DEPOT 'NEVERYTHING

Expresses Willingness To Work Out Plan for Overhead Crossings and New Central Station.

BY ARTHUR CARTY.

Sir Henry Thornton, head of Canada's railways, announced in an exclusive interview with The Advertiser today, his willingness to enter into immediate negotiations with London to right London's railway

"We stand ready to enter tomorrow upon negotiations with the city of London to work out a plan for the elevation of our tracks across the city, and to creet a new union depot to adequately serve the importance and dignity of the community.

"On general principles a union depot with accommodation for the C. P. R., would be a desirable thing. and our attitude in this regard will be to deal with the C. P. R. in accordance with the manner in which they receive our proposals.

After seventeen years of procras tination and evasion on the part of the old Grand Trunk Company, Sir Henry Thornton, the new president of the Canadian National Railways, brought to the people of London to-day this momentous declaration of

A towering, rugged, whole-souled type, with the smack of the rugby idiron from his student days, Sir Henry in the narrow compartmen of his business car en route from the east to London, listened intently to The Advertiser's summary of the paramount problem that the people of London aim, through today's visit to lay before him.

Looking Over Ground.

He declared quite frankly that there a difference between reading Westminster Abbey and seeing that famous and historic old pile; that, he aid is the reason that he comes to London today to look over the ground and to get a first-hand impression of the level-crossing situation and of the lack of depot facilities. Sir Henry was told of the burden laid upon London's plans for ad-vancement by the inadequacies of a depot built seventy years ago to serve pioneer community of a few thouspeople, on a primitive wide gauge just then pressed through the virgin forests; of the old negotiations carried on by Mayor J. C. Judd and the city council of 1906, and of the agreement to elevate all tracks through from the western limits to William street; of the inclusion of plans for a new depot, in which the London and Port Stanley Railway, and possibly the C. P. R. should be accommodated, and of the blockade reached by the negotiators when the question of abuttal damages was reached. He was told how the city relinquished its stranglehold on the company by granting the right to Henry. onstruct a taper-down from the new to the old grade near Ridout street, we could get round to any of the pledged word to resume the negotiaions and to carry the major scheme through to an early completion. Then of the tedlous years of excuse-making and procrastination on the part of the and procrastination on the part of the company; first that the costly Toronto terminal improvements were under way and that it was a case of

"London has waited for seventeen years for this opportunity to get down to business," Sir Htnry was told by The Advertiser as his train sped on on the last lap of the journey into London, "Toronto has had its turn. The war is over. The government has settled the question of ownership, and you are at the helm."

Sir Henry examined The Advertiser's sketch, showing the elevation scheme as agreed upon in 1906 and read over the Judd-Drake resolution to be acted upon by the city council at its next meeting, calling upon the company to enter upon negotiations with a view to the elimination of grade crossings, and the erection of a modern station building, on the basis of the former plans, specifications and

"No matter how painstakingly one may study such a problem as that in your city," said Sir Henry, "you must see the ground to know the situation. That is the purpose of my visit to London today.

"The London situation, I believe, is similar to several others. There are pressing things awaiting action by the Nationals in London and else-where. We have got to fulfill these needs as rapidly as possible, and in the order of their importance. But I am not saying this to justify any policy of procrastination. I have not the slightest doubt from what I have heard of the situation that the Lon don proposals are desirable—in fact essential. The problem for me is to

This is shown by the annual report of di-rectors of the C. G. M. M. tabled in of the Brantfard district convention the House this afternoon. The loss on operation alone for 1922 was $2,-384.189.

The directors recommend:

(2) That the capital cost of the vessels be reduced to what may be considered present replacement value "Inquiries made in various ship-building centres indicate," the report continues under the latter heading, "that construction cost of vessels of the types which make up your fleet is now in the neighborhood of fifty dollars per dead weight ton and this value would, in our opinion, constitute a fair replacement value."

Confine Operations.

The report continues: "On account the great value to the Canadian National Railways of the operation of vessels on recognized trade routes, your directors would be much posed to withdrawing altogether from services, but desire to confine operations to vessels suitable for these services and capable of makng an economic performance.

"It would seem desirable to have further consideration given to the recommendation made in our report that interest due the government be payable for each year only if earned, after allowing for depreciation, such remission of interest to be applicable for a period of five years.

"Generally, steamship people look more optimistically upon 1923 than upon the two preceding years. ertain ports trade is quite active and the ships are doing fairly well; on other routes conditions have not improved, and it is on such routes that our losses are being sustained."

Loss Anticipated.

The board submits that the loss in operation was to have been anticipated. It was admitted by shipping authorities, says the report, that the past year was the worst in recent shipping annals. Tonnage offerings increased, but commodities were lower value and earnings fell con-siderably. Outward tonnage was well maintained, but inward business, particularly from the United Kingom, Oriental and Australian ports, fell away to such an extent that it was at times impossible to obtain re-turn cargoes. The Situation is More Definite.

The coming together of the Morrison and Drury s is having the effect of causing U. F. O. candidates fraw away from alliances with other groups. In th Wellington on Saturday the U. F. O. representatives who met at Guelph informed the Labor men that the understanding that had existed between them was at an end. This agreement had started when the last Dominion election was held. Unless we are mistaken, the basis was that Labor and the U. F. This latest move, whereby the U. F. O., after receivng Labor support in the Dominion contest, decide to ontest, may indicate a move that will be general. If ecomes such it means an end to the U. F. O.-Labor Mance in the provincial government, which has been nore in name than in reality for some time past.

The situation, while complicated, becomes in fact more simple. There are four parties, Liberal, Conings. Miner was able to catch it and place it in an servative, U. F. O. and Labor. The dropping of the broadening-out policy by Mr. Drury is taken to mean hat he accepts the idea of a U. F. O. group, separate no person who is not a farmer has any chance to play a part in the U. F. These developments should tend to consolidate the Liberal party, is entitled. There has been so much in back. ommon between the supporters of Mr. Drury and Mr. Hay that some independent thinkers were of opinion that support of Mr. Drury was giving support to ideals advocated by Mr. Hay. There are also Conservatives of an independent frame of mind who do not agree to the leadership of Hon. Howard Ferguson. They do not like his work when minister of lands; they do not care for his quibbling on the O. T. # LONDON'S RAILWAY PROBLEM IN WORD AND PICTURE

EDITORIAL

London has had its old Grand Trunk station for a long time London has had its level crossings for a long time, and it looks as though these things might continue indefinitely if a movement is not launched locally to move on to something better.

The question of elevated tracks through London has been sidestepped, and the matter has been pigeon-holed. Now the city of London is out to suggest that these old pigeon holes be either cleared out or forgotten, and the work undertaken on a new basis.

Level crossings have taken their toll in London as they have elsewhere. Between Talbot street and the Trafalgar and Hale street intersection, in the last 23 years there have been 67 accidents, in which 23 people have been killed and 66 injured. The gate system as it operates today is probably as efficient as any system of that type could be, but it belongs to a day that has gone, and it has no place in the controlling or handling of traffic in a city of this size.

No matter of what the traffie consists, whether it is urgent or bound on pleasure, it is all held up when the gates go down. It is not an uncommon thing to see lines of street cars, automobiles and delivery wagons waiting on Richmond street for a long freight train going west, then another long one going east, and finally a passenger train or a yard engine come along to finish out the work of delay. The proper place for all these trains is on a track up above the rest of the traffic, then each can go ahead and attend to its own business without delay and without danger.

It is the one next big step that London must take in the path of progress. The matter of letting placed to the charge of city councils in years past. In 1906 it looked as though negotiations had been advanced to the stage where work would be proceeded station built, and subways at the leading street intersections. But the work was not undertaken, the subways were not built, and the new station probably went many erected since that date in blaces of far less promise and claim than the city of London.

Federal Government Not To Expedition Into Mongolia Unearths Prehistoric Monster of Colossal Size.

> Special Cable to The London Advertiser and The Philadelphia Public Ledger. Pekin, May 1.-Roy Chapman Anirews of the American Museum of Natural History reports that the expedition in Mongolia under his leadership has unearthed a remarkable carnivorous dinosaur with legs nine feet long.

> The whole skeleton had lain undisturbed except for the weather for 4,000,000 years. The fossill deposit at Ehrlien is even better than was expected, Mr. An-

The legs of the carnivorous dinosaur are usually much shorter than those of herbivorous or vegetarian dinosaur, but the carnivorous found in Mongolia apparently ap-proached in size the enormous herbivorous brontosauri, some of which in American museums have had legs 10 feet in length. The brontosaurus and allied genera of dinosaus often at-tained a length from head to tip of tail of 50 to 90 feet and a weight of 20 to 40 tons.

The members of the American museum's expedition are camping at Ehrlien with only two weeks' supply. The train of 61 camels carrying food and gasoline did not meet the party on schedule. The M.-O. League starts off today, and prospects were never brighter. If some of the clubs go through with their threats of yesterday, the opening will be marred, but it will not mean the league break-up or anything like that. There may be several weak prospects on the new circuit, but certainly no weaker than some of the clubs who held berths in the old Mint, and, generally speaking, the league is much stronger both in players and vastly in drawing-population.

New York. April 30.—Popular pressure may cause Tex Rickard to shift opponents in the Milk Fund bouts set for May 12. But he will not make the change unless he has to. The definand is that Luis Firpo be substituted for Floyd Johnson as an opponent for Jess Willard. Nine out of ten men think this would be a far better fight, and certainly more of an attraction than the present arrangement. But Rickard does not wish to make the change because of his objection to having either Willard or Firpo beaten at this time. Wall Street, New York, May 1.—Many new low prices were made in the market today. Steel, common, was lower han it has been any time this year. The preferred, below 54, was off I points from its high, while the common was heavily sold under 15. That he break in the Cuban Cane was not lue to anything new in the sugar situation, was shown by the fact that other magar stocks were comparatively well ustained. Indecision, which had marked recent essions on the stock exchange, was relaced today by a more definite trend, which was downward. It was said in ommission houses, especially those where the large speculative accounts and unusual welcome, that a new conert to the bear side had been found a recent bull. New York, April 30.—The raw sugar market was unsettled early today by the sharp decline in futures, and prices were more or less nominal. Operators were said to be offering Cubas at 6%c, cost and freight, equal to 8.03c for contrifugal.

There was a sharp decline in raw sugar futures under heavy liquidation. Stop-loss orders were uncovered on the decline, which carried active positions 28 to 44 points below the close of last week, but after their execution there was a sharp rally on covering and trade buying, and prices regained 25 to 29 points of the early loss, but eased off again, and at midday were 27 to 28 points net lower.

The market for refined sugar was easier and prices unchanged to 10 points lower, with fine granulated now ranging from $10 to $10.15, but trading was light. Refined futures were nominal.

CHICAGO Chicago, April 30.—Notwithstanding a sharp, temporary upturn in the wheat inarket today, prices averaged lower, chiefly as a result of manoeuvres to avoid a compromise delivery tomorrow on May contracts. The close was unsettled, at 10 net decline to 13/4c advance, with May $1.22½ to $1.22% and July $1.22½ to $1.22½. Corn gained 1½c to 15/4c; cats finished at ½c off to ½c up, and provisions 5c to 10c down. Liquidating sales of May dominated the wheat market, except for about an hour shortly before the middle of the trading session. A temporary absence of wheat offerings then, which happened to be simultaneous with a forecast of unsettled weather northwest, and with notable development of strength in the corn market, led quickly to a rapid advance in wheat values. For the most part, however, the gains in wheat failed to hold, and sellers were in a majority throughout the late dealings, especially as to May.

Bullish estimates on the probable yield of winter wheat this season had much to do with the relative firmness of July and September deliveries. One authority put the total at 545,000,000 bushels, as compared with 586,000,000 bushels harvested last year.

With lake vessels sailing out of Chicago today and taking east one million bushels of corn, the advance in the corn market came as a natural sequence.

Oats, like wheat, were depressed by liquidating sales to prepare for May deliveries, beginning tomorrow. Chicago, April 30 .- Notwithstanding

TUESDAY'S OPENING PRICES.

Chicago, May 1.—All the wheat that was delivered on May contracts was readily taken by exporters today, and as a result the market tended upward in price during the early dealings. Unsettled weather in the spring crop belt tended also to lift values. May commanded a decided premium gain over later deliveries, although July and September were in active request from houses with eastern connections. The opening, which varied from unchanged figures to %c higher, was followed by material gains all around.

Corn and oats were firm with wheat. Corn and oats were firm with wheat. After opening 1/2c to 1/2c up the corn market hardened a little more. Oats started at a shade decline to 1/2 advance, and later showed gains for all months.

Financial Post.

In the fall of 1909 the Ontario government decided that it would not be politic to hold on longer to the Gillies Limit. Previously they had launched the proposal to mine this promising area in the interest of the people. There was to be a people's mine in the limit. To hunt out this people's mine the government officials trenched what appeared to Dr. Miller as the two most promising areas. They trenched the conglomerate area south of the Nipissing mine and the Keewatin area south of the Kerr Lake mines. In both cases silver was found, but not in sufficient quantities to make mines a certainty without the expenditure. mines a certainty without the expenditure of considerable more money. This was especially true of the Keewatin area. In the same fall the discovery of gold in Porcupine—of which the government had knowledge—led to the decision to unload as speedily as possible. Thus the limit was surveyed off into special mining claims of 20 acres each—quite a few of the claims were even nes a certainty without the expendia few of the claims were even purpose of er—and the lots were put up for quite a few of the claims were even smaller—and the lots were put up for sale by private tender. As the news about the gold strikes was not generally known, the lots on the whole sold well, the government receiving in the neighborhood of three-quarters of a faillion dollars.

Whatever may be said as to the husiness acumen of the administrators of the department of mines in this deal, nothing has handleapped the development of the Gillies Limit so much as the smallness of these lots. It is next to impossible to raise the necessary money to carry on development work at depth—and this was the geological condition of the Keewatin part of the limit—with only 20 acres as an asset.

The La Rose Mines, Ltd., has purchased the Murray property in Rouyn Township, in Northwestern Quebec. The purchase price was paid in cash. Numerous other deals are pending. Canadian Press Despatch. Toronto, May 1.-After passing hydro estimates totaling $12,687,000, the legislature adjourned about 1 o'clock this morning, to meet again at 11 o'clock this forenoon. The hydro votes were divided as follows: Niagara system, $9,850,000; Muskoka system, $360,000; Rideau system, $20,000; Thunder Bay system, $1,015,-000; Central system, $1,375,000; Nipissing system, $17,000; Essex system, rack elevation and a new depot, when the time arrives, has been a point for deep consideration in municipal circles for more than a decade.

Indications are that the best soution of the problem will be adoption of the ingenious plan developed by County Judge Judd, when, as mayor, he negotiated the agreement of 1906.

The Grand Trunk then agreed to elevate its tracks, build viaducts and overhead bridges, and to erect a depot worth "not less than $100,000." The whole work, according to estimates secured by this city at the time, would raise the company's aslessment for taxation purposes about

Such a depot would probably cost five times as much today. One plan was to build it over Clarence street crossing, but the preferred scheme is which the company expressed its willingness to acquiesce would have put it where the freight sheds stand on York street, between Waterloo and Wellington streets, and thus placed it closer to London's center of popu-

The company was willing to agree on a municipal contribution of about $300,000. The city was unprepared to make a cash grant of that amount or to issue debentures for the purpose. It was then that Mayor Judd evolved the idea of granting the company a ten-year fixed assessment, which amounted to a remission of taxes on a sufficient part of the new work to pay off the company in ten or fifteen years. The company in ten or fifteen years. The company was given no concessions on the taxes which it had hitherto paid and so the city stood to lose nothing in revenue, but to gain the improvements and all that they meant to London.

It was at this point, west of Ridout street, that the company was allowed to end its "tapering off" process. There is a "hump" here of eight feet which an overhead crossing and proper levels would remove. Why has the city-owned railway provided properly for the accommodation of its patrons everywhere but tween the Grand Trunk tracks and where the line is owned?

These are questions that often provoke a hot debate in London, but is form adjacent to the G T. R. Jepot. the London Railway Commission pol-

To get at the facts it is necessary , be found that the problem cannot be solved until action is secured through the Canadian National Railways, unless the city is to forfeit rights which the L. and P. S. has steadfastly safeguarded since April 25, 1870.

A report issued by the London Railway Commission in 1919 giving a history of the London and Port Stanley Railway from its inception in the early fifties, down through its half-century of failures under steam operation, until its redemption by electrification, tells the story.

G. T. R., and now the Canadian National) in 1870 found itself in need of a strip of land 110 feet by 500 feet, on the north side of Bathurst street Waterloo and Wellington streets. The L. and P. This requirement was fulfilled and such use was made of the land until the removal 1915, with the prospect of using it for L. and P. S. trains in the new of the Grand Trunk roundhouse .o Rectory street.

Rights to L. and P. S

In return for this privilege the L. and P. S. R. secured existing rights to the use of the Grand Trunk depot in London free of charge. The effect of this agreement following the return to municipal oper ation and electrification of the L. and P. S. R. was most important.

Richard Booth Says Even With Increased Values Plan Is Feasible.

A THREE-YEAR FIGHT

Alderman of 1906 Tells of the Negotiations Almost Successful in That Day.

Tremendous as the proposal may seem, the elimination of level crossings in this city through the elevation of the tracks of the C. N. R., is still in the realm of possibility, according to Richard Booth, 230 Wellington street, ex-alderman, who is familiar with every angle of the problem.

Mr. Booth served on the city couneil from 1906 to 1909, when London ame near to realizing her cherished dream. With other members of the council and Mayor J. C. Judd, Mr. Booth worked hard during those three years investigating and negotiating in an effort to abolish forever the deadly level crossing.

Though London, he feels sure, lost a golden opportunity at that time to secure the elevation of the tracks, he does not think the plan should be even now, with increased cost of construction, the task would prove as difficult as some people imagine. He believes the city and the railroad could very well work out an agreement similar to the one which formed the basis of negotiations in 1906.

A Three-Year Struggle. The story of the three-year strug which was so nearly crowned w success, and which was only defeat e by a difference in opinion which no seems ridiculous in its unimportane was related to The Advertiser tod by Mr. Booth.

The Grand Trunk, in the early day of 1900, he said, worked out a police for the elimination of grades. Amor those the company sought to abolis was the steep hill some distance west of this city and east of Hyo This was to be accomplished y filling in at a tremendous cost th low-lying land which stretched from near the centre of the city to the foo of the hill, and by a deep cut at the top of the incline.

Before filling in this land, and be fore they could raise the Cove bridge o a desired height, the company was forced to seek permission from the city of London. The city council immediately seized the opportunity to press for the elevation of all the company's lines within the city. To the company this meant only the filling in of the right-of-way for a tew more blocks. By doing so theycould wipe out a slight grade which, beginning at Rectory street, ran through to the city limits in west, and so the officials were not ath to carry out the request he city council

An agreement was drawn up whereby the company was bound to elevate its tracks on an embankment to a point somewhere in the west end he city, and then on steel trestles to Richmond street. From Richmond street another embankment would run to a point near Rectory street. It was proposed that every level crossing in the city would thus be abolished. Shallow subways, such as ones now in use at Wharncliffe road and Wortley road, were to be The openings at Wellington Waterloo and Colborne streets were to have been 90 feet wide.
