MRS. KOEHLER TESTIFIES AT J. YOHNS TRIAL

Is Asked to Refrain From Chewing Gum in Sarnia Court.

ANDERSON FOUND GUILTY

Jurors Return Verdict Against London Man Tuesday.

Special to London Advertiser.
Sarnia, Sept. 27.—John Yohn, last of the four men held for the Wyoming bank robbery, is on trial today at the supreme court assizes, and the indications point to a late sitting before the Wyoming trials are finally disposed of by the conviction or acquittal of Yohn. The morning was occupied in hearing the evidence of an array of crown witnesses who identified Yohn as one of four men seen inside the bank on the day of the robbery.

Alphens McKay, Wyoming undertaker, who was in the bank manager's office when the bandits entered said he saw accused's face
when his mask slipped down. John Smith of Wyoming said he stood 40 to 50 feet from the men as they emerged in Indian file from the bank.
He identified Yohn as the third man.
Cross-examined, witness said he did not see the leading man shooting with two revolvers, as has been alleged he was doing.

John McCormack, garage keeper,
of Watford, testified that Yohn called at the garage on Oct. 20 at 12:30 p.m. and purchased two car chains, and he identified Yohn.
Florence May Patterson, former's daughter, on the London road near Wyoming, identified Yohn as one of two men who came to her father's home on the day of the robbery to obtain the use of a team to pull car out of the ditch. Witness admitted to Mr. Justice Lennox before leaving the box that she had a little doubt as to Yohn being the man.

Mrs. Olive Koehler was called to the witness box at noon. Her story, similar in detail to that told yesterday in the trial of Anderson, was in-turn to page 5, column 4.

held the majority of these shares.
The shares in question were called transferred to a company which is about to issue £1,600,000 seven per cent de-things by Viscount Rothermere's own companies.

Guards Wound Prisoners While Quelling Riot in Cork Jail

BELFAST, Sept. 27.—A Cork message today says some 440 prisoners in the jail there started rioting Sunday and wrecked several of the cells.
The authorities gave the men a specified time to desist.
This time was later extended,
and the guards then fired,
wounding two men, one of them fatally, upon which the rioting ceased.

WILL NOT PAVE OXFORD STREET

Board of Works Recommends Council Respect Residents' Wishes.

Front Street Deputation Seeks Further Information on Breakwater.

There will be no pavement construction on Oxford street west this year. Members of the board of works in regular session Tuesday night
voted to that effect, and will recommend to the city council that the wishes of the residents of that thoroughfare be complied with.

Representing the ratepayers, William Moore explained that he was not objecting to the pavement, providing that it was not undertaken until 1923.

"The road is in first-class condition now," declared Mr. Moore. "There is none better in the city since you have placed gravel upon it. We do think that the paving should be withheld another six months. At the present time the thoroughfare has not sufficiently settled since drains were constructed."

Expresses Willingness.
Mayor Wilson expressed willingness that the work should be deferred upon the condition that there would be no opposition registered by the West Londoners next spring. "I do not wish to see this paving program for that district delayed too long,"
he said.

Ald. Dr. Douglass adhered to the opinion that the problem had gained certain notoriety, and felt that the council's stand should be made clear.

He stated that while there was no doubt but that the residents affected enjoyed every right of complaint, he felt that the work would be undertaken, and they had uttered no objection
until now.

Mr. Moore explained that since that time, however, gravel had been placed upon the road, rendering it in first-class condition.

EXPOSES TUBERCULOSIS OF BRITISH DAIRY HERDS

Traders' President Calls on Government To Aid in Stamping Out Disease.

London, England, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press Cable).—Alarming statements about the prevalence of tuberculosis in British dairy herds were made at the conference of the National Federation of Meat Traders at Southport.

President-elect Adams, in moving a resolution urging the government to adopt eradication measures, declared that at least 50 per cent of the herds
in the United Kingdom were affected, though the government hitherto had made but a feeble attempt to deal with the question, whereas the Canadian government was determined to eliminate disease at all costs.

One delegate said they should not allow Mr. Adams' story to go unchallenged. They knew that almost all animals had a touch of tuberculosis about them in some form or another. The resolution was carried.

FATTENS SHEEP ON GRAIN SCREENINGS

Winnipeg, Sept. 27.—Ten thousand sheep will be fed on screenings this year at Fort William and Westport by R. C. Harvey of Lethbridge, the well-known sheep rancher, who was in Winnipeg yesterday after completing arrangements for the care of his large flock.

He fed 7,000 at this point last year,
and found that had been regarded as a drug in the market could be profitably turned into prime mutton. Of this lot, 4,000 were sold for shipment to New York and the remainder found a ready sale on the Toronto market.

ing by robbers and a small amount of money taken.

OPPOSE NAMING OF ASSISTANTS FOR BISHOPS

Members of Synod Disapprove of Motion to Create New Rank.

DISCUSS CHURCH UNION

Consider Allowing Other Ministers to Preach in Anglican Churches.

Basing their action on their disapproval of the appointment of suffragan bishops, and the fact that they could find no apostolic precedent for such action, the Lower House of the Provincial Synod of Ontario of the Church of England in Canada, meeting in St. Paul's Cathedral this city, Wednesday morning voted non-concurrence with the articles submitted by the House of Bishops, to the effect that suffragan bishops might be appointed by bishops who desired assistance.

Strengthen the Barrier.
Chief opposition to the motion
came from the suggestion that it might strengthen the barriers which already exist in the way of church union.

"In view of church union, are we to strengthen our episcopacy by creating a new order of bishops?"
asked Rev. A. C. McTear, of Bath, who advanced strong arguments
against concurrence with the motion.

"We need greater episcopal oversight, but the creation of a new order
of bishops would mean an increase in the barriers against church union."

The whole issue arose out of the fact that the present dioceses are considered too extensive for the bishop to come into close enough contact with each parish within the bounds, and although there was strenuous opposition to the appointment of suffragan bishops, the opinion was strongly evidenced that small dioceses were necessary.

Has Under Consideration.
Although it was definitely stated that a motion to bring about the granting of occasional permission to a minister of another communion to preach from an Anglican pulpit, by no means involved the question of exchange or even interchange of pulpits, the lower house has under consideration a motion that the canons of the church be so amended that a bishop of any diocese be prevented "from giving occasional authority to a minister of another communion to preach in an Anglican church in his diocese, provided that he is assured that such minister is working towards the ideal of union set forth in the appeal to all Christian people, issued by the Lambeth conference, and that the incumbent of the parish where he is to preach is prepared to invite him to his church."

VEN. ARCHDEACON FOTHERINGHAM, who advanced the motion, pointed out the carrying out of the motion would be

Battles For Return of Child Born While At War

FATHER SEEKS COURT AID.

SEEKING the return of his little girl, born while he fought in Flanders, and then sent away by his mother, who could not bear to see it suffer privations, Walter E. Taylor, formerly of this city, and now of Chicago, has returned to London to find support for his claim, which he has placed before the surrogate court at Chicago.

The child was born while Taylor served with the Canadian army. The wife, it is said, found the meagre army pay insufficient to nourish and clothe the child properly, and because her love was so great she gave the child to Mrs. Vera Lewis, who lived in London then, but by a strange coincidence also lives in Chicago now.

Things went well with the father
when he returned from the war.
Taking up his abode in Chicago, he built a comfortable home for his wife with the earnings from an increase he established. When circumstances improved, the young couple began to yearn for the return of the child.

But Mrs. Lewis had become so attached to the baby, it is alleged, she refused to give it up. Threatened with court action, she argued that she had every right to the child, as she had adopted it in a legal manner.

The claim was denied by the wife and so the tangle was placed in the Chicago courts for unravelling. To substantiate the claim of his wife, Taylor returned to London to look up official records of the alleged adoption.

Wednesday morning he stated that his search had failed to find anything that would bear out the claims put forth by Mrs. Lewis, and he is returning to Chicago hopeful of yet gaining a bit of sunshine to brighten
the little home.

COLLAPSE OF U. S. STRIKES AFFECTS WELSH SITUATION

Failure of Owners and Miners To Reach Agreement Accentuates
Public Interest.

London, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press Cable).—The failure of the South Wales coal mine owners and miners' representatives to reach a settlement in the dispute over the demand for an increase in wages to the lower paid men among the miners, and the fact that between 25,000 and 30,000 men are unemployed there, is accentuating
the public interest in the critical situation in the South Wales coal field.

The position is aggravated by the collapse of the coal miners' strike and the railway shippers' strike in the United States. An official of the South Wales Miners' Federation states that although some contracts have been made to the end of the year, there is no hope of recovering the former prosperity. He says the industry is seriously depressed, and many men will never again be employed there.

GERMANS ISSUE DENIAL.

Berlin, Sept. 27.—The German government last night issued a denial of reported negotiations for a Russo-Chinese-German alliance, and stated that nothing was known of the alleged official mission of Paul von Hindenburg, former German foreign secretary.

Prince Makes Fizzle of First Tee Drive

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland,
Sept. 27.—The Prince of Wales "dubbed" his tee shot in "playing himself in" as captain of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club today. In driving from the first tee before a crowd of spectators the prince scuffed his shot, cutting into the ground with the club before striking the ball, driving only fifty yards.
The caddy who found the ball and handed it to his royal highness received a sovereign and also a hearty handshake
from the prince.

SEEKS FREEDOM, GETS 6 MONTHS

William Burch Gets Prison Term For Escaping From Constable.

Prisoner Thanks Court When Sentence Is Imposed.

Convicted on a charge of escaping
from custody at the fall assizes here, William Burch, a Muncey Indian,
was sentenced to serve six months in the common jail. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty on this charge late Tuesday, and when court resumed Wednesday morning Burch pleaded guilty to a charge of obstructing a police officer, and was sentenced to six months in jail, the term to run concurrently with that for escaping from custody.

The trial of Burch was held Tuesday afternoon, and the charge was laid by Constable Detective Charles B. Alexander, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who declared in the witness box that accused committed the offense on the morning of May 24 last at Muncey.

He swore that when placed under arrest at a dance for a violation of the Ontario temperance act, Burch for the escaped from custody, was captured
after a chase, and was later released by a crowd which attacked
the police officer, Constable Washington Dockstader, who witnessed the occurrence, corroborated Alexander.

No witnesses were called by A. G.
Chisholm, who conducted the defense. The jury retired late Tuesday afternoon, and returned a verdict of guilty within a few minutes. Prisoner
pleaded guilty to a charge of obstructing a police officer, and Wednesday morning, the evidence being the same as in the escaping count.

In sentencing Burch, Judge Mowat pointed out to him that it was wrong
for him to behave in such a manner
as he did at Muncey, but mindless of the jury that he be lenient, imposed terms of six months on each charge, to run concurrently.
"Thank you," said Burch to the court when sentenced.

DISLIKE BOARD'S ATTITUDE ON SCHOOLS AND POLLS

Councillors Suggest Use of Certain Classrooms on Day of Civic Elections.

Members of the board of works do not take kindly to the attitude of the school trustees, who have declined to sanction the use of the public schools
on the next civic election day.
City Clerk Sam Baker has been directed to consult Senior School Inspector V. K. Greer with a view to arriving at an amicable agreement upon the issue.

The councillors suggest that it may be possible to use only certain rooms in the schools, thereby obviating any interference in the other classes throughout the building. It is pointed out by the city clerk that it would be practical to have two polling booths in one classroom, and if this plan meets with the approval of the school authorities, it will be introduced.

FIND TWO MEN HANGING SIDE BY SIDE FROM TREE

Gorham, Me., Sept. 27.—A new clothesline rope, believed by the police to have been purchased here, was regarded this morning as the most likely factor in determining the identity of two men found hanging side by side from the limbs of a pine tree near here yesterday. The men had divided the rope equally between them.

HEARST TRIES TO REGAIN SUPPORT FOR ELECTIONS

New York, Sept. 27.—(By the Canadian Press).—The eve of the Democratic state convention, which opens in Syracuse tomorrow, finds William Randolph Hearst making frantic eleventh-hour efforts to regain the ground he lost when his supporters were swamped by the voters at last week's primaries.

MAKES PLEA OF NOT GUILTY TO MURDER CHARGE

Gordon Dibsedale on Trial for Death of Christina Near.

JURORS ARE SELECTED

Many Women Gather in Court
To Catch Glimpse of Prisoner.

Gordon Dibsedale, alleged slayer of his sweetheart, Christina Near, was placed on trial for his life at the fall assizes, in session at the courthouse Wednesday afternoon. Dibs-edale pleaded not guilty to the murder charge preferred against him, and when the case began at two o'clock,
selection of jurors was the first duty commenced.

Insanity will be the plea of W. R.
Meredith and P. T. Bartlett, who are acting for the Oakland avenue young man, who is said to have shot and instantly killed Christina Near at Adelaide and St. James streets on May 31 last. He later turned the shotgun on himself, but inflicted only superficial wounds on his own body.

A large crowd of spectators was present in the court gallery Wednesday afternoon anxious to obtain a glimpse of Dibsedale as he was led into the prisoner's box. Many of those present were women. Dibs-edale was granted a postponement
Tuesday afternoon by Mr. Justice Mowat, who is presiding at the as-sises, to permit medical experts for the defense to conduct tests for insanity upon the prisoner in his lodgings refused to grant a postponement of trial, as requested by P. T.
Bartlett, but stipulated that medical witnesses in the trial will not be called until Thursday.

In the meantime, they will be allowed to conduct examinations and tests on the prisoner. It is expected that Dibsedale's trial will not be concluded before Thursday night, as a host of witnesses, including medical experts for the prosecution and defense, will be called to give evidence.

J. C. Elliott, K.C., will prosecute
the charge.

Dr. Walter English, superintendent of the Hospital for Criminal Insane, and formerly of the London Hospital for the Insane, will be the first witness to testify for the prosecution Wednesday afternoon in the case against Gordon Dibsedale, charged with the murder of his sweetheart, Christina Near.

At press time but nine of the twelve jurors had been selected from a panel of 35 at counsel for the defense is challenging many of those nominated. Two Londoners are included in the jury to date, Clifford Gray and Robert Kent.

Emerging from his attitude of complaisance, Dibsedale nodded to his grief-stricken parents as they entered the courtroom this afternoon.
The court is crowded to the last available inch with the morbidly curious, and many are compelled to stand.

Ald. Dr. Douglass concurred. "Do

Ald. John Ashton questioned whether the city could develop in the an-nexed district on the Hamilton road.
This was referred to the municipal board, while City Clerk Sam Baker pointed out that there were three notable exceptions to the request, at first hand; no formal application had been made to the city; the registration fees had not been paid, while the streets, according to the city engineer, were far too narrow.

"We'll block that plan as well," declared Mayor Wilson, decisively, and the committee concurred.

As a result of the same problem, a communication was received from a resident of Knollwood Park, complaining that the water drainage was inadequate in that suburb.

Aldermen Drake pointed out that this was but one of the many disastrous results of the annexation of that locality.

OFFICERS AND SAILORS JOIN IN REVOLUTION FOLLOWING ORDERS THAT SOLDIERS BE DEMOBILIZED

British Commander, About To Open Fire On Turks, Is Ordered To Suspend Attack For Further Peace Parley—3,000 British Soldiers From Aldershot Embark For Near East.

London, England, Sept. 27.—The Greek fleet has gone over to the revolutionaries, who announce that every officer and member of the crew is wholly with them, according to a Central News dispatch from Athens. The movement, which is headed by Col.
Gonatas, is making headway in all directions.

The dispatch, which is dated Tuesday night, says the cabinet has been in continuous session for many hours. No official statements had been issued, but it was understood that the ministers were drawing up a manifesto addressed to the people.

Thus far, it adds, the revolution has been bloodless, despite the excitement of the people, who were surging through the streets and gathering outside the public buildings.

A number of Greek warships and transports, manned by revo-
of Mitylene, off the coast of Smyrna, and are proceeding toward Athens, according to messages from authoritative sources received here.

According to the same sources, the revolutionary movement started on the islands of Mitylene and Chios among the soldiers and refugees
from the Smyrna district.

Are Being Arrested.
All officers who refuse to join the movement are being arrested. It is added.

The immediate cause of the revolt
was an order for the demobilization of the soldiers, who had been evacuated to these islands, the men wishing to keep their rifles as trophies or perhaps for personal protection. The first intimation the authorities in Athens had of the movement was the appearance of an airplane over the city, which showered pamphlets drawn up "in the name of the army and navy and the population of Mity-lene," demanding the resignation of the government and the abdication of Constantine.

400 DELEGATES WILL CONVENE

Quadrennial General Conference of Methodist Church in Session At Toronto.

Church Union and Admission of Women To Ministry Important Matters.

TORONTO, Sept. 26.—(By the Canadian Press.)—Delegates to the quadrennial meeting of the general conference of the Methodist Church in Canada, which opens in the Metropolitan Church here at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, have been arriving in Toronto in large numbers today, and it is expected that 400 delegates will be on hand at the opening. The general conference will be in session for a period extending over two weeks. Among the important matters to come before the general conference are the questions of church union and the admission of women to the ministry.

There are several outstanding features in the reports of the various committees to be submitted to the conference. The vote among the quarterly official boards of the church throughout Canada gave a majority against the admission of women into the ministry. However, more than half of the boards failed to report. The past four years have seen an increase of almost $1,000 in the membership of the church, and since the last general conference Canadian Methodists have contributed $37,000,000 to the church. The report on social service urges legislation against race track gambling, deprecates Sunday games and views with deep concern the reports in the hands of the various committees.

The report on church union, presented by Rev. Dr. T. Albert Moore, secretary of the church union committee, deals with the action taken in 1918, and the past four years by the general conference special committee, and states that "a large number of the congregations have been organized with constitutions based on the three-nepit agreements, looking to the completion of organic union."

Would Imperil Work. The committee expressed the opinion that "to substitute co-operation for organic union as the continued policy of the churches would imperil all that had been done and would break faith with hundreds of communities in which people have abandoned their old affiliations on the basis of the solemn declarations of the three bodies in favor of union, it having been agreed that co-operation go forward pending the union of the three churches."

The report refers to the church union committee's recommendation that the decision of the Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational Churches in favor of union be given effect by the statutory incorporation of the "United Church of Canada."

On "Women and the Ministry" the committee on memorials reported. It mentioned that the general conference of 1918 had referred the question to a vote of the quarterly official boards of the church, the result of the voting to be reported to the general conference of this year. Of the total number of quarterly official boards, 2,082 reports were received from only 1,123, as 959 had not reported. Of the 2,076 members of the 1,123 reporting boards, only 12,330 were present at the meeting when the vote was taken, and 418 of these declined to vote. The return of the vote throughout the whole church shows a majority of 50 official boards, and of 397 official members against the admission of women into the ministry.

The conferences which voted against the admitting of women to the ministry were: New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, 6 majority; Newfoundland 2; Manitoba 13; Saskatchewan 50; Alberta 37; and British Columbia 3.

The report of the central section of the book committee on the book and publishing house of the church showed a turn-over of all department transactions, for the four years ending March 31, 1922 of $4,995,969.53, compared with $3,292,946.14 for the corresponding period ending in 1918, an increase of $1,703,023.39 in the last four years. The total net profits for the four years ending March 31, 1922, were $441,480.69, compared with $336,135.91 in the previous quadrennial.

Guardian's Circulation Increases. The Christian Guardian's circulation was reported at 28,617, an increase of 7,211 in the last four years. There was an increase of $5,746 in the Sunday school publications, the circulation at present being 547,452.

The advance of the Methodist Church in the last four years is shown in the membership which is now almost 410,000, being an increase of almost 21,000.

Since the last general conference the church has raised a total of over $37,000,000, an increase of 51 per cent over the preceding four years. While the church membership has increased, the supply of ministers has been growing gradually smaller. There are at present 2,281 ministers and 305 probationers, making a total of 2,586, or 223 less than at the time of the last general conference. In the last four years 267 men were received on probation, compared with 253 in the previous four-year period. Nineteen ministers came from other churches.

The Sunday schools produced 53,379 members for the church during the four years and raised $2,748,000, an increase of 52 per cent. There has been a decline in the local preachers, who number 1,803, or 218 less than four years ago. The decline in class leaders has been much greater, the decrease being 794, the present total being 1,639.

The Methodist Church in Canada raised for all purposes in the last four years $37,356,477, an increase over the previous four years' receipts of $12,758,418. Of this amount, $1,916,498 was subscribed in the Methodist national campaign. For connectional funds the receipts were $11,713,809, an increase of $5,703,998.

Ministers' Salaries Higher. The church owns property, including parsonages and colleges, valued at $55,000,000. The church itself carries $5,800,000 insurance on church property, and there are 805 policies. Ninety-six churches have been built or purchased in the last four years at a cost of $1,147,237, and 106 parsonages, at a cost of $447,578. There are 2,541 churches, 214 less than four years ago. This is partly attributed to the fact that many of the union and semi-union churches failed to report to denominational headquarters.

The department of evangelism and social service, of which Rev. Dr. T. Albert Moore is general secretary, expressed the hope in its report that the Dominion government would ultimately legislate against race track gambling. On the subject of amusements Sunday games were deprecated, and the report stated that "deep concern has been caused by what may be termed the 'dance craze'."

The board of missions, through its secretary, Rev. Dr. James Endicott, reported an income of $5,530,767.43, an increase of $2,222,508.03 over the income for the quadrennial ending in 1918. The total expenditure for the last four years was $4,344,966.59.

The total amount received in salaries by the ministers of the Methodist Church in the last four years was reported at $9,763,784, an increase of over $2,000,000.

SCORNS THREAT BY ASHPLANT

Mayor Not Worried Over Legal Proceedings To Make City Collect Taxes.

Believes Councillor Is Using East End Problem as Election Cry.

Mayor Cameron Wilson views lightly the threat by Ald. H. B. Ashplant, to institute such legal proceedings as would be necessary to compel the city to impose additional school tax upon industrial concerns in the annexed districts of East London.

In fact, the mayor is quite frank in his belief that the entire proposition is more or less of an advertising dodge. "It is getting near election time, you know," he commented Wednesday.

"I did note that it is proposed to stage a meeting of rate residents of that section," continued his worship, "but I don't think that Alderman Ashplant will do that, however. The thing will develop into nothing more than likely, as everything else that he has commenced."

"He says that action is demanded. It is a peculiar circumstance, perhaps, but I have not heard of any infuriated ratepayers around the city hall asking that we take immediate action to enforce additional payments. No deputation has waited upon me. I have yet to hear of one citizen who is complaining, other than those 13 Alderman Ashplant's mind."

"The 'annexed school tax question' is, to all intents and purposes, a closed incident inasmuch as Mayor Wilson is concerned. "It should be good election stuff for Alderman Ashplant, however," he remarked as he turned to a consideration of the proposed new city hall.

formation concerning the contemplated breakwater to save their property from the ravages of the River Thames, duly appeared with their attorney, A. R. Douglas.

The latter explained that a canvass of the householders had revealed the fact that all of them were favorable to a plan, submitted by the city engineer, whereby they would allow the use of a certain portion of their land. One resident would sell a considerable portion that would be required for a sum of $200.

The latter did not view favorably, however, the mayor's suggestion that the others purchase this land and give it to the city.

Wilson expressed the opinion that nothing definite could be accomplished at this moment. He had been informed, he related, that certain residents of the street had appealed to the federal department of marine with the result that a representative of that office had been sent here for an investigation and report.

Has No Liability. "The city has no liability for the front street property," he declared. "We were just agreeable to the proposal to help the situation with a prejudice our position while this investigation is in progress."

"This will mean halting the proposal another few months," suggested Attorney Douglas.

"Well, that is not the city's fault," volunteered Mayor Wilson. "Raymond Smith, a member of the delegation, explained that the residents had merely written to ascertain what might be done in the matter, and that as a result a man had been sent down to take measurements."

After a lengthy consideration of the entire problem, it was finally decided to refer the project to the city solicitor, the mayor explaining that if the latter expressed willingness the question would be sent to the city council. That approval would not be forthcoming, however, was his frank opinion.

In the meantime there seems to be no difference of opinion as to the plans and specifications for the breakwater.

CONTRACTORS FAIL TO MAKE REPLY

Question Arises, "Has Collegiate Institute Been Accepted by Board?"

The question now arises in board of education circles, "Has the Central Collegiate Institute been accepted from the Kingston Construction Company?" The trustees have been duly notified of the recent action by the trustees in this respect, no reply has been forthcoming. It was explained on Wednesday, intimating whether the company is willing to abide by the decision.

The trustees have directed that certain details be attended to, including the replacing of a section of the basement floor, the construction of a new balcony seats, before full payment is made. At present a sum of more than $2,000 is withheld to insure that this work is completed as ordered.

As no word has emanated from the Kingston firm, the point has been raised that while the trustees at their last regular session voted to accept the school, they have not actually done so, and the contract has not expired until all work is satisfactorily completed.

School board officials explain that should the company decline to make the stipulated alterations and improvements, the task will be undertaken and the cost deducted from the sum now withheld.

WEDDING BELLS

GEORGEHEGAN-JEFFRIES.

A pretty autumn wedding took place Wednesday at high noon when Florence Madeline Jeffries, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jeffries, was married to George Sumner Georgehegan, son of Mrs. Bessie Georgehegan of this city. Rev. Canon G. B. Sage, D.D., performed the ceremony.

The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Oxford street. The house was massed with autumn foliage and late summer flowers, artistically arranged. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a graceful canton crepe gown of paprika shade with folds of the material falling from the shoulders, and the overskirt was made of fringed of the same shade, forming a lace pattern. She also wore a large black picture hat, and her corsage was of Sunset roses, orchids and valley lilies. Little Miss Dorothy Georgehegan, niece of the groom, made a dainty flower girl, wearing a frilly frock of green organdy, and carrying the wedding ring in a basket of pink sweet peas. Mr. Ernest Wooster played the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin.

Following the ceremony a reception was held. Mrs. Jeffries, mother of the bride, wore a gown of black silk canton crepe, with side panels and sleeves of radium lace, and a corsage of Richmond roses, and Mrs. Georgehegan, the groom's mother, was gowned in black satin, and she wore mauve sweet peas.

A buffet luncheon was served. The table was centered with the wedding cakes, and adorned with pink roses. Mr. and Mrs. Georgehegan left by motor on a honeymoon trip to the Adirondack Mountains, and upon their return they will reside on Baker avenue, London. The bride traveled in a smart suit of brown duvet de Laine, trimmed with sand shade and a gray wolf collar, with hat and shoes to match.

The work of the season was the subject of a keen and interesting discussion, all kinds of stunts being suggested to make the club a great success.

WARNS AGAINST RISKING HEALTH

Dr. Hill Addresses Chesley Avenue Mothers' Club on Diseases.

Derides Idea That Children Must Have Certain Ailments.

"Don't take risks. Call in the doctor immediately. Assume first the disease is infectious, then find out," was the advice given by Dean H. W. Hill, of the Institute of Public Health, to the members of Chesley Avenue Mothers' Club on Tuesday evening, when he delivered an address at the September meeting on the subject of ridding the world of communicable diseases.

Stamp Them Out. In the course of his lecture one of a series to be given under the Western University extension department, he emphasized the point that germs cannot live outside the human body unless kept alive by most careful means in a laboratory. "The more people who are prevented from passing on the germs of communicable diseases," he commented, "the more possible it becomes to stamp them out altogether."

A warning was sounded against the serious menace to child life contained in the old idea that all children must pass through certain communicable diseases, and the sooner they get over these the better.

The speaker quoted the records in connection with these "children's diseases," to show that in practically all cases death from whooping cough results under two years of age, and from measles under three years of age.

"As the age increases the death rate diminishes," said Dr. Hill, "and the longer you prevent your child from contracting these diseases, the greater the chance for the child."

Ideal conditions, which would mean the ultimate death of the germs, were

FALL AND WINTER FOOTWEAR

In tracing the illusive shoe mode, one must first determine the dominating features of a smart woman's costume for Fall. What colors has she adopted? What skirt length does she favor? In which direction has she reacted from a brilliantly-hued Spring wardrobe?

As to this matter of skirts there is diversity of lengths. Morning and sports demand a short skirt, and as a result a low-heeled shoe. Afternoon and evening wear finds dresses longer, about eight inches from the ground. For these occasions the heel is higher, while for an elaborate evening costume, the heel receives special attention and is profusely decorated.

WANT COMPANY TO PAVE TRACK

Aldermen Oppose Railway Suggestion to Leave Tecumseh
Stretch Unpaved.

Considered Inadvisable to Proceed With Extension of Marshall Street.

"No truck or trade" with the London Street Railway Company that is not guaranteed to be for the best interests of the city, is the obvious attitude of the mayor and the members of the board of works.

The city engineer's department proposes to pave a small section of Tecumseh avenue west from High street, and City Engineer H. A. Brazier has been ordered to proceed with the work directly he is ready, despite any protests from the company involving the trackage area.

While a communication was considered Tuesday from the rail officials suggesting that the same work be undertaken as on Stanley street, the councilors were immediately up in arms, and denounced the proposal forthwith.

"No, sir! We want a permanent pavement, not like Stanley street, one of the worst thoroughfares now in the city," declared Ald. Drake.

"I'll say so," added Ald. Douglass. "No concessions whatever."

It is now considered inadvisable to proceed with the contemplated extension of Marshall street. It was found possible to secure, reasonably, all property necessary with the exception of certain land owned by the London Curling Club.

The executive of the latter body expressed willingness to relinquish this tract upon the assurance that the city provided them another suitable site elsewhere.

"What might this site cost?" questioned Ald. Drake.

"It all depends where it is," replied the city engineer, "possibly $5,000 or $10,000."

"Nothing doing," rejoined Ald. Drake, and his colleagues echoed his sentiments.

OFFER SOLUTION ON SCHOOL SITE

Yet another suggestion has been unfolded in connection with the school board's property at the corner of Oliver and Trafalgar streets, scheduled as the site for a new public school.

Trustees who viewed the location Monday were practically unanimous in their opinion that the land was too long and narrow for the purpose. It is now proposed that less property be taken on Trafalgar street and more on Oliver street, in order that a square block would result.

DRAFT UNIFORM GIRLS' PROGRAM

London Girls' Work Board Appoints Committee for Purpose.

Discuss Plans for Inter-Group Activities for Coming Season.

A suggestive uniform program for all teen age girls' groups in the city for the coming year was considered such an excellent idea by the London Girls' Work Board, at the first meeting of the autumn, held Tuesday evening, in St. James' Anglican Church school, that a committee, consisting of Mrs. W. B. McIntosh, Mrs. W. Leslie Armitage and Miss Bessie McCamus, was immediately named to draft a suitable program. This will be made and finally elastic, however, to make it possible to fit in the Bible and mission study work prescribed by the various churches in connection with which the groups are organized, and that modifications may be made to suit special conditions.

While there was only a fair representation from the churches, the meeting proved a most enthusiastic and profitable one, all present taking part in the discussion, which occupied the whole evening, offering most valuable suggestions.

Several plans were discussed for inter-group activities, including athletic, debates, etc. Miss Hilda Keene spoke on the subject of worth-while activities along the lines of social service and expending time and energy to best advantage. In this connection it was suggested that a girls' work board be formed in every church, and that instead of each group making appeal to the congregation during the year for support of money-making projects, all groups unite in one big enterprise once a year, dividing the proceeds. The suggestion met with general approval, and will be presented by the representatives in their own churches.

A subject which called forth many comments was that of sympathetic support for group leaders, several stating that frequently the lack is seriously felt of such support by leaders, even from the mothers. Mothers, in some cases, apparently do not realize the existence of the groups. There appeared to be a lack of understanding of the aims and work. A mother present suggested that if the work were put plainly before the mothers, it could not fail to interest them and enlist their hearty co-operation.

The new Leaders' Manual, prepared by the national girls' work board, and presented Tuesday evening, was a most interesting and useful volume, and was voted a rich mine of inspiration and information, destined to prove of inestimable value to the group leaders, each of whom will possess a copy.

Covering practically every phase of girls' work and contingency that might arise, it represents three years of earnest work on the part of the national board.

Representatives were sent with all the representatives for their own church school superintendents, asking for the prompt appointment of representatives for the coming year to the girls' work board.

Mrs. W. L. Armitage, president; Miss Hilda Keene and Miss Helen D'Avignon were appointed delegates to the religious educational council convention in Toronto at the end of October.

Regret was expressed over the absence, owing to illness, of the secretary, Miss Helen D'Avignon, and a message of sympathy and good wishes for speedy recovery sent to her in her home in Windsor.

A similar message was forwarded to Mr. George W. Hoffer, president of the London Religious Educational Council, who is at Clifton Springs, Miss Phyllis Johnson, acting secretary, and Miss Werner, organizer of Worley Road Baptist Church, presiding at the piano, leading in the practice of the new C. G. I. T. authorized hymn.

will also speak to the Kiwanians next week.

IN AN EFFORT to reach the delinquent Sunday school scholars of the different districts of the city, special Rally Day services will be held by all corps of the Salvation Army next Sunday. The purpose of this rally is to try to bring about new interest among the children who are absent from the Sunday school, who have not been attending for some time. The efforts of the local corps have already done much to bring new children into the Sunday school, and it is expected that many delinquents will be benefited by these services.

A BANQUET has been arranged, to be held Thursday night, by the Men's Brotherhood of the First Methodist Church, the purpose being to create a new interest in the Brotherhood and to make plans for the winter's work. Meetings will be resumed next Sunday, after having been discontinued during the summer months. The banquet has been put in charge of the Ladies' Aid. Rev. J. F. Regey, president of the Brotherhood, will be the principal speaker. A musical program has been arranged by A. D. Jordan, church organist, and will add much to the occasion.

MAY ASK FOR NEW POLICE STATION

From present indications the rate-payers will be asked at the coming election to express their opinion upon the proposal for a new police station in London.

No. 2 committee has recommended to the city council that another clause be inserted in the bylaw which will be submitted asking authority for the sale of the federal square and the construction of a new city hall on the present site.

PRIZE FOR BEST ITEM DAILY.

YOU must see something going on every day. Perhaps not a big thing, but interesting. The Advertiser wants you to send it for use in the "I Spied" column. Every reader a reporter is the idea behind the plan. The items must not be written to "take a stab" at any person. If so, they will not be published.

In order to create interest in the column, the GRAND OPERA HOUSE has donated two seats each night as a prize for the best item of the day. Your name and address must accompany the item, and it can run with only your initial attached if you desire. The contest is on. WHO WANTS TO GO TO THE GRAND?

If "R. F." in Tuesday's "I Spied" column, will call at the Advertiser office today or Thursday, he will be given two tickets for the Grand Theatre Thursday.

"E. M." was the winner Monday, the announcement being omitted Tuesday, through an error.

COMPLETE PLANS FOR "Y" PROGRAM

Members' Council Will Hear
Reading for Approval
Thursday.

Every department of the local Y. M. C. A. has its plans for the fall and winter complete, and a meeting of the members' council, consisting of a representative from each unit and each club connected with the Y., will be held Tuesday night, to pass on the proposed program of the departments.

Dr. E. S. Detwiler is president of the council, with Wendell Holmes as secretary. The representatives are: Senior businessmen, Dr. E. S. Detwiler and Wendell Holmes; junior businessmen, A. C. Balfour; senior and young men, Arnold Bennett and Jack Cole; leaders, Ben Robinson and D. Walker; basketball, A. T. Taylor; wireless, R. Gurd and E. Berry; boys' committee, W. D. Beamer; public speaking, J. L. Dickinson.

The gymnasium classes have been going for a week, and although rather small as yet, the attendance is increasing day by day. With the swimming pool redecorated and repainted both inside and out, ladders and handrails installed, and new equipment added to the gym, everything points toward a most successful season.

At a meeting of the board of directors Thursday night, the season's program will be read for final approval.

Local Organization Declares
Intention To Recruit Battalion.

The members of the Great War Veterans' Association at a well attended meeting Tuesday night confirmed the resolution passed at a former meeting that the London branch of the G. W. V. A. is ready to make in the east, and that if Canada is asked for a contingent the local branch will recruit from the organization a battalion of trained men. President Col. W. G. Coles presided.

A committee was appointed to act for the association in co-operating with the soldier, church and Boy Scout organizations of the city in the sale of poppies on Poppy Day. The charitable institution of the city will benefit from the proceeds of the sale.

All the members expressed themselves as being delighted with the offer of Fred Landon, of the London Public Library, to loan books for the clubroom, and a resolution was passed thanking him. It was also decided to write a letter of sympathy to Comrade J. H. C. Woodward, who is ill at his home.

LEAVE SAY ABOUT TURNS TO POLICE

Board of Works Declines To Act Regarding Main
Traffic Corner.

All responsibility for legislation to prohibit the left-hand turn at the corner of Dundas and Richmond streets rests upon the members of the police commission, members of the board of works have ruled. Introduced for discussion at Tuesday's session, Ald. John May moved vigorously to amend the bylaws in this manner. He was in possession, he said, of a petition from the London Motor League, expressing similar sentiments.

Ald. John Ashton held that any opposition by the league should be voiced at the meeting, and placed himself on record as strictly against the left-hand turn.

In valid Ald. Alderman May, Douglass and Mayor Wilson attempt to induce Ald. Ashton to view the situation from their viewpoint.

Ald. G. B. Drake held that the traffic was not now properly regulated at the main intersection, while Ald. Douglass was emphatic that all traffic should be halted north and south while the traffic moved east and west, and vice versa.

This scheme as is in vogue in the larger cities is the "best solution," he said. "If something is not done here it is going to be a serious accident at that corner yet. This is getting to be a larger community all the time, and we need competent officers at these corners."

Ald. May moved to file the motion respecting the left-hand turn. Some one else suggested sending it to the police commission. "That's the place," volunteered Mayor Wilson. "It will be filed there."

CECIL CADY TO BE TRIED AGAIN

Jurors Fail To Reach Verdict
After Hearing Charge Against Indian Youth.

Bail At $2,000 Renewed For Accused Alleged To Have Obstructed Officer.

Cecil Cady, 19-year-old Indian youth, residing on the Muncy Reserve, must stand a new trial on a charge of obstructing a police officer in discharge of his duty. This was made necessary by the action of the jury which heard his case at the fall session Tuesday afternoon, members of which, after two hours' deliberation, failed to reach a verdict.

On reporting to Justice Mowat at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, the judge urged them to return to the jury room in an effort to reach a verdict, but the foreman reported that such action would be fruitless. The jury stood eight to three in favor of conviction of Cady. Judge Mowat characterized the disagreement as a pity, and renewed bail at $2,000.

Owing to the illness of an important witness a charge of theft of auto tires preferred against Cady was traversed to the next assizes by Judge Mowat Wednesday morning. The offense is alleged to have been committed last December. Bail at $2,000 on this charge was renewed.

Claims Officer "Excited." Thomas McGookin, Indian agent at Muncy, gave character evidence in favor of Cady, and Hiram Alexander of Muncy also testified. In his address to the jury, Mr. Chisholm pointed out that an officer may get excited, and instead of enforcing the law, break it. He asked for acquittal of his client.

Judge Mowat, in summing up, paid a tribute to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and declared that Detective Alexander's testimony as a member of this force should bear weight.

BICYCLE DEALERS MEET IN LONDON

Several Hundred Delegates Arrive in City for Annual Convention.

Several hundred delegates from points throughout Canada are expected to be present at the opening of the sixth annual convention of the Canadian Bicycle Dealers' Association, which will be held in London Wednesday and Thursday, September 27 and 28. Two special sleepers bringing delegates from Toronto and eastern points were dropped off the 3:45 C. P. train here Wednesday morning, and will stand on the siding for the accommodation of its passengers until Friday morning. Other delegates arrived late Tuesday night.

The convention, which will be held in Hyman Hall, is in the interest of better bicycle business, and will begin at 10 a.m. with the registration of visitors, and a short "get-acquainted" session.

Business will begin in earnest at 2 p.m. E. S. Little, president of the London Chamber of Commerce, will deliver an address of welcome.

The program for the rest of the afternoon will include the president's address, report of the secretary-treasurer, reports of committees, new business, a half-hour's question box discussion, and a workshop talk by Alex. Kay.

The officers of the Ontario section of the Canadian Bicycle Dealers' Association are as follows: President—G. A. Wenig, London. Vice-president—P. A. McBride, Toronto.

Secretary-Treasurer—N. N. Ferries, Hamilton. Publicity Department—W. M. Gladish, Ottawa.

Directors—J. L. Isaac, Brantford; E. C. Briscoe, Chatham; J. R. Dixon, Hamilton; E. T. McCubbin, Brantford; Bert Brown, Chatham; C. E. Banks, Peterboro.

Wednesday evening the delegates will attend a theatre party at Loew's, where special bicycle attractions will be shown. One of these, a home trainer match race between Doc Morton, ex-champion of Canada, and Frank Brown, champion of Canada, promises to be especially interesting. Bill Coles, champion of Canada for the 10-mile distance, has challenged the winner.

DENIES HE HAS INSTITUTED A NON-SMOKING CAMPAIGN

Secretary Tanner Says Alleged Being Made To Ridicule Trustees and Officials.

Secretary W. A. Tanner of the board of education, advances the theory that someone is endeavoring to hold up to ridicule the school trustees and their officials, almost persistently.

He cites, as an instance, the report circulated in city hall circles that he is about to institute a "non-smoking campaign."

"I don't know what it is all about," he explained Wednesday. "At one of the committee meetings I could not hear what was being said, and one of the trustees, Bryden Campbell, I think, remarked: 'No wonder, with the air full of smoke. You could cut it with a knife.'"

EXPERTS TO TEACH NEW "U" COURSE

Professor Morrow, With Able Assistants, To Conduct Business Department.

Further announcements in connection with the new department of commercial economics have been given out by authorities at Western University.

Professor Morrow will be assisted in the department by F. H. Curran, J. W. Westervelt and C. J. Bell, all of whom conducted classes in the past session. For the coming session few changes will be made in the classes previously offered. The elementary class in accounting will be taken by Professor Morrow as well as the class in statistics. The only change in these two courses will be the addition of a new text book in statistics, with a view to bringing the theory into closer touch with its business application.

Mr. Westervelt's instruction in advanced accounting will be expanded somewhat so as to introduce the more practical features of the accountant's work. Stress will be laid on the auditing needed to meet modern methods of production and merchandising. The legal side of executorship and of corporate accounting will be dealt with, and particular attention will be given to the various phases of factory cost accounting.

The course in commercial law will remain under the instruction of F. H. Curran, and will embrace the field of contract law together with special lectures on other phases of commercial law.

The new courses to be offered by Professor Morrow will broadly cover the two fields of industrial management and commercial distribution. Instruction in the former will cover the history and theory of management and the application of the theory to the actual management of plant organization and plant operation under such headings as location, construction, equipment, stores, purchasing, planning, employment department, wage systems, Taylor, Gantt, and Emerson methods, and labor policies. The class in marketing will deal with the organization of markets, distribution methods and agencies, advertising, price, collection and credit policies. In this class Professor Morrow will receive the assistance of C. J. Bell.

The university authorities hope that a limited number of men in business will avail themselves of the opportunities to attend the lectures. As accommodation is limited only a few special students can be accepted, and the preference will be given to those with business experience. Application for admittance to the lectures should be made to the registrar, whose approval must be secured.

The Late Dr. Charles S. Moore.

A great soul, lent to earth the while
To lift the fallen, teach the sad to smile,
A true physician, blessed with healing power
To meet the need of every trying hour.
A tower of strength, a friend indeed,
With quick response to every human need,
A radiant life in selfless service spent—
Through endless time its inspiration sent.

SUCH was the life of the late Dr. CHARLES S. MOORE. He was the only son of the late Dr. CHARLES G. MOORE, one of London's earliest and best physicians in his day. The son from early years was in his father's office, learning all he could. After he obtained his degree he entered into partnership with his brother. After his father's death he entered into partnership with his brother-in-law, Dr. STEVENSON, and after his death with Dr. DRAKE. For many years past he had practiced alone, every day in the week, day and night. How he bore up under the strain puzzled many of his friends, but he was happiest at his work. Indeed, when suffering during his last illness he was thinking most of others and directing kind acts towards some he knew were ill.

There are very many who will miss Dr. MOORE and be lost without him. It is believed he treated more patients several times over than any doctor now living in London. London has for many years been a medical center, becoming more important as the years pass. This is largely due to the Medical School of the Western University. London has recently lost by death several prominent doctors. The name of Dr. MOORE adds one more to the long list.

Dr. MOORE spent his whole life in London, and received his education at the old Union School under the late NICHOLAS WILSON and J. B. BOYLE. Later he went to the Heliopolis Boys' College. He inherited the spirit of the true physician, and all his life did all the good he could. His life will be an inspiration to many doctors and has been a blessing to many thousands.

His constant attention to his patients did not prevent him from reading a great deal, and few men were more interesting in conversation. His wife and family will have the sincere sympathy of very many friends.

A Difficult Matter.

IT may have been imagined that the term "readjustment" referred only to business and places where goods were bought and sold or manufactured.

It has a far wider meaning, and there are some very important phases of it being worked out today, with accompanying hardship, for readjustment meant always that some person was going to get hurt.

As long as people were able to dodge the getting hurt business there was only a limited amount of readjustment.

Right now some of the farmers of Ontario are going through a period of readjustment, and not a few of them are finding it hard to get through and still keep on going.

For instance, around Chatham there are some farms where tobacco raising is a very popular industry. The soil and climate seem to be well adapted to this form of farming, and with proper care a very good crop of the much-sought weed can be taken off the land.

A few years ago the market prices for this produce went to a goodly figure, as high as 45 cents a pound being paid. The result was what could naturally be expected. Those who were "in" that year made good money, probably more than they had ever made in a single year before.

When it becomes known that any industry is a money maker it is not necessary to hire a hall to tell the people about the good thing. They see the good thing and are anxious to enter in.

Result: Many sales of land were made up as high as $275 per acre, which is a fairly stiff figure. Next result was that a great many more people went into the business, and when it came time to market the crop it was found that the price was way down and altogether out of line with $275 per acre for the land alone.

Growers claim it is necessary to get at least 20 cents a pound in order to make money, while right now they think they are fairly lucky if they can sell out at 20 cents.

The result of it all is that a number of these growers find that the ground has been cut right out from under their feet, and not a few of them are making assignments, being unable to carry on. They hope to get something out of the wreck in this way, and then face the problem of starting all over again.

You may not hold that the growing of tobacco is an essential industry, but that does not alter the fact that these men are facing a hard proposition. It is not easy to start over again in middle life, after the greater part of one's funds has been swept away in what appeared to be a good opportunity to enter a profitable undertaking.

The Pioneers.

SOCIAL service workers held a meeting in Toronto a day or so ago, and there were some things that came up that are worth repeating. It is a very easy matter for this phrase, "social service worker," to become something of a hackneyed clause, meaning little or nothing more than the desire of some people for an interesting bit of recreation.

Now and then something comes to the surface to grip the attention of the public and let it be seen just what work can be done, and also why it is hard to do it.

One worker, and a woman at that, told of trips made 20 or 30 miles from a railroad track, north of Port Arthur, where it is impossible to get the services of a doctor. She told of a family of eight children on one homestead, none of whom had any more than one garment to wear, all of them under-nourished, and yet all making the best of what they had got.

The getting of medical attention to these people is a problem. The means of communication are not plentiful. There are no telephones and no mails. There are poor roads, and by the time word could be brought out that medical care was needed and a physician found who would go back to attend the case whole days of precious time are lost.

A year ago, when the Baptist Association of Ontario and Quebec met at St. Thomas a similar message came from the northlands of Ontario, brought there by a missionary who was investing his days going up and down that land seeking what he could do to carry the message of good cheer to the scattered families that could be reached in no other way.

There was no attempt at oratory in his simple narrative—indeed, such would have spoiled it, and marred the power it had to grip the heart-strings of the audience. He pictured riding his horse mile after mile, and coming upon a little shanty, reared back in a fresh-cut clearing. As he drew near the husband and father was busy making a little grave among the stumps. And there, beside him, with the lifeless form of the little one she loved more dearly than life itself, stood the wife and mother. Two brave hearts, all alone under the canopy of heaven, away from friends, away from those who might help him in such an hour, were preparing for the last sad act of laying away in the bosom of mother earth, in sight of their little home, the only bit of life and cheer that had been sent to them. And, in the words of the man who told the story, "There are men, women and children, living, struggling, gripped with illness and dying without as much as a voice to repeat the words, 'Let not your hearts be troubled.'"

Ah, yes, it is an easy matter for those who live in the older sections of the land to hold lightly the privileges we have. It is easy for us to advise that people should go forth far into these new lands and there new wealth from the forests and produce new dollars from the soil. It is well that some of these brave hearts who have thrown their all into the mission of abandonment and self-sacrifice should turn back now and then and tell us in plain, unparaphrased words of the life these people live who have gone forth to seek new homes in a new land, the pioneers who pave the way for what will undoubtedly some day be a great and a prosperous country.

LITTLE 'TISERS

Speaking of the revival of bicycle riding, dealers who have made a very careful study of the situation claim there are 17,000 bicycles in London. That means that every fourth person in this city rides a wheel. Boys and girls make up a very large percentage, for despite the coming of cars, the possession of a bicycle is still a big item to the juvenile. Then, a look at the factories will show that this form of to-and-fro daily work has lost nothing of its popularity with the man in the shop.

The average man when he comes to be 40 years of age is through with sports. True, he may play a bit of golf or a few tennis at a slow tennis game now and then, but for the most part he turns to his car, to fishing tackle or his backyard for recreation. But here's Mr. TOM MAYLOR of Forest playing a good fast game of cricket at 67, and bowling a ball that can still make the best of the batters wonder what it is going to do. Blessed is that man who grows old and does it youthfully.

The Christian Guardian thinks that PREMIER DUFFY has the best of the discussion with SECRETARY J. J. MORRISON of the United Farmers of Ontario over the question of "broadening out." It says: "So far as we can see, the difference between Mr. DUFFY and Mr. MORRISON is largely this: that Mr. DUFFY has had to bear the responsibility of being premier of Canada's largest and wealthiest province, and Mr. MORRISON has had no such responsibility. PREMIER DUFFY has made good, so much so that even his political enemies are willing to admit it. And he knows, and every member of his cabinet knows, that he has made good simply because he has been an honest, painstaking, efficient and intensely practical man. If he had attempted to follow the advice of the Farmers' Sun, which appears to voice Mr. MORRISON's views, there seems to be no doubt that he would soon have wrecked his administration, but he preferred to follow what seemed to him more practical and sane politics, and we think he was wise. And more than that, we venture to think that if Mr. MORRISON had been premier instead of Mr. DUFFY, Mr. MORRISON would not have followed the path which the Sun marked out as the only right one."

TO THE EDITOR

THIS WAR TALK.

Editor Advertiser:
Sir,—Hon. Mr. Meighen is exceedingly valiant when the crisis has passed. When it is assured that there will be no real call for Canadian help in Turkey he denounces the King's government for the caution which it exercised and which, we believe, is approved today by nine-tenths of the people of Canada, and these including the thinking people.

Mr. Meighen need not fear for the loyalty of the Canadian people when there is need for that loyalty being shown by this country has not subscribed to the idea that it must send troops to the far corners of the earth every time that England gets into a dispute. In this case the latest word indicates that Lloyd George and his friends put their bet on the wrong horse, just as the majority of British newspapers have been pointing out for a week. The Turks are coming back to Europe and England is agreeable. The Greeks have received their drubbing and deserved it. Between the two it is a toss-up. The Turks were open enemies during the late war, and every soldier who met them respected them. The Greeks were treacherous neutrals, half the time in almost open league with the Kaiser through marriage connections of the royal family. As for the Armenians, upon whom so much sympathy has been spent, ask any Canadian soldier who encountered them what he thinks of them, and you will find a proper Turk right away.

Canadians somehow have the idea that loyalty to Great Britain means loyalty to whatever British politicians occupy office. Does it ever strike the average Canadian that there is no such unanimity in Great Britain for Lloyd George, where they are nearer and know him better, as is to be found in Canada? Here we have him held up from pulpits and elsewhere as a demi-god, who can do no wrong. Britishers, perhaps a majority of them today, are sadly disillusioned about their former idol. The man who can talk so glibly to a church gathering about peace one day can rattle the sword in the scabbard the next, and by an appeal, which nearly every important British newspaper condemns, try to draw the Dominions in to settle for his mistakes. Let there be no doubt of it, British policy in the Near East has not been a success in the last three months, and the homeland knows it quite well. Lloyd George's "new war," as it is deviously called in London, England, is as unpopular as any move well could be, but in London, Canada, we have a Ministerial Association, the ambassadors of the "Principle of Peace," demanding that the King government shall forthwith launch this country into a military enterprise that may lead anywhere. What information have these gentlemen upon which to act in this way? Is their action not simply a case of hysteria? It is a pitiable spectacle after four years of war to end war. Canada belongs to the League of Nations and these gentlemen have talked about it in their pulpits, but they forget it very quickly when they smell powder, and all they can do is to raise a war-cry.

The best example for Canada in this recent crisis was Great Britain herself, where a sane public opinion forced the hand of the government, and today's news dispatches show the Lloyd George government, despite all its bombastic talk last week, quite ready to line up with France and Italy, which long ago repudiated the Treaty of Sevres, and deal with the Turk on common-sense grounds. Yours truly,

THE tongue rightly has been called the index to a disordered stomach. There are few physicians, indeed, who would fail to recognize at a glance the heavily coated, gray or yellowish tongue, with tip and margin of red, accompanied by other characteristic symptoms, as denoting that commotion of all ills, indigestion.

The tongue serves also as an index to many other diseases. On the tongue of a smallpox pa-

NO. 339 — MENTAL DISCIPLINE FOR THE FINE-HAIRD.

Inner tendencies toward refinement are not to be sniffed at, notwithstanding the sneering attitude of many people (those with coarse hair, you mostly find).

A certain amount of refinement is good—too much is not. The same is true of its opposite. The super-refined have difficulty in attuning themselves to the everyday world, for the workaday world is not made up entirely of roses. There is much dirt and roughness about it in addition to its beauties. But, by the same token, those who cannot rise above the appreciation of the merit in grimy things miss a great deal out of life. Enjoyment is a thing of happiness if you have it. If you have it, you may take it for granted that you have a more sensitive nature than the average, a great natural ability to appreciate refinements. This is good. It is nothing to worry about. It will afford you a great deal of happiness if you cultivate the habit of doing a bit of grimy, hard physical work whenever you can. If you are a man it is a sure preventive of becoming what the world calls a mollycoddle. If you are a woman it will prevent you from growing into one of those super-sensitive, hot-house plants who ultimately become tiresome and annoying even to those who were most attracted toward them. Your willingness upon occasion to mix up with a bit of grimy will only make you more appreciated by those whose opinions you value most.

LEARN A WORD EVERY DAY

TODAY'S word is—PERTURB.

It's pronounced—per-turb, with accent on the second syllable.

It means—to disturb, to vex, to trouble, to disquiet, to agitate.

It comes from—Latin "per," through, by, or for, and "turbare," to disturb. Although the Near East is a long way from this country, yet the commotion in that part of the world has not failed to perturb the Canadian government.

WORK HAND IN HAND.

"Yes," said the pilgrim in the elderly overcoat with the bulging pockets, "him an' me is in partnership, but we don't do business together."

"How's that?"
"Why, he goes around sellin' a stove blackin' that leaves a stain on the fingers. I go around next day to the same house with the only soap that'll take it off."

AMONG the earliest evidences of some creature, more manlike than any living ape upon earth, are a number of flints and stones very roughly chipped and shaped so as to be held in the hand. These were probably used as hand-axes. These early implements ("Eoliths") are often so crude and simple that there was for a long time a controversy whether they were to be regarded as natural or artificial productions.

The date of the earliest of them is put by geologists as Pliocene—that is to say before the First Glacial Age. They occur also throughout the First Interglacial period. We know of no bones or other remains in Europe or America of the quasi-human beings of half a million years ago, who made and used these implements. They used them to hammer with, perhaps they used them to fight with and perhaps they used bits of wood for similar purposes.

A Walking Ape.
But at Trinil, in Java, in strata which are said to correspond either to the later Pliocene or to the American and European First-Glacial Age, there have been found some scattered bones of a creature such as the makers of these early implements may have been. The top of a skull, some teeth, and a thigh-bone have been found. The skull shows a brain-case about half-way in size between that of the chimpanzee and man, but the thigh-bone is that of a creature as well adapted to standing and running as a man and as free, therefore, to use its hands. The creature was not a man, nor was it an arboreal ape like the chimpanzee. It was a walking ape. It has been named by naturalists Pithecanthropus erectus (the walking ape-man).

Of the makers of European Eoliths we have got no bones at all. We can only guess at their appearance. While these early men, or "sub-men" or "pseudo-men" of the Eoliths were running about Europe four or five hundred thousand years ago, there were mammoths, rhinoceroses, a huge hippopotamus, a giant beaver and a bison and wild cattle in their world. There were also wild horses, and the saber-toothed tiger still abounded. There are no traces of lions or true tigers at that time in Europe, but there were bears, otters, wolves and a wild boar. It may be that the early sub-man sometimes played jackal to the saber-toothed tiger and finished up the bodies on which the latter had gorged itself.

After Pithecanthropus, that first glimpse of something at least sub-human in the record of geology, there is not another fragment of human or man-like bone yet known from that record for an interval of hundreds of thousands of years. There is nothing human or sub-human to be found except an increasing abundance of stone implements. But these improve in quality. It is not until we reach deposits which are stated to be of the Second Interglacial period, 200,000 years later, 200,000 or 250,000 years ago, that another scrap of bones comes to hand. Then we find a jawbone. Man or Beast?

This jawbone was found in a sand pit near Heidelberg, at a depth of eighty feet from the surface, and it is not the jawbone of a man as we understand man, but it is man-like in every respect, except that it has absolutely no trace of a chin; it is more massive than a man's, and its narrowness behind could not, it is thought, have given the tongue sufficient play for articulate speech. It is not an ape's jawbone; the teeth are human.

The owner of this jawbone has been variously named Homo Heidelbergensis and Palaeoanthropus Heidelbergensis according to the estimate formed of his humanity or sub-humanity by various authorities. He lived in a world not remotely unlike the world of the still earlier sub-man of the first implements; the deposits in which it is found show that there were elephants, horses, rhinoceroses, bison, a moose, and so forth, with it in the world, but the saber-toothed tiger was declining and the lion was spreading over Europe.

The implements of this period (known as the Chellean period), are a very considerable advance upon those of the Pliocene Age. They are well made but very much bigger than any truly human implements. The Heidelberg man may have had a very big body and large fore limbs. He may have been a woolly, strange-looking inhuman creature.

We must turn over the record for it may be, another 100,000 years for the next remains of anything human or sub-human. Then in deposits ascribed to the Third Interglacial period, which may have been 100,000 years ago, and lasted 50,000 years, the smashed pieces of a whole skull turn up. The deposit is a gravel which may have been derived from the washing out of still earlier gravel strata, and this skull fragment may be in reality as old as the First Glacial Period. The bony remains discovered at Piltdown in Sussex display a creature still ascending only very gradually from the sub-human. The first scraps of this skull were found in an excavation for road gravel in Sussex. Bit by bit other fragments of this skull were hunted out of the quarry heaps until most of it could be pieced together. It is a thick skull, thicker than that of any living race of men, and it has a brain capacity intermediate between that of Pithecanthropus and man.

The Dawn of Man.
This creature has been named Eoanthropus, the dawn man. In the same gravel pits were found teeth of rhinoceros, hippopotamus and the leg bone of a deer with marks upon it that may be cuts. A curious bat-shaped instrument of elephant bone has also been found.

Neanderthal Man

There was moreover a jaw-bone among these scattered remains, which was at first assumed naturally enough to belong to Eoanthropus, but which it was afterwards suggested was probably that of a chimpanzee. It is extraordinarily like that of a chimpanzee, but Dr. Keith, one of the greatest authorities, in these questions, assigns it, after an exhaustive analysis in his "Antiquity of Man" (1915), to the skull with which it is found. It is, as a jaw-bone, far less human in character than the jaw of the much more ancient Homo Heidelbergensis, but the teeth are in some respects more like those of living men.

Dr. Keith, swayed by the jawbone, does not think that Eoanthropus, in spite of its name, is a creature in the direct ancestry of man. Much less is it an intermediate form between the Heidelberg man and the Neanderthal man we shall presently describe. It was only related, he thinks, to the true ancestor of man as the orang is related to the chimpanzee. It was one of a number of sub-human running apes of more than ape-like intelligence, and if it was not on the line royal, it was, at any rate, a very close collateral.

After this glimpse of a skull, the record for very many centuries gives nothing but flint implements, which improve steadily in quality. A very characteristic form is shaped like a sole, with one flat side striated off at one blow and the other side worked. The archaeologists, as the record continues, are presently able to distinguish scrapers, borers, knives, darts, throwing stones and the like. Progress is now made rapidly; in a few centuries the shape of the hand-axe, shows distinct and recognizable improvements. And then comes quite a number of remains. The Fourth Glacial age is rising toward its maximum. Man is taking to caves and leaving vestiges there; at Krapina in Croatia, at Neanderthal near Dusseldorf, at Spy, human remains have been found, skulls and bones of a creature that is certainly a man.

"Homo" a Portrait.
Somewhere about 50,000 years ago, if not earlier, appeared Homo Neanderthalensis (also called Homo anticus and Homo primigenius), a quite possible human being.

His thumb was not quite equal in flexibility and usefulness to a human thumb, he stooped forward and could not hold his head erect, as all living men do, he was chinless and perhaps incapable of speech, there were curious differences about the enamel and the roots of his teeth from those of all living men, he was very thick-set, he was, indeed, not quite of the human species, but there is no dispute about his attribution to the genus Homo. He was certainly not descended from Eoanthropus, but his jawbone is so like the Heidelberg jawbones as to make it possible that the chummiest and heaviest Homo Heidelbergensis, a thousand centuries before him, was of his blood and race.

SAYS VIGILANCE NECESSARY TO OUST DRUG RING

Chief of Health Department Asks Co-operation in Fighting Evil.

MONTREAL IS CENTER

Illicit Traffic Financed by Canadians and White Foreigners.

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Co-operation between municipal, provincial and federal police forces: the formation of special "dope" squads in larger cities, and eternal vigilance are necessary to stamp out the drug traffic in Canada, according to federal officials charged with enforcement of the opium and narcotic drug act.

Montreal is at present the worst center of illicit drug traffic in Canada, according to P. W. Cowan, who is chief of the branch of the health department enforcing the laws. This is due to the geographical position of the city as Canada's chief seaport, and also to the ever-changing character of the traffic, but there are other centers of Canada where the drug traffic is a serious menace.

In Montreal alone, since the first of the year, there have been 35 deaths from drug poisoning, according to Mr. Cowan, and the traffic is growing despite the efforts to stamp it out.

"Addicts breed addicts," is the belief of officials engaged in trying to stamp out this evil. And they declare that Montreal is the real headquarters of a wealthy "drug ring" sufficiently influential and powerful to make the conviction of traffickers a difficult matter, and to fight their cases through court after court on appeals.

"The chief movers in the illicit drug traffic which we are trying to stamp out are not Chinamen," Mr. Cowan declared. "They are whites belonging to various races, with large sums of money behind them, and apparently with influential friends. The Chinese chiefly traffic in smoking opium among their own compatriots; the whites, however, handle the dope traffic are Canadians and foreigners who are playing for bigger stakes than the Chinese. The federal authorities are making every effort to stamp out the evil, but we need the co-operation of both provincial and municipal authorities before we can make much headway."

OPPOSE NAMING OF ASSISTANTS

breaking the ground preparatory to church union.

For Church Union.

"We cannot complete the preparations for church union until we fully understand the attitude of other denominations toward it," the archdeacon said. "No denomination should come into church union on the sacrifice of their own principles, but I hope we have all arrived at the conclusion that church union must be brought about some day, and we explore the breaks that exist in the church of God at the present time. As the archbishops said in his charge we need a campaign of education to further the cause of church union, and that must come from other denominations as well as ourselves."

"Safeguarded as the motion is, by reason of the fact that it provides that the bishop may grant only 'occasional authority' to a minister of another communion to preach in an Anglican church, and furthermore, that the bishop must be convinced in his own mind that such a minister has his face turned toward the light of church union, and also that the incumbent of the parish be prepared to invite him into his church, I ask your unanimous support of it as one step toward breaking the ground for church union."

"If we are loyal to the resolutions already passed endorsing the Lambeth appeal, we must see our way clear to the support of this motion," said Rev. H. W. Snell of Ingham, the seconder.

Anglican clergy and laity, assembled for the provincial synod in Bishop Cronyn Hall Tuesday night, took an undivided stand against divorce, and any action on the part of either Legislature or church might tend to make the procuring of divorce easier or more frequent.

SCORES DIVORCE.

With but one change the articles concerning divorce submitted by the synod of the year to the general sessions were ratified, reading as follows: "That this council desires (1) to place on record its conviction that the law of Christ as regards marriage is the life-long union of one man with one woman, to the exclusion of all others on either side; (2) to remind the church public that according to the general synod canon, no clergyman of the church shall marry a divorced person while the other is still living; (3) To affirm that in view of the possible legislation on divorce, this council strongly protests against any extension of the grounds for divorce."

In the latter clause, the words, "beyond what is now the rule in the Dominion Parliament, namely, adultery," were struck out. The feeling manifested by many of the clergy regarding them was that no phrase which by any means signified an approval of divorce on any grounds should be tolerated.

Oppose All Grounds.

"The less we approve of divorce the better," H. Sanders of Norwich, lay delegate from the Diocese of Huron, stated. "Danger lies in this clause, in that at some future date an argument for divorce might be construed upon the grounds that in 1922 the synod of Ontario signified its approval of divorce upon the grounds of adultery."

"The church knows no innocent party in a divorce case," Canon A. H. W. Whalley of the synod of Ottawa, said.

"Usually the innocent party is the successful plaintiff, and there should be no relaxation in our attitude toward divorce."

With reference to the attitude taken by a number of people that divorce ought to be made more accessible to the poor man, one delegate stated: "We confer no favor on the poor man by putting divorce within his reach. Rather, is the rich man cursed by the fact that he is able to obtain the decree of divorce. There are scores of families today irreparably separated who might have been united and happy had divorce been more difficult for them to get."

Summing up the situation referred to in the last clause of the article, Chancellor W. A. Worrel of Toronto declared:

"Our strong and definite protest should go out against any movement which would tend to increase the number of reasons whereby a decree of divorce may be granted."

On the motion of Venerable Archdeacon Cronyn, a motion providing for the appointment of ten delegates to represent the Church of England in the province on the social service council of Ontario was adopted with the provision that neither the provincial synod nor the diocesan synod are in any way pledged to the financial support of the proceedings of the said social service council, and that such representation be made with the full understanding that the present clause of the constitution stands, that is to say, no action may be taken by the council which is not sustained by the majority of each unit.

Ratified Statement.

Synod ratified the statement of the executive council regarding the ecclesiastical boundaries of the diocese of Keewatin and Moosehide, and on motion of Mr. Justice Hodgins of Toronto a committee composed of Chancellor W. A. Worrel of Toronto, Rev. Provost of St. George of Toronto, Dean Tucker of Huron, Chancellor Boyce of Algoma, and Archdeacon Gilmour, be appointed to investigate the conditions regarding the unsatisfactory conditions. The article read: His Grace the Metropolitan of the council to the complicated state of affairs resulting from the fact that the boundaries of the ecclesiastical province are not coterminous with those of the civil province. The result is that an incongruous situation exists in the western part of the diocese of Algoma and in Northern Ontario generally. Your council, after hearing all the discussion in this matter, reiterated its conviction that reorganization of the ecclesiastical boundaries is a matter of great importance to the church in this province.

Archbishop's Charge.

The charge of the Archbishop of Algoma, which was read at the afternoon session of the synod, dealt largely, as was expected, with the subject of church reunion, together with the changing attitude of the church toward the need of religious education in the schools and the growing demand for social service work, which bears testimony to the fact that Christianity is really penetrating to the heart of modern life.

The attitude of the church public to these three considerations is regarded by the archbishop as three of the hopeful signs of the times which "The first of these signs," reads the charge, "has a vital connection with the missionary movement. It is the growing conviction that division in the church of God is wrong. At last Christian people are beginning to perceive that such division is the cause of almost all our greatest religious problems, and that worst of all, it is the chief hindrance to the carrying out of the Lord's commission for the evangelization of the world. To begin to see that it has not merely thrust religious education out of our schools, reduced ecclesiastical discipline to a ridiculous farce and made church finance a veritable nightmare, but that it has practically blocked the way to a successful working in every field of missionary endeavor. Need we wonder? Division reduces the church to impotence. In the great war, the church was to all intents and purposes, voiceless and powerless. Exploited by the spirit of division, she had nothing better than a babel of conflicting utterances of an evil world—we may well thank God that at last Christians are awakening to the truth—they realize something of the evil of division, but are not yet alive to the grievous sin of schism—they are increasingly interested in the subject of reunion, but are not yet clear as to what reunion involves."

More Missionaries Needed.

"They really desire unity, but confuse it with federation as though the unity of a bundle of sticks tied together could be the same as the unity of one living body—and yet beyond all doubts, there is an awakening, which is genuine, widespread and growing—an awakening which is one of the most hopeful signs of the day."

The changing attitude of our Eng-like a threat.

Old-Time Velocipede and Pee Wee Tricycle Sport on London Streets

Crowds of pedestrians, homeward bound at noon Tuesday, stopped to enjoy the antics of two cyclists on Dundas street, resurrected for the occasion, an old "boneshaker," probably of 1880 vintage, maybe earlier, was the trusty steed of one rider. Remember the time when grand-dad used to ride home late, and step off his high "Velocipede" into the upstairs window? So do we. The rider in today's free exhibition was quite as competent in handling the tricky "bike," as hundreds who saw him will admit.

He was followed by another somewhat dangerous and reckless machine—a three-wheeled tricycle, on which a rider risked his life some two feet from the ground.

Some of the spectators claimed to have it on good authority that the Bicycle Dealers' Convention, holding forth at Hyman Hall today and Thursday, and the riding of women's fashion dictators, were considering the re-adoption of the old-fashioned high wheel. And why not? If daughter is going to sport street sweeping skirts in vogue in grandmother's time, men asked, why not granddad's velocipede for Canada's young sons?

The rumors could not be confirmed at press time.

lish-speaking people toward religious education as a necessary element in education is considered a second propitious sign and the demand for increased activity along lines of social service is ranged as a superficial and self-contradictory as it may appear in these days. Christianity is really penetrating to the heart of modern life.

The archbishop points out the danger in the fact that our young men are being held back from the sacred duty of giving themselves over almost exclusively to secular vocations, meanwhile the prospects in mission fields are far from bright.

MRS. O. KOEHLER TESTIFIES AT TRIAL

FIND ANDERSON GUILTY.

Sarnia, Sept. 26.—After a deliberation of an hour and 20 minutes on the part of the jury, George Anderson of London was tonight found guilty of complicity in the Wyoming bank robbery. The verdict was returned at 11:35 p.m., and was heard by Anderson without apparent tremor, although he appeared very pale.

Judge Lennox stated that he would pronounce sentence upon Anderson some time before the close of the present session. The trial of John Yohn will be continued on Monday morning. A very large crowd waited in the courtroom until the verdict was returned by the jurors.

The trial occupied the whole of today and it was found necessary to call an evening session. During the afternoon Mrs. Olive Koehler, crown star witness, occupied the center of the stage and again related the story of her compulsory bank robbery and her friends.

Closely Cross-Examined.

She was closely cross-examined by W. R. Meredith for slightly more than an hour. Counsel repeatedly suggested that the witness had gleaned her knowledge of the alleged facts from Edward McCullen and not from the actual robbery. "Was it not the height of absurdity for them to come to you for information concerning Edward McCullen on one occasion?" he asked.

Later counsel said: "I put it that you were an intimate friend of Edward McCullen in the fall of 1920. Can you deny it?"

The witness did deny it. Continuing, the counsel asked the witness if she did not think the three men, Anderson, Yohn and Ayers, needed their names written down to advise them against telling the story of how they robbed the bank to a woman whom they had only met once.

The witness steadfastly held to her story, which was similar to that earlier trial. Mr. Meredith asked Mrs. Koehler if she had received part of the reward for the conviction of Ayers.

The witness objected to answering the question until the judge indicated that it should be answered.

Received $3,000.

Mrs. Koehler said then that she received $3,000. "That $3,000 is the first of the blood money, then?" counsel said.

Towards the close of her examination, Mrs. Koehler denied she had ever asked McCullen for money or that she had tried to blackmail him. Other crown witnesses during the afternoon were two brothers named Moffat, farmers in Brooks Township, who testified to seeing Anderson on the morning of October 20 standing beside the car near Warwick village.

The case was stuck in the mud, and witnesses were at a standstill.

Mrs. Besse Hunt, a Wyoming lady who saw four men emerge from the rear of bank, was again a witness, but did not identify McCullen.

Mrs. Rachel Anderson and Anderson's wife testified. The accused was called to the witness stand at his home on the afternoon of the trial. Anderson himself in the box gave evidence to this effect. When Ayers, who is serving 12 years at Kingston, was called and questioned with regard to the evidence of Mrs. Koehler, he was so anxious to give information without waiting for questions that Justice Lennox finally lost patience and sent him from the witness-box.

Admitted Being Jailed.

Anderson admitted having spent a month in jail for carrying a revolver, and also being convicted two years ago for striking a constable. Mr. Meredith opened his case for the jury at 8:30 p.m., and spoke for 20 minutes, and Crown Attorney F. W. Willson spoke for 20 minutes. In his charge to the jury Justice Lennox expressed the opinion that much time could have been saved in the prosecution of the trial.

The judge spoke for 20 minutes, pointing out the fact that the evidence of the story told by Mrs. Olive Koehler seven or eight witnesses had sworn they had seen Anderson at the robbery. On the fact that they had only seen Anderson a brief while did not signify, for circumstances must have impressed the features of the men on the minds of the witnesses to a degree that might cause them to remember the features for a lifetime.

WILL HOLD FIRE PREVENTION DAY

Chamber of Commerce Seeks Co-operation of City's Youth.

To Impress On Citizens Untold Value of Preventing Conflagrations.

By royal proclamation, Monday, Oct. 9, has been set aside to be observed as fire prevention day, and at the weekly directors' meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, held Tuesday afternoon, it was pointed out that the co-operation of the boys' organizations in the city would be of untold benefit in impressing on the citizens the value of fire prevention, and the boys' secretary of the Y. M. C. A. will be approached and asked to help in securing the aid of the city's youth.

A questionnaire has been drawn up and will be distributed among the school children to be answered with the aid of the parents and returned to the school. The questions deal with fire prevention in the home.

A communication was received from Percy T. Bullen of the London Daily Telegraph staff and representative of the Association of Foreign Press Representatives, saying that London would be included on the itinerary of the visit of the members of that association to Canada. The date of their visit has not been set.

Major J. C. Seybold, manager of the London Bond Co-operation, was elected honorary treasurer, to succeed Duncan McArthur, who has moved to Kingston.

With the possibility of a "Made in London" show sometime in the spring, the Advertising and Sales Club have offered to co-operate in making the project a success.

The board also considered the proposition for the additional town planning powers, which were brought up before the last meeting of the Western Ontario United Boards of Trade, and it was decided to bring the matter to the attention of the local town planning commission.

FLEET REVOLTS AS KING ABDICATES

an outbreak of hostilities between the British and the Turks, it is learned, Col. Shuttleworth, commanding the British forces in Chanak, was about to open fire on the advancing Kemalists cavalry squadrons when he received an urgent radio from Brig. Gen. Harrington in Constantinople urging him to suspend the attack until all peaceful measures were exhausted.

In consequence a British officer was sent to the Kemalists lines under a white flag to inform the Nationalist commander that unless he retreated the British would open fire. After further parleys the Turks were given 48 hours in which to withdraw beyond the neutral zone.

TURKS TO SEND NOTE.

Part of the Ankara government has decided to send a note to the powers demanding the immediate evacuation of Thrace, according to a statement attributed by the Figaro to Ferid Bey, Kemal representative in France. This step has been decided upon, he said, because it was certain the Greeks were preparing for systematic destruction of the country and had already arrested and sent to Greece a number of prominent Turks to be held in exchange for Greeks made captive by the Turks.

Ferid Bey declared the Turks had not recognized establishment of a "zone of safety" and added: "If the Kemal government accepts the zone you may be sure we will respect it. In any case, acceptance might coincide only with the meeting of the preliminary armistice conference, where we shall demand evacuation of Thrace and restoration of the country to Ottoman administration, and also the return of Constantinople, although our troops might not enter the capital."

MOBILIZES TROOPS.

Constantinople, Sept. 27.—While the Anatolian cabinet, sitting at Smyrna, is completing its reply to the allied note, the Nationalist army continues its feverish concentration of troops on the Ismid and Chanak lines. Mustafa Kemal Pasha now has 1,100 men in Kunt Kaleli at the mouth of the Dardanelles; 5,000 at Adramiti, 50 miles southeast of Chanak; 10,000 in the intervening Sanjak of Karesli and considerable forces in the other areas.

The Nationalist leader expects these concentrations to be completed by Sept. 30, which date coincides with the time set for the final evacuation of refugees from Smyrna.

The British are no less busy strengthening their lines and checking every move made by the Kemalists.

The Sea of Marmara and the Bosphorus are dotted with the most modern war craft, the concentration rivaling that of the fateful days of the Gallipoli campaign.

The British fleet now includes six dreadnoughts, seven battle cruisers, twenty destroyers and several submarines and giant aircraft carriers. The assembly of this great armada and the increase in the British land forces to upwards of 30,000 men, have quieted the frayed nerves of the anxious Christian population of the capital.

The sultan's cabinet met in special session yesterday and decided not to retire unless so ordered by the Kemal government.

An encyclical from Pope Pius was read yesterday in the Catholic churches, calling on the congregations to pray for peace. On Sunday solemn high mass will be celebrated, followed by the late Pope Benedict's peace litany.

REQUISITION SHIPS.

London, Sept. 27.—The British government yesterday requisitioned the British-India steamer Manora and the Canadian Pacific steamer Corcoran as troopships to convey military details to the Near East.

CONFIRMS ABDICATION.

London, Sept. 27.—Reuters' Limited, says authoritative news has been received of Greece, while a Central News dispatch from Athens, dated 8:30 a.m. today, says King Constantine has signed an abdication decree without reservation.

King Constantine has accepted the resignation of the cabinet, and quickly followed the reception of two ultimatums from the cruiser Lemnos, says an Athens dispatch.

In accepting the resignation, the king said he entirely put aside any idea of resistance which would bring, as a result, civil war in Greece.

The crown prince has abandoned his proposed journey to Rumania for the royal marriage.

THINKS LONDON SHOULD AID FAIR

Aid. Childs Points Out Educational Merits of the Exhibition.

Opposes Charging Fifty Cents for Admission to the Grounds.

Upon its educational merits alone the Western Fair should be lent financial support from the city, according to Alderman H. J. Childs, chairman of the finance committee, who adds, however, that nothing of a tangible nature can be accomplished this year other than a recommendation for the 1923 council.

The chairman feels that the Western Fair is an asset to the city and should be considered as such. He is decidedly opposed, however, to the 50-cent admission price, and has always been, he explains.

Viewing unfavorably, however, the suggestion to charge another site, Alderman Childs believes that the present location should still be used, but holds that the grounds could be laid out to better advantage. He would favor this work being undertaken once a suitable plan had been outlined.

One of the chief draw-backs, as he views the situation, is the fact that the directors of the fair board generally wait until fall week, or just prior thereto, before any agitation is made for improvements or anything is suggested or accomplished.

Stressing the educational value of the exhibition the councillor instances the case of the fruit producers, who gained information of great value from the judging experts of international repute, who pointed out their mistakes, etc.

It is considered more than likely that the proposed grant of $15,000 by the city to the fair association will be considered by No. 1 committee Wednesday night.

JAPAN WILL CONTINUE TO WITHDRAW FROM SIBERIA

Tokio, Sept. 27.—Japan will proceed with her program for evacuation of the maritime provinces of Siberia, regardless of the breakdown of the Chang Chun conference, according to a statement made to the press today by Masano Hamihara, Japanese delegate to the arms conference in Washington, former vice-minister of foreign affairs.

Vener. Mrs. Jones; musical convener, Mrs. Ashman, and program convener, Mrs. Neville.

Following the meeting refreshments were served and a social half hour was enjoyed.

Plans for work for the coming year was the chief business taken up. The question of distribution of milk in the school was left over till the next meeting, and a committee, consisting of Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Tanner and Mrs. Neville, will interview the teachers on the subject and bring in a report at the October meeting.

The new officers for this season were at their posts, including the president, Mrs. C. K. Bluff; first vice-president, Mrs. H. W. Padgett; second vice-president, Mrs. Pales; secretary, Mrs. A. Kennedy; press reporter, Mrs. R. T. Govenlock; treasurer, Mrs. Williams; social con-

WEDGE IS INSERTED TO PRY OPEN DOOR

Fall Fairs Campaign Already Brings $4,000 For Children's Hospital.

Four thousand dollars has been received of the magic last $20,000 required to swing wide the doors of the War Memorial Children's Hospital to receive little patients from all Western Ontario. "And we are going to clean up the whole amount before Nov. 1," optimistically declared a member of the publicity committee directing the big campaign to bring before the people of Western Ontario the service the hospital is destined to render the child life.

The first $4,000 has been received from St. Marys, Mitchell, Seaford, Exeter and Stratford, as a result of the fall fair child welfare propaganda.

The committee has met the glad surprise of its life in the reception accorded by Western Ontario. It has been necessary to double equipment in sending out two radio outfits instead of one, and fairs which it had not been intended to cover are requesting the campaign.

Amongst these is the flourishing town of Wingham. "The Western Ontario people consider the Children's Hospital their job, as well as that of the citizens of London," a publicity committee representative told "The Advertiser" in towns where they have small hospitals of their own they tell us that is an entirely different proposition. They lack equipment to care for the children, and look to the new War Memorial Children's Hospital to do this for them. That is why only a hospital is getting such spontaneous and enthusiastic support."

DINING HALL RETURNS DROP BELOW AVERAGE

W. C. T. U. Appoints Delegates to Provincial Convention—Receives Reports.

Holding the first meeting after the exhibition, the London W. C. T. U. on Tuesday afternoon devoted a large share of the time to reports of the dining hall, appointing also delegates to the provincial convention, to be held in Oshawa, Oct. 9 to 13. Owing to the fact that all business was not completed, Mrs. Amy Patterson, treasurer, was able to submit only a partial financial statement, this showing receipts to be below the average. The lessened returns were accounted for in large measure, according to those in charge, by the decreased attendance at the exhibition, due to the bad weather or other conditions.

Mention was made by several who had assisted in the dining-room of the appreciation expressed by the public of the service directed by Mrs. E. F. Lyon and the quality of the food. Mrs. J. J. Goodman and Mrs. Sussex were the general conveners. Mesdames R. E. Gregory and H. W. Paddell were appointed delegates to the provincial convention, with Mrs. J. J. Goodman and Mrs. May R. Thornley and Mrs. Sadler will also attend. Miss Cannell gave the Bible reading in connection with the devotional exercises.

MISS ROSS IS NEW PRESIDENT

Miss Marjory Ross, librarian of the Western University, was the unanimous choice for the presidency of the Library Club at the first meeting of the season, held Monday evening in the cosy children's department of the library, thereby receiving promotion from the vice-presidency, which she held last year. Miss Dorothy Waters was made vice-president, and Miss Donna Waller, secretary. Miss K. McLaughlin, retiring president, gracefully installed the new executive. Retiring from office with her is Miss Doris Nelles, past secretary. Miss Richard Crouch, who as Miss Hazel Tanner was for a length of time the children's librarian, received a warm welcome from the club. She gave a short address, and read an amusing and interesting letter from Mrs. Urban Tignor Holmes, formerly Peggy Gemmell, written from Paris. Mr. and Mrs. Holmes are living in the same pension in Paris which Mr. and Mrs. Crouch made their headquarters last year. The meeting wound up as a farewell for Miss Winnifred Pearson, an October bride-elect.

MCCORMICK STAFF ENTERTAINED.

Last week the staff of the McCormick Manufacturing Company motored to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bowley, Mount Drydges, and held a most enjoyable corn and Weiner roast. After enjoying a bounteous feast around the blazing fire, they returned to the house, where a splendid musical program was rendered. A dainty lunch was served by the hostess assisted by her daughter, Miss Ina Bowley.

At the close of the evening a vote of thanks was given to Mr. and Mrs. Bowley, after which the party broke up with the singing of "A Jolly Good Fellow."

McLean of Detroit, whose marriage is an interesting event of Wednesday. Mrs. Cole wore a smart gown of navy blue taffeta, and Miss Dorothy a frock of blue canton crepe, embroidered in steel.

Following the business and program, the September meeting of the Library Club on Monday evening evolved into a party and shower in honor of a popular member, Miss Winnifred Pearson, whose marriage takes place in October. Just as the meeting was brought to a close a knock was heard at the entrance of the children's department, and Miss Pearson requested to act as messenger. When she opened the door a large florist's bandbox addressed to herself was put into her hands. Beneath layers of papers she discovered an exquisite bouquet of asparagus fern and vari-colored roses, cleverly fashioned from handkerchiefs. To the end of each wire stem was attached the card of the donor with amusing original verse. A dainty supper was subsequently served.

In honor of Miss Teresa Henry, of Chicago, Ill., who has been visiting relatives in London for the past two weeks, near relatives gathered at the home of Mrs. M. Mohan, 245 Pall Mall street, to bid her safe journey on her return.

BRIDE-ELECT HONORED BY CHURCH ASSOCIATES

Miss Edith Johnston Presented With Handsome Club Bag.

In honor of Miss Edith Johnston, a bride-elect of this week, a delightful social evening was held in the lecture room of the First Congregational Church Monday, arranged by the teachers of the Sunday school and the Young People's Society, of which she has been president for the past two years. Autumn foliage and flowers in profusion formed the effective decoration, creating a festive setting for the event.

Interest centered in the presentation made during the evening to the bride-elect of a handsome leather club bag, Mr. A. Anundson, superintendent of the Sunday school, reading an address, in which he made reference to the splendid work done by Miss Johnston, both as a teacher and worker in the school. Miss Marion Wrighton, first vice-president of the Y. P. S., made the presentation.

The short program included numbers by Misses Evelyn Wrighton and Phyllis Bock, and Messrs. J. McAllister, W. Hewes and Eric Bock, and several selections by the Sunday School Orchestra, under the leadership of Miss Marion Wrighton. Dainty refreshments were served, the evening winding up with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. M. L. Pettit the second Wednesday in October, when the Lyons society will furnish the program.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Champagne Bombardment.

THE next morning Lanyard lay luxuriously bedded and with a single problem to nurse.

What had her pillow advised Liane Delorme?

Liane was amply able to surprise him, and did.

It was without ceremony that she walked in on him at length.

"Well, my dear friend," she said gravely, halting by the bedside, "do you feel able to travel?"

"Travel?" Lanyard made a face of dismay. "Are you then in such haste to be rid of me, Liane?"

"Not at all."

Liane found herself a chair and accepted a cigarette.

"And where do we go, mademoiselle?"

"To Cherbourg, there to take a steamer for New York."

Fortunately it was Lanyard's cue to register shock.

"But, my dear friend, why America?"

"You gave me credit for having some little influence in this world of Paris. I have used it. What I have learned enables me to assure you that the Montalais jewels are on their way to America."

"But if I am to sail for America today?"

"Tomorrow, from Cherbourg, at eight in the morning."

"How am I to get my passport visé?"

"I have seen to that. You are no longer Paul Martin, alias Andre Duchemin, but Paul Delorme, my invalid brother, still suffering from honorable wounds sustained in the great war."

Liane Delorme threw away her cigarette and rose. "You understand, we leave as soon as you are dressed?"

"Perfectly. By what train?"

"By no train. We motor to Cherbourg."

She was at the door when Lanyard staved her with, "One moment, Liane! What about Dupont?"

Simple mention of the man was enough to make the woman wince and lose color.

"Well, and what of him?"

"Have you reflected that, since Dupont got in after you came home, his accomplice in your household is most probably one of those who were up at that hour. Who were they?"

"Only two. The footman, Leon and Marthe, my maid."

Lanyard said, "Open that door!"

in a tone sharp with such authority that Liane Delorme instinctively obeyed. The woman whom Lanyard had seen that morning coming down the stairs with the lighted candle entered rather precipitately.

"Madame," she murmured, and paused. "It was about to knock."

Marthe hinted at rather than executed a curtsy and withdrew.

Liane shut the door behind her, and approached the bed, trembling with anger.

"You mean to take her with you?"

"I did, until this happened."

"And now will you tell me that Dupont knows nothing of your intention to motor to Cherbourg today?"

"No." Disconsolate, Liane sank down into the chair. "Now I dare not go," she mused aloud. "Yet I must!"

"What am I to do?"

"Who has an idea?" Liane lifted a gaze of mute inquiry.

"What automobile are you using for our trip this afternoon?"

"My limousine for you and me."

"And Marthe: how is she to make the journey?"

"In the touring car, which follows us with our luggage."

"Who drives the limousine?"

"The woman hesitated, looked aside, bit her lip."

"As a matter of fact, monsieur," she said hastily, "it is the boy who drove us through the Cevennes. Monsieur Monk asked me to keep him pending his return to France."

"You make it all perfectly clear, little sister."

"Here is the plan. At the last moment you will decide to take Leon with you."

"Toward evening we will let the touring car catch up. We will exchange cars with Marthe and Leon, leaving the latter to bring on the limousine while Jules drives for us."

"Whatever happens then, we may feel sure the touring car will get off lightly."

It was 4 o'clock when the expedition for Cherbourg left the door of Liane's town-house. The limousine was leading with Jules at its wheel; the touring car trailing, with the footman, Leon, as driver.

In St. Germain-en-Laye, Lanyard first noticed the gray touring car. It stood inconspicuously round the corner, at the door of a wine shop; the fat-faced man of Lyons was lounging in the door, sucking at a cigarette and watching the traffic.

Lanyard said nothing at the time, but later, when a long stretch of straight road gave him the chance, verified his suspicions by looking back to see the gray car lurking not less than a mile and a half astern; the Deleorme touring car driven by Leon keeping a quarter of a mile in the rear of the limousine.

These relative positions remained approximately unchanged during most of the light hours of that long evening, despite the terrific pace which Jules set in the open country.

At about 7 they dined from the hamper which, with Liane's jewel case in its leather disguise of a simple traveling bag, constituted all the limousine's load of luggage.

Lanyard passed sandwiches through the front window to Jules, who munched them while driving like a speed maniac, and with the same down with a tumbler of champagne.

A luminous lilac twilight vied with the street lamps of Caen when the limousine rolled through the city. Lanyard conferred with Jules through the window.

"Beyond the town," he said, "you will stop. I think it would be advisable to have a little engine trouble."

"Very good, sir," said Jules without looking round. Then he added in a voice of complete confidence, "Quite so, sir. What's the idea?"

"I presume you set some value on your skin?"

"Pump crazy about it."

"Mademoiselle Delorme and I are afflicted with the same idiosyncrasy. We want to save our lives, and we don't mind saving yours at the same time. In a gray car which has been following us ever since we left St. Germain, is the man who—I believe—murdered Monsieur le Comte de Lorgnes on the Lyons express, and who—I know—tried last night to murder Mademoiselle Delorme."

"And I suppose that in his big, hearty, wholehearted way, he wouldn't mind making a bag of the lot of us tonight?"

"I'm afraid you are right. Our plan is to change cars with Leon and Marthe; the gray car will pass shift; then you, mademoiselle, and I follow in the touring car, the others in the limousine."

"Ah-h!" Jules used the tone of one who perceives enlightenment as a blinding flash. "Marthe and Leon are in on the dirty work, too, eh? I shan't shed a solitary tear if something sad happens to them in this bus tonight."

The plan was carried out in a suburb of Caen; the gray touring car tore by in a cloud of dust as Lanyard and Liane shifted to the touring car with Jules as driver.

Lanyard established himself in the tonneau.

"How long, Jules, will Leon need?"

"Five minutes, madame, if he takes his time about it."

They drew away from the limousine so quickly that in thirty seconds its headlights were all that marked its stand.

A bend in the road blotted out these lights. There was a slight light visible on the road before them; Lanyard touched Jules on the shoulder.

"Switch off your lights," he said, "all of them. Then find a place where we can turn off and wait till Leon and Marthe pass us."

Jules picked out the mouth of a narrow lane, stopped, and backed into it.

In four minutes by Lanyard's watch, a blue-white glare leapt quivering past the bend, and lay horizontal with the road as the car bored past.

"Shoot, Jules—follow his rear lamp," cried Lanyard.

The car swung out into the main highway. Far ahead the red sandstone eye in the rear of the limousine leered as if mocking their hopes of keeping in sight.

They were swooping down a long grade with a sharp turn at the bottom, when somewhere ahead there sounded a grinding crash, the noise of a stout fabric rent and crushed with the clash and clatter of shattered glass.

"Easy," Lanyard cautioned, "and ready with the lights!"

Below, at the foot of the hill, the headlights of another car, standing at some distance and to the right of the road, furnished lurid illumination to the theatre of disaster.

Something, its nature just then mysterious, had apparently caused Leon to lose control of the heavy car, so that it had skidded into a ditch and capsized. Four men were swarming round the wreck. Two were helping the driver out, two others having the gallantry in performing like service for the mangled figure of Marthe was manifestly unrewarded by a torrent of vituperative denunciation, half hysterical and wholly infuriated.

By the freedom of her gestures, which was rivaled only by that of her language, the disheveled, storming figure of Marthe was manifestly uninjured. And in another moment Leon found his foot and limped toward the others.

Lanyard drew attention to a dark serpentine line that lay like a dead snake upon the lighted surface of the road. Liane Delorme breathlessly demanded, "What is it?"

"An old trick," Lanyard explained: "A wire cable stretched across the road, about as high as the middle of the windshield."

He fondled the pistol which Jules had handed him. "Now before they wake up, Jules—give her all she's got!"

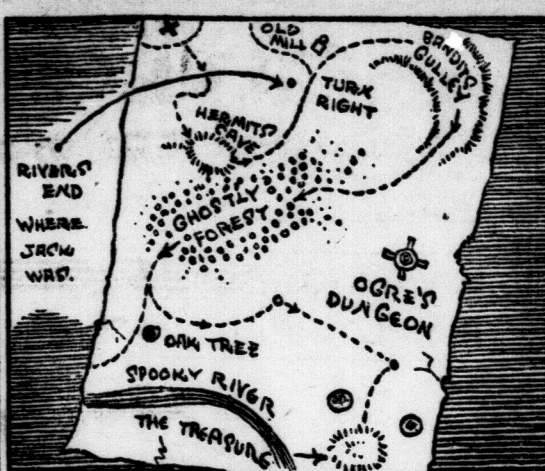

Jules released the brakes. They were making forty miles an hour when they struck the level and thundered past the group.

ABOVE IS A REPRODUCTION OF JACK'S MAP HE DID NOT KNOW WHERE HE WAS BUT SUPPOSED THE TOWN OF RIVERBEND WAS BETWEEN THE HERMIT CAVE AND THE OLD MILL.

JACK THEN ASKED A STRANGER WHERE THE TOWN OF RIVERBEND WAS SITUATED. THE MAN REPLIED THAT IT WAS ONLY A FEW MILES FROM THE OLD MILL, AND ADVISED JACK NOT TO GO THERE.

THE LITTLE ADVENTURER STARTED OFF IN THE DIRECTION OF THE OLD MILL. HE WONDERED WHY THE OLD MAN TOLD HIM TO KEEP AWAY FROM THERE. CONTINUED IN NEXT CHAPTER.

CRIME RAMPANT IN FLOWER CITY

Series of Petty Burglaries Alarm St. Thomas Citizens.

Special to London Advertiser.

ST. THOMAS, Sept. 26.—This city is at the present time in the throes of what appears to be a serious epidemic of burglaries and petty theft incidents. The matter has been keeping the police rather busy during the last few weeks; in fact they have found extreme difficulty in rounding up the offenders. A climax was reached late last night, however, when a trio of young men were actually caught in the act of robbing the grocery establishment of E. J. Withford, in Wilson avenue, by a railwayman on his way to work. The railroad telephoned the police and Constable Hawkins arrived on the scene in time to capture one of the men, but the others managed to escape.

The man who was arrested is Robert Sinclair, who claims that he had been merely looking on while the others carried out the burglary. He had been on his way to jump a west-bound freight train on the Pere Marquette, not far distant when he was nabbed. The magistrates refused to accept his story, however, and remanded him for a week pending investigation.

During the night, however, it was discovered that either the trio in question, two of whom escaped, or some other band of daring criminals, had visited several other places in the city. The establishments so far reported are H. J. McManus, Marlatt & Marlatt and Utter & Cluskey, all coal merchants. Outside of a clock and a few coppers removed from the Utter & Cluskey, a watch from McManus' establishment, and $5 worth of stamps at Marlatt & Marlatt's, the thieves got little for their night's work.

There have been other similar robberies during the past few weeks and citizens are becoming alarmed.

FACES MURDER CHARGE AT KINGSTON ASSIZES

KINGSTON, Sept. 26.—At the fall assizes, which opened here this afternoon, Fred Bryant will face trial on a charge of having murdered Constable R. A. Baird.

Kerwood and Sherwood Upton, twin brothers, who pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter last February in connection with the death of Baird will likely be sentenced at these assizes.

They also await sentence on a charge of wounding Constable Cotter about a year ago, and are now serving four years in penitentiary for robbery.

Bryant is now serving seven years in the penitentiary for his part in the shooting of Cotter, and three years for robbery, both sentences being concurrent.

DENIES AID GIVEN TURKS OR GREEKS

LONDON, Eng., Sept. 26.—Prime Minister Lloyd George today issued an official denial that Great Britain had assisted either the Greeks of the Turkish Nationalists with arms, equipment or advice.

The prime minister declared the British Government had maintained an attitude of strict impartiality between the two combatants, since the declaration of neutrality by the allied governments in March, 1921.

The premier also denied that General Townsend, the defender of Kut-el-Amara, had made his recent visit to Smyrna at the direction or connivance of the British Government.

DOG PERISHES AT SIDE OF MASTER

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Faithful to his master until death a bull pup stood by the side of John Bracken, watchman, trapped in the Long Island Waste Company's plant in Long Island City today until flames and smoke choked the master's shouts and the dog's barks for help.

They were found dead, the dog's head on his master's chest, by policemen, who came too late.

Ingersoll Woman Injured When Struck by Water Hose.

INGERSOLL, Sept. 26.—Injuries were received by Miss Langford of this town today under unusual circumstances. While two workmen of the street department were freighting a sewer they lost control of the hose and it was bounding on the sidewalk under the water pressure.

GETTING TOO FAT? TRY THIS—REDUCE

People who don't grow too fat are the fortunate exception. Radio Radiations

Learn to cook by radio! All that is needed is a radio receiving set—and the chance of being within broadcasting distance from station WLW.

This unique use for radio was suggested to the owners of station WLW by a wife of an amateur who had been receiving its concerts. One morning the report is, she picked up the receiver while her husband was off to work and tuned in.

All she heard was music reproduced from the piano and phonograph.

transmission of daily menus for the housewife radio fan.

Every morning, at 10 o'clock, housewives in the broadcasting vicinity of WLW tune in on its 360-meter wave length and listen in. To please the variety of cooks the caterer has decided on broadcasting two sets of menus for each meal. Each is planned to suit the tastes—and, especially, the pocketbooks—of those who can afford it.

Whenever a special dish is included in a menu the recipe for it is transmitted by radio. The radio fan, however, is not the only one who can obtain fresh fish, corn and a good chowder, and thereupon given below may be used, substituting two cups of fresh or canned corn for the fish.

New England Fish Chowder.

2 lbs. fish (haddock, cod, or whitefish).

2-inch cube fat salt pork.

2 medium-sized onions, sliced.

1½ teaspoons salt.

Pepper.

3 tablespoons flour.

1½ quarts boiling water.

1 pint milk.

6 crackers.

Remove bones and skin from fish, and put them into the boiling water and cook 20 minutes, strain. In the same kettle, try out the fat pork, which has been cut into dice, being careful not to brown the fat.

On this put a layer of potatoes, onions and fish. Sprinkle with half the flour, salt, and a bit of pepper. Repeat until all materials are used. Add water strained from the bones and skin. Cover, and cook until the potatoes are soft. Add milk, crackers which have been split or broken into large pieces, and when milk is hot the chowder is ready to serve.

With chowder serve crackers and pickles, or a tart, crisp salad.

Chowder reheated is quite as good as when first served.

The stores on the Majestic, the world's largest liner, include 16,000 cups, 30,000 plates, 2,400 teapots and 8,000 tumblers.

RADIO CENSOR HELPS FANS.

Radio has its censors. But they're not of the movie variety. They're rather a help than a hindrance to the radio fan. Instead of saying what shall or shall not be broadcast, this censor sees that what is broadcast goes out clear and strong enough for easy reception by the radio amateur. He listens in radio concerts and lectures and amplifies the sound and volume for broadcasting.

That didn't suit her. So she thought of the only thing that would interest her at that time of day— suggestions for some appetizing dish with which to receive her husband in the evening.

The next day the manager of the assizes. They also await sentence on a charge of wounding Constable Cotter about a year ago, and are now serving four years in penitentiary for robbery.

NEW CLOTHES FOR SCHOOL

When the regulation Peter Tom begins to pull on the spirits and all usual clothes become a snare and a delusion it is time for the modern young woman to speak to her mother seriously about new dresses. Then she finds such practical little dresses as these to lift the monotony of lessons. They are as sensible as need be and as attractive as one could desire.

Wool jersey, serge, flannel, are the materials used for them and they may be trimmed with colored wool embroidery, bright silk pipings or yokes or appliqued designs.

MUSKOKA ROCKS RE-ECHO YELLS OF WESTERN 'U'

London Students Return From Conference With Vision of Internationalism.

HEAR LABOR'S SIDE

Clever Nonsense Amuses, While Failing To Conceal Seriousness of Purpose.

"Revolution, riot, blood and gore. Down with the capitalists forevermore. One, two, three. Who are we. Bolsheviks-e-e!"

The long-drawn-out "E" was followed by an outburst of laughter, gay, youthful and far from savage or menacing. The surprised audience joined in the merriment created by a couple of hundred young people, students all, on their way home for flying visits after attending the Central Student Conference for Canada, held at Elgin House, Muskoka, during the past week.

Here a yell started for Toronto, there one for McGill. A valiant group did the honors for Queen's, and the Western University not to be daunted by any other institutions of learning, however great, made the welkin ring and the Muskoka rocks re-echo with the good old Western yell. Then all voices blended once more in the refrain, "Poisoning the Student Mind."

Several hours later a cheery group occupied the center of a railroad coach bound for London and the attention of all the other passengers, as they repeated their own yells, and those of other all-over-Canada colleges they had acquired, or gaily remixed never for a moment there was a suggestion of "the loud laugh that speaks the vacant mind."

There was nonsense, but clever nonsense, that sprang from nimble wits and trained minds. And behind the fun the onlookers sensed an earnestness and purposefulness which in time was revealed by a transition to seriousness and expression of opinion with regard to the conference.

Big Question Mark. "What was the outstanding feature, the chief characteristic of the conference?" asked the representative of the Woman's Department of The Advertiser, fortunate enough to be traveling on the same boat and train as the students and their expert leaders.

"It was a big interrogation mark," replied a clean-cut ex-service man, who is taking agriculture as a vocation, with the privilege of training in the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

"We have all come away asking ourselves questions," was the verdict of a charmingly intellectual Queen's co-ed.

"Last year," said a baritone voice, "the conference focused on solving immediate problems. In this conference, we have had our eyes turned to the future, and have been given a vision of the part the student body must play in solving international problems."

Discussion turned to the subject of leaders and speakers. Dr. Salem Bland, it was agreed, had sounded a definite challenge to the intellect and altruism of Canadian colleges to co-operate with labor in finding a solution for the problems of industrialism.

One visiting member to the conference had specially intrigued the interest of a man somewhat above medium height, slender, quick and positive of movement, his hair and pointed beard touched with gray, eyes keen, features tending to sharpness. When J. S. Woodsworth, M. L. A., left the Muskoka Wharf boat at Port Carling to change for Bala, en route to Winnipeg, he was given a heart-warming send-off. His face glowed with kindness and friendliness as he looked up from the dock and waved his hand. "Woodsworth looks very happy just now," a learned professor remarked, with a note of gratification in his voice.

The students trainward bound for London in the evening commented that this was not his habitual expression.

Served Prison Term. "You can tell from his face that he has suffered much," said one and another. "And there are times when there is bitterness in his look as well as in his tone." J. S. Woodsworth, who for years previous to the war was known throughout the West for his community service and work among the new Canadians in Winnipeg, cannot forget his prison experiences following the great Winnipeg strike, nor the taste by himself of what it meant to be down and out and at the hunger line when he served as a dock worker in Vancouver.

Informally one night at Elgin House to a group around a glowing log fire he told from his own point of view the story of the Winnipeg strike.

The presence of Woodsworth at Elgin House was due to the forum on internationalism and industry, led by J. D. Ketchum, a McGill student, one which attracted an exceptionally big enrollment.

Miss Margaret Wrong, formerly dean of women of Toronto University, who has spent the past year studying problems in war-devastated countries of Europe, led the forum on internationalism and student work. Other forums dealt with internationalism and races, internationalism and the state, and internationalism and religion (the modern missionary movement).

Of equal interest were the Bible study groups, led by men and women of outstanding prominence.

Arriving in London Monday evening were Miss Gertrude Milliken of Strathroy, who returns to Queen's University, Kingston, the end of this week; Miss Barbara Bartram, Agnes Campbell, Jean McCrimmon, Leila Currie, Eunice Moorhouse and Delmer Lewis of the Western University; Charles F. Davis of McGill, who stopped over on his way to Detroit, and Norman Laughlin and W. H. Williamson of the O. A. C., who came to the city to join a group of 100 students of the college who are visiting leading stock farms in the vicinity in connection with practical work.

BRITAIN PLEDGES

SHARE IN LOAN

Will Guarantee 20 Per Cent of Proposed Credit To Austria.

GENEVA, Sept. 26.—Great Britain today informed the council of the League of Nations that she was ready to guarantee her share of twenty per cent of the Austrian loan of $200,000,000 gold crowns. Italy's guarantee, which was dependent on Great Britain taking her share, will be immediately announced, which is regarded as assuring the success of the plan elaborated by the council committee of five. This was the most important work of the council today.

The assembly of the league held a general debate on the question of reduction of armaments. The only novelty in the debate were the suggestions of Lord Robert Cecil of Great Britain, that the air craft of the world might be turned over to the League of Nations for use in enforcing peace and a proposition advanced by Peter Munch, Denmark, that obligatory military service should be abolished throughout the world.

BRITISH REFUSE

RUSSIA PART IN

VENICE PARLEY

Declare Conference Will Continue Negotiations Leading To Treaty of Sevres.

SOVIET MAKES PROTEST

Moscow Declines To Recognize Agreement Made Unless Represented.

LONDON, England, Sept. 26.—The British reply to the demand of Russia to be included in the proposed conference at Venice will be that this conference is a continuation of the negotiations and the conference which resulted in the treaty of Sevres. It was noted in official circles today. The participants to the new conference are the powers which concluded the treaty. It was declared.

On this ground Russia is inadmissible. It is declared in foreign official quarters. In regard to the control of the straits, they will be conferred to the League of Nations, and all that will be necessary for Russia to share in their usefulness is for her to be admitted and join the League of Nations.

"The soviet government," says the note, "considers the basis of events in the Near East hinges on one question, which is recognition of the Turkish people's right to actual restoration of Turkish sovereignty over the Turkish capital of Constantinople and the straits."

"The freedom of the strait," the note continues, "is necessary primarily to the Black Sea powers, to Russia and her allied republics and to Turkey, these countries embracing the greater part of the Black Sea coast."

The note details the Russo-Turkish agreement of 1921 which declared for the international status of the straits for trading purposes.

"It is quite plain," the note declares, "that the great powers consider Turkey only as an object of negotiations between themselves, this viewpoint being clearly stated in the British communiqué of September 16, in which England looks upon France and Italy as the most interested powers next to England herself."

The Soviet categorically protests against the usurpation by Great Britain of the rights of Russia, which Turkey is the country occupying first place in interest where the freedom of the straits is concerned.

"Recognition of Russian interests was so far in 1916," the note adds, "that the allies bound themselves by a special agreement to transfer to Russia Constantinople and the straits."

The Soviet never considered that Russian interests demand the enslavement of part of the Turkish people. Therefore the Soviet nullified the old Czarist agreement."

The Soviet Government reiterates its previous declaration that Russia will not recognize any decision regarding the fate of the straits without Russia's participation.

"No decision with regard to the straits with Russia's approval will be final of binding. It will merely create ground for new conflict."

"The freedom of the straits which England has in view signifies the desire of a strong sea power to control routes vitally necessary to other countries, so as to hold them under threats. In the first place these threats are directed against Russia and Turkey. England has directed her military and naval forces to protect the straits, and she endeavors to draw into the Graeco-Turkish war, France and Italy, and also Rumania and Jugoslavia."

The note says because it considers separate efforts by the several powers to find a solution to the problem, would come to naught, the soviet government proposed immediate calling of "all interested powers and all those countries sincerely seeking peace, based on equality and full respect for the sovereignty of Turkey and all Turkish territory."

G. T. R. TRAFFIC OFFICERS

CONVENE AT OTTAWA

OTTAWA, Sept. 26.—Traffic officers of the Grand Trunk Railway System and its associated companies gathered here this morning for the first conference of its kind in the history of the system. W. D. Robb, vice-president and general manager, addressed the gathering on various phases of the passenger traffic business carried on by the railway.

BRITISH RAIL SHOPMEN

AGREE TO CUT IN WAGES

LONDON, England, Sept. 25.—(By Canadian Press Cable).—After a lengthy conference of representatives of the employees of the National Railway Union and employers in London an agreement was reached similar to that in the case of the Scottish railways, whereby the wages of the railway shopmen will be reduced 10 shillings a week on Oct. 1, and thereafter wages will be stabilized to the end of the year, and any further changes will be effected only by joint meeting of the parties concerned.

The settlement covers 75 per cent of the men employed in the railway shop works of England and Wales.

DEPicts CITY'S 'GROWING PAINS'

Chamber of Commerce Members See Educational Film on London.

Picture Outlines Essentials Necessary for Beautiful Municipality.

Depicting clearly the disastrous results of faulty town planning, the film entitled "Growing Pains" shown to more than fifty members of the Chamber of Commerce at their weekly luncheon Wednesday received the hearty indorsement of that body as a first-class educational motion picture.

The picture stressed the fact which has been reached by the local chamber for some time, that homes should be built in residential sections and factories and manufacturing concerns in industrial areas.

Large gas tanks, gasoline stations, big frame houses in residential sections of the city were some of the things depicted which the film pointed out that dwellings should not occupy more than 30 per cent of the total area of the lot, should not be more than 35 feet in height, and that apartment houses should not occupy more than 60 per cent of the lot, and should not be more than 60 feet high.

The film was procured by Gordon Philip, secretary of the C. of C., who thought that it would be of great interest to the citizens of London, as the general feeling is that the city has reached the stage of development which causes what may be described as "growing pains."

"Everyone knows that London is growing," said Mr. Philip, "and every true citizen is interested in seeing that its growth is not hampered, but rather directed along the best lines so as to avoid, as far as possible, the difficulties so many other cities are experiencing due to lack of intelligent foresight in the early stages of their development."

"That the city is already being confronted with the 'growing pains' is clearly evident when existing business and industrial districts, seeking room for necessary expansion, have in some instances invaded districts formerly regarded as strictly residential."

ACTIONS DWINDLE BEFORE ASSIZES

One Jury and Two Non-Jury Cases Remain Unsettled.

Settlements and postponements have so eliminated civil actions from the list scheduled to be heard at the fall assizes in session here this week that only one jury and two non-jury cases remain on the docket.

The jury action of Burrows vs. the Grand Trunk Railway has been postponed owing to the absence of witnesses. A. H. Burrows, of this city, alleged $1,500 damages alleged to have been caused by a train backing into his auto at Adelaide street crossing on Oct. 27, 1921. Plaintiff alleged negligence on the part of the railway in that no watchman was on duty at the time of the accident.

The suit of Charles Clark of London against the railway of Elgin, to recover $10,000 damages as the result of a collision between a county-owned motor truck and plaintiff's auto on the London and Port Stanley gravel road, has been settled out of court.

The Break With Bismarck.

WHEN I was Prince William I was placed for a long time under the chief president of the province of Brandenburg, von Achenbach. In order that I might learn about home administration, get experience in economic questions, and, moreover,
take an active part in the work.

Spurred on by the captivating discourses of Achenbach, I derived from this period of my life a special interest in the economic side of the inner development of the country,
whereas the purely judicial side of the administration interested me to a lesser degree. Improvements, canal construction, highway building, forestry, improvement of all kinds of transportation facilities, betterment of dwellings, introduction of machines into agriculture and their operative development—all of these were matters with which I busied myself later on; this being especially true of hydraulic work and the development of the network of railways, particularly in the badly neglected territory of Eastern Germany.

I discussed all these matters with the ministers of state after I had ascended the throne. In order to spur them on, I allowed them free rein in their various domains. But it turned out that this was hardly possible as long as Prince Bismarck remained in power, for he reserved for himself
the main deciding voice in everything, thereby impairing the independence of those working with him.

I soon saw that the ministers, being entirely under Bismarck's thumb, could not come out in favor of "innovations" or ideas of the "young master," of which Bismarck disapproved.

The ministry, in short, was nothing but a tool in the hands of Bismarck, acting solely in accordance with his wishes. The state of things was, in itself, natural enough, since a premier of such overwhelming importance, who had won for Prussia and Germany such great political victories, naturally dominated his ministers completely and led them despotically. Nevertheless, I found myself in a difficult position: the typical answer which my suggestions were met with was: "Prince Bismarck does not want that done; we cannot get him to consent to that."

Emperor William I. would not have asked such a thing; that is not in accordance with tradition, etc."

In reality, I had no ministry of state at my disposal; that the gentlemen composing it, from long force of habit, considered themselves officials of Prince Bismarck.

Here is an example to show the attitude of the cabinet toward me in those Bismarck days: The question came up of renewing the Socialist law, a political measure devised by Prince Bismarck for fighting socialism. A certain paragraph therein

TRAVERSE CHARGE TO NEXT ASSIZES

Judge Mowat Makes Temporary Disposition of Williams Case.

When the fall assizes resumed sitting at the courthouse here Tuesday,
J. C. Elliott, K.C., crown attorney, applied to Mr. Justice Mowat to have the case of murder preferred against Henry Jack Williams, now in Kingston Penitentiary, traversed to the next assizes.

Williams was taken into custody
at Melbourne in April, 1921, with Sydney and William Murrell, following robbery of the Home Bank, in which Russell Campbell, Melbourne
garage proprietor was shot to death.
As both the Murrell brothers escaped from the county jail one year ago,
the crown is not ready to proceed with the capital charge against Williams.

The latter was sentenced to seven years in Portsmouth Penitentiary for complicity in a robbery here by Magistrate A. H. M. Graydon and will be held until the murder charge is presented by the crown.

Judge Mowat promised to traverse the trial, which is a routine procedure.

Home Sewing Week

The one great object of the displays of home sewing necessities this week is to demonstrate the aid this store is to the home sewer. Hundreds of women each season who never did dressmaking before are making all or part of their own wardrobe, and are sewing Paris right into their garments by the use of the "Belrobe" System embodied in the new Designer patterns, which will be fully explained at the pattern counter this week.
Joining the band of home sewers may mean an extra dress during the season, besides many other simpler
garments, house dresses, novelty aprons, lingerie, etc., so simply and economically made by the use of the Designer Belrobe System.

"Everything quiet excepting the government officials."

A mass of material was collected during the spring and summer from the announcements and reports received, which showed clearly that all
was not well in industrial circles.

That many a wish of the workers was justified and, to say the least, entitled to sympathetic investigation
both on the part of the employers and the officials. The realization of this, which was confirmed in me when I questioned my former private teacher, Privy Counsellor Hitt-

borne, on particularly well-informed on social phenomena, especially those in his own province—caused the resolve to ripen in me to summon the state council, include employers and employees in its deliberations, and bring about under my personal direction, a thorough investigation of the labor question.

I decided that in so doing guiding principles and material were to be acquired which would serve the chancellor and the Prussian government
as a basis for working out appropriate projects for new laws.

Inspired by such thoughts I went to His Excellency von Bötticher, who at once prophesied opposition on the part of the chancellor to such action, and advised strongly against it. I stuck to my ideas, adding in support of them the maxim of Frederick the Great: "Je veux être un Roi des goux" (I wish to be king of the rabble). I said that it was my duty to take care of those Germans who were used up by industry, to protect their strength and better their chances of existence.

Further Conflict With Chancellor.

The predicted opposition from Prince Bismarck was not long in coming. There was much trouble and fighting before I put through what I wanted, owing to the fact that some of the big industrial interests ranged themselves on the side of the chancellor. The state council met, presided over by me. At the opening session the chancellor unexpectedly appeared. He made a speech in which he ironically criticized and disapproved the whole undertaking set in motion by me, and refused his co-operation. Thereupon he walked out of the room.

After his departure the strange scene had its effect on the assembly. The fury and ruthlessness which the great chancellor brought to the support of his own policy and against mine, based upon his absolute belief in the correctness of his own judgment, made a tremendous impression upon me and all those present. Nevertheless, it stood to reason that I was deeply hurt by what had occurred. The assemblage proceeded to take up its work again
and turned out a wealth of material for the extension of that social legislation called into being by Emperor William the Great, which is the pride of Germany, evincing, as it does, a protective attitude toward the laboring classes such as is not to be found in any other land on earth.

Thereupon I decided to summon a general social congress. Prince Bismarck opposed this also. Switzerland was contemplating something similar,

and had thought of convening a congress at Bern. Roth, the Swiss ambassador, hearing of my scheme, advised cancelling the invitation to Bern,
and accepting an invitation to Berlin.
What he wished occurred. Thanks to the generosity of Herr Roth, it was possible to convene the congress himself in Berlin. The material collected as a result of it was worked out and applied in the form of laws—only in Germany, however.

Later on I talked with Bismarck concerning his project of fighting the Socialists, in case they resorted to revolutionary acts, with cannon and bayonets. I sought to convince him that it was out of the question for me, almost immediately after William the Great had closed his eyes after a brief reign, to stain the first years of his government with the blood of my own people. Bismarck was unmoved; he declared he would assume responsibility for his actions; that all I need do was to leave the thing to him. I answered that I could not square such a course with my conscience and my responsibility before God, particularly as I knew perfectly well that conditions
among the laboring classes were bad
and must be bettered at all costs.

The conflict between the views of the emperor and the chancellor relative to the social question—i.e., the furtherance of the welfare of the laboring classes of the population, with particular attention to the state—was the real cause of the break between us,
and caused a hostility toward me, lasting for years, on the part of Bismarck and a large part of the German nation that was devoted to him, especially of the official class.

The conflict between the chancellor and me arose because of his belief that the social problem could be solved by severe measures, and, if the worst came to the worst, by means of soldiers; not by following principles of general love
for mankind or humanitarian nonsense which, he believed, he would have to adopt in conforming to my views.

Bismarck's Labor Views.

Bismarck was not a foe to the laboring classes—on that I wish to lay stress, in view of what I have previously said. On the contrary. He was far too great a statesman to mistake the importance of the labor question to the state. But he considered the whole matter from the standpoint of pure expediency for the state. The state, he believed, should care for the laborer, as much and in whatever manner it deemed proper; he would not admit of any co-operation of the workers in this agitation and rebellion, he believed,

should be severely suppressed by force of arms if necessary. Government protection on the one hand, the mailed fist
on the other—that was Bismarck's social policy.

I, however, wished to win over the soul of the German working man, and I fought zealously to attain this goal. I was filled with the conviction that a plain duty and responsibility toward my entire people—also, therefore, toward the laboring classes. What was theirs by right and justice should become theirs, I thought; moreover, I believed that this should be brought about,
wherever the will or power of the employers ceased, by the lord of the land and his government, in so far as justice or necessity demanded. As soon as I had recognized the necessity for reforms, to some of which the industrial elements would not consent, I took up the cudgels for the laboring classes, impelled by a sense of justice.

I had studied history sufficiently to guard myself against the delusion of believing in the possibility of making an entire people happy. I realized clearly that it was impossible for one human being to make a nation happy.
The truth is that the only nation which is happy is the one that is contented, or at least is willing to be contented; a willingness which implies a certain degree of realization of what is possible
—a sense of the practical, in short.
Unfortunately, there is often a lack of this.

It was well aware that in the unbounded demands of the Socialist leaders, unjustified greed would be constantly developed anew. But, for the very reason that I wished to be able to combat unjustified aspirations with a clear conscience and in a convincing way, it behooved me not to deny recognition and aid to justified aspirations.

storers because he has no head for the business.
