PANAMA, May 1.—It is reported that Honduras is concentrating her forces on the Guatemalan frontier. Passeng-ers who have arrived here recently ers who have arrived here recently from Guatemala say that a revolution was being planned against the Hunduran government by General Domingo Vasquez ex-president of Honduras, who is supposed to have the support of Guatemala. This, they say, was the reason why Senor Bustillos, Finance Minister of Honduras, was sent on a special confidential mission to President Cabrera of Guatemala, and which Cabrera, instead of treating with Bustillos practically imprisoned him in Guatemala City.

PORTLAND, Ore, May 2.—Nathan Wolff, a pawnbroker and jeweler, who has been in business in Portland for twenty-five years, was murdered by robbers last night. Wolff was evidently first shot in the neck and then beaten to death. His face and head were hacked to pieces. There is, little doubt that robbery was the sole motive for the crime. Wolff carried a large stock of diamonds. It is believed that the robbers took jewelry and money to the amount of $1,700.

PARIS, May 2—May Day in Paris passed quietly, the only incident being the arrest of two individuals in the Flace De La Republique who exhorted the soldiers to throw down their arms and join the anti-militarist movement. Of those persons arrested during the day, only six were detained, they being found to be either in possession of concrated weapons, or not having compiled with the regulations for the registration of foreigners. Late despatches from the provinces report no disturbances except at Rochefort and Brest, where slight collisions took place between marchers and the police. These, however, were not intended with serious consequences.

New Unique New Open

The Bennett Theatrical Enterprizes of Canada will open to the public The Unique Pleasure Palace, in the John White Building, Charlotte street, directly opposite the Dufferin Hotel. It will be devoted to the latest animated views and illustrated songs. A complete change of programme will be given three times a week, viz. Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Every precaution has been taken to insure the public safety against fire. The building has been thoroughly inspected by the city inspector, who pronounced it perfect in every respect to meet the requirements of the ordinance. This cosy little theatre is amply provided with sufficient fire exits, having two in the rear, and two in the from of the building. The sanitary conditions have been given careful consideration and everything possible done to insure safety and comfort for local patrons. Courte-ous ushers will be in attendance, and mothers can send their little ones and feel content that they will be as safe from insult or injury as they would be in their own homes. The interior is beautifully decorated with a green mission oak effect, with the side walls blended in a delicate crimson and plink. The foor has been graded, which insures each person a good view of the stage, and which in addition to three hundred and fifty extra wide opera clairs, makes a place of amusement that is worth will be five cents.

Send the Children to Sweden Today It is doubtful if many St. John children will ever in their lives visit the farnorthern land of Sweden, but today at the Nickel's big bargain matinee they will be transported to the loveliest spots in this country—the waterfalls, the torrents, the outing villas and fishing resorts. It is a liberal education, this photographic travelling at the Nickel. Furthermore there will be an historical reminiscence of the American Civil War—the Escape From Libbey Prison, and several other fine views. Two merry songs. Matron and aisle men to care for the little ones. Last evening the big, comfortable theatre was crowded to capacity all the time. Tonight the Swedish pictures will be shipped to Halifax. It is doubtful if many St. John child-

Dr. William E. Huntington, President of Boston University, made an able plea for equal suffrage at the hearing in Boston last Tuesday, and his remarks were received with warm applause. He said in part:

"This cause is advocated by the sane, large-minded, deep-hearted women who represent the best element of the community; some of them, like Mrs. Howe, women who have lived through stormy times and rendered great service to their country. During my many years of connection with a co-educational institution. I have been converted from their country. During my many years of connection with a co-educational institution. I have been converted from an opponent of co-education to an advocate. Our young women have come to the front spiendidly in their college work. They have always averaged higher than the young men; and it is not because they have elected the easy courses. They do not hesitate to take the hardest of all subjects; and won the esteem both professors and fellow students. A woman can stand side by side with men in the halls of learning why not in the life outside? Our educated women are pouring out of our institutions of learning, year by year, in long procession. Why not open to them the larger doors of public usefulness, and let them help to solve the pressing problems of the time? We should do it for their own sake, to enable them to use their asquisitions of knowledge, and we should do it for the sake of Boston and her good name. Why not bring to bear every force in favor of reform? There is no reason against this bill. We stand on the rock bed of the fundamental principles of justice."

Last year 7000 dogs and 182,000 horses were cut up and sold for food in the meat markets of Germany. In Europe, beef and mutton are beyond the means of the poorest people, and they are glad to get horse and dog meat. This is largely due to the crushing taxes imposed by militarism. Europe needs to give the mothers a vote.

President Huntington of Boston University mentioned at the suffrage hearing that the young women averaged better in their studies than the young men. At the recent quarter centennial of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae, President Eliot, of Harvard, President Thomas of Bryn Mawr and President Van Hise of the Wisconsin State University referred to the fact that this was the case in all co-educational colleges.—Suffrage, tional colleges.—Suffrage.

One of the reasons put forward is that there are a very large number of commercial travellers in the province, the majority of whom spend the week end at their homes. By holding the election on Monday these men will be able to vote before leaving on their travels, whereas if held on any other day they would be put to some inconvenience. There are ninety-eight constituencies in Ontario for the Provincial election and already more than half the candidates are in the field. Fifty-five Litberals, sixty-nine Conservatives and one labor candidate are nominated. The present nominees include thirty-seven Conservative and ten Liberal members

The shark and the octupus are usuaally looked upon as the most dangerouse among the denizens of the deep, but it appears that fishermen who frequent tropical waters have a much greater fear of the devilish, the green mo:ay and the swordfish. There seems to be unanimity of opinion that the shark and the octopus will not attack a boat, while the others which have been mentioned will. And, moreover, the attacks of the devilish, the moray and the swordfish are a great deal more terrific than those of the shark and the octopus.

been superseded by steam; wood has been replaced by steel; the old salt of Captain Marryat's novels has had to make way for the modern sailor-mechanic. In the lore of the sea everything has changed since Her Majesty's ship Investigator began her long rest in the ice. If she is really rescued, she will be the Rip Van Winkle of the world's fleets. She will need to be refitted, of course, at some Canadian or other British port on the other side of the Atlantic, and then, under sail, with the White Ensign and the Union Jack battling with the breeze, she should make her furrow once more across the water to her long-lost home.

Practically all who sailed in her have gone, though Admiral Sir Vesey Hamilton, who was the mate of the companion ship Assistance, is still alive to tell the story of the struggle with the elements over fifty years ago. The Investigator was commanded by one of the heroes of Arctic exploration—the late Vice-Admiral Sir Robert John Le Mesurler McClure, who was born at Wexford fifteen months after the battle of Trafalgar.

In the lore of the sea everything has had to make her fally vescued, she will be northern shore of Banks' Land. McClure had been so buffeted about that he accepted this fate with some amount of satisfaction, because his lot might have been worse. In the feeling of relief he named the inlet "the Bay of God's Mercy." and there the Investigator has lain, absolutely frozen up, undergoing a process of refrigeration for upwards of half a century.

From September, 1851, until the following summer the frozen-in ship was McClure's headquarters. At last the situation began to assume a grave aspect. Foood was running short, and the crew were suffering from illness. There was no prospect of relief. McClure at length decided that he had no course but to abandon the little vessel to her fate, and seek safety for him self and his companions, if such were to be found anywhere in these to be found anywhere

Westford fifteen months after the battle of Trafalgar.

IN SEARCH OF FRANKLIN.

In 1848 he was offered and accepted an appointment as first lieutenant, in Her Majesty's ship Investigator—the Rip Van Winkle of the British fleet. She had been purchased from the merchant service, and was about to leave England to make the first of many efforts to pierce the veil which hid from the world's view all traces of Sir John Franklin and his companions. England at the moment was in a fever of nervous excitement; all eyes were on the pathetic but courageous figure of Lady Franklin, hoping against hope and prepared to risk her all on the faint chance of rescuing her husband and his daring party from death, or at least finding some traces of them. Sir James Clark Ross was the captain of Her Majesty's ship Investigator. This officer, his first lieutenant, and Admiral Sir Leopold McClintock, one of his most daring assistants, have all passed away. The Investigator, in company with the Enterprise went out by way of Lancaster Sound, and wintered at Leopold Island, near the northeast point of North Devon. The two ships made a fruitless search, and in the following year came back.

RESCUED AT LAST.

He had come to this determination when Lieutenant Bedford Pim appeared on the scene by chance. He had come across from the Resolute, which by this time had got into Melville Sound. McClure found all his doubts come across from the Resolute, which by this time had got into Melville Sound. The bringing of the Empresses to Montreal is the direct result of the 'Longshoremen's troubles at Quebec.

Mistress—Bridget, I hope you're not thinking at all of leaving me. I should be very lonesome without you.

Maid—Faith, and it's not lonely ye'll be. Most like I'll go whin there's a houseful o' company for luncheon or a Tuesday at William Rudd's and Abbie told her that Dr. Douglas said she

"SPRING FEVER"

The need of a spring medicine seems to be universal. This is due to the fact that during the winter the blood becomes impure on account of the hearty food eaten. This causes that tired, weary, all-gone, don't-care-to-work feeling which is so pre-valent at this time of year.

Mrs. Stephen Lake, half-sister to Abbie Weatherby, then took the stand. She said that in a letter received by her from her mother in Cheverie no mention was made of Alfred Lake being appointed Abbie's guardian. Abbie had told her that Alfred Lake had coaxed her mother and father tolet her come away with him.

Stephen Lake, witness' husband, had told her that if Abbie persisted in going with Lake, witness' husband, had told her that if Abbie persisted in going with Lake never heard Abbie call Alfred Lake her uncle.

MONCTON, N. B., May 1.—The coroner's jury this afternoon returned a verdict that Bozeil Gogain, who died suddenly Wednesday night after a three-days' debauch, came to his death through the excessive use of alcoholic bevrages. No light was thrown by the evidence on the question of where Gogain procured the liquor, the only clue being that on Wednesday afternoon he told a woman he had procured it from told a woman he had procured it from a Jew. This witness said the fluid had not the appearance of whiskey, but ad a bitter taste, unlike any other

When your liver is out of order your whole system suffers. Your food ferments in your stomach and intestines, causing windy spasms, and the impurities that result enter your blood and are carried to every part blood and are carried to every part of your system. The results are nausea, sickness, headache, blurred sight, pains between the shoulders, furred tongue, languor and general depression of spirits. Mother Seigel's Syrup overcomes all that, because it puts your liver right and keeps it right—and your stomach too. Mme. Auguste Ouellette, St. Jean Port Joli, L'Islet Co., P.Q., writing on Jan. 24, 1908, says:—"After meals I had severe pains in the stomach, I had severe pains in the stomach, and I was pale and thin from sleeplessness and headache. Mother Seigel's Syrup cured me when nothing else could," despite the protests of many great artistes, that the jumper should remain in fashion for the beason to come, and at last they have bowed to her decree, and made costumes that are the very best of the jumper class. These are designed especially to show off the best points of the underblouse of sheer material and lace without having it so much in evidence that the illusion is spoiled.

The least attractive parts of a blouse are usually the shoulder seams, the top of the sleeves and the gathers above the westst, where the belt holds in the figure. The new jumpers cover these uninteresting features, showing only the beautiful embroidery in front, around the meck and on the cuffs.

The four models presented are becoming to all figures, and not one of them is difficult to copy at home.

It all se down to the fact that the manner let of 1908 will need at least the property of the fact that the manner of pumper gowns—one of linen, and the form of gonges and a third of ginglam.

A Lingerie Costume

NE OF the hats shown for mer is of white straw in tures shape, and around the edge next to the hair is a wreath of tiny rosebuds. The crown of the hat, however, is covered with a mass of pink plumes, while one stands erect on the left side. The hat is appropriate only with the lightest of summer dresses, and the one made to go with it is of white handker-chief limen, heavily hand-embroidered, with bands of pink linen tucked and let in around the skirt and in a design on the walst. The parasol for the costume is rather a novelty, for it is not of silk or pongee, but of pink baniste, absolutely unadorned save for tucks around the edge just above the plain hem. The stick is of pink enamel, made in the shape of a shepherdess' assock.

The Paquin Skirt

ORD comes from Paris that the Paquin skirt has not been received at all enthusiastically; in fact, the Parisienne has totally neglected it. A French dressmaker says that she saw it only once, and then on an actress.

that she saw it only once, and their on an actress.

This is not encouraging news about a fashion that has become popular in this country, but those who own skirts on this model need not repine, for the American holds a place all her own, and if a style suits her, she may wear it to her heart's content, for it is her right to select any style from any country that suits her fickle fancy.

DARNED NET MAKES EFFECTIVE BLOUSES

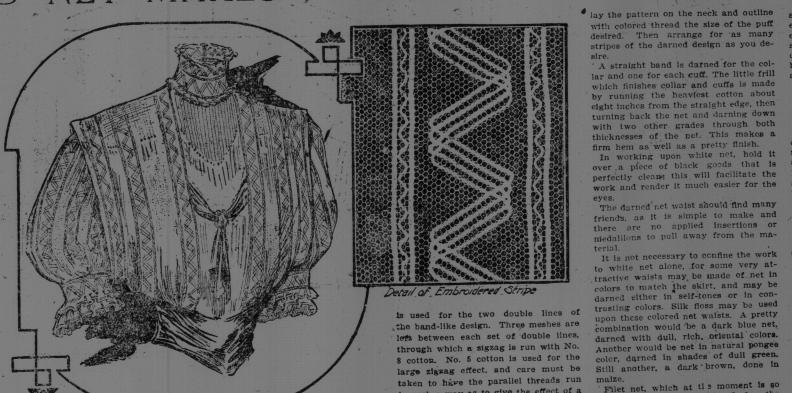

Soutache Bolero

A young girl is made of soutache braid pleated and woven into a fabric. It is lined with a soft white silk and it is finished around the edge in wide braid. The sleeves are shaped like bretelles. The same idea may be carried out in a three-quarter coat made with four panels, each of woven braid. With such a coat the summer girl, be she young or old, may look with indifference upon the new lace jackets of her friends.

Knitted Neckties

Knitt with double prongs through the hair. These nevelties seem to hold the hat firmly in place, more firmly than any of their ornate cousins, and they cannot possibly do any injury to the hat.

Clusters of tucks are run from the shoulders, back and frent, for a depth of about five inches. These tucks are run as already described, finishing with a French knot. Cotton No. 3 lay the pattern on the neck and outline with colored thread the size of the puff desired. Then arrange for as many stripes of the darned design as you desire.

A straight band is darned for the collar and one for each cuff. The little frill which finishes collar and cuffs is made by running the heaviest cotton about eight inches from the straight edge, then turning back the net and darning down with two other grades through both thicknesses of the net. This makes a firm hem as well as a pretty finish.

In working upon white net, hold it over a piece of black goods that is perfectly cleans this will facilitate the work and render it much easier for the eyes.

The darned net waist should find many friends, as it is simple to make and there are no applied insertions or medallions to pull away from the material.

It is not necessary to confine the work to white net alone, for some very attractive waists may be made of net in

Our Letter From Paris

PABIS, April 2.

OW that the time for summer dresses is almost here, the very clinging petticoat must, perforce, be discarded, as it is obvious to the most casual that the jupon pantalons cannot be worn with sheer muslin or lace dresses. Therefore, madame must recall to a certain extent her lingerie ruffles, plain or elaborate, according to the size of her pocketbook, but always provided with a deep flat flounce that cannot in any way spoil the straight line of her sheath skirt. For slik dresses crepe de chine may, of course, be worn, but pongee is very popular, and it may be embroidered or lace trimmed, as one may choose. Perhaps this variety is best when made with a circular ruffle embroidered in silk or mercerized cotton.

Stockinet petticoats are, increasing in popularity, and they give much satisfaction when madame wishes to assume that long, lithe look that Dame Fashion so eagerly; advocates

The great couturiers wisely provide petticoats with their own creations, so there can be no possibility of the most ignorant foreigner making a mistake. There are many real Parisiennes who greatly admire the soft lawn skirts in violet, pink and bluet these are really attractive and dainty, and sometimes they are of striped or figured material trimmed with plain bias bands. Needless to state, all of the ured material trimmed with plain bias bands. Needless to state, all of the lingerie jupons must be fitted like a glove almost to the knees. Petticoats are interesting and various, but the only set rule in regard to them is that they must be soft and they must ail low the outer skirt to follow its own.

Auteuil, which has the prettiest "pesage" in France, reopened only a short time ago, and the costumes seen showed that many women are adopting the negligee style, considered now to be more feminine than the trim tailor-made of the "femme nouvelle."

The artistic Louis XVI fashion will evidently prevail in the dressy gowns for spring—the shaw effects, the long stoles, the draped skirts, the high-crowned hats.

stoles, the draped skirts, the high-crowned hats.

One well-known Parisian appeared at Auteuil in a gown of deepest gray crepe embroidered in silver and trimmed with silken fringe. A chiffon stole of gray was draped over her shoulders, while her hat was of soft gray tulle, massed with azaleas, shading from faintest pink to an attenuated cherry color and a full aigrette of gray marabout. Her boots were of black patent leather, with gray suedatops.

ELOISE.

Linen Suits

Linen Suits

Many of the new linen suits, besides being trimmed with lace, are made with a band of filet net brought from the walst line in the back straight across the shourders to the walst line in the front, and it is decorated in designs carried out in silk cord to match the shade of the suit. So many suits this year are in light blue and pink linen that the effect of the embroidered filet charming, and it makes the coat becoming to almost any figure. The coats are cut, as a rule, on the cuted away plan; finished all the way round the outside edge with insertion and fastened in front with frogs of silk cord, usually in white.

The insertion and lace is generally of cluny or torchon, these two being the only appropriate laces to use with linen, as they are both made of linen thread. Some of the filet bands instead of being embroidered in cord, are done in soutache of a very narrow variety. This is quite an innovation, and one that seems likely to be very popular during the coming summer. The bands over the shoulders are about two inches wide and are finished in broad points at either end.

A Novelty in Cutaways A Novelty In Cutaways

A BLACK and white coat is shown in a new model. It is cut in a most peculiar way, crossing the bust and ending in a point at one side, and from there it is cut away on the bias straight around to the back, where it is finished in a point. It gives the cutaway appearance without being quite so cumbersome as the coat buttoned down the front, and it leaves one thickness at the sides.

A Becoming Material

A NEW herringbone serge has been introduced where the stripes are almost an inch and a haif in width. It is a very stylish fabric, and one that would make up very attractively, for it has not a definite stripe, so rapidly becoming ordinary, and yet it has the semblance of a striped material, so becoming to the figure. This material is particularly good when made up in a cutaway jacket of a perfectly plain decrease.

MOST UNGALLANT OF PAPERS.

the girls and women of the period as incompetent in their proper sphere and insolent and tyrannical in the one that they have usureed.

In the opening number—only two or three have apppeared—the editor of the Bachelor outlines his programme. He proposes to organize the unmarried men of the community into a solid phalanx to resist the wiles by which women seek to lure them under their domination. In order to do this he purposes to turn the light upon the security of the lovesick swains.

Other correspondents hall the paper as the gospel of man's regeneration, as salt rubbed in the eyes of women, as the "pilllar of man's rights and guide to his simple inexperience." Another thinks that if the bringing up of the modern girl could be reformed all would be well.

The Mladenec has angered the women of Bohemia. Not they alone, however, attack it. A church organ in mination. In order to do this he purposes to turn the light upon the secret recess of the female heart.

Special attention will be given to the education of the youngsters who come out of school and college and apprenticeship every day, totally unguarded against the traps and devices which the whole female sex has ready for After the prospectus comes a spirited onslaught on the woman's rights movement. "Equal rights, indeed!" exclaims the writer. "The moment a woman wins equal rights she begins to clamor for something more." He says women are in the forefront of discontent. Things that have made men contended if not happy for generations become the subjet of complaint the moment women attain them. Women demand as a right what men never thought of asking as a favor.

They elbow the men out of their way and climb over them to secure what they consider their "equal rights"—that is, the right to more and better than

The practical difficulty, the Bachelor finds, is the dilemma of the mere masculine person between the Scylla of marriage and the Charybedis of boarding house life. Women derive all their power from it. If it were not for the man's aspiration after an orderly home she would be his respectful servitor, she would be his respectful servitor. she would be his respectful servitor, to meet this condition and deprive marriage of its compulsory character the Bachelor proposes the establishment of "asylums" for the unmarried. They are to be establishments in which men can take refuge when they have definitely made up their minds to a single life. They are to combine like privacy and comfort of the home with the independence of the club. No woman will be admitted except as the lowest grade of servants.

Czech journalism has enriched the world with the novelty, Mladenec (the weekly newspaper to promote the emancipation of man from slavery to femininity). Incidentally it attacks the new woman movement and arraigns the girls and women of the period as the girls and women of the period as incompetent in their proper sphere.

To little Charlie McLauchlin the world very often looks upside down. But this does not matter. He is never disheartened, and the reason is that he himself makes things appear the wrong way. It is his business. There are a number of peculiar things about Charlie. Most people earn their living by being upright. With him the contrary is the case. He supports himself, literally and actually, by standing on his head.

Charlie is a pathetically deformed little chap, living on the Millidgeville road near the junction of the Indiantown road. He has been deformed since birth, and now when he should be a tall, hearty boy, he is scarcely three thigh. But this great misfortune has not daunted him. Never having experienced the satisfaction of possessing a normal physique he scarcely residence where the satisfaction of possessing a normal physique he scarcely residence where the satisfaction of possessing a normal physique he scarcely residence where the satisfaction of possessing a normal physique he scarcely residence where the satisfaction of possessing a normal physique he scarcely residence where the satisfaction of possessing a normal physique here.

Charlie can stand on his head. He can do it just as easily as he can stand on his head. He can do it just as easily as he can remain in that topsy-turvey position for almost any length of time and cao recover his proposition without the least effort. True, as his stature is not great, the end-for-end turn is not a serious proposition in his case, and by continued practice he has become almost incredibly expert.

The North End carries the banner for disturbances as the police report being called into a house on Main street to quell a row between William and Daniel Daley. The house of Duncan Jewett on Brook street was the scene of another disturbance and the police claim that Duncan was beating his wife.

The City Cornet Band will in a few days call for tenders for the erection of the new band stand over the fountain in King Square. Some changes have been made by F. Neil Brodie, the architect, in the original plans. At the request of the city directors the structure will be fourteen instead of twelve feet above the ground. Some minor changes will also be necessary to the down.
