republic which for the moment absorbs public attention: 1795. England annexed Cape Colony after conquest

Arnold White, writing in Harper's

Weekly, says: "Within the last decade Lord Salisbury used the fellowing language in a letter to myself: 'In their heart of hearts I fear many members of parliament have made up their minds to abandon South Africa if ever it threatens to cost them any considerable expense again.' The M. P.'s to whom Lord Salisbury refers are not in a majority in the present House of Commons, but the language of the Prime Minister, in the letter referred to forms a telling comment upon the unstable character of popular views of empire."

A Gloomy Prophet.

Dean Farrar, the famous English divine, draws rather a gloomy picture of the immediate future of the motherland. We quote his latest declaration:

"I am neither a prophet nor a prophet's son, so I will not undertake the to that, there were some 400 or 500 lotrash task of venturing to make any prophecy about the future. But it has long seemed to me that things are in a state of unstable equilibrium, and that another century cannot pass without the occurrence of some great European war, with all its terrible and heart-shaking catastrophes. Nor is it possible to be content with the state of things in England. The alarming spread of betting and gambling among workingmen and the youth of great cities that this ruinous vice helps to fill our prisons, and (in the North of England especially) has ruined the healthy influence of our games; the eager love of money, which leads to so much wild speculation and commercial dishonesty; the cruel indifference with which we place a stumbling-block be-fore the helpless childhood of the world, by deluging savage tribes with drink; the growth of Hooliganism and crimes of brutal violence; the dominance of a selfishness which immerses itself in luxury, pleasure and amusement, while a poverty, more and more squalid, welters almost at the doors of the wealthy; the growth of a sullen and angry feeling of discontent among thousands of the poorer class; the decay of faith in deepest and most awfully vital truths; the ever-abiding and infinitely loathsome, curse of drink which seems, among women, at any rate, to be gaining rather than losing ground, and as Pope Loo XIII. says, 'drags unnumbered souls to perdition'; the tendency to substitute niggling nullities and fetish-worshiping superstitions for 'religion pure and undefiled,' all these things give serious ground for disquietude. The greatest men of the past generation have disappeared one by one and left no successors. We have no poet who can stand for a moment beside Tennyson or Browning; no orator who can be distantly compared .to Gladstone or Bright; no painter who reaches the level of Landseer, or Millais; no writer nearly so powerful as Carlyle or Ruskin; no novelist—though novels now flood the world at the rate of five a day—who is worth mentioning with Dickens, Thackeray or George Elliot; no religious teacher whose influence is half so telling or ennobling as that of Maurice F. Robertson or Dean Stanley. If one age could but produce one dauntless and far-sighted man-a teacher like Savonarola, or Luther, or Wesley, or Whitfield; a philanthropist like Francis of Assisi, or Vincent de Paul, or Thomas Clarkson, or John Howard; a man who would willingly face bonds and afflicthous, and cataracts of calumny, and not hold his life dear unto himself, and would count it a glory for the truth's conviction and reformation into depths of moral unreality; a man who could fling the fire of God, like arrows of lightnings, into the apparently im-pregnable strongholds of wickedness and sham—then we should feel a livelier hope for the immediate future." Dean Farrar is unduly pessimistic. Despite difficulties in the way, the world is growing better. That we may not do the noted preacher an injustice let us for a moment contrast the condition of England today with that of England 100 years ago. The leaders in reform of the last century were even more despairing of the morals of the British people than are those of today, yet who will say that a great advance for the better has not taken place? We need say nothing about the spirit of war. It was everywhere in Europe, and remained long after the century ended. To be at war seemed to be the natural condition of almost all the great nations. Dean Farrar thinks that a great and all-embracing war will take place in Europe, as a result of the prevailing condition of affairs, during the twentieth century. That may come about. We are certainly ending up the present century with the nations more fully prepared for war than they were in the years immediately prior to 1800. But it may be that this very preparedness for conflict, with the knowledge of the awful consequences of modern warfare, will make the average nation think many times before it countenances a resort to arms. We had no such spectacle at the end of last century as an assembly of the nations called to devise ways and means to secure the peaceful arbitration of differences among them. It is a healthful sign.

The Dean is alarmed at the prevalence of the gambling spirit as it exists in England. Is it as bad as it was in the end of the last century? The historian Lecky tells us that 100 years ago gambling prevailed to a deplorable extent among those who could afford it. That it did not prevail as extensively among the working classes must be attributed to the fact that the social condition of the great mass of workers was such that they had no money with which to indulge the habit. Even among ladies 100 years ago, gambling was alarmingly prevalent. Faro was the popular game, and in 1796, Chief Justice Kenyon delivered a charge on which he dwelt on the scandal, and threatened to send even the first ladies of the land to the pillory if they were convicted before him. In the following year, Lady Buckinghamshire and two associates were condemned to pay a fine of £50 each for what was described as illegal gambling. They had gambling parties at each other's houses by rotation, and sat gambling till three or four o'clock in the morning. Private lotteries were condemned by Parliament; but public lotteries were recognized by that body. A monopoly in lottery tickets was deemed in the public interest, and some 50 persons throughout the country were given the right to sel these tickets. Prior tery agents in London alone. Hard drinking was more prevalent 100 years ago than now, and the heir to the throne set the example. It was no uncommon thing to see ladies of quality the worse for liquor in public resorts, and drunkenness was fashionable among the laity as well as among the clergy. Hackmen in London made a good living picking off the streets men of means who had become incapable, taking them to nearby taverns over night, and returning in the morning to drive them home. Manners were gross, while oaths were constantly on the lips of men of all classes, and even women swore with impunity in high circles. At the end of the century there was a perfect craze for horse racing for money.

It was contended 100 years ago that the old English spirit of frugality had departed, that a craze for speculation had taken the place of the spirit of commercial integrity. Then it was contended that the solid quality of English work had been seriously lowered in the last half of the century, that adulteration was alarmingly prevalent in food, beer, brandy and wine, and sloe and ash leaves were sold as tea! "Jerry" buildings were even then being erected, and there were frequent instances of half-built houses falling before they were fin-

Dean Farrar is under the impression that the gulf between the very rich and the very poor is widening in England. It may be so; but there is the best of authority for saying that pauperism in Great Britain was very much greater 100 years ago, in proportion to population, than it is now. Is he aware that early in the present century-so great was the poverty of the masses—out of a population in England and Wales of 8,870,000 no fewthe light of heaven that he could flash er than 1,234,000, or nearly one-seventh, were partakers of parochal relief? There was sanitary neglect, great poverty, and acute and agonizing want among a large section of the people. Child labor was everywhere countenanced at home. Slavery under the British flag flourished abroad. Wherimprovement in the of the masses was advocated those in favor of it were branded as the enemies of the race—as sympathizers with the French revolution! Any resort, in fact, to permit the defenders of privilege to profit at the expense of their fellows. Though the population of the country was only about one-third what it is now, so bad were the conditions of the workers that there were serious discussions as to how the race of the Englishmen could be restricted in increase, so as to keep down the number of mouths to be fed. Many abuses that would not be tolerated for a day now were almost unquestioned. There was much more hardness and indifference to human suffering, and in the sphere of politics there were grave and scandalous evils. The king himself, during the administration of Lord North, was accustomed to devote many thousands of pounds to the purchase or borough seats, and corrupelections was constant and flagrant. Looking around him, Dean Farrar says he does not find as many great orators, statesmen, poets, novelists, and preachers as were to be found early in the century. It may be that the number is less than it was 50 years ago; but how is it when compared with the closing years of the eighteenth century? Do not great men, like great events, come in cycles? And are not many of us inclined to look too much on the shortcomings of the present, and too little on that which betokens advancement. We are inclined to be optimistic as to the future both of Great Britain and of her right bower in the outlying empire. Both are making progress, though there are many improvements possible. There is life in the old land yet, and the great branch of the race that is to be found on this continent is but beginning its career. The evils about which the reverend Dean speaks with so great alarm are real, but surely they can be combatted and overcome, as have other evils that have assailed the commonwealth. What we desire to point out is that the condition of the people is vastly improved compared with what it was 100 years ago. That fact should give us hope as to the future.

> A peculiar printer's error led to a scene in one of the Australian Legislatures the other day. A member charged that someone on the opposite side of the House had been guilty of an infringement of the rules governing the independence of members because he "bought a schooner filled with a cargo of sulphur, said to be consigned for the Government." As it appeared in the report the member was accused of "buying a scoundrel filled with sulphur consigned to the Government." This is about as humorous as the mistake made by a bookbinder in England recently, as related by a correspondent of the Academy. He sent an old edition of Sir Walter Scott's novels to be bound, and to his wrath "The Talisman" and the "Legend of Montrose" came back lettered on the back, "The Tallish Man," and "The Leg End of Montrose!"

FURIOUS FIGHT

In the Streets of a Texas Town-One Man Killed and Others Fatally Hurt.

Texarkana, Texas, July 15.-At New Boston, Bowie county, yesterdey there occurred one of the wildest and most desperate street battles that has yet been recorded in the fighting history of that town. The trouble started from a fuss over a barbed wire fence, which separated the farms of Ira Smith and W. D. Hays. The two men met at a prayer meeting last Sunday, when their case was talked over, resulting in a fight, in which Hays was bested. The difficulty was brought before the peace officers, and the men were arrested. At their trial today, and while their trial was on, the difficulty was reopened. Smith went into W. D. Hays and his brotha saloon. ers, Hal and S. J. Hays, followed him. Shooting began at once. Smith, who is said to have been unarmed, was killed outright. His friends came on the scene and took part in the conflict. They were Jack, John and Bill Fricks. A general battle ensued. When their revolvers were emptied the participants used the butt end of their weapons with deadly effect. W. D. Hays was mortally wounded; S. J. Hays received a crushed skull and will Hal Hays was shot in the arm. I. B. Manning, ex-county attorney and not a participant, was shot twice, one ball passing through his body. Two other bystanders were also wounded, one, a merchant, named W. H. Hart, having his arm shot off.

DIED FROM LOCKJAW. New York, July 15.--Samuel Green-berg, 14 years old, died yesterday in Mount Sinai Hospital from lockjaw. He shot himself in the hand on the 4th of July. There have been eight deaths from lockjaw in this city since July 1. With one exception all have been cases of boys who were injured while celebrating the 4th. There have been more than a score of deaths from lockjaw within a week in the immediate vicinity of New York.

KIPLING'S STRENGTH

The Deeper-Lying Human Instincts as Expressed in His Tales and Poems.

Mr. Henry Rutgers Marshall, a distinguished philosophical writer, and at the same time an architect and the designer of Mr. Kipling's home at Brattle-boro, writes in the July Century of "Radyard Kipling and Racial Instinct.' The secret of his strength lies in the fact that he expresses the force of the deeper-lying human instincts as they are stimulated by the demands of modern life. He bids us listen to them as guiding voices which tell of the long experience of our human ancestors, and of that line of living forms from which the first of human beings was descended. He warns us that these instincts must not be quenched by the artificiality of what we in our pride call our modern civilization; that they must be modified to harmonize with the complex environment of these later times, rather than bridled into subjection by a confident rationalism which forgets the failure of reason in

What some tell us are his faults and errors express this same revolt against the representation of those instinctive forces within us-forces which have dignity given them by the very fact that they have been impressed upon us by nature in her struggles toward the higher life. Of these faults we can speak but lightly here. If at times he deals with indelicacies, almost with brutalities, even then his themes tell of nature's demand that the experience of eons of time shall not be lost to sight in our efforts to establish artificial standards

Yet we are led to ask ourselves whether these qualities in his work, whether these qualities in his work, which take so strong a hold upon us, are of a kind that destine him to master other generations as he masters ours. Permanent impression upon a race can only be made by one who speaks for the ideals which are scarce formed within the men of his time, but which are to become all-powerful in their descendants. To the failure to the content of the work of them will be present. The uniform the order, in so far as the good but which are to become all-powerful times, good fellowship and loads of the satisfy such longings of after general transcripts. satisfy such longings of after genera fun tions must be ascribed the fact the many writers of the past whose praises have beet upon every lip during their lives lave failed to influence a later age. The history of Anglo-Saxon later age. The history of Anglo-Saxon literature i filled with the names of those who have thus appealed to their own time, but have lost their hold as years have passed. Shakespeare, whose nime we think the greatest upon its pages, was one who moved his own generation deeply, and who moves drs also, in all that relates to the furtamental qualities of human nature and at the same time he voiced senuments which are our established heitage today, though they were but ieals and hopes in the age in which e sang.

In nucl of our author's work we re-cogrze these characteristics which are so dearly exemplified in the writings of ne great masters. But there are times when we cannot avoid asking ouselve whether the use of local didect, the appeal to special classes, the treament of problems which are of merey momentary interest, may not preventour descendants from listening to the nobler sentiments which set ou hearts throbbing as we read his weds. Yet, as we rest devoutly thankil that his voice has not been silence in his youth, so we look forward o the work he has still to do, with illest confidence that it will display lose qualities which seem thus far thave been in a measure submergl, and which, if more distinctly emplsized, will insure the addition of anoter star of first magnitude to the which makes the pride of English terature.

Local Market.

Saturday, July 15. There was a large attendance at the market this morning. Fruit was in great demand, and large quantities of berries and currants were cleared out at firm prices. Cherries brought from 8c to 10c a quart, being practically the last of the season. Currants, red and white, are about done, and brought from 6c to 7c. Black currants were abundantly supplied, and sold readily at 10c a quart. Raspberries and goose-berries were unchanged, the former bringing 7c and 8c and the latter 5c to 7c. A few dewberries were offered at 12c a box. Dairy produce was practically unchanged, eggs being a trifle scarcer. In the meat market a good business was done, with prices un-changed. Veal, which was a drug last week, has picked up slightly. Poulfor black oats. Wheat was scarce and a little lower in price; $1 15 to $1 18 was the range. Corn was sold at 80c for one small load of lint.

Hay sales ranged from $6 to $7; only loads came in and they went out quick.

Dressed hogs were steady at $6 25 for choice. Live hogs brought $4 50 for delivery Monday. Wool deliveries fell off considerably; the demand was steady, and prices ruled just the same as on Tuesday.

Live Stock Markets.

TORONTO, July 14.—The receipts of cattle and hogs for the closing day of the week at the western cattle market were a trifle heavier than expected, amounting to 50 carloads, composed of 800 cattle, 400 sheep and yearlings, 25 calves, 50 milch cows and 1,500 hogs. The offerings included a number of hold-overs from the yard yesterday. The market opened with a brisk demand, the inquiry being of a more urgent character than on any previous market day this week. The moderate supply of good to choice grades easily found an outlet at prices which held up well to the level of the week. Values for cattle underwent no quotable change, with the exception of stockers, which were quoted firmer. Export cattle-The supply of good exporters, which made up the bulk of the offerings, was just about equal to the demand, which was active; good to choice heavy exporters were quotable at $4.80 to $5.15 per cwt, and a light supply of light exporsers found a good outlet at firm prices, or $4 60 to $4 75 per cwt. Butch-ers' cattle—Choice selections brought $4 25 to $4 50 per ewt, and a medium supply of common grades were steady at prices ranging from $3 25 to $4 per cwt. A few loads of choice heavy export bulls were in good demand at firm prices, or $3 75 to $4 25 per cwt, and an ample supply of light stock bulls met with a fairly good demand at un-changed prices, or $250 to $3 per cwt. Stockers and feeders—Canadian stockers for Buffalo were in heavy supply, and met with a good demand at high-er prices, or $3.75 to $4 per cwt, and a light supply of stock heifers found a good inquiry at times at steady prices, or $2 75 to $3 per cwt. Calves and milch cows—Offerings good; milkers light; demand good; a few choice offerings meeting with a good demand at firm prices, ranging from $45 to $50 each. and a few poorer grades fetched from $25 to $30 per head; about 25 calves were offered, and such were easily disposed of at steadier prices, or $2 to $8 per head; a few good veal calves are wanted. Sheep and lambs—The quotations for sheep and lambs—The quotations for sheep and lambs are a little steadier, and sheep for export and butchers' use were quoted at $3.25 to $3.50 per cwt; good butchers' sheep brought $3 to $3.50 each, and a few choice spring lambs were firm, at $3. to $4 25 each; bucks were quiet, at $2 75 to $3 per cwt; a few bunches of good lambs are wanted. Hogs-Steady; prices showed no material change, and choice selections were quoted at $5 per ewt; light and thick fats, which made up the bulk of the offerings, were firm, at $4 25 per cwt, and a light run of sows were quiet, at $2 75 to $3 per

CHICAGO, July 14.—Good to fancy steers brought $5 30 to $5 60; commoner grades, $4 65 to $5 25; stockers and feeders, $3 50 to $4 90; bulls, cows and heifers, $2 to $4 70; Texas steers, $4 25 to $5 25 and calves, $4 50 to $7. Heavy hogs brought $4 15 to $4 50; mixed lots, $4 15 to $4 40; culls and rough lots, $2 to $4 15; light, $4 20 to $4 40; pigs, $3 85 to $4 35. Sheep brought $2 to $3 for culls, up to $5 to $5 25 for prime native weathers; yearlings sold at $4 75 to $5 50; western rangers, $4 25 to $4 65, and spring lambs, $3 30 to $6 50. Receipts—Cattle, 2,500; hogs, 21,000; sheep,

ODD RUNAWAY

Horse Attached to a Merry Go-Round Frightened-Women and Children Cut and Bruised.

Detroit, July 15 .- One of the most peculiar runaways ever recorded oc-curred in a field on Michigan avenue, between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets, shortly before 9 o'clock last night. A large crowd of children and women were enjoying a ride on a merry-go-round and nearly every wooden horse was occupied.

Suddenly the horse that furnished the motor power to the merry-goround became frightened and started around the circle on a gallop. It was fun for a short time, but as the maddened animal increased his speed the children clung to the horses for their lives and the women screamed with fright.

On dashed the horse. The attempt to stop him was of no avail, and as he flew around the circle the wooden horses went all the faster. Children began to jump into a bush a few feet and many of them landed safely. Women became so dizzy that they loosened their holds and tumbled The whole scene was one of confusion.

Policemen were summoned and after an effort succeeded in checking the mad career of the frightened steed, but not until every child and woman had jumped or fallen from the ma-

By the greatest luck they escaped with sprains and bruises. Emergency Grace Hospital ambulances were called, but no person was seriously enough injured to be removed to the hospital.

Special Committee Adopts Fatherless Basis of Settlement.

It Bears the Ear-Marks of the Street Railway Company.

They Have Not as Yet Formally Acknewledged It as Theirs-Committee Makes Some Slight Alterations.

When the civic committee got together again this morning there was still no rift in the clouds. History had repeated itself, and some more refusals were to be reported. The members present were Ald. Parnell (chairman), Wilkey, Carrothers, Douglass, and Rumball, the mayor, Dr.Roome, Messrs. Mattinson, Cox and Hunter.

A fatherless document had been submitted to the employes last night, and lines, it should be the principle which for some reason the employes inferred that it emanated from the street railway company. But as the document bore no date nor signature, the employes were not willing to recognize it, without these ear-marks.

A slightly amended proposed hasis of blazing chicken coop at the residence of Mr. John Burns, Pine and Oak streets, yesterday. afternoon. Damage men. Though the amended suggestions by the company, the document is undated and unsigned. It reads as follows:

1. All matters in dispute between the company and its striking employes, except the scale of wages and the question of the recognition of the union, but including the question whether the employes were justified in striking on the 22nd of May last, to be left to arbitration, the arbitrators to award such redress, and where reinstatement cannot be effected by reason of any existing arrangement, to direct the payment of such damages and costs as, all the circumstances being considered, they deem just and right.
2. In consideration of the men waiv-

THE MEN'S REPLY. The men's reply to the amended basis of settlement suggested was handed to the chairman of the special committee shortly after 11 o'clock this morning. It is evident from the reply that the men had been given to understand that any offer or any con-cessions made by the company would be put in writing and properly signed. They very naturally decline to consider an undated and unsigned proposition, the terms of which could not bind the company for five minutes and might be repudiated at will. The men's reply was:

THE KIND LONDONERS. [Bobcaygeon Independent.]

London, in Ontario, gave the use of its streets to a trolley company, for their individual profit, and also undertook to protect the company, free. It was kind, good-natured and generous on the part of the people of London. They are protecting the property of these three or four gentlemen, just Hunter thought, to ask the men to now, with the militia. The generosity of those Londoners knows no bounds. It may perhaps wrike those poor people some day at if they ran the street cars themselves, and did the pro-Ontario act. Mr. Hunter pointed out the third arbitrator would be appointed by Judge Elliot, and that he had been tecting for themselves, they would not appear before the world as quite so aginine a community.

JESSAMINE.

But here was a deliberate deception. He-Roy Fordham-had known Hester Sanford before she—Jessic—ever saw her. She was the intimate associate and confidante of his former love-of the woman he had renounced heartlessly and without compunction-and whose name had never passed his lip in his wife's hearing. She recalled faithfully Hester's account of the call "Maria" had paid with her then be-trothed at Mr. Sanford's house-a statement she would not have dared to make had it been groundless. Whence this affection of ignorance, on Fordham's part, of the person and character of his cousin's intended bride, if not as a further means of keeping the knowledge of the affair

"To whom it should have been told more than a year ago!" she reflected, a dreary loneliness creeping over her, with the conclusion—"He is like the rest of them! I would have believed him if I could!"

The door shut quietly. She did not hear it, or miss her sister from her place. It was not an uncommon occurrence for them to sit together without speaking for an hour at a time, Eunice's fingers busy with some article of useful needlework. Jessie holding a book which she pretended to read, as a cover for her griefful mus-ings. Much less was it in the imagination of the younger sister to follow the elder in her progress up the staircase, her face more stony and eyes desolate with each step, to the fair, large chamber she had occupied from her childhood.

was cold and dark, but for the light of the taper she set down upon the mantel. There were none of the fanciful ornaments-none of luxurious devices, the patches of bright coloring that reflected the owner's tastes and whims in Jessie's apartment. All the draperies—those at the windows, the dressing-table, and the antique chairs, were pure white, as were also the walls. The carpet was a sober drab, checkered with narrow lines of blue. The aspect of the whole was so chill and grave on this bleak night, that Eunice shivered as at the breath of winter, as she drew up a seat to a stand in the middle of the floor, and leaned her head upon the hard wood. Not a tear or word escaped her, but a deft and invisible engrayer was at work upon her features, sharpening outlines, deepening here a stroke and there a furrow, until the father would not have known his child.

I said, many pages back, that Orrin Wyllys' victims made no moan. Least them all, was this one likely to publish her case to the world-to shriek out her great and sudden woe in the ear of heaven and of her kind. She had never loved before she met him, and the discovery of this curious fact had stimulated his professional zealanimated his pride in the honor and success of his vocation. He had found the key to her heart, and had used it. Love is no holiday romance when it comes thus late in life to a woman of large capacity for affection, and a will, the strength of which has hitherto made the repression of such seeking instincts and needs as win for weaker girls the reputation of lovingness and dependence, appear to those who know her best like tranguil contentment with her allotted share of love and companionship. She had. heard herself called "a predestined old maid." ever since her mother left her, a demur infant, apt and serious beyond her years—to become her father's co-worker and comforter. Her calm smile at the nickname looked like conscious superiority to dread of the obloguy—a fear that infects all classes of her sex. Her love was as reticent as her longing for affection had been. Orrin's most insidious arts had not sufficed to surprise her into confession. Of marriage he had never spoken, nor she permitted herself to think. Her attachment was artiless and uncalculating as a child's. He had convinced her that the subtle sympathy of their souls had made them one from their earliest meeting; that he had then re-cognized in her his spirit-mate. The seductive cant came trippingly from his tongue with the fluent convincing-ness of much practice, and she was listening to it for the first time. His dual game was adroitly conducted and the result was a triumphant cap-sheaf to his harvest of hearts. His bride-expectant would have torn her flaxen hair -natural and artificial-with rage had she guessed how tame he found his pursuit of herself; how deficient in the flavor of excitement that had marked his courtship of the beautiful but fortuneless country girls.

The hall clock rang out nine strokes when Eunice shook off her reverie, and unlocked a drawer of her bureau. It was lined with silver paper, and the odor of dried violets stole into the still cold air when she opened it. A bunch of withered flowers; a small herbaritan filled by Wyllys and herself in their woodland and mountain rambles-the vignette on the title page, from his pencil; all the inscriptions, names of specimens, and poetical legends, penned by his hand; a thin bundle of letters and notes; five or six books—favorite works with both of them-com-posed the contents. She took them out

GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Barr Have Been Married Fifty Years.

Windsor, Ont., July 15.-Mr. and Mrs. Robert Barr celebrated their golden wedding on Thursday at their home on Campbell avenue. There was a family reunion, as far as was possible, two of the sons being in England, and in the evening many friends called to offer their felicitations to the old couple.

Mrs. Barr, whose maiden name was Jean Watson, was married to Robert Barr on July 13, 1849, at Kilmalcolm, Renfrewshire, Scotland. Four years later they came to Canada, settling at Wallacetown. Afterward they lived at Highgate, and came to Windsor about twenty years ago. They have six sons—Robert, the novelist, and James, on the Pall Mall Gazette, in London, England; John, on the Detroit Free Press staff; Alex. and William, employed in Detroit, and Thomas, of Knoxville, Tenn. Valentine had been in the employ of the Perth Amboy Bank for several years. He was considered a man of steady habits. The bank was estab-lished about 25 years ago, and was considered one of the solidest of bank-

A VIGOROUS RACE. well-dressed, fresh-colored, with the air of men who have found their vocation and are absorbed in it. The crowds have a perplexing aspect of youthfulness-or, at least, of firesh-colored and unspoiled life. The strain of life is at least as great in London as anywhere in the world. The pace of affairs, the volume of business, the scale of interests dealt with, can be equaled no-where else. Yet there are few wrinkled faces, or round shoulders, or gray beards, and almost nothing of city pallor. There must be, if not some antiseptic virtue in London smoke, yet some compensating quality in the English climate which makes a Londoner of a given age look fresher, carry himself more erectly, and seem less exhausted than an American, an Australian, or a citizen of Berlin or of Paris of the same number of years. It may be, perhaps, that the imagination affects the physical vision, and the Australian sees the Londoner through what may be called the lens of the empire, of which London is the brain and the heart. But certainly he fancies he sees in the figures that pass him in the streets of London the stamp and bearing of an imperial race. For stature, erectness and look of grave capacity the men of no other city-and the present writer has seen many great cities-can compare with Londoners. The sense of comes slowly. The city is seen, of course, only in sections, and the sense of that far-stretching province of streets and squares, that mighty Sahara of house-roofs, does not readily steal into the imagination. There is no eminence from which one can look city. London seen on a clear day from a balloon, or-perhaps better stillseen from the same elevation at midnight, its streets mere ribbons of stars. must be one of the most amazing spectacles on the globe. If any one wants to get, on easy terms, some sense of the of London, let him take his stand on the hill in Greenwich Park, just below the observatory. The river curves like a gigantic gleaming horseshoe at his feet. It is fretted with the masts of ships. In the curves of the river lie folded the great docks, from St. Katherine's, far to the west, to the East Indian docks to the east, and Millwall docks almost under the observer's eyes. One sees a vast far-running pavement of roofs, on which, with a curiously softening effect, lies the London haze, half smoke, half fog. And, stretching in a curve from west to east, rises a mighty forest of masts! The sea itself, the spectator knows, is twenty odd miles distant. Yet in no great harbor in the world has the present writer, at least, ever see such a mighty crescent of masts as that which is seen, rising from a pavement of tiles and chimney-tops, in

The first hasty impression of the visitor-the impression carried away by the present writer when, fifteen years ago, he first saw London-is one of drab-colored, or rather, smoke-colored, commonplace. It is a city of mean streets. The great buildings of the city lack space in which to be seen. London has no acropoolis rising steeply from its center to give physiognomy to its landscape. The city wears an obscuring veil of fog. Its abbey, and the great dome of St. Paul's, are smoke-tinted. But the eye grows wiser with seeing. A closer acquaint-ance with London shows it to be amazingly rich in all the elements of the picturesque. The very haze which so often lies upon it gives a sort of mysterious perspective to its streets. Its parks in June. for leafiness and verdure, are a perpetual feast to familiar with the browns of an Australian landscape; and to find such wide stretches of green turf, and forest trees, and fowl-haunted water in THE STONY HEART OF LONDON itself is a matter of delighted amazement. The continental idea of London is that it is a city of sordid streets and characterless architecture. But London architecture scarcely has justice done to it. The modern world, it is sometimes said, has lost the art of building cathedrals. What has really perished is not the art which builds cathedrals, but the religious mood which requires

LONDON IS BEING REBUILT. d rebuilt in the characteristic British fashion, without any blowing trumpets, and by the energy and en-terprise of private citizens. No Haussman has arisen to reconstruct London: London, it may be expected would not tolerate a Haussman! But everywhere vast buildings are arising, stately and ornate hotels, cliff-like piles of mansions, long, curving street facades, such as some in Westminster, which can scarcely be rivaled in Europe. Still the chief charm of London, to an Australian coming from a raw continent and half-hatched cities, is its antiquity. The city is scribbled over with literary and histroic characters. One stumbles across them everywhere, down and see, running clear around to and they make London a sort of illumthe horizon on every side, the imperial lirated missal. At almost every street corner the chord of some classic memory is struck. Here Goldsmith lived. There Lamb lies buried. Through that window Charles I. stepped to his fold. He walks in an enchanted city of memories.

This aspect of London reaches its climax in, say, the Abbey. For an Australian, indeed, with a reasonable equipment of literary knowledge and touch of realizing imagination, the experience of sitting through avenue, West London, yesterday received from Dawson City a number of ought to have been the remedy a month Alaskan wild flowers. The flowers had ago. been plucked in the neighboorhood of Dawson early in June. Among them were some very fine blue-bells and several unfamiliar varieties of wild flowers. They came inclosed in a letter and were fairly well preserved. They were sent by Mr. Wilkins' daughter, Mrs. Edward Welbon. Mr. Welbon has secured the contract for putting in a waterworks system at Dawson.

Mr. Wilkins also received a copy of dollars to all parties would have been the Klondike Nugget, a little fourcolumn, semi-weekly newspaper published at Dawson. BOILED WATER.

In the same column the public are urged to use only boiled water for cooking and drinking, with the reminder that "last summer the hospitals were filled until patients had to be refused, while hundreds laid around in tents on every hand. Deaths occurred two and three times a day, and funeral processions were the commonest sight upon the streets.

DAWSON'S DAYLIGHT.

The season of daylight in Dawson is much more complete and striking than the season of darkness. While theoretically and in the minds of the people of the outside world the shortest night in summer is just equal in length to the shortest day in winter, in reality this is modified in a great degree by the refractive and reflective qualities possessed by light and not by darkness-if we may be allowed for the purpose of il-lustration to speak of darkness as something of itself and not the mere absence of light. The shortest day in winter was not without several hours of daylight, while during the shortest night in summer the sun can be seen from some of our high hills, and for several months there is really no darkness to speak of at all. This is something little understood upon the outside and the ignorance of the true conditions adds very materially to the horror entertained by any otherwise resonable people at the land of the long night.

For the benefit of our readers in the states and provinces we may state that in summer, even though the sun dips below the horizon, it diffuses a light which only differs from that of a badly fractured arm and bruised hip, the daytime by a certain quality of the result of a fall from a tree Thursgrayness; while in the winter time, day morning. when the sun scarcely reaches the height of that same horizon, the reflected and refracted light over these vast wastes of white glistening snow, is not perceptibly different in either quality or quantity to the human eye from daylight at any other time, but in photography is found to be of such a weakly character as to prevent the printing of photographs upon anything but a specially sensitized paper. Notwithstanding the brightness of the light, it also takes exposures doubly and trebly as long as in summer.

[Citizen and Country, Toronto.] It is an insult to the people of London to say the militia was needed to disperse the crowd, and Canada is humiliated by the criminal negligence of London's authorities. The council, as well as the police, are at fault. The company was permitted to do as it pleased in almost everything, and the council had allowed many weeks to pass without using its powers to enforce a settlement. The men had demanded arbitration, and the company Mr. James Wilkins, of Woodward forced the company to agree to so reasonable a demand long ago. Arbitration must be the solution now; it

[Seaforth Expositor.]

The public sentiment of the place is entirely with the strikers, and this is pretty good evidence that they are in the right. This would be a very fitting case for a government commission to settle. If such a commission had been in existence, and both parties had been compelled to submit their case to the commission and to abide its decision, the difficity would have been justly settled at the very outset, and much it is rather interesting to read that the dog ordinance will be enforced during on itself two strikes within a year should be looking for a new job. It is evidently not born to manage men.

The idea of calling out several companies of volunteers to preserve order that is in no danger, was one of the most ridiculous things that alleged sensible officials could get into their skulls. It looks in the distance as if the matter could easily be solved by the city taking over the road. It cannot now be worth more than the actual value of the wood and metal in the plant. Arbitrators could hardly allow anything for good-will, which does not seemingly exist, while the fact that the road is being operated at a loss would make its legal value that of "scrap." London will never get another chance to get possession so cheaply.

[Tilbury Times.]

London authorities lost their heads over a small riot on the street Saturday night, arising out of a strike of street railway employes, and acted like a lot of lunatics in sending for 150 outside militiamen, including 30 members of Essex battalion from Windsor. It is the authorities, not the strikers, who have disgraced London this time.

At Windsor on Friday Fred Jamieson was found guilty by Magistrate Bartlet of assaulting and robbing Fred Harison, a 17-year-old boy from Toronto, and sentenced to one year in the Central Prison. James Gibbons was acquitted on the same charge. Ald. James McMurray has received word of his appointment to a position on the customs staff at Walkerville to succeed the late Joseph D. Janisse. He was sworn in by Collector Allan, and will commence his duties immediately.

The position is worth about $900 a year. An Indian from the Sarnia reserve found the body of a man floating in the river near Marysville on Thursday morning. Coroner Carlisle, of Port Huron, was at once notified, and to-gether with an officer and undertaker went to the scene. The body proved to be that of Gilbert Turner, of that city, who was drowned opposite the elevator one day last week. Funeral services over the remains of the late William Ryall, D. D. G. M. of the I. O. O. F., took place at Kingsville on Thursday. Oddfellows from every lodge in the district were present in large numbers, forming a procession half a mile long, headed by the Leamington Brass Band. Rev. A. Holmes, of Leamington, and the brethren, amid a heavy shower of rain, conducted solemn services at the grave. Deceased died very suddenly at his home in Leamington on Tuesday last, and leaves a wife, to whom he had been married three months.

EARTHQUAKE CAUSED A MINE DISASTER.

Berlin, July 15 .- A slight earthquake yesterday caused the collapse of a gal-lery in the Recklinghausen mine, near Herne, Westphalia, entombing sixty miners. Several have been rescued badly injured. The fate of the others is not yet known. The shock destroyed walls and broke windows in Herne, and was felt as far as Munster. It was also noticeable at Laibach. Austria.

LION AGAINST BULL. Roubsix, France, July 15. — The much-talked-of fight between a Spanish bull and an Abyssinian lion yesterday proved a flasco, although the seats in the bull ring sold at fabulous prices. nich is a spiendid specimen refused to fight until the bull gored him in several places. Then he sprang flercely upon his foe and tore off one of the bull's ears. For a few seconds there was a terrific fight, and then the lion retired to a corner, refusing to carry the contest further. The audience, furious at being balked, became riotous.

AN "OBJECT LESSON"

Peculiar Street Railway Situation in the City of the Straits.

Detroit, Mich., July 14 .- "Three cent fares" are announced today on the fronts of Detroit street cars in the places where amusement advertising signs are usually carried. This sudden voluntary reduction is the result of a decision of Governor Pingree and Tom L. Johnson to give the people an object lesson upon what they may look forward to. If present plans for the sale of all the Detroit street railways to the Detroit Municipal Railway Company, in behalf of the city. succeeds. The three-cent tickets sold today at five for 15 cents are so worded that their use in full payment of fare can be withdrawn at any time. The city is in a furore over the present situation. All the newspapers and nearly all the more prominent citizens are opposing the Pingree plan, and it is now claimed that the majority of citizens oppose it. on the ground that three-cent fares and quasi-municipal ownership will fail to pay the expenses and the $17,000.000 proposed to be paid for the roads, and that they will, if purchased, revert to the present owners. In the latter event, the road would be operated under the security ordinance already passed by the council, which permits the operation of all the roads at a six for a quarter fares for from 30 to 48 years. The Pingree people claim that the road will certainly pay off their purchase price under three cent

Governor Pingree is having circulars distributed on the streets giving his side of the controversy.

A special meeting of the city council is called for this afternoon, at which a "working ordinance" is expected to be passed, granting the municipal company rights as to operations of the roads. This ordinance reserves to the city the right at any time to fix the rates of fare, said rate meanwhile to be three cents with universal transfer. Mayor Maybury will veto both ordinances, and the question is whether the Pingree people can secure passage of both over the

ENCOURAGING TRADE OUTLOOK

Crop Prospects Improved by Rain-Wholesale Trade in Toronto More Active Than for Years.

New York, July 15 .- R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review says: The Canadian dispatches show no change of consequence in the course of business. At St. John wholesale business has declined, but retail trade keeps up well and collections are rather better. At Quebec business is fairly good, with collections average. Montreal reports that rains have improved crop prospects, and the make of butter and cheese is large, with general business and collections good for the season.

Wholesale trade at Toronto is more active than for years, with crop pros-pects bright and feeling among merchants never so hopeful. Manufacturing is especially brisk at Hamilton, with wholesale groceries fair to active, but most retail lines are quiet. Trade is fair at Winnipeg, with encouraging prospects, and at Vancouver wholesale trade is satisfactory, though less active at retail in staple lines. Salmon canning operations on the Fraser have commenced under favorable conditions. Wholesale business at Victoria is rather quiet, and also retail, with collections firm.

Bradstreet's says: Crop conditions in Canada resemble those in the United States in several respects. The yield of wheat in Manitoba promises to be 10 per cent in excess of a year ago, while that of Ontario winter wheat will be slightly smaller, but crops throughout Quebec are in exceptionally good condition, except as to hay, the yield of which will be smaller. Toronto re-ports fall trade in full swing, with values firm. Efforts to get the leading wholesale grocers to join a syndicate is reported. That is of interest. because the grocers now have an agreement with Canadian refiners not to sell American sugar. Some speculative buying of wool is reported at Toronto. hopes being expressed of expanding. United States demand furnishing a market for this product. Montreal reports advances in prices of paints, oil and glass, flour in good domestic and export demand, and general business fully up to the average. the Maritime Prot dull, while in British Columbia more activity is reported and exports are heavy but collections still slow. Business failures in the Dominion of Canada number 27, as compared with 25 last week, and 28 in this week a

The bank clearances for the Dominion of Canada were: Montreal, $16,017,-648, increase 11.4 per cent; Toronto, $9,-912,430. increase 14.4 per cent; Winnipeg. $1,928,126, increase 29.5 per cent; Halifax, $1,482,818; Hamilton, $853,843, increase 6 per cent; St. John. N. B., $707,138, decrease 15.7 per cent; Vancouver, $807,645; Victoria, $613,069. OVER THE LINE.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s review says: Because every prospect pleases, it is the right time to watch most closely for signs of trouble. It is not easy to find them when the volume of business is 63.7 per cent larger than last year and 75.5 larger than in 1892, the best of all years, except the last, or when failures continue to be the smallest ever known, or when railroad business is by far the best ever known, or when New York bankers appear in international operations, listening to a Russian inquiry and undertaking a Mexican loan. industrial disputes incident to the season cause less trouble than usual. The largest shipments of boots and shoes in any year for the season -193,080 cases in two weeks, greater by 17.4 per cent than last year, 8.6 per cent than in 1897, and 29.4 per cent than in 1892—result very extensive pressure to anticipate orders for August and September, distribution far exceeding expec-tations. Though cotton is steady, in spite of Texas floods, at 6.19 cents, and the general demand for cotton goods is full and sustains prices, a reduction of half a cent in some fancy prints is reported. Larger distribu-tion is expected this month, and ex-port demand increases. In wool a great speculation is in progress, sales in two weeks reching 22,261,100 pounds, against 24,572,800 in 1897, when the buying was to anticipate new duties. Failures for the week have been 169 in the United States, against 215 last year, and 24 in Canada, against 33 last year.

SCOTTEN'S ESTATE

Court Has Released the $900,000 Tied Up-Heirs and Government Reach an Agreement.

Windsor, July 15.-In the surrogate court yesterday, before Judge Horne, Attorneys J. H. Rodd, for the Scotten estate, and R. F. Sutherland, for the Ontario Government, reached an agreement by which the $900,000 belonging to the estate, which has been tied up in the Canadian banks for several months, will be released. When papers of administration in connection with Scotten's Canadian estate were applied for last April by E. O. Fleming, of Windsor, the Ontario treasury department, through Attorney Sutherland, opposed the application, on the ground that a large amount of money deposited in Canadian banks by the late Daniel Scotten, of Detroit, just after he had disposed of his tobacco business, was not included in the inventory of the estate filed with the probate judge. The de-partment claimed that the money should thave been included and succession duties paid on it. The estate admitted that $900,000 was on deposit in the banks at Windsor, London, Hamilton and Toronto, but claimed that the money had been placed there merely for safe keeping, not for purposes of investment, and was not liable for the succession tax.

The case have pending ever since.

On a quiet summer evening, The case has been pending ever since. By the arrangement reached, estate agrees to deposit in a char-tered bank in Toronto $50,000, to the joint credit of Provincial Treasurer Harcourt and Z. A. Lash, the Toronto solicitor for the estate, out of which the succession duties, estimated at $45,000, will be paid if it is afterward determined that the money is liable for the tax. A further sum of $10,000 will also be deposited to the credit of the same parties to pay additional tax on the real and personal property of the estate, if it is found that they have been undervalued. The government agrees to allow the papers of administration to be issued and the question of the liability of the $900,000 for succession duties will be submitted

Sickening Execution of Walla Tonaka at Alikichi, I. T.

Alikichi, I. T., July 15.—Wm. Goings, otherwise "Walla Tonaka," was shot yesterday under sentence of the Choctaw court, for murder. An attempt to stop the execution by a writ of habeas corpus failed, the Indian sheriff refusing to honor the document. The execution was a sickening sight. Goings was made to kneel on a quilt before his coffin. The sheriff bared his bosom painted a spot over his heart, stepped back four paces rested a rifle across a bench and fired. The bullet entered the breast, but missed the spot. Goings fell backward and moaned for an hour before expiring. Water was poured down his throat a number of times to hasten death by strangulation. It And the meadows clover laden, United States Government will take for defiance of the writ. The crime for which Goings was shot was the murder of his uncle, Mason Goings, in December, 1896. He was sentenced to be shot Aug. 5, 1897, and the court granted a respite that Goings might play baseball with the nine of the Choctaw Nation during 1898.

CATACOMBS OF ST. MARY'S

A Strange Burial Place in the Heart of London.

[From the London Telegraph.]

How many people in London are aware of the catacombs of St. Marys? Despite the bustle and roar incidental to the biggest railway station in England-Liverpool street station is on the opposite side of the road-the visitor to St. Marys can, by a little stretch of the imagination, picture himself in one of those strange burial places of the early Christians, which may be found on either side of the historic Appian Way. Here lie the bodies of hundreds of the "faithful departed," the coffins hermetically sealed in a fashion which would satisfy the prejudices of even the most scrupulous sanitary inspect-The place is not open to public ors. view, but, thanks to the courtesy of Father Fleming, our representative was allowed to tread his way, with the assistance of a lighted taper, amid the crumbling remains of former parishioners of St. Marys. No inscriptions are visible, but each coffin is duly not-ed in the register of the church. Some Hustrious personages are buried im-mediately beneath the high altar-Bishops Poynter, Bramstone and Gradwell, for example. There is ample space for several more, but modern authorities are not partial to burials in the heart of the city. Close by the bishops, in a number of coffins piled in regular tiers, are the remains upward of 30 priests, who served the church well in their life and now find a congenial resting place beneath the very altar where they celebrated the mysteries of their ancient faith. It was the dearest wish of Cardinal Wiseman to have his body interred within the sanctuary of St. Marys, but the law intervened, and a white ble slab with a modest epitaph composed by himself when in the full vigor of health now indicates the place where he would have gladly rested. Strolling about this strange cemetery, situated in one of the most densely populated quarters of London, it was a somewhat weird experience to hear street cries, and, peering above the through ventilation holes, see continuous lines of 'buses and cabs the adjoining thoroughfare.

Among the notabilities in the cata-combs we find "Honest Jack Lawless," doughty follower of O'Connor, the liberator, and many other personages who held a large share of public attention in their day. Weber, the celebrated composer, who, strangely enough, was made a count "after his death," and buried here, but some years later his remains were removed to Dresden. In the small strip of ground adjoining the church, as well as in the vaults. no less than 5,500 Catholics were buried prior to the year 1853. When the church is demolished it is probable that every body will have to be remooved, although where so huge a collection of dead humanity will ultimately rest does not yet appear to be decided. There is an instance on record in the city where simflar removals were undertaken at £10 per head. It is obvious that so costly an outlay would be impossible in the present case, Though dead, many of the persons buried at St. Marys, Moorfields, are not forgotten, and the prospect of an approaching removal of remains will result, it is anticipated, in a deluge of correspondence from rela-

We have no hesitation in saying that Dr. J. D. Out at Home.

Out at home. When all nature thought of sleeping, Out at home, And the twilight softly creeping, O'er the fields and meadows sweeping,

Through the aisles of maples leaping Brought the cool, refreshing gloaming, Out at home, I was sitting in the garden, Out at home,
'Mong the betries and the melons,

Out at home, And that soothing touch of evening Gently playing on my heartstrings, Turned my thoughts with tender yearnings O'er the days when we were children, Out at home.

How we raced among the flowers, Out at home,
'Neath the elm's refreshing bowers, Out at home: How we planted cut potatoes, How we picked the ripe tomatoes,

Listened to Dame Nature's platos, Learned her wisdom, hoards and powers, Out at home,

Many years have flitted by them, Out at home, Since the days when we were children, Out at home, But the same blue sky is o'er them; Bluest spot there is in heaven, And the landscape flung around them, Teems with memories loved and olden, Out at home.

There's the swamp we used to dread SO,

Out at home, There's the camp we used to love so. Out at home, There's the barn so weather-beaten, And the fields in wheat so golden, remains to be seen what action the | And the corn and pumpkins blooming, Out at home.

Out at home, Since the days when we were children Out at home, Age has touched with crippling finger And their steps now feebly falter. As they near death's dark, cold river, Out at home.

Still their hearts were kind as ever, Out at home, Dear old mother's O so clever, Out at home, And it was so good to see her, Seated in that high old rocker, Telling bout when we were younger, All the things that used to happen Out at home.

Oft I think as twilight depens, Out at home, I am sitting in the garden,

Out at home, And I see as once in childhood, With their fairy fringe of wildwood, Fences, fields and lane and larchwood, All the scenes of happy boyhood, Out at home

-LIFE INSURANCE COM-PANIES REFUSE TO IN-SURE HEAVY DRINKERS.

A man's life must be in peril When insurance companies refuse to accept his application. The drinker who is cutting short his own career is thus also making it impossible for him to provide for the future of his wife and little ones. No good company will insure an inebriate. The Medical Handbook of Life Insurance, a standard authority prepared by the president of the Association of Life Insurance Medical Directors of the United States says: "Intemperance is perhaps the most formidable enemy to the safe insurance of lives. It ranks before consumption in its deadly effects on the human system. Not only is it often inherited, but organic ailments are by it originated and organic weakness crystalized into disease. The degenerations of age are inticipated and precipitated by alcohol, and the dramdrinker is sure to have a shortened life."

Samaria Prescription begins the revolution which transforms the confirmed drinker into a new man of clean tastes and habits from the very first day it is used. And it never fails to conquer the craving for liquor completely and permanently.

Its first action is to stimulate desire for liquor. A sensation of satisfying strength is felt after the first day of its use. While repairing the wastes which alcohol has wrought in the system, it supplants the appetite for liquor with a wholesome relish for food. Its whole action is to build up and strengthen every organ while the grand transformation of a life's habit is being effected. health, vigor and strength.

Samaria Prescription is a liquor antidote in tablet form, impalpable to the taste. It dissolves instantly in water, tea, coffee, or any beverage you may choose to take it--or give it. It is used in such minute quantities that it may be readily mixed with any food in an instant. And, through its marvellous tonic action on the digestion, it accomplishes the wonderful results which are praised in hundreds of testimonials from men who have had the courageous self-respect to cure themselves, and from brave women who administered the remedy to save those near to them who had drowned the ambition to save themselves.

A Happier Home. Mrs. M. E. R. and Mrs. A. G. A., of

Brockville, Ont., write: "The patient for whom we sent for Samaria Prescription some two months ago has quit drinking entirely, and we can assure you there is great rejoicing over it, and we are more than thankful to you for being the means of introducing a remedy that would benefit fallen humanity so much. We feel very grateful to you, in-Geed, for so great a blessing. It has cleared fur home, and the home of my dear child, of oaths and profanity from one week's end to another, and has restored the party for whom we procured the remedy to a steady, sober and self-respecting man. Please accept our thanks."

Some of the hundreds of testimonials for Samaria Prescription overflow with grateful acknowledgment of cures wrought in the most hopeless cases, and permission is given by many writers to refer any enquiry made in good faith to them on private requests.

Samaria Prescription may be obtained at druggists, or can be had direct on receipt of price $3. It is sent postage free, securely wrapped in plain package, to any address. PRINKING SHORTENS LIFE JUSTIN MCCARTHY'S REMINISCENCES

A Host of Famous People Whom He Has Met.

Vivid Pen Pictures of Horace Greeley, Brigham Young and George

Justin McCarthy, since his advent in London in 1852, has met and known a great host of famous and interesting men; he has caught their peculiarities of habit, character or appearance with an unfailing eye, and he has a power scarcely/shared by anyone living of picturing people in well-chosen words. He is not a man to be compared in any way with Carlyle, either in style or habit of thought, yet he is the greatest describer of people since Carlyleand he needs no more words for the task than did Carlyle. His "Reminiscences" (Harpers) is in reality an oldfashloned photograph album, and it contains nearly all the prominent men who have appeared on both sides of the Atlantic for the past forty years. And as in a photograph taken by a master, the reader catches not only an unforgettable glimpse of some characteristic pose in each instance, but also a hint of the real man as he livel and The list is most inclusive, too acted. -politicians, journalists, authors, actors, lecturers, preachers-in fact, from all the higher ranks of life. "Greeley was in every way one of the most remarkable and also one of the oddest men I ever knew. He was a kind of modern and eccentric Benjamin Franklin. * * He had a great, shiny, broad forehead, his eyes adorned by a pair of vast spectacles, a large, almost entirely bald head, a cleanshaven, fleshy face-a face that, including baldness, spectacles, good-natured smile, and keen, shrewd humor of expression, reminded me in an odd sort of way of Count Cavour, the famous Italian statesman. Greeley was a much worse dressed man than even Count Cavour. Cavour was quite aware of his own unconquerable indifference as to dress, and had therefore provided that his tailor must furnish him at stated intervals with a new suit of the system up to overcome the clothes made exactly after the same pattern as the old suit. But Horace Greeley disdained any such prudent precartions; he simply ordered a new garment when the old one was falling to pieces, and took no further trouble about the matter."

Mr. McCarthy's list of American acquaintances was extremely diversified, and included such uncongenial elements as Longfellow, Jim Fiske, O. Holmes and Brigham Young. Geniality is the dominating note in all that he says. There is scarcely anyone mentioned in the book whose redecming trait or traits Mr. McCarthy has not discovered. These reminiscences are valuable because they contain keen observations on important personages who have not been elsewhere so well recorded. He made the birds sing it, and in a moment we were presented formally to Brigham Young. There must blaze it, and the stars twinkle it, and have been something of impressiveness the waves sing it. And it is a very and dignity about the man, for, odd as grave question whether most of the were his appearance and make-up, one felt no inclination to laugh. But such cidents of that day woven into his a figure! Brigham Young wore a longa figure! Brigham Young wore a longtailed, high-collared coat; the swallowtails nearly touched the ground; the collar was about his ears. * * * But there was decidedly a quality of composure and even of dignity about Brigham Young which soon made one forget the mere ludicrousness of the patriarch's external appearance. Young was a handsome man-much handsomer than his portrait on the wall would show him. Close upon 70 years of age, he had as clear an eye and as bright a complexion as if he were a hale English farmer of 55. But there was something fox-like and cunning lurking under the superficial good nature and kindliness of the face. He seemed when he spoke to you most effusively and plausibly to be quietly studying your expression to see whether he was really talking you over or not. The expression of his face, especially of his eyes, strangely and provokingly reminded me of Kossuth. * Brigham decidedly did not im-

Beyond doubt he was a man of genius. * * We took leave of Brigham Young and came away a little puzzled as to whether we had been conferring with an impostor or a fanatic, a Peter the Hermit or a Tartuffe. One thing, however, is clear to me. I do not say that Brigham Young was a Tartuffe; but I know now how Tartuffe ought to be played so as to render the part more effective and more apparently natural and lifelike than I have ever seen it on

French or English stage." Mr. McCarthy has not only known very distinguished people, but he has met them socially, and as an intimate and frequenter of their houses. we meet in these pages Richard Cobden, John Bright, Walt Witman, George Eliot, Charles Reade, George Meredith, John Stuart Mill, Tennyson, Browning, Prince Plon Plon, Parnell, Gladstone, the Kingsleys, Cardinal others and many other less fame. less haps the chapter that will interest the greatest number of readers is the one devoted to George Eliot, whose receptions the author often attended, and of whom he has the most vivid and kindly recollections. At her Sunday afternoon receptions were wont to gather together all the most distinguished literary men and women in England, besides such scientific lights as Huxley. Tyndall and their compeers. Eliot's face is described as ccording with the popular impression derived from her portraits; long, pale, colorless, with its cleanly cut lines-a face not beautiful, indeed, but full of that intellectual expressiveness which appeals to every mind and heart. She had a sweet, sympathetic voice, and seems to have been a hostess of rare seems to have been a nostess of rare tact and skill. Mr. McCarthy does his best to correct the impression given vogue by some writers that she was a disagreeable or overbearing woman, although he admits that she did not like to have people talk to her about her books or to pay her gushing compliments. On this point he compares her with Disraeli, and cites an incident as corroborative. An acquaintance of Mr. McCarthy stopped Disraeli in one of the lobbies of the House of Commons during a critical division and said to him: "Mr. Disraeli, my wife and my daughters are great admirers of your novels." Disraeli blandly replied: "Sir, that is indeed fame."

If George Eliot were in the habit of If George Eliot were in the habit of squelching well-meaning, but tactless admirers in this shrewd fashion one can easily understand how she gained her reputation for being disagreeable.
Mr. McCarthy claims, however, that she was a most pleasant and charming conversationalist, and adds that he has even heard her discuss her own work. On one occasion, we are pleased to note, she told the writer's little daughter that she liked "Silas Marner" best of all her novels.

PROBLEMS OF MODERN PREACHING

How I Fill My Pews Sunday Night, [By the Rev. Frank Dewitt Talmage, son of T. Dewitt Talmage.] This is not the article of an egotist. Some few days ago I received a letter from the office of The Interior stating that they intended to publish a series of articles by practical men on the problems of preaching, and asked me if I would write upon the above title. So I am only one of many answering to the call of "Fall in!" And as my Sunday night audiences have always been as large, if not larger than my morning audiences, perhaps my experiadds to their value and interest is the ence may be helpful to someone else. How do I fill my pew Sunday nights?

of another, as, for instance, when he likens Horace Greeley to Count Ca-ought to be the chief magnet in drawvour. We quote at some length from the pages on the founder of the New York Tribune:

Output

Output world may call the modern sermon foolishness, there is something in the flash of a minister's eye, in the nervous gesture of the hand, in the anxious tone of the voice, in the earnestness of the prayer, which does what no other pleading can do.

Some years ago, when I was a seminary student, I was invited to preach at Asbury Park, and there, though only a boy-like a medical student criticising Dr. Senn, or an office boy Joseph Choate-I spent an hour in trying to show up ministerial follies. I have a little more sense now, and instead of studying other people's follies I am trying to correct my own. And yet, brethren, we as ministers are apt to go to the extremes. Either we try to become a sensationalist—I use the word in the bad sense of notoriety seeking-by preaching upon some irreverent subject that has no more to do with the salvation of a man's soul than has a minstrel joke to a text in the Bible, or we go clear to the other extreme, and say no theme is religious unless it has been wrapped in mummy-clothes of Joseph's Pharaoh, at least 3,000 years old. Both errors, and both wrong. Now I never go into the pulpit of a Sunday night but I say to myself, Here is a great audience of hundreds upon hundreds of people. Perhaps some of them have not been in church for ten years. Perhaps some of them may never come back again. And so my first thought is to preach the most powerful evangelistic sermon that my brain can pen. And then after I have presented Jesus in the most earnest way which my prayer and love can do, then I hold an after-meeting, and draw the net right away. I hold the aftermeeting in the side room, and as a rethe continent proves that sensuality sult in a little over a year we have had

For when Jesus wanted to "Presently a door opened, and the dest, most whimsical figure I had essay—but his was a living, pleading, uplifting, vitalizing personality-his the flowers perfume it, and the sunset blaze it, and the stars twinkle it, and parables of Jesus Christ were not infell among the thieves on the road to Jericho was not then the horror of Jerusalem and the subject of common talk, just the same as the Luetgert trial was that of Chicago a few months ago. Brethren, if we can help men to live better in the store, in the home, in the study, by practical applications to everyday life, they will come to the evening service. If we do not help them in some way they will not

Second, How do I fill my pews Sunday nights? By having plenty of light. I hate darkness almost as much as I hate sin. When I think of the place of future punishment I think of a place so black that you cannot see your hand before the face. And yet it is amazing to me that though light is absolutely essential for vegetable life, that though God has detailed one sun alone to illumine this planet, and this old earth hovers around that sun to keep warm, as a moth miller hovers about the flames of the candle, and though God was so anxious for the sunbeams to help him in his work of creation that on one of the first days he called from the heavens "Let there be light, let there be light!" yet with all these facts it is amazing to see gloomy and repulsive some churches are. Some time ago I preached a couple of Sundays in a neighboring church. The officers of that church were wondering why the Sunday night audiences were so small. The wonder of wonders is those audiences were even as large as they are. Two or three little lights tried to do the work of one hundred and fifty. Nearly every church is making the awful mistake of economizing on gas. My church in Pittsburg before I went there did it. My church in Chicago made the mistake. Brethren, never have the lights turned down during the sermon. A bright sermon, like the flowers kissed of the sunrise, must live in the sunlight. Religious gloom always means religious stupidity. Third and last, How do I fill my pews Sunday nights? By having nerve pews Sunday lights.

and backbone enough to grapple with and solve the music question. church goes to pieces invariably the squall is started around the music committee. Every ecclesiastical ship sooner or later bumps against the rocks in the organ loft. And generally two or three prominent elders or trustees, or moneyed men, have wives or their daughters in the front seats just behind the leader, and there the mischief is done. It is absolutely essential, in order to have a live, strong, evangelistic audience Sunday night, to have the right kind of music. I would upheave my church from roof to cellar, and from cellar back again to the roof, but I would have it. If necessary I would ask half of my members to leave, but I would have it. And furthermore, brethren, remember this, a dissatisfied member is better out of the church than in it. But if you will only take a brave, honest, manly course, these dissatisfied members will not leave. You could not make them leave. If my testimony will de any good will tell the way I have done in the past, although every man and every place is a law unto themselves, and would not in all probability do this way in the future. Although I felt then and feel now it was the best way in my case, and the cause justified the means. I simply called all the officers of my church together, elders and deacons and trustees and demanded that they make me a committee of one to run the music for a year. One of them asked me what I was going to do. I answered I would not tell him. But I wanted the absolute control over that choir loft for one year. No one to ask any questions. I to turn over the carpets and buy new tacks if I wished. My request was immediately granted. Then I went and hired a choir leader, first this man and then that man, until after awhile I found a musical genius, Mr. Robert Stevens, and as a result Jefferson Park Presbyterian Church, of which I am pastor, has congregational singing worth going miles to hear. Although we have great audiences every Sun-day night I have always felt that the people come not so much to hear me preach as to hear my people sing.

My brethren, though we are Presby. terians let us learn from John and Charles Wesley that the Methodists can sing more people into the king-dem of God than they can ever preach And just as when David in Psalm cxlviii. led the great chorus of the universe, and he first called to the galleries of the skies, "Praise ye the Lord from the heavens, praise him in the heights." And then another part of the chorus took up the refrain of the chorus took up the refrain:
"Praise ye him sun and moon, praise him all ye stars of light, praise the Lord from the earth ye dragons and all deeps. Beasts and all cattle, creep-ing things and flying fowl. Both young men and maidens, old men and children." And then David goes on and on and on until suddenly he lifts his baton and there is a pause for silence just before all the voices unite in one grand finale. "Praise ye the Lord." So do not let us in our church singing allow three or four voices in the choir loft to monopolize the church music, but in the galleries and on the main floor and in the pulpit have one grand doxology to open the service and one grand triumphant battle shout with which to close—and our singing roll up to the throne of

Mrs. Van Rensselaer on Manual Training

In the July number of the Review, Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer takes up the argument of Mrs. Davis on the "Curse of Edu cation," contending that the "curse complained of, if curse there be, is vastly outweighed by the many blessings which our free schools confer on the people, and showing, by special reference to the reforms and improvements which have been effected in the educational arrangements of New York City, that the defects in our system are rapidly being removed. Mrs. Van Rensselaer emphasizes the value of manual

To train the hand means to train the powers of the eye and to bring the muscular and nervous systems into working accord. Some kinds of manual training give the whole body useful exercise. All kinds rest the brain and relieve the body after purely intellectual work, while cultivating them in another fashion and developing the creative instinct. And they teach directness of purpose, concentration of effort, accuracy of observation and also mental and moral precision of honesty. The teacher, and even the pupil himself, may think that a book lesson has been learned when it has not been, or that an idea has been mastered when it has been only half grasped, or wholly misunderstood, but this cannot happen with manual work. A tangible thing is done, and rightly done, or it is not. A stitched seam is straight, a leaf is correctly drawn, a carpenter's joint is true, or it is not. Neither deception nor self-deception is possible in the workshop, and the spirit of accuracy, system, conscientiousness, self-will not sanction it. respect and helpful co-operation that it develops is carried over into the other class rooms. Moreover, the workshop may cultivate taste as well as skill; and, although it does not teach trades, it celebrates the dignity of manual labor and often develops individual liking and aptitudes for it. The same is the case with the lessons in "domestic science" given to girls. They are not taught to be "professed" cooks or dress-makers, but their fingers, eyes and palates are trained; the importance of cleanliness, THE YOUNG are trained; the importance of cleanliness, neatness, order and exactness is impressed upon them; respect for household work and interest in it is awakened; and these great benefits are augmented by such instruction in hygienic and alimentary laws as could hardly be made to seem practical and im-portant without the help of the cooking

A QUEER MANIA

Who Attended 6,000 Funerals.

[Letter from Reading, Pa., in New York Sun.] Miss Sophia Christian, who was taken into custody by the strain her from going to runerals, has applied to friends to employ counsel o appeal to the courts in her behalf. She says that there is no law against going to public funerals; that she always behaved herself, conducted herseir property and that she never did an improper act at any funeral; that she is a regular church member; earns her own living, dresses properly and becomingly, and that to commit her or restrain her from her liberty, simply to prevent her from going to funerals, is unwarranted and that the courts

Her record of 6,000 attended funerals is probably correct. She has had the funeral mania for 30 years. No matter what steps were taken to prevent Miss Christian from attending, she found some way of getting into the house of mourning. It was not long ago that she entered a cab at a leading funeral. The undertaker obeyed instructions, made no objections, quietly closed the cab door and nodded to the driver and the cab drove off. Instead of taking its place in line the driver drove for the stables. She became indignant when she saw the cab had stopped at the stables in a back street. For the past few years undertakers had special instructions not to permit Miss Christian to enter houses of mourning. When so informed she very quickly went to the rear entrance secured admission in that way. She denies the story that at one time she scaled a fence to get there. She never wore mourning.

People generally knew her, but never encouraged her by much communication, especially at funerals. She took a deep interest in the dead, inspected the shrouds and floral offerings, and if permitted invariably touched the face of the dead with her ungloved hand. She was never known to weep at a funeral. Many thought that she had become so used to burials and scenes of woe that she had become too hard-hearted to weep. Miss Christian lived alone in two rooms and worked in the early and late hours, in order to have time to attend funerals. She did housework. She had a book in which she made entries of funerals she intended going to, selecting those nearest her home from the advertisements in the daily papers, giving preference, of course, to those she knew. She invariably went alone. Hundreds knew and had a kind word for her in passing.

The Boy Who Started Niagara Suspension Bridge.

There lately died at Lincoln, Neb., a man named H. J. Walsh, who had an important part in the construction of the first suspension bridge at Niagara land, in 1834, but was brought to this country when he was a baby, his parents going to live at Niagara Falls,

When he was still a boy the first steps for the construction of the suspension bridge were taken. The first thing of all was to stretch a single wire across the chasm. The engineer in charge had thought of a way to get "What boy is the best kite-flyer in town?" he asked a resident. The Walsh boy was named, and the engineer asked that he be brought. He was made to understand that he was to fly a kite across the Niagara River. He flew it across and allowed it to come down on the other side. Men were there to seize it. Then the engineer attached a wire to the string on his side, and the men on the other side detached the kite, and by means of the string drew the wire across. By this, in turn, a cable was drawn across, and the bridge was well begun. Mr. Walsh afterward removed to Nebraska, and became a prominent

The boys helped her hunt for it, and they searched in every likely and un- houses in towns, to be emptied, is dislikely place they could think of-in the hay-loft, the corn-crib, the orchard, the dairy, the clover meadow, the attic. the dog kennels and the chicken house. But they could not find it.
"Never mind," said grandma; "I'll make Rosalie a sunbonnet like those I used to wear when I was a little girl.' Such a pretty, dainty pink sunbonnet When grandpa came in to dinner and saw Rosalie's brown eyes peeping shyly from under its shade, he took her right up in his arms and kissed her.

'Well, I declare!" he said. And then he gave her another kiss, and said it all but the tops should be closed. The

Rosalie laughed and showed all her dimples. She knew who Rosalie Deane was, and few things pleased her so much as being told she was like dear

She liked the pink sunbonnet so well that she had almost forgotten the straw sailor, when, one morning, George and Phil came running into the house in a state of great excitement. "Whetre's Rosalie? Rosalie! Rosalie! Come and see where we've found your Away they all scampered, Phil leading the way to the orchard. The moment they reached Gnarly," Rosalie remembered all about the hat. She had been up in that tree, which was the easiest tree in the world to climb, when the tea bell rang, on Tuesday. As she was hastening down a twig caught the hat from her head, and, instead of stopping to get it, she had run into the house, thinking she would come back for her hat after tea. And, of course, she had forgotten it, and so the hat had been lost. "Hold on!" cried George, as she began to scramble up after it.

"Go slow," said Phil, "and don't get too near; there's something in it."
"Is it snakes?" asked Rosalie, anxiously, and drawing back, at which the boys laughed good-naturedly.

"No, no; go on, It won't hurt you,' said Phil, "and it's worth seeing." Rosalie thought it was worth seeing, indeed. She drew a quick breath, and her face turned as pink as her sunbonnet with surprise.

For the crown of her sailor hat was full of grass, feathers, strings, bits of wool and leaves, with a soft hollow in the middle; and in the hollow was a little white egg speckled with red. Come down when you've seen it," called the boys at the foot of the tree. "The birds think it's theirs now, and that you're a robber. They want to go

We'll have to find some other accommodations for them, or by next summer they'll be taking up lodgings in our pockets. It's pretty late for planting, but I guess we'll have to try and raise some birds'-nest vines yet."
"Birds'-nest vines!" The children looked at him in wonder. "Yes," grandpa went on, though there was a twinkle in his eyes with which they had grown familiar during the fortnight they had been on

"There's a sunny spot by the south garden fence where they ought to grow. We'll sow the seeds there."

The seeds were planted that very afternoon, George and Phil and Rosalie looking on with the greatest interest. They had innumerable questions to ask about when they would come up, how long they would take to grow, and if they really bore birds' nests. But grandpa only smiled and told them to

How the children watched that bit of garden! And what rejoicing there was when the first green leaves appeared! They watered and weeded the patch themselves, and loosened the earth around the plants. The vines grew fast and climbed up over the garden fence. By-and-by some yellow blossoms came out, and when these fell off little green balls grew in their places; but there was nothing that looked the least bit like birds' nests. "Perhaps grandpa only meant the vines for the birds to build their nests in," said Rosalie; "only I think they'd squashes.

"They're nothing but gourds," said George one day, in disgust; "the kind Hannah uses to dip water with, you know. Won't grandpa be disappointed when he finds that he has planted the wrong kind of seeds!" For, somehow, grandpa never seemed to go near the birds'-nest vines. Interest in the south garden patch began to flag after this. It was quite late in the summer, and more than a week since any of them had visited it, when one day grandpa said suddenly:

"I guess the birds' nests must be about ripe." To their surprise he did not seem to be a bit dissappointed when they reached the garden.

He just picked off one of the handsome gourds, cut a big slice from the end, scraped out the inside, and held it up for the little folks to see. Won't that make as good a nest as a little girl's hat?"

Three pairs of eyes grew very bright. 'It would make a lovely one," said Rosalie. "But where will you put them? In the apple trees?" 'The wrens like to come as near to us as they can," said grandpa; "so how would it do to put them under the eaves of the barn?" It did seem too bad that they could not see the birds take possession of their new lodgings that season. But it was too late for making any more nests, and these had, after all, been raised for next year, as grandpa reminded them.

But when they came back to the farm the next summer there was a row of hollow gourds fastened all along the eaves. And the children never tired of watching the housekeeping of the wrens from the time they selected their dwellings—not without a good deal of quarreling-to the day when the last of the young broods flew into the world to shift for themselves .- The Domestic Hygiene. Although our grandfathers and grandmothers lived tolerably well in what we should now consider unsanitary houses, yet there is little doubt that we all benefit immensely by our sanitation.

The custom of putting buckets of ashes and refuse outside the doors of tinetly objections the contents are liable to be blown about, and prove a source of great annoyance (to say nothing of unhealthiness) to ourselves and our neighbors. Inside the house, remember that all lumber (in the shape of old clothes, etc.), waste paper and dust, are receptacles of disease, and generate germs.

Ventilation of rooms is all important. Windows must be open at the top, to let out the heated air, which always ascends; equally important it is to open the lower part to admit fresh air. On damp, foggy days, a short time will suffice, and, after the beds are made. again.

be always open. Have a systematic cleaning of the house at stated times, carpets properly beaten and cleansed, and whitewashing, etc., duly done. The cellar must be kept scrupulously clean, and be airy and cool. Milk should always be covered up, as nothing so readily absorbs germs and communicates disease, and if any suspicion prevails as to its purshould be always boiled, and so should the drinking water, and well filtered besides.

Many ideas for the prevention of disease will commend themselves to thinking housekeepers, but too many housewives are merely imitators. Nine houses out of ten will show a sameness in furnishing, and it is only in originality that the world is benefited.

The sanitation of a house affects people's health nerves and tempers much more than they are aware. A healthy mind is dependent on a healthy body, and this can only be maintained by thorough knowledge and strict attention to sanitation, always remembering, too, that "cleanliness is next to godliness.'

TELEPATHY

Can One Mind Act Upon Another at a Distance?

ros. Simon Newcomb, the Famous Washington Scientist, Doubts It Greatly.,

In the opinion of several men of the highest respectability in the world of learning, it has. Philosophers of no less standing than Prof. James, of Harvard, and Prof. Sidgwick, of Cambridge Transland. bridge, England, are understood to meintein that telepathy is a fact, or, at least, that there are a mass of ob-servations which it is scarcely possible to explain on any other hypothesis then that some minds can see what is setus on in others without using the ordinary channels of sense. If this conlusion is correct we may expect results as startling as any that modern distant day a sworn mind reader will be one of the officers of every court of law. His duties will be to determine whether a consciousness of guilt is present in the mind of the accused, and whether the witness on the stand is reling what he knows to be the truth.

Possibly there may be no need that the witness should testify at all. When counsel asks questions the mind reader will fumble round in the memory of the witness and tell his story for him. Are we coming to this? Is there any real evidence that one mind can, under any circumstances, act upon another in any other way than that with which we are all familiar from childhood? A look, a glance of the eye, a pressure of the finger, a gesture so slight that the uninterested bystander would never notice it, may convey volumes of feeling to a sympathetic companion. But place a screen between the two and let neither light nor sound pass from one to the other: can senti-ment then be conveyed without a vis-fble gesture? This is the question.

It is now more than fifteen years since a society was formed in England for the laudable purpose of investigating this and kindred questions. Its methods have from time to time exposed it to some ridicule, but there should be no question that its objects were making what looked like remarkable discoveries. To decide whether they really were such, let us compare them with certain features of scientific history.

Two or three years ago it was found by Prof. Roentgen that a kind of rays could be produced which had the extraordinary property of passing directly through such opaque substances as leather, paper, human flesh—in fact, almost any ordinary non-metallic substance. By their aid h was possible to photograph a coin inside of a closed pocketbook, or a bullet inside of a man's leg. In a few weeks men all over the world were confirming this discovery and photographing invisible objects of various kinds. At every large hospital bullets were being located by means of the X-rays. The pro-perties of the latter became the subject of investigation in every physical laboratory. Thus a new piece of knowlbeen acquired which is universally admitted and constantly ex-

Let us see how this compares with portant than the X-rays could ever be. One man, known as a "percipient," was the germ of so seated at a table and required to concentrate his attention upon a sheet of paper lying before him, while his mind remained alive to any impression. He had a pencil in his hand. At a short distance behind him stood an "agent," holding before him drawings of various sorts, many of them quite fantastic. He fixed his attention intently on a drawing while the percipient moved his pencil in obedience to some tendfound that he reproduced the drawing that the "agent" was looking at, at least in some of its main outlines, with an approximation to success, which showed beyond question that a mental impresion of some sort passed from one to the other. All ex-perience in scientific history would have led us to suppose that this experiment would have been repeated and the result confirmed in every psychological laboratory in the world as soon as the telegraph could convey the news of what had been done. But what is the fact? Not only was this not the case but not another step forward has the vessel. The latter was afterward ever been taken toward establishing wrecked. the correctness of the effort. Presumably the experiment was tried thousands of times everywhere. In a very few cases there was now and then something that seemed like partial These were duly recorded. Of the unsuccessful ones little or nothing was ever heard. The whole subhas dropped out of memory.

The writer made a suggestion as to the development of the discovery. How is the result affected by varying distance between the "agent" and the recipient? If a screen is interposed between them will thoughts still pass? If they are on opposite sides of a door, one being in one room and one in another, will the thought pass? These questions being answered the experiments can be continued and varied in an infinite number of other ways until we are able to tell exactly when the transference is possible and when it is not. No one of these questions was de-cisively answered. All that could be said was that the experiment sometimes succeeded and sometimes did not. Even now after the lapse of fifteen years no one has been able to say when the experiment will succeed, and when it will not. All that can be said is that if you try it perhaps it will succeed, but the chances are very much against it. It is of the essence of a scientific discovery that you have to be able to make some definite statement about it Conditions of success may be very delicate and very difficult to attain, after repeated experiment and trial it is possible to state them. In the case of telepathy no statement of the sort has yet been made; in fact, so far as writer is aware, a serious attempt at any general statement has been abandoned. All that has been done is to add a few more to a long list of wonderful unexplained occurrences which are recorded in the history of all ages. Most readers will see something significant in the fact that, in the original experiment, one of the men was a professional showman some kind, while the other was his

The society did not confine itself to experiments of the kind just mentioned Several of its members went to work with the greatest energy to collect evidence of all supposed cases of thought transference that could be found. A system of rigorous exclusion was adopted, by which 'all ordinary and unverified cases were left out and only those supposed to be well established were included. The results are found in two very attractive volumes published under the title "Phantasms of the Living." If any generalization could be proved by the mere number of witnesses these volumes must cer-tainly have proved something. Now it is a very singular fact that the most remarkable case of all, a case which would seem to have proved the doctrine, if human evidence could do it was left out entirely. It was that of the Hon. Mr. Hornsby, a judge of the British Consular Court, at Shanghai, China, who told how he was visited in the middle of the night by a reporter who insisted on getting admission to his house and making him get out of bed in order that he should receive a report of a decision which he was to publish the next day. With great re-luctance the judge left his bed and dictated the substance of his decision about 1 o'clock in the morning; but he gave the obstrusive reporter a sharp reprimand, warning him that he would never again consent to be disturbed in this way. Next morning on coming to court he was met with the question:

"Have you heard the news?" "No." he said, "what is it?" "Poor Blank has just died very suddenly.'

Blank was the court reporter who had visited the judge.
"At what hour did he die?"

"Between 12 and 1 o'clock this morning."
"The very hour," said the judge, "at which he visited my bedroom and made me dictate a decision to him." It should be added that the story was said to be confirmed by Mrs. Hornsby, therefore could not be mistaken as to the circumstances. This occurrence is distinguished from all others quoted by the society in the seemingly indisputable character of the evidence. In other cases the narrators were generally ordinary people who might well have been mistaken. But here was a trained lawyer, a judge of the beach, telling a fact about which inhabitants a judicial system to which they were unaccustomed, but yet showthere was seemingly no possibility of ing that justice is a universal virtue, an eror. In other cases each particular event had to rest on the testimony of some one person. Here was a con-firmation by the judge's wife. In most cases there may have been doubt as to dates, circumstances, etc. Here there could be no doubt, because the visit of the judge to the court next morning and his there learning of the death precluded all possibility of error. Why then was the story omitted from the book after it had been published in the Nineteenth Century Magazine as the most extraordinary piece of evidence that had yet been collected? Simply because the very specific character of the facts narrated admitted of the correctness of the story being tested. When the number of the magaz-ine containing it reached Shanghai people living there saw that the judge was human and had blundered. It was true that a court reporter had died sudenly, not, indeed, at 1 o'clock in the morning but in the day time. It was doubtless true also that the judge had had a dream at some time or other in the presence of his wife, but he could not have had a dream at the time that the reporter died because he was not married for three months afterward. All that the story proved was that the judge was human and like other men, more or less subject to blunders of How do we know that the thousand wonderful stories so industriously collected by the Psychical Society are anything more than a thousand out of the millions of blunders which the now apparently prosperous and well memories of mankind are making all governed. The transformation from the time as to the occurrences going on from day to day? The wisdom of the my last, has been marvelous. The story as told by the reporter .ency which he could not explain. It LieutenantBlank, being attached to the "Huron," at Port Royal, S. C., left 'he vessel on leave and failed to return before she had sailed. On returning to Port Royal he reported to the senior naval officer that he left the vessel because he had a presentiment that if he went to sea on her for the purpose of finishing the cruise he would wrecked. Four months afterward was court-martialed, and in his defence he made the above statement, calling on the officers of the "Huron" to prove that on leaving the ship he and told them of his crewl. in fact, of his horror, of finishing the cruise

> The grain of truth in the story. Lieut. Blank had said to his captain that he wanted to be detached from the vessel because he had a horror of the sea, and a particular horror of that

The rest of the story.-Lieut. Blank had been already accused of drunken-mess, and in March, 1887, had been stupefied by drink or opiates, and had said many erratic things exciting a doubt of his sanity. One among these was the above statement that he had a horror of the sea and a particular horror of this trip. This was only one out of a number of reasons he had given from time to time why he wanted to be detached from the vessel. Remember, he only made this statement once, and it would have been altogether forgotten had it not been for the wreck of the ship, which occurred eight months afterward. The courtmartial occurred four months after-ward, and four months before the ship was wrecked. My conclusion may be summed up in a very few words. Things are happening round us all the time which we may fail in explaining to the satisfaction of the critical inquirer, especially one who was determined not to be sat-Many of these things look very wonderful, many stories are affoat, true as far as they go, yet looking very wonderful merely because we do not know all the facts. In the case of thought transference and telepathy nothing has yet been proved that cannot be explained by the most familiar kind of blunders or errors of mem-ory, by chance coincidences, or by the possible omission of facts which, could they be added to the story, would show it to be quite commonplace.

England's long and large experience in dealing with remote colonies, and the consequent improving methods, have grown, in part, from her failure more than a hundred years ago in her relation with her American dependencies. She adopts no Procrustean system of rigid application of fixed theories, but adapts her rule to the varying necessities and capabilities of those whom she governs. With the wisdom which marks her civil administration a civil service has been evolved, and the difficulties and complexities of rule have developed a number of most rewho was in bed at the time, and who markable and capable men. Some of these, according to the requirements of the situation, have been invested with military authority and are known as successful generals; a larger number have been civil servants, sometimes statesmen, governing in a practical, business-like style, while others have > no less suited to semi-civilized than to enlightened peoples. Egypt has been a kind of puzzle for English ministries and for a century a vexed question for leaders and parties. On the highway to India, the supremacy of a hostile power was not to be tolerated. When the Suez Canal was built and by astute financial diplomacy became English property, the question of English control became more serious. Since 1882 England has exercised a veiled protectorate over Egypt. The khedive or hereditary suzerain, is a vassal of Turkey, paying indirectly an annual tribute to the Sultan, but he has only nominal power, and is really maintained by foreign troops. British garrisons keep him on his throne, but it is an "open secret" that their main duty since Arabi's rebellion is to uphold the paramount authority of Eng-

This supremacy is handicapped by agreements between foreign powers and Turkey, which, among other limitations, deprive the khedive of the power of taxation and of the expenditure of revenues collected from subjects. The leading powers of Europe, in the interest of bondholders who are creditors of Egypt, have representatives who partition the revenues, independent of the management or will of Egypt. Nevertheless, under a government anomalous, almost as mysterious as her Sphinx, she has made much progress and is 1875, the date of my first visit, to 1889, the X-rays were dreamed of the Society for Psychical Research made an experiment which ought to have been manding written records, and subject country fit to live in. Such and so recognized is his authority that what he approves is done, and what he opposes poned or rejected. The cabinet ministers of the khedivial government are practically secretaries of Lord mer. A protectorate, veiled in Egypt, is an avowed fact in the Soudan, arresting Madhism, controlling the Upper Nile, prolonging the existence of Lower Egypt. He is a type of those Englishmen who rejoice in the closer affiliation of English-speaking peoples, and evidently looked with favor upon our control of the conquered islands. At the same time he was not unwilling to say that the Latin and negro races in Cuba presented difficulties which were formidable in the application of representative government and universal suf-

SIR WALTER SCOTT'S PETS.

The author who cared most for beasts was Sir Walter Scott. It was better not to be at Abbotsford when one of the dogs died, said Miss Scott, for the family was all in tears. When Camp, his bull-terrier, died, Sir Walter declined to dine out, because he "had lost a dear old friend." Maida, his deerhound, was given to him by the Highland chief, Glengary. and lived to a great age. Maida would lie in his study, with his head in reach of Scott's hand; when he wanted to go out he knocked with his tail. Meanwhile old Hins of Hinsfeldt, the great gray cat, sat in the second place of honor, at the top of the library lad-der. When Maida went out, Hins came down from the ladder and took his place in his absence: There was also a pack of greyhounds and every kind of terrier, and old Hins would join in hunting a hare, if one would join in hunting a hare, if one got up near the house. At last poor Nimrod, a young, inconsiderate deerhound, killed poor old Hins, in the excitement of the chase. When Sir Walter was very ill abroad, he always wrote home for paws of the dogs.

A POTATO REPORT

Yields of Noteworthy Varieties Including New Introductions.

For the past three years the New Hampshire station has been pursuing work in the interest of potato growers, and it now issues a report covering the results of experiments with 104 varieties, including the new introductions. The claim that the Sir Walter Raleigh closely resembles Rural New Yorker, of which it is a seedling, but is more uniform and yields practically no small tubers, also that it is of better quality and a few days later, was borne out by its behavior at the station during two seasons. Red American Wonder (numbered 99), also called American Wonder, a commonly grown and very popular potate in the northern part of the state, is pronounced a fine variety. This was one of the heaviest yielders of 1898. It is a main crop variety of good size and fine appearance; vines dark green, very regular and erect, making a very uniform row, almost square top throughout, strong and vigorous. The crop was practically all salable. Yield, 369 bushels per acre.

White Beauty (101) is described as a the most distinguished members of the medium late variety of introduction. It Order of Minors, and a very learned theologian. Apropos, does not the fact belongs to the Burbank and White Star class. The vines were very strong and Augustinian), and Mgr. Falconio, also a monk, have been specially chosen by heavy, dark green, standing 21/2 feet high and 3 feet broad. The yield was at the rate of 397 bushels per acre and only about 6 per cent were small.

Fillbasket, a white skinned main crop variety, oblong, somewhat flattened and usually smooth, proved a heavy yielder hierarchy openly discourage them? at the station, producing at the rate of 846 bushels per acre, a very small per cent of which were small. The vines were strong, erect and vigorous.

Commenting upon these, Late Puritan and Filibasket are mentioned as good croppers; Sir William wants clay loam; Seneca Beauty is a fine pink variety; Harvest Queen, desirable; Sir Walter Raleigh, very choice; Woodhull's Seedling, White Rose and Wilson's First Choice, fair croppers; Dewdrop Rose, a fine Rose type; Breck's Chance, large red; Prelific Rose, medium oval; Orphan, a long potato, fine. Some points heretofore advanced in potato culture, which the experiments reported by Professor Rame seem to confirm, are: The yield from planting the seed or bud end is generally greater than from eyes on the seed end are the first to germinate, and hence are especially important when an early crop is desired. Exposing unsprouted tubers in a warm place before planting hastens growth, but if continued until sprouts form (which are rubbed off), the yield may be considerably reduced.

It is better to place in a hill one large piece than several very small ones of the same aggregate weight.

The net yield of salable potatoes increases with every increase in the size of seed piece from one eye to the half potato. The half potato affords a larger net salable crop than the whole potato on account of the excessive amount of seed required in planting entire tubers.

Mgr. Falconio Selected-Sketch of the New Appointee.

The Rome correspondent of the Catholic Times of Liverpool writes to that paper as follows: For some time it was rumored that the Holy Father intended to establish apostolic delegation in Canada similar to that already existing in the United States, but as nothing definite was known and the Vatican organs maintained a discreet silence on subject, I thought it better to wait, before announcing this new proof of the Holy Father's far-reaching wisdom in your columns, until the rumor should have ripened into something more substantial and trustworthy. And now, although the organs of the Vatican still observe the Sphynx-like silence mentioned above, I am in a position to inform you that the apostolic delegation to Canada is a "fait accompli," and that the prelate destined to fill that post of exceptional importance is Mgr. Diomede Falconio, O.F.M., archbishop of Acerenza and Matera. Those who know his grace, and they are not a few in the United States, where Mgr. Falconio, although an Italian by birth and nationality, has passed many years of his busy life, cannot help admiring once more the Holy Father's singular felicity in always appointing the "right man in the right place." Leo XIII., who appreciates energetic men at their full value, immediately singled out Mgr. Falconio when he had decided upon founding an apostolic delegation in the Dominion, and for this purpose summoned that prelate to Rome a fortnight ago. In a most cordial audience which lasted over an hour his holiness acquainted Mgr. Falconio with his decision, and the latter who possesses among his other gifts all the humility and obedience of the Franciscan promptly expressed his willingness to accept the post, only asking as a favor that he may be allowed to remain one promptly expressed his willingness to that he may be allowed to remain one month in his archdiocese in order to take leave of his beloved flock. Needless to say that the request was granted, and Mgr. Falconio is now at Matera, where he confirmed a large number of children the other day, for like a father forced to leave his little ones, the archbishop, who is universally beloved, redoubles in zeal toward his flock as the moment of his depatrure approaches. Toward the end of July his grace will return to Rome in order to receive final instructions and to take leave of the holy father. Mgr. Falconio is now 57 years old, although he looks much younger. He is one of

Mt. Bry iges Man in the Last Stages of Disability-Subsequently Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mount Brydges, June 22, 1899. "I nave delayed publishing the particulars of my complete recovery from Bright's Disease that I might first consult my doctor to be quite sure, independent of my own opinion, as to my perfect cure. Now that I am pronounced quite well or nearly restored to perfect condition, requiring only time, I hesitate no longer to say 'Dodd's Kidney Pills saved my life.' I cannot say too much to show my gratitude for this wonderful remedy. My attending physician said I was in the last stages of Bright's Disese of the Kidneys, and that there was no hope for me. I commenced to use Dodd's Kidney Pills in July, and used in all about twenty boxes. I have used no other remedy or medicine of any kind since, and I feel well, sleep well and I have a good appetite.

These are the facts. I have been paid total disability money by the in-surance company, but that was before I had used Dodd's Kidney Pills or hoped for recovery by any means. If you think the publication of this letter will be of any advantage to the public, publish it by all means.

"Very gratefully yours, "ROBERT BOND." In the statement of the death and disability claims, paid by the Provincial Provident Institution, St. Thomas Ont., published in The Ensign of September, 1895, is the following item: "Bond, Robt. (disability), Mount Brydges, certificate No. 2,917; amount, $600; date of payment, March 21, 1895.' A short time ago Mr. Bond received a letter from someone in Toronto, asking if his cure had been satisfactory. Here is his reply: Mount Brydges, June 12, 1899.

Dear Sir,-In answer to yours of the 22nd ult., I would say my cure by Dodd's Kidney Pills was entirely satisfactory, and I recommend them most

Yours truly, ROBERT BOND.

LIFE SAVED-Mr. James Bryson Cameron writes: "I was confined to my bed with inflammation of the lungs and was given up by physicians. A neighbor advised me to try Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, stating that his wife had used it for a throat trouble with the best results. Acting on this advice I procured the medicine, and less than half a bottle cured me; I certainly believe it saved my life. It was with reluctance that I consented to a trial, as I was reduced to such a state that I doubted the power of any remedy to do me good.
