Small Crowd Gathered to Hear the Finance Minister at Leamington. Leamington, Oct. 18.—The country has been billed far and wide for a week past for a grand Liberal rally to hear Hon. W. S. Fielding and M. K. Cowan in the town hall this afternoon.

There have been party runners through the vicinity endeavoring to drum up a crowd. The result was a gathering of 250 people, half of whom are not entitled to a vote.

Mr. Fielding's speech consisted of a rehearsal of his former addresses of the Conservative candidate, and criticism of Mr. Wigle's business affairs.

Mr. Wigle's speech consisted of a rehearsal of his former addresses of the Liberal candidate on their arrival in town must have been very discouraging. They were met by 11 stalwarts, one of whom was imported from Chatham.

The Face Behind the Mask.

A ROMANCE.

Still no one ascended the golden and crimson throne, though many of the ladies and gentlemen fluttering about it were arrayed as royally as any common king or queen need wish to be. They promenade up and down, arm in arm; they seated themselves in the carved and gilded chairs; they gathered in little groups to talk and laugh, did everything, in short, but ascend the throne: and the solitary spectator up above began to grow intensely curious to know who it was for. Their conversation he could plainly hear, and to say that it amazed him, would be to use a feeble expression, altogether inadequate to his feelings. Not that it was the remarks they made that gave him such a shock, but the names by which they addressed each other. He answered to the aspiring companion of the Duke of Northumberland; another was the Earl of Leicester; another the Duke of Devonshire; another the Earl of Cambridge; another the Duke of Buckingham; and so on, ad infinitum, dukes and earls alternately, like bricks and mortar in the wall, of a house. There were other dignitaries besides, some that Sir Norman had a faint recollection of hearing were dead for some years—Caroline Wolsey, Sir Thomas More, the Earl of Bothwell, King Henry Darnley, Sir Walter Raleigh, the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Southampton, the Duke of York, and no end of others with equal pomp and circumstance. As for mere lords and baronets, and such small beer, there was nothing so plebeian present, and they were evidently looked upon by the distinguished assembly, like small beer in a thundershower, with pity and contempt. The ladies, too, were all duchesses, marchionesses, countesses, and looked fit for princesses. Sir Norman thought, though he had heard none of them styled quite so high as that, the tone of conversation was light and easy, but at the same time extremely ceremonious and courtly, and all seemed to be enjoying themselves in the most delightful sort of a way, which people of such distinguished rank with pity and contempt. All went merrily as a marriage bell, and sweetly over the gay jingle of voices rose the sweet, faint strains of the unspoken music.

Suddenly all was changed. The great door of glass and gilding opposite the throne was flung wide, and a grand usher in a grand court livery flourished a mighty grand wand, and shouted in a stentorian voice: "Back, back, ye lieges, and make way for Her Majesty, Queen Miranda!" Instantly the unspoken band thundered forth the national anthem. The splendid throng fell back on either side in profoundest silence and expectation. The grand usher mysteriously disappeared and in his place there stalked forward a score of soldiers, with clanking swords and fierce mustaches, in the gorgeous uniform of the king's body-guard. These showy warriors arranged themselves silently on either side of the crimson throne, and were followed by half a dozen dazling personages, the foremost crowned with mitre, and armed with crozier, and robed in the ecclesiastical glory of an archbishop, but the face underneath, to the deep surprise and scandal of Sir Norman, was that of the fastest young rogue of Charles' court, after him came another pompous dignitary, in such unnumbered magnificence that the unseen looker-on set him down for a prime minister, or a lord high chancellor, at the very least. The somewhat gaudy looking gentleman who stepped after the pious prelate and peer wore the stars and garters of foreign courts, and were evidently ambassadors extraordinary to that of her midnight majesty. After them came a showy flock of fair young girls, angels all but the wings, slender as sylphs, and robed in purest white. Each bore on her arm a basket of flowers, roses and rose buds of every tint, from snowy white to darkest crimson, and as they floated in they scattered them as they went. And then after all came another vision, "the last, the brightest, the best!" the midnight Queen herself. One other figure followed her, and as they entered, a shout arose from the whole assemblage. "Long live queen Miranda!" And bowing gracefully and easily to the right and left, the queen with a queenly step, trod the long crimson carpet and mounted the regal throne. From the first moment of his looking down, Sir Norman had been staring with all eyes in his head, under going on, shock of surprise after another with the equanimity of a man quite used to it; but now a cry arose to his lips, and died there in voiceless consternation. For he recognized the queen—the very one whom he had seen her before, and her face was the face of Leoline! As she mounted the stairs she stood there for a moment proud and accepted, before sitting down, and in that moment he recognized the whole scene. That gorgeous room and its gorgeous inmates; that regal throne and its regal owner, all became palpable as the sun at noon-day; that slender, exquisite figure, robed in royal purple and crimson, and uncrowned neck and arms, snowy and perfect, ablaze with jewels; that lovely face, like snow, like marble in its whiteness and calm, with the great, dark, earnest eyes looking out, and the waving wealth of hair falling around it. It was the very scene, and roban, and vision, that La Mague had shown him in the calendar, and that face was the face of Leoline, and the earl's page.

"Could he be witch, and he was sane or mad, or were the three really one?"

While he looked the beautiful queen bowed low, and amid the profoundest and most respectful silence took her seat. On her robes of purple, wearing the glittering crown, scepter in hand, crowned and canopied, royally beautiful she looked indeed, and a most vivid contrast to the gentleman near her, seated very much in the same manner on the lower throne. The contrast was not of dress—for his outward man was resplendent to look at; but in figure or face, in grace or dignity, he was a very mean specimen of the lords and courtiers in attendance.

A dozen or more courtiers immediately stepped forward, and kneeling before the queen, announced their names and ranks, which were both ambitiously high. A few silver-toned questions were put by that royal lady, and satisfactorily answered, and then the archbishop, armed with a huge tome, administered a severe and searching oath, which the candidates took with a great deal of sang froid, and were then permitted to kiss the hand of the queen—a privilege worthy any amount of swearing—and retire.

Let any one who has any reports to make, make them immediately, again commanded her majesty.

A number of gentlemen of high rank presented themselves at this summons and began relating, as at a certain set-purpose the duplicate of Leoline styled, "our brother Charles," and of the sums thereby obtained. The treasurer of state was then ordered to show himself, and give an account of the said moneys, which he promptly did, and for him came a number of petitioners, praying for one thing and another, some of which the queen promised to grant, and some she didn't. These little affairs of state being over, Miranda turned to the little gentleman beside her, with the observation: "I believe, your highness, it is on this night the Earl of Gloucester is to be tried on the charge of high treason—is it not?"

His highness frowned a respectful assent.

"Then let him be brought before us," said the queen. "Go, guards, and fetch him."

"I suffered terribly with pains in my head and back, and from female weakness. I have tried a great many remedies without success. Dr. Coderre's Red Pills alone have cured me of my troubles. I do not think that there is a better or a cheaper remedy."

Mrs. P. A. Gillett, 200 Chestnut Street, Manchester, N. H., writes: "I was sick for a long time and could not get cured by the Doctors. I was so run down and nervous that I was the most miserable woman on earth. I had headaches and great pains in the region of the heart. I am glad to give you a testimonial about Dr. Coderre's Red Pills, believing that others will get cured."

Mrs. Carleton, 100 Henry Street, Grand Rapids, Mich., writes: "I was greatly benefited by a few boxes of Dr. Coderre's Red Pills for Pale and Weak Women. I suffered for years with irregularities in the worst way. I am now so well since I took these Pills that I think it my duty to recommend them to all women who suffer as I have."

"CHAPTER IX.

In one instant Sir Norman was on his feet and his hand on his sword. In the tarry darkness neither the figure of the intruder could be made out, but he merely saw a darker shadow behind him standing in the sea of darkness. Perhaps he might have thought it a ghost, but that the hand which grasped his shoulder was unmistakably of flesh, and blood, and muscle, and the breathing of its owner was distinctly audible by his side.

"Who are you?" demanded Sir Norman, drawing out his sword, and wrenching himself free from his unseen companion.

"Ah! it is you, is it? I thought so," said a not unknown voice. "I have been calling you until I am hoarse, and at last started after you in despair. What are you doing here?"

"You, Ormiston!" exclaimed Sir Norman, in the last degree astonished. "How—when—what are you doing here?"

"What are you doing here? That's more to the purpose. Down flat on your face with your head stuck through that hole. What is below there, any mind?" said Sir Norman, hastily, who, for some reason quite unaccountable to himself, did not wish Ormiston to see. "There's nothing but vaults—do you intend telling me what brought you here?"

"Certainly, the very fleetest horse I could find in the city."

"Pshaw! you don't say so?" exclaimed Sir Norman, reproachingly. "I presume you've got some object in talking such a gallop? May I ask what? Your anxious solicitude on my account, very likely?"

"Not precisely. But, I say, Kingsley, what light is that shining through there?"

"No you won't," said Sir Norman, rapidly and homely replacing the flag. "It's nothing, I tell you, but a number of will-o'-wisps having a ball. Finally, and for the last time, Mr. Ormiston, will you have the goodness to tell me what has sent you here?"

"Come out to the air, then. I have no fancy for talking in this place; it smells like a tomb."

"There is nothing wrong, I hope?" inquired Sir Norman, following his friend, and threading his way gingerly through the piles of rubbish in the profound darkness.

"Nothing wrong, but everything extremely right. Confound this place! would be easier walking on live eels than through these winding and lumbered passages. Thank the fates, we are through them at last! for there is the daylight, or rather the nightlight, and we have escaped without any bones broken."

They had reached the mouldering and crumbling doorway, shown by a square of lighter darkness, and exchanged the damp, chill atmosphere of the vaults for the stagnant, stinky open air. Sir Norman, with a notion in his head that his dwarfish highness might have placed sentinels around his royal residence, endeavored to pierce the gloom in search of them. That he could detect none he thought of as a great disappointment. The better part of valor, and a speed to into the road.

"Now, tell me, where are you going?" inquired Ormiston, following him.

"I don't wish to tell you; there is no telling who may be listening," cried Sir Norman.

Ormiston glanced back at the gloomy run-up coming up like a black specter in the blue haze.

"Well, they may have a strong fancy for eavesdropping. I must say, who would go to that haunted leap to listen. What have you seen there, and where have you left your horse?"

"I told you before," said Sir Norman, rather impatiently, "that I have seen nothing—at least, nothing you would care about, and my horse is waiting me at the Golden Crown."

"Very well; we have no time to lose, so get there as fast as you can. To be Continued."

UNHAPPY WOMEN

Are those who are always sick and ill-humored. Do they fully realize that their ill humor, which we know is caused by sickness, is often the reason why their husbands stay away from home at night? The men are not entirely to blame. They are discouraged and disheartened by such exhibitions of temper from their invalid wives. Thousands of men to-day have had happy homes since their wives began taking Dr. Coderre's Red Pills. These pills cure all forms of women's diseases. No matter how serious the case may be, they cure. Ask your neighbor about Dr. Coderre's Red Pills. Surely someone around you has been cured or benefited by their use. If not, write to the following ladies who have had the experience and know their merit. Do not doubt any statement we make about Dr. Coderre's Red Pills. They are not to be compared with cure-alls or old-fashioned liquid remedies sold for women. Here are living testimonials of their merits. Write and ask if they are not all that is claimed for them.

Mrs. Holmes, 277 Antoine Street, Detroit, Mich., writes: "I suffered terribly with pains in my head and back, and from female weakness. I have tried a great many remedies without success. Dr. Coderre's Red Pills alone have cured me of my troubles. I do not think that there is a better or a cheaper remedy."

Mrs. P. A. Gillett, 200 Chestnut Street, Manchester, N. H., writes: "I was sick for a long time and could not get cured by the Doctors. I suffered for years with irregularities in the worst way. I am now so well since I took these Pills that I think it my duty to recommend them to all women who suffer as I have."

Dr. Coderre's Red Pills cure women's troubles just as sure as there is a sun. They are not a cure-all. They are made for women's diseases only. All women, young or old, can be cured by them. Married women can take them under any conditions. They are intended for no improper purpose. Women who have been sick for years should write to our French specialists on women's diseases. Send a full description of the case, and receive by return mail, the best medical advice absolutely free, or, if possible, call at our office. This is a chance you cannot afford to miss. Send us your name and address and we will mail you free, our Doctor's book, Pale and Weak Women. Dr. Coderre's Red Pills are not a purgative. Women suffering from constipation should take Dr. Coderre's Purgative Tablets, together with the Red Pills. The Tablets cost only 25 cents. Follow directions accompanying each, and wonderful results are guaranteed.

Dr. Coderre's Red Pills are sold by all first-class druggists at 50c. a box or six boxes for $2.50. We mail them all over the world upon receipt of price. Beware of all red pills sold by the doctor, the hundred pills, or at 25c. a box, for they are not ours; they are imitations. In the interest of your health do not be imposed upon.

BURG'S GREAT NIGHT

Thousands Greet Sir Wilfrid.

IN POINT OF ATTENDANCE THE RALLY WAS A GREAT SUCCESS—SOME OF THOSE WHO WERE THERE—THE SPEECHES.

The Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of the Dominion, visited Wallaceburg yesterday and, speaking generally, the demonstration in his honor was a success. Wallaceburg is nothing if not hospitable, as the stranger who has ever chanced within her gates has long ago learned, and the welcome to Laurier well upheld the reputation of the town.

THE CHATHAM CONTINGENT.—The Chatham contingent left for Wallaceburg at 8:20. A very large crowd assembled at the C. P. R. station, but only about 200 boarded the Lake Erie express.

SIR WILFRID'S ADDRESS.—The Premier, on being introduced, was presented with a bouquet of red roses by a little Wallaceburg maid, which he received in the right place. It was an accident that had taken Bothwell from the Liberals.

THE PRIVATE CAR.—The Premier arrived from the north. Torches had been provided and torch-bearers secured and a parade was formed, marshalled by Major Coogan of Chatham, and Col. Marjory of Tilbury.

flow meeting was held in the town hall, both of which meetings were addressed by the Hon. Wilfrid Laurier. On the platform were: Madame Laurier, Mrs. D. A. Gordon, Mrs. George Stephens, Mrs. T. B. Dundas, Mrs. J. H. Fraser, Miss Ruby Gordon and Mrs. McCree, Father Lusselle, Big Point; Dr. Wiley, T. N. Mills, P. H. McEwen, Rev. T. H. Morris, Dr. Galbraith, Rev. Dr. Cook, Edward Camden, Vanessa St. Cartier, Simon Thibodeau, Squire McDougall, Wallaceburg; Chas. Coates, Dawn; N. H. Stephens, D. J. O'Keeffe, W. A. Thrasher, Chatham; E. Dutton, James Dundas, Ingersoll; R. A. Gregory, Windsor; M. J. McCarron, Lincoln and Niagara; P. H. Harriet and Timothy Raile, Chatham township; Thomas Sturges, Camden; Jno. Howatt, Thameville; H. D. Smith, Ridgeway; James Langstaff, Chatham township; Dr. Fleming, Chatham; Jas. Coyle, Moore township; I. B. Walsh, Wallaceburg; James Skinner, Dawn.

T. B. Dundas, president of the Wallaceburg Liberal Association, presided at the meeting. After a short speech introducing the visitors, he asked the Rev. Mr. Eidy, of Chatham township, to take seats on the platform, if they were present.

Mr. Gordon, candidate for Bothwell, was the next to address the gathering. He said that this was the first time he had had the pleasure of addressing the people of Wallaceburg. He desired to tender his heartfelt thanks for the honor conferred.

THE PREMIER.—The Premier, on being introduced, was presented with a bouquet of red roses by a little Wallaceburg maid, which he received in the right place. It was an accident that had taken Bothwell from the Liberals.

their eyes were always turned towards heaven, and the Premier was not surprised that at such times the Conservatives should think it was providence. The prosperity of Canada, said the leader of the government, was largely due to providence, for providence had been kind under the Liberal regime, but not nearly so kind under the Conservatives. It might be only fair to conclude, after all, that providence did love the Grits and the Grit government. Since providence treats us so kindly, the Conservatives who are so religious should follow such a good example. On the other hand, it is said that "Providence loves those whom she chastises." In that case, since she loves the Conservatives and since therefore the Liberals have providence on their side, it would only be fair for the latter to join hands with providence and make the abandonment of Toryism more felt. While the Premier admitted that providence had been kind the truth of the axiom "help thyself and God will help thee" should not escape them. He said that he might fairly claim that if the country was prosperous it was due in some measure to the Liberal administration. They had promised to reform the tariff and had reformed it and had given preferential trade with England.

The Premier devoted some time to criticizing Conservative loyalty and asking what would have happened had he done what Sir Charles Tupper had done in opposing preferential trade. The Liberals had adopted preferential trade, first in the case of Great Britain and the motherland, and Canadians owed her a deep debt of gratitude. In the second place it was done because it was good business to do it. Tariff reform was in the air when the Liberals came to power, but this work had been found very difficult. Nothing was so difficult to reform as a protective tariff. A large number of factories were fostered under it in which large sums were invested and the Liberals could not run the risk of putting them out of existence. The Government knew that trade invited trade, so a market was sought in England by giving that country a preferential tariff and the policy had proved eminently successful.

The Liberals were Free Traders and they desired to go as fast as they could towards this end, but with caution. Sir Wilfrid Laurier devoted the balance of his time to discussing campaign sheet No. 6. In concluding he said that it was his pride and glory that he was of French blood and, whilst he did not deny it, still he had always preached that as his French forefathers had sought British citizenship, it was the duty of all French-Canadians to follow in their footsteps.
E. F. Fardoe, M. P. P. for Lambton, occupied about half an hour defending the Liberal policy and arraigning Sir Chas. Tupper.
The Hon. David Mills was the last speaker. He dealt with the manufacture of binder twine in the penitentiary at Kingston.
The meeting closed with the usual cheers for the Queen and the Government.
The overflow meeting in the town hall was addressed by the same speakers as addressed the meeting in the rink, and a splendid supper in the town hall and netted a tidy sum.

AT THE THEATRE.

Manager Cairns has secured Mr. Carl A. Haswin, America's representative actor, who will present at the Grand on Monday evening next his latest melodramatic success, "A Lion's Heart," a play which has had the phenomenal run of over one thousand times in London alone. This is the most elaborate melodramatic scenic production on the road this season. It takes two large cars to transport the scenery and properties. There are twenty-five acting people in the company. No expense has been spared, and the production in every way is equal to that given at the Princess Theatre, London. The costumes are rich and magnificent and historically correct. "A Lion's Heart" is intensely interesting and tells a story that is new to the stage. It is a dignified and finished performance, free from all far-fetched fun-funisms so common in the ordinary melodrama; its humor being perfectly natural to the situation.
At the Grand next Wednesday, the 21th inst., will be offered the successful farce "Hello Bill," presented by a company of unusual excellence. Perhaps the title is a misnomer, for "Hello Bill" is absolutely legitimate.
