POETRY.

As You Will.

Do not wish for kindness? be kind;
Do not ask for truth? be true;
What you give for yourself, you find;
Your world is a reflex of you.

For life is a mirror. You smile,
And a smile is your sure return;
Bear hate in your heart, and awhile
All your world with hatred will burn.

Set love against love. Every day
Shall, armed as a foe, recoil;
You shall gather your fruit from the seed
That you cast yourself in the soil.

Like answers to like. No power
Can free from the force of the law
That fashions the perfect flower
From the definite germ. No law
In the mould will disappear
In the finished cast, to your shame;
Each kindling of anger or fear
Will wrap your best deed with its flame.

Each act is a separate link
In the chain of your veal or your woe;
Can you offer another to drink,
The taste of your druggs you shall know.

Look without. What you see, doubt it not
You will see, you will feel in another;
Be your charity stainless of blot,
And how loving the heart of your brother!

SELECT STORY.

Pretty Miss Smith.
BY FLORENCE WARDEN.

CHAPTER XX.—Continued.

We found Mr Marshall waiting at the table which had been brought in for the purpose. He looked up with rather a smile, as we entered, and seemed to ask us with his eyes, before he spoke, what fresh trouble we had brought for his consideration.

"Well," he looked from one to the other.

understand him. Since this painful discovery about Mary, he had seemed, in spite of his acknowledged guilt, to have assumed a new manliness and responsibility. Had he, I asked myself, engaged himself to a sham marriage, and could only seek to palliate his offence by secretly wooing with one hand what he did openly with the other?

It was a terrible suspicion to entertain of the man I loved, and I shuddered as these doubts would flash into my mind. I was starting out into the darkness, listening to Tom's retreating footsteps and watching for Mary's return, when I perceived on the left, close to the edge of the lawn, a figure which I took for hers. It lingered, however, instead of coming to the house.

"Mary!" I cried. And then, as she did not come, I stepped down upon the path and called again.

Instead of answering, the woman glided away quickly behind the evergreens, and I recognised with a shiver that it was not Mary at all, but Dora Seton.

CHAPTER XXI.

For the first moment I was as if paralyzed with horror; the next I slid out of my hiding place and crept with leaden feet across the room. I did not scream, however, as was my wont, groping my way in the direction of the bed where Mary lay, I put out my hands before me in the darkness, expecting to catch the intruder; but I touched nothing until I came in contact with the bed itself. At that moment I heard the door close softly.

"Mary!" I cried. And then, as she did not come, I stepped down upon the path and called again.

CHAPTER XXII.

"Mary, don't look at me like that, for Heaven's sake, don't!" I cried hoarsely. "What is that in your hand? Is it chloroform? Did they try to suffocate you?"

"They! They! You don't know who did it, I suppose! No, of course not."

And with another high-pitched, maniacal laugh, she threw the cloth she held up in the air. As it fell, it filled the air with the same heavy, sticky perfume I had already noticed.

"Indeed I don't, Oh, Mary, do you? Weren't you asleep?"

"Unfortunately so."

"Who was it? Indeed, indeed I don't know anything about it."

"She turned upon us with sudden sternness.

"What were you doing in my room then?"

Great heaven! Did she suspect me! Her great blue eyes seemed to blaze and flash luridly as she bent her head forward to peer into my face with those unconvulsed suspicion.

I stammered and fell back in my horror.

"Mary, is it you? Are you your self?" I whispered huskily, as soon as I could speak clearly. "Do you need to be told that I love you like my own sister, and that I would do nothing but good to you?"

"But how about this? I felt it on my face standing up. And I know whose hand put it there."

Again she fixed her eyes upon me with such an unmistakable implication of guilt that I broke down. After all my anxiety, all my solitude; it was too much. I burst into hysterical sobbing as I fell upon the little cot-spring covered sofa. In a few moments I felt a gentle hand on my shoulder, and then Mary's two arms, as lovingly as ever, put round my neck.

"Don't cry, Georgia, my dear," she whispered softly; "I was mad, you are right; that stuff got into my head and poisoned me. But look up, see I am quite myself again."

I did look up, and I saw that her face was drawn and pale, with the shadow cast by a great horror still upon it, but with the fiercest anxiety gone. It was Mary, my own, poor haunted Mary again.

"Tell me, Mary, what did you fancy? Who did you think it was? I whispered.

But another look of wild horror swept over her face. She shuddered and almost shook me.

"Don't ask me, don't ask me, don't ask me," she rattled out hoarsely. "It was a nightmare, a hideous fancy, that was all."

I was afraid—though of what I scarcely knew.

Someone was moving about very softly in the darkness; for Mary's night-light was not burning, as usual, by her bedside. Then I heard, as I held my breath, a hand stealthily drawing back the bed-clothes.

"Don't ask me, don't ask me, don't ask me," she rattled out hoarsely. "It was a nightmare, a hideous fancy, that was all."

I got up, and crossing the room, took up the cloth from the bed. It was a thick towel, which had been folded and saturated with chloroform.

"We must talk about it. Didn't you hear the door handle turned?"

"No," answered Mary.

I felt sick at heart. I could no longer have any doubt that, in her first frenzy of fright, she had fancied it was my hand that put the cloth over her face. Of course there was no reasoning possible on such a subject; it was a mere wild fancy, entirely excusable in a girl who had found treachery among her dearest friends; cold reason had already banished it to the four winds, I could not doubt. Still it left a most unpleasant impression behind, and raised a cloud between us across which we looked at each other with dimmed eyes.

I insisted on passing the rest of the night upon the sofa. I had a very defined thought in my mind. The would-be criminal would certainly not return the crime to be discovered, and would therefore in all probability return before morning to find out whether the victim was dead, and to remove the implicating cloth. But the morning broke, and still no one came. Mary had fallen asleep, and I myself was at last doing, when my ears, more on the alert than usual, again caught a sound outside the door. I leaped up half asleep as I was, rushed to the door, threw it open and confronted not my supposed murderer, but—Mr Marshall.

He staggered back in evident consternation at my onslaught.

"George! You! Why, why, what's the matter?" stammered he.

"Oh, Mr Marshall," I cried, "I didn't know it was you. We have had a most dreadful night."

"Dreadful night! Why, what has been the matter?"

"Somebody has tried to suffocate Mary with chloroform."

"What?"

"It is true, indeed it is. A towel, saturated with the stuff, was thrown over her face. Oh! I went on with an expression of disgust, "I seem to smell it still. Why," I exclaimed suddenly, struck with the knowledge that this was more than fancy. "It is on your clothes too—that smell! Did the woman get into your room also?"

Mr Marshall started, and looked at me inquiringly.

"Someone did," he answered in a troubled voice. "I distinctly heard footsteps by my bedside. But then I lost consciousness, and I don't know what happened. I slept heavily and woke up with a headache, and supposed I must have suffered from night-mare. But the fancy that somebody had been in my room was so strong that I was compelled to come and see if Mary was all right. It must have been only a fancy though, for my door was locked."

"That is nothing," said I, "so was Mary's. Oh, Mr Marshall," I went on with decision, "there must be no more of this. You must take Mary away at once—no delay, at all risks. Even with her day and most devoted friends about her we cannot protect her properly, you see. This house, with the nooks and hiding places in the distillery, is not safe for her. We don't want to call the police."

"No, that wouldn't do. You are right; we must take her away as early in the day as we can. We don't want to have a scene with Hilary first."

"No," cried I, struck with a new idea. "Of course he would want her to stay, because if she goes away she forfeits the money."

"Only if she leaves away," corrected Mr Marshall, "a visit for her health's sake to the seaside, for instance, would not count against her."

"Mr Marshall, I burst out suddenly, after a minute's reflection. "Do you know I think more strongly that Mary had better see Hilary before she goes."

"Do you? Why?"

"I am more and more inclined to believe that he is not half so guilty as we imagine."

"But the woman—"

Love and Marriage in Japan.

Stm EDWIN ARNOLD, who has been enjoying an interesting trip through the United States, has made a careful study of the conditions which govern the family in Japan and embodies his ideas in a paper called "Love and Marriage in Japan" in the February number of the Cosmopolitan. The article is illustrated by the quaintest possible Japanese sketches running down the sides and across the bottom of each page. An excellent photograph of W. D. HOWELLS, serves as a frontispiece, and his work as a writer of fiction is reviewed in the same number by H. W. BOYSSON.

The President of John Hopkins University, gives a most practical paper for parents on "Boys and Boys' Schools," illustrated by cartoons of the famous Artwood. MURAT HARTREAD turns back lovingly to his early farm days, and tells of the "Pots and Spouts of a Farming Boy." The petreoline industry fully illustrated; An Afghan Story by ARCHIBALD FOLKES; The Story of the Brazilian Republic by ARDRE, late Minister to the country; and The Leading Amateurs of the United States in photography, are other leading articles of the month.

"August Flower"

Perhaps you do not believe these statements concerning Green's August Flower. Well, we can't make you. We can't force conviction upon your head or medicine into your throat. We don't want to. The money is yours, and until you are willing to believe, and spend the one for the relief of the other, they will stay so. John H. Foster, 1122 Brown Street, Philadelphia, says: "My wife is a little Scotch woman, thirty years of age and of a naturally delicate disposition. For five or six years past she has been suffering from Dyspepsia. She became so bad at last that she could not sit on every meal, down to a meal but as soon as she had eaten it, two bottles of your August Flower cured her, after many doctors failed. She can now eat anything, and enjoy it; and as for Dyspepsia, she does not know that she ever had it."

THE ACADIAN

WOLFFVILLE, N.S., FEB. 19, 1902. Local and Provincial.

Yesterday was a declaration day. The Local Legislature of Nova Scotia met for despatch of business on Thursday, March 21.

The day has lengthened over an hour since the 21st of December, the shortest day in the month of the day long days.

Mr. John E. Palmer has our thanks for a bundle of American papers. Mr. P. is now living at Milton, Mass.—Mr. J. T. Dutton also has our thanks for San Francisco papers.

The nearest man of the year is the one who went out into the back yard the other day, turned the hydrant on his head, let his hair freeze, and the broke it off rather than pay a barber for a hair cut.

Mr. Edward Turner, of New Minas, was driving from C. and on Saturday was hit by a horse and his leg was caught between the bars of the gate and dragged him some distance—being hit by near the ankle.

Ball game played off quite quiet, in Wolfville. We were sorry to see some of our old players but were glad to see that it was not common.

An interesting hockey match was played in the rink last Friday evening, between the Wolfville and the Halifax teams. Sharp playing was done on both sides and the game was won by the H. C. A's, the score being 4 to 1 in their favor.

Mr. Lewis, Agent and Lecturer of the Wolfville Division, will (D. V.) speak as follows: Sunday, February 24th, 25th, 26th, 27th, 28th, 29th, 30th, 31st.

Miss Mabel Ellis intends to leave Wolfville in April for Boston where she will take a course of instruction in the Conservatory of Music.

Charles A. Road, of Upper Canada, died last night, on the 14th. Mr. Road was a widower and two little children to whom an irreparable loss. His illness was very great, but he bore all with a brave heart, and a patient spirit.

Local and Provincial.

There is to be a hockey match in the rink next Tuesday evening between the Wolfville "Boomers" and the Hantsport club.

Admiral Sir W. Provo Wallis died in England on Saturday at the advanced age of 101 years. He was a native of Halifax.

Mr. R. W. Short, who has been visiting in Boston and other American cities for some time back, returned last week—in time for the election.

Barrister Kington, Capt. Dexter, at Blaine from New York, has been sold in England, subject to inspection for £2,400. She was built at Cornwallis in 1877.

The British Columbia will be well and largely represented at the Chicago World Fair. A special cable says that a space of 200,000 square feet has been allotted to the British Empire.

The Herald says it is on the best authority that the Bishop of Nova Scotia will sail on March 15th from Geneva or Naples to New York, and will reach home by Easter or perhaps by the 1st of May.

The Bank of England is comparatively an insignificant looking and gloomy building, seen from the outside, but it is a perfect hive of industry in its interior.

Mineral's Lament is the Hair Restorer. To-night in the Wolfville rink there is to be a return race between D. E. Woodman and Edward MacKintosh.

A GREAT TRIUMPH FOR CANADIAN MEDICAL SCIENCE. PARTICULARS OF ONE OF THE MOST REMARKABLE CURES ON RECORD DESCRIBED BY THE DETROIT NEWS—A STORY WORTH A CAREFUL PERUSAL.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 30th, 1892.—A case has just come to light here, the particulars of which are published in the Evening News, which will be read with considerable interest by all Canadians, as it records the remarkable achievement of a Canadian medical discovery, which has already, in its own country, won great and enduring fame.

The following paragraph, which appeared in the News a short time ago, furnished the basis of this information—a case that was so wonderfully remarkable that it demanded further explanation. It is of sufficient importance to the News' readers to report it to them fully. It was so important then that it attracted considerable attention at the time. The following is the paragraph in question:—

"C. B. Northrop, for 23 years one of the best known merchants on Woodward avenue, who was supposed to be dying last spring of locomotor ataxia, or creeping paralysis, has secured a new lease of life and returned to work at his store. The disease has always been supposed to be incurable, but Mr Northrop's condition is greatly improved, and it looks now as if the grave would be cheated of its prey."

Since that time Mr Northrop has steadily improved, not only in looks, but in condition, till he has regained his old-time strength. It had been hinted to the writer of this article, who was acquainted with Mr Northrop, that this miraculous change had been wrought by a very simple remedy called Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. When asked about it Mr Northrop fully verified the statement, and not only so, but he had taken pains to inform any one who was suffering in a similar manner when he heard of any such case. Mr Northrop was enthusiastic at the result in his own case of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It was a remedy that he had heard of after he had tried every thing he could hope to give him relief. He had been in the care of the best physicians who did all they could to alleviate this terrible malady, but without any avail. He had given up hope, when a friend in Lockport, N. Y., wrote him of the case of a person there who had been cured in similar circumstances by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

The person cured at Lockport had obtained this information respecting Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from an article published in the Hamilton, Ont., Times. The case was called "The Hamilton Miracle" and told the story of a man in that city who, after almost incredible suffering, was pronounced by the most eminent physicians to be incurable and permanently disabled. He had spent hundreds of dollars in all sorts of treatment and appliances, only to be told in the end that there was no hope for him, and that care was impossible. The person alluded to (Mr. John Marshall, of 25 Little William St., Hamilton, Ont.), was a member of the Royal Templars of Temperance, and after having been pronounced permanently disabled and incurable by the physicians was paid the $1,000 disability insurance provided by the order for its members in such cases, for years Mr Marshall had been utterly helpless, and was barely to drag himself around his house with the aid of crutches. His agonies were almost unbearable and life was a burden to him, when at last relief came. Some months after he had been paid the disability claim he heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and was induced to try them. The result was miraculous; almost from the outset an improvement was noticed, and in a few months the man whom medical experts had said was incurable, was going about the city healthier and stronger than before. Mr Marshall was so well known in Hamilton that all the city newspapers wrote up his wonderful recovery in detail, and it was thus as before stated, that Mr Northrop came into possession of the information that led to his equally marvelous recovery. One could scarcely conceive a case more hopeless than that of Mr Northrop. His injury came about in this way: One day nearly four years ago, he stumbled and fell the complete length of a steep flight of stairs which were at the rear of his store. His head and spine were severely injured. He was picked up and taken to his home. Creeping paralysis very soon developed itself, and in spite of the most strenuous efforts of friends and physicians the terrible affliction fastened itself upon him. For nearly two years he was perfectly helpless. He could do nothing to support his strength in the least effort. He had to be wheeled about in an invalid's chair. He was weak, pale and fast sinking when his timely information came that veritably snatched his life from the jaws of death. Those who at that time saw a feeble old man wheeled into his store by the man now, so great is the change that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have wrought. When Mr Northrop learned of the remedy which had cured Mr Marshall in Hamilton, and the person in Lockport, he procured a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through Messrs Basset & L'Honnemier, 95 Woodward Avenue, and from the outset found an improvement. He faithfully adhered to the use of the remedy until low he is completely restored. Mr Northrop declares there can be no doubt as to Pink Pills being the cause of his restoration to health, as all other remedies and medical treatment left him in a position rapidly growing from bad to worse, until at last it was declared there was no hope for him and he was pronounced incurable. He was in a terrible condition when he began to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they have restored him to health.

Mr Northrop was asked what was claimed for this wonderful remedy, and replied that he understood the proprietors claim it to be a blood builder and nerve restorer; supplying in a condensed form all the elements necessary to enrich the blood, restore shattered nerves and drive out disease. It is claimed by the proprietors that Pink Pills will cure paralysis, rheumatism, sciatica, palpitation of the heart, and all diseases peculiar to females, loss of appetite, dizziness, sleeplessness, loss of memory, and all diseases arising from overwork, mental worry, loss of vital force, etc.

"I want to say," said Mr Northrop, "that I don't have much faith in patent medicines, but I cannot say too much in praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The proprietors, however, claim that they are not a patent medicine in the sense in which that term is used, but a highly scientific preparation, the result of years of careful study and experiment on the part of the proprietors, and the pills were successfully used in private practice for years before being placed for general sale. Mr Northrop declares that he is a living example that there is nothing to equal these pills as a cure for nerve diseases. On inquiry the writer found that the pills were manufactured by Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brookville, Ont., and Morrison, N. Y., and the pills are sold in boxes, (never in bulk by the hundred) at 50 cents a box, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., at either above addresses. The price at which these pills are sold makes a course of treatment with them comparatively inexpensive as compared with other remedies, or medical treatment. This case is one of the most remarkable on record and is in a right here in Detroit and it is a thousand miles away it can be easily verified. Mr Northrop is very well known to the people of Detroit, and he says he is only too glad to testify to the marvelous good wrought in his case. He says he considers it his duty to help all who are similarly afflicted by any word he can say in behalf of the wonderful efficacy of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. If any of the News readers want any further information, we feel sure Mr Northrop would willingly oblige them, as he has the writer in relating the facts to him.

Takes 1000 people to buy Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, at 50 cents a bottle, to make up $500. One failure to cure would take the profit from 4000 sales. Its makers profess to cure "cold in the head," and even chronic catarrh, and if they fail they pay $500 for their over-confidence.

Not in newspaper words but in hard cash! Think of what confidence it takes to put that in the papers—and mean it. Its makers believe in the remedy. Isn't it worth a trial? Isn't any trial preferable to catarrh?

After all the mild agencies are the best. Perhaps they work more slowly, but they work surely. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are an active agency but quite mild. They're sugar-coated, easy to take, never shock nor derange the system and half their power is the mild way in which their work is done. Smallest, cheapest, easiest to take. One a dose. Twenty-five cents a vial. Of all druggists.

Learn to entwine with your prayers the little wants of daily life. Whatever affects you—be it a changed look, an unkind word, a wrong, a wound, a demand you cannot meet, a sorrow you cannot disclose—turn it into prayer and send it up to God. Discourage you may not make to man, you can make to the Lord. Men may be too little for your great matters, God is not too great for your small ones. Only give yourself to prayer, whatever be the occasion that calls for it.
