Britain Agrees With Germany

Accepts the Proposals of the Latter's Second Note.

The Pao Ting Fu Expedition Starts Today—Talk of a Gen- eral Rising in Southern China.

London, Oct. 11.—A Berlin dispatch says: Great Britain's answer to Ger- many's second note was received this morning. It is an unreserved and un- conditional acceptance of the German position. A high official of the foreign office made the following statement on the subject last evening: "Great Britain is following the example of the United States. At the same time she has di- rected her representative in Peking to proceed in accordance with Germany's second note. Her answer makes no mention of the German note of Sep- tember, but there was no necessity for any reference, because the September note merely laid down certain general principles, while the second note devel- oped into practical suggestions. So far as the French note is concerned the im- pression gained in official circles is that it will be shelved indefinitely, since it is not regarded here as touching live questions. Official opinion seems to be that it will disturb the last many of the powers, since it will soon be forgotten."

THE EXPEDITION TO PAO TING FU. Tien Tsin, Oct. 9.—Gen. Von Walder- see, commanding the allied forces, has issued orders to the Pao Ting Fu ex- pedition to depart on the 11th inst. The expedition consists of a mixed force of 5,000 British, Germans, French and Italians. The force from Tien Tsin will connect near Pao Ting Fu with a column of the same strength from Peking, under command of General Gaselee.

Four battalions of French troops, which left Yantai Tsin on Oct. 4, on an independent expedition, have been halted and ordered to await the arriv- al of the main force.

The Americans, the Russians and the Japanese are not participating in the expedition. Despite Chinese assurances to the contrary, the commanders of the forces ordered to advance expect resistance.

COUNT VON WALDERSEE'S AD- DRESS.

Tien Tsin, Oct. 9.—The following was published yesterday in the British brig- ade orders: "Count Von Waldersee as- sumed chief command of the troops in Chi Li Province Sept. 27, and express- ed the following sentiments: 'It fills my heart with pride and pleasure to be placed at the head of such distinguished troops, who have already given glorious proofs of their valor and hero- ism. Well knowing that I am intrus- ed with a difficult task, I am never- theless, a firm conviction that I shall succeed quickly and surely with the help of these proved troops in attaining the object placed before me, now that they are combined under a single lead- er.'"

THE AMERICANS.

London, Oct. 11.—The Morning Post publishes the following dispatch, dated Oct. 2, from Ho Si Wu, on the Pei Ho: "Gen. Chaffee refused to convey any message, although three baggage wagons had been obtained. The Amer- ican soldiers are glad to go to Man- churia. The accommodating and polite attitude of the British and Japanese to- ward Gen. Chaffee is very noticeable. An American today expressed to me a few days.

Quarrel Between Brothers—Joseph Clarke Meets a Sad Fate.

Petrolia, Ont., Oct. 10.—A man by the name of Joseph Clarke in Oil Springs today got into a dispute with his neighbor over a line fence. Clarke received injuries in the stomach which proved fatal. Clarke died a short time afterwards.

FURTHER DETAILS. [Special to Advertiser per G. N. W.] Oil Springs, Oct. 11.—The following is copied from the Oil Springs Chroni- cle: "Did he kill his brother?" Josh Clarke, near Oil Springs, is supposed to have met his death by a kick from his brother. They fought while under the influence of liquor. James Clarke, so Mrs. Clarke says, wanted to give himself up last night to Coroner Slow. The two brothers lived on a joint farm on the fourth concession of En- niskillen, about three miles north of Oil Springs, together with the dead man's wife and family. to a fight, and it was during this that the elder brother, James, is alleged to have kicked Joseph in the abdomen, causing internal injuries that resulted fatally.

Dr. Chalmers was called yesterday morning and pronounced the case hopeless, and the man died at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Coroner Mott, of Petrolia, arrived on the scene about 6 o'clock last evening, but did not hold an inquest, and said nothing definite re the cause. Dr. Chalmers refused to issue the usual death certificate.

Liberal Convention Tomorrow (Friday) Night.

The convention to choose a standard- bearer in the coming contest for the representation of the House of Com- mons in London will be held tomorrow (Friday) night, at 8 o'clock, at the Liberal headquarters, Richmond street. It is desirable there should be a full representation, and of that we have no doubt.

The Advertiser regards it as of im- portance to London, to the Dominion and to the Empire, that the Laurier Administration should be retained in power. To such end it is important that London should contribute a staunch and able supporter.

The conditions are favorable for success. Many who believed the cry that Canadian industries would be de- stroyed were Laurier and his colleagues placed in power, now admit that since 1896 the industrial prosperity of the Dominion has been unprecedented. In every sphere of governmental ac- tivity a splendid record has been made.

The London Liberal Association is in good shape. An energetic executive head is of no small importance. The Liberals of London acted wisely at the recent annual meeting in placing Mr. Geo. C. Gibbons, Q.C., at their head as president during the coming contest. Mr. Gibbons' vim and en- thusiasm are inspiring and infectious, and cannot fail to have their full ef- fect on all the supporters of the Admin- istration. Another reason why they acted wisely is because he is an un- compromising foe to unfair means at an election, and he can do much to keep the contest within proper bounds.

He has been intimately connected for a quarter of a century with all the contests in the city. He has fought the fight vigorously while it was on, and when it was over dropped all an- imosities. His course should be the course of all the supporters of the Laurier Administration. Contest the riding fairly, openly and manfully, and when the contest is over let there be no enmity.

Tomorrow (Friday) night, then, the Liberal nomination for London!

PENINSULAR FAIR.

Chatham, Oct. 10.—The Peninsular Fair was formally opened today. The attendance was exceptionally large, crowds attending from outside points. The bright weather added materially to the success of the fair. The various exhibits are of an excellent character, competition being keen in every class. The show continues tomorrow. Mr. George Stephens, the Liberal candi- date, and Mr. T. A. Smith, his oppo- nent, addressed the audience at the con- cert this evening.

So Far in the British Election
Contest—Lord Cromer Called From Egypt.

London, Oct. 11.—A number of Dover boys were fined recently for playing at Britons and Boers. When remonstrated with by a sentry, they stoned him in his box.

TWO HUNDRED PERISH.
Moscow, Oct. 11.—A report from Pireus says that the Egyptian mail steamer Charieh has gone down, due to the explosion of its boilers. Two hundred passengers perished.

BRITISH ELECTIONS.

London, Thursday, Oct. 11.—3:30 a.m. The Liberals have been doing far better in the counties in the parliamentary general election than they did in the boroughs. Yesterday they gained two more seats—Cardiff and the Otley division of Yorkshire, thus equalizing the party gains. The ministerialists and the opposition have now gained 27 seats each. Apart from Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman's reduced majority in Strathcona, and the success of Sir Edward J. Reed at Cardiff, a seat formerly held by Mr. Jas. M. MacLean, prominent in Indian affairs, who did not seek re-election, there is little of special interest in yesterday's returns.

The ministerialists now hold 357 seats and the opposition 265.

THE LIBERAL LEADER'S VIEWS.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, addressing his supporters after the poll had been declared, said he was satisfied with the result, considering the state of the country and the most disadvantageous circumstances for an election that an ingenious government could devise.

BRUTAL ASSAULT.

Sir Robert Fitzgerald, the newly elected Conservative member for Cambridge city, was brutally assaulted and kicked in the head by roughs and badly injured with a country meeting yesterday evening.

BRITONS GIVE THANKS.

London, Oct. 11.—England is in the midst of her annual thanksgiving season, and most of the churches throughout the country are decorated with grain, fruit and flowers symbolic of the nation's gratitude to a bounteous Providence. St. Paul's Cathedral, elaborately embellished with the products of the harvest, was the scene of a service of thanksgiving, attended by thousands of people.

LORD CROMER CALLED.

Baron Cromer, the British diplomatic agent and consul-general in Egypt, has been summoned to England, according to the Cairo correspondent of the Daily Express. It is understood in Cairo that he will not return to Egypt, and it is believed he will become a member of the new cabinet. The Daily Express suggests that it is not impossible that Lord Cromer will replace the Marquis of Londonderry, secretary of state for war, and says that a combination of Cromer, Kitchener and Roberts would insure public confidence in a thorough reform of the war office.

THE RIGHT THING.

A New Catarrh Cure Which Is Rapidly
Coming to the Front.

For several years, Eucalyptol, Guaiacol and Hydrastin have been recognized as standard remedies for catarrh troubles, but they have always been given separately and only very recently an ingenious chemist succeeded in combining them, together with other antiseptics into a pleasant, effective tablet.

Druggists sell the remedy under the name of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets and it has met with remarkable success in the cure of nasal catarrh, bronchial and throat catarrh and in catarrh of the stomach.

Mr. F. N. Denton, whose address is care of Clark House, Troy, N. Y., says: "When I run up against anything that is good I like to tell people of it. I have been troubled with catarrh more or less for some time. Last winter more than ever. Tried several so-called cures, but did not get any benefit from them. About six weeks ago I bought a box of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets and I am glad to say that they have done wonders for me, and I do not hesitate to let all my friends know that Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are the right thing."

Mr. George J. Casanova of Hotel Griffin, W. 8th St., New York City, writes: "I have commenced using Stuart's Catarrh Tablets and already they have given me better results than any catarrh cure I have ever tried. A leading physician of Pittsburgh advises the use of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets in preference to any other treatment for catarrh of the head, throat or stomach."

He claims they are far superior to inhalants, calves, lotions or powder, and are much more convenient and pleasant to take, and are so harmless that little children take them with benefit as they contain no opiate, cocaine or any poisonous drug.

All druggists sell Stuart's Catarrh Tablets at 60 cents for full sized package and they are probably the safest and most reliable cure for any form of catarrh.

CHALLENGE ON THE WAY.
London, Oct. 10.—Sir Thomas Lipton later informed a representative of the Associated Press that his challenge was on board the White Star Line Germanic, due at New York Thursday. Holmes; president, T. J. Murphy; vice-presidents, John Crowe, Lieut.-Col. Stacey; Lieut.-Col. T. B. Robson, city; treasurer, Lieut.-Col. Dawson, city; secretary, Major Geo. Hayes, city.

TOSSED BY A BULL

Alonso Stevens, of Spring Valley, N. Y., Had a Narrow Escape.

Nyack, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Alonso Stevens, of Spring Valley, is in a serious condition today from being tossed in the air by a bull on T. Lovatt's farm. Stevens was crossing a lot when the bull rushed toward him, caught him with his horns and threw him high in the air. When the man came down he landed on the bull's neck and tried to stay there, but the bull threw him off and then put his front feet on his breast, and was about to trample him when a farm hand, who had heard Stevens' cries arrived on the scene with a rail and drove the bull off just in time to save the man's life. Stevens was badly mangled, and was carried off the field unconscious.

In Favor of Governments.

A writer in the Fortnightly Review on the eve of the British elections gave a balance sheet of successes and failures to be ascribed to the Government. The list seemed to be drawn up with fairness and strictness, and it included a large number of things that had to be set down as failures, but the writer noted that little attention had been paid to domestic affairs. He did not, however, expect much trouble on this account, because the country had been prosperous. Even the war had helped the prosperity of the country for the time being, and the reaction from that artificial stimulus had not yet been felt.

The advocates of President McKinley in the United States rest their claims and hopes very largely on the same thing—that the country is generally in a prosperous condition, and that the average man has the sense to let well enough alone. The thoughtful and impartial Republican would in all probability admit that McKinley had not altogether made the prosperity, while he would contend that if Bryan and sixteen-to-one had been successful four years ago, things would have continued in a bad condition. There has been a measure of prosperity all round of recent years, but if Americans had shaken their public confidence by tinkering with their currency, trade would have been affected in the wrong direction.

In Canada also the Government can claim some merit for the prosperity in which the country has shared, and expect to profit from it at the coming elections, because they have sought to put the country in a line to share in the good times. There are some countries where the economic conditions are so bad that even a tidal wave of commercial prosperity makes little difference, there is still so much poverty and consequent clamor and wretchedness. The people are taxed in such a way that trade is crippled, and the money so gained is largely spent in keeping up armies which are themselves a burden and a curse. In Canada we are free from that kind of thing, and if wisely governed will keep free from it. The Government has shown that it could recognize imperial duties and responsibilities without being carried away by a wild jingo fever. At the same time it looked well to the permanent commercial interests of the country by stimulating trade along the most natural channels. When times are good in Britain it means an increased demand for all our products, and the Government by its policy has endeavored to enlarge commercial intercourse with the greatest open market of the world.

What Have They Done?

And what has the Government done for the country? The Conservative press and the Conservative leaders say everywhere that we have done nothing. Well, here is a little of what we have done:

First of all, we faced the school question, which our enemies attempted to settle without being able to do so. We settled that question, and I will speak more fully upon it later.

We reformed the tariff, and by doing so were enabled to diminish the burdens of the people and to increase trade.

We obtained the denunciation of the Belgian and German treaties, and the day we obtained that reform Canada became a nation more than it had been before.

We have reduced the deficit which existed in the Postoffice Department. In 1896, when my friend, Mr. Mulock, Postmaster-General, assumed the direction of that department, there was a deficit of $500,000 to meet. At the end of two years of administration he had reduced the deficit to nearly $500,000. He then thought it time to introduce a reform which the Conservative party had declared impossible. He reduced the rate by one-third, and at the end of one year established an equilibrium, and I venture to predict that in another year he will have completely succeeded in establishing an equilibrium between receipts and expenditure.

We opened up the great mining country which is known as Rossland, by having the railway known as the Crow's Nest Pass Railway constructed. Getting the work done by the Canadian Pacific Railway, we made with that corporation an agreement by which the tariff of freight rates was reduced from 10 to 30 per cent, which had the effect of giving to consumers of that region the means of saving at least $600,000 a year.

We have prolonged the Intercolonial to Montreal, and by so doing we have put an end to the era of deficits and inaugurated an era of surpluses. This year the surplus will be over half a million.

We have completed the construction of canals for the purpose of bringing the products of the west to Montreal, and finally the Laurier Government has made Montreal recognized as the national port of Canada—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, at St. Paul's Park.

Stability...Hugh John Macdonald's Speech Advocating the Abolition of All Duties on Agricultural Implements.

Hugh John Macdonald is admitted by Sir Charles Tupper to be his right hand man. The trip through Ontario they recently took together was for the purpose of introducing the son of the late leader of the Conservative party as the future leader of that party. Disappointing as the tour was, there is no doubt the party would gladly have clutched at him had there been any reason to do so, apart from the fact that he was Hugh John Macdonald. But the effect of the tour was beneficial to the Government. It enabled the people to judge for themselves upon what foundation the Conservative party rested, in Sir Charles Tupper, and upon what they expected to rest, in Hugh John Macdonald.

Sir Charles and his associates separated and Hugh John went to Brandon. There he made the speech that is so much commented on and repudiated by the Toronto World. The Toronto World's report of the speech is as follows:

"Judging from the papers, Mr. Sifton told his audiences in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories that 20 per cent on farm implements was less than a revenue tariff, but Hon. Alexander Mackenzie placed it at a different figure. But the pledge of the Liberal party was not that the duty would be reduced, but that it would be eliminated; that it would be wiped off the state altogether.

"He doubted if there was a chance of any change being made so long as the present Government is in office. He (Mr. Macdonald) was not the leader of a party; he was simply a humble member of that party, and he could not speak for the party, but he could speak for himself, and he would say this: He has influence great or small, but he was a mere nonentity in the eyes of the Liberal press, but in the eyes of the others he was, of course, a little different. (Laughter and applause.) But whatever his influence was, it was under his own control, and he would tell them this, and he was speaking deliberately and not for the purpose of catching votes when he stood there and said that, IF HE WAS ELECTED HE WOULD USE ALL THE INFLUENCE HE POSSESSED TO HAVE EVERY PART OF THE DUTY REMOVED FROM AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS. (Cheers.) He worked for that when he was in the House before, and he saw no reason to change his opinion."

It is quite possible that Hugh John Macdonald did not intend that speech for publication, that he intended it only for Brandon. But when he is introduced as a probable leader of the Conservative party, his utterances must be seriously considered.

What a strong contrast is presented between the conduct of the Laurier Government with reference to the tariff, and this speech. The Liberal leaders have aimed throughout, both while in opposition and since they came into power, at stability. The cry of the Conservative party at the last election was that if they were not retained in power, the Liberal party would make such changes in the tariff as would paralyze industry. The Liberal party said, No; a tariff is necessary; and the changes we will make will benefit the industries of the country. The electors trusted them, and were not deceived. How the country has prospered under their rule is known to everyone. It is necessary to a continuance of prosperity that there should be stability in the tariff. If it is constantly changed, what guarantee would there be for the investment of capital? What certainty would there be of work or wages? Both Capital and Labor are equally interested in maintaining a condition of things found so satisfactory. If Hugh John Macdonald's desires were carried out, what would become of the agricultural implement factories and their workmen? And how prevent other industries from being attacked in turn? There would be smokestack chimneys and plenty of houses to let!

The Government stimulated the industries by reducing the duty on raw material, and it must be plain to everyone that those who made the present tariff were not apprentices, that they have fairly met the wants of the people, and can be trusted to improve wherever an opportunity presents itself. The knowledge that helped to produce the present prosperity can be trusted to do the best that can be done under changed conditions whenever they arise.

The difficulty the electors will have to face is not only the want of stability in the tariff, but a want of stability in the Conservative party. Will Sir Charles Tupper, Mr. Foster and others agree with Mr. Macdonald? Not at all likely, and the result to the country would be more than an unsettled tariff, introducing again the conditions that prevailed under the Conservative administration. We do not think there is any danger of the wholesale abolition of the duty as proposed, but speeches from one who is put forward as the probable leader of the Conservative party, are entitled to be fully considered and their danger pointed out.

By all means let there be as little changing of the tariff as possible. Stability is necessary to security.

"Laurier is too British for me," So says Sir Charles Tupper.

Increase of Canada's trade in July and August, 1900, $7,200,000.

Principal Grant, writing in the Queen's Quarterly just to hand, says: "Laurier is attacked as too English, or not Canadian enough, but people only laugh or get righteously angry as they think of such an attack being made in Quebec! It is such a short time ago since he was attacked as anti-British."

West Middlesex Safe.

W. S. Calvert must have read with quiet satisfaction the report of the Conservative convention for West Middlesex, and the speeches made there. For instance:

"Mr. P. H. Bartlett, of London, said that for the past 15 years he had had the honor of a complimentary nomination, and he was proud of it. There was a fight ahead, and a sacred and important duty was before the people. He was ready, he said, to carry the Conservative banner anywhere sooner than see it go by default. He was delighted to see how the good old fighting Tories had turned out."

Mr. Bartlett was willing to run rather than to see it go by default. His feeling evidently was that opposition to Mr. Calvert was useless, as no doubt it is. The electors of West Middlesex have in Mr. Calvert a representative of much capacity, one who has made himself useful and popular in the House. The experience he has already gained will be valuable to his constituents during the future sessions of parliament, and we quite agree with Mr. Bartlett's estimate of the chances of his opponent.

Sir Charles and His Promises to the Farmers.

The recent manifesto of Sir Charles Tupper to the farmers about all he would like to do for them, has for the most part fallen flat, though some fun is aimed in his direction for the tardiness of his solicitude for the farmers. During his residence in England he did nothing to promote the interests of the farmers, but now, with the hope of thereby getting votes, he promises great things. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues did not simply promise. They acted. In 1896 we sent to Great Britain $907,086 worth of eggs and in 1890 $1,457,992 worth. In 1896, $1,052,689 worth of butter was sent, and in 1890 this had grown to $5,125,556 worth. In 1896 we sent across the Atlantic $3,802,135 worth of bacon, and in 1890 this had grown to $12,411,494 worth. And this is nothing to what is yet to be.

It is rather interesting to see how Sir Charles Tupper's gasconading promises strike a well-informed onlooker. The Detroit Free Press is one of the most influential papers of the continent, and this is what it says:

"In the political contests in this country we sometimes suspect ourselves of promising too much, and we do not care to make such promises. Lola's Secret,
A Romance.

And, to show his displeasure, he kept away from her. Neither in the drawing-room nor in the dining-room did he approach her. She watched him closely, her sweet face growing paler as the hours moved on, and the shadow deepening in her beautiful eyes. He was angry with himself, because he had not sooner discovered the state of his own feelings, with her because she had made what he believed to be a hurried engagement. He could not understand any flirtation, or even of any particular interest in Lord Rhymer. He knew that the squire and the master of Deeping Hurst were good friends, but that was all. He was not a man to be easily deceived, and now she was to be his wife. His faith in all women was staggered.

"I wonder," he said to himself, "if all that men say about women is true. If money and position are all that they care for? This girl with an angel's face is marrying for money, and she looks the very embodiment of love."

Vexed and irritated, yet without any just grounds for these feelings, Sir Karl avoided Dolores; and she, whose last chance was rapidly falling, grew sad at heart. She was standing in the drawing-room, her dress falling in picturesque folds about her slender girlish figure. Behind her was a magnificent group of exotics. She turned, and, while looking at the waxen blossoms, debated within herself whether the night would pass without any speaking to her, or whether, on some pretext, she should address him. She would never lose one iota of her maidenly modesty and dignity; but this was her last opportunity. Until now Sir Karl had always been kind and attentive—he had always contrived, when they met, to have a few minutes tete-a-tete with her; but this evening he did not come near her—only stood aloof, watching her with a look of anger and sadness on his face which was quite unintelligible to her. She was not conscious of having displeased him in any way; and in her own mind she could attribute his manner only to indifference. Lady Fielden, who had been sent by Madame de Ferras to ask Dolores to sing.

"I fear I must ask you to excuse me," said the girl. "do not feel equal to the task this evening."

"You do not look very well," replied

Lady Fielden; "perhaps in a short time you will have recovered sufficiently to favor us."

Lady Fielden had a theory of her own about Dolores. She believed herself well versed in all love matters, and had for some little time entertained the idea that Sir Karl was in love with her.

"In all probability," thought the astute lady, "she will sing for him."

By and by Lady Fielden went up to him.

"Sir Karl," she said, "you will prevail. I am sure, where I have failed. I want you to persuade Miss Clefden to sing for us."

He felt no inclination to accede to her wishes.

"You have failed," he said, quickly. "Then I shall fail, and be more ignominiously."

"I do not think so," said her ladyship, with a peculiar smile. "At least, let me urge you to try."

"You wish me to ask Miss Clefden to sing?" he said, and then, utterly ignoring the fact that he had just watched Dolores intently for the last half hour, he asked, with happy audacity, "But where shall I find Miss Clefden?"

Her ladyship replied promptly: "Do you not see her? Ah, no, that screen of plants hides her from you. Now, do your bidding, and remember that a brave man never takes 'No' for an answer."

Lady Fielden laughed softly to herself as she went away.

"That went straight home," she said to herself. "As though I had never read love in his eyes! I am certain that he likes Dolores Clefden."

Dolores thought that the desire of her heart was to be accomplished at last. Sir Karl was making his way to her. Her heart throbbed and her face flushed; then a great, almost solemn calm came over her. If he cared for her, she was sure that in some vague manner she would discover it.

He did not look very happy; the ring had gone from his voice and the laughter from his face. In brief words he told his errand, adding:

"I fear I shall ask in vain. If Lady Fielden could not persuade you, it is hardly likely that I shall be more successful."

She looked up at him with a smile. "Since you ask me, and it will please you," she replied, "I will sing—but not at present. The room is so terribly warm. I wonder if I could get an fan?"

He took the hint and offered his arm, and they went in search of refreshments. Sir Karl found Dolores a seat, and then, remembering her resolution that she would be neither cold, shy nor proud, as she took of the fan and fruit he had brought her, she talked to him brightly and gayly. The more brilliantly she chatted, however, the darker grew his face. He said to himself:

"It is all very well for her; she can be happy and bright—she has no regrets. She is going to marry for money, and she has secured one of the wealthiest men in England for a husband."

Just face grew darker and darker. She saw it and her heart failed her. She remembered how interested he had looked when Lola talked to him. Gradually silence fell upon them both.

"I am afraid, Miss Clefden, that you do not find my society very entertaining," Sir Karl remarked presently.

"I do not remember ever to have known you so silent before, certainly," she said, with a forced laugh.

Just then a musical voice near them exclaimed:

"What a melancholy tete-a-tete! Sir Karl I could not imagine where you were. Do you remember having promised to arrange a charade for us?"

"Did I? I am afraid I must ask you to enlist the services of someone more competent. I am not quite myself to-night."

"Nonsense!" said Lola, gaily. "That is like a bad riddle. If you are not yourself, who are you? I cannot let you off your bargain. I have set my heart on a charade, and what I have set my heart on I must have."

She looked so bewitchingly defiant that it was impossible to refuse her. A moment later she went up to some vases and took from them two flowers. One was a white rose and the other a red one.

"This white rose is called 'Queen Marie,' she said, 'and the red one is 'Erin's Pride.' Which will you have, Sir Karl?"

Sir Karl had been plucked and hurt; he thought only of giving a passing glance of vexation to the girl whom he really loved; but by one trial act he decided her destiny and his own. Dolores watched him with wistful pain. If he took the white rose she would know that he loved her best; if not—

Lola looked with great shining eyes into his face.

"Take your choice," she said, and he took from her hand the deep crimson rose, 'Erin's Pride.'

No one saw that the fair young face grew deathly white, that the golden head drooped for a moment, that Dolores raised it with proud, careless grace.

"Played Out"

Is one of the curious expressions used for worked out. Many a woman drops into a chair, in utter weariness "all in any way; and in her own mind she could attribute his manner only to indifference. Lady Fielden, who had been sent by Madame de Ferras to ask Dolores to sing.

THE DELAWARE FALL FAIR

Attended by an Immense Crowd of Visitors.

Outshines All Its Predecessors in Point of Attendance and Entries—Splendid Displays in All the Departments.

September and October are months sacred to country fairs, and this year the various exhibitions in Middlesex have been far in advance of previous years, both in point of attendance and in the displays in the various departments.

The show held at the village of Delaware yesterday was one of the most successful of the long list of successful fall fairs. As soon as the calendar begins to wear down towards the latter days of September, the directors of the Delaware Agricultural Society start to get things in shape for their annual show, which grows larger and better every year.

The weather was all that could be desired for a day's outing, and the attendance was in advance of any previous show held by the society, and that is saying a great deal, as this exhibition has always been noted for the large crowds that it attracts. The exhibits were larger than usual, and on the whole of a much better quality, the grain and fruits being particularly fine.

The entry list showed about 250 more entries than last year. There is lots of fun and enjoyment to be held at a country fair, and everybody seemed to be pleased with the various attractions offered yesterday.

Side-shows of every kind and description were on hand early in the morning, and had their little tent spread with their wares hidden from view, in readiness for the crowds that began to arrive about noon. Then came the men with cream canny, pop-corn and peanuts, and the men with souvenir stands, where the proper and appropriate things seem to be war medals, cheap looking-glasses, sea shells, bangles and pins.

The refreshment stands were twin brothers to those seen at the circus. The same cheap, colored candies and really good taffy, the same luscious sandwiches, and the same weak lemonade were offered in endless quantities. Music was furnished by the Melbourne Brass Band.

THE EXHIBITS.

Ontario has been favored with an abundant harvest this year, and as a result the grain displays were exceptionally good. There was also a fine display of roots and potatoes. In the town hall, where the pictures, flowers, fruits, fancy work and dairy produce were shown, centered the interest of most of the women, and they crowded the aisles, and good-naturedly worried the judges from early morn until close of the day.

The fancy work department was filled with specimens of all sorts of sofa pillows, embroideries, baby-clothes, quilts and pretty novelties, that none but feminine minds could ever conceive or appreciate. The hall was tastefully decorated inside, the pillars and rafters being bound around with sheaves of corn and boughs of pine, and the piles of fruit and vegetables were wonderfully appetizing. They were of the finest, and well polished until they shone like mirrors.

There was also an excellent display of dairy produce, canned fruit, pickles, home-made bread, paintings, flowers, etc.

The exhibit of cattle and pigs was large, and some very fine animals were shown. The show of live stock at the Delaware Fair is always one of the most attractive features, and yesterday's display was no exception. There was also a fine exhibit of horses, including heavy draft, agricultural, carriage and saddle, and poultry display was a splendid one, many prize birds being exhibited.

Following are the officers of the agricultural society, who have worked so faithfully to bring the exhibition to a successful termination. They are to be congratulated on the splendid results of their efforts.

L. W. KNA PP, M.D.

How any man may quickly cure himself after years of suffering from sexual weakness, lost vitality, night losses, varicocele, etc., and enlarge small weak organs to full size and vigor. Simply send your name and address to Dr. L. W. Knapp, 2063 Hull Building, Detroit, Mich., and he will gladly send the free receipt with full directions so that any man may easily cure himself at home. This is certainly a most generous offer, and the following extracts taken from his daily mail show what men think of his generosity: "Dear Sir,—Please accept my sincere thanks for yours of recent date. I have given your treatment a thorough test and the benefit has been extraordinary. It has completely braced me up. I am just as vigorous as when a boy and you cannot realize how happy I am."

"Dear Sir,—Your method worked beautifully. Results were exactly what I needed. Strength and vigor have completely returned and enlargement is entirely satisfactory."

"Dear Sir,—Yours was received and I had no trouble making use of the receipt as directed, and can truthfully say it is a boon to weak men. I am greatly improved in size, strength and vigor."

All correspondence is strictly confidential, mailed in plain, sealed envelope. The receipt is free for the asking and he wants every man to have it.

Watch for the advertisement of the
CANADA BUSINESS COLLEGE, CHATHAM, ONT.

which is to appear in next Saturday's issue of this paper. It will show you what this school is doing in qualifying its pupils to fill choice positions, and assisting them to find these places when they are ready.

12 of our pupils secured good positions during July and August of this year. Saturday's ad will contain half the list, showing where they are placed; the others will appear the following Saturday. Watch for it if you are interested.

220 of our pupils secured good positions in the ten months ending July 1, 1900. We can send you the list showing where they were placed.

While other business schools are claiming to be doing considerable in the way of assisting their pupils, yet no other school is the only business school that publishes a list of pupils placed, so that the public can be satisfied as to the truth of the claim.

Write for our handsome catalogue if interested.

by the sergeants of the 7th Regiment ranged hurriedly, but was none the less enjoyable. The sergeants, as a crowd, are jolly fellows, who can sing capital songs and enjoy themselves immensely, and this fact was never illustrated better than last night. Sergt.

Hessel related some of his experiences in Africa, and in this way a very happy time was spent.
