A MYSTERIOUS QUEST.

CHAPTER XXXIX. Another Turn of the Wheel.

(Concluded.)

But their emotion, evident as it was, was nothing to her. She, the self-possessed, seemed in one short moment absolutely overcome by what she saw before her; and though she came in and advanced with outstretched hand to greet them, she did this in a manner so different from her accustomed one, that Jenny knew that her friend was moved by some extraordinary emotion of fear or astonishment, and turned faint almost to the point of sinking.

'Mr. Degraw! Jenny! I did not think to find you here together,' she ejaculated, with a pointed look. Jenny seized hold of a small table near her to steady herself, and cast an entreating glance upon her friend.

'That friend did not see it, or failed to understand it.'

'I have just come from an interview with Mr. Degraw, of Cleveland whom I met unexpectedly at Tiffany's this morning,' Miss Aspinwall continued. 'He told me you had engaged yourself to him, Jenny; and I came here.' Her full sweet look at the artist told why. But nobody saw that look. He and Jenny were both absorbed in the one wild glance each had cast upon the other at the utterance of these fatal words.

'What facts are these?' exclaimed the artist, after one terrible moment. 'You have engaged yourself to my rival, and now come here—'

'Oh, I can explain it,' interrupted Jenny. 'I can explain it. He came when I thought myself deserted, offered his hand without condition, and— and— I listened to him.'

'And are you solemnly engaged to marry him?'

'Not now, not now; I wrote to him to-day, after I heard from you. I could not keep my word to him when I found that you still loved me; and I told him—'

Sure Cure For Thrush

Worst Cases Yield To Douglas' Egyptian Liniment

Mr. J. L. Boyer, Secretary of the Napanee Driving Park Association has had a good deal of experience with thrush on horses feet, and has tried various remedies. He writes:— 'I have cured had cases of diseased feet or thrush on horses with Douglas' Egyptian Liniment with two or three applications, after cleaning, with cast oil, etc., had completely failed to do the work. I consider it a waste of time to use anything but Egyptian Liniment for thrush.'

child-like being of a moment ago. 'You say I am still under obligations to Mr. Degraw,' she asserted, moving toward the door. 'As it is but four o'clock now, and he was not expected at my house till four, you may be right. I will go and see.'

And with a bow and slight gesture to Mrs. Dutton, she vanished from the room, while the artist stood shaken and undecided, not knowing what this sudden change might betoken.

She went immediately down-stairs to her carriage. She stepped quickly and seemed impatient at Mrs. Dutton's slower gait. 'I am in haste!' she cried out, more than once.

'In haste, my dear?' inquired that lady, as she took her seat in the carriage.

'Yes, yes,' retorted Jenny, giving her orders to the coachman, with feverish impetuosity. 'I have business at home. Pray God, I may not be too late.'

She glanced at Hilary's carriage, standing close by, though it held more than one person whom she knew.

'I hope,' mildly insinuated Mrs. Dutton, as they rode rapidly up the avenue, 'that you are not going to do anything injudicious.'

'I cannot say,' was Jenny's response.

'The way is dark before me; I only know that I must get home, and that, before Mr. Degraw, of Cleveland, has called.'

The truth was that she was terrified at the letter she had written him. As she saw the matter now, it seemed the wildest, maddest thing, she could have done. She must have that letter back!

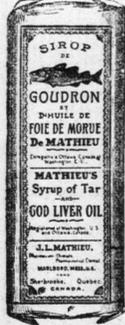

PERSISTENT COUGH.

Wherever soothing syrups fail to cure that persistent cough which exhausts you, of Tar and Cod Liver Oil and other medicinal extracts will rapidly and definitely rid you from it.

MATHIEU'S SYRUP

The merits of Mathieu's Syrup are highly recognized and endorsed. Here are a few proofs:—

PORT GREVILLE, C.B., Dec. 31, '09. Blacking & Mercantile Co.'s, Ltd. Dear Sirs,—Please ship by next express if possible, 3 doz. Mathieu's Syrup. It is the best cough mixture on the market. Yours truly, W. STERLING.

CHURCH POINT, July 31, '08. Blacking & Mercantile Co.'s, Ltd., Amherst, N.S. Dear Sirs,—Nearly one year ago I had my first order of Mathieu's Syrup from you. It was not known in this country, and I gave samples to several families whom I knew would use it. After a few weeks I began to have a call for it, and trade has increased wonderfully since. I have not the least doubt but that it will soon be the best selling remedy for coughs, colds, etc., on the market. In my store here sales are good and our people ask for it. Several stores in this country now keep it in stock and reports sales increasing. I have bought from you since August 18th, 1907, 4 Gross and have only three dozen on hand at this date, and which I am holding for retail trade in my store. Yours truly, LOUIS A. McLANSON.

AGAINST HEADACHE there is no remedy so active as Mathieu's Nerve Powders which contain no opium, morphine or chloral. 25 cents per box of 18 powders.

at whatever cost, at whatever risk, she must destroy the words which she had written, in the heat of her love and devotion to the artist. Were Providence only kind, she would yet reach home in time to stay the hand of the girl ordered to deliver it. Wrote her expected visitor but delayed by ten minutes, she would be there before him and all would be well again. For fewer explanations than she had given him would suffice for her release; just the simple statement of her affection for the artist would be sufficient.

But when she came in sight of her home and saw that a carriage was just driving away, she became greatly frightened, and leaning from the window, begged the coachman to drive faster. In an instant more she was upon her own stoop and awaiting impatiently for the door to be opened. When it at last swung back, she asked, breathlessly: 'Has Mr. Degraw been here?'

The answer she received made her catch wildly at both lintels for support. 'Yes, miss; he has just driven away. I gave him your excuse, and handed him the package. You can see his carriage there, just turning the corner.'

CHAPTER XL.

The Wheel Becomes a Rack.

Jenny Rogers did not allow her agitation to keep her long inactive. Running down the steps, she bade the coachman to follow the carriage before him to the Westminster Hotel, and jumping into her own, took her seat at the side of Mrs. Dutton, crying:

'Do not speak to me! I may seem rude, but you would not think so if you knew.'

And Mrs. Dutton, looking in her face, took a new view of the situation, and began to feel very nervous herself and think that the horses went too slowly. Yet they rode fast, and were soon in sight of the Westminister. But not before Mr. Degraw's carriage had driven away from before the hotel steps.

'He has got there; he has gone to his rooms. What shall we do? I cannot call upon him!' cried Jenny, despairingly.

'I will call. I am an old lady,' said Mrs. Dutton, sympathetically. It was not for her interest to have this engagement broken off.

'Oh, if you will! Stop him before he reads my letter. Say to him that Miss Rogers regrets the sending of it, and requests to have it back unopened.'

'I will do all I can,' the elderly lady assured her; and though she could not hasten her movements very much, being both fleshy and phlegmatic, she made an appearance of doing so, which at least showed her good-will.

She alighted and went in, and Jenny sat counting the minutes as they passed. They were interminable, and her suspense rose almost to anguish. Last was she relieved when she at last saw Mrs. Dutton re-appear. For the expression upon the widow's face was one of failure, and Jenny was not at all surprised to hear in another minute:

'They kept me waiting an unreasonable length of time in the parlor. And when Mr. Degraw did at last come down, I saw that he had read your letter.'

Jenny leaned back in her carriage, faint and sick. 'Drive, I don't care whither!' she cried, closing her eyes to the world and all that was in it. But the next minute she started up. 'I must see Dyke, Garfield, Delaney, Miss L.,'

'I must see Dyke, Garfield, Delaney, Miss L., late Goulds Diamond, Mrs. Wm. card, Cabot Street.'

A LITTLE DANDIE MAKE YOUR HAIR SOFT, FLUFFY,

Get a 25 Cent Bottle Now and Forever Stop Falling Hair, Itching Scalp and Dandruff

If you Wish to Double the Beauty of your Hair in Ten Minutes surely Try a Danderine Hair Cleanse

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

A delightful surprise awaits particularly those who have been careless, whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair of dandruff, cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

Try as you will, after one application of Danderine you cannot find any dandruff or a loose or falling hair, and your scalp will never itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair sprouting all over the scalp. Danderine makes the hair grow long, heavy and luxuriant and we can prove it. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any druggist or toilet counter, and just try it.

Prescription "A"

Cures Indigestion and Dyspepsia in all its Forms.

It is quite a daily occurrence to hear persons say: Oh, what a feeling of distress I have after meals, fullness of the stomach, heaviness and headache, I feel too tired to do anything. I have no heart to exert myself, and at times I care for nothing. I often have a pain in the pit of the stomach, no appetite, my heart beats rapidly on the slightest exertion. I feel just as tired when rising in the morning as when retiring to bed. My sleep is often disturbed, and I often awake with a sense of suffocation and a difficulty of again going to sleep. I have to be careful of what I eat, and my life seems a veritable burden.

Now, it seems a shame and a pity for persons to be suffering like that when it is in their power to get cured by taking a bottle of Dr. Stafford's Prescription A. A sure cure for persons afflicted with stomach troubles. It can be obtained at

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

Are you growing?

Of course, I don't mean growing physically. I mean are you developing in any way, or are you standing still, or even retrograding?

It seems to me that is a question which each one of us ought to ask himself at least once a year. And what better time than this, the end of the first lap of the New Year, to ask it?

I'll tell you what made me think of this subject. A college girl who had been out of college ten years went to a reunion. At that reunion one of her classmates who is a music teacher played a piano solo. The first girl is a teacher, but she understands a good deal about music and she realized at once that her classmate had improved to a wonderful degree in her playing. And not only did she play infinitely better than she had during her college days, but even better than she had three or even two years ago.

Then the first girl said to herself—"Gertrude has been growing every year since she left college. She hasn't stood still and rested on her laurels—although she has had plenty of them—one instant. She has just kept on developing. Now, am I doing that? Am I as much better, as a teacher, than I was the first year I left college, as Gertrude is as a musician? Am I a better teacher now than I was two or three years ago?"

And after she had put this question she wasn't at all sure what the answer ought to be.

Are YOU growing? Are YOU developing every year? Would anyone, who could understand, be able to see a distinct advance in your proficiency over your standard of two or three years ago?

Are you, each year, a better teacher, a more accurate proof-reader, a more efficient business man, a more gripping preacher?

Are you—I've saved this for a separate paragraph, because I know there would be a large class of people who would want to remind me that they did not need my question, because they had neither talent to develop, nor profession or business to master—are you each year a better home-maker, are you each year a more livable member of society?

You, who follow that most humble and yet most exalted profession of home-making, you whose talents are the talents of the soul and character rather than of the brain or fingers, remember that there is just as much technique in home-making as there is in piano playing. Remember that there are just as many graduations, just as vast possibilities for development and improvement in the art of livableness as in the art of painting or writing.

The greatest principle of life is perpetual growth. When anything in the vegetable world ceases to grow it begins to decay.

To a certain extent this is true in the immaterial world, also.

So, if you want to guard yourself and your powers from decay and decline, take the only sure method—keep on growing all the time.

Facts for Weak Women

Nine-tenths of all the sickness of women is due to some derangement or disease of the organs distinctly feminine. Such sickness can be cured—is cured every day by

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

It Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

It acts directly on the organs affected and is at the same time a general restorative tonic for the whole system. It cures female complaint right in the privacy of home. It makes unnecessary the disagreeable questioning, examinations and local treatment so universally insisted upon by doctors, and so abhorrent to every modest woman.

We shall not particularize here as to the symptoms of those peculiar affections incident to women, but those wanting full information as to their symptoms and means of positive cure are referred to the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser—1008 pages, newly revised and up-to-date Edition, sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only; or, in cloth binding for 50 stamps.

Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Fads and Fashions.

Sweater suits for small boys and girls show a basket weave border, which decorates the small toboggan cap, the coat sweater and the leggings.

Nothing is daintier for evening slippers than the buckles and bow-knots of silver or gilt or rhinestones that are shown in such bewildering variety.

Large draped or shirred velvet hats in black or seal brown are smart for afternoon wear. Little trimming appears on these, usually a small aigrette.

White revers on coats are trimmed with two different widths of black velvet ribbon and the hats seen at the European winter resorts show quantities of ribbon.

A single revers of lace with tiny collar and cuffs to match is a pretty finish for the blouse of dark chiffon or lace, and these sets may now be bought in exclusive shops.

Corsage bouquets of orchids, lily of the valley and violets, wonderfully natural, even to the perfume, are being worn to lend a finishing touch of color to the evening gowns.

Paris is using laces, real and imitation, by the quantity, and chintilly has returned to its one time favor, when the ex-Empress Eugenie wore it in profusion as scarfs and flouncings.

Short dresses just shown are from six to eight inches wider than they were six months ago. The long panel effects are retained, so are the inset borders or "pleated out" effects that cut into a fabric.

Tulle bands, embroidered in flower designs with heavy linen or cotton thread, attractively trim the hand-tucked blouses of sheer linen. These bands are used instead of insertion of lace or embroidery.

A white cloth trimmed with black velvet shows long sleeves and a bolero of velvet, the latter having a postilion back; belt of velvet in folds, and an overskirt of ruby-red taffeta with a wide opening in front.

In the evening elaborate coiffures are worn and many silver and gold lace bands and caps are worn with full dress and for the theatre. Aigrettes and paradise plumes are now in the hair, but rarely flowers.

Fleehus continue to be fashionable. Tulle, either plain or fringed, is the favorite material for making these pretty, cloudlike trimmings. They are used frequently to trim negliges of crepe de chine or soft satin.

Little or no false hair is now the fashion. Pompadours are entirely passé, and parts in the middle or on the side reign supreme. Bars are covered with soft, wavy strands of hair, and the psyche knot is the favorite.

Some colors can be shut out, red cannot be, and it is coming in fast as a dress trimming, hat decoration, etc., not as the entire specimen. Glowing empire red, American beauty, coral pink are all new shades, or others revived, to brighten up black, green, purple, dark blue, brown or gray.

Chiffon and satins are the favorite materials for evening gowns. The heavily spangled gowns had their day, and where spangles are used at all, it is more in the form of embroidery combined with beads, round and tubular. Tubular fringe is much used, and quantities of gold and silver lace.

Coral brooches, earrings and pendants on gold chains have been revived as cameos, sprays, etc., alone or with diamonds, as the dewdrop in the heart of a rose, or as a tiny beading around a cameo set in knife edge of gold. The light coral is very becoming, but avoid the deep shadings, as this gives a purplish cast to even a fair complexion.

Shot or opalescent chiffon taffeta is taken for odd, little waists covered with chiffon in black, blue, gray, purple shades, etc., and bands of plain satin embroidered with oriental silk and beads introduced as cuffs, tiny yoke, plastron, empiement, etc., long sleeves with puff at wrist or a large puff at elbow held out by "feather-bone" in balloon style.

"Jimmied" Their Way In.

New York, Jan. 22.—Bent on robbing the safe in the Post Office at New Hyde Park, L. I., thieves jimmied their way into the building. They knew that there was a considerable sum of money in Postmaster Philip J. Miller's safe, and they were "doubtless surprised, after they had blown a safe open, to find nothing, but a few papers and some books. The joke was really on them, as they cracked the wrong safe—the one with the money in it, undisturbed, stood intact in another part of the building when Miller opened the place to-day.

The thieves did not have time to crack the other safe, as they feared the noise they made in blowing the first one might have attracted attention.

The safe they blew belonged to John Wenoske, a grocer, who occupied part of the building, and was used by him to protect his books and papers.

A BROKEN-DOWN SYSTEM.

This is a condition (or disease) to which doctors give many names, but which few of them really understand. It is simply weakness—a broken-down system. No matter what may be its causes (for they are almost numberless), its symptoms are much the same: the more prominent being sleeplessness, sense of prostration or weariness, depression of spirits and want of energy for all the ordinary affairs of life. Now, what alone is absolutely essential in all such cases is increased vitality—vigor.

The Milk Supply.

We are in receipt of letters and enclosures from Dr. Wakefield, Medical Officer of the P. C. In it he deals with the importance of a pure milk supply in order to combat the ravages of consumption. He refers to the abnormally high infant mortality rate of the city, and points out the successful efforts to reduce infant mortality by providing a pure milk supply. He states also that there are 250 cases of active consumption to-day which have arisen from infected milk, etc. He says the danger may be entirely avoided by boiling all milk. The A. P. C. are seriously tackling the problem and have already secured the cooperation of our leading farmers. The enclosures are three in number. One is a small pamphlet of instructions to cow keepers. Another is a card to be hung up in the cowsheds with short instructions printed in bold type. The third is a sheet of instructions to housekeepers on a practical method of keeping milk vessels and bottles germ proof. The chief points in the latter are the thorough cleansing of the vessels with cold water, their immersion in a pan of cold water raised to the boiling point and the keeping of the vessels in the boiling water five minutes and the placing of the vessels with mouth down to prevent the entrance of dust which may be laden with disease germs. We commend these matters to the attention of all our readers. Experience elsewhere has proved that the courses recommended lead to a reduction of both infant mortality and the devastations of consumption. There is probably no place in the civilized world where it is more essential and where a campaign is more urgently needed than in Newfoundland. It should command itself to the community at large, and enlist the active support and individual co-operation of every one of us.

Hr. Grace Notes.

The two Bell Island steamers were detained here all day Sunday and yesterday owing to the storm. Both left this morning for the island. We are sorry to report that Const. M. Grouchy has been confined to his home for some time through illness. We hope he will soon be out again. Sunday night and yesterday brought us the worst storm for the season, all the roads and lanes are now blocked with snow, and it is almost impossible to get about. No doubt the Road Board will have the principal streets at least made passable as quickly as possible. The services in the different churches were very poorly attended owing to the fierce storm raging on Sunday. Some devout people, however, ventured out and were pleased with what they heard other people say of them since: "Only good people brave such storms." But still a lot of good people stay at home.

Another old and much respected resident of this town conquered the last enemy, and passed the portals of the Great Beyond, on Friday last, the 26th inst. in the person of Mr. Patrick Foley, of Ship Head. Mr. Foley, who was 73 years of age, had been unable to attend to any work for the past three years. He followed the sea nearly all his life, or at least for fifty years. He was a good neighbour and a quiet man and his death is regretted by all who knew him. He leaves beside a widow three sons—Joseph, in Boston; Joseph, in New York; and James at home; he also leaves two daughters—Mrs. (Annie) Gardner and Mrs. (Nellie) Craig, both living in Boston. The funeral took place on Sunday and notwithstanding the fierce storm raging over 100 people attended the remains to the grave, thus testifying to the esteem in which deceased was held. The undertaking was in charge of Mr. Albert Rogers.

Heavy Ice in Gulf

The following message was received by the R. N. Co. from Capt. Taylor last night re ice conditions, etc., in the Gulf:—"On trip to Louisburg encountered heavy N. E. gale with ice packed in south of Burgeo shore. Impossible to reach North Sydney and decided to go to Louisburg. Left that port at 2:30 am. Monday. Steamed 30 miles to south of Scatarie, found the ice heavy but clear at noon. Had to return to the ice as it was too thick to proceed and the sea was running heavy with N. E. gale. Left ice last midnight 6 miles S. E. of Channel. Experienced N. to N.W. gales all day."

The Glencoe Coming East.

The S. S. Glencoe did not reach Port aux Basques till 9 o'clock last night, having had a slow and difficult run from Louisburg. As the road from Port aux Basques is not open Mr. G. Reid wired Capt. Taylor to come right on to St. John's, she accordingly left at 2:15 this morning. The ship has 75 packages of mail and these passengers in saloon:—W. R. Goobie, H. J. Brownrigg, P. Power, J. T. Pettipas, J. S. Mollisac, P. A. Boulas and J. F. Meehan. She is due here on Friday.

Obituary.

We regret to record the death of Mr. Edward J. Kiely, which occurred at his residence, Rawlins's Cross, last night. The deceased had been ill for several months past and his death has not been unexpected. Mr. Kiely was well known and respected and for many years served with Mr. James Stott, and before retiring from there held the position of foreman. Since then he has engaged in business at his late home. He leaves to mourn him a widow, one son, mother, two sisters, Mrs. Frank McNamara and Miss Etta Kiely, and one brother, Mr. Jno. Kiely, of Kavanagh's pharmacy. To the bereaved relatives the Telegram extends its sympathy.

CHANGE OF CAPTAINS.

This trip of the Florizel, Capt. Williams is in command of the ship, as Capt. Smith remained in New York as it might be possible he would take charge of the Stephano, Capt. Clarke being ill for a while, though he went South in the ship. Capt. Smith will take charge of the Florizel when she returns to New York.

Cable News.

Special to Evening Telegram. CAIRO, Jan. 30. Lord Kitchener, British Agent in Egypt, has gone to Assouan to arrange for conveyance to England of the remains of the Duke of Fife.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30. "I am convinced that Roosevelt will be the next President of the United States," said Governor Stubbs of Kansas, after a conference with Roosevelt.

DEVONPORT, Jan. 30. The crew of the British brig, Bella Rosa, from Macao, Brazil, for Newfoundland, have been picked up by the French barque Valparaiso. Reports do not give details of what happened to the Bella Rosa.

LONDON, Jan. 30. The Daily News states that during their stay in the South of France, Bonar Law and Sir Max Aitken will frame the scale of a suggested tariff for the United Kingdom. Aitken has been especially asked to assist, because of his considerable experience of Canadian tariffs, and because he is generally believed to have the best financial judgment of any of the present generation of Unionists.

LONDON, Jan. 30. The Government will introduce a drastic measure at the forthcoming session of Parliament dealing with private banks. The Bill provides for a rigid system of Government inspection on the lines that obtain in some of the Colonies, and for a deposit of ample securities with the Government in cases of new banks. The proposal is the direct sequel of the Haring Cross and Birkbeck Bank disasters.

GIBRALTAR, Jan. 30. King George and Queen Mary arrived to-day on the steamer Medford, which is floating at half mast in honour of the death in Egypt of the Duke of Fife, the King's brother-in-law. The programme arranged for the reception of their Majesties has been greatly curtailed owing to the Royal visitors being in mourning. The Spanish fleet, flying off Algeciras, and the British fleet at Gibraltar, saluted the Medina as she entered the harbor. A Moorish delegation will be presented to the King during his stay here.

His Excellency the Governor in Council has been pleased to appoint Jas. St. Pierre Knight, Esq., M.B. Ch. B., to be District Surgeon, St. John's East, in place of H. L. Resumed Voyage. Work on the S. S. Kanawha which put in here with a big list after a stormy voyage, and after being on fire, was finished yesterday. The vessel was from London and was in a pretty bad state on reaching here. The repairs were done in a very satisfactory manner by the Reid Mfg. Co. In 1873 he was appointed Sheriff of the Supreme Court, and occupied that position for about 25 years, after which time he was put on the pension list. Mrs. T. J. Duley is an adopted daughter. He is survived by a widow, who is also an octogenarian, to both of whom the Telegram extends its sympathy.

More Mediterranean Shipments. The S. S. Galveston left New York for this port on Thursday night last with a cargo of goods for the Mediterranean. She was consigned to M. Morey & Co., and is due here to-day. When discharged she will be laden with 4,500 casks and other fish and other goods for the Mediterranean. The Kamford, which is also due from Sydney with coal, will later be loaded for Mediterranean ports.

Drunken Sailor Runs Amuck. Yesterday evening a sailor on the barq. E. S. Hocken, discharging sand ballast at Job's premises, while filled up with "benzene," ran amuck on the ship and terrorized the crew, whom he assaulted severely and collectively. The crew eventually rushed on him and, throwing him to the deck, bound his feet with a rope. The man's yells and imprecations could be heard through the rigging. He was taken to the Sparrow and Const. O'Keefe arrived a new element had entered into the affair, for the crew, who before were busy holding the man, were now strenuously engaged keeping in leash a large dog which made desperate attempts to get at the thrashing seaman, and which would have torn him badly had it got away. The officers had to handcuff the man, and then to get him ashore was the trouble. The ship was flying light and her bulwarks were high over the pier, with no gangway about. The straggling tar was then lowered away through the rigging to the wharf and driven to the station.

Firemen Seek More Money.

Last night a largely attended meeting of the Firemen's Union was held in the rooms of the L. S. P. U. when it was decided to ask $8 per week for stokers engaged on sealing ships during the summer, which is an increase of 50 cents. The Reid Mfg. Co. will be asked to grant the same rate to those on the Bay boats while they lay up. Delegate Woods will interview the owners, the manager, and the Reid Mfg. Co. will be written that the stokers will be taken off the Solway on arrival and also from their other ships if the increase is not granted. It was also decided that no Union men will go in their boats when they start the Bay service in the spring unless the increase is granted. Stokers on the sealing steamers at the icefields get $25 per month and it was decided to ask for them $30 and a share of the voyage. The increase was not granted they refuse to sail in the sealers this spring.

Gaspe's Crew Desert.

The Gaspe, laden by Jas. Baird, Ltd., was again ready for sea yesterday forenoon and hailed out in the stream. Several men of the crew who were on "time" left her and officers Keefe and Nugent rounded them up, and as they put off from Baird's wharf in a boat, a fourth seaman put in an appearance and was taken on board. The officers had a desperate time with the men as they rowed towards the ship, and two of them, who wanted to jump overboard and swim ashore, had to be held down in the bottom of the boat while they struggled furiously. In the afternoon the ship was being towed down stream by the John Green when two others of the Gaspe's crew jumped into a boat towing alongside and rowed ashore. The vessel as a result was again held up and anchored in the stream. The runaways were captured by officer Tobin during the afternoon and lodged in jail. The vessel should get away to-day.

Fr. Vaughan Creates a Stir

Among New York Society Women, Demanding Modern Dances — Speaks in Plain Terms to a Big Audience at Brooklyn.

New York, Jan. 20.—Speaking to a big audience, among whom were many society women, in the Brooklyn Academy of Music, Rev. Bernard Vaughan, the noted English Jesuit preacher, expressed strong views against the society craze for such dances as the "Apache" and the "Turkey Trot." As usual, the eminent speaker adhered to his custom of calling a spade a spade.

"If proper dancing is all the world over a recognized and exhilarating pastime—improper dancing, on the contrary, is a practice that is intoxicating and therefore to be ostracised from every decent vaudeville, and, still more, from every private drawing room," he said.

"To any one with even the most elementary knowledge of physiology, it is apparent that the movements in the so-called dances of the 'Apache' character can result in nothing making for righteousness or even decency. Men and women do not happen to be felines or sleighs, nor are they automata or gramophones. Not even are they oysters or jelly fish. They are human beings, and unlike asbestos, are very susceptible to fire.

"The so-called dances bearing very suspicious names are forces calculated to awaken animal passion and to set youth on fire, and it is quite impossible to consider what sort of a patent fire engine could extinguish such enkindled flames either in this world or the world to come.

"It would not be a bad plan to have the boss ready to play on people who dare to defy the public conscience by indulging in vicious movements whose tendencies are recognized to be so injurious to civic morality that those responsible for the decency and welfare of our great cities felt themselves compelled to inhibit, such criminal practices in halls licensed for dancing."

The address was applauded heartily, and at its close many women of fashion sought out Father Vaughan and said he was unquestionably in the right. The matter had been presented to them so forcefully that they saw the dances in a new light.

Search For a Bride.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Exeter have been entertaining a large shooting party at Burghley House, Stamford, England.

The mansion has 145 rooms, and the banqueting hall is only surpassed by that of Westminster. It is famous also for its state beds, one of the finest of which is that used by Queen Elizabeth on the occasion she visited her great grandson.

The first Marquis of Exeter married the only child and heiress of Mr. Thomas Vernon, a Worcestershire squire, but the result was unhappy and in 1791 he divorced her. He then took to travelling about the country on foot, and at Bolas, in Shropshire met a girl of exquisite beauty and great natural refinement, but bearing the distinctly unromantic name of Sarah Cloggin. He married her, and took to travelling about the country learnt for the first time the real identity of her husband.

Redmond's Opinion.

The following opinion recently expressed by John Redmond is an aid in understanding his character and the cause he advocates. Mr. Redmond said:

"I have been asked to state exactly what an Irish Parliament would do if created to-morrow. In such a Parliament, many of the old fighting faces of men who took part in winning the restoration of the Parliament will be present, but there will be many other men there—men of moderate views on both sides of existing controversies, who have been quite unable, owing to the circumstances, to take part in the work of the Imperial Parliament.

"There will be many business men there who are precluded absolutely from serving their country in the Parliament at Westminster. There will be many professional men there—men representing science, literature, and art. There will be representatives of the old landed gentry, and men of all creeds. And, if I understand the feeling of Irishmen aright, you will have non-Catholics in that House in a far larger proportion than their numbers would warrant, as compared with the Catholics of the country. The old parties will have disappeared; there will be no fierce controversies to arouse passion in our country. The last of those controversies centered round the land question, which has already been settled. Those in England who will be looking out for violent scenes, extravagant language, or revolutionary proposals will be woefully disappointed."

Saint John's as It Might Be.

BY A. STANLEY HARVEY.

A stately ship was, with pugnacious obstinacy, forcing her way through the rough and indignant hissing sea, making for a bold and rocky coast, upon which the waves in broken columns were dashing themselves in loud tones of anger. The passengers crowding her decks were of all nationalities and creeds. Leaning impatiently over the rail were two young girls of the beautiful English type—"Babs" and "Priscilla," the former eighteen and the latter twenty-two—who were on their way back to England after three months of "globe trotting," and had decided on no account to leave out St. John's, the "city beautiful."

"Oh," screamed "Babs" suddenly. "Priscilla" look we are going to run into that awful cliff!" "Priscilla" looked, and trying to smile and look brave, failed miserably. She stood with a half-dazed look in her eyes and stared at the awful cliff. "Captain, captain!" she yelled out "Babs" in terror. The captain, a fine jolly old sea bouncer, came slowly along the deck, glanced at the frowning walls of rock, and, noting the cause of "Babs'" terror and alarm, smiled. "Watch" was all he said. On came the ship towards the cliff; then slowly and cautiously an opening appeared in the huge wall of rock, and the ship sailed through, the wild waves lashed the cliff in fury, and then, silently and artfully, the Arcades glided into a narrow channel, beautifully calm and placid. The sight which greeted "Babs'" eyes was lovely beyond words. "Priscilla," she exclaimed, "don't speak to me, I want to watch."

On the left was a tall lighthouse, strong and solid as it faced the angry sea; around the building were glorious trees and beautifully planned walks; on the right was a bold cliff towering far above the masts of the Arcades, and midway up it there seemed to be a road, so thickly hidden by trees that it was impossible to detect anything; and "monarching all it surveyed" was a building on the very crest which the captain called Cabot Tower, lovely and grand in its position, stern and moving in architecture, but softened by a park-like suggestion of green and waving branches. As they steamed on the sight of the city of St. John's burst upon them in its full glory. "How beautiful," murmured "Priscilla." "Beautiful indeed, is that all? Why, I think it's ripping," declared "Babs." "I believe it beats Venice, Athens, Nice, Genoa, Naples and all the dear old cities of the Old World. Just look at the trees and the position of those buildings; how artistic Newfoundlanders are." The city before them swept round in a triumphant semi-circle, rising higher and higher with its mighty buildings of pure white, partly hidden by the tall and wonderful trees for which St. John's was noted. Right on the top, crowning and guarding the city by night and day, the captain pointed out the Roman Catholic Cathedral; on its right, lower down the city's slope, stood the Anglican Cathedral of Gothic architecture; still lower rose the massive Court House, and next to it the museum; church after church, building after building was pointed out by the captain. On the south side of the harbor, which they were entering, the South Side Hills rose in magnificent grandeur, with their "bald spots" cunningly concealed by groves of mountain ash and birch. "Nature is certainly good to these people, and they know how to assist her," said "Priscilla."

Ten minutes later (there are no delays in St. John's) the Arcades was snug to her pier. The pier was perfect, being of concrete, and very roomy; all was bustle, but of a systematic kind. Soon our travellers were on their way to their hotel at Fort William. They drove along Duckworth Street, which was beautifully kept, well paved and bright with trees and grass plots. Arriving at the hotel the calman asked in a hesitating way for 25 cents, and was promptly given $1.00 by our generous friends, who ran in full of praises of horse, cab and driver. The hotel, which was fairly new, was built of pure white marble, set in handsome grounds of terraces, walks, trees, and exquisite gardens with fountains playing everywhere. One day and a half only was allowed them in this "City of Beauty," so "Priscilla" said. "When in Rome do as Rome does," so we must hustle." After lunch (St. John's is fashionable) they took a tram to visit the Museum. The tram was "Oh, so lovely." "Babs" said later, "and went so smoothly—no bumps, no creaks, no noise at all." The Museum was full of strange animals and lovely birds, and was very interesting, everything being out of Newfoundland only.

A Park in the extreme West End, with its singular beauty of flowers, gardens and delicious fountains, together with its unique setting amidst the glory of the Waterford Valley was the next scene visited. A tram brought them back to the city, and they decided to walk around the "city beautiful."

Cleanliness was everywhere—no dust, no mud, no evil smells; and on the trees, great tall ones, seemed to grow everywhere, shedding forth their beauty and charm all about. On the square at the top of Church Hill was one sight of unequalled loveliness. Beautiful flowers in all sizes and colors were filling the air with their fragrance, trees waving their leafy branches in the still air, enclosed lovely and shady walks, and in the centre stood a magnificent fountain of white marble, representing four boats, with the figures of fishermen, beautifully modelled, casting their nets into the basin which contained the creamy waters sprayed by the fountain, and in which, in unobtrusive beauty, graceful swans swam about. From this centre of beauty two avenues of large spruce trees stretched—one over Theatre Hill and up New Gower Street, meeting Water Street in another scene of splendour before the station; the other, remarkable for its statues of Newfoundland's great men, stretched down Military Road, reaching the "Mall," famous for its gorgeous beds of roses. From the "Mall" to Fort William were the houses of "art and literature," noble in bearing and in size.

"Priscilla," being very interested in the poor, asked a workman, who was planting roses, where the slums were. He stopped amazed. "Slums, Miss? Lord love ye, we has no slums—did away with them years ago; but Tank Lane and them streets ain't as good as this, if that's any use to you, Miss." "Priscilla" decided she would like to see "Tank Lane and them streets," so they hailed a passing cab (St. John's is noted also for its splendid horses, comfortable cabs and cheap rates) and directed the driver to take them through the principal thoroughfares to Tank Lane. The drive was one of fifteen minutes' keen enjoyment; beauty and cleanliness walked hand in hand, "luxuriant foliage strewn the roads from either side, and in no other city did the sense of beauty enhance one so." "Babs" wrote later to a friend. Tank Lane and the streets around consisted of small but clean and good-looking houses, no carbage, no putrid water, and no nasty odours, with the drains underground. A pleasant faced policeman came along and "Babs" insisted upon stopping him. "How is everything so lovely and clean?" she asked. "We are naturally clean and love beauty," with a smile he said. "Do you have a high death rate here?" ventured "Priscilla." "No, Miss; we don't have death—that is," he explained, "not as we used to; no consumption and such like, and the streets ain't allowed to get dirty, no mud and no dust a-lying about; that's my duty, Miss," he added proudly. "Come on, 'Babs,' let us walk back to the hotel. How pure and fresh the air is. Do look at these South Side Hills. Are they not handsome? My, but I am glad we came to St. John's!" exclaimed "Priscilla" almost in one breath. "Oh, how I wish we could stay here forever, and then we might really enjoy ourselves wandering through the garden streets as if we lived in Italy," answered "Babs."

Walking Water Street was very enjoyable; it was broad, smooth and white, and in excellent repair. The shops were large and fitted up with sumptuous taste. Bank Square contained a gleaming white statue of some great politician, whilst another adorned the open space before the Court House.

After dinner that evening some one suggested a walk or auto ride to Cabot Tower and see St. John's by moonlight. "Babs" halted this with delight. A taxi was called and off they spun. The party consisted of "Babs" and "Priscilla" and some four or five tourists from the hotel. Four minutes later found them mounting higher and higher, nearing the top of Signal Hill. What was indistinct on entering the harbor was now quite plain. The Tower was placed in a fairylike wood, with tall massive arches hewn out of the solid rock bounding it on every side. As they entered the wood the moon was streaming forth its soft and mellowly light, "which glistened softly upon the sea of dark foliage like the pallid stars of the milky way," and which threw the tower into such a grand and noble pile, with its myriad colored lights, that "Priscilla" could not suppress a low cry of exquisite delight. Below them was a scene of solemn grandeur. The whole silent city with its numerous white buildings and superb trees was lying as if asleep, wrapped in the pale still light of the "Queen of Night," whose sensuous loveliness was lying as if in repose upon the crystal depths of the harbor. Opposite, Fort Amherst glowed and quivered in a shower of tiny glow-worm like sparks, coming from the famous gardens nearby, and from which came soft and sweet sounds of music and gentle laughter borne by the "whispering winds of night" over the dividing waters. Far out to sea the moon was spreading her bar of silver light, as if to guide the lonely mariner to the haven of beauty within. Over all hung a deep impression of mystery. Night's pale gentleness above in the vast vault of Heaven looked down peacefully on the group of delighted tourists on the hill below; the moon sailed serenely and calmly on, and even the deep roar of the "breakers" beneath seemed strangely stilled and weary. All were silent. At last "Babs" broke the reverie. "And oh, to think we have to leave it all to-morrow," she sighed.

To-morrow dawned, and our little travellers decided as a last sight-seeing trip to see the much talked of Quidi Vidi. Beautiful as nature had made this small lake, the lovers of beauty had made her ten times more lovely. "Babs" and "Priscilla" thought it quite as pretty as the Italian lakes and lakes of Windemere, and started to walk around it. It had been transformed into a colossal boulevard, picturesque and charming. All the way round ran a low marble wall, broken now and then by steps leading to the water's edge. The beautiful drive wound its way round it, lined on each side by tall birch trees, and in which at intervals fountains sang in delicious mirth as they tossed their sunlit sprays high into the air. Here and there a glorious statue peeped from the bright green foliage as if ashamed of its naked loveliness, and over the fragrance of flowers, the music of falling water, the swaying of the branches in the light wind, the soft rippling laughter of children at play—the birds poured forth a burst of gladness in an ecstasy of joyous singing.

At five o'clock the Arcades was slowly steaming out of the Narrows, with the dying sun flaming amidst the glory of a northern sunset and lighting up the South Side Hills with reflections of soft and ruddy glow, and seemed to smile over the "City Beautiful" a sad farewell to the young girls. Twilight came and deepened, the wind died into sighs, the shore sank into sombre light, and slowly the "city beautiful," with its fountains, its trees, its beauty, its joys—was gone!

"Do you know," said the captain, "years ago St. John's was devoid of all trees, of flowers, of gardens, and, in fact, of all the beautiful things which you saw, and was ugly, bare and dirty. Then later a general knowledge of the barrenness of St. John's took hold on the people. Trees were planted, parks were made, streets were cleaned, rich men donated money towards the funds, and the result was—St. John's as you saw it, in its beauty and its cleanliness." "Poor Newfoundlanders," sighed "Babs," "how I pity those who lived in St. John's before it was beautified, and could only imagine it as it should be and not as it was."

An English Chemist Has Discovered How to Grow Hair.

In England the ladies have entirely abandoned wearing hats which is due entirely to this new discovery. It has been proven that Henna leaves contain the ingredients that will positively grow hair. That they contain this long-looked-for article is proven every day. The Americans are now placing on the market a preparation containing the extract from Henna leaves, which is having a phenomenal sale. This preparation is called SALVIA, and is being sold with a guarantee to cure Dandruff and to grow hair in abundance. Being daintily perfumed SALVIA makes a most pleasant hair dressing. McMurdo & Co., your druggist, is the first to import this preparation into St. John's and a large, generous bottle can be purchased for 50c.

In Loving Memory

Of Mrs. John Quigley, who died Tuesday, Jan. 29th, 1912.
I see her still, she is not dead.
Though dust is mingling with her form;
The broken sunbeam hath not shed
The faint rainbow on the storm.
In visions of the midnight deep
Thine accents through my bosom thrill.
Thill joy's fond impulse bids me weep.
For, rapt in thought, I see her still.
Farewell, beloved, to mortal sight,
Thy vermillion cheek no more may bloom;
No more her smiles inspire delight
For she is garnered in the tomb.
Rich harvest for that ruthless power
Which hath no bound to mar his will;
Yet as in hope's unclouded hour
Throned in my heart I see her still.

Uncle Walt THE POET PHILOSOPHER.

I slide in the icy gutter and fracture a neck or knee; and I would that my tongue could utter the thoughts that arise in me. So many of lofty scheming stand 'round in the mart and talk; what profit THE ICY WALK fits their rosy dreamings if perilous is the walk? Come forth from your hall or hovel when sleek is the earth with sleet, and do with the wooden shovel your stunt on the public street; cease pushing through your mustaches your views on the course of Taft, and sprinkle the walk with ashes, for that is the wiser graft. My neighbors will stand debating the worth of the income tax, while out on the walks are skating poor souls on their heads or backs. I don't care a whoop if Teddy or Woodrow or Bob should run; it's snowing again already, and I shall remove a ton of snow with my good old shovel, and sprinkle the ice with salt, that no one may fall and grovel and swear at the name of Walt!

The Death of Labouche

Florence, Italy, Jan. 16.—The Hon. Henry Labouche, P.C., of the London "Truth," died at his home here this morning.

London, Jan. 16.—Until a few days ago Henry Labouche, who died at Florence, was one of the prominent independent politicians of the British Isles. He was a member of Parliament for about half a century, but always declined to take office in any cabinet. His views were extremely radical, preferred to give expression to as a free lance in the House of Commons. He wielded a very caustic which was used freely in the newspaper "Truth," of which he was proprietor and editor, and in the commercial and diplomatic life was at one time in the diplomatic service, and served as an attaché in Washington in 1854, but left from the service ten years later for politics. Owing to falling he had resided in Italy since 1911.

The late Rt. Hon. Henry Labouche, P.C., was born in London, in 1818, was the eldest son of John Labouche of Broome Hall, Surrey. He was educated at Eton, and in 1844 entered the diplomatic service, which in 1864. In 1866 he entered

THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

The department of agriculture is a co-ordinate branch of the government whose mission in life is to bar the chintz bug and the boll weevil from polite society. It is the only department of our government which the farmer can visit without leaving his mental poise and red-lined arctics in the front hall. This department is doing a noble work in curbing the enthusiasm of the red ant and checking the offensive familiarity of the alcoholic soothing syrup. It is also making it difficult to spread a little rouge on the cheeks of a pound of pallid oleomargarine and palm it off on an unsuspecting purchaser as the product of a whole milk creamery. The department is presided over by a farmer from Iowa, who puts in ten hours a day and is so busily engaged that he can't shine in the social whirl or keep up with the latest styles in pajamas. The department also has a large force of field workers, who go around the country feeling the pulse of the tomato and soothing the fevered brow of the canned string bean. Whenever a manufacturer attempts to get by with a little artificial coloring or prop up some table delicacy with formaldehyde so that it will stand alone, one of these workers will present a visiting card and a brief and pithy summons from the sheriff of the nearest county, which usually results in making the department very unpopular in that immediate locality. The department spends a good deal of money, in one way or another, but none of it comes out of the pork barrel. One of the most engaging activities of this branch of the government is the free distribution of carrot and rutabaga seeds, several of which create surprise by growing.

graced. Pierre de Labouchere died in England. His eldest son, Henry, afterward Lord Taunton, married a Miss Baring, his cousin, and was ministerial colleague of Lord John Russell and of Lord Palmerston. The second son, John, entered the Anglo-American banking firm of Williams, Deacon & Company, married a Miss Dupre, and left two sons, Henry and Arthur, and six daughters, one of whom married the Bishop of Rochester. It will thus be seen that Mr. Labouchere was himself by birth, ancestry and relationship a member of that patrician caste against which he carried on such savage war in his popular London weekly, "Truth."

Florence, Jan. 22.—The will of the late Henry Labouchere, editor of London Truth, whose death occurred here on Jan. 16th, provides for the appointment of three trustees, including the British Home Secretary, Reginald McKenna. Mr. Labouchere left a large yearly income to his daughter, the Marchioness Di Rundi, but his fortune, which is estimated at $4,000,000, will eventually be divided among his nephews, who bear the name of Labouchere.

The Claims of Women.

Mr. Cecil M. Chapman, metropolitan magistrate, speaking at Westbourne Park Chapel recently on the subject of "Woman and Citizenship," said women wanted recognition as human beings; they wanted liberty to make use of the talents they possessed. The attitude of mind of nine out of ten men was the attitude of mind of Burke, that women were a negligible quantity.

Why did women sacrifice themselves and submit to indignity, misrepresentation, and pain? Because there was a sense of oppression, which had become at last unendurable. The wrong was that women were not recognized as individuals before the law and in the Constitution. They were treated by men as if they were so tender that they ought to be safeguarded. Women asked for no privilege without welcoming the corresponding responsibility. What they wanted was a human world, a human home. If the laws were directed to their homes and to the whole of the individuals that made up the State, the whole State would be improved.—Daily Mail, Jan. 18.

The Death of Labouchere.

Florence, Italy, Jan. 16.—The Rt. Hon. Henry Labouchere, P.C., editor of the London "Truth," died at his villa here this morning.

London, Jan. 16.—Until a few years ago Henry Labouchere, who died today at Florence, was one of the most prominent independent politicians in the British Isles. He was a member of Parliament for about half a century, but always declined to take office in any cabinet. His political views were extremely radical, but he preferred to give expression to them as a free lance in the House of Commons. He wielded a very caustic pen, which was used freely in the weekly newspaper "Truth," of which he was proprietor and editor, and in which he opposed many abuses in political, commercial and diplomatic life. He was at one time in the diplomatic service, and served as an attaché at Washington in 1854, but he retired from the service ten years later to enter politics. Owing to failing health he had resided in Italy since 1906.

The late Rt. Hon. Henry Labouchere, P.C., was born in London, in 1831, and was the eldest son of John Labouchere of Broome Hall, Surrey. He was educated at Eton, and in 1854 entered the diplomatic service, which he left in 1864. In 1866 he entered Parli-ment as Liberal member for Windsor and in 1867 represented Middlesex while from 1880 to 1906 he was member for Northampton. In 1866 he married Henrietta, daughter of Jas. Hodson, of Dublin, Ireland. The Rt. Hon. Henry Labouchere was a connection of the Barons. At the end of the eighteenth century Pierre Caesar Labouchere, member of a noble Huguenot family, which had emigrated to Holland, was a partner in the great House of Hope at Amsterdam. The firm moved to London during the Revolutionary wars, and there Pierre married, in 1796, a daughter of Sir Francis Baring, who bore him two sons, namely, the late Lord Taunton, and John, the father of Henry Labouchere. In 1801 Napoleon ordered his Minister, Fouché, to sound England with a view to peace, and accordingly Fouché invoked the services of Pierre de Labouchere (he is styled thus by Thiers in his monumental work, "History of the Consulate and the Empire"). Labouchere who was at the time in France, came to London where, through his brother-in-law, Baring, he entered into an unofficial intercourse with Lord Wellesley. Nothing came of the negotiations. But Napoleon found that it had been prolonged without his knowledge and summoned Labouchere before him. Labouchere satisfied the Emperor as to the correctness of his conduct, and the result was that Fouché was dis-

Cannot Account for Skeleton.

The mysterious possibilities connected with the discovery of the skeleton of a man in the woods near St. Luc, Quebec, have increased with the discovery, beneath a stump near by where the skeleton mouldered of a little heap of gold, amounting to $330. Even after all clues have been discussed by a jury empanelled by Coroner Chevallier, however, the man's identity remained unknown.

The weather and the creatures of the woods had long since stripped the flesh from the bones. The material of the clothes which had once covered the body lay in scraps about it, and the watch which the dead man had worn in life had fallen through his skeleton and was almost washed underneath the ground by successive rains. The timepiece had a French movement. A set of prayer beads and a prayer book were the only other articles discovered. It is assumed from the presence of these that the man was a Roman Catholic. The story of the skeleton is a constant topic of discussion in the vicinity of the long undiscovered tragedy. It will pass into history as one of the weird countryside tales which finally developed into masterpieces of the mysterious.

It is thought very strange that nobody in the vicinity can even guess at the man's identity. Nobody remembers having ever seen in the vicinity anyone who might be he. The body might have dropped from an airship, so unaccountable is its presence in this not very thickly settled district.

An Overloaded Baby.

One of the greatest of the great New York dailies gives a first page column to the Christmas toys of New York's "$5,000,000 baby," a certain "John Randolph Hopkins," who has reached the mature age of eight months. There were fifteen crates of gifts and toys, besides a further raft of presents from a proud great-grandmother. Included in the collection was a toy circus, with a score of performers, a wireless telephone "with a beautiful buzzing sound," a house boat, half a dozen hobby horses, and the rest of 200 different presents. "Hoppy," as the $5,000,000 bab is familiarly called by his admiring relatives, showed his good sense by howling vigorously when his father took away his old rag doll, which he adored, to get him to admire the wonderful collection of toys.

Cheeked the Judge and Got Sentence.

New York, Jan. 22.—For insolence to Justices Steinert, Mayo and Salmon in Special Sessions, after they had put him on probation following his plea of guilty to the charge of stealing a silver mesh bag from a department store, Theodore Lewis of 374 High street will spend the next three months in the penitentiary.

After he had pleaded guilty the defendant's father asked for clemency, saying that the youth had always been a good boy and was his only support. Justice Steinert then conferred with his associates and they agreed to place him on probation. As Justice Steinert announced the court's decision the youth made a sneering remark, and the three months sentence was then quickly imposed.

Is your house really lighted from top to bottom or do you still have to take a candle or lamp when you go to the attic or cellar at night?
A great many people who have electricity in the rest of the house have no light in the cellar or attic because it is seldom needed; but, when you do need it, you need it badly.
One Incandescent Lamp set in a Holophane Reflector will give sufficient light for the darkest cellar or attic. Holophane Reflectors are especially adapted to lighting places of this sort as they control the light rays so that every ray is utilized. Wouldn't it be a convenience if you could turn a switch and light your cellar or attic before entering? That means an end to dangerous matches and flames—it means that you no longer need stumble against misplaced boxes and bark your shins in the dark.
We would like to tell you more about electric lighting and more about the wonderful light-saving Holophane Reflectors. May we send a representative to see you?
