

AGGIE THOMAS, A LONDON WOMAN, SHOT AND KILLED PHILIP GILBERT AT WIARTON, ONT.Claims She Was Assaulted
—Pleads Self-DefenseWas Ordered to Leave the Town and RefusedWoman Was in Company With Stella Baker, of London—Is Well-Known Here.

Mrs. Agnes Thomas, of this city, who has been stopping with Mrs. J. H. McClintock (nee Miss Stella Baker), at Wiarton, last night shot and killed a resident of that place named Philip Gilbert. She was immediately arrested and placed in jail. She claims she shot Gilbert in self-defense.

Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. McClintock are well known in London. They have, it is alleged, been going from place to place camping, having been at Kincardine during the week of the old boys' reunion there, and finally ending up in Wiarton.

The people of Wiarton knew them and according to dispatches received from that place, objected to their presence.

The women had been warned to leave the town, but they took no heed of the warning, and last night Gilbert recruited a vigilance committee, and undertook to drive them out of the place.

A Posse Organized.
According to one story the posse went to where the women were camping—a place known as "The Rocks," and ordered them to leave forthwith. The campers refused, and Gilbert and his posse began to tear down the tent. It was then, it is alleged, that Mrs. Thomas pulled a 32-caliber revolver and shot Gilbert, the man dying instantly.

Another story is to the effect that the posse tore the tent down and then began to abuse the women.

A Different Story.
It is alleged that the crowd used rotten eggs on the campers, and that finally Gilbert struck Mrs. Thomas as she was lying on the ground.

She then pulled the revolver and fired three shots at her assailant, all of them lodging in vital places. He died instantly.

According to this latter dispatch, the women were camping in a suburb of Wiarton called "Vogantville," and they had given offense to the Wiarton people by their actions.

Lynch Talk.
The crowd after the shooting talked of lynching Mrs. Thomas, but Chief of Police Hull was sent for, and he immediately placed her under arrest.

She was cool under the circumstances, and stoutly maintained that she had been assaulted by Gilbert, and that she shot him in self-defense.

Gilbert was a middle-aged bachelor, who had resided in Wiarton all his life. He was very respectable, and his death has aroused the town to a high state of excitement.

Came From Goderich.

Mrs. Thomas was born near Goderich, Ont., and has spent nearly all her life in or about the different cities and towns of Western Ontario. For many years she resided in Owen Sound, where it is believed she was married. Her husband, according to a statement which she made to the police in this city some time ago, is at present living in a western city. She also claimed that one son a young man of 22 years, then resided in Owen Sound.

Here a Year.

About a year ago Mrs. Thomas came to this city from Stratford, where she had been living for a short time. While here Mrs. Thomas, along with several other women was arrested in a disorderly house on Richmond street north.

Ordered to Leave London.

The outcome of her arrest was that she was ordered to leave the city. Although Mrs. Thomas at the time com-

Stratford Record of Aggie Thomas

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Stratford, Aug. 21.—Agnes Thomas, who shot and killed Philip Gilbert at Wiarton, was a notorious local character, having resided here on several occasions. She has a lengthy police record, and driven from the city by the police authorities. Her companion, Stella Baker, also mentioned in the Wiarton dispatch, shares her unenviable record, and has appeared in police court along with Mrs. Thomas a number of times. The younger woman was in the city this week for a few hours, but the local police have maintained a constant vigil over their actions while here, and have frustrated every effort on their part to locate. The women camped on the outskirts of the city during the Old Boys' reunion last August, and were fined and driven out at the time. Mrs. Thomas is a native of Owen Sound, but resided in Goderich for several years, where she gained an unsavory reputation. Her son, Lorne Thomas, was sent to the Kingston Penitentiary by the Stratford authorities on a two-year sentence for a diamond robbery which occurred some time ago.

Mrs. Thomas is a woman of between 40 and 50 years.

Foresters' Reports Show Prosperity

The morning's session of the Com-panions of the Forest, A. O. F., held in the Foresters' Hall, was taken up chiefly with the reports of officers and committees. The most important of these reports was that of the treasurer. The report showed that the total number of members of this branch of the order was 1,870, an increase of 152 over last year. The total worth of funds on hand was $17,533.49, an increase of $3,708.96 during the past two years. All the reports rendered were of the most encouraging nature, and the order was shown to be in a most prosperous condition. Yesterday afternoon, Mayor Judd extended the greetings of the city to the delegates. Mr. F. J. Darch also spoke on behalf of the A. O. F. After the conclusion of this part of the programme the local lodges of the A. O. F. entertained the delegates to a trolley ride around the city and a ride to Springbank. An informal banquet was held on their arrival at Springbank, and a very pleasant time was spent. A moonlight ride to the city completed the day's outing.

FOREIGN TRADE
JUMPS $22,000,000
Wonderful Showing Made During
First Four Months of Fiscal Year.

Ottawa, Aug. 21.—Canada's foreign trade totaled $214,556,615 for the first four months of the current fiscal year, beginning April 1. This is an increase of $22,500,045 over the corresponding period of last year. During the four months the imports totaled $131,363,070, an increase of $25,610,424. Imports of dutiable goods totaled $77,716,121, an increase of $15,470,746. Free imports totaled $71,720,825, an increase of $9,703,760. Duty collected amounted to $20,398,734, an increase of $4,214,435.

There was a decrease of $1,948,653 in the volume of exports, which totaled $82,562,94. However, exports are now showing a tremendous increase, and it is expected that the remaining months of the year will more than make up for the falling off of the first few months. During the four months exports of products of the mine showed an increase of $745,832; agricultural products showed an increase of $3,847,874.

The decreases in exports for the period were: Fish, $546,150; lumber, $70,235; animals and their products, $502,573; manufactures, $324,148.

During the month of July the volume of exports took a remarkable jump of $11,774,651, totaling for the month $27,723,559. Exports of products of the mine showed for the month an increase of three and a half millions; products of the fisheries an increase for the month of three-quarters of a million.

BACK FROM ICELAND.
Copenhagen, Aug. 21.—King Frederick returned here today from Iceland, accompanied by the parliamentary party which made a trip into the interior of the island with his majesty. The king was welcomed in the sound by a fleet of excursion and other vessels having on board about 30,000 persons.

7th Regiment Will Go to Buffalo in September as Guests of That City

Big Time Ahead of the Boys
During Bison City's Old Home Week.

The Seventh Regiment will go to Buffalo on Sept. 4 and 5, as the guests of the citizens of Buffalo during Old Home week. Messrs. G. W. Lemon and A. C. Abraham, of Buffalo, were in the city yesterday, and interviewed the officers of the regiment, with the result that the latter at a meeting held last night, unanimously decided to take the trip. The Buffalo men agreed to pay all expenses, and made other satisfactory arrangements.

Col. Frank Reid and the other officers are delighted with the arrangements, and they confidently expect the regiment to go to Buffalo with full strength, about 400 men.

Wednesday, Sept. 4, is Canadians' Day in Buffalo, and many Canadians will take part in the programme. Besides the Seventh Regiment, the Thirtieth Regiment of Hamilton will form part of the great Canadian parade, the feature of the day.

No details have yet been settled as to the character of the testimonial or the date when it will be presented.

A REVOLUTIONARY JEW
BADLY SCARES TANGIER

Tangier, Aug. 21.—A sensational incident occurred during the celebration of noonday prayers at the Grand Mosque of Fiddid at Fez yesterday. A soldier suddenly showed, "May Allah render our master Mullah Mohammed, victorious."

Mohammed is the Sultan's brother, and as the public proclamation of a new Sultan in a mosque, while the Sultan is living, is traditionally the signal for a revolution. The faithful who were at prayers fled in fright into the streets, creating a general panic. In a short time all the shops were closed and the Jews barricaded themselves in their residences. The troops on duty at the mosque seized the soldier who created the disturbance. It developed that he was a converted Jew, and was beaten unmercifully and dragged off, covered with blood, to prison, where probably he will be quickly flogged. Later calm was restored in the city.

ALLEGED HORSE THIEF
COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Squire Chittick this morning committed J. R. Hardy, of Queen's County, Nova Scotia, on a charge of having on the 14th of this month stolen a horse valued at $200 from Jos. McKay, a Plympton farmer.

Evidence on another charge of horse-stealing against Hardy will be taken tomorrow morning.

Hardy was arrested near Dutton by Constable Clark a few days ago on information furnished by Hign Constable Hughes.

No Encouragement for Teachers
If Such a Principle Is To Be Followed.

Mr. Wm. Jones, an ex-alderman and former water commissioner, is another prominent citizen who roundly condemns the action of the clique on the board of education in appointing Mr. McCutcheon principal of the Collegiate.

He disapproves of it in the most emphatic manner, and openly declares that the principle followed by the Mac-

Robert faction has no place in educational affairs. Long service and ripe experience count for nothing with such men, Mr. Jones said today.

"I most emphatically condemn the action of the board of education," he declared to an Advertiser reporter. "There is no encouragement for teachers at all if such a course is followed by the board of education. I believe in the policy of promotion. Faithful and efficient services should have their reward. It is not necessary to discuss the question at any great length, but I do want to say that the action of the board admits of no justification whatever."

THE PERIL AT FEZ.

San Sebastian, Aug. 21.—Count De Alende Salazar, the foreign minister, has announced that Great Britain, France, Germany and Spain have instructed their respective consuls at Fez to leave, together with their countrymen, when they judge the Moroccan situation to be dangerous.

WEATHER NOTES.

The pressure is comparatively low over the Gulf of St. Lawrence and in the far Northwest, but the pressure as a rule is decidedly high over the greater portion of the continent. Showers have occurred locally from Ontario to the Maritime Provinces, but for the most part they have been very light. The temperature fell to freezing point in a few places in the Western Provinces during the night.

ALL MOROCCO
VERGES ON REVOLTFrench Troops Worn Out and Reinforcements To Be Rushed.

Paris, Aug. 21.—The Moroccan situation is regarded here as having assumed a distinctly more serious aspect. The ferment in the interior of Morocco, the proclamation of Mullah Hafid, the Sultan's brother, as sultan, by a section of the rebels, and the appearance of a new Moorish army before Casablanca, have created the fear that the whole country will soon be ablaze with fanaticism. Gen. Drude, commander of the French forces at Casablanca, has now practically asked for reinforcements, pointing out that his men are worn out with being constantly under arms, but especially insisting that he is losing the advantage gained by his successes, because the limited force at his disposal prevents him from following up his victories. The Government appreciates the justice of the argument, and although orders to forward additional troops to Morocco had not been issued up to noon today, the Government is expected to decide on this step before night.

Over 1,000 colonial infantry, cavalry and troops of other arms have been mobilized at Oran, and are ready to embark on board transports, and in readiness at Mediterranean ports to sail immediately for Morocco.

ROW OVER WINDOWS

Mr. John Jones Wants the City To Put in the Glass.

Mr. John Jones, the King street harnessmaker, whose window was broken a couple of weeks ago by a team becoming frightened and running into it when the firemen of the central station were called out on an alarm, is seeking to have the city replace the windows. There appears to be a dispute as to who is liable, and the man who owned the runaway horses will only agree to replace the sashes.

Mayor Judd advised Mr. Jones to put in the glass, and then look to someone to make good the damage. In the meantime, Mr. Jones has boards over his windows.

VOLIVA'S PARADISE

Arranging to Take the Zionites to New Mexico.

Chicago, Aug. 21.—Overseer Wilbur Glenn Voliva, leader of the Zionites, started yesterday for the new home of his followers near Las Vegas, San Miguel County, N. M.

Accompanying Overseer Voliva were Theodore Forsy, John A. Taylor and George Bright, his close lieutenants and advisers.

It is planned that Voliva shall remain in New Mexico until a place has been prepared for such of his followers as care to go to the new "paradise."

Already 3,442 acres of land has been purchased. At least 5,000 acres of land, it is said, will be added to this tract.

WOULD COST $21 A DAY TO CLEAR AND SCRAPE WATER FILTERSExpert Titus Gives Some Interesting Information in Regard to the Many River Water Schemes —Dangers of Typhoid.

Mr. Silas W. Titus, the Brooklyn water expert, who made the city of London a proposition to supply the city with water from artesian wells, does not appear to be disheartened by the fact that when the mail order vote was taken the Titus scheme secured only 77 votes. He announces that it is not his intention to withdraw from the field, but that he intends to go ahead and endeavor to show the people of London that his proposition is a good one, and that he can deliver all the water the city wants from wells in this district.

Important Points.
In a letter to The Advertiser, Mr. Titus brings out some important points in regard to filtration which are worthy of the closest attention on the part of the people of London. He points out the dangers that are encountered in filtered water, such as typhoid fever, and also to the great expense of maintaining a filtration plant.

The cost of cleaning and scraping the filters is, he says, from $7 to $9 per 1,000,000 gallons, which means from $21 to $27 a day, on this account alone, if the city of London should use 3,000,000 gallons daily of filtered water.

Mr. Titus says he is prepared to substantiate all of his statements, and he suggests that if there is any doubt in regard to any of them that the city of London should send a deputation to Washington, D. C., Albany, N. Y., and Philadelphia, Pa., for the purpose of securing information regarding the cost and dangers of filtration plants.

The Letter.
Mr. Titus' letter is as follows: To the Editor of The Advertiser: I would like to make a few statements in regard to Mr. Maury's claim that the cost of my scheme will greatly exceed the filtration plant, both in cost of operation and in installation. I note that he also goes on to state that I have a poor opinion of the efficiency of modern filtration. He is quite right in this, and this opinion is not based on my own ideas, but is based on actual results obtained in various cities.

Filtration Facts.
In the first place, as regards slow sand filtration, take the instance of the Washington, D. C., plant, on which the Government has spent a great deal of money, no expense has been considered, and in the course of which they had the best consulting engineers and experts on sand filtration; among

The entire superstructure of the old bridge over the Thames on the London and Port Stanley Railway has been removed, and the workmen are now engaged in putting in the new trestle.

The new bridge will have no upper works whatever. A center abutment having been placed in the river, the bridge will be simply a trestle, with, it is understood, six-foot girders. As soon as this job is completed,

FROM A TRAIN

Mail Sacks Taken From Burlington, Between Denver and Oxford, Neb.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 20.—Three registered mail sacks containing about a quarter of a million dollars disappeared from the Burlington train between Denver and Oxford, Neb., last Sunday night, and the postoffice officials have just made the theft public.

The train left Denver with seven sacks, and but four remained when it reached Oxford. Detectives and postoffice officials are at work on the case.

Superintendent J. M. Butler of the sixth division of railway mail clerks believes the robbery took place just west of the Nebraska line. Both mail clerks were asleep while the train was passing over the long stretches of track with few stations.

Butler believes someone slipped into the mail car and threw three sacks out of the window. He has ascertained that the valuables were all in two of the sacks, one being empty.

Postoffice officials have all been warned to be cautious about giving out information on the robbery.

BETTERING RUSSIA'S RAILROADS

St. Petersburg, Aug. 21.—The minister of railways has submitted to the council of ministers a scheme for improvements in the state railways, which is proposed to carry out during 1908-1912. The total estimated expense is $458,000,000, divided among five annual budgets. The principal items are doubling tracks, $46,000,000; bridges and embankments $30,000,000; station $55,000,000; workshops $52,000,000; re-railing $30,000,000; rolling stock $151,000,000.

BRILLIANT EVA'S ENGLISH CAREER

Revised Her Name to Agree With That of Earl.

LIVED HIGH FOR SOME TIME

Tricked One Hotel and Tradesman After Another and Finally Made Good Her Escape.

London, Aug. 20.—The detention in New York of "Mrs. Eva Fox-Strangways," who passed herself in America as the daughter of an earl and succeeded in obtaining the confidence of persons prominent socially in New York and Philadelphia, recalls her career here.

She was a fascinating young Englishwoman, and represented herself to be the Hon. Eva Fox-Strangways, the daughter of the Earl of Ilchester. With nothing to help her but her wits and an undeniable charm of manner, she succeeded in living at the rate of $50,000 a year without visible means of support.

"Miss Fox-Strangways," before her visit to the American aristocracy, was staying in London at one of the most fashionable and select of the West-end hotels.

Miss Strangways, which is her correct name, is a well-educated and extremely self-possessed young woman—a striking brunette, plump of face and figure, with alluring eyes and determined manner.

She is—although she does not admit it—of humble origin.

Eva Strangways' first step toward improving her position in life was to add the prefix "Fox" to her previously undistinguished surname. This unauthorized change gave her the family name—Fox-Strangways—of the Earl of Ilchester, who owns large estates around her native place.

For some years the girl was in receipt of a handsome income owing to the friendships she made and the confidence she inspired by reason of her social charms. Motor cars, yachting trips and society functions, with expensive entertainments at first-class hotels all over the continent, were enjoyed by the "Hon. Eva," to whom the quiet, well-ordered life of a governess or school teacher did not appeal at all.

Afterwards the "Hon. Eva" was thrown entirely on her own resources, and sought to earn fresh fame by contributing articles on her "travels" to magazines and posing as famous woman shooter of "big game." She was able to persuade many wealthy and well-connected people that she was all she claimed, and her very boldness was her greatest safeguard.

Told Tales to Suit Occasions.

She told various tales to suit her ever-changing companions. One of her stories was that she owned parts of Achill Island, some 32,000 acres of land, off County Mayo, Ireland, and that she traveled for pleasure, and to do good to the poor.

To others she said she was touring the world for an important London weekly newspaper, and to those unacquainted with journalism she stated that she owned an important English newspaper, which she edited "from a distance."

In September of last year she wrote from a Winchester address to a West End hotel, asking for "good rooms," and giving as her country seat a high-sounding Hampshire address, which has since proved to be a boarding-house, where she also owes money.

She ordered and drove about in motor-cars at the expense of the hotel, and made a tour of the leading Regent street and Bond street shops. Within a few days she ordered $50 worth of dresses and knick-knacks, which she instructed the hotel to pay for. As in some cases bills for as much as $200 in a week are settled for any well-known visitor to the hotel, this request was regarded as in no way unusual or suspicious.

At the end of the week the "Hon. Eva" who had been entertaining "friends" in private rooms, gave a check for $200 for her bill, and obtained a few pounds change, before she vanished.

After swift and profitable visits to Mallock and Winchester, she removed her luggage, and was off to Manchester, and thence to Liverpool, with men from Pinkerton's, the American detective agency, now hot at her heels.

It was at this crisis, when the game seemed up, that the "Hon. Eva" proved that her nerve and assurance were equal to most emergencies. She convinced the justly indignant hotel proprietors that she was about to marry a fabulously rich New Yorker, and that she must at once cross the Atlantic at any cost, but that she would return and spend her honeymoon—regardless of money—at the hotel that trusted to her honor!

She was allowed to leave Liverpool on the strength of this promise, and followed by a zealous Pinkerton detective, who was calling her immediate attention to dishonored checks. She had at that moment neither money nor ticket, but she mingled with the saloon passengers of the big Cunard liner, and with some dignity turned an apparently deaf ear to the shadowing detective.

The pursuer, who had heard something of the embarrassing situation, then politely inquired for her ticket. "I have none," replied the "Hon. Eva" indignantly.

"Then I must trouble you for the money, madam," replied the pursuer. "I will give you a post-dated check for the amount in full," said the lady promptly, ignoring the detective and his pointed inquiries about long-drawn checks held by his clients.

"I am sorry, madam," replied the pursuer, "but the lady was in no way ruffled."

"You shall have the money before you leave Queenstown or I will then go ashore and wait for the next boat."

was all she said, and calmly went down to supper in the saloon.
Man Pays Her Passage.

At Queenstown the pursuer sent for the lady and told her, kindly but firmly, she must go ashore.
It was then the "Hon. Eva" Fox-Strangways rose to the occasion. Her luggage had been sent ashore on one tender and she was requested to leave the ship on the second and last tender, without further appeal.

At this moment a gentleman, whose sympathies had been enlisted by her moving tale of distress, went to the pursuer on her behalf and guaranteed the money. In this fashion the "Earl's daughter" crossed to New York—the life and soul of a merry Atlantic party.

When the Campana berthed in New York docks another detective was sitting on Miss Strangways' luggage to ask further awkward questions, which she waved aside, or answered as the occasion demanded. She declared she was going to well-connected friends at Westover, Virginia. Later it was found she, indeed, went there, not as a guest, but as a governess, and was discharged almost immediately, because of her intemperate habits.

RAISULI TELLS TALE OF WRONGS

Says He Was Started on Career of Brigandage by Sultan's Treachery.

London, Aug. 20.—"How I became an outlaw" is the story Raisuli told a special correspondent of the Daily Mail the other day.

His first quarrel with the Government was through a former Basha of Tangier, who oppressed him and seized his property. Raisuli was thrown into prison at Mogador, and remained there for five years. Finally he was set free and went back to his village.

"What did I find?" Not a vestige of my possessions remained. I took no measures of revenge, but put myself under the wing of the Government. Bargash (the new Basha) promised restitution. That promise was never fulfilled.

Despairing of justice I went to the tribe Gharbia, six hours from Tangier, where I had a farm. My intention was to collect a few cattle and devote myself to agriculture. Bargash sent men to surround my farm, and when I came out they fired on me. I complained to Tangier and had no reply. Friends wrote that the Government was bent on my destruction.

Some time later, when the hill tribes were in revolt, he managed to pacify them, for he was loyal to the Government. He hoped thus to prove that he was no outlaw.

"What followed?" he continued. "Soldiers camped near my village. I thought they had come to investigate my claims. No. They attacked my village, took me by surprise, and burned and sacked the village. That was my reward. I was forced to flee to the people of my ancestors, the Aros tribe. A reward was offered for me dead or alive, but none were tempted. Soldiers moved into the country of the Beni Aros, pillaging, plundering and murdering.

"When I saw how the people were oppressed I went secretly to Tangier and stole a Christian, Perdicaris. This I did that Europe might know how I was persecuted and hunted down. I did not want open war with the Government, so I thought a Christian the best weapon. My idea and hope was that Europe would investigate, for I knew that Europeans are just and will see that justice is done."

He then dealt with his capture of Sir Harry Maclean. At the first interview Sir Harry said: "I have come to learn your grievances. The Sultan wants you to go to Fez."

Tale of Treachery.

"We parted," continues Raisuli, "and I came to El Khmes and conferred with my people. They thought I should accept the proposal, and I accordingly wrote to Maclean at Fez. "But, behold, even while these courtesies were being exchanged, a maula swooped down upon my village of Zinat, near Tangier, seized my crops of wheat and barley, and carried off to prison some of my relatives. How could I reconcile the words of Maclean with these acts?"

"All these things I hid in my heart. Maclean came, and we met between the El Sereef and Erhoan tribes. I told him what the others had been doing to me and mine. 'You say I can go safely to Fez. If these things are done before I place myself in the hands of the Sultan, what will happen when I reach Fez?' Maclean showed me a letter in which the Sultan gave guarantee. It was a very good letter."

"Maclean said a similar letter had been sent to El Guebba (the minister for war). Now it happened that a copy of the letter to El Guebba had come into my hands. It was not in the least like the letter brought by Maclean. The Sultan's letter to El Guebba said that if I did not go to Fez the minister of war was to send a maula to attack me, to seize my property and person, and to persecute me with the utmost vigor. The action of El Guebba and this letter convinced me and my people that the ministers meant treachery and had laid a trap for me."

"They sought to betray me, therefore I betrayed Maclean. I took him by a trick, desiring to avoid violence, as the Kaid is an old man and had acted honestly with me."

"Now Maclean is in my possession, and will be kept in 'Aman, Aman, Aman' (that is, in perfect safety). No harm shall befall him till the British Government say what they propose to do."

"The British people now know how I have been oppressed, and have taken these measures to call attention to my wrongs. I know the British Government is powerful as well as just. Before them I lay my griefs."

"I have not taken Maclean for money. Had I wanted money there was Tangier in my hands, with its banks, merchants, and wealth."

"No, it is not money I want, but justice, justice, justice."

LADY EXPLORER'S WONDERFUL FEAT

She Travels in Caucasus Where No Englishwoman Ever Went Before.

London, Aug. 20.—After a journey to the Caucasus, where, accompanied only by two Italian guides, she traversed a dangerous country where no Englishwoman had previously set foot, Miss Constance Barnicoat, the well-known lady traveler, returned to London on Wednesday.

Miss Barnicoat had intended to add to her mountaineering exploits, but, as she told a Morning Leader representative, illness prevented her doing much climbing. She, therefore, went exploring, and had some interesting experiences.

The little party of three, on crossing the frontier from Vienna, made first for Platagorsk, a South Russian watering-place which the traveler could scarcely denounce sufficiently. It is a place of drainage, no sanitation, no accommodation, atrocious food, filthy streets, and no security of life or property. Robberies take place nightly, and murders are a peculiar accompaniment, notwithstanding the prevailing martial law.

Leaving this wretched den with thankfulness, Miss Barnicoat proceeded to "Troika," the mountains—a three-days' journey. During this part of the trip she slept (on ground wet with the constant rain) in a tent in the open, but at the end of the three days they reached a Tartar village, and were hospitably entertained at the guest-house.

Kindly Tartars. The guest-house if a primitive building which all Tartar villages of any pretensions keep just outside their own boundaries for the entertainment of passing travelers. It has a hard, but clean, bed, and food is provided by the village in generous quantity, though to the unfamiliar palate it is of poor and unwholesome quality. The tea is good, but the black bread and the Circassian cheese make sad eating.

Villagers, however, are extremely offended if the guest fails to do justice to the entertainment, and rather than hurt their hospitable feelings Miss Barnicoat tackled the fare with what courage she could muster. The aspect of her hosts was not a little unnerving, for all the men carried huge knives besides revolvers and sundry other weapons, which were disposed conspicuously.

Through the bad weather Miss Barnicoat caught a chill at this place and was detained for several days. When she was sufficiently recovered she pushed on to Mount Elbruz, whose double peaks reach an altitude of over 18,000 feet, but her strength was still inadequate to the task of climbing, and she had to be content with letting the guides make the ascent. In the circumstances she thought it unwise to cross the mountains, for the best known of the passes is infested with murderous brigands and so the party turned back to Platagorsk.

Miss Barnicoat gained much instruction as to the amazing state of lawlessness and backwardness prevailing in Southern Russia. All foreigners agree that the Russian in the part of the empire has no more self-governing capacity than a child.

New View of "Liberty."

On the day that the constitution was proclaimed at one town, a soldier exclaimed, "We are free now! I will go and shoot my officer!" which he did. It was his conception of liberty, and will stand as a type of the peasant's reasoning in Southern Russia.

Food, besides being very bad, was very dear; all wines were the victims of even the "best people." Miss Barnicoat vividly described the Russian officers at the restaurants gnawing chicken bones like a larger sort of dog. Then the quantity of "palm greasing" necessary in all walks of life is a thing to despair over.

Twice, on the South Russian "express" (so-called), she saw it stop a long time at every station. Miss Barnicoat had to pay extras for "the speed of the train"—and without noticeable acceleration of the pace, either. It is much the cheaper way to travel without a ticket; nobody checks you as you enter the train, and by bribing the conductor with something good to eat, you can get away with a ticket. Altogether it is a comic country, which Miss Barnicoat cannot recommend to pleasure-seekers.

BIG BET ON SPEED DREAM

Santos-Dumont Wagers $10,000 He Will Sail 100 Miles an Hour.

Paris, Aug. 20.—Last winter M. Ernest Archdeacon, the well-known automobilist and aeronaut, bet M. Charron, of similar attainments and fame, that by May last inventors would succeed in going at the rate of 75 kilometers per hour on water. M. Charron won the bet, and thereupon invited M. Archdeacon, M. Santos-Dumont and a number of other sporting celebrities to dinner at a restaurant in the Bois de Boulogne.

In the course of the banquet speed was again discussed, and some of the party said that if more time had been given M. Archdeacon he would probably have won the bet. M. Santos-Dumont took this view and made the following declaration: "I will wager 50,000 francs against M. Charron's 5,000 francs that before eight months are up I myself will be traveling at the rate of 100 miles an hour on water."

This wager was accepted with much enthusiasm, but M. Santos-Dumont declined to explain how he was to accomplish the feat. Instead, he said that he was ready to join M. Archdeacon in a wager of 5,000 francs that before six months were up an aeroplane will have accomplished a flight of 500 metres. This challenge was also accepted by M. Charron.

The 11-chin people in the north are reported to be again putting up the hair in a topknot and donning the hair band.

RAGPICKERS' DUEL

Love Rivalry Leads to Fight to the Death on a Roof.

Paris, Aug. 20.—The Rue Carot at Vanves was the scene on Sunday of a fatal love duel, the adversaries being ragpickers.

Leon Morille and Gustave Dubray courted the same young woman, and as both could not have her they fell to hating each other. A few months ago they fought with their fists, but Morille grew weary of giving and receiving blows which brought no blood, and stabbed Dubray with a knife. The wound was not serious. From that moment the young men swore that when next they fought it would be to the death.

They met face to face on Sunday. The next moment they had drawn their revolvers. Morille rushed up stairs and gained the roof. Dubray remained in the yard. Then the duel began. The man on the roof fired at his rival who, without troubling to seek cover, replied with shot for shot. A neighbor named Bon appeared on the scene, and tried to persuade Dubray to give up the encounter. The latter refused. Suddenly M. Bon fell to the ground. A bullet from the revolver of the man on the roof had entered his heart. He died while he was being conveyed to the Broussais Hospital.

The duellists were arrested and taken before a police commissary, who ultimately sent them to the depot.

Catarrh

Whether it is of the nose, throat, stomach, bowels, or more delicate organs, catarrh is always debilitating and should never fall of attention.

It is a discharge from the mucous membrane when kept in a state of inflammation by an impure, commonly scrofulous, condition of the blood.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cures all forms of catarrh, radically and permanently—it removes the cause and overcomes all the effects. Get Hood's.

WATFORD REUNION CELEBRATION

Terminates in a Blaze of Glory.

Watford, Aug. 20.—The Old Boys' reunion is a matter of history now, and the greatest celebration the town has yet known is over. It passed in a blaze of glory, with a crowd in attendance that surpassed the fondest hopes of those in charge. Today was advertised to be the best day, and it lived up to press notices, and a little more, as fully 6,000 people were crowded together in the little town. President Farrell and Secretary Harry Williams looked after the comfort of their friends, with the result that there was nothing to mar the day's proceedings. The weather man threatened to break up the amusement, rain falling rather generously until noon, when the sky brightened and a fine afternoon followed. Many attractions billed for the evening, such as the ball game between Canadian and American Old Boys had to be called off. This latter was a big attraction, but the stopping of it saved many sore muscles.

LONDON, WEDNESDAY, AUG. 21.

MR. BORDEN'S PROGRAMME.

Mr. Borden has outlined what he is pleased to call the policy of the Conservative party for the next general election. He lays down a long series of propositions, and it would be strange if all of them were contentious. His appeals for honest expenditure of public money, for electoral purity and effective election laws, management of the public domain for the public benefit, development of rational waterways, improvement of transportation facilities, extension of postal facilities, and imperial preferential trade, are commonplaces. In these matters there is no question of party strife.Mr. Borden's declaration in favor of civil service reform may or may not have been hastened by the example of the leader of the Ontario Opposition, but it points in the right direction. There will be dissent, however, from his assertion that there has been an outrageous abuse of patronage
by the present Federal Government. The record of the Laurier administration in this respect is highly creditable compared with that of Mr.
Whitney. There can be no doubt,
however, that patronage is an incubus upon any party, in or out of office, and that most public men would prefer to see the whole problem taken out of politics. The responsibility is so irksome that it is now delegated largely to local party caucuses.Mr. Borden's pronouncement for separate reform, though new from such a source, is Liberal doctrine. It will be noticed that he suggests no method of improving the efficiency of the Senate, in which respect he is perhaps no more open to reproach than his opponents. There is a general belief that the upper chamber could be made more representative, but what change of system will achieve this is a problem of enormous difficulty, as Mr. Borden apparently admits by declining to suggest a plan. His statement that the tone of the Senate has deteriorated under the Laurier administration is merely a partisan fling.It is easy for Mr. Borden at this late day to criticize the terms of the Grand Trunk Pacific contract, but the amazing development of the west is proof that that great enterprise was undertaken not a day too soon. His prediction that Grand Trunk Pacific common stock will be worth 100 or 200 in twenty years is a complete refutation of the argument put forward by his own supporters that the Government had assumed crushing financial liabilities in lending its credit to the promoters.On the tariff question Mr. Borden's language is as ambiguous as ever.
For the phrase "adequate protection,"
he has substituted an equally indefinite formula to the effect that a fiscal policy should promote the production in Canada of all articles that can be "advantageously" produced here and that the interests of consumers should be regarded as well as the interests of wage-earners. This means anything or nothing. With his western followers imbued with low tariff ideas, Mr.
Borden perhaps feels it safer to trim
upon this issue.Another plank, "restoration" of public lands to Saskatchewan and Alberta, is intended to catch the west. It would mean the disorganization of the immigration department, since the control of public lands by the Federal Government is essential to a vigorous federal immigration propaganda. The new provinces have been generously compensated for their lands, and their election of Liberal Governments showed that there was no substantial grievance over the settlement.The nationalization of telegraphs and telephones "after due investigation" is advocated by Mr. Borden, probably a concession to the Maclean wing of the party. The Liberal party has not set its face against policy, but it cannot be brought about in a day.

WHY PEOPLE LIVE BETTER.

Statistics recently issued by the British Board of Agriculture serve to emphasize the advantages derived from advancing civilization. The figures show that during the last twenty years
the foreign food bill of England has doubled in amount, reaching the immense sum of $1,000,000,000 in 1906 as compared with $500,000,000 in 1886.
This great increase can only be accounted for by the fact that during the period in question the standard of living has been materially raised, the increase in population explaining but a small part of it. At the same timethere has been no falling off in the home production, which rather inclined toward increase.The fact that the food supply of the world increased at a much greater rate than the population was a feature of the last century that claimed not a little discussion among economists, who regarded it as striking evidence of improvement in the material welfare of mankind. Undoubtedly the additions to the forces of civilization have been more marked during the last twenty years than in any other period of the world's history. There has been wonderful development in the means of communication, the swift messengers of commerce touching almost every corner of the earth. There has been a complete revolution in the machinery and methods of food culture. The cost of products that were once luxuries on account of their scarcity is being brought within the reach of almost everyone. Great distances have been vastly reduced, and cars and steamships constructed for the purpose of carrying perishable goods thousands of miles. Greater speed of railway trains, steamships that almost fly across the oceans, improved skill in organizing industry,
the results of the study of agriculture which enable the farmer to get more out of the soil than ever before, have all been factors in improving the world's food supply.Like those of the rest of the world,
the people of Great Britain have profited by these advances. They can afford to use more wheat, meat, sugar, butter, etc., and what to many were once luxuries are now regarded as everyday necessities. The average family, as a result of the increased imports of food products and the improved facilities for securing them, is now enabled to live better and have more comforts, with but little addition to the annual per capita cost, than was possible twenty years ago.They say that Mr. Wm. Gray has his ear on the ground.Hon. George E. Foster is billed to appear with Mr. Borden in the Maritime Provinces. Is Mr. Borden aware that a man is often judged by the company he keeps?Mr. Borden is behaving as if he expected a general election this fall.
There is no reason to suppose he looks for one till next year, but it is good tactics to get into the game
early.A local contemporary announces gleefully that Harrisburg, Pa., is going in for filtration. As Harrisburg's only possible water supply is a polluted river, the information is not surprising.The London Free Press resurrects
the Toronto Mail's absurd story that Sir Wilfrid Laurier got himself painted in the forehead of the first colonial conference, of which he was not a member. The picture was painted by the Toronto artist, J. W. L. Forster, and Sir Wilfrid knew nothing about it.
The subject was a scene in the Senate chamber, during the session of the colonial conference at Ottawa, at which Sir Wilfrid Laurier chanced to be present.

THE MARK OF IDENTIFICATION.

[Philadelphia Press.]
"Is Mrs. Wise at home?" inquired Mrs.
Chatters, standing in the shadow of the doorway.
"I don't know, ma'am," replied the servant. "I can't tell till I get a better look at ye. If ye've a wart on the side o' yer nose, ma'am, she ain't."

BUSINESS HEAD ALL RIGHT.

[Toronto Star.]
Mrs. Eddy is a mystic, and her delusions, if she had any, were metaphysical. At all events, they did not interfere with business.

MARIE'S ONLY MAN.

[Indianapolis Star.]
Marie Corelli has been giving man another roast. The only male being Mistress Marie will tolerate is William Shakespeare, and William is dead.

MISS MOUND'S COOKIES.

[Denver Post.]
A cooking school girl named Miss Mound
Made cookies one day, nicely browned;
Her pug chanced to try them,
Now the town wants to buy them
To kill off the dogs in the pound.

THE POPE'S PREMONITIONS.

[M. A. P.]
The Pope is said to indulge in his little superstitions, like the rest of us. As he was returning the other day from his daily walk in the Vatican gardens, three church dignitaries of high rank inquired after his health. "Thank you," the Pope is said to have replied, very mildly, "I need have no fear, for I know I have yet six years to live." When some astonishment was expressed as to what led him to such a positive prediction, he exclaimed: "I was vicar at Tombolo nine years, head priest nine years at Solzano, nine years canon at Treviso, and Bishop of Mantua and Patriarch of Venice for the same length of time. I have been Pope three years, so you see I have six years left to me in which to accomplish my task."

THE DOCTOR'S NEEDS.

[Life.]
"Don't you think that doctor comes often than he needs to?"
"How should I know what his needs are?"

THE CRAZE OF PROFANITY.

[Brooklyn Eagle.]
Among the throngs in cities, low though
the common standards of taste may be,
there is less swearing than among the farmers and mill hands of the country.
The idle and empty person, whose self-importance is in inverse ratio to the occasion for it, impresses himself on his associates by reprehensible phrases, but it is to be owned that he is of too limited intelligence to appreciate the fact that heis making himself disgusting or offensive.
He damns everything of which he speaks,
as a habit—his state, his town, his goods, even his relatives. And he does it because his parents and friends are constantly speaking in his hearing, and he has adopted the practice unconsciously.Most people believe that enough is already taught in the public schools of this country, but the fact that a boy may be a bright scholar, yet be unpleasant in his conversation, rowdy in his actions, and unclean in his dress and person, makes it appear as if some of the commoner decen-cies of life might be inculcated, if not by set lessons, at least by suggestion in our classrooms.

THE REASON.

[Yonkers Statesman.]
"Easterner"—A London policeman arrests
on an average no more than nine persons in a year. A Parisian arrests twenty-eight.
"Westerner"—Pshaw! That's nothing to the number a Chicago policeman arrests in a year.

ALL THE SAME TO HIM.

[Sydney Record.]
Mr. E. L. Borden thinks that there will be a general election after another session of the Federal Parliament, but what possible difference can that make to him?

THE OVERCROWDED CHANNEL.

[London Evening News.]
In the course of a few days there will be no fewer than six Channel swimmers in evidence, and Scotland Yard is said to be seriously considering the advisability of putting a policeman on point duty half way across to control the traffic.

BREAKING INTO SOCIETY.

[Louisville Courier-Journal.]
"He had his wife arrested for non-support."
"Prominent socially."
"Not hitherto. This affair may help them some."

NEVER SATISFIED.

[Pittsburgh Post.]
In days of old, when nights were cold,
It made us mortals cross.
But now, I wot, that nights are hot,
We realise our loss.

HE'LL DO.

[Philadelphia Press.]
"You're rather a young man to be left in charge of a drug store," said the fussy old gentleman. "Have you any diploma?"
"Why—no, sir," replied the drug clerk,
"but we have a preparation of our own that's just as good."
That young man possesses all the natural qualifications for a successful druggist.

EASIER JOB.

[Exchange.]
"Madam, I must request you to remove your hat," remarked the polite theater attendant.
The lady smiled grimly.
"Does my hat annoy the little man behind me?"
"Yes, madam."
"Then you'll find it much easier to remove him."

THE BAKER'S BAIRN.

[Glasgow Mail.]
St. Andrews has still floating in its social atmosphere many a quaint story of the characteristic humor of Principal Hunter's wife. When the eldest son John was an infant, she saw some ladies coming evidently to pay her a visit, and the young groom said: "There are the Misses So-and-so. They'll want to see the bairn, and he's a perfect fright! Run down, lassie,
and get a loaf of the baker's bairn!"
Here clean, and they'll be sure to say he's the very image o' his father."

FIRST DOWNWARD STEP.

[Exchange.]
A photographer was urging Chas. Frohman, the son of the late Frohman, to accept the offer for the Easter number of a popular weekly; but this, as usual, Mr. Frohman refused to do."Those reasons sound well," Mr. Frohman said; "but behind them seem to be an interior and selfish motive lurking. It is like the harrowing story that the lawyer came home and told his wife.""And case in court today," he began.
"What was it?" the lady asked.
"Case of shoplifting. Beautiful, refined woman, educated and wealthy, was caught stealing things in shops like a common thief.""The judge was greatly moved. He said:
"Madam, how did you begin this sort of thing?"
"Alas, sir," she answered, weeping, "I began by picking my husband's pockets at night after he was in bed asleep. That was the first step, and after that my fall was easy."

THE CRAZE FOR SIZE.

[Washington Star.]
Our cities love to grow big. They emulate one another in this respect. They watch the decennial census figures with
jealous eyes, and woe betide the unhappy
enumerator or computer or statistician
who blunders in the matter of a sufficient number to cause an apparent change of rank. Every city that has passed the 500,000 point aspires to reach the million
mark. Every city with a million at once undertakes to secure the two-million point.
New York is today looking anxiously forward to the day when it will show five million inhabitants.If the municipalities of the United States were to be ranked in this respect, they emulate one another in this respect. They
watch the decennial census figures with
jealous eyes, and woe betide the unhappy
enumerator or computer or statistician
who blunders in the matter of a sufficient
number to cause an apparent change of
rank. Every city that has passed the 500,000 point aspires to reach the million
mark. Every city with a million at once
undertakes to secure the two-million point.
New York is today looking anxiously forward to the day when it will show five million inhabitants.

BURKE AND BLAKE.

[New York Post.]
The Hon. Edward Blake, the Irish member of Parliament, who recently retired on the score of ill-health, is said to have a striking facial resemblance to Edmund Burke. Mr. Morley, the English member of Burke, has often noticed it. Sir George Trevelyan, who is, of course, deep in the eighteenth century, frequently remarked on the extraordinary likeness. The fact seems well established. Mr. Blake, of course, is not a descendant of Burke, but his credit he said, appears never to have lost his head through having it compared with Burke's.

CANADA'S DUTIES TO EMPIRE.

[Woodstock Sentinel-Review.]
Canada's hands are full at present, and her first duty is to do the work at hand.
After she has completed her share of the work of empire-building allotted to her,
she may be free to turn her attention elsewhere, and a way may be found whereby she can contribute more directly to the support of the navy without surrendering any of her privileges as a free nation. For the present her task is at home. She is performing that task very well, and by so doing is rendering the best service she possibly can to the empire.FEAR ROOSEVELT

U. S. IS BEING ANGICIZED

People Are Fond of Being Presented at Court—Imitating Methods of Royalty.Paris, Aug. 21.—"There is a crisis approaching in the United States," said Solomon R. Guggenheim, of New York, today. "If President Roosevelt can be re-elected attempts will be made to assure him a permanent tenure of that office. The consequences of so great a departure from American and Republican tradition are too great and far-reaching to be estimated."Next to the Rockefeller group, there is probably nowhere in America so vast an aggregation of family wealth
as that which is held by the seven Guggenheim brothers. They control the big smelters combine. It is supposed if they were to divide their wealth they would have sizable, quotable values of about $100,000,000 each
—a fortune of $700,000,000 under the control of a family council.

Roosevelt for Life.

"Broadly speaking," said Mr. Guggenheim, "there are now three political parties in the United States.
One, of course, will place William Jennings Bryan in the field for President. The second is now in favor of Secretary Taft to head the Republican party as the candidate to succeed Mr. Roosevelt.
"But there is still a strong third-term party for Roosevelt, in spite of his announced determination not to run again.""As I have said, if Mr. Roosevelt can be prevailed upon to run, and if he is elected, there is a strong indication that an endeavor will be made to keep him in the Presidency for life.""Court Life" in Washington.
This may seem to be a revolutionary sort of talk for a business man to indulge in, but look at the way things are going now in our democratic country. The changes in the ordinary customs of life at the White House within the past five years will serve very well to illustrate what I mean.
They show a very great and pronounced tendency to form our morals
on the style which prevails in European capitals and courts.At the White House there seems to be a rapidly growing tendency to make a social life there more and more like that of a royal court.
Want To Be "Presented."
The fact is that many members of our rich and intelligent classes, when they visit Europe, are not satisfied until they have been presented at some court. To have been presented at the royal drawing-room of the King of Britain and Ireland, Emperor of India, and of the Dominions beyond the seas, is to people of this class the very height and climax of social success.
The distinction gives their social position at home an indelible seal of pre-eminence. They scheme for this "honor," they spend vast sums in endeavoring to gain it.Very well, when such Americans go home to the United States, they like to renew their experiences. They will go to the trouble and undergo the difficulties of being asked to share in the White House imitation of a "drawing-room." They are trying their best—and with a good deal of success—to make the White House and the social function a sort of a fashionable resort.
"If you like it better, I will call the White House, as they are now running it, a kind of half-way house to the real house of London society."

Society Being Anglicized.

Then, again, intermarriages between English and American families are becoming decidedly more frequent. If, on the one hand, these alliances tend to Americanize English society, it is well for us to keep in mind the fact that our society tends to grow more Anglicized—is, indeed, becoming a sort of mirror of England.
"This is told to emphasize the fact that President Roosevelt has a large following who hold these royalist social tendencies and views, if I may use the word 'royalist' in that sense. Do not misunderstand me. I do not mean that the President ever thinks for a moment of aiming at royalty for himself or of establishing a system of monarchy in the United States. Still, I do ascribe to him a desire for the stateDrastic Purgatives

FOLLOWED INSTRUCTIONS.

Paris, Aug. 21.—The Eclair publishes a dispatch from San Sebastian saying that the Spanish foreign minister, Count De Allende Salazar, declares that the Spanish commandant at Casablanca, in not taking part in the fighting outside the walls, was only following instructions, and that his conduct was perfectly correct. It is believed that the real reason for Spanish inaction at Casablanca is to be found in the inability to change the instructions given by Premier Mouru until he returns here.

CLEANING UP 'FRISCO.

San Francisco, Aug. 21.—Mayor
Naylor yesterday began his promised cleansing of the municipal departments
by sending a notification of their removal from office of four police commissioners. The communication scored the commission for failure to remove Chief of Police Dinan, who Mayor Naylor declared is incompetent, and lacking in character. The commissioners, after a secret conference, announced that they would not recognize any power except the court. It is understood they will resist any attempt to take possession of the records by an appeal to the police.

CHANGE HURTS JOCKEYS

King Edward's Trainer Does Not Approve of Yankee Style.London, Aug. 20.—Richard Marsh, King Edward's trainer, says the adoption of the American seat for riding has ruined the English jockey. Agitation is in progress here to get the Jockey Club to abolish the starting gate altogether, mainly because jockeys now riding are unable to control their horses behind the barrier.This is largely ascribed to the American monkey seat, which gives a jockey little chance to master his mount. Marsh says numbers of young horses are being spoiled through inability of the boys riding monkey fashion to hold them together. He contends that the Sloan style had a disastrous effect here, and that the old-fashioned way of riding, with long strut, practiced by such horsemen as Fred Archer and George Fordham, is the right one. Sam Darling, another trainer of experience, also condemns
the American seat.With the exception of Danny Maher, there is now no American jockey who has any reputation in this country.
"Hotspur" of the Daily Telegraph, a leading English sporting writer, says:
"Reaction against Americans has set in with a vengeance, and by degrees
the American jockey has almost disappeared from the country. The younger boys are still strenuous imitators of Sloan, but their efforts are mostly ludicrous. Though the JockeyClub has not yet effectually grappled with the problem, it is alive to the gravity of the situation."

My Lady Cinderella

By Mrs. G. N. Williamson

Author of "My Friend the Chauffeur," "Lady Betty Across the Water," Etc., Etc.

Whatever happened to the desk, I almost dared to hope that it would be safe from the machinations of the Donbar faction. They believed I had the papers. Why, then, in future, I should be the object of their pursuit!

This was a startling alternative, for it suggested the fear that I might have been followed. I had not thought until now of the danger that I might be tracked by others than my quondam friends.

If Diana had stayed to spy! I recalled a rustling among the shrubbery at Southwood Park as I had passed. I had been frightened at the moment, but had reassured myself later with the reflection that some small wild creature of the night had been lurking there.

It was morbid to fancy now that it could have been anything more formidable, I decided. I had safely eluded friends and enemies alike.

From Chansey, in Surrey, to Lull, in Dorsetshire, is a long journey; and there was a change of trains. I had been soon after four, and it was when a porter at Lull directed me to Miss Smith's place. The Pines was not some importance in his eyes.

At first, it seemed, for he spoke of a mistress with respect. I gave a walk of nearly two miles to the village. I was in the porter had a fancy that it was not at home.

My heart sank with an additional weight. Miss Smith's problematical absence did matter considerably to me. Late as it was, I had doubted whether Pines that night, and now I was sure to dare present myself at the inn, and was somewhat unwillingly received as a lodger.

My bed was hard, and the thoughts that disturbed my rest were harder, so that I could do nothing but toss and moan through the dark, endless hours of the night. I was up betimes, physically refreshed by breakfast, and on my way to The Pines.

If Miss Smith had been out last evening, she was the sort of woman to return home early, I argued, so that I might hope she would not be late in sleeping off her fatigue today. She would be surprised to see me, still more surprised at my conception of a traveling costume, but my explanations would soon soften the shock produced by the red and yellow plaid.

The Pines was a finer place than I had been led to expect from Miss Smith's description, but I remembered that she had frankly advertised herself as a rich woman, considered by her sister-in-law eminent worth of consideration.

A few months ago, before grand houses had lost their awe-inspiring quality for me, I should have been exceedingly impressed by Miss Smith's residence as I walked up the drive to attack knocker and bell.

A woman in neat cap and apron opened the door, staring at the unique apparition in undisguised amazement, tinged with disapproval.

"Is Miss Smith at home?" I inquired, with such dignity as a vain woman who knows herself at a disadvantage can command. My vanity was in dust and ashes now; still, self-consciousness enough was left to make me write a little under the spinster servant's glare.

"Miss Smith is not at home," she answered. "And let me tell you, my young woman, you might have spared me trouble by coming to the back door."

GOOD PROSPECT FOR CORN CROP.

Everyone with corn will be pleased to know that Putnam's Corn Extractor is guaranteed to cure hard, soft or bleeding corns in 24 hours, painless and sure, is Putnam's.

Crushed, I nevertheless persisted. "I am a friend of Miss Smith's," I said mildly. "I am very sorry she is out."

"She is not only out, she is away," corrected my informant, for I had staked my all on finding Miss Smith ready to carry out her offer. "Will she be away long?"

"She may be back tomorrow; she may not be back for a week."

"Is she still in London—with Mrs. Leatherby-Smith?" I asked, anxious to win confidence by showing my knowledge of the family connections. It had not previously occurred to me that she might be lingering in town, for Miss Smith had impressed me as a woman who knew her own mind, and she had told me that her visit to her sister-in-law was to be a short one.

Still, it was possible—"London," returned the maid, shutting her mouth over an iron resolution not to betray her mistress to a creature in a red plaid and a hat with a soiled yellow band. "I can't tell you where she is, any more than I can tell you when she's coming back."

Evidently my bids to inspire confidence had not succeeded. I was regarded as a brazen fraud, who had picked up a few bits of family history and patched them together for my own doubtful purposes.

The woman ostentatiously took a step back from the door, which moved an inch or two toward shutting. This to the beautiful Miss Brand, who had been welcome a few days ago in what the society papers call the "best houses in England!"

How was my greatness fallen! and what a feather weight, what a nothing-masquerading-as-something it had been at best! Still, my poor little past vanities appeared pitifully pathetic to me now rather than darkly sinful, as perhaps they ought to have seemed.

I had no more questions to ask. Murmuring inarticulately, I bowed my head to the inevitable and walked away. The door closed upon the respectable comfort of Miss Smith's home, and the wail in the red plaid atrocity knew not where she was to go.

After I had passed through the gates which had proved inhospitable to me, I walked on aimlessly for a long time, hardly conscious save for a vague additional sense of wretchedness, that a drizzle of rain was falling.

At first I could not make up my mind what to do, since the straw I had caught at to save me from drowning had been snatched from my grasp. I was afraid to go back to London and apply to an agency for a situation, as I had once planned to do. In case I should ever be driven out of fairyland, I had not had a prophetic soul in those seemingly remote days, for I had never dreamed of the way in which my decree of banishment would fall.

At worst I had pictured Lady Sophie de Gretton capriciously tiring of her guest, and intimating gently that it was time for fitting. If this had happened, I should have thanked her, and obediently disappeared into the twilight. But now it appeared to my sore self-consciousness that there could be no peaceful twilight of obscurity for me. Every eye turned carelessly upon my face would remain fixed in recognition of the battered celebrity fallen off its pedestal.

Lady Sophie would find me out; she would hear of me. I dared not go so near her world as London. I did not want to do the cowardly thing I had thought of last night. What was to become of me?

CHAPTER XXIII.

"Wanted Immediately."

She may be back tomorrow; she may not be back for a week."

The words of Miss Smith's servant rang again in my mind, and a ray of hope gleamed out to me with the sudden thought that I might stay and wait for her.

I had money left which would keep me for some time if I found cheap lodgings, and that should not be difficult in this country. The boom of the sea came on the wind when one's heart was stilled to listen, and there must be fishermen's cottages not far away.

I would write to Miss Smith, hoping that my letter might be forwarded from The Pines. I would write also to Anne, who could be trusted to keep my secret, asking her what news of the spinster had lately come to Holland Park House.

This new idea gave me something to do, something to keep the thoughts that must not be harbored out of my brain. I walked with increased briskness to the village, and purchased at one of the shops several necessary articles, to supply my suspicious lack of luggage. I also bought a dark sailor hat, and material for the creation of a decent black frock, actually experiencing dim stirrings of pleasure in the anticipation of renewing remembered makeshifts in seamstressing.

Armed with my acquisitions, their newness concealed in the depths of a cheap traveling bag, I found the colony of fishermen I had hoped for—a little cluster of picturesque antiquity half a mile inland from crowding black rocks that rose above the white foam of the sea.

Lodgings were advertised in more than one small, peephole window, and I chose to knock at the door of a dwelling with a gay strip of flower garden in front. I had guessed that the housewife there would be clean and capable, but my weary imagination had not conjured up anything so wholesome, so motherly and sweet as the reality.

She gazed with kindness upon my tired, unvelled face; but even with her red plaid was against me, and the price she named for her rooms was not as cheap as I had expected.

"I'm afraid I must look somewhere else," I said wistfully, hoping that she might be moved to strike off a few shillings.

"I'm sorry," the answer came, half doubtfully; "but, you see, we can easily get what we ask, specially in August, and we often have gentry here." I was not "gentry." This fact was so self-evident to her that it had not occurred to the kindly heart that I could be offended at the implication. Nor was I offended, but I wanted to stay with her; I did not want to "look somewhere else."

Suddenly the sense of my forlornness overwhelmed me like a wave. The world that was so cold to me was filled with a great mother-want that ached and ached in my heart, with the longing for arms to fold round me in love, some bosom which would give me rest.

Tears burst from my eyes. They did not fall gently, one by one, but came in a storm. My face worked with the piteous, childish contortions that will come with passionate crying.

I stammered "Good day," and hurried off to hide my weakness and my woe; but the housewife ran after me. "Why, you poor little body! Why, dearie, don'tee, don'tee, now! And you shall stop!" she exclaimed.

I think her hand was on the reprehensible plaid, detaining me, pulling me back inside the low doorway. But everything was blurred with tears. Presently I was crying on her shoulder. She smelled of freshly washed linen and newly baked bread.

Over the shoulder I saw, through a mist, shelves of blue and pictorial china, a tall clock with red flowers painted round its face. A dark patch of shadow indicated kitchen range and low mantel, ornamented with spotted dogs and wonderful vases.

A glitter, like jewels, meant pewter and copper things depending from hooks; and there was a yellow cat that purred, and regarded me with an unblinking topaz stare.

"You shall pay what you can, poor pretty dear," said the kind creature, who was doing more for me, according to her lights, than Lady Sophie de Gretton had ever done.

Thereupon she dried my eyes with a clean, coarse towel that hung before the fire, petted me and patted me, and bustled about to get me a glass of milk and a seed cake. I had always hated caraway seeds before that day, but I knew that in future I should love them for this woman's sake.

"You are good to me," I sobbed; "I'm so lonely. I've run away from home, and—and I can never go back."

"Deary me, poor child! I hope you didn't run away to marry a young man, and he threw you over. There's some of 'em like that."

"On the contrary, I've run away from a young man," I explained, with a queer little smile through the tears that had brought me here.

I drank the milk and ate the cake, and it was arranged that I should occupy Mrs. Nye's spare bedroom and the sitting-room attached for the modest sum of six shillings a week.

I could not tell her how long I was likely to stay. It might be for a week, it might be indefinitely. But I mentioned that I was anxious to obtain work. Sometimes situations were advertised in the local newspaper, she cheerfully informed me. Her husband took it in; it was published once a week, and a friend of theirs lent them a London daily paper, too. I should see both, and who could tell but I might find exactly the thing I wanted? Meanwhile she would take the best of care of me, and "mother me up a bit."

Half an hour later, in a neat little sitting-room, smelling of the late roses on the table—with a faint undertone of mustiness—and deadly portraits of departed Nyes staring down at me from the walls, I sat writing to Miss Smith and to Anne Bryden.

Merely informed Miss Smith that I had left Lady Sophie de Gretton, and was thrown upon my own resources. If, when she came home, she would remember her kind promise to befriend me, and help me to obtain work of any kind, I should be most grateful. I was to be found waiting for her return at Mrs. Nye's cottage, near Lull; and Mrs. Nye said that everyone knew her Thomas, the best fisherman along the Dorsetshire coast.

To Anne I was more confidential. I could not bring myself to tell her all the miserable details which made up the truth; but I said that I feared my new friends had not been quite sincere with me; that I had left Lady Sophie de Gretton, and requested that Anne would tell nobody where I was. I was very unhappy, but hoped to feel better and less restless if I could find an occupation.

DESIGNED BY MARTHA DEAN.

A GRACEFUL WALKING SKIRT—6958.

The present season has produced no more attractive skirt than the 7-gored, tuck-plaited model displayed in the accompanying drawing. It possesses, too, the rather uncommon advantage of being equally becoming to slender or stout figures. The effect of combined smartness and elegance is achieved largely by the arrangement of the plaits, a graduated triple box plait ornamenting both front and back, while two groups of tuck plaits appear between. The plaits are stitched in position over the hips, and below are permitted to hang in free, well-creased folds. The wide hem is finished simply with a double row of stitching. As illustrated the skirt is cut to round length and made of navy blue Panama; but the pattern may be adjusted to either short, round or instep length. If desired, while it may be developed with admirable effect in linen, taffeta, brilliantine, or serge. For the medium size, 6 yards of 44 inch material will be needed.

6958—In 7 sizes, from 20 to 32 inches, waist measure.

The price of this pattern is 10c.

ROMANTIC LEGION

Company of Picturesque Frontiersmen

March Without Tents.

London, Aug. 20.—The Legion of Frontiersmen have at last got an opportunity of displaying their possible usefulness, and a troop of the London command have been bivouacking and reconnoitering in Kent in a style to move all romantic youth to envy.

Last Saturday the men started out cheerfully for a big march without wagons, tents, or any of the civilizing influences affected by regulars or corps of volunteers. Acting very literally the part of frontiersmen, they have camped out in defiance of rain and all climatic eccentricities of an English summer. Each made the kit he had on his back or slung to his saddle sufficient. They cooked their food, and ate it round the camp fire in the fashion of early colonists. To few of them was this altogether a strange condition of things, as most have camped in many parts of the world, and not a few wear South African war medals.

After leaving London on Saturday the frontiersmen marched by way of Blackheath to Gravesend, where they were received by the mayor. The first camp was made at Chalk, a hamlet two miles beyond.

The men accomplished the twenty-five miles from town in good time, and arrived at Chalk in excellent condition. No stops were made en route for food. Not a single man fell out, and every man was fit enough to attend to his horse on arrival at camp.

In the morning the troop marched to Rochester, and attended church parade. Then they remounted and trotted away to Osprey, where they encamped for the night. Bank holiday was spent at Canterbury.

A lady in a brown riding habit accompanied the troop. She is the wife of one of the members, and is herself a frontiersman in spirit. She has lived in the west, and ridden through strange countries.

We Are Ready to Introduce The New Fall Dress Fabrics To Dame Fashion's Followers

Already Dame Fashion's followers have commenced to talk about the new fall styles and to do a little planning re the new suit. Now, if our friends will allow us to introduce to them the new Fall Dress Fabrics their plans will take a more definite shape. A visit to the dressmaker will be next in order, and they will have their new autumn suits designed before the "very busy season" is in full swing. Anyway, come and look over our large and comprehensive showing of the correct weaves for the coming fall and winter.

In Plain Cloths the most favored materials are the smoothly-finished Broadcloths, Venetians and Satin Cloths. The newest note is the introduction into popularity of the fine Etamine weaves and also the firmly woven poplins. Our values, we firmly believe, are unbeatable. Quite the best in town.

The color tendency veers strongly towards the light and dark navies, and browns varying from tan to dark chocolate. Black is also very prominent, and olive and myrtle shades are considered very stylish.

In Fancies, we are exhibiting the very newest and most handsome ideas. The Novelty Shadow Checks are fascinating to a degree. They display a small, neat block pattern with an illusive shadow overcheck—the colorings are exceptionally attractive. These are in the slightly rough Crispine weave—a great Paris favorite at present.

The elegant ombre stripes and plaids are featured in the beautiful worsted weaves, as are also some dressy shadow plaids.

All the above are in exclusive dress lengths.

Embroidered Venetians will be in demand—and we can show you beauties.

KEEP YOUR TEMPER

Save your time and your strength. Do not waste them trying to make good bread and pastry with an inferior flour. You will get only trouble and disappointment for your pains.

The easy and satisfactory way to bake is to use "FIVE ROSES" Flour, as this brand never gets lumpy or hardens, and never needs any special preparation for use.

Its uniformity is such that, unlike ordinary brands, the same methods, all of them simple, can be used with every bag. "FIVE ROSES" Flour, an oven, some water, a little yeast and common sense will give you a whiter and sweeter loaf, and lighter and flakier pastry, with less trouble than any ordinary brands on the market. Users of it save time, temper and money. "FIVE ROSES" is, in fact, the flour that satisfies.

Ask your grocer for it.

Open Athletic Handicap Arranged For at Queen's Park Scores for Second Day of Toronto Bowling Tourney

The Followers of Rugby See Good Season Here

Large Gathering of Enthusiasts Last Night Organize Team.

If the local knights of the pigskin turn out to practice anywhere near as well as they did to the meeting last night, there should be no trouble at all in placing two good teams in the intermediate and junior series of the O. R. F. U. the coming season.

Over thirty of the boys were on hand when ex-President Field called the gathering to order, and when it is recalled that at a similar meeting last year only ten players were present it can be realized that the gridiron warriors of London mean business this season.

The following officers were elected by acclamation: President, Hume Cronyn; vice-president, Frank Reid; secretary, Frank Spry; manager, Ewart Field.

Archie McMahon, Mel. Hueston and Ralph McKay were elected a committee of arrangement.

Owing to the fact that the City League baseball people have an option on Tecumseh Park until Oct. 6, the boys will have to practice elsewhere unless arrangements can be made with the league officials. The old quodding grounds at Pall Mall and Richmond streets, where the team practiced last year, was suggested in case Tecumseh Park proved unobtainable.

The meeting itself was of the most enthusiastic nature, and the consensus of opinion was that both a junior and an intermediate team could be placed upon the field and make good showings.

Manager Field expressed the opinion that London had more material now than in years, and said that with the old scrimmage game, at which London had taken four championships back in vogue the locals had a good chance of leading in one or both of the series mentioned.

Most of last year's old guard were on hand, as well as a host of former junior players, and a number of new men.

Secretary Spry took the names and addresses of those present, and all will be called out for practice some time next week.

Everybody who has aspirations in a football way is urgently requested to turn out. It was decided that players who used tobacco or liquor in any form during the season had practically no chance of making either team.

"We had a sample of what training on such stuff will do for a team last year," remarked Secretary Spry, "when we lost many a game simply through lack of practice and poor condition."

Although the outlook for good football in this vicinity this year is very bright, and with proper encouragement there is no reason why the local boys should not, at least, make a creditable showing.

Announcement of the date of the opening practice will be made in The Advertiser as soon as grounds have been procured.

GEORGE MULLIN BLANKS BOSTON

Tigers Make It Two Straight by Again Taking Beaneaters' Measure.

Detroit, Aug. 21.—The heavy field made fast fielding hard, but several of the Tigers pulled off circus stunts. Cobb made a great catch off Knight in the second, running against the bleacher fence. Schaefer made a pretty play, after falling, in going after Winters' grounder. The grass was wet and the Dutchman couldn't get his footing, but he threw as he fell and made the play.

In one of those games where there is plenty of hard playing and pretty work but in which there is not situation conducive to excitement, the Tigers landed the second game of the series against the Beaneaters, Philadelphia's defeat against Chicago puts the Tigers within four points of the league lead again.

George Mullin was depended on to hold the Tigers up and George was on hand with another of his masterful games. This time there was enough hitting in back of him to win. But little was needed, as George, given splendid support, shut the visitors out without a tally. Winters was in the box for the McGuiness and had two bad innings. In the third he granted bases on balls that proved costly when Sammy Crawford banged out a single. Rossman's long fly scored another in the same inning. Mullin not only pitched a remarkably clever game but he did some hitting as well. In the eighth, after Schmidt and O'Leary had done likewise, George shot the ball to right for a base hit that scored the first mentioned Tiger. Promise of rain held the crowd down, but 1,913 fans turning out to see the contest.

Beaneaters Have No Chance.
From the time Mullin entered the box until the close of the game the Beaneaters never had a chance. But one man reached second. That was Sullivan in the fourth. It was one of the best games of the year for the big fellow.

Jerry Downs was likewise on hand with some more neat second basing, and Schmidt did some pretty work behind the bat. For the visitors Jimmy Barrett did some sensational work in left, as did Wagner at short. Unglaub starred at first.

Winters Is Wild.
Winters' wildness got him into trouble in the third. He walked Mullin and Jones. Schaefer forced George at second but Jones made third. Crawford got a clean hit to right, and Jones scored. Schaefer making third. Cobb was walked but Rossman sent a long fly to Barrett and Schaefer crossed the plate.

With two out in the eighth Schmidt singled to short and O'Leary singled to right, Charley making third, Mullin lined out to right and Schmidt scored. Jones sent a drive straight into Wagner's mitt and Mullin was doubled off first.

The only time Boston was able to get more than one hit in an inning off Mullin was in the ninth when Congalton singled. Unglaub fled to Jones and Ferris forced Congalton. Downs making a pretty play. Knight singled but Wagner sent another fly to Jones and the game was won.

THE SECOND DAY AT WOODBINE

Scores of the Bowling Tourney for the Ontario Cup.

Woodbine Park, Aug. 20.—The second day of the Dominion bowling tournament opened at 9 o'clock, with the preliminary of the Ontario cup, 18 ends, the losers in the first round of the Walker trophy, pairing off.

At 11 o'clock the second round of the Walker trophy commenced, and the preliminary of the Toronto cup, 15 ends, was also played.

The weather today was decidedly cool, and the strong wind from the north blew across the course.

Rain Stopped Play.
At 11:30 rain, which had been threatening all morning, fell and stopped the play on the second round of the Walker trophy, which had just commenced. It was only a drizzling shower, but it cleared the greens. When Dr. Robertson, of Stratford, returned to the dressing tent for his coat he discovered that his gold watch and chain had been stolen, and the detectives were notified.

Resumed Play.
The rain ceased at 12 o'clock and play was resumed.

W. S. Cummings, of Caer-Howell, and Eddie Seagram, of Waterloo, had a rattling good go in the Ontario cup, round one. On the 14th end it stood 13-10 in Cummings' favor, but Seagram counted 3 in a row. The Caer-Howell man won out in the last end.

Geo. R. Hargratt, of Granites, and H. A. Giles, St. Matthew's, had a close game in the Ontario cup. It ended 18-19 in the St. Matthew man's favor, but he won out in the final end with a 2-end. Hargratt did not get going till the seventh end, then the score stood 12-1. E. C. Boeckh, of the Yachtmen, and "Pop" Davis, of the Caer-Howell, had a nice argument, but the Caer-Howell man led from the fourth to the tenth, and from the 15th to the 18th, the final score being 16 to 18.

Carlyle Beaten.
D. Carlyle, the Prospect Park veteran, and F. S. Anderson, of Guelph, were only one point apart in the Ontario cup. The veteran was even up at the 12th end, but after that he was out of the game.

Guelph man got a 3-end that put him in the front and held him there, though Carlyle won the last two ends.

J. J. Warren, of Parkdale, and D. McArthur, of the Victorias, a severe trimming. It stood 26-4 at the 16th end, when the Victoria man threw up his hands. Another close game was the 18-17 argument between Seagram and Chambers of Canada, and W. T. Chambers, of Brampton. The Brampton man came strong on end and evened up, but Chambers counted a single on the extra end and won out.

There was an unusually close finish in the Seagram (Waterloo) and Cummings (Caer-Howell) game. Seagram was lying shot on last end, one shot being required to win, but Cummings' last bowl won by half an inch.

The third round in the main competition was played yesterday afternoon, the results being easy victories in general. An exception was the game between Hastings (Canada) and Swabey (Victoria), the former scoring the last two ends, his final shot being awarded by the umpire after measuring the bowls.

The second round was finished early in the afternoon, the games being closer as a rule. Dr. Edgar won over A. S. Wigmore after an extra end. McGregor beat Lauren (Granites) 16 to 15. Willson won from Chisholm (R.) 21 to 19, the loser pulling up at the finish. Reid was only one ahead of Swift (London), 18 to 17, and Swabey put out Kerr (Peterboro), by 15 to 14.

The Ontario cup is reduced to 32 rinks, a raft of bowlers being stowed away in the morning. Twenty-eight quartets are still left for the Toronto trophy.

PAINS, LIKE THE POOR, ARE ALWAYS WITH US. That portion of man's life which is made up of pleasure is largely composed of pain, and to be free from pain is a pleasure. Simple remedies are the best in treating bodily pain, and a safe, sure and simple remedy is Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. You cannot do wrong in giving it a trial when required.

In New York the police arrest on an average 48 men every day who declare they have no occupation.

The games in the other end of the town will wind up the East End League season. The Wortmans and Somervilles clash first, and the Stars and Ramblers come next.

The once wide gap between the professional and the amateur in Canada has narrowed till there is almost now no gap at all. Someone not long ago defined an amateur as "one who is not caught taking the money."

And there is no little truth in it.

The Toronto News sagely remarks that it hopes London wins at football this year. It is safe betting that Hamilton doesn't wish so.

Wouldn't it be funny if the local rinks at Toronto led the way for the bunch at Woodbine all through the tournament? Remembering what happened to the Toronto contingent at the W. O. B. A. tourney, it would indeed be funny to us.

The Telegram takes occasion to remark that the fans should have bottled their wrath in that recent riot in Toronto instead of bottling the umpire. The nearest London ever came to having a real riot in the baseball line was when "Nig" Jeffries told Bill Reid that he couldn't tell a base-hit from a passed ball.

Detroit still has an excellent chance of landing at the top of the heap in American. With the renewed confidence that comes with three straight victories, the Tigers should again keep Philadelphia hustling for premier honors.

The Leafs, too, continue to increase their percentage in the Eastern League, and there seems to be a very slim chance of the other teams overtaking them.

It certainly was good for one's eyes to see the main line of football boys turned out last night to the opening meeting of the season. It has been exactly seven years since a local team annexed a championship, an intermediate eleven turning the trick in 1900 by defeating McGill University. Previous championships were taken in 1894, intermediate, and in 1898 and 1899, junior. It is a trifle early to speak of championships yet, but there it is always better to aim too high than too low. Certainly a junior team would be a good thing for the town in every way. New players would be developed and the intermediates would have material to draw from in case of emergency.

Toronto has great cause for pride this week. With Miss Mary Sutton, the champion player, there, the Dominion tourney in progress, the rinks of London bowlers honoring the town with their presence, the joy-cups of the lakeside sports are filled to overflowing.

The News said of the big tourney citizens, this is bowlers week in Toronto, and the legion of the white duck will own the city for the next few days. They are nearly four hundred strong; they come from all points of the compass, and represent one of the greatest gatherings of trundlers in the world.

They are staying on the new greens at the Woodbine, where the large lawns in the world. The visitors and the local entrants represent all the known professions and the highest type of sportsmanship. They play for the love of the game, and defeat is as welcome as victory to them. They have all experienced both in large measure. There are 32 greens in all, affording space for 256 players at the one time, and yesterday when they were all going, as was the case from 2:15 p.m. until dark, the lawn presented a most picturesque and animated appearance, worth going miles to see, and a very large gallery, one of the largest in fact, ever seen at a local tournament, did travel miles to witness it.

The Champions and the Sippites met in combat, and the Bakers and Sippites appear in the wind-up at Tecumseh Park on Saturday. The doctor is out for blood, and figures that with even break in luck he and his warriors will hand Jimmy Bell's leaders some yellow fruit.

The games in the other end of the town will wind up the East End League season. The Wortmans and Somervilles clash first, and the Stars and Ramblers come next.

The once wide gap between the professional and the amateur in Canada has narrowed till there is almost now no gap at all. Someone not long ago defined an amateur as "one who is not caught taking the money."

And there is no little truth in it.

An Athletic Revival In Western Ontario

[By Stanley Brent, Physical Director of the London Y. M. C. A.]

A perusal of the list of coming athletic meets published in the columns of The Advertiser last night is enough to make one stop and consider the tremendous height to which this branch of sport has soared just within the last year or two, and to wonder who or what has been responsible for it.

Two years ago the financial responsibility connected with the running of an athletic meet was so great that very few clubs were willing to stand the almost certain loss. Today clubs are vying with each other to secure sanctions, and the chief difficulty of the governing body, the C. A. A. U., is to keep the dates and the localities spread so that too much of a good thing may not be forced upon the public. The Toronto clubs have taken the lead in pulling off athletic meets, but there is a great opportunity for western cities to secure sanctions, and the athletics of Canada, until the old C. A. A. U. became drowsy and useless, and the laughingstock of the country. Ontario men who had at heart the building up of athletics went quietly to work, and when Inspector Stark, of the Police Athletic Association, was elected president, and the secretaryship given to Mr. Crow, who was then secretary of the Y. M. C. A. Athletic League, the field of operation was transferred, and the growth and progress of the once dead union has been phenomenal. Uniting with the Y. M. C. A. Athletic League, and standing for all that is clean and honest in sport, they have brought to the forefront of the athletic world such men as Hongboat, Kerr, Archibald, Coley and Skene, of whom every Canadian can be proud.

This has not been done without a great deal of opposition and mud-slinging by journals and individuals. Many well-meaning actions of the C. A. A. U. have been misconstrued, and the fires of antagonism fanned by Montreal papers, who speedily realized that this was going to mean to Ontario—and the realization has come true. We are proud of Ontario's athletes, who are second to none in the Dominion, and some of them will be world's champions.

BAD BLAZE IN AN EAST END BAKERY

Shop of Joseph B. Gwalchmai, in Pegler Street, Seriously Damaged Last Night.

Fire broke out in the bakeshop of Mr. Joseph Gwalchmai, of Pegler street, last night about 8 o'clock, and destroyed considerable of the work-room.

The cause of the blaze is not known, as there had been no fire in the building for some time. The loss on the building is estimated at about $200, and Mr. Gwalchmai places his total loss at $1,000.

The bakeshop was completely gutted, and the contents practically destroyed. The firemen made a fast run and succeeded in keeping the flames confined to the one room.

The building is covered by insurance, but the contents, which were not totally destroyed, were not insured.

THE BARRACKS BOYS ARE BACK

mountains was regularly indulged in. Accommodations for field work at Petawawa was described as being excellent, and the only source of complaint entertained was from the hordes of mosquitoes which infested the camp at all times, particularly at night.

Praise for the Battery.

On the day of the general maneuvers the work of the Sixth Field Battery of London received special notice from Gen. Otter, commanding officer for Western Ontario, who stated that the battery was second to none in the Province.

Field sports were held frequently, football, cricket, swimming, matches, shooting and baseball matches being the chief pastimes indulged in. The football (Association) was said to have been the best that was ever witnessed at an encampment or elsewhere in Canada. In the final football matches the Royal Canadian Artillery team was pitted against the Royal Canadian Guards and the Royal Canadian Dragoons, and defeated both by close scores in well contested struggles.

It was necessary for the R. C. R. team to play three games with the R. C. G. A. before supremacy could be decided. In the first two contests neither team scored, while the regimental team won out by 1 to 0 in the last match. In nearly all sports but baseball the R. C. R. boys led the van. The Sixth Field Battery, with Walter (Fat) Earley at the helm, was supreme on the diamond, and defeated the pick of the camp by a score of 7 to 3 in a red-hot contest last Saturday. Earley was practically invincible, and would have had a shut-out had it not been for errors on the part of his team.

A Sad Accident.

But one accident occurred during the encampment. Several weeks ago, while a number of K Company men were engaged in the construction of a small wooden bridge across one of the many streams, which are numerous in that region, Private Smith of H Company was sent by one of the engineers across the stream with a cable on his back. The undercurrent caught him when he was in the center of the creek and he was carried beneath the surface and drowned.

Company K, along with Company A, was the first of the permanent companies to arrive at Petawawa, but later there were approximately 1,200 regular soldiers in camp, not to mention the numerous field batteries and other military bodies on the ground.

The training grounds at Petawawa are about ten square miles in area, although the encampment proper occupied perhaps only a square mile. The Sixth Field Battery was located about a mile from K Company. When bivouacking the company was divided into four sections, one section being devoted to the furnishing of outposts.

Capt. Hill stated that the conduct of his men and all of the other companies was so far as he was aware highly exemplary. Altogether every body had a thoroughly enjoyable time, and much good work was accomplished by the experience afforded the men.

Several of the men of K Company were regularly in receipt of the Advertiser, and at night there was always a grand rush for the tents of those who were kept daily informed of what was stirring in this city. The Red disaster especially aroused great interest, and each paper that came into camp was eagerly read and reread perhaps several hundred times.

EDDY SUIT ENDS

Counsel for the "Next Friends" Ask for a Dismissal of the Case.

Concord, Aug. 21.—The famous suit in equity brought on March last by George W. Glover, son of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, and others as "next friends," against Calvin S. Frye and others, to secure an accounting of the property of the aged founder and head of the Christian Science Church, came to an abrupt end today. Immediately after the opening of court in the continued hearing regarding Mrs. Eddy's competency before Judge Edgar Aldrich, and his co-judges, W. E. Chandler, senior counsel for the "next friends" announced that counsel for the "next friends" had filed with the clerk of court a motion for the dismissal of the suit. He said that there were many reasons for this action, but the principal one was "the unprofitableness of any immediate result of a decision in our favor upon the exact issue as now framed, compared with the burdens and disadvantages to be endured by us, both before and after such a decision."

MR. BATES WANTED HIS PRESENTS BACK

Undertook to Secure Marriage License and Is Charged With House Breaking.

Sherlock Holmes was conceded to be at the top of the heap in the science of deduction, but he wasn't "one-two-three" to John D. Bates, a laborer, of Lambeth.

Bates has been married for some years. Recently he decided that keeping two was a hardship, so he and his better-half parted company, she going to the home of her mother, Mrs. James Post, of Lambeth, and he coming to this city, where he secured a position at laboring.

Everything went along nicely for several days. Bates was putting himself on the back for his shrewdness in having gotten rid of his wife, and there did not appear to be a cloud in the Bates' sky.

One day Bates met a friend here from Lambeth who informed him that Mrs. Bates was thinking of entering a suit for non-support.

This for a moment was a stickler for Bates. He went to his boarding-house and figured it all out. Finally a bright idea struck him. Why not secure the marriage license which had made him a slave to domestic servitude, and thereby destroy all evidence of the ceremony? Making his way to Lambeth it is alleged one dark night recently he laid low near the domicile of his mother-in-law and his deserted spouse until all was still. Then, it is alleged, he made his way through an open window, and ransacked Mrs. Post's trunk for the license.

A noise startled the midnight visitor and he left in a hurry.

Yesterday Bates was arrested by County Constable E. T. Bainard, on a charge of housebreaking.

Bates will be given a hearing before Squire Jones, of Lambeth, this afternoon.

CONDENSED LOCAL NEWS

The members of Auxiliary No. 131 have called a meeting for Thursday, Aug. 22, at their hall, Dundas street east.

Brass tablets have been placed on the Russian guns in Victoria Park by the London and Middlesex Historical Society.

Mary Wilkinson, the aged insane woman, who has been confined in the jail for two weeks, was last night removed to the asylum.

Word has been received in this city that Thomas J. R. Crawford, a former resident of London, died in Halifax on Aug. 20, at the age of 51 years.

The horseshoers of this city are arranging for a picnic to Port Stanley on Wednesday, Aug. 28.—A prize list for sports is now being arranged by the committee.

The funeral of the late Mr. Richard Wickens, who died on Monday in Toronto, took place this afternoon. Deceased was the father of Mrs. M. E. Holden, of this city.

The hospital trust will meet this afternoon, when the contracts for supplies will be made. It is understood that the cases of the nurses dismissed for climbing in windows will be discussed.

Hot Time for the Typos.

Mr. Michael Powell, Ottawa, delegate to the International Typographical Union convention at Hot Springs, Ark., called on London friends today, while en route for home. The typos experienced tropical weather during their stay at Hot Springs, the temperature reaching as high as 106—the hottest known there in many years. One delegate died from the effects of the extreme heat, several were seriously affected, and all were glad to get away.

Choir Picnic.

New St. James' Presbyterian Church held its annual picnic yesterday afternoon, and despite the inclemency of the weather during the early part of the day, an enjoyable time was spent. In the evening games and watermelons predominated. After tea, which was prepared by the lady members of the choir, the following programme was carried out: Baseball game between the Victors and the Captains, the captains being Miss Margaret Laidlaw and Miss Mackenzie. Miss Laidlaw's team won. A relay team race was won by the following couples, Doug. Omond, and Miss Mackenzie; Jack Ferguson and Miss Elsie McCrimmon; Ernie Graves and Miss Ruby McLeod. In a biscuit eating contest Mr. Ed. Cutler was first and Mrs. Ed. Cutler second.

THE LATE MR. JARVIS

One of the Oldest Residents of This Neighborhood Passes Away.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Ann Tunks Jarvis (relict of the late Levi M. Jarvis) took place from the residence of her son, Mr. Richard S. Jarvis, South London, to Brick Street Cemetery, on Tuesday afternoon, after a short service at the house, at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. A. K. Birks, of the Askin Street Methodist Church, conducting the services in Brick Street Church, and at the house.

Messrs. George Norton, William Norton, William Blair, Robert Howie, William Brazier and Robert Quick acted as pall-bearers.

The cortege was attended by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. The floral remembrances were many and beautiful.

The late Mrs. Jarvis was one of the oldest native-born residents of Westminster Township, and came of a long-lived stock, her father having reached the advanced age of 98 years at the time of his death. Mrs. Jarvis' husband predeceased her some 40 years ago. The property now owned by the city—Springbank—and where the reservoir now stands, was Mrs. Jarvis' birthplace. Mrs. Jarvis was 80 years old, and was predeceased by her sister, Mrs. Joseph Dale, Westminster, about two weeks ago, who was 82 years of age. Her death was not unexpected, she having suffered for three months from paralysis. She is survived by a family of five children, who have the deepest sympathy of a large circle of friends. The children are as follows: Mrs. John Dale, Westminster Township; R. S. Jarvis, at home; J. W. Jarvis, ex-president Dalrymple's Association; Mrs. Ernest O'Dell, Strathroy; and Oliver E. Jarvis, of Chantler Bros.

AGGIE THOMAS, A LONDON WOMAN

piled with the order of the court, and left town, she has made several brief visits to this locality since.

Was Summering.

So far as can be learned she had been spending the greater part of the present summer, at various Lake Huron pleasure resorts along with Miss Stella Baker, otherwise known as Mrs. McCintock, the woman who was with her when she shot Gilbert. Both women are said to have been living for the most part in tents, and it is alleged that they were obliged to leave at least one town where they took up their residence, having been arrested on a charge of conducting a disorderly resort.

Had Correspondence.

It is also alleged that Mrs. Thomas had been corresponding with a man by the name of Gilbert, who resided in Warton, but it cannot be learned whether the man who was shot is the one with whom the alleged correspondence was carried on.

Several friends of Mrs. Thomas in this city assert that they had seen letters written to Mrs. Thomas and signed with the name Gilbert in the woman's possession while she was in this city, and that from the nature of these epistles, Mrs. Thomas had been on exceedingly friendly terms with the man Gilbert, whoever he was.

Miss Stella Baker.

Mrs. Stella McCintock, better known by her maiden name, Stella Baker, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Baker, of 1074 Frances street, city. Several years ago she married a man by the name of J. H. McCintock, who died some time ago in Hamilton, Ont.

According to a statement made by Mr. and Mrs. Baker this morning to an Advertiser reporter, their daughter, Mrs. McCintock, went to Warton about two weeks ago in answer to a telegram which she had received, the telegram did not know from whom, requesting her to come immediately. Since she left the city they had received no word as to the whereabouts of their daughter until they heard of the shooting of Gilbert.

Miss Baker had resided in this city almost continuously all her life until this last summer, when she is believed to have been visiting the Lake Huron resorts in company with Mrs. Thomas.

An inquest has been ordered, and it will be held tonight on the body of Philip Gilbert at Warton.

Another Story.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Warton, Aug. 21.—Warton was thrown into a state of great excitement last night, when it was known that P. Gilbert had been instantly killed, when, in company with others, he raided a tent of ill-fame, the women in the tent being the notorious Agnes Thomas and an associate. They are old visitors in these parts. Two years ago they pitched their tent at Four-Mile Point in the township of Kettle, where they were tolerated too long by the authorities, and when they were forced to get out it was by intimidation from the mayor and the police magistrate of Warton, who had no jurisdiction in the matter. They then went to Alton, where the authorities routed them out in short order. They have been stopping in Warton off and on ever since, always around the outskirts of the corporation, and upon these occasions information was laid against them, but the case was dismissed each time upon the grounds of insufficient evidence. P. Gilbert was one who made complaint with the above result. Last summer the women returned and pitched their tent in the north end, and life soon became intolerable there for the residents, who decided to take the law in their own hands, and which was under the circumstances justifiable.

The raid, however, was badly managed. It could and should have been done without any noise or attempt at bodily injury. Instead of this the ropes were cut, stones were thrown and a baton used. Agnes Thomas came out and warned them that she would shoot, and she fired several shots in the air. Her arm was then hit by a club. It was thrown out of position, and the revolver went off, and a shot went through Gilbert's heart. The mayor immediately swore in a large number of special constables and the arrests were made.

P. Gilbert was nearly 60 years of age and had no relatives in this country. He was English by birth and had been a constable in South Africa. He was an honest, law-abiding citizen, and his sad death is deeply lamented by everyone.

The Prussian and Bavarian authorities are experimenting with a system of wireless telegraph signals for railroads which is said to promise good results. An aerial transmitter wire is carried on the telegraph poles at the side of the road, with transmitting stations in the signal bell towers, and a wire loop antenna is placed on the top of one of the cars of the train. By this means signals to "stop," "go ahead," "go slow," and so on, are transmitted to moving trains over a distance of seven and a half miles.

Mr. Geo. W. Anderson, of Hespeler, has returned home after spending a pleasant holiday at Port Stanley.

Misses Myrtle and Effie Hodgins, of Wilson avenue, are spending their vacation in Bala, Muskoka, and vicinity.

Miss May Breen has returned home after spending a week with her aunt, Mrs. Wm. Moylan, Alma street, St. Thomas.

Miss Margaretta Breen, saleslady for A. L. Garland, Talbot street, St. Thomas, is spending her holidays with her parents, concession 4, London Township.

Mr. G. Grievs, conductor of the Grand Trunk Railway, accompanied by his sister, Miss Carrie Grievs, 383 Glebe street, have gone for a trip up the lakes and to Bad Axe, Mich. Miss Grievs is in ill health, and it is hoped the trip will improve her.

Master Clifford Lister has returned after a pleasant visit with Mrs. Bartiss, of Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. William Allen Young left on Monday for a month's stay at Forest Nook, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Griffiths and two daughters, of 223 Waterloo street, have returned home after a very pleasant visit with their aunt, Mrs. George Bawden, of Detroit.

THE WAYS OF WINGHAM

Serious Effects of Drouth—Horseshoer Has Strenuous Job.

Mr. Palmer, who lives near Wroxeter, brought to Wingham the other day a 5-year-old mare that had never been shod on the hind-feet. He took the animal to one blacksmith, who refused to attempt the job of shoeing. Another blacksmith undertook the task, but had to give it up because of the beast's viciousness. V. S. Ford was then called in. He threw the mare down, and she was shod lying on her back.

Wingham now has three private motor cars. The last—a beauty—to arrive was for Mr. Leopard. The others are owned, one by Mr. Walker, the other by Mr. Crawford.

There seems to be a little trouble at our big foundry between employer and employee, consequently a number of the latter are looking elsewhere for employment. It is hoped the trouble will soon pass and that our great enterprise will continue to go with a swing, as it has done in the past.

County Constable Phippen is waging war upon picture-card exhibits, as seen in some of the shop windows, claiming that they are immoral.

Mrs. Charles Lloyd, a lady well known and beloved in Wingham, is very ill.

A gang of burglars has been invading the town of late. The stores of E. A. Mills, J. Kerr and G. Mason have been entered at short intervals apart. Their last effort, which, however, proved a failure, was made up on the residence of Mr. J. Sleman, who lives alone on Leopold street. Although they partly succeeded in breaking a window they were glad to beat a hasty retreat as Mr. Sleman was ready to give them a hot reception.

The continued dry weather is getting very serious. Some farmers have already started to feed their cattle. The rainmaker of the evening is a lady remarking the other evening as she was milking her cow, "I will only get about a quart, whereas if feed was good I would get ten." As our barns are not groaning beneath their burden this fall, what will they be like in the spring?

Mr. Bond, a gentleman well known in this locality, preached in the Baptist Church Sunday morning, and also gave an address in the Methodist Church in the afternoon. He, formerly by profession an actor. Since his conversion he has exercised his wonderful powers for the benefit of his fellowmen. His lecture in the Baptist Church Monday evening was intensely interesting.

BRYAN IN TRAIN WRECK

Chicago, Aug. 21.—A dispatch from Belvidere, Ill., says: As William Jennings Bryan adjusted his necktie, and brushed the cinders from his trousers, after emerging safely from a wreck near here yesterday on the Chicago and Northwestern road, he reflectively murmured, "Four."

Then drawing out his diary he noted down the location, and the date with these words: "Fourth time a wreck has occurred on my various journeys to speak at the Rockford Chautauqua. Where is the silver lining?"

With words of encouragement to the train crew, and other passengers, who all escaped uninjured, Mr. Bryan joined the line of refugees who wended their way up the track for more than a mile.

At Belvidere Mr. Bryan took a trolley car and made the Chautauqua grounds behind schedule time. The wreck was caused by the baggage car taking an open switch. Three coaches were derailed. Mr. Bryan was in one of the day coaches that was derailed.

Newfoundland Fisheries Disputes

To Go to The Hague Tribunal

London, Aug. 20.—The American Government, which has taken the lead at The Hague peace conference, in endeavoring to promote arbitration, will be responsible for giving The Hague tribunal the most important case yet submitted to it, in the Newfoundland fisheries dispute, which undoubtedly will be taken there as a result of the negotiations conducted in London between the foreign office and the American ambassador, Whitelaw Reid.

Both the foreign office and the embassy maintain diplomatic reserve, but it has been learned from unquestionable sources that the long correspondence between the two governments made it seem clear that their contentions could not be harmonized and had reached an "impasse." Finally, Mr. Reid presented a proposal to submit the dispute to the arbitration of The Hague tribunal, having the authority of President Roosevelt and Secretary Root to do so. After a week or two of consideration the British Government accepted the proposal and then the American Government proposed that for another year, while the matter was in process of arbitration, the fisheries should be conducted as they were last year, under the same "modus vivendi." There has been delay in concluding the arrangement. While the British Government has secured the assent of Sir Robert Bond, the Newfoundland premier, to the agreement, Sir Robert undoubtedly will be reluctant to accept the modus vivendi, which he opposed strongly last season. However, there is little doubt that the agreement will be enforced and that the fisheries, during the new season beginning next week, will be conducted on the same methods as the last.

CANADIAN BOY IN EVIL HANDS

Chatham Lad of 13 Years Who Ran Away Became a Tool of Criminals.

Chatham, Aug. 20.—Definite word has at last been received in this city from Reginald Glasser, the Chatham youth who ran away from home and was arrested in Covington, Ky. Before he went away from home, Glasser took some money from his mother's purse, and since that time he has not been heard of. Mr. John McConnell, a grocer of this city, has received word from a man named McConnell, of Covington, with whom Glasser lived for some time during his wanderings, asking for information concerning the young lad.

The following is a copy of the letter: "Could you find out for me, through the police, or in any other way, where there is a child missing from your town. A child has been stopping with me who told me he knew a man named McConnell who kept a grocery at Chatham. He has the appearance of a child who was raised in an orphanage or home of some kind. He was arrested today for stealing and we think he has had an older accomplice. He has told me that a man took him having died at that time. He said, also, that he was at Atlantic City with a man who did some robbing. The man skipped out to England and he found his way down here. We want to find out something about him. Could you give us any information? He is about 12 or 13 years old and seems to be a very nice child, nicely trained. My name is McConnell and that is how he happened to tell me about you. He calls himself Jack McDougall or Jack Williams. Address 422 Greening street, Covington, Ky." Mr. McConnell has handed the letter to the police and a communication will at once be sent to the Covington authorities.

At Port Florence, on the shore of the Great Lake Victoria, which is the chief source of the Nile, there is a dry-dock cut out of solid rock by natives, who had never before done much serious work. The dock is 250 feet long, 48 feet wide and 14 feet deep. It is 3,700 feet above the level of the sea, or nearly three times the altitude of Lake Chautauqua.

A FLOATING DOCKYARD

Constructed in Secret, the Cyclops Can Repair an Entire Fleet.

London, Aug. 20.—Thousands of north country people who have gone to see the new seagoing dockyard, H. M. S. Cyclops, at South dock, Sunderland, have had to rest content with a distant view of this wonderful vessel. Applications to inspect the ship more closely are met with refusal. Even the workmen of Sir James Laing and Sons, who have built her, are not allowed to communicate with any other part of the ship.

The ship is the equivalent of a dockyard employing 300 men, that being the number of artificers she will carry, in addition to the crew to work the ship. She is nearly 500 feet long, and steams at sixteen knots an hour. If the Cyclops is accompanying a fleet at sea, and one of the warships loses a propeller, instead of it being towed home to a dockyard, the commander will signal for a new propeller to be made, and the order will be executed on board the floating workshop. The same applies to anchors.

In addition to the foundry, fitted up with huge cupolas, there are forges where crank shafts can be wrought, and there are fully equipped copper and brass works, and rolling and punching mills. Any portion of machinery can be renewed or repaired, and vessels of the fleet, in case of their refitting apparatus breaking down, can be supplied with unlimited quantities of ice, made on board the Cyclops. In case of accidents to condensing plant, the Cyclops could supply a whole fleet with fresh water.

Marie Fassnauer, a giantess, who recently arrived in London, is 8 feet in height, 150 inches around the chest and weighs 343 pounds. The Evening Standard expresses a hope that she is a suffragette.

LOCAL MARKET.

London, Wednesday, Aug. 21.
Hay sold quickly today, and there was not enough offered for the break demand. Sales were made at $15.50 to $16 per ton. One load of straw (the first this week) sold at $6.50 per ton.
The first load of new oats were offered today, which sold at $1.30 per cwt; old oats at $1.20 per cwt.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

While there was no new feature at the markets held here during the past week, there was a brisk demand in almost every line, and prices were firm.
Grain—The demand for oats is excellent; prices are higher than a week ago; sales are made at $1.45 to $1.50 per cwt; new oats at $1.30 per cwt; old oats at $1.20 per cwt. The millers are offering 80c per bu for new wheat, and 85c for old.

Hay and Straw—Owing to the fact that the farmers are busy harvesting their oat crop, the delivery of hay has been small; consequently there is a good demand and prices are $1.15 to $1.20 per ton higher than a week ago; sales are made at $1.15 to $1.20 per ton. Straw is very scarce at present, prices are steady, at $6.50 per ton.

Butter and Eggs—Butter is in good demand and prices are firm, at 20c to 22c for the crocks and 22c to 24c for pound rolls by the basket lot. Eggs are in good demand; the dealers report that they are getting their supply at 15c per dozen for crates; by the basket lot 16c to 16 1/2c per dozen is most frequently paid.

Fruit—There will be no big days for fruit this season, unless it is greatly mistaken, "was the remark made by one of the most extensive fruit dealers in the city. As soon as the people start to buy, prices will advance. Peaches are selling at 90c to $1 per 11-quart basket, and plums bring the same price; wholeberries sell at 15c to 16c per box wholesale; the apples offered at present are of the usual late season; sales are made at 60c to $1 per bu for the ordinary run, and $1.50 per bu for hand-picked.

Potatoes—There is a good demand, but the supply is not as large as a week ago; prices are 80c per bu.
Poultry—Trade is a trifle slow, and the following prices are most frequently paid: Spring chickens, 10c per lb alive and 12c dressed; old fow, 7c to 8c per lb alive and 9c dressed; ducks, 8c per lb alive and 10c to 12c dressed; there is no trade for turkeys.

Dressed Hogs—There is a good demand, at $9.25 to $9.50 per cwt.
Live Hogs—The price paid here last Monday was $6.50 per cwt; the market is unsettled at present, and it is hard to tell how prices will be; the buyers say that prices are likely to be lower; small pigs are selling at $5 to $6 per pair for pigs 6 to 8 weeks old.

Butchers' Meats—Beef is dull of sale, at $5 to $6.50, and occasionally $7 per cwt is paid for an extra choice carcass; for hindquarters prices range from $6 to $8, and $5 to $6 for forequarters; lamb is selling at 14c per lb by the carcass; veal is in demand at $8 to $9 per cwt; mutton, $8 to $10 per cwt.

Money—Sales have been made the past week at 10c per lb for strained in large lots and $1.60 to $1.70 per lb for sections.

HAY MARKET.

Toronto, Aug. 20.—Baled Hay—Old hay is nominal; new steady, at $12.50 to $13, in car lots on track here.

Baled Straw—$7.50 per ton in car lots on track here.

STOCKS RISING.

London, Aug. 21.—The favorable construction which Wall street placed on President Roosevelt's speech at Provincetown, Mass., yesterday, and the subsequent rise in prices at New York, caused Americans to open strongly on the stock exchange this morning, but in the absence of sustained buying power prices soon dropped, and at noon the market ruled dull, with quotations fractionally under par.

In other directions the tendency was better. Consols improved a quarter of a point, and Copper shares attracted attention. Rio Tinto advanced 1 1/2 on continental buying.

THROWN DOWN SHAFT.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 21.—Daniel F. Cobb, president of the Daniel F. Cobb & Co. of this city, and formerly general southwestern agent of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, fell down an elevator shaft from the fourth floor of the Fidelity building, and was instantly killed yesterday.

The accident was caused by an inexperienced elevator conductor, who failed to stop the car at the proper position, bottom of the elevator and the floor. The car shot upward and Cobb was thrown down the shaft.

MUST THROW OPEN BOOKS.

New York, Aug. 20.—Stock watering and over-capitalizing by utilities corporations in this city will be practically the result of a rule adopted by the public service commission. The rule serves notice on such concerns that hereafter to make any increase in the capitalization they will have to throw open their books, and that the most minute details will be required to be given before new bond or share issues will be even considered.

Pierre Thierry has entered an action against ex-Minister Eugene, claiming $320,000. Thierry's uncle lent Napoleon $500,000 in 1855. Napoleon renewed the note in 1870. It was lost at the time of the Franco-Prussian war, but was found recently.

FIFTY PER CENT FAIL.

About the Same Number as Usual Fail to Matriculate.

Toronto, Aug. 20.—"The failures this year have been very little more numerous than in other years."

This was the statement made by the registrar of the education department this morning, when asked regarding the impression generally entertained that the percentage of failures in connection with the junior leaving and matriculation examinations had been exceptionally large.

"The exact percentage of failures will not be definitely known until the Minister of Education's report is prepared, which will not be for some time."

Seath Says High School Changes Will Work Towards It.

Toronto, Aug. 20.—With respect to contemplated changes in the programme of studies for the public or high schools of the Province, Superintendent of Education Seath stated today that any changes to be made with any way disturb the schools, and that teachers and pupils could easily adjust themselves to the alterations.

Dr. Seath intimated that several new schemes might be introduced into the school system by September of next year, but that it would take seven or eight years to really get all plans working. These proposals, he further stated, tended towards eliminating the examinations.
