Ward's Life of Wiseman.

(From the Sacred Heart Review)

Mr. Charles A. L. Morse contributes to the April Catholic World an interesting and intelligent review, brief though it is, of Wilfrid Ward's recently published "Life and Times of Cardinal Wiseman." In the account which that work gives us of his attitude towards the Oxford movement from its very inception, Cardinal Wiseman, as Mr. Morse points out, shows in a different light from that in which he has been represented by certain other writers who have attempted to delineate his character. Although at the time that the Tractarian movement began Wiseman was resident at Rome, he followed its progress closely, and he was one of the very first to recognize the sincerity of the leaders in that new Anglican departure, and to cherish the hope, which was at least partially realized, that the outcome of the movement would be a Roman procedure on the part of many of its participants. Nor did Wiseman limit his sympathies with the Tractarians to mere observations of their course and good wishes for the best results therefrom. A close student himself of the Tractarian literature, his keen scholarship showed to him where lay the chief obstacles in the path of those Anglicans who were groping for clearer light; and Mr. Morse tells us that it was an article which Wiseman contributed, in July, 1839, to the Dublin Review on St. Augustine and the Donatists that aroused in Newman his earliest doubts concerning the Anglican church; doubts which were not dispelled until the light of Catholic truth illuminated Newman's mind. Furthermore, as this writer also asserts, during all those critical years when Newman and Ward, St. John and Dalgairns and a host of other Anglicans were slowly finding their way out of the darkness of religious uncertainty and doubt into the brightness of Catholic faith and teachings, Wiseman's attitude towards the Tractarians in general and those leaders of the movement in particular was admirable from whatever point of view it be regarded, and can not be praised too highly by his biographers. Mr. Morse credits Wiseman's Roman training and his long residence in the Papal city with no small share of the consummate skill which the Cardinal displayed in his treatment of the Tractarians, for that training and residence, he remarks, had endowed him with that most distinguishing trait of Rome's spirit, a large and broad tolerance.

England's Anti-Catholic Excitement.

To the Catholics of this country, who, within the past few years, have had a somewhat similar experience of their own, the anti-Catholic excitement which ran through England like wildfire when it was announced from Rome that Wiseman had been created a cardinal, and the Catholic hierarchy had been restored, has a peculiar interest. When that excitement was at its height the Cardinal, says Mr. Morse, arrived in London from Rome, and, realising at once the exact situation, his command of it was superb. He quickly perceived that, apart from the blatant utterances of the professional agitators, the storm of anti-prejudice then sweeping through the country was largely due to popular misapprehension of that famous papal which, before he quitted Rome, he addressed to the English Catholics "from out of the Plinian Gate of Rome," and which, our reviewer asserts, was composed in the somewhat bouncing style into which his author not infrequently lapsed in writing, and contained certain expressions, easily enough understood rightly by Catholics, but liable to be misunderstood by Protestants. No sooner was he convinced of the fact that his pastoral had, in a measure more or less large, caused the anti-Catholic crusade, than the Cardinal took steps to counteract its influence. Within a week after his arrival in London he issued his "Appeal to the English People," which, written with that admirable tact and skill whereof he was absolute master whenever he chose to be, at once allayed the popular tumult and made John Bull, to use Wendell Phillips's phrase, listen. Once he had gained a hearing, Wiseman made the best use of his opportunity. By spoken and written word, he encouraged the Catholics and appealed to his Protestant fellow citizens; and before long, thanks to his wisdom, England's anti-Catholic madness passed away, without leaving behind it any worse result than showing to what folly religious bigotry and prejudice, if yielded to, can carry an otherwise intelligent people.

Boston's Catholic Life.

To Catholics resident in this city and to their brethren in the faith throughout the whole country, in all sections of which this Hub of the Universe is regarded with special interest, the paper which A. A. McGINLEY has in this issue of the Catholic World on "The Catholic Life of Boston" is certain to prove entertaining reading. While by no means as full and comprehensive a description of its subject as it might be, this account of Boston's Catholic life touches upon some of the peculiarities of the city's Catholic history, and mentions, in a fitting manner, a few of the triumphs which our faith has achieved here, without overlooking the obstacles it had to conquer. "Catholic influence in Boston," says the article, after briefly describing the uncongenial surroundings of the early Church here, "has worked its way silently, but surely. Against the unchristianizing influence of its Emersons and its Parkers, the unwearying spirit of Catholic faith has kept on its way, no less unyielding and uncompromising before the fine philosophy of intellects that influenced whole systems of belief by a single sentence, than it was in the days when enmity to it was open and violent. Its only argument has been to live and prosper and be known by its fruits." The story of our Catholic progress, this paper says, is too long to be told in a magazine article; so the descriptions are confined to certain one of our Catholic institutions and churches. Prominent among our churches is placed the Immaculate Conception, whose exquisite interior, it is said, symbolizes, as far as wood and stone and form and coloring can do it, the homage which the Church renders the Mother of God in the transcending glory of her Immaculate Conception; and the Mission Church of the Redeemerist Fathers, of whose congregation it is declared that the faith of the people has singularly retained that quality of loyalty and devotion to Church and priest which was so strong a characteristic of their forefathers in the earlier generations. Brief mention is also made of the Carmelite monastery; and the work of the diocesan clergy is not overlooked. The Review takes a pardonable pride in the fact that the "group of pioneers" which forms one of the illustrations of this article on Boston's Catholic life shows, in its four portraits, the very reverend president of its corporation, one of its vice-presidents and two of its incorporators; which circumstance is tantamount to a declaration that the Review is itself no small part of the Catholic life of Boston.

A Married Rebeke.

Rev. George McDermot, C. S. P., who has a paper in this magazine on "The Hugenotes," tells the reader that this article was called forth by an extraordinary document dealing with the Hugenotes in France that lately appeared in a New York paper over the signature of a rear-admiral of the United States navy. That document, Father McDermot adds, professes to be a statement put forward by the Hugenote Society of America to influence public opinion in view of a Hugenote gathering that is being held at New York this month; and its character may be judged from the Paulist's declaration that he read it with amazement; "not because anything written in the interests of men of Hugenote descent should surprise me, but because the writer abused his position as an officer of the government to insult more than twelve millions of American Catholics. If a similar document," he continues, "appeared over the name of a British officer, I have no doubt whatever but that the writer would be compelled to retire by the good feeling of the navy and the sentiment of the nation, or at least that he should make an ample apology for the outrage." This rear-admiral's offence, grievous as it is, however, seems small compared to the continuous insult which that other government official, Captain Pratt of the Carlisle Indian school, almost weekly inflicts upon the American Catholic body by the outrageous calumnies upon their Church and its clergy which he prints in the paper that is published at the institution of which he is the head. We believe that this military zealot was mildly called to order some time ago for his scandalous actions; but the regiment, if any was then administered, appears to have had no effect; and it is certainly high time that individuals like him and this rear-admiral should be told, in unmistakable words, that if they wish to insult the twelve millions of Catholic citizens in this country publicly, they must quit the United States service in order to do so. Father McDermot has done well in directing public attention to the scandalous conduct of a rear-admiral, the untruthfulness of whose statements and the designing nature of whose appeals he exposes; and so very justly holds the American Hugenote Society, under whose auspices the naval officers' document appears, responsible for its publication. The Paulist's article contains such valuable information regarding the French Hugenotes, and in view of the gathering that is being held at New York this month, and which the praises of those individuals will undoubtedly be loudly sung and widely published by the daily press, his paper is a timely one and well worth a perusal.

Bibles in Stone.

One of the leading features of the April number of the New England Magazine is a handsomely illustrated paper on the above subject from the pen of Barr Ferres, who describes the character and significance of the beautifully sculptured fronts that adorn so many of the principal churches of France. It was during the twelfth and the following centuries, according to this writer, that the practice of ornamenting the porches and fronts of churches with sculptures illustrating Biblical events was most generally followed in France. He is not altogether correct when speaking of those centuries, he says that "the people of those bygone days had nothing but the Church, its history, its saints, its legends, its buildings and their adornment, to occupy their minds." Doubtless they paid more attention, in those ages of faith, when Protestantism was as yet unborn, to such things; but the people of the twelfth and thirteenth century had many other things to think of than the Church and its history. They had their daily duties to attend to, their different works to perform; their several callings to pursue; and they were in their way employed very much in the same pursuits as we of today are. Our writer is not astray, however, when he says that the Church, in those earlier centuries, provided not alone for the spiritual but also for the temporal needs of the people, who looked to it, consequently, for both; and who found in the sculptured ornamentations of their churches the truths and lessons of the Church, together with accounts of important events in Biblical history, set forth in a manner that instructed the mind while it charmed and delighted the gaze. It is rather a sorry reflection upon the modern traveller that this writer makes when he says that, so little acquainted is the average tourist with the significance of these sculptured sculptures that he needs a guide-book to tell him what they represent.

by the reigning Pontiff. Eleven vacancies therefore exist, the possible number being seventy, a number which is hardly ever attained. It is believed in ecclesiastical circles that another consistory for the nomination chiefly of Cardinals resident in Rome will be held before long.

The cause of beatification of Christopher Columbus has been resumed, the certificate of his marriage with Peletrita Monis having been discovered. The process was suspended whilst a search was being made for this.

The formal beatification of the holy Dominican Pope Innocent V., who has always been looked upon in his own order as a saint, and often popularly styled blessed, is now asked for, and in order to ensure the success of this petition a solemn exposition of the Blessed Sacrament has taken place in all the churches of the Dominican Order. Innocent V., better known as the learned Peter of Tarentais, in his short reign of five months succeeded in recalling the long-standing feuds of the Guelphs and Ghibellines of Tuscany, and left behind him a name most dear and venerable and a reputation for marvellous virtue and holiness.

About a year ago the Rev. Father Maszel, a French missionary in China, was massacred. The French Legation took steps to obtain reparation, and M. Hanotaux, Minister of Foreign Affairs, writes to the press that the murderers have been punished and that an indemnity of 15,000 taels (about $21,000) will be paid by China. This sum will be divided between the Society of Foreign Missions, to which the victim belonged, and the personal relatives of Father Maszel.

The Norwich and Norfolk Protestant defense Brigade have been greatly disturbed by the conversion to the Catholic Church of the Rev. James Spurgeon Green, who has been vicar of Brundall and Wilton, in Norfolk, for forty-four years. They have just been striving to stir up "a thoroughly Protestant feeling" in the district.

Rev. W. Evans, late of Cardiff, has been received into the Catholic Church in Rome, where it is his intention to remain for the next two or three months.

A very deserving object has lately been strenuously collected for all over France and in connection with which the French Catholic press have appealed—that is the relief of the Armenians. This is a most worthy object, many of the poor sufferers in Armenia—Catholics, as ourselves, have never recovered from the terrible shocks of the last series of massacres in 1896. Many of the men, full-bodied men in the prime of life, are entirely unable to work, owing to the horrible tortures to which they have been subjected, and the Turks are past masters in the art of cruelty. Besides, their possessions are confiscated, their homes destroyed, their wives and children have been murdered. If-Univers, good paper as it is, has opened a subscription list for them and has already gotten nearly 20,000 francs.

Progress of the War.

FROM the time of our last writing up to Sunday last, there was very little authentic war news of importance.

There were reports of the capture of some Spanish merchantmen by United States war ships, and other more or less contradictory reports; but the situation at Havana was, and is practically unchanged.

On Sunday morning, however, a naval battle, apparently a very hot and sanguinary one, was fought between the Spanish and United States ships off Manila, in the Philippine Islands.

Admiral, or Commodore Dewey, commands the United States Asiatic Squadron. His fleet had been at Hong Kong, which place he left for Manila, arriving on Saturday night, and under cover of the darkness, had got within two miles of the city.

His fighting ships were nine in number, large and small. His flagship, the Olympia, is one of the best cruisers afloat.

Besides this one there were four cruisers in his fleet, the others are gun boats. To oppose these formidable ships the Spaniards had six cruisers and four gunboats, all very much inferior to those of the enemy, both in size and equipment.

When Sunday morning dawned, the United States ships were in sight, and battle commenced almost immediately. There appears to have been two engagements, so far as can be learned from the reports, and in both the Americans seem to have been the aggressors.

The Spaniards seem to have lost heavily; one cruiser was badly damaged, a gunboat was set fire to and destroyed, another is said to have been sunk to avoid falling into the hands of the enemy.

A commander of one of the cruisers was killed, and some four hundred lives are said to have been lost. Although no particulars are given of the loss sustained by the Americans, it is reported in a general way that their ships suffered severely and were obliged to retreat out of reach of the forts.

It is evident from the reports to hand that it was quite a victory for the Americans; although it is acknowledged the Spaniards fought bravely against great odds.

THEY HAVE BEEN IN POWER, ARE AS FOLLOWS:

Table with 2 columns: Year, Amount. Rows for 1891, 1892, 1893, 1894, 1895, 1896, 1897, 1898.

While they were rolling up these deficits, they were also extracting large amounts from the pockets of the people in the shape of taxes.

If we add to this the 293,395.80 of deficits, as above shown, we have in deficits and taxes the enormous sum of $481,351.21 and still our Grit friends will tell the people our finances are in a "healthy condition."

Seasonal Notes.

THE Legislative session, after the manner of the Alexandrine, "drags its slow length along."

On Monday some private bills were advanced a stage. Among them was one introduced by Mr. Lefurgy, to incorporate the Summerside Waterworks and Sewerage Company, Limited.

Before the House met on Tuesday afternoon, a delegation, who said they represented the "temperance people of Charlottetown," waited upon the members of the Legislature by appointment.

The delegation embraced several Protestant ministers, and the spokesman was Rev. Mr. Campbell, Methodist. Delegations of this kind, desirous of expressing, and impressing upon members of the Legislature, their views on anti-temperance legislation seem to be getting very fashionable.

The spokesman of the delegation read a memorial embodying the views of himself and fellow delegates relative to the proposed liquor regulation bill, submitted to the Legislature by the Premier.

The Premier Warburton expressed regret that the Catholics of the city, who were two-fifths of the population, were not represented on the delegation.

When the House met on Tuesday, Hon. Mr. Gordon presented a petition of Wm. B. Douglas, Nathan D. Douglas and others praying that the will of their father, the late William Douglas, be allowed to stand and not interfered with by legislation.

Our Grit friends in power in this Province are certainly record breakers in the act of deficit producing, as the following statement will show. Their deficits, for the seven years ton submitted the statement.

Mr. Birch asked the Leader of the Government if there is now a Prosecutor under the Scott Act for West Prince, if so his name, if he draws a salary, and what are his duties, and what instructions he has received from the Government.

Hon. Mr. Warburton said Peter Broderick was the inspector and that he draws a salary. He hoped that Scott Act affairs in Alberton would be in a better condition in a short time as the inspector had instructions to do his duty.

Hon. Mr. Warburton said the Commissioner of Public Works if he had received a petition from Michael Ellsworth and others of Elmsdale praying for compensation for land taken by the Well's Road and if so what action he is taking in the matter.

Hon. Mr. McLean said the petition would be brought up in the House and an answer given. Mr. Shaw asked the Leader of the Government to table a statement showing how item of $787.70 as shown in the Public Accounts 1897 and charged to expenses in Term Georgetown, Supreme Court, is made up, the amount paid to each person, the services rendered by each person, and the names of the persons receiving payment respectively.

Hon. Mr. Warburton promised the information asked for. During the afternoon session the bill proposed by Mr. Jas. E. McInnis, incorporating the Ecclesiastical Society of St. Bernard of the diocese of Charlottetown, was reported from committee, ordered to be read a third time and passed.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Warburton the following resolution was passed through committee, and a bill founded thereon, introduced and read a first time: That it is advisable to introduce a bill having for its object the regulation of the sale of intoxicating liquors in the city of Charlottetown, and so to preserve therein public decency and repress drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

The proceedings of Thursday were largely of a routine character. Some very important questions were put to the Ministers, among them the following: Mr. Shaw asked the Commissioner of Public Works to table a statement showing in detail how the item of $1,250 as appears in the Public Accounts for 1897 and charged to the item of $1,883.94, as shown in the Public Accounts 1897 and charged to Roads Queen's Prince and King's Counties and Inquisitions on new roads is made up, the names of the persons to whom payments were made, the amount paid to each person, the nature of the work done, and the name of the road or locality and County respectively in which said work was done.

Hon. Mr. McLean tabled the statement. Mr. Shaw asked the C. P. Nature makes the cures after all. Now and then she gets into a tight place and needs helping out.

Things get started in the wrong direction. Something is needed to check disease and start the system in the right direction toward health.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with hypophosphites can do just this. It strengthens the nerves, feeds furnished tissues, and makes rich blood.

SCOTT & BOWNE, 108 N. BROAD ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Blinded.

When they were young he said to her: "Your face is fair," and she replied: "And yours is like the April dawn."

Another time he softly spoke: "Your face is fair." He did not know.

That on her sisterly little head there was a hint of coming snow. And as she heard the welcome words and raised her eyes to look at him, how could she dream that she was fair?

"And yours is like the dawn," again she said to him quite unaware of deepening lines upon his cheeks.

When they were old they replied: "God's grace has kept you fair," he cried.

"The dawn is shining in your face," she answered him. So young they died.

—Ave Maria.

The Cardinal's Funeral. (Toronto Catholic Register.)

The remains of the late Cardinal Taschereau were on Monday afternoon, April 18th, translated from the Palace to the Basilica, amid every manifestation of reverence that religious and civil ceremony could impart.

All business along the streets in the line of march was suspended and the stores closed. Mourning drapery was displayed on every hand.

The procession started at three o'clock, the coffin being conveyed on a hearse drawn by six horses.

His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons recited the sacred office, and the following archbishops, bishops and clergy assisted in the ceremony: Archbishop Bégin, Quebec; Langens, Winnipeg; Dubamel, Ottawa; Rev. Frank Ryan (representing the Archbishop of Toronto); O'Brien, Halifax; Bruchon, Montreal; Bishops McDonald, Charlottetown; Dowling, Hamilton; Emond, Valleyfield; Larocque, Sherbrooke; Moreau, St. Hyacinthe; Decelles, St. Hyacinthe; Labrecque, Chicoutimi; Blais, Rimouski; Gravel, Nicolet; Lafloche, Three Rivers; Harries, Providence, B. L.; O'Connor, Peterborough; Sweeney, St. John's; Vicar-General Boutin, Ottawa; Chalouar, Sherbrooke; Racicot, Montreal; Mgr. Farnell, Belleville; Vicar-General Gauthier, Brockville; Vicar-General Kelly, Kingston; Rev. John Hogan, Napanee; Rev. P. Lamerche, Toronto; Rev. G. Cicolar, Brantville, and others.

The caquet outside was covered with black cloth, caught up by tassels in graceful folds. The crucifix upon the top and the plate were of brass. The simple inscription on the plate had the date and place of birth and death of the Cardinal Archbishop of Quebec.

Besides the French national societies, the representatives of the C. M. B. A., the A. O. E., the C. E. L., the C. O. F., St. Patrick's Court, the St. Patrick's Literary Institute, the St. Patrick's Total Abstinence Society, St. Patrick's branch of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, the Irish National Association, marched in procession with flags draped, and the St. George's Society was represented by Mr. Evans, president and other members. The Seminary students were headed by their band, and the students of the brotherhood also took part in the cortege. The fire brigade's detachment had its wagons draped heavily. The Governor-General was represented by Major Denison, A. D. G., and Sir Wilfrid Laurier by Hon. Chas. Fitzpatrick. Lieut. Governor Jette was accompanied by Major Sheppard, A. D. Q. The members of the bar were headed by Sheriff Gagnon, in official robes; the Consular body by Messrs. Schwab and Fochette, in Consular uniform, and the City Council by Mayor Hon. S. N. Poirer, Hon. O. A. P. Pelletier represented the Dominion Senate, and Speaker Tessier, preceded by Sergeant-at-Arms Larocque, headed the members of the Legislative Assembly. The professors of Laval University wore their official robes, as did Sir L. N. Cassault and the judges.

It was a solemn sight as the long procession traversed the draped streets, the clergy reciting aloud the Litany and the bells of the city tolling. Arrived at the Basilica the office was closed by Cardinal Gibbons, assisted by Fathers Rankin and Rosebach. The caquet was placed on a catafalque in the sanctuary to await the final ceremonies.

It was a most impressive and solemn service that was performed in the Basilica on the 19th, over the remains of the late Cardinal Taschereau. The sacred edifice was crowded, though the admission was only by ticket. The same bishops who took part in the translation ceremony yesterday were in attendance, and the vast church was unable to hold all the priests present, many of whom had to stand in the body of the church.

Cardinal Gibbons sat upon the throne specially erected for him, immediately behind the reliquary of the deceased. Major Denison, representing the Governor-General, Lieut. Governor Jette, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Senator Scott, Hon. R. R. Dobbell and Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick of the Federal Government. Bishop Dunn of the Anglican diocese of Quebec was represented by his son and chaplain, Rev. D. E. A. Dunn. The consular members of the Dominion Government, the press and learned professions, the Mayor and City Council, and the military staff were all provided with reserved seats. Mass was celebrated by Mgr. Bégin and Cardinal Gibbons sang the Libera. Cardinal Gibbons presided at the first absolution, Archbishop O'Brien at the second, Archbishop Dubamel at the third, Archbishop Langens at the fourth, and Archbishop Bruchon at the fifth. The funeral oration was delivered by Mgr. Labrecque, Bishop of Chicoutimi, who took his text, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." His Lordship first drew a comparison between the death of mourning that surrounded him and that which he recalled in the same church was a few years ago sacred eloquence echoed the universal joy at the glory bestowed upon a prince of the Church. From his throne the august old man, his forehead enfolded with the gladden of the Pontiff, and his hands filled with favors, scattered the overflowing treasures of his tenderness upon the grateful throngs of people kneeling at his feet. To-day, instead of the throne, it is a bier, which we see draped before our eyes. The purple is changed into funeral violet. Instead of prince of the Church, our glance, penetrating the mysterious folds of the winding sheet, search in vain the face where the goodness, holiness, majesty and grace had depicted themselves in the same light. They see only, alas! cold remains, flesh without life, a body marked with the irrefragable seal of death. The fatal angel has passed upon the Oubon of Quebec. He has struck it in his chief, in its venerable pastor, and this ruler of one diocese paying the common tribute, has been placed at rest, to sleep like so many others upon the bed of eternal rest. The preacher proceeded in glowing language to pay a eloquent tribute to the works and virtues of the deceased, and made the following reference to the late Cardinal: "A citizen, and to the part taken by him in the matter of religious education: We mourn not only a great Christian, not only a great Bishop, but also a great citizen, faithful until death in his province and to his country. Cardinal Taschereau, walking in the footsteps of his predecessors, professed for Canada a religious love. He loved it; he was proud of it; he had faith in its future and in the destinies that Divine Providence seemed to have specially marked for it on this part of the American continent. Judging, and with reason, of the greatness of a people, not by dominion of number, but by the extent of their efforts, intelligence, energy, but by its religious, civilizing influence, he believed that French Canada was called to form a select force, a moderating power, a beneficent abode of religion and spirituality destined to counterbalance the object materialism into which other people are plunged. With what regrets, too, did he see the rising tide of Canadian emigration reaching each year to other shores and depositing there in other lands the richest of our work. What zeal did he not show to develop the soil of the inhabited lands of this province in founding new parishes, new dioceses, and in favoring by all his power the vital cause of civilization. Placed high above political parties, keeping in the ministerial areas, he sought above all the triumph of the great social principles on which rest essentially the happiness of nations. Taking the special conditions of race and religion suited to mixed communities, and without pretending to exact what it is impossible to obtain, except in countries exclusively Catholic, he desired nevertheless that a religious inspiration should animate our legislation, protecting and safeguarding all our rights, and that the spirit of justice and general equity should preside over the government of this country. So history, in exalting his prudence, will be not less eulogistic for his righteousness and firmness, associating his name to that of the venerable Archbishop of St. Boniface, lately descended into the tomb. It will also recall with gratitude his courageous accents in favor of religious education. It will say that one of his last acts was that noble reversion made with all his colleagues in the name of what is most holy, of the rights of Catholicism trampled under foot by a narrow and blind fanaticism, and this act of courage inspired by the purest patriotism increased force in the simultaneous expression of a loyalty which never betrays itself, and holds ever in horror all dangerous or pernicious political transformations. He concluded by a flattering reference to Mgr. Bégin, saying that the Cardinal had left him as a second Moses, to be the prudent and enlightened guide of his people, even as the old Saint Moses seeing his end approaching brought down from Heaven a last benediction on his cherished people and confided them full of hope to the hands of another like himself, Judas Maccabees, his son.

The following objects were placed in the tomb of His Eminence: Certificate of baptism, 17th February, 1820; certificate of the tonsure, 30th May, 1837; certificate of minor orders, 14th December, 1839; certificate of sub-deacon, 20th September, 1841; certificate of deacon, 17th March, 1844; and certificate of priest on the 10th September, 1843; Archbishop of Montreal, 24th December, 1870; certificate of episcopal consecration, 19th March, 1871; cardinalate bull, 15th March, 1866; mandement on his elevation to the archbishop, March 19, 1874; mandement in favor of the Church of St. Anne de Beaupre, 12th May, 1872; mandement in favor of the Hospital of the Sacre Coeur de Jesus, 1st December, 1872; biographical notes of His Eminence in Latin strophes on parchment; four medals representing respectively Pius IX., who appointed him archbishop; Leo XIII., who elevated him to cardinal, and Mgr. Laval, first Archbishop of Quebec; also His Eminence himself. The last medal represents His Eminence on his elevation as a prince of the Church.

A Blind Archbishop.

The Kolnische Volkzeitung calls attention to the career of a Catholic prelate who ought to be better known to Irish and English Catholics than he seems to be: Robert Vauchon, known as Dr. Scelus, Archbishop of Armagh, and Papal Nuncio. In 1539, on the falling away of George Cromer, he was appointed in his place by Pope Paul III. to the See of Armagh. The interesting point about Vauchon is that, at least in his later years, he was blind, so that in 1543 the Pope called him a man remarkable not only for his learning and purity of life, but also on account of his blindness.

Between 1540 and 1543 he was highly engaged as theologian to Cardinals Gaingy and Contarini, and also in company with the Savorard Father Claud' J'us, S. J., in the cause of the Catholics in South Germany, particularly in Worms, Spire, Nuremberg, Ratisbon, Ingolstadt, and Munich. Twice he went to Rome to report to Paul III. on the progress of affairs. He assisted at the Sessions of the Council of Trent in that city, 1545-7, and at Bologna, 1547-9. From the beginning of 1550 he was Papal Nuncio in Ireland, where Henry VIII. had, in 1534, set up a schismatical Archbishop against him in the person of George Dowdall—who, however, made his peace with and was recognised by Rome in 1553. In Ireland he worked hard restoring peace among the Irish chiefs of Sept. In May he went to Paris whence he wrote to the Pope's secretary, Cardinal Bernardino Maffei. In November of the same year Julius III. renewed his powers as Papal Legate for Ireland, but on the 11th of the following November the blind Archbishop ("Paterfamilias" "Aengus" as Cardinal de Belsly had styled him in 1548) died in Paris. "The memory of the blind Irish Archbishop," concludes the Rhenish organ, "ought to be held in honor by German Catholics, for during troublous times he fought and suffered manfully for the oppressed Church in Germany."

I received much kindness from his majesty when we were at Teheran with his excellency the Apostolic Delegate, Mgr. Montele. He has given me a faramon, or official paper, appointing me to the position I hold. Never have I spoken against our government. In foreign countries the ambassadors and counsils of Persia protect me. His excellency the Persian ambassador in London gave me a letter for his Excellence Cardinal Vaughan. For all the years I have been working in good relations with the Persian authorities. I shall not speak of people who do harm to Catholics, but of those who have done wrong, and in general the authorities have been kind to all the Christians in Persia, especially the Catholics. The question I have referred to arose, not because of any dispute with the Persian authorities, but because of differences between the Catholics and Protestants and Nestorians. In these matters the authorities have been very favorable to us Catholics. I have been defending Catholic interests all my life as a Catholic chief and my father spent his life in fighting for the same cause. I have the hearty approbation of my Archbishop, Mgr. Ando, Father Malaw, Superior Salomon and Mgr. Isaac Koudabash."

The "Cabinet Member's Wife."

The authorship of the much-discussed "Inner Experiences of a Cabinet Member's Wife," printed in the Ladies' Home Journal, will be revealed in the June issue of that magazine, when the name of Anna Farquhar will appear as the author. It is surmised that these domestic experiences described in these letters were those of Mrs. W. H. E. Miller, wife of the Attorney-General in President Harrison's Cabinet, whose name Farquhar is known to be a personal friend of the Miller family, and to have spent considerable time with them in Washington during their official residence there. The author of these letters was born and raised in Indiana, in a neighborhood with the Harrises and Miller families, but for ten years past she has lived a studious professional life in New York, London and Boston. She is now connected with the editorial staff of the Boston Transcript. In addition to her "Cabinet Member's Wife" letters she has published one novel—"A Singer's Heart"—and another one is about to be issued. "THOUGHT MY HEAD WOULD BURST." A Frederician Lady's Terrible Suffering.

Mrs. Geo. Downer tells the following remarkable story of relief from suffering and restoration to health, which should clear away all doubts as to the efficacy of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills from the minds of the most skeptical. "For several years I have been a constant sufferer from nervous headache, and the pain was so intense that sometimes I was almost crazy. I really thought that my head would burst. I consulted a number of physicians and took many remedies, but without effect. I noticed Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills advertised, and as they seemed to suit my case, I got a box and began their use. Before taking them I was very weak and debilitated, and would sometimes wake out of my sleep with a distressed, smothering feeling, and I was frequently seized with agonizing pain in the region of the heart, and often could scarcely muster up courage to keep up the struggle for life. In this wretched condition Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills came to the rescue, and to-day I state, with gratitude, that I am vigorous and strong, and all this improvement is due to this wonderful remedy."
