> Something About "The Siren." Although the new musical comedy that Charles Frohman will present at the Grand, Tuesday, Oct. 1, serves as a vehicle for the debut of Donald Brian as star, the title of the production does not refer to that charming young artist. In "The Siren," the name role is that of a young woman who is used by her uncle, the minister of police, to lure the here on to his destruction. In fact this par-ticular siren is a sort of delightful woman detective, and it does not interfere with the continuity of the story, because she ultimately becomes the hero's bride. "The Siren" is by Leo Stein and A. M. Will-ner, the music by Leo Fall, and the Eng-lish version of the libretto is by Harry B.

OLD LADY ALMOST

A Remarkable and Convincing Statement of the Success of Cuticura Soap and Ointment in the Treatment of the Pain, Itching and Burning of Eczema

"I, the undersigned, cannot give enough praise to the Cuticura Remedies. I had been doctoring for at least a year for eczema or my foot. I had tried doctor after doctor all to no avail. When a young girl I sprained my ankle three different times, paying little or no attention to it, when five years ago or no attention to it, when live years ago a small spot showed upon my left ankle. I was worried and sent for a doctor. He said it was eczema. He drew a small bone from the ankle about the size of a match and about an inch long. The small hole grew to about the size of an apple, and the eczema spread to the knee. The doctors never could heal the hole in the ankle. The whole foot ran water all the time.

"My husband and my sons were up night and day wheeling me from one room to another in the hope of giving me some relief. I would sit for hours at a time in front of the fireplace hoping for daybreak. The pain was so intense I was almost crazy. in fact, I would lose my reason for hours at a time. One day a friend of mine dropped in to see me. No more had she glanced at my foot than she exclaimed, 'Mrs. Finnegan, why in the world don't you try the Cuticura Remedies!' Being disgusted with the doctors and their medicines, and not being able to sleep at all, I decided to give the Cuticura Soap and Cutlcura Ointment a trial. After using them three days that night I slept as sound as a silver dollar for eight long hours. I awoke in the morning with but very little pain, in fact, I thought I was in heaven. After using the Cuticura Remedies for three months I was perfectly restored to health, thanks to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I will be sixty-four years of age my next birthday, hale and hearty at present." (Signed) Mrs. Julia Finnegan, 2234 Hebert St., St. Louis, Mo., Mar. 7, '11. # Cool Weather Will Be Welcome Now That Women's Winter Coats Are Ready

As to the styles, you will appreciate them best when you see the coats with your own eyes-for a printed description cannot convey the softness and beauty of the new cloths, the attractive colorings and the good styles. What a pleasant glow it throws over the coming chilly days of autumn, the selection of a coat that has as much charm as comfort in it.

When you see these beautiful new styles you will have no regret in laying away your lovely summer garments and slipping your eager arms into these great roomy coats of soft, plain and reversible chinchilla cloths and tweeds. We advise an early selection. Very little trimming is seen because of the heavy soft materials, but many clever adjustable collars are shown. Belts and half belts are used, also large fancy buttons, harmonizing or matching tones of cloth. Prices range from $8.50 to $50.00.

Her Husband Having Lost His Fortune in Toronto Land Speculations.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Toronto, Sept. 25. - There died at the Aged Women's Home in Belmont street, yesterday, Olga, Baroness von Heimrod, widow of the late Baron Ernest von Heimrod, who lived for many years on a little farm at Humber Bay. The baron died about two years ago and it was understood that the baroness had come into a considerable annuity, conditionally upon her returning to Europe. Her health, however, would not permit her to undertake this voyage, and she has been looked after at the Aged Women's Home by some of the prominent German families resident in Toronto.

The Baron von Heimrod came from a distinguished noble Prussian family and when he came to Toronto many years ago he had considerable money, which, however, he lost in unfortunate speculations. The old couple for many years eked out an existence by selling chickens, eggs, vegetables, etc. which they raised at their little farm at Humber Bay. To see them driving down town to market in their quain old-fashioned rig was an exceedingly interesting sight.

SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT.

Sir Richard Cartwright was the last, save one, of the "elder statesmen," who formed a link with the pre-Confederation era. Sir Charles Tupper, the sole surviving father of Confederation, is now also the only man living who sat in the old Leg-Islature of the united provinces. Sir Richard's record of nearly 50 years centinuously in parliament was not matched by any of his later contemporaries. During that fateful period, Canadian public life was enriched by the constant presence of so distinguished an intellect, and so incorruptible a character. Sir Richard made enemies he spared no one who deserved attack-but not one of them ever hinted a suspicion of his in-

Sir Richard reversed the maxim, "the young radical is the old conservative." The scion of a United Empire Loyalist family, he was reared in an atmosphere of high Toryism, and entered parliament apparently fixed in the political creed of his class. He had wealth and s cial position to attach him to the ideas of class ascendency. But like Gladstone, born in the same condition, he had a mind open to the light, and a philosophic bent. His gradual estrangement from the Censervative party ended in a complete breach at the time of the Pacific scandal. His reputation as a serious student and keen debater of financial and economic questions marked him out for preferment in the Mackenzie ministry. It was his misfortune as finance minister to be confronted by a world-wide depression, culminating in 1877 and 1878. He was besieged by demands for higher duties in the Interest of Canadian industries. A went up for a protective tariff as a panacea for all the evils of the time. While Sir John Macdonald saw the apportunity to restore his battered dortunesansir Richard Cartwright wes inflexible in his conviction that Janada had nothing to gain and much to lose by high protection.

The Mackenzle Government paid the penalty in the election of 1878 for standing by its principles. And the bogey of hard times, which beset the whole world at that time in a unique degree has clouded the Canadian : Liberal - party ever- since, Though times were certainly far from roseate between 1878 and 1896. the period of the exodus, yet the dip of most ruinous depression had passed in the cycle of economic events, and people came to associate in their minds business disaster with the moderate tariff of Mackenzie and Cartwright. In the natural order of things recovery would have been made just as soon if the tariff had been left alone. Sir Richard was sure of it.

His sarcastic denunciations of the evils engendered by protectionism made him the most dreaded and disliked of Liberal leaders in the 1880's and 1890's. He had a formidable equipment of economic and general learning, polished literary gifts, and the whole arsenal of satire's weapons. Never descending, however, to rough and tumble warfare, he maintained ever a high level of controversy whether in parliament or on the public platform. In the time of the decline and fall of the Conservative regime, he was the Jeremiah of those "blue ruin" days, voicing eloquently his country's ills and needs, and scourging misrule.

In his campaign for unrestricted reciprocity in 1891, one thing that stung Sir Richard Cartwright, with the blood of a United Empire Loyalist in his veins, was the charge of disloyalty recklessly levelled at him. This more than anything else aroused his scorn. He saw that the sentiment of loyalty was paraded by many who were only serving selfish interest. Their loyalty had no other lasis than privilege. Loyalty also was obviously associated with conditions of governmental extravagance, corruption and unfairness, which in those melancholy days were forcing Canada's best blood into the United States, impoverishing our farmers and driving Canada into bankruptcy. Sir Richard Cartwright knew how to express these things with a fiery tongue in a way to make even thick sking wince. For telling home truths he was, of course, round-

His opponents later did him justice. No one nowadays would question his patriotism, though his party has once again been slandered. The personal rancors of twenty years ago have long passed away. Long regarded by all parties as a great Canadian, with mental powers unimpaired to the last, still a great orator and leader, one of the glories of our parliament, he leaves the living with title clear to a high place among the builders of the Canadian nation.

A MISGUIDED CARTOONIST.

A Toronto cartoonist, of coarse techlique, for some time has been endeavoring without success to draw the lines of senility into the still vivacious face of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The only thing that lends recognition to his figure are suggestive underlines of type, and the flowing mane of the Liberal leader. This artist never fails to depict Laurier as a drooping, careharassed, old man, with sunken, lacklustre eyes and haggard expression. A true picture of Laurier today reveals a jaunty, straight-limbed gentleman, who but for his silvery hair might well be regarded as middle-aged; a man as virile as Sir James Whitney, who is but one year his junior; a lean, sleek thoroughbred, who has never broken down, and whose heart and mind and body are strong enough to carry him to the greatest victory of his career.

MR. LAVERGNE'S WARNING. Mr. Armand Lavergne, Mr. Bourassa's lieutenant, thus warns the Conservative party in Quebec:

"In reference to the navy question, I have fought in the Province of Quebec side by side with the Conservatives, who also, in the district of Quebec, at least, commencing with the present minister, Mr. Pelletier, were all Nationalists; I have not changed my position, and I love to believe that although our allies became 'blue' on the 21st of September, they have not changed either on that question. I wait to know, before pornounce. Everyone knows that I have been, and that I am still, opposed to all participation by Canada in wars of the empire. Together we have claimed, that before any change can take place in this matter, the people of Canada shall be consulted in a plebiscite. Ministers in honor to see that this is carried

This is an impossible position. The Liberal leaders of Quebec have stood out against it. But it is the position taken by all the French-Canadian followers of Mr. Borden in the ast election, including three members of the present cabinet. To say that the twenty Nationalist-Conservative members of the House, with an exception or two, will accept any naval program the Government brings down, is to assert that they are dishonest and deliberately deceived their constituents, but they will probably prove the charge. Messrs. Bourassa and Lavergne, whom no one accuses of recanting, will be forced to admit that the Nationalist movement has been sold out. But they have fed their grudge against Laurier, and the immediate purpose of the Borden-Bourassa alliance has been served.

Some bright Conservative journalist might interview Adam Beck on the German peril.

There is a rush of Canadian cattle to the States to take advantage of the the witness, servative farmer will so expose himself to the contagion of disloyalty.

Sir Richard Cartwright was one of the few public men whose speeches could be reported word for word, and want anybody to hold me. I can hold the syntax be perfect. Public myself, so if you must hold somebody, speakers sometimes have reason to complain of reporters, but reporters have also reason to complain of public speakers.

The National Insurance Medical Asfrom nearly 9,000 doctors a promise to work the insurance act. It looks as though the British Medical Association will fail in its attempt to bring about an effective medical boycott of the act. The Chancellor of the Exchequer is not a man easily thwarted.

Lord Templeton says the loyal people of Ireland will never consent to be son, the leader of the Irish loyalists, governed by a priest-ridden parliament. When the loyal people of Ireland can prove that they are victims of oppression, they will have counselled the men of Ulster to rethe moral and material support of sist home rule by every means Protestants all over the Empire who are not excited now in behalf of people who are squealing before they are Sergt. Will, of Hamilton, killed his Crothers might have mentioned that wife while on a spree, and shot himself. The Hamilton Herald says: "Those upon whom liquor has the effect that it had upon poor Will should never touch it." This is obviously true, and it is an argument, too, for keeping liquor out of the reach of such people as far as possible. At least, the community can do a great deal to reduce the temptation.

Sir Richard Cartwright's last utterance on public questions was a statement to the Ottawa Free Press last Thursday that Canada has for years had all the advantages of the British consular service which his successor now pretends to have secured for the first time. Mr. Foster has obtained no benefits that were not obtained by Sir O, God, extend Thy saving care, Richard as minister of commerce. All this splurge about Mr. Foster's imperial achievement is made to look rather foolish.

SCHOOLS FOR BREEDING SNOBS

IBy Special Arrangement With the Winnipeg Telegram.]

Judging from the criticism which is at resent being directed by English journalists against the gentlemen's schools of the old country the masters, graduates and friends of Eton, Harrow, and scores of aristocratic preparatory schools will be seriously disturbed in mind. The Daily Mail has been exposing the snobbery which prevails in the gentlemen's schools of England, but the latest and most powerful attack upon the whole system appears in the current number of English Review. I have not read for years a more cutting arraignment of respectable institutions than this article by a graduate of one of the big public schools of the old land. He not only gives his own experience, thus arguing from first-hand knowledge, but he brings forward a mass of testimony from friends and acquaintances to uphold his argument that the big schools of England make for inefficiency and are hotbeds of immorality, class scobbishness and hopeless antiquarianism in educational methods.

Listen to his own story. "I can say truthfully that the only education I received during my three years and a half sojourn at one of our latest and most expensive public schools was self-taught. I left school the superannuated cricketer type, a feckless, ignorant, swaggering youth, and I was put into a relation's office in the city. There was a career there, but I could not work; my idea was to be off in a tophat and patentleather boots. Figures bored me unutterably. In the office men said "another gentleman-rotter." I thought them "old putrid asses," and the result was that at the end of two years I was taken away. Luckily I got into a scrape. My parents sent me abroad to a German university, and there I fell almost at once into a congenial atmosphere. I found men who worked, who talked, who thought, who sought originality. I recovered my own self, which had been rushed at the public school. When I returned I had a Kaiser moustache, it is true, and the suspicion of a paunch, but knew I could face the world." The sting in this paragraph is, of course, the praise of German educational methods.

ete!" According to this writer, such is the leading beatitude in all gentlemen's schools in England. He would uphold Kipling in his sneer at "the flannelled fool at the wicket," for although young men become proficient at games in these big schools, they come out unfitted for life in a democratic, hustling world. "The wrong. The little Etonian is a walking imp of class priggishness and class arogance. He learns there to look on the world with a damnmyeye carelessness that literally unfits him to take off his coat in after life. It is not an exaggeration to say that fully half of the boys who go to our public schools come away mental derelicts, incapable of concentration, their whole outlook focussed on their own personal pleasure and gratifications, looking at all serious things and at all men who work seriously with contempt." I suppose there is another side to this grestion. There are always two sides to every question, and there must be something admirable about these schools. But is certainly a scorching indictment, and Englishmen in Canada, especially those interested in education, ought to read the full text of the article.

BETWEEN LOVE AND FAME

[By Beatrice Fairfax.] [Copyright, ;1912.]

A perplexed little girl named Hannah writes me:

"I will be eighteen in October, and have been keeping company with young man three years my senior for over a year. We have been travelling in the same set since we were in school together, and I am sure he is all right. He is a good, steady, reliable young man, gets $22 a week, and is considered a good catch by everyone who knows him.

"Herein lies my trouble: I have, I have been told by an artist in the musical world, a contralto voice which, if properly trained, would land me on the operatic stage. The question is: Do I love William enough to renounce my art? Or do I love my art enough to give up William? I know I cannot give

And should you overcome discourage and defeat and conquer in the end, that you will find nothing in the glare of the footlights and the applause of the public as satisfying as the happiness a true woman finds in a modest little

Sometimes Cold - Sometimes Loving. Dear Miss Grey -I am a young man 19 years of age, and am in love with a girl my own age. I do not know whether she loves me or not nor can understand her. Sometimes she seems cold toward me and at other times she is gentle and loving. We work at the same office and whenever she works in the evenings I escort her home. She always welcomes my attentions on these occasions. A days ago I heard that she was in love with another man. Do you think this can be so, and that she is only using me as an escort. The Story of a Tea-Leaf.

Tea has a long journey of many thousands of miles before it reaches the teapot. Some of it grows in China, in small fields and on the hillsides, but most of it grows in the large tea-gardens of India. The tea grows in small bushes, and the leaves are picked and put into baskets. Great numbers of men, women and children spend all the working part the plant. The leaves must be carefully picked off with the thumb-nail, without being torn, and a good picker picks 20 or 30 pounds in a day. or 30 pounds in a day.

It is next wrapped up in lead packets or packed in wooden chests, and the packets and chests are taken to the ship The good ship brings the tea thousands of miles by sea, and at last it comes home and we find it on our

Now, when we see the tea-leaf floating in our cups, we shall have a new interest in it since we know the story of its long journey. To make one pound of tea ready for use takes a man's work for a day, and a man must work for a week to prepare tea to last one of us for a year.

Fireside Hide-and-Seek.

At this season of the year, when the enings grow long, it seems that boys and girls cannot learn too many ways of amusing themselves, and they are always eager for new games to be played by the fireside. This way of playing 'hide-and-seek" you are sure to like.

What Can You Draw From a Crooked Line? Just Try

Here's an idea for entertaining a party of young folks with materials alvays at hand-pencils and paper. Let each member of the party draw at random on the centre of his sheet of paper a short crooked line. The line should not cross itself at any point. When this has been done all the guests exchange papers and each tries to make a picture on the paper he receives, using the crooked line as part of the outline of his drawing. The pictures shown herewith were made in this way, the original line being distinguished by being made heavier than the rest.

Rugby Club Meets Tonight; First Game on Saturday

Arrangements Have Been Made With Woodstock College Team---Local Players Showing Up Strong in Practices Which Are Being Held Every Night.

A meeting of the Western University rugby club will be held at the Tecumsen House tonight at 9 o'clock to complete arrangements for the season. Rev. J. G. Inkster, the president of the club, has called the meeting, and requests that a large number of the players and others interested be present. The nature of the business to be discussed has not been divulged by the president.

The first game of the season will be played in this city on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, when the local team will clash with the fourteen representing Woodstock College. The local players recognize that by winning the first game of the season, the rather weak hold that rugby has on the sport-loving public of London will be greatly strengthened, and have been practicing faithfully for some time past. Last night over a dozen men were out in their uniforms despite the rain, and a good practice was held. While the make-up of the team for Saturday has been nearly decided upon, the final announcement will not be made until after the practice on Friday night. The following men are particularly requested to turn out not later than 6 o'clock every night for the remainder of the week: Yohn brothers, Kennedy, Judd, Borland, McQueen, Chivers, McKinnon, Hogs.

Fifteen Race Track Gamblers Charged

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 24.—Acting under orders from Attorney-General Poe, Deputy Marshal Manning, of Baltimore, and 25 policemen under his command arrested fifteen bookmakers at Havre De Grace racetrack after the last race this afternoon upon warrants issued by Magistrate Sipple, charging them with violating the gambling laws of the state. The arrests followed the efforts to close the track by Governor Goldsborough upon the advice of the attorney-general that the racing commission of Harford County was an illegal body in that the members of it had failed to qualify and that therefore racing was being conducted contrary to the law.

The cases against the bookmakers were immediately dismissed by Magistrate Sipple.

WANTED-ANOTHER MANAGER FOR THE HELPLESS CINCI REDS! WHO'LL BE THE NEXT VICTIM?

Garry Herrmann is once more out with his lasso. It probably won't be long before some hapless ball-tosser is branded as the manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

This news and the remembrance of the failures in the job of Cincinnati boss must be enough to send all prospective managers of the club scurry ing to get under cover.

Baseball history has shown that the managerial job in Redville isn't the softest, most desirable thing in baseball, and if Herrmann succeeds in slip. ping the lariat over Otto Knabe, of the Phils, Bill Sweeney, of the Boston Braves, or Miller Huggins, of the St Louis Cardinals, there may be another name added to the long list of Redland failures.

At Hamilton they are not content with one exhibition game, as the two rival clubs have split the early plum and will both meet outside teams, the Alerts taking on Argonauts, while the Tigers will meet Ottawa College. A two-year truce is said to have been entered into between the two clubs, not to meddle with the other's players, and the men who played with the one club last year will be back again this season. The two clubs, however, are not helping this truce very much by arranging two exhibition games on the one day.

in which she was content to dream and in which words seemed superfluous and uncalled-for. She wondered that Hen-rietta could talk so much. What was there to say? Billy had never been in love. She wondered vaguely if the enlove. She wondered vaguely if the enfolding content, the longing for solitude and her own thoughts were forerunners of approaching death. The good die young, and Billy felt that she was content to go, to drift away into the eternal peace of the after life. She was not of an analytical disposition, and she only knew that she was happly, causelessly happy, and did not ask the reason. The Watermelon stood so closely beside her that once when he turned she could smell the tobacco on his breath. She wanted to rub her head on his shoulder like a kitten, and wondered if she were growing weak-minded.

Without warning the bushes at her side parted, and a cow with great gentle eyes peered out at them, so near that Billy could feel the breath, warm and sweet, upon her cheek. With a little cry she shrank close to the Watermelon. He felt her slender body, soft and yielding, nestling against him, smelt the fragrance of her curly hair, and suddenly a great tide of longing, of passion, of desire welled up in him and choked him. He wanted to crush her to him, to cover eyes and hair with kisses, to hold her to the cars, waiting for the others to reso tightly that she would cry for release. All the ungoverned feelings of the past lew years surged over him and threatened to carry both for ever out of sight of land. But, blindly, not knowing what he did, he turned from her and picked up a stick to hurl at the cow. She had turned to him in her fear, and with the honor of his clerical father, he controlled

Billy laughed and straightened up, as the cow, grieved and surprised, backed off in the dark. "I'm not afraid of cows, Wille," she said. "Don't you know it? She just came so suddenly I was startled."

"Yes," agreed the Watermelon dully.
"So was I? Why did you call me Willie?"
"Short for William, and William is your name, goose. Don't you remember your own name?" crooned Billy, leaning toward him in the dark.

"Yes, surely," said the Watermelon.
"But I hate my name. Call me Jerry.
That's what the boys call me."

He did not add that his name was Jeroboam Martin. He being the seventh young Martin to arrive, his distracted parents had turned to the Bible for help in names as well as in the more vital necessities laughed Billy questioningly. "Yes," said Jeroboam gravely, and added abruptly, "Let's go back."

They turned and retraced their steps. Billy all a-thrill with she knew not what, singing a foolish little song beneath her breath, the Watermelon staring angrily before him, denying hotly to himself what would not be denied, that he loved Billy. He loved her, not as he had loved other women, not as a careless, lazy tramp, taking what offered, good, bad or worse, gentle, reverend father cherish the one woman.

But who was he to love like that? The

"Oh, law," said she. "I'm tired."
"So am I," said the Watermelon moodily. "Tired of living."
"Do you know," said Billy, "I was just thinking that death might not be so awful, just to close your eyes and drift out into space, on and on and on." "It would be a darned sight better than living," answered the Watermelon. "Hel would be preferable. I beg your pardon." "Aren't you well?" asked Billy anxiousy. "As for me, I never really want to die inless I am feeling perfectly well." Henrietta and Bartlett strolled up as they approached the cars, where they found the general pacing up and down the

To his surprise they had not gone by more than three yards when they stopped, tied the horse and came back on foot.

"First," said the general, as the four gathered around him in the light of the car lamps, "I thought they were hold-up men. The lamps on my car had gone out and they did not see it, thought that there was only one car, so there would not be many to defend it; besides I was the only many to defend it; besides. I was the only one they had seen, and doubtless they sur-mised I was alone and they could have held me up easily "Father," cried Henrietta, "what did

"Before I could do anything they asked me the make of my car. I told them. They said it didn't look like a Packard, and I saw that they were looking at Will's car and hadn't seen mine, back near the wall and with the lights out. I pointed to it, and said that was my car. They seemed surprised to see two cars. I told them my name, gave them my card, and told them I was motoring to Maine with a party of friends, and asked them what they were going to do about it.
"What did they say?" asked Bartlett, while the Watermelon slowly rolled cigarette.

"Oh, they apologized," admitted the general. "But what I want to know, and what I don't like at all, is why everyone is so curious to know the make of my car, the engine number and the license num-ber. What business is it of theirs?" The two girls slept in one car, Bartlett and the general in the other. The Watermelon lay on the glass on Billy's side of the car, and sought to reason the thing the car, and sought to reason the thing out, to plan what to do. Alone in the dark he did not sleep, but stared before the car attuned to the many sounds of the car attuned to the many sounds of the car attuned to the many sounds of the summer night.

CHAPTER XV.

One not born a vagabond in heart can never understand a vagabond's love for the open places, for absolute freedom, to go where he wants, see what he wants, work when he wants. To a vagabond an office is intolerable, the accumulation of dollars, grinding another man to gain a petty advance for oneself, utterly uniterally and the state of the s place, where all think alike, look alike, act alike, spending one's days in an office, bent over a littered, dusty, shabby desk, half-pint witch hazel. This is remarkably effective.

Stella writes: "My complexion is horarbly muddy. What shall I do for it?" Get an ounce of mercolized wax at your druggist's. Apply this nightly like you'd use cold cream washing it off mornings. This will cause the offensive cuticle gradually to make way by a process of gentle absorption for the clear velvety, healthy-hued skin underneath. — Wonards Realm.

This is remarkably effective.

Stella writes: "My complexion is horarbly mescale in the caseless strain of the day by stupefying the senses with some garish parody of life, is not living to a vagabond. He is willing to work if the work is part of himself, a development of that clamorous ego that must find peace in the open, in the physical side of existence. If he is born rich, he will become a traveller, a mountain climber, an aviator; if poor, a mountain climber, an aviator; if poor,

For the last few years his feet had followed his errant will, now here, now there. He was impervious to hardship while he could wander as he wished, indifferent to good clothes while the price while he could wander as he wished, in-different to good clothes while the price was eight hours a day spent in a stuffy office, bent, round-shouldered, hump-backed, over a column of figures. Beneath good clothes or shabbly there was pathing office, bent, round-shouldered, hump-backed, over a column of figures. Beneath good clothes or shabbly, there was nothing but a human body, all more or less alike. So the Watermelon had gone his careless, contented way, now resting here, now working there, unworried by rent days falling due, by collars fraying around the edges, coats getting shabbly and shiny at the seams, and then Billy came along. Billy, young, sweet, conventional, an honored member of convention's band, walking around and around the same well-beaten path, in the same small inclosure. If he had elected to be one of the throng, he would never have met her. Struggling along at ten per, he would have been so far down the line, plodding painfully on, that Bi'ly would never have seen him.

But now he was out, and a fence unscaleable was between them. If he climbed the fence again it would do no good. No vagabond can ever fall in line and keep step, and there is not room enough in the inclosure for the man who has dared to climb the fence and drop down on the other side.

Bartlett, like Billy, wondered if he were growing simple-minded. A desire to confide in Henrietta, to tell her what he was growing simple-minded. A desire to confide in Henrietta, to tell her what he was up to, had come upon him and seemed too strong to be resisted. Last night, up the quiet country road, alone with Henrietta, he had been forced to suppress the dasire strongly and row in the craise rietta, ne nad been forced to suppress the desire strongly, and now in the garish light of day it was still upon him. He took a seat beside her on the stone wall, where she tried to be comfortable as she the remains of last night's supper.

"We find," he said, "language almost inadequate to express the feelings of awe and emotion that crowd in upon one as he gazes upon the beauty and majesty of the Canadian Rockies. I have travelled ver mountain scenery of which I have thought there could be nothing grander, but to be able to travel from Calgary o Vancouver, and for 700 miles be con stantly in the presence of mountains turesque and majestic, is a privilege seems to me that only Canada affords We might well speak of them as 'Sixty Switzerlands in one.'
"The beauties of the Bow River Valley,

The speaker also described the mountain scenery at Field, and Illecillewalt Glacier, in the great glacial fields of British Columbia. He was enthused over the picturesque beauty of the famous Fraser Canyon.

Vancouver, said the speaker, will undoubtedly be the metropolis of Canada. Nothing can keep it back. So far it has been a city of one railroad. Soon it will

What do you think of that for the patience of fat people?

Of course, I told them how absurd it was—showed how little it cost in time was-showed how little it cost in time, and money, and effort—that results were as certain as sunrise—told them it

GAVE A FAKE ORDER FOR AN AUTOMOBILE

How Some Alleged Wit or a Lunatic Fooled a Local Dealer.

Either an alleged wit or an escaped nmate from some lunatic asylum put some of the exhibitors of the transportation building at the Western Fair to a considerable amount of trouble recently, and if he thought amusement along the line he follow-ed in at least two instances he should still be bubbling with unmingled glee.

The person in question attended the show a couple of times, and finally struck a bargain with a factory man who was assisting in selling at an automobile exhibit. The salesman was, of course, a stranger, but arranged to deliver a certain show car to an address in Giencoe. At the conclusion of the show the local agent drove to Glencoe with the car, but was astonished to learn that the person whose name was given had never heard of such a deal.

On returning to the city he was met by a carirage dealer who had sold, or thought he sold, two buggies to the same person. He had also failed to carry out the arrangement.

Leaders' Tributes.

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—Sir Wilfrid Laurer was much affected by the news of Sir Richard Cartwright's death. "I have lost in Sir Richard one my oldest personal friends. I was associated with him for more than

If there arose between us lifferences of opinion, it was never difficult to adjust them satisfactorily. Sir Richard was a very strong man, but those only who were intimately associated with him knew his chivalous nature. "He was a patriot, a thorough gen leman, and a charming man,"

Premier Borden said: "The death of Sir Richard Cartwright comes as a shock to those who have been his colleagues in Parliament, whether on one or the other side of the House. He has been a great figure in public life for more than 40 years, and no one can forget his strong personality, his wonderful power of debate, or the wonderful his wonderful contrast between the extreme kindliness of his disposition in private life and his great command of attack and invective in debate, whether upon the hustings or in Parliament. He was in every sense a great parliamentarian, thoroughly versed in constitutional procedure, and entirely familiar with the development of parliamentary government in Canada. "I recall one instance which illustrates the kindliness of his nature and his innate courtesy. A few years after I had become leader of the Opposition in the House. Sir Charles Tupper, not then a member of Parliament, came by the invitation of the speaker and took a seat on the floor of the House. These two men had been redoubtable, protagonists, on opposite doubtable protagonists on opposite sides for many years, and had engaged in attack upon each other with a vigor which is seldom witnessed in these latter days. As soon as Sir Richard saw Sir Charles he made his way slowly (for he walked with great difficulty by the aid of a cane) through the passage back of the sneaker's chair in order to greet his old antagonist. To Lady Cartwright and the members of his family the sympathy of all Canadian citizens will be extended in the fullest measure." At the Capital.

Ottawa, Sept. 24. - The announcement of the death of Sir Richard Cartwright created a profound im-pression in the capital today. Like Gladstone, at one time the rising hope of the Tory party, once he cut the painter, there was no desire for a renewal of old party alliances. His was no half-hearted decision. He had the courage of his convictions, and those who know his career know how severely his courage was on many oc-casions put to the test. Accordingly in the first session of the Second Parliament, Sir Richard was found in the front row on the Opposition side of the House, and immediately entered on his career as one of the most brilliant as well as the most belligerent leaders of the Liberal party.

Political and Moral Force. "Sir Richard's public services are twofold-first as a political and moral force on the Opposition benches, and, second, as a cabinet minister. Imperial Link Is Colonies Affection.

[Canadian Press.] London, Sept. 24. - Viscount Haldane, the new lord chancellor, addressing his former constituents in East Lothian today, on the occasion of receiving the freedom of Dunbar, declared that, important as were the strategical considerations which were drawing the empire closer together at the present moment, there were other great bonds of union. Most apparent of all and never greater than at the present time, he said, was the affection with which the overseas dominions regarded the crown. Never was the importance of a form of government, with a king at the head, greater than now.

There was another consideration, perhaps less obvious - the judicial committee of the Privy Council. That was the most real link in the empire, and one that had not received nearly the attention it deserved. proceeded Lord Haldane, "that it may be given to me to make an effort such as I tried to make in connection with military matters, towards developing still further the importance and meaning of this supreme tribunal. We do not desire to meddle in the affairs of the dominions. We provide them with an absolutely impartial court, brought together in the best way we can, they welcome it. "During the last summer," he continued, "the month of July was devoted to the hearing of Canadian appeals exclusively. The members of the court put their very souls into that business and I think they have made a considerable impression. What has been done for Canada, we hope to do for Australia, New Zealand, India, and South Africa, and for every part of the empire that may choose to resort to this unique and remarkable tribunal, which is like to no other in "It has been doing magnificent work

INSTANT POSTUM

A food-drink, not only 100 per cent pure, but free from any trace of the drug "Caffeine," in tea or coffee, or any other harmful ingredient.

Instant Postum requires no boiling

It is made "quick as a wink" by stirring a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water; and adding cream and sugar to taste.

Make it strong or weak (just as you desire) by varying the amount used for each cup.

Always uniform in taste—a rich, healthgiving beverage.

Convenient--- Economical Satisfying

A 100-cup tin of INSTANT POSTUM costs 50 cents at grocers.

Smaller tin at 30 cents makes about 50 cups. Tea and coffee average about double that cost.

PRINCIPAL BRYANT CHOICE FOR THE ADVISORY COUNCIL

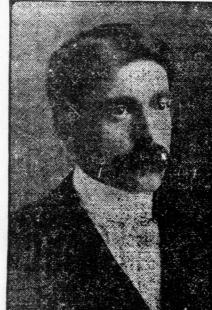

Head of Princess Avenue School Chosen by London Public School Teachers as Candidate at a Meeting Held on Tuesday.

At a meeting of the public school | teachers of the city held in Alexandra school yesterday afternoon, Dr. Frank Bryant, principal of Princess avenue school, was unanimously chosen as candidate for the advisory council in connection with the educational department of Ontario. Dr. Bryant accepted the nomination, and a committee of four teachers of the city were appointed to assist the candidate in his election campaign The committee is composed of Principal Beal, Principal Snelgrove, and Misses Boone and Yeates.

A circular letter will be sent to every teacher in the province, setting forth the claims and credentials of Dr. Bryant.

The advisory committee is composed of four public school teachers and two representing the high schools of the province. Principal Plewes, of Chatham, was elected as a member of the council three years ago, and at the time of his election he agreed that in case of a candidate being nominated from London upon the completion of his term, he would assist in the campaign for the election of the London

Character Forming

It is surprising how many good traits of character the possession of a bank account has a tendency to cultivate. Decision and persistency are two of them.

These develop more and more as a result of a desire to continue the saving habit once begun.

So that when we offer to take charge of a dollar for someone who is making a start on the journey of success, we are encouraging other good habits than thrift.

And thrift is highly commendable. Interest is paid on Savings Accounts every six months.

Heavy receipts and bad sweather combined caused a slow trade in cattle, but at the close of the day, nearly all of those on the market early in the morning were sold, with the exception of a few lots of heavy exporters. Prices for all classes of cattlewere easier, but heavy export steers were 25c per cwt lower than the last lot re-ported as sold for export on this market, and about $1 per cwt lower than one horsehair, month or six weeks ago, and it does not look as if the rock bottom prices have yet been reached. The top price for butcher cattle was $6.75, but there were not many that reached that figure, about two loads out of over 2,000 on sale. Exporters—

MORE PEACHES ARRIVE ON LOCAL MARKET

Big Shipment of Fruit From the Niagara Peninsula-Prices Unchanged.

A fairly large shipment of fruit was received on the market today from Grimsby, and it was composed chiefly of peaches, with a few baskets of plums and grapes. The peaches, which ere mainly of the Elberta variety ere sold at the same prices that were prevalent yesterday. Late yesterday afternoon a carload of peaches that had been shipped from Grimsby for disposal on the market, independent of the local dealers, were sold at prices slightly below the prices quoted by the fruit merchants.

Late this morning about ten loads of hay were offered, and the sales were fairly brisk. Hay has been fairly plentiful this week, nearly forty loads being sold in the three days.

GENERAL INCREASE IN THE ASSESSMENTS

Prices Asked For City Hall Sites.

The selection of a site for the city hall has revealed the fact that there is a great discrepancy between the assessment of certain properties when compared with the prices asked for them for a city hall In a number of cases the selling price was about three times the assess-

This fact has not been lost sight of by some of the aldermen, and the attention of the assessment department has been Ald. Coles is authority for the statement that many other sites would have been bonded had not the prices asked been prohibitive. He declared that the majority of property-owners boosted the prices as soon as they understood that the city wanted the land for a city hall the city wanted the land for a city hall "Look out for a general increase in

WORKMAN WAS HURT BY ELEVATOR'S FALL

Thos. B. Minnigall Taken to. Victoria Hospital in the Ambulance.

The collapse of the elevator in the candy department of the D. S. Perrin Company painfully injured Thomas B. Minnigall, of 49 Waterloo stret, this afternoon, and shook up three other men who were with him at the time. None were seriously hurt. The four men got on at the third floor, intending to go to the basement. On their way down some portion of the machinery broke, and the elevator sped to the bottom at a lively rate. Fortunately the safety clutch held and broke the speed of the machine. It struck the bottom with considerable force, however, throwing the men violently to the floor-

Minnigall happened to fall unuder the others, and sustained several bruises. The others, save for a shaking up, were little the worse for their experience. They were enabled to continue work. "None of the men were badly in-

at first impress his hearers as being almost too quiet and low-voiced, but once fairly launched upon his theme building as the Carling street station tention of an audience and holds it displayed amazing knowledge, not only of sacred history as set forth in the Pentateuch, but also of Egyptology and science.

City of Memphis.

Mr. Wendling first carried his audience back to Memphis, which was, he said, an ancient city 1,500 years before Christ, and to the court of the Pharachs, where Moses spent the first orty years of his life. A most graphic description was given of the temples, statues, sphinxes and colossi at Karnak, Luxor and Memphis, and of the university and temple, where Moses, the young Hebrew, obtained his Pharaoh's daughter. "We know little of the personal appearance of Moses, reference in the Pentateuch, where it him and saw he was a goodly child.'
