STAMP OUT "BLUE-ROIN"—BUILD THE CITY HALL

"There is absolutely no cause for excited misgivings or hysterical utterances with regard to financial conditions in London"—Dr. Horace L. Brittain, in Brittain's report, October, 1923.

"Limit of borrowing power is near—need to curtail—debt charges jump"—the London Free Press, November, 1923.

"London has never been in better shape financially. It is further from its borrowing limit than in many years."—City Treasurer James Bell, 37 years in office, November, 1923.

TO BUILD THE CITY HALL NOW WILL COST YOU $1.25 A YEAR; WAITING HAS COST $120,000

City Treasurer's Figures Show Actual Cost to the Individual Ratepayer.

WAITING IS WASTEFUL

Waiting Has Cost $120,000 Already and Another $12,000 Every Year.

What Will It Cost NOT To Build the City Hall?

City Treasurer James Bell supplies the answer from the city's books.

Every day that passes without the construction of a city hall on the McCormick site means the loss to the ratepayers—anywhere from $10,000 to $12,000 per annum.

And the city treasurer adds that this amount will naturally be increased with each passing year. More than ten years ago the city purchased the property at the southeast corner of Dundas and Wellington streets, from the McCormick Manufacturing Company, upon the distinct understanding that the site would be used for a city hall.

No hall has been constructed.

And the city has lost about $100,000 interest and taxes, etc.

What Will It Cost YOU To Build the City Hall?

Hundreds of thousands of dollars mean little to the individual. The real gauge of values comes in reckoning what will actually come out of your own pocket.

Here are the figures which affect you. They are given by the city treasurer.

A new hall will cost in the neighborhood of $600,000. By resolution of council it is stipulated that no sum in excess of this shall be expended. This is spread over a period of 20 years, and each ratepayer shoulders his or her proportionate share.

A $1,500 assessment, at an average rate of interest computed by City Treasurer Bell, will call for an additional 62½ cents upon the tax notice, or a $3,000 assessment (the average for the city of London), will demand about $1.25 increase on a citizen's bill.

Wasteful waiting for the city hall has cost $120,000 with nothing to show for it. It will cost another $12,000 every year.

To build and get the job done will cost each average citizen $1.25 a year—the price of a theatre ticket.

RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT
COMMUTES SENTENCES

Moscow, Dec. 1.—The Russian government has shown clemency toward the 18 persons who were sentenced on November 1st after being tried on charges of bribery and corruption. The sentence of each prisoner has been commuted to ten years in solitary confinement.

On Again— Off Again—

On Nov. 22, the Free Press wanted to build the city hall but "thought the Spencer site might be better."

A few days later it didn't want to do anything by cry despair—no money.

Yesterday it proposed rebuilding the Spencer Block instead.

Yesterday it also proposed building "an office building like the Public Utilities."

Yesterday it said "the city hall is a necessity."

Yesterday it said in the next paragraph that it was "not a vital necessity."

The truth is that the Free Press is so tangled up with the back-room schemers that it doesn't really know what it is arguing.

This Is Your City Hall

THE CIVIC SECTION OF WESTERN ONTARIO'S HUB.
London is the hub of Western Ontario. Here is the civic center of the hub. What do you think of it? The general ensemble of the city offices as shown here is one with Nineveh and Tyre. Its yellow brick, stained with the passing years reveals the hoary frescoes in the resting place of old King Tut. This shows only the outside, the inside is beyond the power of imagination to describe or the camera to portray. In the picture of the entrance doors, the portals through which pass the city fathers are standing open as they do every morning to help in the only system of ventilation possible in the center of the building. It is not imposing and perhaps there is some excuse for the teamster who left his bag of hay for his team propped against the city hall steps.

LONDON'S CITY OFFICES, DIRTY, DINGY, OUT OF DATE

Nothing Beautiful or Even Business-like About the City's Official Home; Atmosphere of Gloom Pervades the Cheerless and Out-of-Date Offices.

How many people in London really know what the present city hall looks like?

From the street one sees a yellow brick building designed apparently on the lines of a wholesale warehouse, with blue-gray doors worn and buffed by many aldermanic shoulders.

The windows are arranged on the principle of allowing enough light to see your way about in, but not enough to work by at this time of the year. They are in keeping with the color scheme of the whole, offering little break in the dull monotony of brick and mortar.

The main entrance to the street is a matter of two heavy, swinging doors gray like the rest and opening onto a flight of steep stairs reaching to the various offices.

If you should want to reach the council room, you have before you a journey of 46 steps and three turns.

In between these turns on the first floor is a passage less than two feet in width, which necessitates a side-way style of procession for any more than ordinarily large man.

As you walk along Dundas street going east by the side of the city hall you come to a forbidding boarded-in office. The boards are of the same dirty gray-blue color as the others, and are adorned with the artistic efforts of small boys in the form of chalk drawings, side by side with sundry advertising bills. This is the office of London's chief magistrate, and the inside does not belie the outward appearance. The office itself, a matter of ten square feet, contains four stiff-backed chairs besides the mayoral arm chair, a roll top desk, a steam radiator and such stained sunlight as may be able to penetrate the windows.

The other offices are a little dingier.

ALL PARTIES IN BRITAIN CONFIDENT

Liberals Believe Success Will Attend Lloyd George's Intense Drive.

SEE BUSY WEEK AHEAD

Ramsay MacDonald Denies Labor Will Drop Capital Levy Plan.

Associated Press Despatch.
London, Dec. 1.—This is the last week-end before the general election, and so the canvassers and speakers of the three leading parties will be very busy. Each party says it has been making great progress, and each is confidently predicting its own victory. The Conservatives say they are making many converts to Stanley Baldwin's protection policy in the northern districts. Their opponents, on the other hand, say they are likely to lose London and the south because of the apathy of the electors, and the lack of Conservative canvassers.

The Liberal claim to progress is based to a large extent on Lloyd George's campaign. The party workers profess confidence that the election will result in an enormous majority for free trade.

Both Conservative and Liberal speakers represent Labor as being in difficulties over the capital levy, alleging that this plank of the Labor platform is proving to be a white elephant and is likely to be the ruin of the party's hopes.

Ramsay MacDonald has been represented as saying in effect that the Laborites were not wedded to the levy, and that if it proved unworkable the party would abandon it. Mr. MacDonald has denied making this assertion, explaining that although the party might be hampered by the capital levy, it stood for honest politics, and would not drop its pet plank even though hampered by it.

EDUCATIONAL BUDGET LESS THAN MILLION

Officials Contradict "Whispers of Death" Sent Out EXPECT SURPLUS

The board of education estimates for 1924 will be less than one million dollars.

This statement was made by several members of the board in contradiction to the "whisper of death" published in the Free Press yesterday as a continuance of "blue ruin" campaign, being broadcasted from its columns.

Prominent in yesterday's story, was written in answer to one appearing in The Advertiser on Thursday to the effect that a surplus was apparent, and the tentative estimates would be pared, were statements credited to Secretary Tanner to the effect that it would be practically impossible to pare them down much, and that no debenture debt payments for the new West London school were included.

Prompt denial of these assertions was given by Inspector Greer, Chairman A. N. Udy and Trustee B. N. Campbell.

Inspector Greer has consistently stated that there would be a surplus in the public school account for this year, and, as an example of this, pointed out that in the case of substitute teachers, where the amount asked was but $6,500, there will be a surplus of $2,500. He has since school opened in September made the statement that there was every reason to hope for a reduction in the public school rate for 1924.

Chairman A. N. Udy told The Advertiser that the estimates were purely tentative, and that there was no doubt but that by the time they were accepted by the council they would be under a million dollars.

B. N. Campbell, who is seeking reelection, said that wherever possible a dollar would be eliminated from the figures already submitted, and that there was no reason for it to exceed one million dollars. In fact, the figures might be considerably less. Referring to the need for collegiates, Mr. Campbell stated that nothing definite had been decided on, but that if they were to be built, he would see that they did not cost $500,000, the figure being broadcasted as the additional amount the citizens would have to assume.

Referring to the debenture debt, it was pointed out that the payments, capital and interest, on the West London school have been, and are included in the estimates, and, in fact, were also included in the figures for 1923, although the amount was never used. There will probably be no increase in debenture charges for capital and interest for several years for public schools, according to Inspector Greer.

Don't Let "Ruiners" Twist the Real Facts

Does London Need a City Hall?
Can London Afford To Build?
Can London Afford To Wait?

Here are cold facts and figures from the city treasurer to help you find truthful answers.

Before a man buys anything he usually asks him himself:

"Do I need it?"

"Can I afford it?"

Before you go to your polling booth on Monday sit down for a minute and think over the city hall proposition with these two questions in mind:

"Does London need it?"

"Can London afford it?"

The answer to the first question comes pretty quickly, because only one answer has ever been offered. London is the only city in Canada which has no city hall. The building which at present houses its administration is a joke throughout the country, a thing of shame to be concealed from visitors, and, as the recent Brittain report proclaimed, a constant risk to the city's irreplaceable documents.

The Front Door To London

To a city, a city hall is something like the front door on one's house, or the window of one's store.

No man owning a substantial, prosperous home would think of having a flimsy, dingy, battered front door, with broken glass, and knotholes showing through the scraped paint.

No merchant with a fine stock of goods inside his store would keep a dirty, squalid, window, with the blind half down and a confusion of out-of-date merchandise displayed.

But that is just what London has been doing for ten years, although the people have voted four times in favor of changing it. The defeat of the bylaw on Monday would mean a continuation of that performance—more years of increasing discredit to the city, more dilapidating, more pussyfooting, more small town politics.

London Needs Action Now

If ever London needs some vigorous fresh air and determined action, she needs it here and now.

"Can London afford it?"

It is on this question that opposition has been raised and it is here that the pros and cons of the proposition must be weighed. The facts and figures supporting the city hall are definite. They have nothing to do with sentiment.

The city already owns the site—has owned it for some years—is losing money every day it lies vacant.

On this site it is proposed to erect a building which shall cost not more than $600,000. It may cost less; it must not cost more.

Over Half the Money Is Ready

Of this maximum $600,000, the city has already on hand over $345,000.

These figures are definite. They have not been prepared as campaign material. They are issued from the office of the city treasurer, who has no motive in the affair except to present cold figures as they are.

The statement prepared by the city treasurer gives the following detailed information:

Receipts.
Sale of old city hall on Richmond street.....	$100,000.00
Proceeds of sale of $75,000 of debentures in year 1913	65,845.00
Proceeds of sale of $125,000 of debentures in year 1913	112,987.50
Debentures held for sale, $125,000, say.....	108,000.00
Sale of public utilities of corner lot on which utilities building is erected	20,000.00
Sale of old material	12.00
$406,844.50

Expenses.

Expended for purchase and alterations in building now used as city hall, up to date..... $1,305.30

Balance on hand to build on present site, assuming that city in the sale of Federal Square property will receive as much as paid for it, viz., $205,829.73

Look now at the opposition—the blue-ruin campaign of the last few days.

What are its answers to the question: "Can London afford it?"

Deception in the Bylaw.

The first effort of the opposition comes, surprisingly enough, in the bylaw itself.

The bylaw asks for $500,000, an amount which the City Treasurer's figures above show to be almost twice as much as will be needed.

$500,000—half a million—was put on the ballot by the little clique of schemers who wanted to knock the city hall project. It was intended to frighten the voters. There was no other motive. The amount actually required to supply the maximum $600,000 is $255,000—not $500,000—according to the figures supplied by the City Treasurer.

London can afford it. Read the statements from Dr. Brittain and James Bell, as contrasted with the blue-ruin cry. London can afford it and she has proven it in the past year by raising

WOMAN ENDS LIFE, WALKS INTO RIVER

Unidentified Woman Suicides at 11 o'Clock Today at Thames Park.

BODY IS RECOVERED

Crowd Gathers Around Where Remains Are Recovered by Firemen.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon the body was identified as Mrs. Nell Stryker, 118 Elmwood avenue. The body was identified by the husband.

An unknown woman committed suicide in the Thames River at Thames Park shortly before 1 o'clock this morning, when after discarding hat and coat she waded into the stream. The water at this point is about ten feet deep.

Pedestrians on Ridout street and street car passengers saw the woman cross the Ridout bridge and make for the park. On her arrival there she took off her hat and coat, and before anyone could reach her she had waded out to midstream and started to drift down with the current.

An alarm was sent into the fire department by men working at the gas house, and the department responded immediately. The body, which was drifting downstream at a good rate, was followed to Wharncliffe road bridge where Firemen R. H. Barber and Clarence Foreman, a boy living nearby, got into the river and reached the body, pulling it out. It was floating with the face under water.

She was taken ashore on the south bank of the river about 100 yards east of Wharncliffe road. Firemen worked over her for some time, but no sign of life could be found. Dr. Robert Ferguson was summoned. The body was pulled out of the water about 11:45 o'clock.

Several hundred persons immediately congregated around the body as it lay on the bank, but no one was able to identify her.

She was apparently between 30 and 35 years of age, and married, as a wedding ring was the only jewelry on her hand. She was well dressed, and evidently a well cultured woman. She wore a blue skirt, heather stockings, low brown shoes, and the coat she discarded before making the plunge was of Hudson seal. She also wore a small blue hat. She had brown hair, not bobbed, and blue eyes, and was of medium build.

When Coroner Robert Ferguson was called after viewing the remains he ordered the body removed to N. J. Griffith's funeral parlors. The woman was wearing a blue blouse, beaded with brown and green beads. Firemen stated that it was remarkable that the body did not sink at the Dundas street bridge where the water is more than thirty feet deep. When Dr. Ferguson viewed the remains the woman's nose appeared to be slightly twisted.

SEPARATE BOARD CANDIDATES ARE ON HOME STRETCH

J. E. Secker and J. F. Nolan to Speak in Masonic Temple to Catholic Electors.

RACE IS CLOSE.

The two candidates for the vacancy on the separate school board, John E. Secker and Joseph F. Nolan, are mustering all their reserve artillery for the final affray tonight, when they will address the Catholic voters of the city in the Masonic Temple at 8 o'clock.

Ward two representation on the separate school board is the goal, and each of the warriors expressed confidence this morning that his last-minute barrage would swing the necessary amount of votes in his favor.

Although only one seat is being contested, interest in the final outcome of the fight has waxed stronger each day, and all indications are that a record number of electors will visit St. Peter's School on Monday to cast votes. The voting will be carried on in the same manner employed in civic elections, and returning officers have made every preparation to facilitate the efficiency of the procedure.

Mr. Nolan and Mr. Secker have completed their field campaigning, and both have bands of staunch supporters. In fact, so equal seem the strength of the forces that "picking a winner" is a difficult matter and "sure-thing" wagers on the outcome are scarce.

Others prominent in separate school circles as well as outstanding citizens will be on hand to deliver short talks to the assemblage and a lively meeting is assured.

Wonderful Fish.

In the southwestern part of Alaska fishing is the great industry, the fur trade being a secondary consideration. The Alaskans are famous for salmon, deer and duck are all plentiful. A curious fish which goes up the inland river is the "candle" fish, found in such immense numbers that they are literally raked into the boats. These fish are so full of oil that when dried they burn just like a candle.

Bobbed Hair Still In Style Flappers Are Victorious, So Says Madame Pinard

Toronto Hairdresser Tells of Epoch-Making Convention in United States.

SPIRITED FIGHT.

But Adds That From Business Standpoint the "Bob" Not So Profitable.

Girls! If you haven't bobbed hair yet bob it now. Abbreviated tresses are not passe. They will continue to be very much the style for months, maybe years to come.

So says Mme. Pinard of Toronto, fashionable hairdresser, who attended the National Hairdressers' Association, Inc., convention in the United States recently. Yesterday she was here on business, and stayed at the Tecumseh Hotel.

Madame Pinard explained it all to The Advertiser. As everyone knows, bobbed hair, she says, has had a long, spirited fight for existence. Many assaults have been hurled at it by fashion dictators and jealous Victorians. Just where the bob stood in relation to the decrees of style has been a moot point for over a year. But at last an official decision has been rendered. The battle is over and the palm has been awarded the victor. Bobbed hair has conquered.

The Toronto beauty expert explained that fifty-eight delegates to the Hairdressers' Association convention have issued the edict—or rather, thrown up the sponge and ignominy.

nously retreated before the hordes of bobbed-haired cuties.

Madame Pinard wants it understood that she is not altogether for the bob. She admits its comfort, but from a business standpoint it is not so profitable to the hairdressers. As Madame puts it, however: "What can one do when the girls insist?"

"The decision of the National Hairdressers is final," she explained. "Bobbed hair is here to stay; it is fashionable; it is not a fad, but a style."

Thus have the arbiters capitulated. The Flapper Triumphant!

HELD COTTAGE PRAYER MEETING AND SOCIAL

Thursday evening, friends numbering 35 met at the home of Robert Quale, 827 Hamilton road spending an hour in an old-fashioned cottage prayer meeting, after which a social evening was enjoyed.

It is the intention of the committee to hold prayer meetings every Tuesday evening in the winter season. Next week the meeting is to be held at the home of R. S. Hall, Hale street, Pottersburg.

Those in charge of Tuesday night's meeting were: Ernest Williams, R. S. Hall, Mr. Childs and Mr. Clarke.

Sixteen aldermanic candidates have declared themselves as opposed to the blue-ruin campaign now being waged, and in favor of starting at once on the erection of the new city hall building on the McCormick site. The pictures of fourteen of these appear above. In addition Maurice Gootson and T. H. Lashbrook, aldermanic candidates in Ward Three, are similarly in favor. Four candidates declare they are opposed to the construction now. Their pictures are published at the bottom of this page.

BUCHANAN REFUTES TALLANT'S ASSERTION

Public Utilities Manager Declares He Was Not Caving for Votes.

General Manager E. V. Buchanan, of the public utilities commission, this morning denied the assertions made at a campaign meeting by D. J. Tallant to the effect that he had been present in the nominating room on November 19 and had been button-holing for votes for Philip Pocock and Jared Vining.

"That is not true," declared Mr. Buchanan. "I went there with a voucher to be signed by Mr. Vining, and I got it. The only people I spoke to outside of Mr. Tallant were Messrs. Pocock, Vining and MacFarland. And Mr. Tallant knows it, because I told him that if he wanted any information or facts relative to the commission to use in his campaign, he was quite welcome to get them from us, but Mr. Tallant said he would not bother us, but would go elsewhere."

CLAIMS AUTO MISHAP, BUT DECLARED DRUNK

Old-Timer Assessed the Usual Ten—Warned by the Magistrate.

His face scratched and covered with clots of dry blood, his overcoat plastered with mud, and his dirty hands resting carelessly on the prisoners' box, an old-time visitor to the police cells solemnly assuaged Magistrate Graydon today that he certainly was not drunk last night.

"I was struck by an auto, knocked down and badly hurt," he declared.

Constable Monahan stated he had gone to an oil station on Hale street as a result of a telephone call to the police station, and had found the prisoner so drunk he had to help him. Constable Langford said the prisoner was so intoxicated he had to be held up while he was searched. Chief Birrell told the court the man had been sent down for six months for operating a still and had just got out.

KIWANIS WILL PRESENT BETTER AND BIGGER SHOW

Club's Minstrels Fast Rounding Into Shape With Big Program.

MANY SURPRISES.

Kiwanis minstrels are working practically every day to achieve their objective of making next week's show 100 per cent better than last year's record breaker. Yesterday, thirty Kiwanians labored until early this morning, and the cast is fast rounding into shape.

Under the direction of Ross Harvey, the director who made the 1922 show a big success, Kiwanians have learned their lines and are now ready to spill a few thousand guffaws when the "curtain" is called Friday afternoon. All the best joke books of the country have been requisitioned. Of course, each will have a local application, and all are guaranteed to provoke greater mirth than any heretofore heard.

The poor-but-honest working girl; the girlish Cedric, who does so admire young men, and several other standard funny characters will be on hand with every variety of delicious burlesque. Ken Murray, Sam Amera, Bill Isaacs, Tom Yull, Dinny O'Connor, John McFale, and their all-star cohorts have got a brand new line of dialogue that bids fair to send the audiences into convulsions of mirth. Several dainty girls will add spice to the entertainment. Alice Baker, Miss Dobbin and Blanche Roberts, experienced amateurs, are counted on to give a distinctly original touch to the show. They are working as hard as any of the Kiwanians, and the latter are loud in praise of the young women's efforts.

Will Give Free Show.

The first part of next week will be devoted to intensive study of their lines in several rehearsals. Then, when Friday comes along the boys and girls will be ready and itching to show the theatre-going populace just what a minstrel show can be like when put on by an aggregation of hustlers with no little histrionic ability.

Friday matinee, the first performance, will be staged for the exclu-

Will Converse Across Atlantic

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, Dec. 1.—An international dialogue, with United States and British speakers talking back and forth across the Atlantic, will be attempted tonight as the final demonstration of a series of tests to establish the practicability of transoceanic conversation.

Speakers in a half dozen United States cities will speak simultaneously for five minutes, starting at 10 o'clock, eastern standard time. The radiophone will carry the talk to stations in England, Scotland and Wales, and whatever other countries that may chance to intercept them.

sive enjoyment of patients at Westminster and Byron hospitals, inmates of the Orphans' and the Aged People's Homes, and also for persons belonging to the Salvation Army Home. The regular high-priced tickets will be distributed free.

The Kiwanis show in the past has never made an appeal to the public on the splendid use of the profits of the performance are put to. They solicit patronage on the merit of their work and on the clever, highly-entertaining nature of their productions.

A peek behind the scenes of Kiwanis achievement in their work among the underprivileged boys of London is decidedly enlightening. Forty-three lads, denied the best environment and home training, are given every opportunity to overcome the handicaps of birth and circumstance.

Yesterday one of the boys was removed from the Children's Hospital, where, under Kiwanis supervision, he was fitted with a new leg. This little chap was born without a foot. When the attention of club members was drawn to the malformation, they sent him to the hospital a month ago. Now he can walk with ease and, to all outward appearances, looks like any ordinary happy youngster. A special foot was made for him.

"It is our aim to make the show of this year 100 per cent better than last year," Bev. Hay, president of local Kiwanians, said. "That is a big order, but we are confident of doing it. The company is working overtime to accomplish big results."

Among those who will take part are Ed. Cairns, Jack Greer, Fred Rose, Cliff Hunt, Bert Weir, Jack Blair, Jack Tennant, Chas. Martin, Roy Williams, Bill Murray, George Fraser, Walter Downham, Seals Holmes, J. Gole, Sam Amera, Jack Falls, Bev. Hay, Harry Bell, George Arthurs, Gordon Bridgeman, G. Thompson, Lloyd Reilly, T. Yull, L. Bullard, Roy Lyons, Bill Turville, Dave Somerville, Harry Lackie, V. Colgan, Bill Colgan, Bill Connors, Joe Isaacs, Ken Murray, Ross Harvey, Tom Yull, Dinny O'Connor, T. SAYS MARITIME RIGHTS ARE NOT PROTECTED

Canadian Press Despatch. Halifax, N. S., Dec. 1.—Maritime rights, what they are and how they are being cared for by the Maritime federal representation at Ottawa, was the subject of addresses delivered last evening in the Musquodoboit Valley by Hon. Dr. J. E. M. Baxter, M.P., St. John, N. B., who was assisting in the campaign of W. A. Black, Conservative candidate in the Halifax County by-election.

"What are our rights?" Mr. Baxter asked, and answered: "Simply and solely to have the business of Canada so administered that we may be enabled to realize the expectations that were held out to us at the making of confederation."

NOTED LECTURER WILL ADDRESS CITY AUDIENCE

Dr. Edgar DeWitt Jones to Speak at Church of Christ, on Monday.

JOURNALIST OF NOTE.

The world problem of today will be dealt with by a lecturer and journalist considered fully capable of pronouncing sound opinions and giving authentic information in the person of Dr. Edgar De Witt Jones of Detroit, who will deliver a lecture at the Church of Christ, Disciples, Monday evening next.

A foremost lecturer, Dr. Jones is also a journalist of note. Recently he was assigned by one of the leading Detroit newspapers to visit Ireland and write for them a series of articles on the actual conditions in addition to his expert knowledge of this country which resulted from the trip. Dr. Jones is an authority on the trend of world movements in other countries. In his lecture on Monday evening, he is expected to deal with the important question of "The League of Nations," and although he has not explained his subject, title of which is "If Lincoln Were Alive Today," it is hoped that it will possibly have some bearing upon what might have been this great American's attitude toward the problem which faces his successor in the presidential chair today. As well as being an authority on current events, Dr. Jones is also an author of distinction, several of his books being at present in print.

The lecture is under the auspices of the Church of Christ, Disciples, at the corner of Dundas and Elizabeth streets, and the only charge will be a silver collection aid of the congregational building fund.

HUCKSTERS EMULATE TENT-FOLDING STUNT

Comply With Recent Bylaw and Trek to Market House Basement.

Recognized hucksters who have been raking in the shekels on the market square for many years "folded their tents like the Arabs" this morning and melted into the depths of the market house basement. This was done as the result of the city council passing a bylaw respecting hucksters on the market. The bylaw provided that on and after November 30 they were barred from carrying on business on the market square. Persons who sell produce on the market must produce at least 80 per cent of their offerings from now on.

Market Clerk Maker stated this morning that all those generally recognized as hucksters had ceased to do business on the square proper and had moved to the market house basement.

Market gardeners, however, do not envy Mr. Maker his job as there are a number of farmers attending market who certainly do not grow 80 per cent of their loads. How is the market clerk to know them? How is he going to pick them out from the legitimate growers? That's what the farmers on the square are asking today.

BUILDING INSPECTOR CONDEMNS OLD CITY HALL

ST. ANDREW'S 1924 BUDGET OF $19,500 IS GIVEN APPROVAL

Much Enthusiasm Marks Congregational Meeting on Friday Night.

SPEAKERS REMINISCE

An amount close to $19,500 was accepted by the congregation of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at the annual congregational supper last evening, as the budget for current expenses during the year, and in addition to this a missionary budget of $11,200 was endorsed by a unanimous vote.

The congregational supper held last evening, the evening of St. Andrew's Day, was marked with as much enthusiasm and encouragement, as any congregational meeting in the history of the church. It was held under the auspices of the Men's Brotherhood, with the assistance of practically every man in the congregation.

Andrew Robson, chairman of the board of managers, presided, and the budget for the current year was presented by A. E. Silverwood, acting in the absence of E. S. Ashplant, chairman of the finance board.

The missionary budget was presented by J. H. Carson, who, in his brief address, mentioned the two outstanding events of the church year, with regard to missionary finances, the contribution of $5,500 as a special offering to the deficit of the Presbyterian Church of Canada, and the appointment and reception of Dr. Gushue-Taylor, who left recently for Formosa to take charge of the McKay Memorial Hospital. The motion was seconded by D. H. Curle who spoke in a most optimistic fashion of what might be expected of the coming year.

The acceptance of the large financial budget and the evidence of the splendid condition of the church were made more impressive by the addresses of older members of the congregation who reminisced concerning the early days of St. Andrew's Church. Alex. Gillan, a member of the board of managers, referred particularly to the faith and foresight of the men who sixty years ago built the splendid edifice.

Another address in a vein of reminiscence was that of John Lochard, clerk of the sessions. John S. Brown, representing the board of managers, spoke also in connection with the budget. Rev. Dr. D. C. MacGregor addressed his congregation in a manner full of gratitude for their efforts during the past year and of splendid encouragement for the future.

In addition to the business of the evening, there was a singing for the entire congregation and a musical program in which numbers were given by Miss Edith Kennedy, Miss Vivian Ferguson, Miss Phyllis Gray, Rev. F. W. K. Harris and Mr. Ed. Webster, Miss Kennedy and Mr. Webster also furnishing an enjoyable duet. The singing was led by Rev. F. W. K. Harris, assisted by Mr. Webster, while Mrs. W. A. Martin played the piano accompaniments.

TREE BEGINNING TO BUD DESPITE COOL WEATHER

"The flowers that bloom in the spring," "Tis-a-la-la." This morning a resident of the Pipe Lin road visited the office of The Advertiser and brought with him a twig—one of several—which leaves fully developed and buds ready to break out. There are six leaves on the twig and it does not seem to have been affected by the cool weather experienced so far this year. The leaves are a brilliant green and sap is apparent in the branch itself.

INSPECTOR CONDEMNS CITY HALL STAIRWAYS

A. M. Piper Has Repeatedly Declared That They Are Unsafe.

Those who may never have had occasion to enter the present city office may gain an idea of conditions in the recent report from Building Inspector A. M. Piper.

As a matter of fact, the inspector has repeatedly condemned the stairways leading to the second floor, but particularly to the city council chambers, and insists that police direction would be imperative to prevent

EXPERIENCE WILL BE USEFUL IN '24 ASSERTS MAYOR

Promises More "Pigeon-Hole" Cleaning Next Year Speaking at Riverview.

COMPLIMENTS NEAR.

Mayor Wenige told the electors at the Riverview School last night that "he has learnt several good things during the year that will be of immense value in 1924."

"A few more pigeon-holes will be cleaned out next year," he promised, "but I want your support to this. You will have to elect the aldermen who will carry out your wishes. Ald. Wilson has spoken about obstructionists in the city council. He is quite right. There were obstructionists there during the present year, and the people know who they are."

Referring to the "Blue-Ruin" campaign, just launched by the Free Press to defeat the city hall bylaw, the mayor asked if it would be good business for them to put signs at the outskirts of the city: "Keep Out."

"Don't you believe any of their blue ruin talk," he urged. "They predicted a 42-mill rate at the beginning of the year, and now they are talking about a 40-mill rate for 1924."

"I notice that some of the politicians want to unload on you for city hall purposes, the Dominion Savings Building. I don't know who owns that building, and I don't care, but it has looked to me all this year as though there were four or five aldermen in the council who wanted the hall in their own backyard."

He cited Alds. Wilson, Greer and May. During the course of his spirited address, the mayor referred to the reorganization of the assessment department and declared that for many years past taxes had not been collected from people who had been friends of the officials, political or otherwise.

Discussing the record of the city engineer's department, he declared that City Engineer Near was the best one the city had ever had. Ald. William Wilson was the only one to object to this remark.

ABSENCE OF RECORD SAVES MIKE IN COURT

Vows He Wasn't "Very Full" and Is Let Go With Fine Ten Dollars.

All that saved "Mike" from a long trip to jail today was the fact that Police Court Clerk John Moule didn't have the man's record checked up.

"Have you got his record Mr. Moule?" asked the magistrate.

"No, I haven't got it ready," was the reply.

"Better get it. It is time we did something with Michael," returned the court.

This didn't look like good business to Mike and he started in on his defence.

"I wasn't very full last night," he declared. "I had only a few drinks. I don't have to be very drunk to get fined, do I?" "Why, your honor, I've been fetched in here sober and turned out, too."

"That was fair wasn't it?" asked the court with a smile. "You are a very familiar figure in this court. I haven't got your record or you would go down to jail. Ten dollars and costs this time. I don't want to see you here again."

debentures totalling $396,000 without a ripple—a far greater amount than the city hall requires. And London's debentures today are more sought after than those of Toronto.

What's Behind "Blue-Ruin" Talk?

The balance of the opposition has taken the form of a blue-ruin campaign—a cry of despair regarding the city's financial condition, its taxes, its debts, its schools, its borrowing power.

It has come from the London Free Press, acting as the mouth-piece of a group of petty ward politicians.

The Advertiser has demonstrated during the last two days the personal motive behind this sudden cry.

Until last week the Free Press believed in London's prosperity. The Free Press believed London could not only build the city hall, but the Springbank dam as well.

The change came only when the schemers determined that Wenige must not be allowed to have the credit of building the city hall. To knock Wenige, they are knocking London.

It Is Bigger Than Wenige.

From The Advertiser's point of view Mayor Wenige has nothing to do with it. This city hall proposition is bigger than Wenige—bigger than any man in London. It is a matter of vital necessity for London's prestige and London's growth. It is London's job today.

If Wenige can do it—and he can—then let him. But get the job done. And if the Free Press prefers the name of Ald. Billy Wilson, their mayoralty candidate, on the corner stone, then let them put it there. Never mind the corner-stone and the leather medals. Think of London. Get the job done and get at something else.

BUILDERS' CLASS SALE.

Under the auspices of the Builders' Club, the Talbot Street Baptist Church, the sale and sale of home-made cooking and fancy work, held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Marshall Miller of Maple street, was a splendid success. The pretty articles of fancy work, aprons and suggestions for Christmas giving, brought a ready sale, and many of the members of the club, Arthur Wright, was seriously ill in Victoria Hospital, and the treasurer was instructed to send him some flowers with the best wishes of the class for his speedy recovery. It was also decided that the members of the club would keep in touch with him regularly by writing him. W. Boyce gave a talk on "Boys' Work, Girls' Work and the Church." The meeting was closed with prayer, and a half hour of organized games was enjoyed.

LITERARY PROGRAM.

In connection with the Canadian Book Week, a splendid musical and literary program was arranged for the week's regular meeting of the B. Y. P. U. of Talbot Street Baptist Church. Music was provided by Mr. Allen and his pupils on the Hawaiian steel guitar, and the literary program included a paper on the life of Pauline Johnston by Miss Mary Fichbourne, and on the works of Robert W. Service by Marion Ivison. Miss Pearl Blackwell, convener of the social committee, was in charge of the serving of refreshments at the conclusion of the program.

PREPARATORY SERVICES.

KING STREET L. A.

Arrangements were made for the play, "Only 38" at the meeting of the King Street Presbyterian Ladies' Aid yesterday afternoon. The play is a musical comedy success, produced by musical arrangement with Samuel French, and takes place the first week in December, under the direction of Vincent Perry. It was also decided that the members of the club would keep in touch with him regularly by writing him. W. Boyce gave a talk on "Boys' Work, Girls' Work and the Church." The meeting was closed with prayer, and a half hour of organized games was enjoyed.

GIFT SHOWER FOR BAZAAR.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Club of St. David's Church, a successful gift shower was held recently in the parish hall in aid of the coming bazaar. Many useful and dainty articles for the various booths of the bazaar were donated. The refreshments served at the conclusion were under the direction of Mrs. Wilton.

DUNDAS CENTRE BAZAAR.

The Ladies' Aid of Dundas Centre Methodist Church attained splendid success with their annual bazaar, which was held last Thursday. Decorations were arranged in a Christmas scheme. SPECIAL PRAYER SERVICE.

A special prayer service was held recently in Wesley Hall by the W. M. S. of the First Methodist Church. Mrs. J. S. Barnard led the meeting and the sub-leaders who conducted a short service in connection with each branch of the mission work were Mrs. Harrison, for China; Mrs. J. B. Hunter, for Japan; and Mrs. W. G. Young, for Canada. Miss Florence Gurd dealt with the work of the Mission Circles and Bands. During the afternoon, Mrs. William Vendall acted as pianist. In the prayer meeting service in the evening, the pastor, Rev. J. B. Hunter, continued to develop the theme which had been the basis of the afternoon meeting, that of prayer for the missionary endeavors.

EMPRESS AVENUE CONCERT.

With the young musicians in splendid form, and the assistance of three excellent artists, the annual concert given last Wednesday by the Sunday school orchestra of the Empress Avenue Methodist Church was a great success. Among the several numbers given by the orchestra possibly the most thoroughly enjoyed was the rendering of Haydn's "Toy Symphony." The program included readings by Miss Lila Grant; solos by Miss A. Goddard, soprano; and Mrs. J. B. Hunter, alto; and selections by the orchestra male quartet composed of Messrs. Smetzer, Lucas, Robinson and Rossier. Following the concert, the young men of the orchestra entertained the young ladies at a banquet served in the Sunday school room.

Custom Duties and Taxes Show Decided Increase

Total of Collections for Past Month Is Greater by $5,525 Than for November, 1922.

A substantial increase in the customs duties and taxes over November, 1922, is shown in the cashier's report of the local customs house for the last month. The report shows a small decrease in sales tax on imports amounting to $286.66 over November of last year. A large decrease of $6,660.39 is recorded in the domestic excise tax. The decrease on sales tax on imports shows that less American goods have come into the city for this month than the same month of last year. Customs excise tax and excise totals show a slight decline.

The grand total for collection for the month is $284,706.84, which is an increase of $5,525.23 over the return for the same month last year. Last month an increase of $15,164 was recorded in the domestic excise tax over October, 1922. For November a decrease of $6,660 is recorded over the same month of last year.

Since May the cashier's report has shown an increase for every month with the exception of this month, when moderate declines are recorded. The monthly report for November, 1923, showing the comparative figures for the same month of last year, is as follows:

Import duties	$114,554.04	$108,941.92

MORALE PLAYS BIG PART IN FIGHTING WHITE PLAGUE

Dr. H. W. Hill Says Patients With Courage Recover Easiest.

SELF-DENIAL NEEDED

"Morale plays a tremendous part in fighting tuberculosis," Dr. H. W. Hill, dean of the Institute of Public Health, says that patients with the courage to follow instructions—that is, to deny themselves many of the little luxuries, stand a far better chance of getting well than those whose morale breaks under the strain of self denial.

Acting on the theory of psychological effect on sufferers from the disease, doctors at local sanatoriums regard the maintenance of a cheerful morale among the patients as highly as they do the beneficent effect of the sun and pure air, and other recognized cures for the disease.

It is among women they find their most stubborn cases, and particularly the young girl just reaching the period when the love of one young man means everything to her. Denied his company, her courage fails with frequently grave results.

Less care is necessary with the men. Either in bravado or in actual desire to belittle their affliction the men laugh the days away. But this cheerfulness is futile if not coupled with a determination to follow doctor's orders, Dr. Hill says. Morale is a big thing. It means the ability to "take one's medicine," and in spite of numerous restraints, placed on one's desire for entertainment to accept trial with forbearance and patience.

This was a case in point," Dr. Hill said. "Two women were in myron sanatorium. One followed orders, and the other insisted on making Christmas gifts for her friends because it helped her spirit. Well, the woman who lay on her back without amusement of any kind got well. The other died."

Another instance where failed desire played a part in a relapse was the case of a patient who had been promised a wild duck by a friend who was going hunting. The patient promised again and again, but the duck never came. Other patients began to "kid" the disappointed man, "kid" being a slang term for joke. The man, who had been told of the long sun porch. While he was out visiting one day they placed a wooden duck under his covers, and he did not to be made the butt of a joke, sent it to his promising friends, with the information that the duck was a little tough. Then he suffered a relapse. He died, and his morale was shattered. He required a course of treatment to accept his disappointment in the stoical sense.

It would be unwise to circulate the information that optimism and good cheer play a definite part in curing tuberculosis or any other disease," Dr. Hill explained. "The optimism gospel does more harm than good, because patients are inclined to think it means entertainment of a physical nature. Optimism is a fine thing if combined with absolute rest. But obviously, it requires a courageous nature to be cheerful and at the same time to be denied every pleasure."

"The mind plays an immense part in all disease. Take shell-shock. Many people are shell-shocked who never went overseas. They get the impression that they were shocked, and perhaps tell friends and acquaintances that they were overseas, feeling ashamed they were not. The impression gradually works on them and they actually become nervous wrecks and imagine that they were really in France fighting. Then they become 'shell-shocked.'"

The cure of any disease is for the patient to lay out a definite program of denial and be determined to follow it through to the last. Broken hearts are the result of undermined morale. "A patient should make up his mind not to be broken-hearted, come what may."

GIRL CAGE CHAMPS HONORED BY PRINCIPAL

Miss Pearl Fortner of Riverview Five is Presented With Cup.

Principal Newhouse of Riverview School and Mrs. Newhouse, entertained members of the girls' basketball team of the school, who were successful in winning the interschool championship for 1923, at their home on Riverview avenue last evening. During the evening, Miss Pearl Fortner, captain of the team, Miss Pearl Fortner, with the cup, Miss Fortner, who has successfully captured two winning teams this season, her indoor basketball team also winning the cup, responded fittingly to the principal's address.

A jolly program of games and music was enjoyed following a banquet served by the hostess. The guests included the members of the team: Misses Pearl Fortner, Edna McCormick, Daisy Fisher, Ethel Fullerton, Roslyn Fairies, Ada Jury, Florence Jones, Marian Tanner, Rhea Jamieson and Rose Clue. NEW U. S. BATTLESHIP PUT INTO COMMISSION

West Virginia Claimed To Be Nearest Perfect Fighting Ship to Date.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The battleship West Virginia was commissioned at the Norfolk navy yard today.

Embodying all the knowledge of naval architecture and protective devices gained during and since the battle of Jutland, the big fighting craft, a sister ship of the Maryland and the Colorado, takes the place of the North Dakota, which is to be scrapped under the provisions of the Washington conference naval treaty. The West Virginia's complement consists of 1,400 officers and men and she carries eight 16-inch, 45-calibre guns, twelve 5-inch guns, two 21-inch submerged torpedo tubes, and eight 3-inch anti-aircraft guns. She is 624 feet long, 97 feet, 3½ inches across at the water line, has a draft of 31½ feet, and makes a speed of 21 knots.

It would be unwise to circulate the information that optimism and good cheer play a definite part in curing tuberculosis or any other disease," Dr. Hill explained. Mrs. H. Robert Wells, English Harbour, Trinity Bay, Nfld., writes:

ASK ALDERMAN WILSON TO "ELIMINATE" HIMSELF FROM THE PLATFORM

The official termination of the municipal campaign from the public platform was fittingly observed last night, with spectacular mass meetings in the Riverview and Lorne Avenue schoolhouses. Fireworks displays featured both performances.

Ald. William Wilson was the principal entertainer at the former institution, while "Dinny" Tallant, sparring for a seat on the public utilities commission, added his bit to a well-balanced bill at the Lorne Avenue.

Mayor Wenige contributed "1923 pep" to both sessions, while prospective councilmen and aspirants for the biggest spending body in the city—the school board—filled in between the acts.

Both gatherings were well attended. In this respect no better had been noted since the campaign opened, and they rivaled, in fact, the spectacular days of the last fight. Edwin Smith, retiring school trustee and prospective aldermanic representative for ward four, "ran the gauntlet" at the Boyle Memorial show—emerging smiling and confident.

Ald. Wilson had two very serious objections to make—one that he had not 15 minutes in which to debate with Mayor Wenige that ancient and honorable subject—the new city hall, and the other, that he had been unjustly accused by R. L. Burke, fellow candidate, of having been asleep during the last city council session.

Following one of his "refreshing" addresses, Ald. Wilson asked if the mayor wanted to ask any questions. "I'm just the boy who can answer them, too," he added.

Voted Against. His worship promptly asked him

An Awful Attack of Pimples All Over His Face

Pimples breaking out on the face and other parts of the body is a sure sign that the blood is not in proper shape.

While the skin is the object of the attack the real seat of the disease is in the blood on account of the entire circulation being poisoned.

Burdock Blood Bitters quickly and effectually banishes pimples and all other skin diseases as it goes right to the root of the trouble by cleansing and enriching the blood.

Mr. Conrad Anderson, Ketchikan, Alaska, writes: "A year ago I had an awful attack of pimples. They broke out all over my face and I could not get rid of them in any way. One day a friend told me about your Burdock Blood Bitters and let me have a bottle he had to spare. After using it I noticed a change, so I bought three more bottles, and now I don't know there is such a thing as pimples."

More Fireworks. Pyrotechnics also featured the addresses of the candidates for the public utilities commission, Phillip Pocock, Ald. Peter Watt and Dennis Tallant locking horns on several matters requiring explanation. Leading questions were asked by Mr. Pocock of both the other candidates.

Mr. Pocock, after having spoken briefly relative to his stewardship on the commission since 1910, asked Ald. Watt to state whether he was a supporter of public ownership or not, in view of remarks made at previous times on this question in which Mr. Watt was quoted as saying that "there was public ownership already."

He then asked Mr. Tallant to explain why the housing commission had lost some $25,000, and whether it would not lose a further similar amount. He stated that if Mr. Tallant had not made a success of the housing commission, he should not be elected to the utilities.

Ald. John T. May was also absent. C. E. Mitchell presided.

PLEASSED TO BE BACK By ISOBEL C. ARMSTRONG. Special To The Advertiser.

Halifax, Nov. 30.—Halifax, warden of the north, emerged from the mists of early morning to give Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King a royal welcome his first day back in Canada. Today at noon throngs of citizens and numbers of visitors from outside points in the province gathered for the historic old province ballroom for the reception tendered the minister. In the receiving line with him in the legislative council chamber were Hon. E. H. Armstrong, premier of Nova Scotia, Mayor Murphy of Halifax, Hon. Dr. Beland, Hon. E. M. MacDonald, Hon. R. E. Finn and Hon. W. J. O'Hearn, attorney-general of Nova Scotia. Amongst the scores who received a genial smile and cordial handshake from Mr. Mackenzie King were practically all the members of the provincial government. The legislative council and legislative assembly. The Nova Scotia federal members and their wives.

Looking down from the walls were the paintings of Sir Charles Hastings Lloyd, Sir Fenwick Williams, Sir Robert Boscawen and other prominent figures in the earlier history of the province. The fact that during the past hundred years the scene of the official welcome home to the prime minister had furnished the stage for many notable events of national significance. Within the walls of the council chamber, members of Canada's governor-general have been sworn into office after landing at Halifax.

Premier Welcomes Premier. Giving a brief address of welcome, Premier E. H. Armstrong commented upon the distinction with which the prime minister had represented Canada at both imperial and economic conferences and the delight felt by the province as well as the city. He had accepted the invitation to make Halifax his port of entry, on his return from England. Mayor Murphy added the tribute, "No single utterance of the prime minister has been such as to permit the slightest criticism." Responding Mr. Mackenzie King referred to the fact that he had experienced at the imperial conference in observing the proud position occupied by Canada as the senior Dominion in the British Empire. "We have had much hospitality extended to us during the past two months," he continued, "but there is no hospitality like that of one's own country, and my desire is to be under the providence of God, and with his guidance, I may be able to place what I have of effort and service at my country's call."

While Halifax slept at 5:30 o'clock in the morning, the signal was sent out that the Montclair, which had diverted its course to permit the prime minister to land, was at the harbor entrance. Like a ghost the tender Minoc slipped out through the fog to take him ashore, carrying a reception committee of two, Hon. R. E. Finn, member for Halifax, and Gordon Isnor, president of the Halifax County Liberal Association.

Glad To Get Home. Though it was only 6 o'clock when they reached the liner, Mr. Mackenzie King was ready and waiting, looking vigorous, happy, and well rested after his weighty responsibilities. "The pleasant part of the whole journey is this getting home!" was the first exclamation. The prime minister drove immediately from the wharf to the Halifax Hotel, and retired to his suite to rest until the reception hour, spending the afternoon quietly also in preparation to address a mass meeting tonight in the Casino Theatre, in the interests of George Redmond, Liberal candidate in the by-election. He leaves Saturday morning for Ottawa.

More Fireworks. Pyrotechnics also featured the addresses of the candidates for the public utilities commission, Phillip Pocock, Ald. Peter Watt and Dennis Tallant locking horns on several matters requiring explanation. Leading questions were asked by Mr. Pocock of both the other candidates.

Mr. Pocock, after having spoken briefly relative to his stewardship on the commission since 1910, asked Ald. Watt to state whether he was a supporter of public ownership or not, in view of remarks made at previous times on this question in which Mr. Watt was quoted as saying that "there was public ownership already."

He then asked Mr. Tallant to explain why the housing commission had lost some $25,000, and whether it would not lose a further similar amount. He stated that if Mr. Tallant had not made a success of the housing commission, he should not be elected to the utilities.

Ald. John T. May was also absent. C. E. Mitchell presided.

SIX MEET DEATH AS AUTO GOES OVER EMBANKMENT Associated Press Despatch. Philadelphia, Nov. 30.—The list of dead as a result of an automobile accident early yesterday near the entrance to Fairmount Park was increased to six by the death last night of John Maines. Five other members of the party, three men and two women, died shortly after their car crashed through a guard rail protecting an air opening in a Reading Railroad tunnel, plunged 35 feet to the tracks below and was crushed by a milk train a moment later.

All the victims were residents of Philadelphia. They were on their way home from a dance when the accident occurred.

DOUBTS LOW POSSIBILITY TO AID WHEAT FARMERS Associated Press Despatch. Washington, Nov. 30.—Representative Haugen, chairman of the house committee on agriculture, who reached Washington today, expressed doubt whether it would be possible to pass any legislation this winter for the relief of the wheat farmers.

Mr. Haugen said the wide difference of opinion as to what should be done, even among the farmers themselves, made any important action almost impossible. He added that the committee on agriculture would consider the question and try to agree on a feasible plan.

RECORD-BREAKING COMEDY COMES TO GRAND THURSDAY

"Just Married" With Splendid Company Will Appear
One Day Only.

HONEYMOON FARCE

This city will be privileged to see one of Jules Hurlig and the Messrs.
Shubert's notable productions with the same identical cast of characters and the same identical presentation which won for it the unqualified approval of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago during long triumphant engagements. The play referred to is "Just Married," the famous laughing success written by Adelaide Matthews and Anna Nichols, authors of "Scrambled Wives" and "Nightie Night." It is a honeymoon farce comedy in three acts.

The story of "Just Married" centers about a gently stimulated young man who gets aboard the French line steamship Lafayette by mistake just before she sails from Bordeaux, France, for New York. There are several oddy-odd assorted couples aboard, old and young, married and unmarried—and some honeymooners, willing and unwilling. From the time the stimulated gentleman comes aboard, without any effort or will on his part, they are all so bedevilled, scrambled and messed up that there is apparently no untangling their difficulties. There seems to be only two ways out—either the ship must be put back to Bordeaux or the young man must be thrown overboard. Things come right eventually after three hours of hearty laughter, however, and the voyage peacefully proceeds. "Just Married" comes to the Grand next Thursday, one day only, matinee and evening, with the only company presenting the comedy, and includes George Snyder, Wallace

Ray, Will Chase, George Paige, Yates
Price, John Riley, Robert Barclay, Walter Baker, Fred Atkins, Joseph Atwood, Ruth Thomas, Constance Cameron, Therese Quadri, Lillian Paige, Jane May and Marie Ainsworth. Seats on sale Monday at 9

QUEENS OF PARIS SPARKLING REVUE AT GRAND MONDAY

Splendid Music and Comedy Promised by Excellent Company.

EXCEPTIONAL CHORUS

Jacobs and Jermon will present
"Queens of Paris" next Monday.
Tuesday and Wednesday with daily matinees at the Grand as one of their new Columbia Burlesque offerings.
John G. Jermon has personally staged a show that promises to best fulfill the requirements of family entertainment and has peopled its twelve scenes with talented comedians, pretty principal girls and a score of lively chorists who know how to sing and can really dance. L. B.
Hamp, the featured comedian, wrote the burlesque book and Ruby Cowan has supplied some lively music to begule the ear while the agile ensemble sets a lively dancing pace.

The work of L. B. Hamp may be confidently depended upon to keep the laughs rolling along. Hamp is the only comedian in burlesque that affects Swedish dialect, and his methods of drill provocatives to laughter are original and effective.
His assistants in comedy scenes will be Bob Startzman, a specialist in black-face comedy; Jack Callahan, eccentric comedian; Lew Denny, straight man and Arthur Young, a character delineator.

Special offerings of vaudeville will have the Six Rockets of Belgium as an extra feature. This is an act imported direct for the present tour of "Queens of Paris." Their method of producing harmony from unusual and unexpected sources is said to be not alone to be entertaining but is made laughable through their devices for comedy. The Frazier Trio are another set of specialists of musical inclination, but their forte is to reproduce Hawaiian music in native style.

Girls, pretty, and a lot of them, will swarm on the stage in many musical interludes, singing and dancing the while and showing a frequen-ly changed and gorgeous display of new-fashioned gowns and style con-coits. Leading the ensemble in the numbers as well as offering individual contributions of song and dance, Rose Rosella, Gertie Beck and

10-YEAR-OLD COMPOSER IN PARIS TO CONDUCT HIS OWN ORATORIO

Rota Rinaldi to Perform Today in Producing "The Childhood of St.
John the Baptist."

Unspoiled by the fuss made over him by women interviewers, and very little excited by the thought of his pratorio to be performed tomorrow in the presence of 2,000 people, including the principal music critics of Paris, Rota Rinaldi, 10 years old, the composer of "The Childhood of St.
John the Baptist," has been dividing his time today between football, the piano and rehearsals.

perched on a high stool that enables him to dominate the orchestra and chorus of 210 executants. Young Rota gets almost sulky when visitors come to talk to him or about him, and tries to hide from their inquisitiveness.

So his mother has to do the talking. She explains that the little prodigy began to compose at the age of eight. Everything inspired him:
butterflies dancing over flower beds; sunsets, and all his childish joys and sorrows seemed to sing in his mind and command expression.

He wrote down melodies as naturally as he breathed. At 10 he studied in the Conservatoire in a class of young men of 20, but he went too fast for them. It was then that the boy began his oratorio which he is said to have completed without the counsel of anyone.

Another infant prodigy has been discovered in Paris in the person of Pietro Mazzini, who is not yet six years old, but interprets Chopin, Beethoven, Mozart and Haydn on the piano with the comprehension and virtuosity of a mature musician, as well as with an individuality of his own. His childish face resembles strangely the mask of Beethoven, with the deep eyes, corners of the mouth drawn down by acute premature thought and emotion.

Asked who is his favorite composer, Pietro replied "Chopin." Why? "Because he is always beautifully saddened. The boy played the other evening on a piano that belonged to Chopin and the critics marveled at his touch and feeling.

BLIND MUSICIANS HAVE WONDERFUL MEMORIES

They Perform Feats of Memorization That Would Daunt Men With Good Eyesight.

Blind musicians have so long accustomed us to their remarkable powers of quick memorization that the following feats, which are vouchered for by the National Institute for the Blind, will be more readily accredited.

Fred Turner, one of the most accomplished blind musicians in Scotland, recently memorized the whole of Bach's "St. Matthew Passion," and in four months trained his choir and himself accompanied the entire work on the organ. Sinclair Logan, the blind composer and organist, memorized Somervell's "The Passion of Christ"—a fairly complicated cantata occupying 75 minutes in performance—trained his choir and accompanied a successful rendering all inside the period of less than two months, during which he was working under the stress of other heavy memorization work for an important recital in Liverpool for the National Institute for the Blind, in addition to his normal professional duties.

To carry in the memory Beethoven's thirty-two pianoforte sonatas as William Wolstenholme does, and the entire forty-eight preludes and fugues of Bach, as in the case of H. V. Spenser—two blind musicians resident in London—would seem no light achievement, and yet these form but a small portion of the range of work pigeonholed in the mental storehouse of these gifted men.

ONE WAY OF DOING IT.

A church chorister on his way to service with a volume of music under his arm was overtaken by a visitor to the locality. "What have you got there?" the latter asked the singer. "Zum of Handel's music," Zur was the reply. "We are going to sing it today," "Handel?" queried the other. "Don't you find him difficult?" "Why, yes, we did so at first,"
was the answer, "but we altered him a bit and it goes very well now."

STRIVE TO RID NEW YORK OF UNCLEAN STAGE PLAYS

Associated Press Despatch.
New York, Nov. 20. — Concerted action by seven agencies now acting independently to stop "indecent" on the New York stage is sought by the police play investigating committee.
In an attempt to organize all the agencies into one body, Deputy Police Commissioner Leach, chairman of the committee, has called a meeting of the groups for next week.
"Our investigation," said Commissioner Leach, has proved to us that the stage is being corrupted this season to an unprecedented extent by its nude revues and unclean dramas.

Jury Finds Topping Fired Shots Causing Death of Miss Geraldine Durston

Accused Sits Motionless, Appearing Uninterested in the Proceedings.

CONSTABLE TESTIFIES

George Cook Forced To Rest Frequently While Giving Evidence.

"That the deceased Geraldine Durston came to her death from gunshot wounds at the hands of Clarence Topping."

Above is the verdict of the coroner's jury at the Durston inquest in the police station last night, brought in exactly seven minutes after the courtroom was cleared of spectators and witnesses.

The inquest was in charge of Coroner Cameron Wilson, with the witnesses, Dr. Homer Black, Mr. and Mrs. George Cook and Constable Walter Harpur were questioned by J. G. Gillanders, who acted for the crown.

"Evidence given by the various witnesses corresponded in every detail with the news stories carried by The Advertiser since Geraldine Durston, the eighteen-year-old Watford girl, was shot by her lover, Clarence Topping."

Topping is still without counsel.
The inquest was delayed by the crown in the hope that J. M. Mc-Evoy would turn up to look after Topping's interests, but as no lawyer appeared before the inquest, Coroner
Wilson decided to proceed.

Topping appeared to be the least interested individual in the courtroom. He seldom glanced at any of the witnesses and showed no sign of recognition when Mr. Cook nodded slightly in his direction.

When the Cooks and Constable Harpur told of the bullets fired by Topping, the prisoner showed no emotion, but gazed calmly at the wall in front of him. He yawned slightly several times, and did not even look at Mr. Cook when the latter staggered in the witness-box as he gave his evidence. The fact that he was represented by counsel did not seem to worry him in the least. The prisoner was certainly more at ease than when he appeared in police court yesterday morning and was reminded a week on a charge of murder.

Died From Peritonitis.

Dr. Homer Black, who performed the autopsy, stated Miss Durston died from peritonitis caused by perforation of the bowels by bullet wounds. Dr. Black produced the bullets taken from Miss Durston and they corresponded with a bullet in Topping's pocket when searched by the police at the police station.

George Cook, 318 York street, at whose house the shooting occurred, told of Topping's visit to his house a week ago Thursday night and on Friday morning. Mr. Cook was in an extremely nervous condition and had to rest frequently as he gave his evidence. He told of Miss Durston mentioning that "Topping" had threatened "if I can't have you nobody else will." Miss Durston had run her hands over Topping's clothing Thursday night while he stood with his hands up. She told witness she thought she felt a gun on him.

Witness was in the kitchen when he heard two shots in rapid succession from his bedroom. Constable Harpur, who had arrived in response to a telephone call, brushed past him

MARRIES MRS. CARUSO.

Captain Ernest A. Ingram of Warwickshire, England, who married Mrs. Enrico Caruso, widow of the

They met in England last August.

Park Benjamin, of New York, married Caruso on August 20, 1918. The on the way to the scene of the shooting.

"I saw Harpur's gun flash, and I saw the figure of Miss McNaughton come from nowhere. She was directly in the line of fire," said
Mr. Cook with deep emotion.

"Mrs. Cook practically repeated the evidence of her husband, and told of being in the room for a few minutes with Miss McNaughton and Miss Durston before the shooting. There was no loud talking before the shots were fired. While she was in the room with Topping and the girls the former said to Miss Durston: 'If you don't come with me to Watford, I'll put an end to both of us.'"

"I said, 'Dan, you are a low down coward. You haven't got the backbone of a jellyfish,' declared Mrs.
Cook.

Walked To Kitchen.

After the shooting, Miss Durston walked to the kitchen and said to Mrs. Cook, "Frances, if I thought he'd done that I'd have gone to Watford with him." She sat and talked to Mrs. Cook for 10 minutes before she walked to her bedroom.

Constable Harpur stated he had been on the London police force for 12 years and one day. He told of being called to the Cook house. Mr.

Cook had just entered the kitchen after pleading with Topping to leave the house without any trouble when the officer heard two shots in quick succession and then another one.
"I moved toward the bedroom door and another shot rang out," said the constable. "Mr. Cook was just behind me, and when I got to the bedroom the door was halfway open. I couldn't see much when I got to the door. It was a dull, dark morning, and the only light lit was in the kitchen. I saw two forms in the room, one a man and the other appeared to be a woman. As I got within a foot of the door the man half turned in my direction and a shot was fired.
I saw the bullet mark on the wall moment. I thought he was firing at me. It was 11 feet from where I was to where he was standing.

"After I shot something attracted my attention, and I thought he was getting away. I went to the front door, which was wide open, and a woman told me a man was running down the street. I ran after him and found it was Mr. Cook going to telephone for more help and a doctor.
I went back and found Topping standing by the bed. I told him to drop his gun, and he said it was on the bed."

The constable said the first he knew that Miss McNaughton was shot was when he saw her lying on the kitchen floor after taking Topping to that room. She must have left the room when he was following
Mr. Cook, the constable thought.

Harpur produced Topping's revolver, a wicked-looking little .25-calibre affair, about 5 inches long, with a tiny barrel. The bullet-mark on the west wall of the bedroom was produced by the shot he fired, in Harpur's opinion, while the mark on the east wall also looked as "if it were mine," Harpur said. A thorough search was made for the bullet he fired, but it couldn't be found. He didn't know how many people were in the room when he rushed there, but he thought there were only two.
He was greatly surprised to see a girl lying on the kitchen floor.

OVERHEATED PIPE CAUSES FIRE.

Glencoe, Nov. 20.—The firemen had a run at eight o'clock yesterday morning to the residence of Mrs. T.

An overheated stovepipe started a fire in the partition between two rooms, which was difficult to get at.
The fire was finally overcome before much damage was done.

The Bartlett-Scandrett Nuptials Are Solemnized

St. James' Anglican Church is Scene of Pretty Wedding Ceremony Performed by Rev. T. A. Symington.

St. James' Anglican Church, South London, was the scene of one of the smartest weddings of the season this afternoon, when Florence Gwendolyn, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard H. Scandrett was married to William Taylor Bartlett, son of the late P. H. Bartlett. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. A. Symington, of Knox Presbyterian Church.

The church was artistically decorated with quantities of mauve and golden mums. Palms and ferns, combined with oak leaves banked the chancel steps, and the altar was adorned with mauve and golden pom-poms. Clusters of mums tied with streamers of mauve, marked the guest pews, and the prie dieu where the ceremony was performed was decked with Mary lilies, tied at the side. Tall standards of shaggy mums were arranged at either side.

The bridal party entered the church, promptly at four o'clock, to the strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus played by Mr. Charles Percy. The pretty young bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an exquisite gown of white crepe de maine, brocaded in velvet, fashioned in long straight lines, with a graceful drape caught at the right side with orange blossoms. The sleeves were short and a court train of satin, heavily embroidered with silk and lined with shell pink fell from the shoulders, where it was caught with pearl ornaments. Her veil of tulle was arranged with rose point lace in front, with the orange blossoms worn by the bride's mother on her wedding day, arranged under the veil at the back. She carried a shower of butterfly roses, orchids and lily of the valley.

The bride's only attendant was Miss Doris Belton, who acted as bridesmaid. Miss Belton made a pretty yficture in a bouffant frock of lavender taffeta, covered with gold silk cloth. It was fashioned with a short tight bodice, with ruchings of gold on the full skirt, which was bordered in French flowers. She also wore a quaint poke bonnet of gold cloth, with a streamer of gold ribbon falling to the hem of her gown at the right side. She carried a Colonial bouquet of violets. Gold slipper shoes completed her costume. Mr. Grant Fisher acted as best man. Mr. Wilmer Scandrett, brother of the bride and Mr. Philip Bartlett acted as ushers.

A reception was held later at the home of the bride on Craig street. The reception room, where the bride and groom received with Mrs. Scandrett, was decorated with white and mauve mums, banked with palms and ferns. A buffet supper was served, and the bride's table, which was adorned with butterfly roses, was centered with the bride's cake, surrounded with roses and ferns. Bud vases holding sweethearts roses marked the corners. Mrs. Scandrett wore a smart gown of russet crepe.

Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett left later on a honeymoon to Asheville, N.C., the bride traveling in a brown suit, with trimmings of brown squirrel, and a smart black hat. Upon their return they will reside in London.

Among the guests who numbered over 100 were many from out-of-town including:

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Scandrett,

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Scandrett, Mr. C. J. Scandrett, all of Toronto; who will be guests with Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Scandrett, Craig street; Mr. and Mrs. King Bartlett, Mr. Phil Bartlett, Mrs. J. H. Pearce, Miss Pearce, Miss King, Mr. and Mrs. W. Miss Harriet Pearce, Mrs. E. F. B. K. Pearce, Miss Helen Pearce and Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Kemp, and Mr. and Mrs. Eric Cochran, all of Toronto; Col. and Mrs. Cassius Belton of Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. Chester Belton, Miss Lillian Hayes, Mr. Hector Cowan, and Miss Eugenie McKee of Sarnia; and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Scandrett, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hodgson and Mr. Maurice Hodgson of Montreal.

HAD FIRST INTERVIEW WITH IRISH REBEL CHIEF

Dr. Edgar Dewitt Jones Will Address Canadian Club on Monday.

The visit to this city of Dr. Edgar Dewitt Jones of Detroit on Monday next will be an outstanding event. Dr. Jones comes to address the Women's Canadian Club on Monday afternoon in the Collegiate Institute auditorium on "The Ireland of Today." He is specially fitted to speak on this subject, having but recently returned from that country, where he was sent by the North American Newspaper Syndicate. While there he met practically all of the leaders of the various political groups and many of the literary celebrities. He spent an evening with George W. Russell, and had audiences with President Cosgrave and various members of his cabinet, as well as with Governor General Borden.

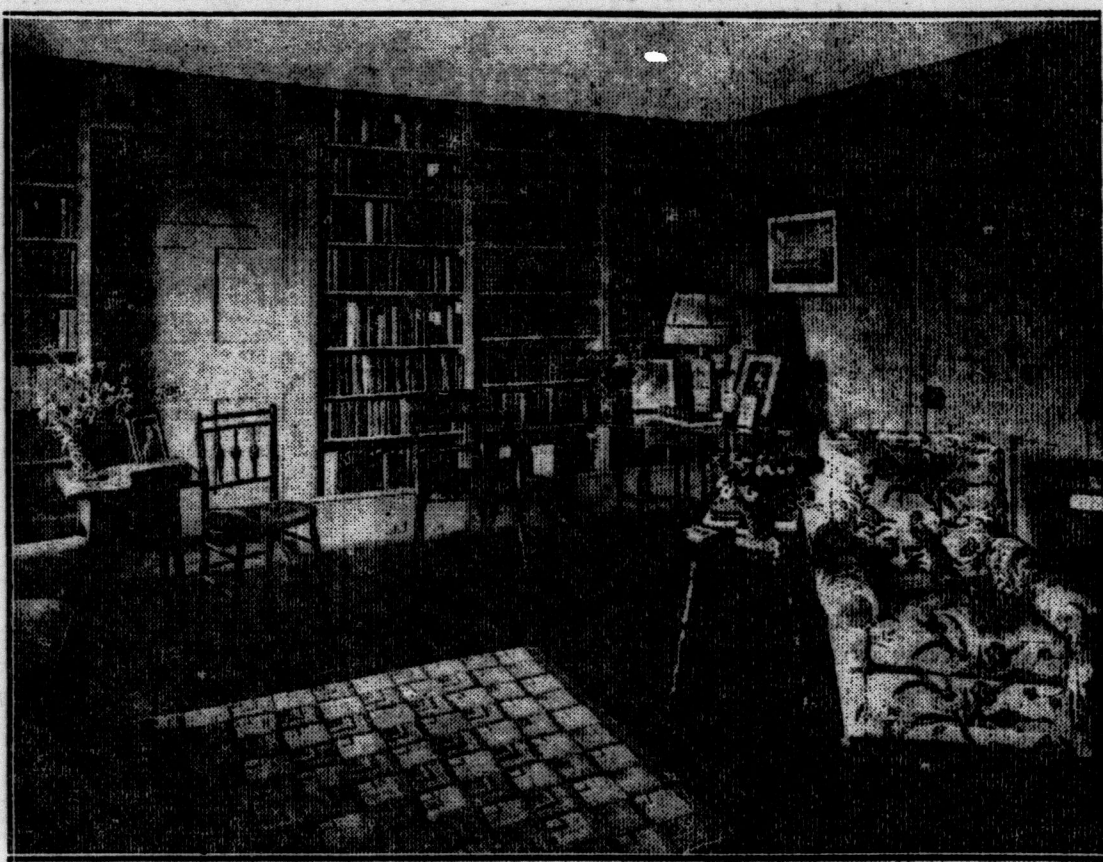

Of special interest was his interview with Eamon de Valera. On the night of Aug. 7, he met the distinguished rebel at the midnight hour in a secret meeting place in Dublin and interviewed him. After his arrest at Ennis, one week later, the publicity bureau of the Free State government said that Dr. Jones' interview was the first personal interview of Valera had given a press correspondent in eight months.

Dr. Jones, who is the author of many distinguished books, is the minister of the Central Christian Church of the Discipline of Christ in Detroit. He is of remote Irish ancestry, although a Texan by birth.

ONE SOURCE OF COAL WASTE.

An average steam locomotive is one of the most wasteful machines used at the present day. Of the coal put into the firebox, only an exceedingly small amount goes into useful work in moving the train. Nearly all the energy of the coal is wasted up the smokestack of the engine. With efficient coal generating station to produce electric current, and electric locomotives to move trains, two pounds of coal will do the work for which nine pounds are now used.

WEDDINGS

BROWN—MOORE.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Moore, 236 Wolfe street, was the scene of a pretty wedding last evening at 9 o'clock, when their only daughter, Dorothy Jane, was married to Audrey Kenneth Brown, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Following a buffet supper the bride and groom left for Detroit, and after a short honeymoon will take up their residence in St. Thomas.

McDONNELL—MACRAE.

The Church of the Sacred Heart at Bothwell was the scene of a pretty wedding this morning at 9 o'clock, when Janet Theresa MacRae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip B. The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, wore a gown of brown Canton crepe, beaded with a becoming brown and fawn hat with feather trimmings, and shoes to match. Her corsage was of opelia roses.

Nanny and Danny Escape and Are Off To See the Sunny South

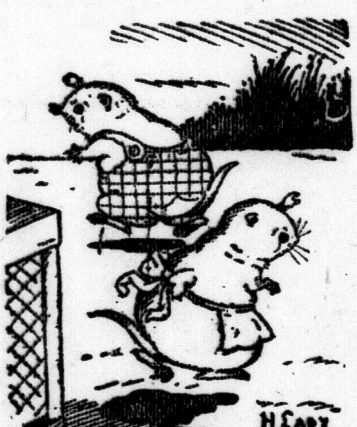

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

For several days the great man-bird remained shut in the shed into which it had been pushed the day of its arrival way down in the Sunny South. But the aviator didn't forget Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse. He had fastened the door of the little cupboard open just wide enough for Danny and Nanny to go in and out. In front of this he had placed the cage, with the door in this open, so that they could run into the cage. Every day he visited them and talked to them and showed them to his friends, and never once did he forget to keep them supplied with plenty of food. He showed that he was fond of them, and they had grown to be fond of him.

Then one day he carelessly moved the cage and forgot to put it back close up to the door opening into the little cupboard. After he had closed the door of the shed and gone away Danny poked his head out of the little cupboard, and right away discovered that that cage wasn't close up, and that he could squeeze out past it.

"Come, Nanny, come!" he squeaked in great excitement. "We can get out!"

Of course, Nanny came at once. She followed right at Danny's heels. At last they were free. Yes, sir, they were free. They scrambled out of that great man-bird and down to the ground. Then they ran all about inside that shed. They were looking for a place to get out. It didn't take them long to discover that that shed was built on sand and had no floor. Danny began digging, and soon he had a little hole right under one wall. In almost no time at all he was outside. Nanny followed him. They each drew a long breath. They were no longer prisoners. They were free. They could go where they pleased and do what they pleased. It was a glorious feeling. For a while they could think of nothing else. They just sat outside that shed, listening to the strange sounds and looking at the strange sights.

So after hesitating a moment or two she hurried after Danny.

Right back of the shed strange plants were growing. They grew so closely that any one as small as a Meadow Mouse could remain quite hidden under them from the sharp eyes.

"Come on!" cried Danny. "Let's go see what the Sunny South is like." Nanny, who was more timid, hesitated. "We'll get lost," said she. "We don't know what dangers there may be down here. We don't know what enemies to watch out for. I'm afraid, Danny."

"Nonsense!" cried Danny. "What is the good of being afraid? We can always come back here to our nest in the big man-bird if we want to. I don't believe there is anything to be afraid of. Anyway, I'm going to find out. You can stay here if you want to."

But Nanny didn't want to stay alone. Staying alone in this strange land would be worse than going adventuring. So, after hesitating a moment or two, she hurried after Danny and was soon right at his heels.

EAT AND GET THIN

This is turning an old phrase face about, but modern methods of reducing fat have made this revision possible. If you are overweight and also averse to physical exertion, if you are like-wise fond of the table and still want to reduce your excess flesh several pounds, do this: Go to your druggist (or write the Marmolac Company, 462 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich.) and give him (or send them) one dollar. For this modest amount of money you must take after each meal and at bedtime until you begin to lose your fat steadily and easily. Then continue the treatment until your weight is what you desire. Marmolac Prescription Tablets are not only harmless but really beneficial to the general health. You don't need starvation diet or weakening exercises. Just go on eating what you like, leave exercising to the athletes, but take your little tablet faithfully, and without a doubt that flabby flesh will quickly take into itself wings, leaving behind it your natural self, neatly clothed in firm flesh and trim muscles.—Advt.

MRS. A. LITTLE HEAD OF GRENELL MISSION

Is Returned to Office at Annual Meeting—$1,726.72 Raised During the Year.

Mrs. Arthur Little was again elected president of the Grenell Mission at the annual meeting held yesterday afternoon at Cronyn Hall. The mission has just completed a most successful year, having forwarded to Labrador goods and money having a total value of $1,726.72. The objective for the year was $1,200 only. According to Mrs. Arthur Little's report given at the meeting at least $500 more than last year was raised. And already there is $40 promised from prospective new members to go into the funds of 1924.

The expenditure during the year was very small, $52.11 being paid for materials in connection with the hale and $71.97 for other expenses. The hale itself was valued at $392.65, and the actual money collected $941.25. In addition to this, the late Mrs. Reason's hale, shipped separately, was valued at $130. The visit of Dr. V. O. Nurse, Grenell to the city was a great inspiration to the mission and contributed toward the funds.

The officers elected for the coming year are: Honorary president, Mrs. Becher, senior; honorary vice-presidents, Mrs. W. J. Reid, Mrs. George Reid; president, Mrs. Arthur Little; vice-presidents, Mrs. Vining, Mrs. Donald McLean and Miss Shaw-Wood; treasurer, Mrs. Fox; assistant treasurer, Mrs. A. WOMEN and THE HOME

Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

Shall the Rich Old Maid Flout Convention and Propose Marriage?—Girlish Seventeen Who Wants to Marry Young Nineteen. Can a Man's Love Be Re-kindled?

"Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a rich, old maid. I have never married because I suspected that every man who came about me wanted my money, and because my relatives impressed it upon me that I would be the victim of a fortune hunter if I didn't watch out. Lately I have decided that it is better to take a chance on that than live the lonely, companionless life I do, which is bound to get more lonely, and more dreary, as I grow older.

Among my acquaintances is a fine, middle-aged man cultured, interesting, very congenial in all his tastes to mine, but who has never succeeded in business because he lacks the money-making instinct. I would like very much to marry him, but he will never propose to me, although he likes me very much, and we have been intimate friends for years, because my money makes a barrier between us. I have a notion to flout the conventions, and make him a marriage proposition. Why should his pride and a silly custom keep us from being happy together? Would it be very shocking if I popped the question to him? SPINSTER.

Answer: Go to it, sister, and Heaven send you the luck you deserve for having the courage to make a fight for your happiness instead of being the victim of a silly superstition that makes us pretend that a woman never thinks of a man until he happens to notice her.

So far as there being anything to apologize for in your taking the initiative in this case, you are doing a fine, brave, sensible thing. The man cannot ask you to marry him because his sense of honor will not permit him to seem to seek to be a sort of pensioner on you. But you can, with all dignity, invite him to share your good fortune with you. And while he has no money to give you, he has the things of the spirit to lavish upon you that are worth more than money.

Without him you would be a lonely, old woman in a lonely house. You would find no pleasure in travel, or in any solitary amusement. With him, you turn your empty house into a home, and you two can wander over the earth with every pleasure doubled by a pleasant companionship.

A rich woman, in my opinion, can spend her money in no way in which she will get so much out of it as in marrying the man she wants.

There is no more cruel wrong under which the feminine sex labors than being bound by the old traditions that forbade a woman the right to select her mate openly, and that made her do all her manœuvring to get a husband under cover. Every woman knows the man she wants to marry, and inasmuch as every wife is ten times as much married as her husband is, it is she who should be the "picker out," not he.

Of course within a few years it is going to be just as much a commonplace for a woman to pop the question to a man as it is for a man to propose to a woman, and like every means and position, who must be the pioneers in this final emancipation of the sex. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a young girl in my last year of high school, and my mother considers me as a school girl who is not capable of making a reasonable decision. I am seventeen years old, and in love with a boy who is nineteen. He is working hard, and saving his money in order that we may marry soon. He shows his love for me in every possible way, and I assure you that I know that we will always be happy together. My mother does not approve of my engagement. She will not allow my sweetheart to come to see me and tries to break up everything between us. Under these circumstances, I see my fiancé once in a while without her knowledge.

I am an unhappy girl. I should have my mother's sympathy and understanding, but all I get is cruel words, and hard dealings against the one I love, and am going to marry. What shall I do? B. R.

Answer: Why, B. R., if you will take my advice, you and your boy sweetheart will put off that wedding for three or four years until you are grown up, for, believe me, matrimony is a hard job for even men and women to tackle. It is no pastime for children.

No girl of seventeen and no boy of nineteen are ready to marry. They are in a state of evolution, with minds, and tastes that change every day, and they have no idea what they are going to develop into themselves, nor what sort of husbands and wives they are going to make.

The boy that a girl fancies at seventeen she wouldn't look at at twenty-two. The girl that a boy of nineteen is crazy to marry he wouldn't have on a bet when he is twenty-five. Of course, every boy and girl who are indulging in a case of cal-love think that this is not true of them, and that they are older and wiser and altogether different at their age from any other seventeen and nineteen-year-old kids, but they are fooling themselves. All humanity is cut out of the same bolt, and life keeps repeating itself.

All of us go through the measles and the mumps, and the whooping cough and having a passion for chocolate eclairs, and being in love in our teens, and most of us get safely over them, and look back and laugh upon our youthful experiences. So use a little sense, and have a little grain of humor about you. B. R. Look the matter in the face, and ask yourself why you should be different from all other women. Why shouldn't your taste change as other women's have? Also ask yourself what you would live on if you married a boy of nineteen. Get your mother to show you what it costs to run a house, and reflect that growing boys and girls need a lot of good food. Also consider that you will cut yourself out of all the fun of girlhood if you marry and settle down. You will be cooking and washing, and pushing a baby buggy while other girls are dancing and having pretty clothes, and free good times.

And here is something else to think about—waiting won't hurt. It will give the boy a chance to get ahead so that you won't be a burden on him. It will give you a chance to learn how to cook and sew so that you will be prepared to be a good wife, and if you love him, isn't strong enough to stand a three or four years' test, how is it going to stand the long test of life? Listen to your mother, and compromise with her. Tell her that if she won't oppose your engagement to the boy, you won't marry for three years. That leaves the matter in Cupid's hands. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—Will you tell me how to reawaken the love of a man who once cared for me, and now cares for me no more. ANXIOUS.

Answer: There is no way. A dead love is the dearest of all dead things. You cannot rekindle ashes. DOROTHY DIX. Copyright, 1923, by Public Ledger Company.

V. O. NURSE SHOWS MRS. GOOD TENT HOME

Splendid Work of the Order Again Emphasized by Visit to Patient.

The 6 o'clock whistles were blowing when Mrs. Good went up the steps of her house. Just as she put her key in the lock her neighbor, Mrs. Pearce, opened her door and invited her in to have her tea with her as she said, "I'm all alone, and am very curious to hear all about your day on the district with the Victorian Order nurse." Mrs. Good gladly accepted the invitation.

They were soon seated at the test table and Mrs. Good began: "This morning we went first to a little boy who has a broken leg which isn't doing very well and requires dressing every day then the nurse went to a patient and of all we went to an old lady who is bedridden."

"This afternoon we went out on the East Road. I do think those V. O. N. nurses are angels of mercy! Such a home I never saw. It was just a tent in the middle of a field. Before the winter comes the people hope to have a little house built, but in the meantime they are eating, sleeping and living under canvas. The poor woman we visited is to have her baby next month and the nurse went in to see if she had everything nearly ready. The nurse gave her a card with a list of things she will require for herself and the baby and also for the time of confinement and as she has been able to get each thing she has marked it off the list. She has nearly everything now."

"Are you going out to nurse tomorrow?" asked Mrs. Pearce. "No," replied Mrs. Good. "I'm going down to the V. O. N. office to see how that end of the work is carried on. I'll come in and tell you about it tomorrow evening. Good-night."

How Building Blocks Started.

Crandall, of "building block" fame, was engaged in the manufacture of croquet sets. It was half a century ago, when croquet was a popular outdoor sport. He hit upon the notion of economizing by putting the croquet together with wooden teeth that would fit into corresponding openings along each opposite edge. Thus their parts could be assembled easily, without nails or glue.

It so chanced that at this very time Crandall's small daughter was sick with measles. To amuse her he showed her some pieces of his croquet boxes, and she found such delight in putting them together that he was persuaded to adopt the idea for a new kind of building blocks.

Excavators in Tut's Tomb Suffer From Intense Heat

Associated Press Despatch.

Luxor, Egypt, Nov. 30.—There was something strangely pathetic about the removal from Tutankhamen's tomb to the laboratory concluded today, of the second of two life-size figures of the pharaoh, which for more than three thousand years stood sentinel over the sealed door leading to the canopy chamber. They were removed in long wooden cases, like sentry boxes. One may picture them erect, staff in one hand and mace in the other, keeping guard over the treasures of laboratory against the time when, as the Egyptian government has decided, they will be restored to their age-old post to resume watch over the dead king's remains. Tomorrow, after many other objects still in the way of the excavators in the difficult work now awaiting them are transferred to the laboratory, Howard Carter will start to take down the partition wall separating the ante-chamber from the shrine. This wall is of stones loosely cemented together, and not of solid rock, and the operation will be both laborious and delicate. To prevent rubble and stones falling against the magnificently decorated side of the shrine a partition of wood has been erected between the canopy and the wall.

This year's work is imposing an immense strain on the excavators, owing to the confined space at their disposal for intricate operations, and the intense heat. The lamps being used in the tomb are of 800 candle-power, and the heat rays beating upon the excavators' heads make the task almost unbearable. Mr. Carter and his assistants showed the effects of the strain as they emerged from the tomb for the luncheon interval today.

Appoint Hockey Coaches Sunday, Then All Needed Is Ice

Junior Juvenile League Or Both, Is Question Which Now Confronts Local Men

Arena Roof, Completed Today, Shuts Out Last Glimpse So Profitable.

The personnel behind London hockey teams this winter will be decided at a meeting to be held in the Hermitage club rooms Sunday. Then it only remains for the fans to get solid behind these men, whoever they may turn out to be; the arena to be fully completed, the ice sheet "announced" out, and the players mustered before the season gets away.

The date of the completion of the arena is not known yet, naturally. But December 15, it is believed, will see a sheet of ice ready for the players and for an opening game. Yesterday the last sheet of roofing material was to have been laid, but for rain, which fell throughout the day, but the workers were only a couple of sheets behind schedule, and this morning the blue sky was shut completely off.

A junior hockey group is arousing definite enthusiasm in the city. Coach Rankin of the juniors announces that likely six teams will be available. These would be the Elks, Y. M. C. A., Western U. Normal School, and one or two of the collegiate teams playing in the Wossia district. An additional league of juveniles of four teams, made up of last year's public school stars, whose work attracted attention, and run by four social clubs of the city is being considered. Whether the two ideas will be merged or not remains to be seen, but there are dangers of overlapping here again, a feature of local hockey, which time after time has been proven to have a baneful effect.

PREDICTS CHANGES IN INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE NEXT YEAR

Consolidation of Circuit Needed To Overcome High Traveling Costs.

ASK NEW NEWARK PARK

By JOHN S. FOSTER, Copyright.

New York, Nov. 30.—The International League will almost surely have changes in its membership next season, but most of all it needs consolidation of its circuit. The mileage is altogether too great. Perhaps this will never be avoided so long as Baltimore is a member on the south and Toronto on the north. The western half of the league always has been more ideally located than the eastern half. It is difficult to get Toronto, Buffalo and Rochester interested in heading Paul, although there is always a splendid shindy between the first three.

Baltimore's ambition is to get back to the ground. Financially it is the eastern major clubs will fight that off forever, unless one of them gets so bad off financially that it has to sell out. Even then, it would be necessary to get major league permission to move the club to Baltimore or any other city. By vote of both organizations, the National and American Leagues are perpetual, though this is not generally known. Efforts to get Newark better established in the International League may bear fruit next season. If only they are able over there to get themselves a new baseball park.

Stand Burned.
The ground which has been used by the International is the old Federal League Park. Toward the end of the 1923 season the stands burned to the ground. Financially it was not much of a loss, because the structure was old and of wood, but it was a big loss in that it was all that Newark had.

But that fire will have been an ill-wind that blew the club eventual good, if it proves the occasion for moving to a new place. The present grounds are in the wrong place. Situated in a manufacturing district amid belching chimneys, and close enough to the Hudson to draw smoke from the locomotives too, it has been anything but popular. Fans won't go to that sort of park when by crossing the river and paying little more they can go to major league games in good parks in New York and Brooklyn.

Stand Moved.
The Newark park should be located nearer the residence portion of the city. It is not nearly as important as most park locations seem to think to have the place easy of access. It is much more important to have a comfortable park, and one from which the crowds can quickly scatter to the ground. The fan doesn't mind so much the trip to the park as he or she minds a long trip home, with the prospect of a cold dinner at the end.

Soccer enthusiasts are anxious to get the old field where the Newark club has played, but soccer has yet to get away from the manufacturing section. It will some day, and then it will be a bigger game.

"Y" Tigers Win in Bill at "Y," and Arrows of C. A. A. A. Also Register Win—Bill Senior Workout.

At a meeting held last night in the Y.M.C.A., the M. A. A. basketball section organized committees. With convenors in charge to look after the men's and girls' basketball.

Affiliation with the L.A.A.A. was naturally not taken up as the move must be made by the Manufacturers' A.A.A. general executive. However, it is believed that with the grand of basketball the girls' section is showing affiliation will sooner or later be made so that the winners in the Manufacturers will be able to get into provincial play-offs.

This afternoon, the rest of the schedule is being completed, and a list will be gone over and assignments for future games made.

Last night, it was decided to sell tickets for the M. A. A. basketball games, which are played every Monday evening at the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium. Collection will be taken at the door and no definite price has been fixed for the games.

Basketball is a new sport conducted by the Y.M.A.A. and it promises to be one of the major items on the program of that organization. The employees of the different industrial concerns of the city are pleased with the two leagues and the games have been largely attended.

The committee appointed are as follows:
Men's basketball—Mr. Jelly, convenor; Messrs. Fox, O. Adams, W. Dutton, D. Wanless.
Ladies' basketball—Miss Scott, convenor; Miss Tammonds, Miss Henderson, Miss Rickard.
Referees' committee—Miss Scott, Miss Tammonds, J. Buchanan, W. Towe.

"Y" Tigers Win.
The Y.M.C.A. Tigers, reminiscent of the Pirates, all dolled up in a striking yellow and black uniform, defeated Normal School 23-22 in an exhibition at the Y last night.

SEVENTY-FIVE ENTRIES
Seventy-five entries are already in for the badminton tourney, which starts next Saturday at the courts in the armories.

The tourney is a novel one, run on the American style, with every player meeting in round, the winners of which then meet.

Col. Langford, it is understood, is leaving the city and the absence of the champion will somewhat weaken London's chances in the Ontario championships. To counterbalance this, however, it is learned that Mrs. (Muriel) Keith Hemmings will be returning to the city shortly from England, where she accompanied her husband who is taking a staff course.

ANNOUNCE EXCHANGE RATE ON FREIGHT SHIPPED TO U.S.
Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, Nov. 30.—The rate of exchange on shipments of freight between Canada and the United States between Dec. 1 and 1, inclusive, will be two and one-eighth per cent, as announced by the Dominion Railway Commission. The surcharge on railway traffic will be one per cent. During the same two weeks the rate on international passenger traffic will be based on two per cent exchange.

FLOUR MILLS BECOME POWER PLANTS.
An interesting electrical development of Iowa is the utilization of old mill dams by power companies. When Iowa was a frontier state, more than fifty years ago, every stream and river had its grist and flour mills. Most of these have gone out of existence but a few still run as feed mills and flour mills. The power companies have taken over these abandoned mills install modern machinery and develop and improve the water powers so that a maximum of power is obtained from a minimum of water. Many villages and farms will receive current from the conversion of these old-time grinding mills into modern electrical plants.

CANADIAN WALKERS GET BELATED JUSTICE

Special to The Advertiser.
Toronto, Dec. 1.—Officials of the Walkers' Club of America yesterday over-ruled the decision of the judges that disqualified Canadian contestants in the New York City Hall to Coney Island walking race, Thursday, and the Canadians were awarded the bulk of the honors. The all-Canadian team wins the team shield.

The Canadian entry won the team shield by having five among the first five to finish. They were: G. Bristow, second; Doc. Finlay, eighth; H. Leach, tenth; J. Mahan, twelfth; and P. Granville, Dominion champion, who started from scratch, covered the 10½ miles in 1:42:10, the second fastest time, and was thirteenth to finish. Freeman and Hill, of the Ontario squad, finished sixteenth and twenty-fifth. One hundred and seven started the race. Besides the team prize, they captured the second time prize, seven place prizes and three cups for the first three out-of-town men to finish.

The Canadian team arrived in Toronto yesterday, and expressed their opinions of the race. They were surprised when it was announced they were disqualified for swinging their hips. Coach Cropp, however, said he was satisfied with the official results of the race, pleased that his team had won, but sorry that Granville, who forced Willie, did not beat him. Granville declared he would battle it out with Plant at the Olympics.

Thistles Club Get-Together Will Be An Annual Event

"Outlaw" Rink Provides Fine Feast, Members Fine Program.

Thistles' big get-together banquet last night in their club rooms was even a bigger success than anticipated, although owing to the short notice, most of the out of town curlers from Western Ontario and Detroit, who were invited had to send their regrets.

"The Outlaw Rink," including Arthur Connor, Bill Mortimore, Durkin and H. Owen foraged for the "vittles" which heaped up the banquet table, presided over by President Phil Fetterly. A program of toasts followed, marked by the spontaneous goodfellowship which always characterizes affairs sponsored by the North-Enders.

Chris Pank, Percy King and Mrs. King furnished a splendid musical program before the evening finished.

President Phil Fetterly, in his brief address, which opened the program, suggested that in this off season between bowling and curling, a gathering of this kind should be an annual event. The numbers present certainly justified the suggestion, and it was met with a distinct show of approval.

R. D. McDonald proposed the toast "The King," Rev. T. D. McCullough making the response.
"Hoot Mon!" in chorus greeted Rev. Mac's admission that he was born in Ulster. The proposition of "unbelievers" at the meeting indicated that the well-known skip has a field other than in bowling and curling, right amongst his own club members.

(Ald.) Bill Stewart, in proposing "The City," which he had ordered members that he was going to beat the polls Monday, and varied a witty campaign speech with a bit from the light opera, "The Numbers Game." He had the curlers worked up to an emotional state that they could almost see the ice, Eliza used.

Other Sports.
Bert Heaman proposed "Other Sports," which was responded to by J. J. Foote. Mr. Foote touched briefly upon London's need of a civic golf course, the work the L. A. A. was trying to do in building up a community spirit in sport, and the completion of the new artificial ice arena.

"The Old Guard," an impromptu toast, given by Dr. George Fraser, was responded to by Past President Tom Benson, a silent toast to those of the old guard who had passed beyond, a rousing cheer for those members of the brigade still doing active duty.

T. Martin Bangs Up Alley Mark.
George Sessions Heads 'Highs' at National.

Eight hundred and twenty-seven was the high score of the week among the five pin bowlers of the city. Tom Martin, of the Moose League, turned in this effort on Mitchell's alleys, of which he is the manager. H. McCormick and F. Wilson were tied at 883 for the highest previous score of the season.

At the National alleys, George Sessions, of the Manhattans League, rolled a 158 Thistles in the league games. W. Whitehall, of the Orioles, rolled 753. C. Santo 736 and Bert Perry, of the Has Beens, spilled them for 703.

SENIORS TO WORK OUT.
The O. B. A. seniors will stage a work-out Tuesday night at Ryerson street Gym. The players are anxious to get down to work at once, and they'll need all the work they can get if they are to break into this class this season.

Windsor seniors are almost intact for the championship. In their last West-End last year which ended in an unsatisfactory way and a vacant title showed the class of basketball the borderers are capable of.

NEWEST GERMAN CABINET FILLED WITH DIFFICULTY

Marx Experiences Difficulty in Completing His Slate of Members.

NATIONALISTS ANGRY

Associated Press Despatch. Berlin, Nov. 30.—The new four-party coalition government, headed by Dr. Wilhelm Marx as chancellor, and with Dr. Gustav Stresemann, the retiring chancellor, as foreign minister, began to function tonight.

The new government is constituted as follows: Chancellor, Dr. Wilhelm Marx; vice-chancellor and minister of the interior, Dr. Jarres; foreign minister, Dr. Gustav Stresemann; minister of defense, Dr. Otto Gessler; minister of labor, Heinrich Brauns; minister of finance, Dr. Hans Luther; minister of transport, Rudolph Oeser; minister of food, Count Kamitz; minister of economy, A. D. Hamm; minister of justice, Dr. Emminger; minister of occupied territory, Dr. Anton Hoeft.

Dr. Marx during the day encountered difficulty in obtaining men to fill the posts of ministers of food, justice, transportation and economics. Herr Schiele, Nationalist, was requested to take the food portfolio, but the Nationalist party, angry over President Ebert's disregard of it in his search for a new chancellor, declined to permit him to accept.

Dr. Emminger tentatively promised to take over the portfolio of justice. Later he withdrew his promise, but finally tonight notified Dr. Marx that he would come into his government.

Then the other posts were quickly filled.

Before the cabinet was finally constituted the evening edition of the Lokal Anzeiger had dealt sarcastically with the situation. "The crisis is dead," it said.

London live the crisis," the editorial sardonically exclaimed. It added that the cabinet as far as it had then been constructed is "a case of driving out the devil with Beelzebub."

There was talk in the Reichstag lobbies to the effect that Dr. Marx intends to carry on the government under some sort of modified "authorization law," with the spectre of the dissolution of parliament forever hovering in the background.

FRENCH AND GERMAN INDUSTRIAL ALLIANCES.

The impossibility of bringing about payment by Germany is going to cause more and more French industries to seek special alliances with industries on the other side of the Rhine. It is well understood that these alliances are purely economic and not political, and that they leave to the French industry all complete freedom of action.

HUGHES DECLARES U. S. WILL NOT MIX IN WORLD AFFAIRS

States Monroe Doctrine Is Basis of Country's Foreign Policy.

OPPOSE ALLIANCES

Believe Influence Will Not Be Increased by Pooling It.

Associated Press Despatch. Philadelphia, Nov. 30.—The foreign policy of the United States today, whether with relation to conditions in Europe, Latin-America, or the Pacific, squares consistently with the Monroe Doctrine, Secretary Hughes said in an address here tonight before the American Academy of Political and Social Science gathered in celebration of the centenary of the Monroe Doctrine.

With that declaration as his text, the secretary delivered a comprehensive statement of the position of the United States toward the European tangle, the Far East and Latin-America. He said the United States would rather bear such ills as might result from his present policy toward Europe than suffer the greater evils which would follow the sacrifice of our independent position; reasserted the position of this government to the principles of peace in Pacific waters laid down by the arms conference, and set forth nine propositions which he said should govern relations with the sister republics of the western hemisphere.

All of these policies, Mr. Hughes asserted, accorded entirely with the Monroe Doctrine, which "remains an essential policy to be applied whenever any exigency may arise requiring its application."

Taking up the relationship between the policy of the United States toward Europe and the Monroe Doctrine, he said:

"We entered the great war, not violating our tradition, for the cause of liberty itself was at stake. We have emerged from the war with the same general aims that we had before we went in. Though victors we have sought neither territory nor general reparations. Our people have borne their burdens, and in a large part we are bearing the burdens of others."

"We are not seeking to dictate to Europe or to deprive anyone of rights. But we do desire peace and economic recuperation in Europe. We have the deepest sympathy with the people of France; we warmly cherish their ancient friendship. We desire to see France prosperous and secure, with her wounds healed and her just demands satisfied. We desire to see a united and prosperous Germany with a will to peace, making amends to the full extent of her power and obtaining the appropriate rewards of her labor and skill. We wish to see an end to the waste of military efforts and the easing of the burdens of unproductive expenditures. We wish to see the fires of hatred quenched."

"It is because of these earnest desires that we have hoped, as was stated in the recent communication to the British government, that the solution of the present grave problem would be sought in fair and comprehensive inquiry, in which all interested might participate."

"The bitter controversy which followed the war showed with what tenacity we still hold to the principle of non meddling in the political strife of Europe. It is true that the spread of democratic ideas and the resulting change in governments have removed the danger of organized effort to extend to this continent the European political system of a hundred years ago. But Europe still has a set of primary interests which are not ours. Unity in war did not avail to change the divergent national aims and policies in peace."

"The preponderant thought among us undoubtedly is that our influence would not be increased by pooling it."

Outlines Policies.

"Generally, our policies toward Europe may thus be summarized: We are still opposed to alliances. We refuse to commit ourselves in advance with respect to the employment of the power of the United States in unknown contingencies. We reserve our judgment to act upon occasion as

Believed City of David Found

Associated Press Despatch.

London, Eng., Nov. 30.—Prof. Robt. A. McAllister, leader of the joint expedition sent to the Holy Land by the Palestine exploration fund and the Daily Telegraph, and who last week confirmed the discovery of traces of the ancient city of David, has unearthed a number of treasures of the period. In a despatch to the Telegraph he says:

"I have found early Canaanite Mycenaean pottery, among which is a jar handle with a twelfth dynasty scarab sealing. The discovery of Jebusite fortifications is confirmed."

The Telegraph comments on Professor McAllister's despatch as having lifted the veil from one of the most fascinating historical problems.

"We can now positively say," it adds, "that he discovered the ancient city, which was already centuries old when David captured it. It is with feeling akin to reverence that one gradually sees emerging out of the mists of the ages proof positive of the truth of the Biblical story."

PAPERS OF HOME BANK ARE SEIZED FOR CROWN CASE

Police Take Action on Orders From Attorney-General's Department.

CAUSES EXCITEMENT

Canadian Press Despatch. Toronto, Nov. 30.—Criminal investigation men of the provincial police made a seizure today at the head office of the Home Bank of books and papers required by the crown in the prosecution of directors and officials of the defunct institution.

The officers acted upon the authority of a search warrant issued by the attorney-general's department, under instructions from D. L. McCarthy, K.C., special prosecutor in the Home Bank case. The books in question were records of loans made by the bank to business concerns in which the directors were interested, and also regarding returns made to the finance department at Ottawa, and the minutes of directors' meetings. The books and papers carried away filled a good-sized automobile.

The unexpected arrival of the police officers occasioned a good deal of excitement among the staff at work in the bank. The seizure was made by Chief Inspector W. D. Greer and Inspector A. B. Boyd.

our sense of duty permits. We are opposed to discrimination against our nationals. We ask fair and equal opportunities in mandated territories, as they were acquired by the Allies through our aid. We desire to cooperate according to our historic policy in the peaceful settlement of international disputes which embrace the policy of such judicial questions as are justifiable."

So far as the Pacific and Far East were concerned, Mr. Hughes said, the United States had developed "the policies of (1) the open door; (2) the maintenance of the integrity of China; (3) co-operation with other powers in the declaration of common principles; (4) co-operation with other powers by conference and consultation in the interests of peace; (5) limitation of naval armaments; and (6) the limitation of fortifications and naval bases."

He declared all these were entirely consistent with the policy of Monroe. The "affirmative policies" of the United States enumerated by the secretary as a fitting complement to the Monroe doctrine, include:

"We recognize the equality of the American republics and their equal rights under the law of nations."

"We have no policy of aggression; we do not support aggression by others; we are opposed to aggression by any of the Latin-American republics upon any other."

"It is the policy of this government to make available its friendly assistance to promote stability in those of cially affected, with disturbed conditions involving their own peace and our sister republic which are especially that of their neighbors."

READY TO OPEN BIG LIVE STOCK SHOW IN CHICAGO

Eleven Thousand Cattle of the Highest Pedigree Entered in Show.

CANADIANS COMPETE

Associated Press Despatch. Chicago, Nov. 30.—The greatest international livestock exposition ever held will open tomorrow morning in the national amphitheatre at the Union Stock Yards. Eleven thousand cattle of the highest pedigree have been entered in the show, according to the latest announcement tonight and will be exhibited in the 20 acres of covered ground prepared for the mammoth exposition.

In addition to cattle, the hogs, sheep and horses will surpass last year's exhibit in quality and quantity. The Clydesdales are especially fine this year with the University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon; the Experimental Farms at Indian Head, Sask., and Robert Duff and Sons of Myrtle, Ontario, prominent among the entries.

William Reid of London, famous English stockman, who is to judge the fat cattle, arrived here today. Other judges, including Prof. W. L. Carlyle, manager of the Prince of Wales' famous Alberta ranch, picker of the Clydesdale horses; Sudd Tisdale of Beaverton, Ontario, choosing the Percherons and Draft geldings, and John Miller of Ashburn, Ontario, judge of the Shorthorn breeders in the cattle division, will all be present when the show opens.

Fifty-Ton Doors Laugh at Robbers' Tools Bank Vaults Defy Scientific Cracksmen

Dramatic Story of Struggle Between Safe Builder and Safe Blower—Tremendous Bank Robbery of Millions Started Contest—No Canadian Bank Head Office Has Ever Been Robbed.

By ERNEST M. HEMINGWAY

SHORTLY after midnight on a Sunday morning five mounted bandits rode into the little town of Ville Marie on the Quebec side of Lake Temiskaming, twenty-five miles south of Haileybury.

They rode in wild west style. Shooting out the lights as they galloped up the main street and putting the citizens of the town into a panic. It was just like the movies. Except it was deadly real.

Two young clerks named Damonte and Chener were sleeping over the Quebec branch when the masked riders pulled up and began shooting into the building.

In their nightclothes the two young clerks escaped from the building and rushed to the Ba-vue hotel. When the proprietor of the hotel tried to call Haileybury on the phone to give the alarm he found there was no answer. The telephone was dead.

As they rode into town the bandits had cut the telephone and telegraph wires. Ville Marie was isolated from the outside world.

While two robbers worked inside the bank three others kept guard outside armed with rifles.

The hotel proprietor, two guests and the bank manager ran toward the bank, but the masked men standing in the door way with their rifles warned them back.

A woman showed a lamp in a window opposite the bank building and a shot extinguished the lamp.

Inside the bank there was a muffled roar. But the men inside did not come out. The guards at the door were nervous. They did not know what was keeping their pals. The town was rousing. In a deer country men have rifles and the bandits did not know how long it would be before they would have to face a posse.

Then there was a terrific explosion. A burst of flame outlined the whole scene in a sudden glare of white and black and the men inside came running out. The bank building was on fire. All the men mounted and rode out of the town.

As the two men who had been working inside at blowing the safe swung into their saddles the horses were jumpy from the smell of the smoke from the burning building. A twelve-year-old boy ran toward them. Afraid he would be able to identify them from the glare of the building which was beginning to flare up they shot him twice. Both bullets went into the boy's ankle. No one else came out and the bandits rode away through the town.

But what had happened inside the bank?

The desperados had blown open the vault door. But when they attempted to blow open the safe they had blown it clear out through the back of the bank building. There it was found, unopened, by the citizens of Ville Marie when they came out in the glare of the burning bank building to look at the scene of the crime. Next day, June 26, 1916, the safe was brought across the lake to Haileybury. The robbers had obtained a few thousand dollars worth of bonds, which prove more of a liability than an asset to roguesmen, from the vault. All the cash was in the safe. And they didn't get any of it.

Alarms Not Popular

WITH variations this robbery has appeared again and again through the annals of Canadian crime.

It is the story of unsuccessful safe-blowing. Safe-blowing is supposed to be a thing easy to accomplish. But year after year it becomes increasingly hard.

There have been great bank robberies in Canada and Toronto has recently suffered. But they are an altogether different thing. The "stick-up" or payroll jobs.

In them the banks have been attacked at the weakest link in their chain of money guarding. The time when their money must be temporarily exposed for the purpose of transferring large sums through messengers.

There is no mechanical device that can protect them there except the pistol or the sawed-off shot gun. And opposed to them is a very efficient mechanical device that has changed the entire aspect of crime. That device is the automobile. It plays its part in nearly every robbery, hold-up or crime of violence in Canada.

But while the banks must expose their funds occasionally during a transference they take good care that there should be no chance of any robbery during the time that the funds are in the care of the bank itself.

There are electrical systems installed in banks that automatically give the alarm to the police and set off a siren and gong outside to give a local alarm if any burglary is attempted. This system is not altogether popular with Toronto banks.

An officer of one Toronto bank told the present writer that people were in almost every day to sell some safety system or other.

"A favorite system they have to sell is one whereby the teller steps on a button if anyone comes in to hold him up. That sets off an alarm outside. The idea is for the button to be where he can reach it in his usual position if he is forced to throw up his hands. As a result it is right under his feet and he is setting it off all the time. We can't afford to cry wolf in a bank," the bank officer explained.

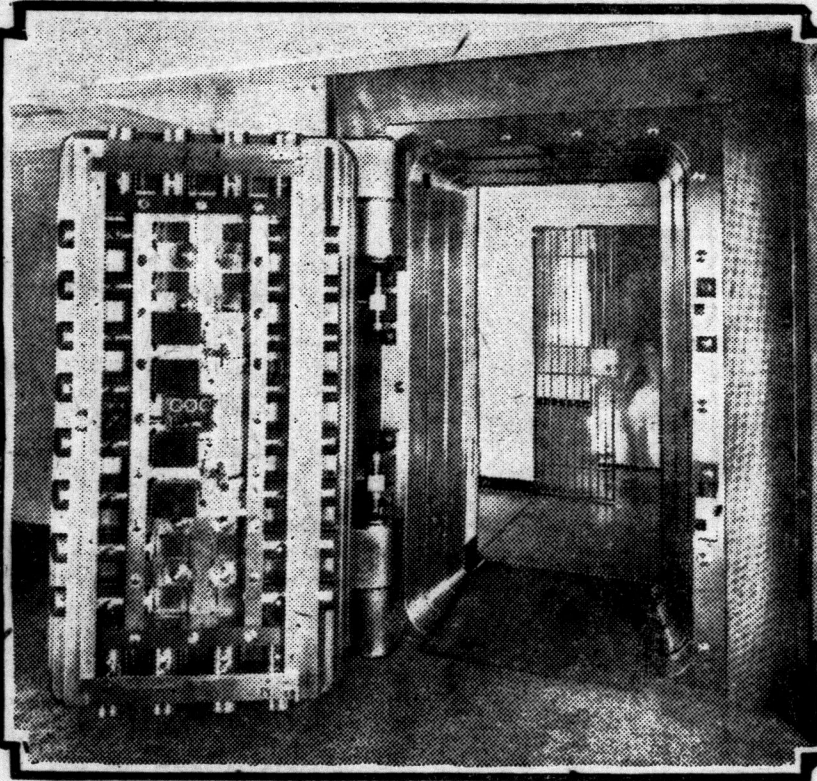

Then there was the rumor that a certain Toronto bank was protected by machine guns. Just how the machine guns were to be cut loose on the robbers was never explained.

The origins of this rumor are the two German maxims, war souvenirs, that flank the entrance to the vault of the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

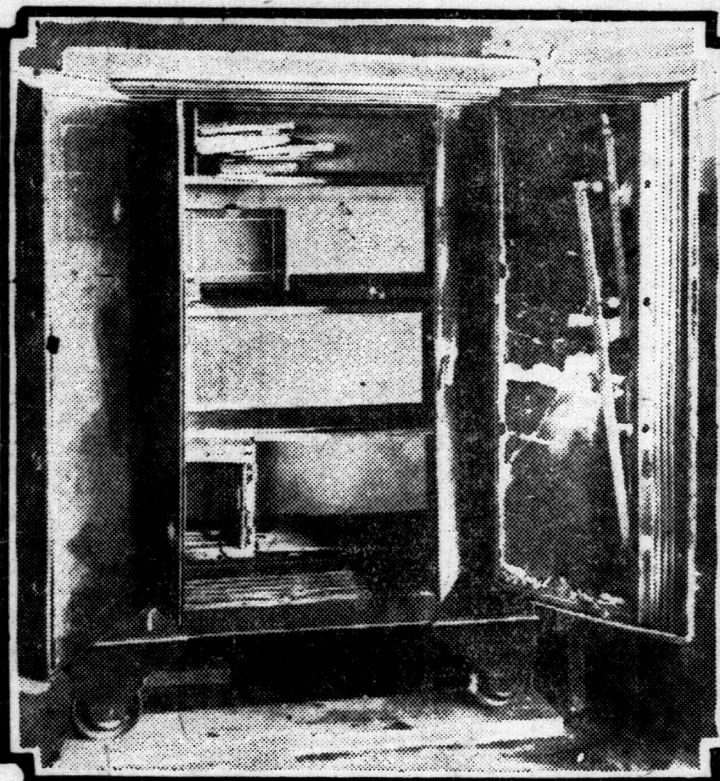

In many banks there are supposed to be secret watching places built into the building near the caves where an armed guard can observe every move made below and himself remain unseen. "That is a very primitive measure, a Toronto bank officer said, when interviewed. "When I was young I once had the job of watching through a hole in the floor down into the vault below. In those days too, a vault was once protected from burglars by an iron bar that fitted into the door from another vault and the place of entrance covered with plaster. That was in the real old days."

Safe of the Right Department Store, Hamilton, after it received a charge of the cracksmen's "saw" or nitroglycerine. A hole was drilled, the nitroglycerine poured in, the hole tamped shut with clay, the whole thing covered with a rug, and the soup exploded by a fuse or a spark from the electric light wires.

There are mammoth safes in the east as well as the west. This gigantic vault door was installed in the Banque d'Hochelaga, Montreal, by the Goldie-McCulloch Safe Works, of Galt, Ont.

In those days the hours when the bank was shut and the cash and bonds locked in the vault were the most dangerous of all. Now they are the safest.

It is the wonderful super-vaults and mammoth safes that guard the money of Canadians that have made the head offices of all the banks absolutely cracksmen-proof. A safe-builder makes the statement that no head office of a Canadian bank had ever had its safe blown. A bank officer confirms this statement.

To break into a modern big safe and yeg-proof vault the burglar would need a motor truck load of tools and a college graduate in engineering to handle them.

Little Branches Suffer

WHEN banks are robbed and the safes blown it is always a little branch that suffers. Then, even when the robbers cut the communications and give themselves a free hand, they are often foiled.

Take the attempted bank robbery last year in Carletonville, Saskatchewan.

On August 23rd three robbers entered the bank, held up the clerks, tied them up, and fired seven charges of nitroglycerine in the safe. But they couldn't open it. Finally they gave it up and went off in a motor car.

On September 17th, 1920, a gang of safe-blowers attempted to use an oxy-acetylene blow torch and other modern steel cutting equipment to break into the Merchants' Bank at Beachville, Ont. The equipment was so bulky it had to be transported by truck and the men fled when a young employee of the bank who was inside awakened and fired his revolver through the window. The equipment was left behind.

How safes were brought to the point of perfection where cracksmen if they are to enter must use tools that it would be almost impossible for them to transport and the dramatic history of the constant struggle between the safe builder and the safe blower is told in an article by Edward H. Smith, published in The Scientific American, from which the following extracts were taken:

Manhattan Savings Institution turned his key in the lock of the street door, walked nonchalantly into the banking room and faintly. Men will do stranger things in the face of miracles, and one had been wrought here. The door of the great iron vault gaped open, torn and twisted on its hinges, as though a Titan had wrenched it with the weight of mountains and the power of tides. On the floor was a litter of papers, account books, coins, pieces of shattered iron and ends of broken tools. From the interior of the huge metal box, long considered beyond the strength and ingenuity of men, was missing a total of $2,747,700 in cash and bonds. The greatest bank robbery in history had been committed between Saturday night and that sickly dawn.

The cashier revived, summoned the other officers in haste, closed the doors and put up a sign relating that the bank had been forced to suspend because of robbery. Policemen came in droves; crowds gathered and tried to storm the entrance; the news spread through the city and across the country; runs on other banks began and were checked with difficulty. The corner of Broadway and Bleeker street, where the bank stood, was obstructed for many days with crowds of curious people who had come to see where this astounding thing had taken place. The doings of a small gang of cracksmen became a piece of history.

To this burglary, just forty-five years ago, is to be traced the beginning of modern developments in the protection of our great banks against criminal attack, so it may be worth while to glance at some of the facts concerning it.

The Record Robbery

A GANG of notorious professional bank burglars, headed by the famous Jimmie Hope, had laid plans for the attack on the Manhattan Savings Institution and consumed all of three years in working out their scheme. They had eventually corrupted one Michael Shevelin, the bank watchman, gained entrance to the place with his collusion and work on the vault door with wedges, powerful jackscrews and explosives, through the nights of Saturday and Sunday, finally reaching the bonds and cash at about 3.30 o'clock on Monday morning. Their loot consisted of $2,506,700 in registered bonds, $73,000 in coupon bonds and a fortune in cash. To save the bank from disaster and foil the robbers, the Congress and the state legislature passed acts canceling the stolen registered bonds and causing fresh securities to be engraved and issued in their stead. To such lengths the nation had to go to protect its finances against a few bold and clever men.

It must not be assumed that such a burglary-

ous raid as that on the Manhattan Savings Institution had happened without precedent and that the banks had not done what they could to prepare for such attacks. The burglary of large banks was an old story in 1878, and great quantities of inventive energy and of bank money had then already been expended in the quest of some method of vault construction that could be relied upon. It is interesting to note some of the ideas then applied.

The vault of the old National Park Bank, when it was finally dismantled some years ago, to make room for a modern substitute, was found to have been built of solid slabs of granite, closely fitted together. The edges of each slab had been incised with a series of hemispherical depressions, which fitted precisely to similar scoopings from the adjoining granite blocks, thus forming globular holes, five or six inches in diameter. Into each of these holes a cannon ball had been placed, so that if a burglar tried to enter the vault by digging at the joints of the stones, he would encounter the loose cast-iron balls.

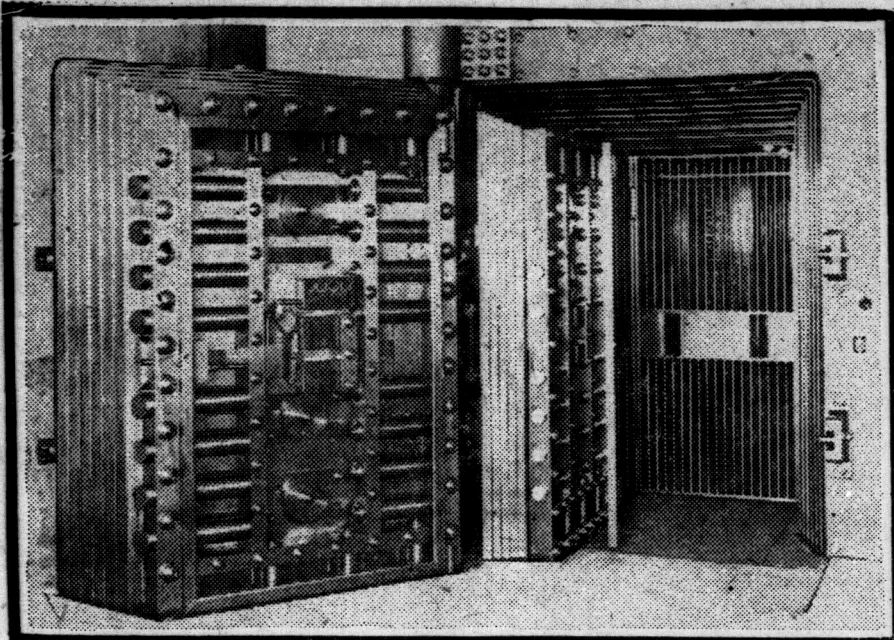

It must be remembered that nitroglycerine was then unknown and that the burglar had to drill holes to get at the tumblers of the locks or to blow in the gunpowder which was then his only explosive agent.

But all such precautions were not of much avail, for the reason that the better bank burglars of the day understood how to attack the strongest vault doors then in existence. Invention had provided nothing better than heavy-duty doors of cast-iron, chilled and later case hardened, but iron doors, after all. We shall have a word to say about the evolution of the vault door. For the present it is enough to observe how burglars, without such weapons as they now possess, ripped their way through the no doubt formidable defenses of the old banks.

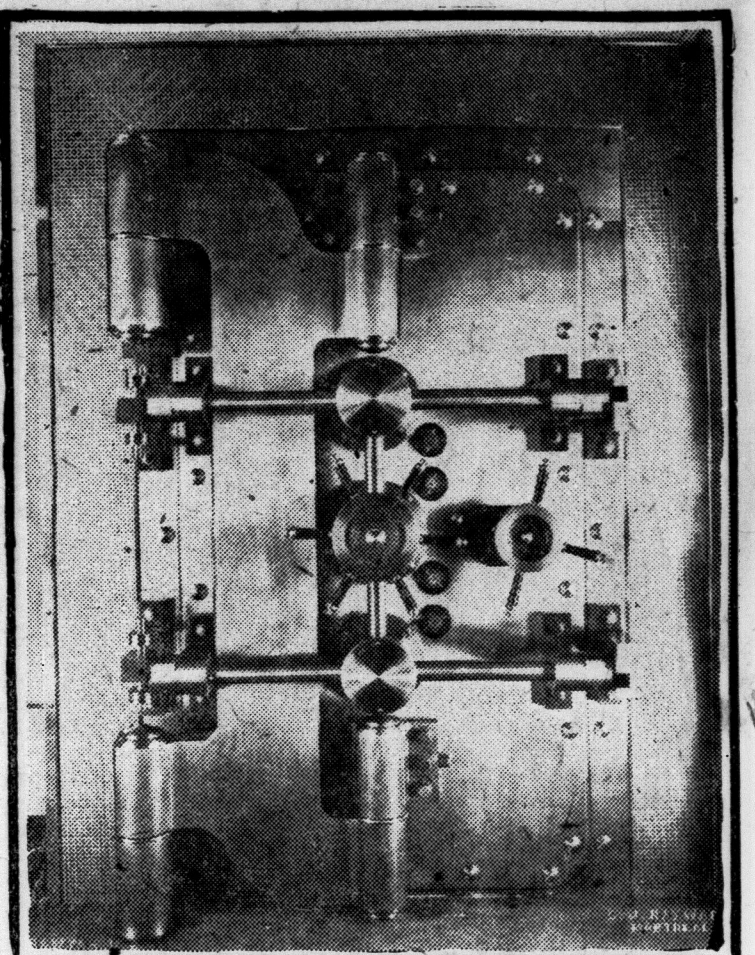

Another New York city feat of the same Jimmie Hope will illuminate the matter. In the fall of 1868, Hope rented a basement under the rooms of the Ocean National Bank at the corner of Fulton and Greenwich streets, and opened a carpet business. In front was his show room; in the rear his workshop. To divide these and keep passersby from intruding on his privacy, he had a partition erected, dividing the two parts of the establishment. In reality, this ceiling-high screen was put in place to mask his operations against the bank, whose vault he had carefully studied.

Use of Jack-Screws

ON the night of June 27, 1869, nine years before his greater feat at the Manhattan bank, Hope and several assistants, including the

Although the massive doors of this vault, installed by J. and J. Taylor for the Bank of Montreal, weigh fifty tons, they can be closed easily by hand. There is over 300 tons of steel in the complete installation.

Doors like this to the vault of the same Banque d'Hochelaga make Jimmie Valentine a myth in real life.

roofs or tops of the big vaults of to-day must be even stronger than the floor, sides and front or door, for the roof must be additionally reinforced against the impact of falling bodies from above, in case of the collapse of a building through fire or earthquake.

What kind of engineering is required for the achievement of such prodigious strengths may be guessed when the dimensions of the really big bank vaults are understood. For instance, in the new Federal Reserve Bank in New York there are three such vaults, one on top of the other. Each vault measures about 125 feet in depth and about 55 feet in average width. The bottom of the nethermost room rests on bedrock and the walls of the vaults are in part under the waters of the harbor. The main door of each of these vaults weighs about 50 tons and each of the three rooms has a second or emergency door, used for ventilation during business hours.

The vault doors of this bank are not of the plug type, another and unique design having been employed to suit the needs of the building in which the vaults were placed. In describing the structure of the walls, floor and roofs of our great vaults, it is to be remembered that no standard has yet been arrived at, that a number of engineers entertain conflicting ideas about certain details of construction and that experiment is constantly being carried forward. Again, the chief difficulty in arriving at a perfected type of vault, and one that is not likely to be overcome in the future, is the matter of the constant development of tools useful in attacks on such constructions. There has not been a successful burglary committed upon the vault of any great metropolitan bank since 1878. Nevertheless, industry and the arts have gone ahead and perfected a number of tools which might at any time be employed by burglars of sufficient skill and daring to seize the opportunity. To this class belong the electric arc, the electric and pneumatic chisel, the electric drill and the oxy-acetylene torch in its latest development.

This last named tool is of special peril and interest. I have previously written of its effectiveness against the safes and vaults employed in rural or suburban banks and the effects met by manufacturers of strong boxes for this clientele. It now appears that the cutter-burner tool, as it is popularly called by vault engineers, is a decided menace even to the great banks and their ponderous equipment, so that much reconstruction and endless experiments are in progress. To date nothing has been found that can be called a genuinely effective resistance.

The effort to find metals which would foil the withering flame of the torch is not without its note of romance. When the oxy-acetylene cutter-burner was first employed there was a great scamper after heat resisting metals and a number of compositions were produced which withstood the fiery tongues of the torch fairly well. (I mean to say compositions sufficiently low in cost to be commercially useful.) When these discoveries were made the vault and safe building world breathed easier again, but only for a short space. Then the inventors of the torch discovered that they could add immensely to the cutting and fusing power of their tool by using the so-called fluxing rod. Their purpose was, of course, to extend the industrial use of the torch, but what they turned out proved to be a most formidable burglarious tool.

The fluxing rod is a stick of soft steel. When the flame of the torch is applied to any metal, for the purpose of cutting and melting, the end of the steel rod is placed at the tip of the flame and against the metal to be cut. The very rapid oxidation of the soft steel rod raises the normal temperatures produced by the torch to enormous levels and the additional exothermic effect of the iron oxide enables the operator of this device to cut and burn his way with tremendous rapidity through any material of the combination of materials now known to practical use. The power of this tool and all the others must be taken into consideration when a vault is designed.

To make his way through such a lined, interlined, reinforced and anchored wall of concrete, usually from two to three feet thick, the burglar would need, first of all, to break away the outer layers of concrete with tools and explosives. He would then encounter the metal interlining, which he would be forced to attack with the torch and rod. This done, he would again face great thickness of concrete, filled with reinforcing cables, rails and rods. Then he must again encounter a layer of various metals which would once more call for the torch. And, last but by no means least, he must have encountered the wires and cables of the alarm system before he had got well under way. The vault builder, however, builds independently of the alarm. He builds a wall capable of turning back a burglar even if the alarm does not function.

famous old robbers, Ned Lyons, Mark Shimburn and George Bliss, reached the banking rooms by means of a hole they had been slowly cutting through the ceiling of their carpet store and the floor of the bank. They went to work on the door of the vault with wedges. First a fine wedge, no thicker than the blade of a knife, was hammered into the crack of the door near the lock. A slightly thicker wedge was next pounded into place with sledges, and then a still heavier tool took its place. Gradually the burglars worked their way up to wedges two or more inches thick at the base. These were forced home with big jackscrews, which got their purchase from heavy iron bands or cables which had been passed around the vault or secured to its back by heavy hooks. Gradually the jacks were turned until the thick wedges forced their way in and pried the door from its iron jam. The bolts were now forced back and the work was done. Explosives and heavy crowbars were then used on the inner iron door. This robbery totaled $1,200,000, of which, fortunately, the larger part was in non-negotiable bonds.

As a consequence of this mode of attack, the construction of doors came to be the matter of chief concern with the vault builder. The first heavy doors in use had been straight edged, like the end of a square-sawed board. Then, in order to get a door that would close more tightly, came the beveled or sloping edge, the inner face of the door being narrower than the outer. But the wedges of the burglars soon put this pleasant scheme to rout. Then came the stepped edge, which is still in use on all ordinary office safes. The steps were designed to stop the wedges from penetrating beyond an inch or two. Wedges backed by powder formed the burglar's answer to this scheme. Then came the tongue-and-groove edge, which did good service until nitroglycerine came along. The grooves now proved to be a happy circumstance for the cracksmen. His liquid explosive lodged in them and he got wonderful results from a minimum of "soup." Faced with this peril, the vault builders went back to a battleship or armor-plate door, which was soon found worthless.

The construction of such doors is one of the marvels of modern vault engineering. Entirely aside from its complicated multiple time-locks its numerous powerful bolts, its intricate inner locking devices and its other mechanical intricacies, such a door is a first-class piece of engineering. It seems to the eye to be a solid piece, yet it consists of many layers; it is a composite in more than one sense. The layers, to mention only some of them, are ordinary strain resisting steel; reinforced concrete, used against fire; heat resisting metal, to delay burglars operating with the cutter-burner torch; tool resisting metals; at least one and often two layers containing the wires and coils of electric burglar alarm systems, and so on.

The J. P. Morgan and Company door weighs about 50 tons and that of the Cleveland Federal Reserve Bank, the thickest if not the largest ever built, is said by its makers to achieve a total weight of almost two-hundred thousand pounds.

Really Big Vaults

THE vaults must be designed to foil any possible or conceivable method of assault. In addition, they must be constructed to resist fire and the tremendous heat likely to be developed when a great building comes into conflagration. In consideration of this risk, the

THE REAL GEN. SMUTS IS A CROMWELL AND RUSKIN

"Slim (Cute) Jannie Smuts" Is by Inclination a Solitary, Fond of Meditation—and Primitive Methods

LORD RIDDELL undertakes to portray the real General Smuts in an interesting article in John O'London's Weekly.

"General Smuts," says the great British newspaper owner, "has long been a critic of what may be called realism. He believes in the hearts and consciences of men as a preventative of more war."

"The general is a curious mixture of realism and idealism," Lord Riddell comments. "He is a first-class fighting man—rather inclined to undertake his opponents. Everyone knows of his exploits in the Boer War. In the late war he was the only fighting statesman with the exception of General Botha, with whom he worked in close co-operation, acting in the same capacity as Alexander Hamilton did for George Washington."

"Then, again, General Smuts is a stickler for law and order. No ruler has been more resolute in quelling labor disputes with a drastic hand. That is one side of his complex character. The other is displayed in his campaign against the reign of force in Europe. In short, he is a combination of Cromwell and Ruskin. But if it came to the point I should not care to rely too much on the Ruskin element. These first-class fighting men are apt on provocation to revert to primitive methods."

"The general's piercing and compelling eye is a good indication of his dominating personality. This impression is confirmed by his alert, well-knit figure and energetic movements. He is a great walker, and when in London during the war spent most of his Sundays in taking long country walks. On one occasion, when unexpectedly required for urgent business, it became necessary to scour a great part of Buckinghamshire in order to retrieve him. It was not until a late hour that he arrived at Danny park, Sussex, where Mr. Lloyd George and other members of the cabinet were awaiting him."

"The general is now fifty-three. He has a keen, penetrating intellect. Rhodes early predicted a career for 'slim (cute) Jannie Smuts.' His prophecy proved correct. 'Jannie' Smuts became one of Kruger's right-hand men, and drafted many of his state documents, although it is said that he often disagreed with him."

"The complexities of General Smuts' character are due no doubt in some measure to those of birth and training. Born in South Africa of Boer parents, brought up on a farm, in early youth a shepherd, educated partly at Victoria College, Stellenbosch, and partly at Christ's College, Cambridge, where he achieved great distinctions, a practising barrister, in supreme command of the Republican army in Cape Colony at the age of thirty-one, a member of the Transvaal cabinet at the age of thirty-six, can one wonder at this romantic figure with a sword in one hand and a peace-tract in the other—a flaming example of the incongruities of life? He is a voluble speaker—capable of great flights of eloquence, during which he either overcomes or forgets the slight Dutch accent noticeable in calmer moments. As a parliamentary debater he stands in the first rank, his quick mind being of great advantage. The results of a legal training are most persistent. It is easier to change the leopard's spots than to obliterate its mark. Mr. Lloyd George, Mr. Asquith, President Wilson, Sir Robert Horne, and M. Poincaré are striking examples. Both 'Cromwell Smuts' and 'Ruskin Smuts' are lawyers to the tips of their fingers, but while 'Cromwell Smuts' is a stern judge, ready to assume the black cap if he thinks 'that justice so requires, 'Ruskin Smuts' is a legal sentimentalist, strong on compromise and arbitration."

"In private life the general is an attractive person and admirable conversationalist, full of witty, original remarks. On rare occasions he can unbend and be as gay as a youth of eighteen. His habits are simple. By inclination he is a solitary, fond of books and meditation. He smokes but little. He has several sorts of courage—all well developed: the courage of the soldier—the courage of the fearless politician—and the courage of the perceptive missionary. His public life in South Africa has been one long arduous fight. He is a true adherent of the British Empire. Often when I looked at him seated in the Peace Conference I thought how much Britain owed to the sagacity and foresight of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, who had converted an opponent into a friend."

"The general's attitude regarding the international situation emphasizes the vital difference of opinion that exists, not only amongst different nations, but within the borders of each country, more or less. One type of man believes that universal brotherhood and peace will result from shaking hands with your enemies and making them grateful, while the other type believes that there is no such thing as national gratitude and that the only safe procedure is to put your enemy down and keep him down. And there the issues join. Gen. Smuts takes one view, and the French, who understand the strength of national gratitude, take the other. The general does not seem to realize that the French are unaffected by sermonizing. It is easy to criticize when someone else has to 'bell the cat.' If General Smuts were prime minister of Great Britain, I wonder what would happen if M. Poincaré declined to take any notice of 'Ruskin Smuts' sermons? I wonder whether 'Cromwell Smuts' would emerge from round the corner?"

Dodged Reporters Once Too Often, Baden-Powell Denies Long-Lost Love

Chief Scout Was in Search of a Lost Love, a Beautiful Girl of Nineteen—Parents of Young Lady Did Not Think Ambiguous Suitor Was a Good Enough Match

RECENTLY the chief scout went to the United States. To avoid publicity, he traveled under an assumed name. But the American reporters discovered his identity and chased him from place to place. Cordially detested by most newspaper reporters who have ever had to interview him, he met his Waterloo this time, at the hands of these long-suffering scribes who invented a story of how the famous general was scouring America to find his "lost love," a handsome girl of 19.

In Pearson's Weekly, Sir Robert confesses how he dodged the reporters.

I was really going to the States for a holiday with a friend of mine. Knowing that, if we went in the ordinary way we should (as Admiral Sims put it to me the other day) have "no more privacy than a goldfish," we elected to start from the continent instead of from England, under assumed names and relationship.

I was Mr. Nash, senior, and my friend was Mr. Nash, junior, my nephew. On board all went well—almost too well—for Mr. Nash, junior, incontinent fell in love with three charming American sisters, while I formed a great admiration for their mother.

As a result we were, on arriving at New York, invited to go and stay with our new friends at their home in Massachusetts.

I was obliged then to take our would-be hostess into confidence and tell her that my "nephew" and I were not what we pretended to be, we were not related, nor had we any right to the names under which we were traveling. To all of which with characteristic American large-mindedness, she replied:

"I did not invite your names to come and stay with us; I want you to come, whoever you are."

In helping our friends ashore we passed the press fraternity unnoticed, as units of a family party of obvious Americans.

I went for a walk in the Central Park, but as I entered the gate I was called to heel by a burly policeman with:

"Say, young fellow, think you're an automobile that you go on the roadway? That sidewalk

"Do you know you've got the English General Poul stopping in your hotel?"

"You don't say?"

"We've trailed him. He's going under the name of Johnson."

My alias! So I replied, "Well now that must be Mr. Johnson in number 36."

"Huh! We've got him then. Now will you hold him. I'm coming right now to interview him."

"How can I hold him when he's gone?"

"Gone? Where to?"

"Across to Jersey City. But he'll sure come back again."

"Well, then, when he comes back hold him and phone me."

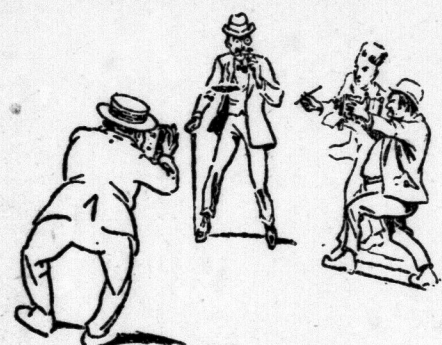

"I'll just do that when he comes back. What number?"

And so we went across to Jersey City to get our boat. And I did return to New York—but it was some time later, and I am afraid I quite forgot to phone to the Starlight reporter.

That sounds like a triumphant end to my tale, but it wasn't. The Starlight got its own back on me all right.

We sailed, smiling, and well satisfied, from America. We landed a week later in England to find that, according to the cable news, we had been slandering the American army.

The telegraph cable then fairly buzzed with messages of disavowals to the army authorities.

Snapping Baden-Powell

and of remonstrance and denial to the press. It ended in the paper eventually admitting that, owing to my not having given clear information to their representatives, a misunderstanding of my presence in America had arisen for which it handsomely apologized.

It proceeded next day to give what it had since discovered was the real reason for my visit, giving two or three columns to this important news, supplemented by numerous illustrations. It was this:

I had made the acquaintance of an American heiress on an ocean liner, and when our ship called in at Madagascar we endeavored to fix up our marriage at the hands of the British and American consuls.

These two worthies, on consulting together in place of the parents of the young lady, came to the conclusion that I was not altogether a desirable match for her. So, while one of them lured me away to witness a review of the native army, his colleague hustled the girl on to a departing steamer and packed her off home.

My recent visit to America was simply to search for my lost love (whose name and address I had apparently mislaid or forgotten), and my quest had been unsuccessful!

KIPLING SAYS:

"NEXT to a requited attachment, one of the most convenient things that a young man can carry about with him is an unrequited attachment."

"Think You're an Automobile?"

was made on purpose for you; take it and use it."

His "young fellow" so flattered me that I could only grin and obey.

Only on the last day of our stay in America did we come near to being interviewed.

Our baggage was already on board the ship for England at the New Jersey docks, and we were making our farewells by phone from our hotel in New York, when a voice cut in. "The Starlight News speaking. Are you the Wackinaw Hotel?"

"Sure thing," I replied, scenting a rat.

Prima Donnas Clash, Melba vs. Clara Butt

Railway Officials at Winnipeg Toss Coin to Determine Whose Private Coach Shall Travel First

IT would almost seem as though two prima donnas have been chasing one another across the continent. Madame Clara Butt would arrive in a city, fulfill her concert engagement, and hardly get away before along came Dame Nellie Melba, the Australian singer.

It seemed inevitable that they should clash somewhere, and this they did at Calgary. When evening came, the railway authorities were faced with the problem as to which private car was to have the preference in the assembling of the train.

The problem was made all the more acute by the fact that the Imperial Limited, by which they traveled, was in two sections. Who was to go first? Calgary officials refused to settle the problem. They "passed the buck" to the transportation officials at Winnipeg. It was up to somebody in the western metropolis to adjudicate between the mezzo-soprano and the contralto, both of them world famous.

A bright idea occurred to a man in the transportation department. Let "heads" stand for Dame Melba and "tails" for Clara Butt. The coin was flipped. "Heads" came up. Melba's car was the first to depart for British Columbia.

CONRAD MANUSCRIPTS PURCHASED FOR $110,998

BOOK lovers are discussing the remarkable tribute paid Joseph Conrad, English novelist, by his American admirers when they purchased some of his manuscripts and early editions for $110,998, said to be the highest figure brought by a living author's collection.

His papers have brought $120,461 in four sales. All of them were from the collection of John Quinn, art patron and lawyer, of 58 Central Park west, New York.

The original manuscript of "Victory," written on 1,129 pages, brought $8,100 the highest price of the sale. It was paid by Jerome D. Kern, who bought "Youth" also for $2,300.

Dr. A. S. Rosenbach, of New York and Philadelphia, got the best of the collection. He paid $5,300 for the original manuscript of Conrad's first book, "Almayer's Folly"; "Chance," with thirty-five pages in the hand of Mrs. Conrad, for $6,600; "Typhoon" for $5,100, "Nostromo" for $4,700, "An Outcast of the Islands" for $4,100, a portion of the original manuscript of "Lord Jim" for $3,500, "The Secret Agent" for $3,900, "A Smile of Fortune" for $2,300 and "The Secret Sharer" for $2,400.

Dr. Rosenbach also secured the manuscript of "The Nigger of the Narcissus," of which Conrad wrote Mr. Quinn:

"It is the story by which, as a creative artist, I stand or fall, and which, at any rate, no one else could have written."

This manuscript, with a suppressed preface, a portion of "The End of the Tether," many pages of which were burned "in a lamp accident," as Conrad explained in a letter to Mr. Wells, the dealer, for $6,000; he also purchased the manuscripts purchased by Dr. Rosenbach may find their way into the library of Henry E. Huntington.

"Under Western Eyes" was sold to Gabriel Quinn.

Some of Conrad's typewritten manuscript, brought $4,500. It was reported that some of with interlineations and marginal notes, also brought good prices. "Victory" in type brought $850 and "Chance" $475.

LE QUEUX SAVED BY FLUKE FROM BEING PRIZE FOOL

MR. LE QUEUX, along with a party of journalists, was once invited to Barmouth by the Cambrian Railway, so that he might write of its advantages as a winter resort against the then much-advertised Colwyn Bay. The party were feted and were dined and wined in handsome style; but imagine the consternation of the hosts when during the visit snow fell and continued for some days!

The journalists held a conference, with the result that you have only to search the files of the London daily newspapers for the day after the meeting to read what gloriously bright sunshine and blue skies reigned at Barmouth during the visit of the London press!

Another newspaper story: When Mr. Le Queux was on the staff of the Globe, one day the report came over the tape machine: "Her Majesty the Queen died at Windsor at ten o'clock this morning."

He wrote an article voicing the widespread regret at the news, but before this went to press an electrician from the telegraph company arrived, and it was through him that the paper was saved from being made the laughing-stock of the country. For from the basket which is placed below every one of these automatic tape-machines, and into which messages which are of no use for the paper are thrown, he drew forth a piece of paper in which were the words: "John Walters, for thirty years coachman to—"

This, when linked to the other piece of paper, showed that it was the Queen's coachman who was dead!

Mr. Le Queux has met many remarkable people, from kings to criminals, of whom he tells in his new book, "Things I Know About Kings, Celebrities and Crooks." Perhaps his most interesting experience was when he was the guest of a band of brigands in Albania. One of the band was a woman, Mokka, a beautiful girl, who had caused a remarkable "blood-feud."

Two brothers had been in love with her, and she married one. A month afterwards the rejected lover killed his brother and the young widow planned revenge. Having no male relatives, she had to carry on the "blood-feud" unaided.

For a year she followed the intended victim from place to place. At last, in the streets of a certain town, her opportunity came, and she shot and killed her husband's murderer. She then went straight to his parents' house, three days' journey, and shot them both dead. Then she returned to a life of brigandage.

New Anesthetic Found From Sleeping Flowers

Accidental Discovery in Greenhouse Leads to Successful Tests of Ethylene Gas on Animals and Humans

AS far back as 1908 florists complained that carnations when placed in greenhouses would go to sleep and those which had not opened would fail to do so, causing great loss in their business. Investigation proved that gas fixtures to be the cause. Gas contains 4 per cent of ethylene, and it was shown that one part of this gas in 2,000,000 parts of air caused already open flowers to close. Other investigations showed a similar effect of the gas on other plants. This led Dr. Luckhardt and Mr. Carter, of the University of Chicago, recently to test the gas as an anesthetic. The gas was tried first on numerous animals, such as frogs, mice, guinea-pigs, rabbits and kittens, that were all found to be put to sleep by it, without any apparent after-effects of a disagreeable sort. The anesthetic was finally tried on a dog, who went out completely in less than five minutes on a mixture of 90 per cent ethylene and 10 per cent oxygen. The experimenters then tried it on themselves. They describe the effect of the gas mixed with oxygen as exhilarating and giving a sense of well-being. They became unconscious and then subsequently recovered without realization that they had been unconscious. Several students then volunteered. Complete surgical anesthesia with muscular relaxation was produced in a few minutes. Subjects had pins thrust through their arms, were pinched severely enough to leave black and blue areas, and one was seated on the soles of his feet, with a Stillson wrench without any sensation whatever or memory of discomfort. Recovery was complete in a few minutes. The only after-effect was slight weakness and slight nausea. In every case the subject ate a full meal within a few hours after recovery. It is claimed that the new anesthetic gives loss of sensation long before complete surgical anesthesia is established, that it may be maintained with complete muscular relaxation, yet without any sign of asphyxia, shortness of breath or effect upon the blood pressure; and that there is rapid recovery even after long administration without evidence of after-effects.

Important as this discovery is to all of us, there is nothing definite as yet to indicate its importance to the medical world. However, one thing is obvious, and that is the relatively insignificant cost of this new anesthetic. Furthermore, it is almost universally available, although its use must be kept in competent hands to avoid any possible danger from over-dosage.—Scientific American.

CHECKING THE LANGUAGES

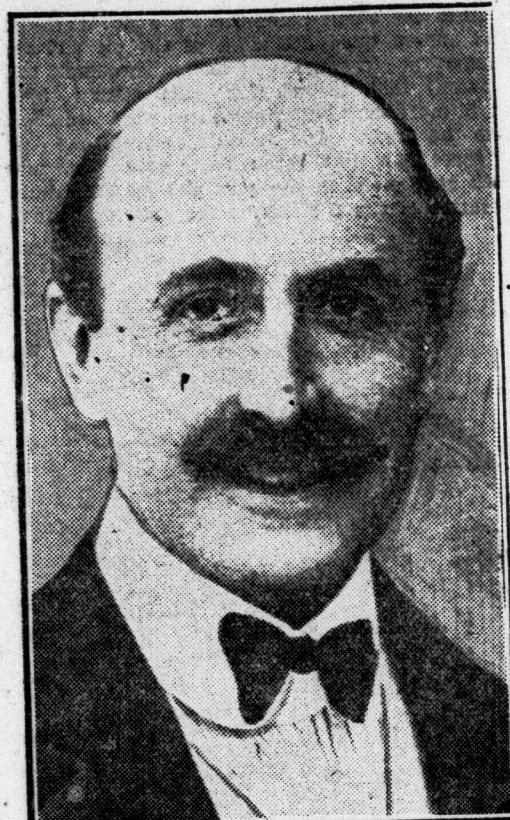

A LITTLE while ago, in the vacation court of London, Eng., it was stated before Mr. Justice McCardie that a company was to run a revue named "King Tut-Tut."

Mr. Justice McCardie rubbed his brow.

"What does 'Tut-Tut' mean?" he inquired.

"It is an expression," replied counsel, "used on the golf links when a man misses his drive."

"You mean, when the clergy are present," suggested the judge, amid laughter.

Bachelor Premier Foils Matchmaking Matron

Discomfited Ottawa Lady Will Probably Meet Mrs. King and the Twins

AT one of Mackenzie King's recent receptions, held in the former residence of the late Sir Wilfrid Laurier, a beautiful place now destined to be the home of all future Liberal leaders, he was cornered by a member of the fairer sex, one who, in very truth, might have been justly privileged, for she was the wife of one of his cabinet ministers. She began to rally him on the subject of matrimony.

Con gratulations had, all that evening, been showered on two youthful guests, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Laurier, and their infant son, and the time, if ever, she thought, seemed opportune.

"Ah," said he, with a merry twinkle in his blue eyes and never a change in countenance, "you must come again next month and I will introduce you to Mrs. King and the twins." Departing guests broke for the moment the tete-tete, and a very discomfited matron moved haughtily away. She had resented intensely his unseeing levity on such a subject. But the crux of the situation was that she had entirely forgotten the existence of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Macdougall King, the widow of the late Dr. King, her twin boys, and their impending visit.

WORLD'S NAUGHTIEST BOY WAS WINSTON CHURCHILL

At Least, He Seemed So to Miss Eva Moore, Who Tried to Teach Him Dancing

MISS EVA MOORE, the celebrated English actress, in her entertaining volume, "Exits and Entrances," relates how in her youth she gave dancing lessons in Brighton. She says:

"It was there that I taught a small, red-headed boy to do 'One, two, three—right; one, two, three—left.' He was the naughtiest small boy in the class; I used to think sometimes he must be the naughtiest boy in the world. His name was Winston Churchill."

Another story is about one of Sir James Barrie's plays:

"When Barrie's 'Twelve Pound Look' was at the Coliseum two 'comedy sketch artists' were in the stalls."

The play went very well—very well indeed. One of the comedians turned to the other: "Who wrote this?" "Fellow called 'Barrie,'" was the reply. "Ah," said the first, "he writes our next; he's good!"

During the war Miss Moore met a Scottish soldier home on leave, and obviously knowing nothing of London. He wanted to get to Paddington, and she offered to take him there.

"He looked at me, not unkindly, but with the scorn of a true Scot for the simplicity of a Southerner who underestimates the intelligence of the men from 'over the border.' 'Ye wull, wull ye' he said. 'Aye—well—ye wull not. Ah've been warnned aboot lassies like you.' And he walked away with great dignity and self-possession."

Lifting the Cattle Embargo is Almost a Joke, But Beasts That Get By Bring Highest Prices

Canada's Cattle Go 4,000 Miles Without Accident to Single Beast—Scenes at Scotch Auction—Irish Drivers Jeered, But Canadian Hides Were Favorites.

By DOUGLAS MACKAY

AN hour before daybreak, after a twelve day trip from Quebec, the Canadian Merchant Marine fleet, was alongside the docks of Glasgow. Two hundred and forty Canadian steers pawed and twisted at their halters. The veterinary and the foreman of the cattlemen moved about the ship with lanterns, making a final inspection. Everyone was satisfied; not a single steer had been lost on the voyage. In fact everything had moved with precision since leaving the St. Boniface stock yards, Winnipeg.

Under the yellow lights of the wharf we could distinguish twenty men in dark heavy smocks that reached to the knees and black leather leggings. No sooner had the Leader tied up than they swarmed aboard like buccaniers shouting to each other with accents so completely unintelligible to us that we might have been in a German or a French port instead of on the Clyde. Down below decks they scrambled. Cattle gangways were hoisted up fore and aft and made fast to the special gangways built across the ship's decks.

From below decks came the sounds of the tramping of cattle, and an occasional bellow mingled with the curious "Hoch" shouts from the Scots who were unloading. Up from the darkness came the cattle, stiff-legged at first, one at a time and hastened by the proddings and whackings of the longshoremen. Twelve days standing with an uncertain floor beneath the hoofs and barely a couple of feet of halter rope seemed to have very little effect upon the prairie animals. The first few steps up into the glare of the arc lights that had been strung above the ship's decks were faltering and uncertain. But on crossing the deck and starting down the sloping gangway to the dock they gathered speed and on getting firm cement beneath them they went cantering off toward the sheds, as frisky and playful as young heifers back in Alberta.

The longshoremen knew their game. The steers were kept on the double every second. A pause brought a whacking across the haunches. By daybreak every steer had crossed the gangway after being checked by the veterinary, a ship's officer and the port authorities. No one was allowed off the ship until the cattle were discharged and carefully segregated—a regulation insisted upon by the health authorities. Within an hour of the time of coming alongside the wharf, the Canadian Leader was again in midstream of the Clyde and under the guidance of two tugs, was under way for Cardiff where the balance of the cargo—wheat, cheese, pork, lumber, lard, butter and plums—was to be discharged.

Fifty Head Smothered to Death

IN the damp, grey light of the morning the famous Clyde skyline began to show in silhouette. Across the river (extraordinarily narrow) the forest of steel cranes, derricks and the skeleton structures of shipyards were distinguishable. A grim idle show they made, for they had been accumulating the rust of disuse for many months. Even now while a few ships rested in the stocks, the rattle of the ritters was not heard for the boiler fitters are on strike and consequently, many hundreds of shipbuilders, who have grievances to settle with their employers, are standing idle on the street corners.

Within a hundred yards of the spot where the Canadian steers had come ashore, a vessel from Belfast had just unloaded Irish cattle which comprise Canada's chief rival in the contest for the British trade. Five hundred head had been loaded at Belfast and the hatches had been clamped down with the result that fifty head had been smothered to death. The sight was not a pretty one, and the comparison in shipping methods showed Canada's cattle transported four thousand miles without a single accident to any beast, yet in the over night trip from Belfast fifty animals were rendered a total loss except for the hides at a few pence a pound.

For five days after landing, the Canadian cattle rested comfortably in the spacious sheds by the Clyde. Well kept, well fed and well watered, they had no worries and on the Monday following their arrival they came up at auction. The sale was advertised throughout Scotland. In all, nearly two thousand cattle were to be sold on the same day in the same ring. Most of them were Irish, bought for immediate slaughter. Most of the Canadian animals were "store" cattle, meaning that they would be purchased by farmers who would put them on the land for three months for fattening and then offer them for slaughter. A few were in prime condition for killing upon arrival.

All Monday morning the buyers prowled about among the cattle—Irish and Canadian. Most interesting men, these cattle buyers; there were the small farmers from the Lowlands who were in Glasgow to buy one or two light steers for fattening for the Christmas market, there were a few of the farming gentry in sporting tweeds and knickers who were accompanied by their own cattlemen, there were burly butchers and meat wholesalers from Edinburgh, Sterling, Dumfries and Ayr and there were scores of brokers (Jewish and Scottish) who were on hand to watch the sales and bargain with the buyers for hides and other by-products of animal slaughter.

Irish Cattlemen a Wild Lot

THE cattlemen with the Irish steers were a wild lot, shouting constantly and sometimes wrapping. They came down to where the Canadian animals were and jeered, loud and long, pointing out defects and making general sport of "the Yanks" as they called them. But the test came when the beasts were in the ring and money was being bid. At one o'clock about two hundred men crowded into the small amphitheatre under skylight. The buyers lined the sides of the pit and the hangers-on (newspaper men, brokers and drovers) took the sloping seats behind them. As in more gory bull rings there were two doors into the arena. The animals entered, one, two or three at a time, through one gate. Two men with gads stood in the ring and by the administration of sharp blows on the head or haunch-

"UP FROM THE DARKNESS CAME THE CATTLE, STIFF-LEGGED AND FALTERING."

es drove the steers around to display their bodies while the auctioneer stood aloft on a small platform and maintained a ceaseless clamor for better bids. When the sales were made, they were driven out the other door, checked by clerks and markers and returned to the pens.

A group of Jew buyers were congregated at one side of the ring and the Scotch and English buyers faced them. Nearly a thousand Irish animals went under the hammer before the Canadian steers came. The Irish were slow moving cattle, sullen but responsive to the prods of the drovers. They sold slowly and chiefly for immediate slaughter. The farmers were waiting for the Canadian cattle.

A new auctioneer took the stand, stocky, grey-haired with a quick tongue. He formally announced the sale of the imported steers; the gate swung open and a great black bullock stamped into the ring with head lowered. He wheeled about as though taking in the crowd at a glance, snorted and the drovers jumped smartly to avoid being crushed against the ringside. A buzz of comment marked a renewed interest in the sale. A fine spirited beast with wide buttocks and a broad frame that could carry substantial fat to the British Christmas market, he was wheeled about for display. Using their slight gestures, the buyers offered prices and the native of the prairies brought thirty-one pounds—the highest price of the day.

The auctioneer having only a limited time in which to offer his animals pushed the sale

with all speed. Barely was one sale made and the door closed than two more animals were prodded into the ring. The auctioneer never ceased talking in a broad Lowland brogue that was barely intelligible to an outsider. The heifers went at prices varying from seventeen to twenty-four pounds and the heavier beasts went up to thirty-one pounds. Sometimes there would be as many as eight in the arena at a time, heads together milling and stamping around the small circle and sometimes lashing out with the hoofs. There was a certain excitement about the sale of the Canadian animals as they were fast moving and uncertain in matters of behavior.

The Jews were not in the market for the store cattle but the farmers bid well and the prices were all well above the Irish prices. The brokers in hides were watching closely and noting the buyers, for the Canadian hides are as a rule of superior quality to the domestic. Only the most expert cattle judges can make safe offers after a few seconds glance at an animal but these men knew their game and the buying was active. In thirty-five minutes one hundred and sixteen Canadian cattle changed hands and at prices superior throughout to the Irish cattle. The long journey to the market was over.

Canadian Cattle Breeders Disappointed

SINCE the raising of the embargo on Canadian store cattle in Great Britain, the trade from the Canadian point of view has been disappointing. The drastic regulations still imposed by the British ministry of agriculture are practically nullifying the effect of the lifting of the embargo and are seriously hampering the export trade in Canadian store cattle. These regulations are apparently aimed at Canada for the same restrictions are not imposed upon Irish cattle. As a result of these obstructions it seems that western Canadian cattle are being shipped to the United States despite the heavy duty.

At the opening of the season the Quebec harbor authorities spent $20,000 in the equipping of the port for the export cattle trade in the expectation of handling more than ten thousand head this season and more in the future. On the contrary, following the drastic British regulations and the high cost of shipment, Quebec had only handled 3,500 head up to late October with slight hope of any increase.

Speaking before the Canadian Chamber of Commerce in London in October, Dr. J. H. Grisdale, deputy minister of agriculture, said that although the cattle embargo was lifted last autumn conditions were not entirely satisfactory. The possibilities of Canadian beef production were limitless, he said, but at the present time the American market was better than the British because of the transportation charges and the restrictions operating against Canada. The Canadian government, he pointed out, had been working continually to improve beef cattle and stock had been brought out from Britain for that purpose so that the Old Country benefited in turn by taking Canadian beef.

Their Example

THE inspector was paying his annual visit to the village school, and was putting the children of Class III. through their paces. He tried them with arithmetic and geography, and then came on to testing their knowledge of English words.

They did quite well until he asked them the meaning of the word "epidemic."

Nobody knew, and so he had to help them out.

"An epidemic," he explained, "is anything that spreads. Now, can anybody give me an example of an epidemic?"

There was a long silence.

"Can no one tell me?" asked the inspector at last. "Remember, anything that spreads."

They had it this time. Like one voice came the reply:

Serve Another Turn

MAMMA: Well, Johnny, I shall forgive you this time, and it's very pretty of you to write a letter to say you're sorry.

Johnny: Yes, ma; don't tear it up, please.

Mamma: Why?

Johnny: Because it will do next time.

Take Notice, Movies and Authors! Time to Quit Giving Canada Black Eye

Under the title of "Maligning Our Neighbors," three prominent American writers have entered protest, in the name of a weary, spoon-fed public, against the Kipling legend, "Our Lady of the Snows" and the wild and woolly west. Kipling unintentionally, when he wrote his famous poem, gave Canada a black eye. Romance in all its forms has a tendency to develop hackneyed types, and to do an injustice to the nations from which these types are drawn, as well as to take liberties with historical facts. "Canada as She is Pictured," by Mr. Glynn Ward, led off the trio of protests.

By H. GLYNN-WARD

WHAT kink in the mind is it that causes the would-be depictees of Canadian life to picture it always as a land of eternal snows, peopled entirely by Indians, wicked French-Canadians dressed in the same old furs, a few girls with only one blouse apiece and red handkerchiefs knotted loosely round their necks, and Royal Canadian Mounted Police (which, by the way, they insist on calling by their obsolete name of Royal Northwest M.P.) dressed all wrong?

They depict it as a land where the only means of locomotion is a husky dog, where the only roads are devil's trails through boundless prairie or rocky paths through endless forest; where the only places of amusement are log-built bars, showing a company hilariously drunk; where nobody lives in anything but a one or two-room log-cabin with pelts and saucapans decorating the walls. Canada, as shown to the world in pictures and magazine stories, is a land where there are no towns and where it is always December.

Your pictorial Canadian hero is a ruffian possessed of superhuman strength, accounting for never less than half a dozen others in one fight, out of which he always emerges utterly unruffled himself. By the same token, your pictorial mounted police, as for instance in "Cameron of the Royal Mounted," are entirely ignorant of their duties, their customs and their dress. They salute with child-like solemnity when their hats are off; the inferiors take it upon themselves to pardon or not pardon, without any re-

The average American is surely too well-balanced to be hoodwinked into believing that directly one steps over the border the snow never melts. In July, 1922, I was over the Canadian northern boundary line into Hyler in Alaska; this July, 1923, I was over the southern U.S.A. border-line into Tia Juana in Mexico. I wore exactly the same amount of clothes in each case, and the temperature was just about the same. North of fifty-two the summer months are as long and lovely as they are in southern California.

But the "eternal snow" illusion is widespread. I once wrote a book about Vancouver Island, which lies off the southernmost part of the British Columbia coast, and offered it to a London publisher. He sent for me to tell me personally that he could not find it according to his conscience to publish a story so basically untrue to actual conditions; that he had had a friend who had been to Canada, and that said friend had found himself unable to wash for six months on account of the Arctic cold. I assured him that I, I who spoke, had lived for many years in British Columbia, and, unlike his anti-bathos friend, had found pleasure and no difficulty in washing frequently. But he looked at me with a jaundiced eye, even when I reminded him that British Columbia itself was as large as Europe, and that one did not crab Monte Carlo because it was sometimes cold in Christiania! He bade me begone, me and my "propaganda." He knew better.

Nearly 75 per cent. of the stories and pictures about Canada are produced by people who have never been there, and who steal their "local color" from stories and poems by Robert Service and Gilbert Parker. Kipling himself, quite unintentionally, gave Canada a black eye, from which she has never recovered, by calling her "Our Lady of the Snows." Why does one never see on the screen the boundless prairies in their mantle of waving yellow grain, or dotted with hillocks of hay, instead of forever under a carpet of snow that never melts?

There are whole districts in British Columbia where it is cheaper to build a log-cabin than to haul lumber for a frame house, but the average Canadian house, even on the prairies, is a frame one and two-storied at that. Many are the families wherein the women of necessity have to help with a man's work, but will the directors of the movies never believe that they are only too willing to change into the most feminine and fetching clothes whenever they can, and the big department stores in Winnipeg, Toronto and Montreal, whose catalogues reach into the uttermost parts of the Canadian hinterland, see to it that they get them? Nor have Canadian womenkind as much surplus time on their hands as the dauntless Nell Shipman would have us believe, to go fishing and shooting and generally cavorting around while the menfolk are waiting for their supper.

The real life of Canada as it is lived still remains to be pictured; the lumberjack's life, the life among the great salmon and halibut fisheries of the coasts, the life of Canadian towns, the life of the farmer as distinct from the rancher, and of the pioneer settler as distinct from both.

But no! editors and producers still spoon-feed the public with the old, hackneyed, traditional life of the "Lady of the Snows" type; with the stories of the James Oliver Curwood type, where the local color is laid on so thick that your real Canadian can't see through the paint. Stories wherein the beautiful but homeless "miss" sleeps out pathetically under a tree and stars, where the superhumanly invincible man of the woods—vide Art Acord in "The Oregon Trail"—in due course finds her just in time to rescue her from the bestial villain dressed in furs: Whereafter they all shoot impossible rapids, leap across canons that would daunt a railway engineering company, ride wild horses and waste more ammunition than they could possibly have carried in a wardrobe trunk, and Reel Five finds them living a peaceful if deadly dull existence, far, far from supplies and a postoffice, with bears and lynxes and cougars dropping in for tea, so to speak.

The Canadian backwoods picture is, more blatantly than any other, made to a standard order. There must be a hero, a villain, and a pretty girl who can do "stunts." They must be dressed in furs, there must be snow, ice, husky dogs, sleighs, wolves—alternated by bears—log-cabins with saucapans on the walls, and enough drinks and "silent Indians" thrown in to go round. There must be a murder, with a French-Canadian mixed up in it, some thrills in the shape of ice-floes, rapids, or falls down vast canons. And in the end, the hero must marry the girl.

The public have stood it for a long, long time. But the public are getting increasingly restless and capricious and critical. Some of them have even traveled farther than the publishers and producers, and have been to Canada. Why can we not, therefore, have something truer to life? Editors and film producers often say that they desire "something new." That would be decidedly new.

Not a Repeater

MRS. BROWN: Now, I think one of the first lessons children should learn is never to repeat things. My little daughter there is a model of discretion. You never repeat things, do you, Annie, dear?

Annie: No, mamma; why, yesterday I saw Cousin Tom Missing Sister Louisa, and I never told anybody about it at all.

THE ADVERTISER.—It is highly desirable that London voters should make sure that the men they elect to the public utilities commission are public ownership advocates. Public ownership is going to stand or fall according to the convictions of the men who make up the boards of publicly-owned enterprises. Messrs. Philip Pocock and Jared Vining have shown where they stand on the matter; they have been tried out and found faithful. A sudden conversion to the idea of public ownership for election purposes is a dangerous thing.

The Springbank Dam

The City Council believe it should be built now. They are asking for a mandate from the people to proceed with its construction.

Improve the River

What citizen having a dirty ditch through his property would not change it into a beautiful pond?
London is one of the best-laid-out and most beautiful cities in Canada.
There is one outstanding opportunity for improvement — both branches of the River Thames meet close to the business section.
Most of the year the river bed is an eyesore and a continuation of stagnant pools.

If You Build the Springbank Dam

It will give citizens the advantage of a water front right at home.
It will change "an eyesore" into a thing of beauty by deepening the water.
It will make boating and aquatic sports possible.
It will tend to make the city more healthy by removing cesspools of foul-smelling water.
The dam will be of modern construction, built with floodgates, to eliminate possibility of flood.

December 3, 1923.

FREE GATHER FOR ST. ANDREW'S FEAST

C. St. Clair Leitch Urges Children Be Taught More About Canada.

GREATEST DEMOCRACY
Edward E. Reid Points Out Absurdities of Certain Teaching Customs.

Three hundred Scotchmen, celebrating with all old-time zest the 64th anniversary of the founding of St. Andrew's Society, at a banquet in the Tecumseh last evening, heard incidentally a keen analysis of the educational system of Canada from the two main speakers of the evening.

C. St. Clair Leitch, K.C., of St. Thomas and Ed. E. Reid of this city, in their speeches, stressed the need for a revision of education in London and in Canada. Mr. Reid said that although Canada per capita had the greatest bank account of the world, it also had the greatest debt per capita in the world. A substantial proportion of the country's wealth was a result of the wasteful educational system.

While Mr. Leitch deplored ignorance of students of the construction of this country Mr. Reid pointed out the absurdities of certain teaching customs. The debt of the Dominion, the province and the municipality of London was simply the expression of the fact that the condition was largely due to new-fangled, inefficient methods of educating children.

Repeating a question asked by Mr. Leitch, Mr. Reid declared he and others would like to know why youngsters who obviously have no inclination for certain kinds of work should be compelled to follow those lines. Why, he said, should boys out to be farmers study algebra and geometry? Why should girls, who have no aptitude at the expense of the public?

These were questions, he added, that should claim the attention of St. Andrew's Society.

Munro Presides.
After a typical Scotch banquet President Rowland Munro, the toastmaster, read messages of congratulation and greetings from societies all over Canada on the occasion of the celebration of St. Andrew's Day.

Replying to the toast to Canada, C. St. Clair Leitch, K.C., paid a tribute to the society's president and the society itself. Canada, he said, was the best exemplification of a pure democracy in the world today.

The concord existing between the federal and provincial governments was something the unknown in the United States, where controversies regarding state and federal jurisdiction were perennially raging.

The educational system of Canada surpassed any other in the world, but there remained tremendous room for improvement. Mr. Leitch went on to say that the public school system of Canada was the best in the world, but it was not wise to disclose any of the details of the constitution of the public school system in this country until the constitution was known.

"That is the big defect of our children," Mr. Leitch said. "The children can tell all about Greece and Rome and mythological battles and the domestic infelicities of King Henry VIII and his wives. Foreigners are not taught farming but algebra and German, which they have no need for. And the teaching of mathematics is virtually a waste of time. Canada per capita has the largest bank account in the world. It also has the largest wheat fields, pulp and paper mills, and forests. It has fisheries, railway, grain elevator, and many other things. Canada shall always remain part and parcel of the North American continent."

Traces development.
Mr. Reid, responding to the toast of St. Andrew's Society, traced the progress and development of the club since 1859, the year of its foundation. He told of hilarious meetings held in the past when interest in the society was at its height. The original members were found in bars, rooms and taverns, which doubtless accounted largely for the mirth and enjoyment of those occasions.

He said that the greatest of many old-time members of the society to their determination and enterprise in securing the very best education in spite of adverse conditions and great handicaps. The obstacles in the way of an education he believed to have been one of the finest things for the children involved.

Ancient and modern Scotch songs were sung at the banquet. Scotch haggis was served with Scotch shortbread.

TO REDUCE FARM TAX BY FIFTY PER CENT

British Columbia Finance Minister Announces Plan in Budget Speech.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Victoria, B. C., Nov. 30.—A reduction of fifty per cent will be made on farm property taxation, but the tax on all other real property in British Columbia will remain as it is, according to the policy of Hon. John Hart, minister of finance, as expressed in his budget speech delivered last night.

The minister said that the personal property tax would be reduced to one-half of one per cent or half of the present rate.

He proposed to place a tax of one-half cent a gallon on fuel oil and a tax of three cents a gallon on gasoline. To compensate motorists for the increased tax on gasoline the government proposes to reduce motor license fees by fifteen per cent.

Estimated revenue for the next year is $18,246, or $400,000 less than the revenue actually received this year, while the estimated expenditures for the next fiscal year total $19,256,413.

bread, and the entire atmosphere was reminiscent of the Land of the Heather. Donald MacIntyre delivered an inspiring talk on "Scotland," and George Garrow, the minstrel of St. Andrew's, after singing "The Wee Hoose 'Mang the Heather," was presented with a set of books to be kept in trust.

Other interesting contributions to the enjoyment of the event were songs of old stories by W. Hollingshead, bagpipe selections by James Hamilton, a song by A. G. Throughout the speeches laudatory reference was often made to J. H. MacIntyre, the bard of St. Andrew's Society, who was present at the banquet.

KING TELLS WORK DONE BY CANADA AT CONFERENCE

Premier Believes Results Will Receive Support of Whole Parliament.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Halifax, N. S., Nov. 30.—Expressing the belief that the results of the Imperial and economic conferences held in London would receive the support of all members of the Dominion Parliament when formally brought down, the Rt. Hon. W. A. Macmillan, prime minister of Canada, tonight told an audience of two thousand in the old country and told them something of the ends achieved.

The premier, who arrived in Halifax this morning after an absence of two months, prefaced his references to the conference with the statement that while he in company with all the representatives of the overseas dominions desired that the greatest possible publicity should be given to the proceedings, there were matters of empire concern discussed which it would be most unwise to disclose and in this reason the strictest secrecy had properly prevailed. He then proceeded to emphasize the point that some of the conclusions reached in London were binding on any of the sister nations, making up the British Commonwealth, and that on the other hand they would be subject to the course to the governments concerned.

Mr. King said in this policy perhaps the result of the conference of 1913, since it tended to further strengthen, in his judgment, the principle of responsible government.

The premier insisted that his visit to Halifax was not a mere courtesy call, but he did say that the problem confronting the British electorate was a very different one from that confronting a protected country, and that he was in the solution of a problem involving tariff revision.

COLOR AND TONE FILM PRODUCTION AT GRAND OPERA

Portmanteau Theatre Company Avoids Too Much Detail and Realism.

ARTISTS ARE CAPABLE

Dedicated to imagination, youth and the eternal spirit of play the Portmanteau Theatre Company which, under the personal direction of Stuart Walker, opened a two-day engagement in the Grand Opera House last night, does not require elaborate scenic investiture to produce its effects. In fact it is one of Mr. Walker's beliefs that there is too much detail, too much realism on the stage of today. He aims to produce his effects by color and line, by presenting his plays so that their atmosphere is not so realistic that the beholder imagines he is living the scenes he sees enacted, nor does he forget that he is a theatre, and that it all is phantasy or pretension. This is the Walker idea. He works it out with a company of rarely capable artists, unassisted by the ordinary stage trappings, depending upon the strength of characterization and wonderful lighting effects for its success. The result is a series of delightfully charming and impressively rich pictures, filled with masses of color and tone, but blurred in outline. The audience in the Grand Opera House last evening enjoyed it as a novelty and, to London, an innovation.

Last evening's bill-of-fare consisted of three short one-act playlets and one three act production. Practically no scenery was used, the company building what might be termed a box stage within a stage, and depending for the most part upon simple back-drops. Indeed, in two of the earlier playlets the scenery was set while the audience watched.

The first playlet, "The Murderers," by Lord Dunsany is bizarre in the extreme. Two workmen meet in a public house where the brother of one has previously been murdered. The brother recounts the story of the tragedy and reiterates his determination to aid in the capture of the murdered man matter who he may be. Enters a detective in the guise of a third workman who, by deduction, elicits that one of the two is the culprit.

Brother Relents.
Then comes the moment of the arrest, but instead of assisting in the processes of the law, the brother of the victim aids his friend to strangle the officer and the corpse is left on the stage. Gruesome and grotesque, but powerful and exceedingly well done.

"Nevertheless," the second of the collection, is a little childish sketch having for its characters a fourteen-year-old boy, his younger sister, and a burglar. The workmen meet in a public house while the children are being punished for the use of incorrect English. Follows the reading of a child's story which, in its application, is supposed to lead to the reformation of the burglar.

The third, "The Medicine Show," presents three typical characters of a southern village, the motif being the unwillingness of men of their type to work. Dialogue smart and humorous, characters well drawn and capably presented.

The closing play, from the pen of Lord Dunsany, "The Gods of the Mountains," is like nothing so much as a tale from the Arabian Nights, fantastic, but carrying a powerful moral lesson—the penalty that inevitably follows upon deception. In this seven beggars impersonate gods to prey upon the superstition and credulity of the people of a city whose generosity has not been marked.

Punished By Gods.
Success attends them until the gods, enraged with the blasphemous imposture, visit them with punishment so terrible and so well presented that the audience leaves the theatre in a mental maze, wondering at the complete artistry and the simplicity of the entire entertainment.

The closing scene is the most remarkable of its kind ever seen by the writer and probably by the great majority of those who witnessed it last night. By the power of the angry gods the seven impostors are turned from men to green jade idols, assuming the color of the deities, whose identity they assumed. The whole is accomplished by weird lighting. The effect cannot be adequately described. The human or godly flesh loses its warm tints and becomes a ghastly translucent green, while the facial expressions and stiff posturings are startling in their terrible realism.

George Sommes, who plays the leads in the two Dunsany plays "The Murderers" and "The Gods of the Mountains," in this regard, ranks with the best. Not even that great actor, Sir Johnson Forbes Robinson, can surpass him for mellow tone and perfect elocution, and it is a distinct pleasure to hear him render his beautiful lines.

Matured Actor.
Aldrich Bowker is a sterling matured actor. His work throughout was artistic in the extreme. Whether as Tom, the brother of the murdered man in the first playlet, the burglar in the second, the village gossip in "The Medicine Show" or the bibulous beggar turned god in the final production his every speech and action carried the hall mark of quality. The other members of a large company are all artists. Today at the matinee performance the company will present plays for children, and tonight will close with "The Book of Job." This is a production of rare beauty and artistry which has received the unqualified endorsement of the clergy. In it the character of Job is played by Mr. Sommes. The Dunsany plays presented last night, aside from their dramatic values, are remarkable, too, for the beauty of their lines. "The Gods of the Mountains," in particular, is a noble work of ironic comedy, weird, grim, picturesque, colorful and thrilling, and a fine example of the functioning of the law of poetic justice. The presentation readily reveals the great beauties of the composition. Special music is presented by an instrumental trio. Altogether a splendid company in a series of most remarkable productions. It is doubtful if London will see its like again for a long time.
