Eczema Covered Arms of This Healthy Child

Mrs. Alex. Marshall, Sprucedale, Ont., writes—

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

"When my little son was three months old he broke out in sores on his chest and arms. We did all we could to heal those terrible sores, but nothing did him much good. Finally I ventured on a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment and kept on using it. At last we were rewarded by the steady healing of the sores, and finally he was completely relieved of them. He is now three years old, and has had no return of the trouble since."

Under False Colors

Lord Somerton's Ally.

CHAPTER VIII.

When the door had closed after Lady Helena, Elsie looked up at the young gamekeeper.

She saw at once that he was a stalwart, manly fellow, and wondered that she had not noticed him before.

"What is it that you have to say to me, Stretton?" she asked.

"Just a few words, ma'am," he blushed, while he turned his cap about his fingers, in a nervous, awkward fashion. "Miss Annette, ma'am, she told me what you had kindly said about Zeha's cottage being watched, and I looked arter it, ma'am, right along."

"Thank you, Stretton," and what have you discovered?"

Elsie felt her heart beating and her breath coming in quick little gasps.

"A man, ma'am! I see him trying the window, and I might have shot him, but I thought it best to wait for orders."

"You must not shoot people," admonished Elsie. "Why didn't you catch him?"

"It wasn't possible, ma'am. I made a dive for him, and he was gone like a flash," said Stretton.

Elsie was silent for a little while; then she replied:

"Thank you, Stretton; say nothing to any one else, and keep a close watch."

The young gamekeeper went away feeling very proud of the confidence that was reposed in him by the youthful mistress of Blairwood.

In the afternoon Sir John Sterne was helped downstairs by Markham. His lawyer was with him, and they remained closeted together for an hour.

The details of the interview satisfactorily decided upon, Sir John sent for his daughter and Lady Helena Freeman. He explained in the presence of the man of law that the affairs of Blairwood Park would practically be left in their hands. The steward would pay the revenue of the estate into the bank, and his books would be examined periodically by Mr. Grant, the lawyer. Matters were to go on just as though St. John were at home, orders given and payments made. There was to be no stint in anything, as he had full and complete confidence in Lady Helena and his daughter Elsie. He had arranged with the bank to honor all checks signed by his daughter, who would really represent him in everything. That was all that had to be said at present, but it was sufficient to bitterly offend Lady Helena, though she could not afford to openly show her displeasure.

"That child is to be my mistress," she thought. "Ridiculous! I really begin to dislike her. The sly chick knew all about it evidently when she put on airs in the library this morning before that low servant-man."

When Mr. Grant was gone, Sir John returned to his room, and Markham brought word to Elsie that her father wished to see her.

"I have sent for you, dear, to say good-bye," he began, painfully. "Tomorrow I leave Blairwood, and until I return, you are mistress here. In the event of anything happening—life is so uncertain—I have made a will leaving all that I can to you. Some portions of the property you know are entailed, and must go to my next male relation." He faltered a little, adding, fiercely: "And that is another reason why I hate Noel Campbell! Heaven! why has my secret leaked out! Who is this dead who shares it with me—who sends me anonymous letters filled with threats and warnings? Fool to have lived so long in fancied security—fool! fool! Now, my child, I have given my last message to you in this world in care of the doctor. When I am dead it is to be opened by him and you, and not till then. My will is also in his keeping, signed, and witnessed by Markham and Mr. Valance. I did not desire my lawyer to know too much. My life ends here, as it were, and takes a new and brighter lease when I come home—when I come home!"

Elsie's heart was too full of words. "One more warning, dear, and it seems that I am full of nothing but warnings. Be diplomatic in your conduct toward Lord Somerton. He has acquired some knowledge which may do me harm, but which I hope to tear to shreds when my wanderings are over. I do not like the man, but I dare not offend him yet!"

For a little while they did not speak, and then Elsie remembered Colin Ernccliffe.

"One favor, papa," she said; "the last I shall ask for a long time."

"What is it, darling?"

"I want you to read the message that Noel Campbell sends. Mr. Ernccliffe is coming again."

He interrupted her harshly.

"No!—no! a thousand times no! That cowardly rascal is possibly in touch with Lord Somerton. I feel that it is he who has sent him here to pry into my private affairs, and the prize is Blairwood—all these smiling lands—this glorious place and a revenue of fifty thousand a year. I dare not see him; I tremble to think what he might have to say to me. I might shoot him dead at my feet!"

He paced the floor, the scar on his cheek flaming into fire.

"No," he said, "when he shows his face again, tell him that he is too late. Tell him to wait until I return, and then—"

He did not finish the sentence, but sat down almost exhausted.

Her heart filled with pity and love, Elsie did not press any further questions upon her unhappy father. She soothed him with gentle words of hope, she sang to him all his favorite songs, and he retired to rest feeling almost content because Elsie concealed her sorrow so well.

The next morning Sir John and Markham left Blairwood at an early hour, and when they were gone Elsie gave way to her grief without restraint.

But through it all there was the promise that Colin Ernccliffe would visit Blairwood Park that day. She wondered if he had received her letter when the shadows of night began to fall; and when it was too late for any further trains from London, she was conscious of a keen sense of disappointment.

The next morning she examined the post-bag anxiously. There was a brief note from Sir John. It stated that they had reached Liverpool in safety, and that his strength continued to increase.

There was a postscript that startled her a little. It said:

"See that my apartments are locked and barred securely. Let no one enter them except yourself. I may have left papers about which no curious eyes must see. Darling, good-bye."

Elsie had this wish attended to, and did not once leave the room while the windows were being made fast. Later a special lock was fitted to the door, and she felt satisfied.

After luncheon she became restless. It was Thursday, and there was no news of Colin Ernccliffe.

"I will give Zeha a call," she told Annette. "I was very cross with her when I went last time, and must ask her pardon."

"She will readily forgive anything for a few silver pieces," Annette made reply. "It is quite true that she has become a miser."

"Foolish Zeha! What can she do with money?" smiled Elsie.

Nevertheless, she could not forget what her maid had said, and was careful to put a few bright coins in her purse.

When she reached the cottage the ayah was in her usual place, smoking and murmuring something that sounded like an incantation. It was clear to Elsie that the poor old woman's mind was wandering.

"Good-morning, Zeha," she said, brightly. "I have come to beg pardon for being cross last week. I was so troubled about papa."

She exhibited the shining silver, and Zeha clutched it eagerly.

The very action was a revelation to Elsie, and she felt very much pained.

"Thank you, dearie," she said, with glowing eyes; "but it will all come back again. You will want it some day."

Elsie felt uncomfortable; she was in need of cheerful, not depressing, influences, and was glad to get away.

To her disgust and fear, she saw Lord Somerton within a few paces of the very spot where she had encountered him on her last visit to Zeha, and he was waiting for her, hat in hand.

"This is an unexpected pleasure, Miss Sterne," he said.

"I cannot say that it is reciprocated," was the frigid reply. "I prefer to go on alone."

"I do not think that it is safe for you to wander about these woods by yourself, Miss Sterne. What with poachers and house-thieves, the neighborhood is really dangerous."

"I am not afraid, my lord. I beg of you to leave me. Your society is intolerable," the girl replied, in tones of contempt. "I repeat to you what I said to my father—you always remind me of a venomous little snake!"

He could restrain his fury no longer, and springing forward, seized one of her hands in a viselike grip.

"For those words," he hissed, "I will exact a terrible vengeance!"

"Unhand me, you coward!" Elsie cried.

At that moment there was the sound of crashing underwood, and a tall young man with a blond head of hair appeared. He seized Lord Somerton with his powerful right hand—he gripped his collar until my lord nearly choked to death. Then, with a dexterous turn, he sent him whirling into the very heart of a bed of stinging nettles.

"I am happy to have arrived here just in the nick of time," smiled the handsome intruder.

It was Colin Ernccliffe!

I Was Greatly Benefited by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sydenham, Ont.—"I took your medicine before my baby was born, and it was a great help to me as I was very poorly until I had started to take it. I just felt as though I was tired out all the time and would have weak, faint spells. My nerves would bother me until I could get little rest, night or day. I was told by a friend to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I only took a few bottles and it helped me wonderfully. I am doing what I can to recommend this good medicine. I will lend that little book you sent me to any one I can help. You can with the greatest of pleasure use my name in regard to the Vegetable Compound if it will help others take it."—Mrs. HARVEY MILLIGAN, Sydenham, Ont.

It is remarkable how many cases have been reported similar to this one. Many women are poorly at such times and get into a weakened, run-down condition, when it is essential to the mother, as well as the child, that her strength be kept up.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent tonic for the mother at this time. It is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs, and does not contain any harmful drugs. It may be taken in safety by the nursing mother.

Worth More Than Gold

Coins Formerly Used Platinum in Making Counterfeit Money; Nowadays They Would Lose on the Deal.

Platinum might well be called the "Cinderella" of metals, as it was for many centuries scorned and unappreciated. Now, however, it has come into its own and is regarded as one of the most valuable and useful of them all.

In story is almost as long and as fascinating as that of gold, although it has never caused such wild excitement, strife and misery. It was known to the Ancients, as is proved by discoveries of old mines at Thebes, in Egypt, and elsewhere; but they by no means appreciated the wonderful qualities of the metal, and it was little used.

Later on it was employed by counterfeiters to make false coins, and some hundreds of people have been hanged for using platinum for this purpose. Yet, strangely enough, today such "base metal" would be worth more than gold coins of the same weight!

The modern appreciation of platinum, really dates from 1785, when Antonio de Ulloa, a Spanish naval officer, led an expedition into South America. There he found deposits of an extremely tough and durable metal, which he named "platina," from "plata," the Spanish word for silver.

Later, large quantities were shipped over to Europe, where the scientists of the day began to experiment with it and to discover its marvellous qualities.

Essential to Science.

The metal soon became more widely used and appreciated, although it did not then attain the great commercial and artistic value it enjoys to-day.

Platinum is found in small grey particles along with other metals, including gold and chrome-iron. Occasionally it is discovered in the form of nuggets, which are naturally extremely valuable. A 25-pound nugget of platinum found at the present time is worth over $8,000. It is found generally in river deposits in Russia and in the republics of Colombia and Brazil, in South America, Borneo, the West-Indies, Australia, and the United States also contain smaller deposits of the valuable metal.

Previous to the rule of the Bolsheviks, Russia supplied ninety per cent. of the world's platinum, but to-day the main supply comes from Colombia.

The uses to which platinum is put are almost countless. It is essential to science and chemistry, as it is employed to make crucibles, being the only metal that will stand really intense heat without melting. Neither is it affected in any way by the action of chemicals that would eat away other metals. In the manufacture of most electrical and telescopic instruments it is also indispensable, as it can be drawn out into the thinnest wire without snapping.

Platinum is used in the making of sulphuric acid, and consequently it is absolutely necessary for the manufacture of high explosives.

Dentists owe a great debt to platinum, as it enables them to fit artificial teeth with plates and rivets which do not tarnish or oxidize. Thin platinum plates have been used within recent years for making artificial roots for the mouths of soldiers and others suffering from facial injuries. It is the only metal over which wounds will heal.

WAVES.

Sometimes the waves come roaring in like troops round a beleaguered city.

Advancing with the will to win And deaf to every cry for pity; Mad with the power which they possess. The angry waves are merciless.

Another day, when skies are fair, They come to shore with joyous singing.

And play with all the children there Who seek the shells which they are bringing; To see them on a summer's day You'd never dream such waves would slay.

Again you'll see them wearing plumes Like knights of old on charges prancing.

Or like a field of lily blooms On which the morning sun is dancing; Then riding shorewards, one by one, They're handsome things to look upon.

And so with us and all our moods— Smiles of contentment light our faces.

We sing our gentle interludes And hide our strength 'neath curly graces; But roused by hate and temper-toss, Then all our finer traits seem lost.

How Miss Wynn makes an exceptionally rich cream sauce

7 1/2 teaspoons of butter fat in every 16-oz. can

Milk that often makes butter and cream unnecessary

You'll discover a new delight in cooking—a new economy, too—when you try Libby's Milk. Just as Miss Ione Wynn of Chicago did.

What she says is especially interesting, since she has had more than ordinary success in cooking.

She writes: "Libby's Milk is wonderful for cooking use especially, so rich it often makes it possible to eliminate expensive butter and cream entirely—in muffins or cream soups, for instance."

A rather startling statement to be sure. But consider this fact about Libby's Milk:

7 1/2 teaspoons of butter fat in every can here are 7 1/2 teaspoons of pure butter fat in every 16 oz. can of this milk. And it's this substance in cream and butter, you know, that makes them great enrichers. Libby's Milk is so rich in butter fat because, first, it comes from selected herds in the finest dairy sections of the country—those favored localities where nature has made of shady hills and green, well-watered valleys ideal pasture lands, and where men specialize in raising cows that give exceptionally rich milk.

Then, at our condenseries in the heart of these famous dairy sections, we remove more than half the moisture from this fine milk, making it double rich.

Nothing is added to it; none of its food values taken away. But to bring it safely to you who live, perhaps, many hundreds of miles away we must seal it in air-tight cans and sterilize it.

This, then, is Libby's Milk—just the finest cow's milk in the land, made double rich!

Have richer dishes—tonight

Thousands of women are using this richer milk now—getting better results from old recipes, finding new joy in cooking, and saving money, too.

Get a can of Libby's Milk from your grocer today. Try it tonight in place of ordinary milk—in a soup for instance, a sauce or dessert. See what wholly new richness it gives to your cooking. And what delicious flavor.

Upon request we'll gladly send you a copy of a new folder containing recipes sent us by good cooks who use Libby's Milk.

Will Walling, Richard Dix, and Ralph Lewis in "THE SIN FLOOD" A GOLDWYN PICTURE

The above is a scene from "The Sin Flood," a gigantic film version of one of the most popular plays ever staged. The story is so unusual, so startling, that we will not spoil your pleasure by disclosing its nature. Suffice it to say that it contains a noble message to mankind, and is tremendously thrilling in every foot of action. Drop everything else on Monday and see it at the Nickel Theatre.

The Adoption of a Policy of Protection by British Government Unlikely.

Noting in many German Towns caused by Scarcity of Food--Giants again Victorious in a Thrilling Game--Halifax City Official found Guilty of Theft--Ambassador Harvey leaves London.

FOOD RIOTS IN BERLIN.
BERLIN, Oct. 12. Food riots occurred in two of Berlin's densely populated sections where the population is without potatoes or meat. In both instances, those responsible for the disorders were unemployed men, who were accompanied by the raid by many women. When they attempted to protect the food shops the police were attacked by the mob. Many arrests were made.

DISORDERS IN DUSSELDORF.
DUSSELDORF, Oct. 12. Disorders which began last evening at Solingen in the British occupied territory, continued today, the casualty list now totalling eleven dead, including the Commissary of police, and thirty-five wounded. Many stores have been pillaged. British troops have not yet interfered. Other unemployed are marching from Grafath to help their comrades. At Hoecht, where two thousand unemployed besieged the City Hall, German police fired on the crowd killing one and wounding ten others. Pillaging also continued today at Cologne and the police fired when the crowd stoned them.

BRITAIN AND PROTECTION.
LONDON, Oct. 12. (By Associated Press)—Although there seems little possibility of the British Government adopting a general protectionist policy, indications are that the Dominions intend to give the Mother Country an intensive educational course in principles of protection. It is understood Premier Bruce of Australia intends to remain in Great Britain after the Imperial Conference and will travel extensively through the provinces explaining the details of the preferential programme and pointing out the benefits which he considers Great Britain as well as the Dominions would gain from it. Liberal leaders do not fear any immediate change in Government policy. They view any general increase in taxation on foodstuffs as unthinkable. Free traders, however, are well aware that the Government, by attempting to placate the overseas protectionists with the few morsels of dried fruit, sugar and tobacco, have taken an action which leads towards tariff mazes from which the Government may have the greatest difficulty in receding. Government officials, however, point out that the Liberal alarm is being fostered largely for political campaign

SCENE OF PLEADING.
COLOGNE, Oct. 12. A number of casualties, including at least one fatality, occurred here late yesterday when the crowds, aroused because of high prices, began attacking and plundering warehouses and food shops and became engaged in clashes with the police. In several instances wagons and automobiles hauling food supplies through the streets were attacked and the provisions carried away.

THE RUHR SITUATION.
BERLIN, Oct. 12. An official statement quotes a telegram from Essen to the effect that contrary to French reports, labor leaders and the population generally are deeply concerned about the situation in the Ruhr. If the economic life of the occupied region is to be resumed, the statement asserts, both Germans and French must do their utmost to avoid causes of further disturbances.

OBAINED THE KING'S PLEASURE.
LONDON, Oct. 12. The United States Embassy announced today that Ambassador George Harvey, having obtained the "King's pleasure," plans to leave England for home at the end of the present month.

QUEBEC'S NEW LT-GOVERNOR.
OTTAWA, Oct. 12. Hon. Louis Philippe Brodeur was today appointed by the Government to be Lt-Governor of the Province of Quebec, succeeding Sir Charles Fitzpatrick. The appointment will take effect from Oct. 31st.

FOUND GUILTY.
HALIFAX, Oct. 12. Robert Theakston, who was recently dismissed from the office of the City Collector after holding that position for more than 30 years, was this evening found guilty by a jury in the Supreme Court, of the theft of thirty-four thousand dollars of civic funds. He was remanded to jail for sentence.

GOMPERS RE-ELECTED.
PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 12. Samuel Gompers was today unanimously re-elected President of the American Federation of Labor.

CHAPPED HANDS.

Labrador Gold Find Far From Extensive

NOT FOUND IN PAYING QUANTITIES, REPORTS MINING EXPERT.

Mr. W. Morley Ogilvie, mining engineer for Labrador Goldfields, Ltd., has returned to Ottawa after making a thorough examination of the company's property. His report was made recently. It may be said, however, that high hopes respecting Labrador gold have not been justified by his investigation of the reported discovery. Mr. Ogilvie not only carried out a systematic exploration of the ground, but was in contact with other investigators. They all agree that the stories of H. C. Bellow, Mr. Jeffery and others have not been verified. On the contrary, nothing was found to indicate gold in paying quantities. They are confident that gold exists in Labrador, but not at Stag Bay.

Mr. Ogilvie points out, however, that the assumption of the Geological Department as to the probable action of glaciers at Stag Bay was not sustained by his investigations. There was an ample deposit of sand and gravel, and had that deposit contained gold the conditions would have been exceptionally favorable. Stag Bay is a great basin, into which a vast watershed drains. The only difficulty is that it lacks the precious metal.

To the press, Mr. J. L. Payne, vice-president of Labrador Goldfields, Ltd., said:

Bitter Disappointment.

"This is to me a bitter disappointment. I believed in the thing, and, to the extent that I influenced some of my personal friends, I feel humiliated and discredited. This simply means, however, that I was deceived along with many others, and I am a loser as well as they. Out of the money paid for leases I did not receive a penny, in any way whatever, nor did any other officer of the company. In the company are many men of high standing and integrity. The reports which were made by the self-declared discoverers seemed to them reliable and conclusive. It looked like a great chance. But we must now conclude that the men who made those reports were either deceived or were dishonest.

"I have but one consolation. In all our advertising we presented the proposition as an absolute gamble. No one could have been misled into the belief they were taking up a sure thing. In our primary announcement we said: 'above all things the company desire to avoid holding out dazzling inducements. If you go in, do so with your eyes wide open to the chances. The company cannot make any promise, much less give any absolute guarantees.' That attitude was maintained throughout and I am confident that the individuals who purchased 90 leases in Ottawa thoroughly understood what they were doing. It was stated in several of our announcements that the whole thing might be a conspiracy on the part of unscrupulous men, and it now seems to have been precisely that, to my surprise, chagrin and loss.

Carried Out Pledges.

"The company carried out its pledge to the letter with regard to the use they made of the money paid in, and in that regard has a clean record. It operated honestly and economically. All that was wrong was the story of the original discovery. That was obviously untrue; but, outside of Mr. Bellow himself, no other member of the company knew it was untrue. It is now up to Mr. Bellow and Mr. Jeffery to defend themselves, and no doubt they will be heard from in the near future."

Mr. Ogilvie left for Labrador July 20, and returned Sunday.

The belief in the presence of gold depended on the stories told by the men who had visited the country and had claimed to have made discoveries of gold, backing those up by alleged assays. The company sold 129 leases in all at $200 each, some 90 in Ottawa, and 37 in Montreal.

The discovery of the gold was claimed to have been made in 1921 and confirmed in 1922, and the company started operations in 1923. Selling was discontinued in April, 1923, when it was found that the assay given out by Mr. H. C. Bellow was not made, as had been claimed, by Ledoux and Co. of New York.

Outrageous Conduct

SEVERE PENALTIES FOR WILD DASH IN CAR.

Conduct described by the Marleybone magistrate as outrageous was proved against Robert Thomas, 21, of Thorpebank-road, Shepherd's Bush, W. He was charged with being drunk in charge of a motor car, dangerous driving, resisting the police, and driving without a license. It was stated that P.C. Fish jumped on the bonnet of the car to try to make Thomas stop, but was carried nearly six miles before a pursuing car overtook Thomas's car and forced it to stop by pulling up in front of him. Thomas denied being drunk, declaring that he had only had one drink. When he drove off he was going in search of his brother, who had gone for some Dickens or Balzac might describe this tremendous scene and do it justice. Any pen less gifted would fail.

"The Sin Flood" tells the story of ten men and a woman who were suddenly brought face to face with death. The story of the transformation of this motley group is not only a thrilling one, it is the noblest message the screen has yet delivered.

petrol. The constable then sprang upon the bonnet of the car, and, calling upon him to stop, drew his truncheon and tried to get into the car. Thomas brushed the constable aside, who then got on to the bonnet. He continued to drive on, as he wanted to find a police station because the policeman had been offensive to him. The magistrate pointed out that he should not convict on the charge of being drunk in charge of a car, but he should add a charge of assaulting the policeman. He fined him £20 or two months for dangerous driving, £10 or two months, with £15 lss. costs, for driving without a license, and for driving without a license, and sentenced him to one month in the second division for assaulting the policeman. The sentences are to be served consecutively. The magistrate also suspended accused's licence for two years, adding that in view of the state of his health and his temperament he thought Thomas unfit to drive. P.C. ### Another City Directory in Course of Completion

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly allow us space in your valuable paper to reply to a reporter's article in the Mail of last evening, dealing with the subject of a new Directory. We are informed that one of the persons interested in the production of a Directory in opposition to our company, called on Mr. Frank Steer, Vice-President of the Board of Trade, and obtained from him a letter of endorsement and approval of a proposed Directory. Now we have no objections to Mr. Steer giving his personal approval, support or any assistance he feels like giving to any person, but as Vice-President of the Board of Trade, we think he has unintentionally overstepped the bounds of his office, and in doing so he has granted a competitor an undue advantage over us. We trust that Mr. Steer, who is a member of the Board of Trade, and obtained from him a letter of endorsement and approval of a proposed Directory. Now we have no objections to Mr. Steer giving his personal approval, support or any assistance he feels like giving to any person, but as Vice-President of the Board of Trade, we think he has unintentionally overstepped the bounds of his office, and in doing so he has granted a competitor an undue advantage over us.

In view of the fact that we have in our possession fifty-one signed contracts for advertising from members of the Board of Trade, including twenty-four of the largest business houses in St. John's, with upwards of seventy other business and professional men, and that we were the first company to put our announcement in the daily papers, we have good reason to consider ourselves unjustly dealt with in this matter.

We trust that Mr. Steer, who we believe is under a misapprehension as to the facts, especially in reference to our company, will give the public an explanation satisfactory to all concerned. Yours sincerely, G. H. ANDREWS, E. A. SMITH. The St. John's (Nfld.) Directory Company, Times Office, Duckworth Street, Oct. 11th, 1923.

Nothing Ever Attempted

LIKE DANCE BY FAWNETTE AND TESORI AT THE STAR LAST EVENING.

"Come one, come all" to see Fawnette and Tesori, "and when they come we dance all round them." Never in the history of the movie picture business in this city was such an attraction as that which was presented at the popular Star last evening by these two most accomplished artists seen here. These people simply made the ratters ring with applause at the completion of their number, and were obliged to respond to three encores and deservedly so, as their dance and acrobatic feats were of such calibre as to literally hold the vast audience spell bound. Were we to search the entire English dictionary we do not think we could find words to adequately describe the magnitude of their number of last evening, and as each patron went out they were most pronounced in their approval of their ability. For Monday they gave in preparation such another attraction and no doubt it will be greeted with packed audiences. In a nutshell, it may be said no such dancer and singer than Fawnette and Tesori have yet appeared on any stage in this city, and the Star Movie are to be congratulated on having obtained such artists.

The Lure of Lights Shown in Photoplay

"LIGHTS OF NEW YORK" TELLS A GRAPHIC STORY OF SUCCESS AND DISILLUSIONMENT.

Life in a metropolis, with its bright lights and sinister shadows, successes and reverses, heart aches and triumphs, are vividly portrayed in the Fox production, "Lights of New York" which comes to the Majestic Theatre Monday. Notable in the cast is Marc MacDermott, who enacts the rôle of a stock broker who becomes a derelict after his sweetheart marries a rival. The dramatic power that Mr. MacDermott gives this part brings it to the highest level of screen acting. The toast that his friends drink to his faithless fiancée strikes the keynote of the story. "It's sorry I am to leave you, but glad I am to go." Then comes the note telling the prospective groom of his lover's departure with another man. The tenderness, the tragedy, the human element of the tale is brought out when Marc, in the character of the broker, tells his friends, "There will be no wedding to-morrow."

But there are high lights, too. Moments that relieve the dramatic trend of the photoplay. The photography, particularly at the beginning, where scenes of New York are shown in color, cannot be passed over without individual mention. The details of the story are not set forth here because it would spoil the reader's interest when viewing the picture. "Lights of New York" biases forth a story that is convincing because it tells the incidents of life as they happen every day.

Miss Kathryn Gullivan sings on Monday night with this tremendous big show two numbers that are very popular with local music-lovers, namely: (a) "Kathleen Mavourneen," (b) "Mother in Ireland."

THE IDOL OF THE PEOPLE.

It is curious, adds the paper just quoted, to look back over the history of the United States and see what partisanship has said of American statesmen whose memories are now idolized without regard to party. No soldier or statesman in the whole history of civilization, perhaps, comes nearer deification from an American point of view, than George Washington. For the whole modern world he is the very pattern of nobility of character and masculine patriotism. Socialists and capitalists, democrats and aristocrats, churchmen and freethinkers unite to-day in paying him their sincere tributes of respect, honor and admiration. It must be, we naturally suppose, that his own country in his lifetime was a unit in respecting him.

A VICTIM OF POLITICAL SAVAGERY.

The fact, however, is that he was also a victim of savage partisanship. It is stated by F. S. Oliver in his life of Alexander Hamilton, that on the fourth of March, 1797, the day when Washington retired from the Presidency into private life, the Aurora, a newspaper organ of the anti-Federalists, published in Philadelphia, said of him in these almost exact words: "This should be celebrated as a day of Jubilee throughout the United States; for the man who is the source of all the misfortunes in the country is about to step into well-merited oblivion." Senator Beveridge, in his life of John Marshall, states that the Aurora accused Washington of peculation; and in 1795 it permitted a correspondent to make a scandalous attack upon the President, whom Americans now call the Father of his Country, in the course of which appears this pleasant sentence: "The consecrated shrine of Presidential chastity seems too foul for time itself to bleach."

EXTRAORDINARY AND INCREDIBLE STORIES.

Then we are reminded by the Outlook that the literature of political reminiscence is full of the most extraordinary and incredible stories of partisan bitterness, such as we experienced here during the last election. This bitterness has been visited even upon our children. Coter Morrison, in his life of Edward Gibbon, probably the only man whose fame and fortune were made by the fall of the Roman Empire, quotes Gibbon as saying that, as a child of mine in 1746, he "was reviled and buffeted for the sins of his Tory Ancestors," such was the passion of Party spirit. And, per contra about the worst denunciation that Dr. Johnson could think of to apply to a controversial opponent was to call him a "white dog." In modern times the great political leisters have all been victims of personal abuse. Lincoln was accused of obscene vulgarity; Gladstone of insanity; Roosevelt, of drunkenness. One of the very few modern statesmen who appears to have escaped the foul torrent of personal gossip and personal abuse was President Harding. "At least," says one of his biographers, "if there were any stories current in clubs and the smoking cars detrimental to his personal character I have never heard them."

CERTAIN IMPORTANT RELATIONSHIPS OF LIFE.

As my readers are aware, and as I had occasion to point out in a previous article, there are certain relationships of life which involve a certain degree of secrecy between the parties to them. Such, for instance, as the relationship between master and servant, between principal and agent, between solicitor and client, between the Governor and his Ministers, between a telegraph office and those who confide the secrets of their business to its trust. Broadly speaking, it may be said that no man is fit to hold such a position of trust or responsibility who is incapable of keeping the secrets of another man committed to his care. That man is, indeed, the basest of men, who, obtaining possession of information that is the property of another, uses that information, in any way, without that other's consent. How much baser, and more dishonorable and contemptible is the man who uses that information, so obtained, not only without the consent, but against the interest of him from whom he has obtained it, and to whom it rightly belongs?

BY WAY OF TIMELY AND KINDLY WARNING.

Definite and precise information has reached me to the effect that this is done, and systematically done; in certain cases in this community, and this is written by way of timely and kindly warning to the parties concerned to be more circumspect for the future. If not, they will expose themselves to the certainty of public denunciations and to the probability of legal prosecutions. To steal one's purse is to steal trash, to wound the reputation of a neighbour without cause is a senseless act of wrong; but to appropriate to one's self and against its lawful owner by secret and underhanded ways, the information one has received in a trusted capacity—the man who is capable of doing that is a menace to the community in which he lives and unworthy of the rights of citizenship.

Man the Unfinished and Incomplete

WHAT WILL THE PERFECT PRODUCT BE LIKE!

By CHARLTON REEVE.

Our scientists are always giving us shocks. Sir Oliver Lodge administered rather a violent one at a Presbyterian Church when he informed the congregation that man is a crude, rough and half-made article, quite recently tumbled out of Nature's workshop in an incomplete condition. This may appear a striking contradiction to another of the latest discoveries of science, which is that of the remains of some men and women in the caves of southern France, who are supposed to have lived at least 15,000 years ago.

It seems rather a long way back; but, after all, what a 15,000 years in relation to the age of the earth and stars?

These little globe of ours, which is a mere speck of dust in the universe, is supposed to be at least 400,000,000 years old. During the greater part of that immense period it was uninhabited; then came the sea creatures, the insects, the reptiles, the prehistoric monsters and the animals as we know them. Finally, man was developed, but that was really a short time ago, a mere matter of perhaps three or four thousand years.

And even for the greater part of that time humanity was only a slightly improved version of the anthropoid ape, a trifle more intelligent than the gorilla or the chimpanzee, but feebler and less active. At long last he acquired the human soul and brain as we know them.

Future Possibilities.

Excavations at Luxor and elsewhere have shown that the history of civilization can be carried a great deal further than we have been accustomed to imagine; but the oldest relics of Egypt and Mesopotamia would not be dated at the outside, more than a few thousand years before the beginning of the Christian era.

Man, as he is at present, with most of his thoughts, acquisitions, and achievements, is a creature of the last few fifty centuries or so.

The human species, then, is still young, and, according to Sir Oliver Lodge, still immature. We are not quite grown up.

With difficulty and slow struggle we have emerged from the animal creation, but have by no means shed the traces of our origin. We make our way on this planet hampered and shackled by the vestiges of the brute creation which still hangs about us. We are moving onward and upward, but we have a long way to go before the process is complete.

Sir Oliver Lodge cheerfully exhorts us not to despair, because there is plenty of time before us. There is no particular reason, so far as Science can see, why our planet should go revolving round the sun for tens of millions of years to come yet. Now, if men and women go on solving themselves in a proper and prudent fashion during the illimitable future, a much superior human sample should in time be on view.

The superman—of course, accompanied by the superwoman—will inherit the earth and the fullness thereof.

In the meantime, we shall have to put up with the human race, with all its imperfections, and make the best of it. We may comfort ourselves by reflecting that it might be a great deal worse than it is, and is even now a good deal better than it used to be.

A Dominion Statesman's Views on Imperial Matters

We referred recently to the work that is being accomplished at the Imperial Conference, and the motives which inspire the representatives both of Great Britain and from overseas in their discussions. The following article expresses the views of General Smuts, Premier of South Africa, in an interview which he gave to The Times correspondent at Cape Town:—

London, Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press)—The Cape Town correspondent of the Times contributes the following interesting article on Premier Smuts' Imperial Conference views:

South Africa, through General Smuts, is likely to take a prominent part in the Imperial Conference. The Prime Minister of the Union has given a great amount of thought to the meaning, the consequences, and the practical working methods of Dominion status; and it is as the missionary of ideas which he and most thinking South Africans believe to be vital to the future agreement and co-operation of the States of the Commonwealth that he goes to the Conference.

This does not mean that he will press—or that South Africans will wish him to press—for anything like a written definition in a constitutional document of the relations between Great Britain and the Dominions. On the contrary, he has a real respect for the long-standing British practice of allowing such constitutional developments to work themselves out, with constant adjustment of details to changing circumstances, and without any attempt to force either theory or practice into a code of written formulas.

But the truth is that the whole theory of the relations of the Dominions to Great Britain in all questions of common foreign policy has come to a point where a measure of definition—though not necessarily written definition—and, at the least, mutual understanding of conflicting points of view are indispensable. If the Conference can achieve this, it will have done a great deal. On the one hand, the great majority of thinking opinion in South Africa backs General Smuts in standing for the fullest liberty for the free and confident development of Dominion status.

On this theory the Dominions are partner states of the Empire. They are not subordinate in any way to the senior partner, Great Britain. It is convenient that the senior partner should act for them all in dealings with other States, but they expect to be consulted from time to time, and not to be committed, without their advice being asked, to departures involving new interpretations or applications of the recognized principles of British foreign policy.

The other theory is that the gradual lessening of control must be opposed with cries of alarm and accorded to only with the most scrupling and reluctant assent.

DOMINION STATUS.

General Smuts goes to the Conference to insist that Dominion status must be recognized as a reality, and that there must be no attempt to go back on it. He and his followers in South Africa believe that the one thing which can make dissolution of the Empire possible—even inevitable—is any attempt to limit, under the "parental control" of Great Britain.

It will be interesting to see how the Dominion representatives range themselves on this issue, which will underlie all the discussions of the Conference, even if it is never specifically raised. But there can be no doubt whatever about the general trend of Dominion opinion on this issue. There are doubts, there is even considerable anxiety, about the practical application of the doctrine of Dominion status at the moment. These doubts and this anxiety are natural, but as to the principle of Dominion status itself there can be no question.

That is General Smuts' position, and he has the support of enlightened opinion in South Africa without distinction of racial origin.

A word here about the influence of local politics on General Smuts' views on Imperial matters. Observers in Great Britain may be tempted to discount his championship of the new international standing of the Dominions. They may reflect that in South Africa he is faced by a formidable Republican opposition and may believe that his insistence on the rights of the Dominion is influenced—unconsciously, perhaps, but still influenced—by his anxiety to conciliate that opposition. It is a natural impression; all the more because the same ideas may be current about the Prime Minister of Canada, whose opinions on this question are close to those of General Smuts.

But, so far as General Smuts is concerned—naturally, I can say nothing about Mr. Mackenzie King—there is little truth in this impression, which is treacherous because it may lessen the influence of General Smuts' opinions and beliefs with the Conference itself and with the British public. General Smuts is supported on this issue by the great majority of South Africans of English descent. If he were Australian I am convinced that his opinions would be the same. There is in all the Dominions a profound wish to remain in the closest co-operation with Great Britain on all questions of foreign policy.

AN ARTICLE OF FAITH.

Dominion ideals in world affairs are identical with British ideals. But there is, too, in all the Dominions, a passionate belief in the future greatness of their countries. Full responsibility for their own actions in international affairs is a part of that greatness. It cannot be assumed as yet in any far-reaching sense; but there is almost universal agreement that the time will come when it can and will be assumed. The doctrine of Dominion status was no mere device of self-flattery concocted by Sir Robert Borden, General Botha and General Smuts at Versailles. It was the authentic voice of the faith of the Dominion peoples in their own destiny, expressing itself in speech for the first time. And that first articulation of this creed of self-dedication can never be unsaid again.

The vision of the people of South Africa is of their own leadership in the development of the continent of Africa. Few as yet have any clear understanding of that vision; but General Smuts has it, and when he speaks of it, as he often speaks of it, to the people of South Africa, they recognize the vision as their own. Though they see it dimly and far off. So with Canada and Australia. No statesman will ever in the future lead those peoples far long unless the very foundation of his influence is an ardent conviction of the greatness that destiny has in store for them.

All this may seem to be very dogmatic and far too confident about the views of other Dominion people to come from a South African. But the great essential for the Conference is that the people in England should recognize that in this matter there is a point of view common to Canada, Australia and South Africa—it is not so characteristic of New Zealand. South Africans know that General Smuts is the ablest and most experienced spokesman of that point of view; and it is of the first importance that British statesmen and people should understand that it looks forward to the day when the Dominions will be great and powerful nations.

DIFFICULTIES.

Even General Smuts' enemies in South Africa are with him on this matter of Dominion status. Their only quarrel with him about it is that he does not push it far enough for them. The great virtue of his practical ideas about the relations of Great Britain and the Dominions is that they are all based on the assumption of continuous common action in international affairs between all the States of the British Crown.

Of course, there are practical difficulties. But British institutions bristle with practical difficulties. After all, the present position of the Dominions and Britain as to matters of foreign policy is pretty analogous to that of any British Cabinet. In the Cabinet the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs conducts all the routine work of foreign policy. So does the British Ministry vis-a-vis the Ministries of the Dominions. Other members of the British Cabinet are consulted about foreign policy only when principles are involved, or decisions have to be taken affecting the larger interests of the nation. That is almost exactly the system which prevails among the States of the Empire.

If only common discussion among the Prime Ministers could be more frequent and more speedy, the system would work perfectly well. There is really little reluctance in South Africa to accept the proper share of responsibility for common decisions. It is only common discussion among the Prime Ministers that is more frequent and more speedy, the system would work perfectly well. There is really little reluctance in South Africa to accept the proper share of responsibility for common decisions. It is only common discussion among the Prime Ministers that is more frequent and more speedy, the system would work perfectly well.

Good News From Far Away Japan

Much anxiety had been felt of late by the friends of Japan, and the distressing news had been received. During the week, however, letters were received from Mrs. Davidson, written two days after the quake announcing their safety. Mrs. Davidson wrote from Nagasaki, but the captain was then at Hokkaido. The letter states that every other year at the first of September they would be at Yokohama, as the captain goes there to dock the steamer, but he was late this year in getting back from sea. Their many friends, no doubt, will be glad to hear of their safety. Mrs. Davidson is a native of Trinity and the wife of Mrs. A. G. Moore, Bond Street, this city.

A Demonstration of our Fire Fighting Appliances

As a fitting conclusion to Fire Prevention Week, a demonstration of the efficiency of the fire apparatus was given on Duckworth Street this forenoon under the supervision of Inspector General Hutchings. The scene of operations was opposite the Supreme Court entrance. A large number of people including the members of the Municipal Council, Fire Underwriters and Judges of the Supreme and Magistrate's Court witnessed the demonstration with keen interest. The firemen acquitted themselves in a manner which would do credit to a more pretentious city. Two pumps and the aerial ladders were used in the exhibition. The apparatus from the Central Fire Hall arrived on the scene one minute after the signal was given at the station. In one minute and thirty seconds or two minutes after a half stream of water from Fire Hall two streams of water were playing on the grounds surrounding the Anglican Cathedral. The aerial ladders in less than 30 seconds after arriving was placed in position for a man to mount during the time. Following the display of water delivery an exhibition was given of the manipulation of the aerial ladders. Fireman Ralph and Senior Fireman Cooney gave the onlookers a few thrilling moments as they mounted and descended the 65 feet ladders. All were pleased with the exhibition.

Police Court

A laborer arrested for being drunk made his first appearance in court this morning for seven months and was allowed to go. A domestic grievance in which a wife charged that her better half threatened her life was settled by the accused giving a bond in the sum of $200 for his future good behaviour. The couple have been married for 39 years and their family are all reared. A son was called to the witness stand and supported the mother's testimony that her life had been threatened and that the accused had done considerable damage to the home furnishings. The father in his defence stated that the family had conspired against him.

An assault case in which a citizen who carries on an extensive trucking business is defendant was postponed until Monday. Higgins, K.C., is appearing for the defendant.

The case against a truckman named Pike, who was charged with a breach of Traffic Regulations, concluded to-day when the evidence of F. Handford was taken. According to the witness, Pike who was ahead of his horse stopped the animal, which the traffic officer gave the signal. His Honor stated that he had postponed the case on Friday last to satisfy himself as to some facts. He concluded that there had been a technical breach of the regulations, but not a violation that would call for a penalty. The case was therefore dismissed.

Crane Smashed Off

Yesterday a crane at Baine Johnston's premises which was being used to hoist oil broke off from the wharf and crashing down on the schr. He, however, came around after a short while, showing no effects from the blow. Mr. Fred Croft of the schr. Primrose was also hit by the crane and had a narrow escape from being killed.

Late Sir W. E. Davidson

Tribute by Lord Morris to a Great Pro-Consul.

Lord Morris, who was Premier of Newfoundland when the late Sir Walter Davidson was Governor, before he went to New South Wales where he has died, yesterday paid tribute to his work during the war. "We had not a regular soldier in Newfoundland, in August, 1914," he said. Nearly fifty years earlier the British troops had been withdrawn, and there was no one there to train our troops or prepare for the defence of the country. We decided to form a department known as the Patriotic Association.

Sir Walter Davidson became its chairman, the Government found the funds, and from then on until he left the country he was most active in the selection and training of our land and sea forces. His work was untiring, and his fine patriotic speeches and example fired our people, especially the younger men, with the spirit which helped them to do such fine work for their country in Gallipoli, in Flanders, and in the North Sea. "In his death the State has lost a great pro-consul."—Bristol Times and Mirror, 13-9-23.

Lessening the Risks

(Daily Mail.) Excellent as our fire fighting organization is, it is constantly being improved, and some drastic new regulations for the prevention of fire are advocated in a report just issued by the Royal Commission on Fire Brigades and Fire Prevention. One recommendation is that instruction in fire drill and first-aid should be included in the curriculum of the schools, while another is that fire drill should be compulsory in all factories where more than 20 persons work above the ground floor. But most interesting of all is the Commission's reference to the widespread habit of smoking in offices, which gained its foothold during the war, when it seemed essential to the nation's safety that all of us, men and women alike, should smoke cigarettes almost continuously. This habit, the Commission appear to think, is unduly prevalent to-day in Government offices.

"We cannot help feeling," they remark, "that in this matter a somewhat higher standard of precaution and somewhat less self-indulgence might be displayed." Probably there is a great deal to be said for this point of view. On the other hand, who can say how much we may not sometimes be indebted to the calm reflection produced by a leisurely smoked cigarette or cigar? After all, it is better to have a fire in a waste-paper basket in the Foreign Office than a conflagration in Central Europe.

GIANTS WIN THIRD MATCH IN WORLD SERIES, 1-0.—STENGEL'S HOMER DOES THE TRICK.

New York, Oct. 12.—Cast permanently, it would seem, in heroic mould, Casey Stengel smashed the New York Giants to victory with a home run today. For the second time in three days he lashed into the right field bleachers of the Yankee Stadium in the 7th inning. Stengel's blow broke up the tense, thrilling, hurling duel between Art Nehf, southpaw star of the Giants, and Sam Jones, of the Yankees, and gave the world's champions their solitary but sufficient margin of one to none triumph.

Stengel's feat of winning the two games with home runs in a single championship has no equal in world's series annals. It was a heart-breaking setback for Jones who pitched even more brilliantly than did his southpaw rival Nehf, and too it was doubly disastrous for the Yankee machine for with the defeat they lost, at least temporarily, the services of their first baseman, Wally Pipp, as he wrenched again his weakened right ankle in sliding to second in the 7th inning and was forced to leave the game.

Ruth finished at first for Pipp, and Pinkey Haines took Babe's post in the rightfield for the eighth inning. Jones baffled the Giants with Stengel, with marvellous change of pace and superb control, yielding but four scattered hits, while Nehf was being found for six. Except for Stengel, but one Giant got as far as second base. Coming back in the 8th after Stengel's crashing blow, Jones displayed his mettle by striking out Bancroft and Groh in succession, but he was withdrawn in favor of a pinch hitter in the Yankee half of the innings, when Higgins directed his last desperate but futile attack when Joe Bush held the Giants hitless in the ninth.

Facing the first real crisis of the series, John McDrew played his ace Nehf and the merry little southpaw came through with flying colors. His work was but slightly less effective than that of Jones. Three times he faced serious threats by the Yankees, but on each occasion he rose to the emergency and turned back his foe. In only one inning, the fifth, did the Yankees gather more than one hit off him. He issued three passes, two of them purposely, to Babe Ruth, and each time the strategy, though unpopular with the crowd, was vindicated.

 The following account is taken from the Canadian Recorder, Halifax, Sept. 30, 1893.

A PROPOSED BOUT.
 A New York despatch says: For an all-around diving and plunging contest, with no holds barred, why does not some ingenious soul come along and match Joe Beckett, the celebrated English tank worker against Freddy Fulton, the elongated plasterer from Rochester, Minn.? The show would be a riot. They would show more fancy back-flops than any other half-dozen canvas-kitters in the business.

MPTIGUE CLAIMS LIFE THREATENED.—SAYS HE WAS LUCKY TO GET AWAY WITH ONLY BROKEN HAND.
 NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(A.P.)—Declaring his life had been threatened and that he was forced into the ring at the point of a gun, despite a fractured left thumb, Mike Mptigue returned to New York to-day from Columbus, Ga., where last Thursday he retained his light heavyweight championship of the world only when it had nearly toppled off in the riotous demonstration that accompanied his match with young Stribling, 18 year old schoolboy and pugilistic pride of the South, which ended in a draw.
 "Sure, I was lucky to get out of there with nothing but a broken hand," said Mike.
 Mptigue was accompanied by his manager, Joe Jacobs, and Harry Ellis, of Jersey City, who refereed the fight. The trio united in charges that they had been subject to threats and intimidation in the rapid succession of events that followed the attempt by Mptigue to call off the bout because of the injury to his hand; that guns were flourished in efforts to force Mptigue to go through with the fight; and that the entire affair was a "frame up," instigated, they charged by John Paul Jones, promoter of the match, with the idea of gaining the championship for Stribling.

BELGIAN BOXER GOES LIMIT WITH CRIQUEL.
 PARIS, Oct. 6.—(A.P.)—Eugene Criquel met a tartar in his first fight in Europe since he won and lost the world's featherweight championship in New York, when Young Henri Hebrans, a Belgian, stayed the limit of 15 rounds to-night with the Frenchman. Hebrans lost the verdict on points. The gate receipts amounted to 200,000 francs, which will go to the benefit of scientific laboratories in France.

DESCHAMPS HAS "HEAVY FIND" IN BRITAIN.
 LONDON, Oct. 4.—Georges Deschamps, manager, Francois Deschamps, is to take a hand in training British boxers and already has under his tutelage one, whom he hopes to mould into a heavyweight champion, says the Daily Mail.

Lamenting the present dearth of boxers of championship class in this country and pronouncing the British outlook in the fight game as "very gloomy, whichever way it is viewed," the newspaper says there are multitudes of boxers in Great Britain, but no managers with enough skill to convert them into champions. The Daily Mail, therefore, welcomes the decision of Deschamps, who, it says, believes the British makes the best boxers in the world when properly handled.

The Frenchman's first pupil in London is 16-year old Johnny Sullivan, who has been boxing since he was 10, and who has already made good showing in the ring. He appeared on last Monday night's card, at the Olympia, which included the Carpenter-Beckett match. Deschamps was so impressed with Sullivan's skill, which the manager regarded as unusual, that he undertook to shape him into what he hopes will prove to be a first-class fighter.

ONE OF THE MEN WHO WAS A USEFUL CITIZEN FROM 1774 TO 1784.

Any one who spent twenty-four hours in Kildare, in the Kingdom of Ireland between 1780 and 1784 would hear about, and meet, and learn to respect one Mr. Lawrence Coke.

He was a gentleman of the first water, who having come into possession of the estate and fortune of his uncle, Dennis Coke, in 1783, had moved from Dublin (where he was born) to the country town of Kildare.

His bachelor uncle Dennis had not paid much attention to the estate during the last few years of his life, and consequently it was more or less run down. After Lawrence had spent a year there looking over the estate, and making such changes as in his opinion were necessary to make it presentable, and such particular changes in the house as would make it all that a woman would like it to be, he went back to Dublin and within a few weeks he returned to Kildare with his bride.

It became evident from the outset, that the coming of such a man as Lawrence Coke, and his bride to Kildare, meant much that would have to do with the best welfare of the little town.

In the year 1780 there came to Lawrence and Nora Coke their first-born child, who at his baptism was given the name of Dennis after the uncle to whom they owed so much.

Though several girls babies came to them during the next fifteen years, Dennis was the only boy till he was sixteen, and by that time his reputation was well established in the family, and in the town, as one who was well equipped to represent the family, and to follow in the footsteps of his father. Having passed through the school at Kildare, with a stock of general knowledge that constituted a good foundation for university training, he passed his Matriculation examination into Trinity College, Dublin, where he spent four years of at Cape Clear, and to say good-bye to Ireland.

The next morning the vessel was adapting herself to the roll of the Atlantic; but Dennis proved to be a good sailor, and the novelty of everything on ship-board filled every hour with real enjoyment. On the morning of the eighteenth day from Cape Clear, he got his first view of the new land of which he had heard so much from the Captain; and within twenty-four hours he had passed through the narrows, and into the beautiful harbour of Trinity. It was the 14th of July, 1774, and he was wonderfully impressed with his new surroundings, and with a physical fitness such as he had never before experienced.

There were several of Dennis' fellow-countrymen in Trinity, and he was glad to meet them and to talk with them about the old country. He was, however, very different from them, inasmuch as he represented a standard of intelligence and culture, such as up to that time was not largely found in those of his countrymen who had made Trinity their home.

The leading persons of the town were quick to notice and to appreciate this, and together with the letters of introduction that he brought with him, his gentlemanly bearing, and his distinct personality won for him the entrée to their homes and their hearts.

Benjamin Lester, Esq., who owned the brig Britannia, invited him on shore, and to be his guest whilst the vessel was in port. It was Mr. Coke's intention to return to Ireland with Captain Jenkins; but by the time his vessel was ready for sea, he had decided to remain in Trinity till the autumn, and he wrote to his father and mother to that effect. After the vessel had left, Dennis began to tire of doing nothing, and Mr. Lester, who had anticipated this, was ready with an offer of congenial work.

During Mr. Coke's college course he had taken the foundations of British Law as one of his subjects, looking forward as he did then, to the probability of a definite course in Law in after life. Mr. Lester knew this, and during the formative period through which Trinity was passing in those days—when every man was disposed to be law unto himself—a master of arts of a university, with some definite knowledge of law was in every sense a God-send, and at Mr. Lester's suggestion, Mr. Coke accepted the appointment of Justice of the Peace for the district, and soon became well known and highly respected in his department.

THE AINSWORTH FAMILY OF TRINITY—SIX GENERATIONS.

One of the old settlers of Trinity, of whom I have often heard my grandfather speak, and with the highest respect, was Charles Ainsworth, Sr. The name had died out in Trinity, but it is still remembered by us, and perpetuated in the sixth generation, in other parts of Newfoundland. The following is an outline of the six generations as gathered from the old church registers:—

1811—(1) Married, Charles Ainsworth of Southampton, Hants, England, and Elizabeth Spurrell, of Trinity. Witnesses: Richard Ash, George V. Pittman.

(2) Their children were: William, John and Charles Rodgers.

1827—Married, John Ainsworth and Sarah Green, of Scilly Cove.

(3) Their children were: Elizabeth, Joanna, Sarah, Arianna Mary, and Caroline Amelia.

1827—Married, Arianna M. Ainsworth and George House.

(4) Their children: George, John, Emma and others.

1874—Married, Caroline Amelia Ainsworth and Robert Facey.

(5) Their children: John, Hugh, Nicholas, and others.

— Married, Hugh, Nicholas, and others.

1841—Charles R. Ainsworth, or Charles, Junior, (son of Charles) was married three times. 1st, in 1841, he married Sarah Halyar; in 1849, he married Hannah Grant; in 1858, he married Mary Eastman. Some of their children were: Mary Ann, Annie, Elizabeth, William, Walter.

N. B.—Sarah Halyar was a granddaughter of James Halyar of Nether-bury, Dorset, who married a Mary Thorn of New Harbour, in 1774.

BAY OF HERBS.

In my notes of a fortnight ago, re the old name of Bay de Verde, I wrote "the present name was not just the same 150 years ago." The compositor left out the word not, which made the remarks that followed rather confusing. Since then I have found two other entries in the old registers, in which the name Bay of Herbs is used: "1770—Baptized, a son of William and Susan Frowd, named Peter, at Bay de Herbs. Baptized, a daughter of the same, at Bay of Herbs."

LOCAL ITEMS.

Mrs. White, wife of Sergeant White, Catalina, and Mrs. Smith, wife of Mr. Arthur Smith (the electrician who installed the electric light plant at Port Union) came to Trinity on Saturday last and spent a few days with Mrs. White's sister, Mrs. Somerton. They had an enjoyable time, and returned to their homes at Catalina and St. John's respectively. We were glad to have them with us. Come again.

Sergeant White of Catalina, paid an official visit to the magistrate last week. We are always glad to see him, as one who is very fond of his native place.

Mr. Erikson is putting in a concrete wall, to replace some wood-work under his shop.

Mrs. Erikson is at St. John's on her way back from the continent, and together with Mrs. Gent, will return to Trinity by the Prospero. We shall be glad to have them with us again. Home is not such a bad place after all.

Mr. Parsons of Harbour Grace spent a few days in Trinity, as a guest of the Ryan family. We are glad to see him. Come again. Sure!

We shall miss Mr. I. C. Morris' Week End Notes for a while; but we are glad to know that "at a later date" he hopes to resume them. He would be a poor sort of a Newfoundlander either at home or abroad, who could be other than deeply interested in Mr. Morris' notes; and as one who has followed them with the deepest interest, I thank him for information, and the education derived from them.

Called to rest, in Toronto, on Oct. 2nd, Mrs. E. Day, nee Mary Lockyer, a sister of Mr. William S. Lockyer, and a cousin of Canon Lockyer, Trinity. Grant her Lord Eternal rest.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Grant, and those who have been with them in the Straits during the summer are on their way home in the S. S. Neptune. Always glad to welcome them.

"PREVENTION IS BETTER THAN CURE."

In the best interests of the general public in Trinity, and because of the respect that the public has for Captain Field of the S. S. Prospero, some one in Trinity should be invested with the authority of harbour master, so that he may see that the approach to the Government Wharf is sufficiently clear of obstructions to allow the Prospero to get to and from the wharf without any risk, either to the steamer, or to the schooners anchored in the harbour. This would not mean any great inconvenience to the schooner owners, and it would mean much to the captain of the Prospero, who is entitled to every consideration. All other things being equal, a steamer with mails, passengers, and freight to discharge or take on board, should have the right of way and position over any steamer or vessel that might be at the wharf at the time. All this can be easily arranged, if some one is given the authority to do so, and will exercise that authority. I take it for granted that, at present, no one is thus authorized. My compliments to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

SIX GENERATIONS OF FACEYS.

The name Facey is one of the old Trinity names, which, although it has died out in Trinity, is still affectionately remembered. The first of the family was John Facey of Cullinston, Devon, England. He married Rachel, daughter of Samuel and Christiana Savory of Old Perlican, on November 8th, 1801.

Their children were John, Samuel, Susannah, William, Christiana, Mary, Nicholas, and James. John was drowned in 1832. Samuel married Mary Clouter, Susannah married Benjamin Gregory. After his death she married Richard Hopkitch. William lived at Catalina and died in 1832. Christiana married James Lockyer Mews, Nicholas married Sarah Halyar. James married Elizabeth Nicholls and Sarah Facey were: John Saunders, Mary Susannah, James Mews, William George, Robert Christiana, Robert Facey married Caroline A. Ainsworth, and their grandchildren represent the sixth generation.

THE CUTLER FAMILY.

Although there are some descendants of the Cutler family still living at Trinity, yet the name has died out. The first of the family was George Cutler, of Fordingbridge, England. He married Sarah Warnell of Trinity in 1784. Their children were: George, Mary Ann, John, Elizabeth, Hannah, Rachel and Elizabeth.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

T. W. H.—Yes, there was more intercourse between Trinity and Scilly Cove a hundred years ago than between it and any other place on the south side of Trinity Bay. Hence many of the men at Trinity got their wives at Scilly Cove, and Vice Versa.

John R.—Darby Quinn was a very well known person in Trinity. He came from Ross, in Ireland. He married Sarah Roster, of Rider's Harbour, in 1784. His daughter Sarah married James Sullivan, in Rider's Harbour, in 1809. Mr. Quinn is registered as a "boat-keeper." His wife died in 1819. He died in 1834. Aged 51 years.

Name—Yes "Sweet" was a fairly common Christian name in Trinity about a hundred years ago. I can find "Sweet Barnes," "Sweet Pottle" and "Sweet Sevoir" in the old registers. I don't think the word thus used as a Christian name, was intended as an adjective; but it was a surname used for that purpose. We still have "Sweet potatoes," "Sweet pickles" and "Sweet Cakes." Surely there are plenty of real Christian names from which you may select for your child, without associating the action with such unchristian sentiment, that some day your child will be sorry for. I am glad they didn't call me sweet.

I received a sheaf of delightful letters this week, full of nice things about the Trinity Notes, and the pleasant recollections of our summer visitors. As "like produces like," the contents of the letters could not fail to

The Most Your Money Will Buy

Outstanding value is apparent in every detail of the new Overland. Consider these features:

Triplex springs (Patented) providing 130-inch spring-base—all-steel touring body with hard baked enamel finish—the strongest rear axle in the Overland price class—a powerful, reliable engine that gives 25 miles and more to the Imperial gallon of gasoline.

No wonder owners are unanimous in believing the Overland "the most automobile in the world for the money."

The new pupil at a boarding-school excited much curiosity by his habit of talking to himself. One day a senior boy stopped him and asked, with a supercilious smile:
"Why on earth are you always chattering to yourself?"
"For two very good reasons!" was the unabashed reply.
"Two reasons? What are they?"
"Well, one is that I like to listen to a sensible man, and the other is that I like to talk to a sensible man."

Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly
The best cough medicine you ever used. A family supply easily and quickly made. Saves about 25c.
You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's clean, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it's pure and good. Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a 16-oz. bottle; then fill it up with plain crystallized sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup. Instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This you make is once-a-family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.
And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying "throat tickle," loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.
Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membrane.
To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

CABINET ACTS WITHOUT THE SANCTION OF THE PRESIDENT.

BERLIN, Oct. 12.

The Cabinet decided not to await the sanction by the Reichstag of special measures authorizing dictatorial powers for Government in economic matters and hence a decree was issued yesterday signed by President Ebert, Chancellor Stresemann, and Finance Minister Luther, providing that henceforth all taxes shall be paid according to gold standard instead of paper marks. Other decrees looking to rehabilitation of the country's finances will be issued regardless of whether the authorization law passes by Reichstag to-morrow or not there have been minor disturbances in Berlin, Weisbaden, and Cologne due to the high price of food. Coal stocks in Berlin so low, Burgomaster informed the Municipality that unless the Government came to the rescue, the gas supply would be endangered.

JUST WHAT DOES HE MEAN?

VICTORIA, B.C., Oct. 12.

Canada cannot achieve virile nationalism of her own until she has freed herself of the United States and other influences, Hon. Lapointe, Minister of Marine and Fisheries told the Canadian Club here. In this task of declaring Canada for Canadians and purging the country of outside control, Mr. Lapointe assured his audience his province of Quebec could be counted on to render a full share of service. While the attainment of a true national idea was probably Canada's most essential undertaking he pointed out that Canada had a duty to rest of the world and he uttered a warning lest narrow prejudice be mistaken for patriotism.

LOYD GEORGE TO ADVOCATE IMPERIAL PREFERENCE.

LONDON, Oct. 12.

The Morning Post's political correspondent wires there are persistent rumors that Lloyd George with the aid of Earl of Birkenhead and even, it is confidentially stated, Winston Churchill, will come out as a full blown advocate of imperial prefer#### ence when the former Premier returns from his American tour.

VIOLENT METHODS ADOPTED BY LONGSHOREMEN.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Oct. 12.

The fourth day of the Longshoremen's strike was marked last night by the first serious clash between the strikers and strikebreakers here. Stealing aboard the Canadian Government marine freighter of the Canadian Highlander line, the alleged strikers last night attacked 18 strikebreakers with bludgeons and axes seriously injuring four and drove the rest from the boat.

SALVAGE OPERATIONS ON THE RALEIGH SUCCESSFUL.

HALIFAX, N.S., Oct. 12.

Advices to her owners in Halifax state that the salvage steamer Strandhill has salvaged the remaining three of seven 7.5 guns of the British cruiser Raleigh, which was wrecked on the Labrador Coast in Aug., 1922. The steamer has also picked up three small anchors and three hundred and sixty fathoms of chain, performing the whole operation in one hour and

It is understood that the owners of the Strandhill will receive approximately seventeen thousand dollars for each gun which they deliver in England, but that they would receive nothing if the operations were not successful. The Strandhill, a former ram row feature, was purchased for the purpose when she got into financial difficulties in Halifax and was offered for sale.

PREMIER OF N.B. DENIES RUMOUR.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Oct. 12.

In a telegram to the Telegraph Journal to-night from Bathurst Premier Veniot said: "The press dispatch from Quebec quoting me as saying that in a speech before the Reform Club I favored Quebec Liquor Law for New Brunswick is absolutely false and without any foundation whatever."

A Journalist's Jottings

Many kindly-disposed sportsmen are just now sending part of the game they kill to the hospitals, where it is doubtless appreciated by some patients. But not by all.

Housekeepers know the curious prejudice domestic servants have against game. Ready enough to avail themselves of the opportunity of sharing the good things served in the dining-room, the servants never touch game. And, speaking generally, the prejudice is equally marked in the case of their fathers, brothers, uncles, and cousins.

A delightful story in illustration of this curious aversion occurs in the latest volume of Sir Henry Lucy's "Diary of a Journalist." A noble lord sent a bunch of venison that had well "hung" to a military hospital during the war.

The cook was in despair, knowing from experience that the men would certainly refuse to eat it. The matron, also experienced in the matter, shared the cook's discomfiture. But it was a pity to waste a splendid haunch of meat, particularly suitable for convalescents. And at last a happy thought struck her.

"Cook it," she said, "and send it round at dinner without naming the #### dish. They will think it's mutton and enjoy it accordingly.

Her instructions were obeyed, and the matron visited the ward at meal-time to see how her "innocent" rush had worked. She found the patients all sitting up in bed with their gas masks on. They had evidently noticed what they regarded as a "small familiar in the trenches!"

Here is yet another! A certain well-known sportsman had for many years been accustomed in the autumn to visit a little port on the west coast of Ireland in search of sea fishing.

He regularly employed the same boatsman, who had "always" eagerly looked forward to his arrival. On the occasion of his usual visit during the second year of the war, however, he was amazed to find the services of his old companion unavailable.

"I am too busy," was the response to his remonstrance. "Got another job."

"Well, if you must know, the German Government pay me £5 a week for laying mines outside the port."

The Englishman was equally amazed and indignant. He pointed out the enormity of the crime of an Irishman selling himself to a foreign enemy with whom thousands of his fellow-countrymen were engaged in fierce struggle.

"Whist!" said Pat, a humorous smile lighting up his rugged countenance. "The English Government pay me brother Mike £6 a week for taking them up."

One of the things in which our present King exceeds the skill of his father is shooting. In the judgment of experts he ranks as one of the six best guns in the country. King Edward, on the other hand, was not far from qualifying for inclusion amongst the six worst, and in this connection the author tells of the following amusing little episode.

One morning, at Balmoral, Queen Alexandra, entering the library unexpectedly, found seated there all alone Mr. Birrell, then Chief Secretary for Ireland. Her Majesty greeted him graciously, and then inquired why he had elected to remain indoors when #### the King and his other guests had gone off shooting.

Birrell explained that he did not shoot, adding, "I hate to see anything killed."

"Ah," said the Queen, with her sweetest smile, "then you should stand behind His Majesty when he is shooting at the butts. Your feelings would not be hurt by anything you see."

Fishes With Headlights

Professor G. H. Nuttall, of Cambridge, told the British Association a wonderful story of two species of fish which live in the sea about the Banda Islands (Moluccas). Their life history is unknown, but in both species there is a headlight lying in a depression just under the eye and in front of the gills. The back of this luminous organ is covered with a layer of black pigment, which serves to keep the light from shining into the tissues of the fish.

In both fishes there is a mechanism for obscuring the light, but, curiously enough, the mechanism developed is totally different in the two species. In one species the organ is hinged and can be turned downward until the light surface comes in contact with a fold of black pigmented tissue, forming a sort of pocket. The light is thus cut off. In the other species a fold of black tissue has been developed on the ventral edge of the organ socket, which can be drawn up over the light surface like an eyelid, thus extinguishing the light.

The organ is continuously luminous day and night and independent of stimulation. The first species constantly turns the light on and off, the fish using it, it is supposed, as a searchlight to attract and mislead its prey. The natives use the amputated organ as a bait in night fishing, and it maintains its luminosity for about eight hours.

The luminous material filling the tubes consists of an emulsion containing many granules and rods, which move about with a cork-screw-like motion.

Ship That Vanished

ONLY CAPTAIN'S BODY FOUND OUT OF 29 SOULS.

Extraordinary revelations were made at a Board of Trade inquiry at the Law Courts into the loss of the steamship El Kahira, 2084 tons, belonging to the Trading and Coaling Company, Ltd., of St. Helen's-place, E.C.—She went on a voyage to the Mediterranean in July of last year, and was never seen again. Mr. T. A. Bucknill, for the Board of Trade, related that the El Kahira was built in 1892 at Glasgow, and sailed from London on July 7, 1922 for Mediterranean ports, with a cargo of sugar, one passenger, and crew of 28 hands. On August 1st, the body of the Master, Captain Pepperell of Cardiff, was picked up 600 miles off Cape Griens. The vessel with all hands completely disappeared, and no wreckage was ever discovered. Points which the Court would have to consider were the complete absence of the wireless apparatus that vessels of this tonnage were compelled by law to carry, the general seaworthiness of the vessel, and the amount of cargo that was carrying. It appeared, counsel went on, that the management of the vessel had been undertaken by Oliver and Co. Ltd., and a director of that company, as well as the marine superintendent, would be called for to give evidence. Mrs. Pepperell, widow of the master, mentioned that her husband, who was making a first voyage on the vessel, expressed surprise that it was allowed to start without a wireless installation. She received a letter from her husband, which was given to the pilot off Dover and in which he stated there had been engine trouble and that "everything seems to be going wrong." Mr. Milne, of the Bureau Veritas, a French society which issues classification certificates to merchant vessels, told the court that at the time of her last sailing the El Kahira had lost her classification on the ground that she was considerably overdue for a survey in dry dock. Mr. Herman Augustus Bevan, who served on the El Kahira for four months in 1919, gave evidence that he re-engaged as mate in July, 1922, but only remained three days, as he was not satisfied with the ship. The hearing was adjourned.

Tugboats Had Stormy Trip

Leaving Southampton on September 12th, the seagoing tug Ocean Eagle having in tow the harbor tug Ballin Ballock, arrived in port at 1 p. m. yesterday after a very boisterous passage. Both tugs are bound to St. John, N.B., having been purchased by the Dry Dock and Shipbuilding Co. there. The Ocean Eagle is about 300 tons gross and seven tons net, whilst the Ballin Ballock registers 3 tons net. Two days after the tugs left Southampton they put into Cardiff for coal. Leaving there on the 18th inst, the little ships headed for this side of the Atlantic. On the 22nd inst. a raging storm was run into, and as seas swept the ships it was decided to put back to land. Southampton was again reached on the 28th inst. After a few days delay in effecting repairs the trip was again commenced. All went well until Monday last when bad weather threatened the destruction of the little ships. One heavy sea boarding the Ocean Eagle, knocked out Chief Officer Thimouth of that ship. Fortunately he received no other injury than the loss of two teeth. The ships are taking bunker coal at Harvey's and will likely resume the voyage to-morrow.

Keys of Gibraltar

CEREMONIALS AT INSTALLATION OF NEW GOVERNOR.

Impressive ceremonies, including the presentation of the keys of the fortress, marked the installation of the new Governor of Gibraltar, General Sir Charles Munro. The administration of the oaths took place on the date of the ballroom at the Government House, popularly known as the "Convent" because before the British occupation it had been the home of a community of Franciscan friars. The ballroom itself was formerly the nave of the convent chapel. The fact of General Munro having subscribed to the oaths was announced by a salute from the guns of the fortress. Then followed the presentation of the keys. Gibraltar alone among the British possessions boasts of the appointment of a Key Sergeant. One of his duties is to see that the keys are safely deposited nightly on a velvet cushion on the dinner table in front of the Governor.

Where Out Is In

SIR R. A. SQUIRES ON THE "THIRD RED CORD OF SENTIMENT"—DOMINION'S DESIRE FOR CLOSER TIES.

Sir Richard Squires, who recently resigned the office of Prime Minister of Newfoundland for personal reasons, was among the Dominion Ministers invited by the British Government to take part in the Imperial Conference, but owing to his retirement from office this duty will now devolve upon the Hon. W. Warren, his successor in the Premiership, but a member of the same political party of which Sir Richard is still the leader, and which stands as it has always stood, for closer Imperial relationship.

Since his resignation, Sir Richard Squires, who is the leader of the Bar in Newfoundland, has been spending a vacation in the United States, where it would appear that keen interest is taken in the forthcoming Imperial Conference and its probable decisions in relation to the promotion of Imperial unity.

We gather from reports of interviews given to the American Press on this subject, by Sir Richard Squires that had it been his privilege to have attended the Imperial Conference he would have been among the most enthusiastic members of that body in favor of, not only increased Imperial trade, but also of closer co-operation between the self-governing countries of the Empire.

No Disintegration.

In one of his Press interviews, a copy of which has reached the Morning Post, Sir Richard Squires vehemently resented the suggestion that there was any peril of disintegration of the British Empire. He said:

Great Britain does not desire control of her Dominions in so far as the word control suggests dictatorship and dominance, but both Great Britain and her Dominions do desire a continuance and development of the family relationship which now exists between the Motherland and the overseas portions of the Empire.

The bonds of heredity, association and kinship, the bonds of common language and tradition, of kinship in the recent struggle of similar Parliamentary and judicial institutions, of similar legal codes and customs—these are words that thin red cord of sentiment and blood which knits together not only England and her overseas possessions, but also knits the English-speaking peoples of the world, is a bond which far transcends strength, value, and purpose any forces which might tend to disintegrate.

Inter-Imperial Trade.

Dealing with inter-imperial trade, Sir Richard Squires quoted the changed trading relations between Newfoundland and Great Britain as an illustration of the disturbing influence of the Great War. Before the war (he said) Newfoundland trade went largely to Great Britain and Europe. During the war, however, owing to the difficulties of trans-Atlantic traffic, extensive trade was developed with the United States, and was still maintained. But this new trade relationship does not appear to be altogether satisfactory from Newfoundland's point of view. "The balance of trade between the United States and Newfoundland," Sir Richard Squires explained, "is at present largely in favor of the United States. That is, we sell little to the United States, but buy substantial quantities of American products."

Anniversary of Death

OF MAJOR-GENERAL SIR ISAAC BROCK.

October 13, 1812. Few anniversaries in Canada have the significance and sentiment for the people of this country that they attach to October 13, 1812, the date of the death of Major-General Sir Isaac Brock, whose imperishable fame is recorded in the handsome and imposing monument at Queenston, Ontario. General Brock gave his life while successfully defending Upper Canada against an invading American army in the war of 1812 between the United States and Canada.

A little less than two months previously he had captured Detroit and had received the surrender of General Hull, who was in command of the United States troops. For this and other distinguished services he received the honor of knighthood, of which his enjoyment was tragically short.

Brock was born in the Island of Guernsey, Oct. 6, 1769. He chose the army as his profession, in the course of which he served in the West Indies and was with Nelson in the Battle of Copenhagen. He was sent to Canada in 1802 to suppress a rebellion in the troops. He was placed in command of the garrison at Quebec in 1806, and in October, 1810, he was appointed Governor of Upper Canada. In his office of Governor the defence of the country against the Americans in the war developed upon him, and history records how faithfully and well he carried out his high duties.

Theatre goers will rejoice in the fact that for a limited engagement they can again witness the legitimate or spoken drama. Theatre fans will remember the Mae Edwards Players as that most versatile theatrical company which gave such good entertainment last fall. Their plays are all new to St. John's and are culled from a long list of recent successes. Whilst everybody remembers their "Gallagher and Sheen" of last year as well as the peppy Orchestra which the Company possesses. The vaudeville numbers have been strengthened and their Orchestra enlarged, so that we bespeak for them a very successful season.

The Field of Opportunity for the Boy

Those who had the pleasure of listening to Mr. Statten's able address on "Boy Life" yesterday were one and all impressed with a side of the problem to which most of us have given but little thought. We concern ourselves with the work that is being done by the schools and other institutions which are responsible for the training of our children. We do not hesitate at times to criticize the teachers or superintendents in these institutions if the methods which they adopt, founded on years of experience, do not coincide with our immature views. Every time that an act of vandalism is reported we blame the boy, often unjustly, and damn the authorities because they do not build a reformatory in which to bundle all the delinquents and thereby relieve us of their presence and enable us to forget our responsibility.

In Mr. Statten's speech, conspicuous by its absence was any criticism of the systems in vogue, or any reference to the need of a reformatory. What he did stress, however, was our individual responsibility, the helping hand, a word occasionally to show that we took an interest in him personally, and above all the necessity to provide some means which would enable the boy to use up his superfluous energy by giving him an incentive and an opportunity to tender service.

The suggestion of finding suitable places here and there where the boys could live together with the little gang is along the lines adopted in the Bernard homes. There, instead of the one great depressing institution, the cottage plan has been adopted, each one a home, each supervised by a person who takes the place of a father or a mother, and situated in surroundings that enable the members of the family to pursue occupations that are interesting, and that in future years will be of great benefit to them.

By the adoption of some such plan a great stimulus could be given to the development of a real live agricultural industry, and the plan might be further extended to include work which would give the boys a thorough knowledge of forestry. Take him away from the sordid slums in which he has found the incentive for evil, put him out into God's open country, let him learn from Nature the great lessons of clean living and purity, give him a chance to accomplish something and taste the sweets of victory. Then he will be a man after God's own heart.

SIDE TALKS.

THEY WOULDN'T BE DRIVEN.

My fashion magazine arrived this morning with the announcement that after a single year of longer skirts they are going up again.

It contained a horrible picture of the lady who was still mistakenly wearing last year's skirts about six inches from the ground, and another one of the wise virgins whose skirts are from eight to ten inches from the ground, with the accent on the ten.

Now while I am not at all anxious to see anything so unbecoming again as women of 50 and 70 wearing skirts up to their knees as they did a few years ago; and while I still maintain that most women look rather better in the house in a fairly long dress; I do rejoice to see that signs that women are developing a mind of their own and cannot be herded like sheep by the makers of fashions.

They Never Wanted Them.

Women didn't want long skirts. They accepted them reluctantly after a long fight, they tolerated them only a year, and now skirts are going up again.

It is very difficult to distinguish a mere swing of the pendulum from a real movement forward in any direction, but it really does seem to me as if the world were making a definite move toward sanity and beauty of dress.

Doubtless every age has thought its own garments the final word in beauty, but haven't we really more reason for thinking that than other ages?

Lines and Colors More Beautiful.

Lines are simpler than they ever were before.

Colors are lovelier than ever.

We have no such atrocious, such perversions of the natural form as the big sleeves, the squeezed in waist, the bustle.

Much stress is laid on artistic draping.

The dress with the open neck in place of that frightful atrocity, the high, stiff wired collar seems to have come to stay, and is certainly more becoming to 99 women out of a hundred.

Sport Clothes More Suitable.

Sports are conducted in knickers and open throated blouses, which are surely better looking besides being infinitely more comfortable and more appropriate than the long skirts and high necked shirtwaists we wore ten years ago for tennis or hiking or golf.

The one piece dress with its opportunity for beauty of line even when the frock is most inexpensive, has taken the place of the waist and skirt, which by its distortions ruined the beauty of the best figure.

I should hate to see any of these present customs pass.

Ah! after this demonstration of what women can do when they try, I have hopes I will not have to.

Our Dumb Animals.

REPORT OF CHIEF AGENT FOR WEEK, ENDING OCT. 12TH.

Attended to the landing of 114 head of cattle, 2 horses, 40 sheep and a quantity of pigs and poultry from the Canadian Sapper. I had some sprainers which were imported by Mr. A. V. Ross landed in horse boxes to prevent injury in landing. These animals were all taken away by Mr. Halliday; all were watered and fed as soon as they were landed. I would like to thank Mr. Kennedy and those under him, for the great care taken in the landing of cattle and livestock during this week. I have sent off the street two lame horses and another suffering with a sore back. I also spoke to several teamsters for various reasons; some for over-driving and others for overloading and riding against the grade. I will have to take those cases before the Court, as I have warned teamsters repeatedly about this and some don't seem to take any notice. I have also received complaints of boys under age driving horses. I should like the police to take up this matter, as there is a law which covers this. I have received several complaints of horses being out all night where the pasture has all been eaten down after the summer. The owners will have to keep their horses in future, especially those engaged in trucking and carting. I humanely put to death a setter dog for a gentleman on King's Bridge Road. The animal was old and suffering from an accident; also another dog for a man near Mundy's Pond, and a horse for a man in the East End, owned by the Council. I humanely put it to death at the Fox Farm. This is the horse that was reported some time ago. All complaints have been promptly attended to.

Hints For Members of Humane Societies.

Horses, dogs and cats need to drink often, and should be supplied with plenty of pure, fresh water.

Be kind and gentle with all animals; never be rough or impatient.

Do not allow any one to hurt, tease or frighten any animal; put to death.

Use your influence and knowledge as much as possible when you find an animal in a bad condition.

If you see any one ill-treating a horse, request him to stop. A word will sometimes do it, as it is a misdemeanor under the law. If he refuses, call a policeman, who is obliged to prevent cruelty.

If you see a horse that has sores or galls under the harness, tell the driver what to do for it and how to adjust the harness.

Watch for overdraw checks. Try to have them loosened or taken off, if not, ask the driver to see that they are undone when the horse is standing.

Show a driver how to open blinders away from the eyes of the horse. Pressure causes blindness. Advise drivers to give up blinders and use the open bridle.

Be sure and turn the horse's head away from the sun, or ask the driver to do so.

Try to prevent overloaded teams from being driven.

Ask people who drive dock-tailed horses to cover them with fly-nets, to prevent torment by flies.

Dog fights and cock fights are expressly forbidden under many State laws.

Urge your friends to treat all animals kindly.

Ask your friends to become members of some humane society.

Each member should make it a point to get five other members.

Remember that senselessness of the unkindness to animals is due to want of thought and lack of knowledge. Personal influence, backed by knowledge, will better accomplish our purpose than force.

JONAS BARTER,
Chief Agent.

Cost of Living in America on the up Grade

The cost of living in the months has risen to a point higher than ever before. It is announced by the National Conference Board, but the cost of the average American man have gone, proportionately higher. In other words, the nation reflects a higher level of "real" earnings.

What these earnings will be at any time since before the war, the report states. Best has risen rapidly than any other item in the family budget, having climbed 75 per cent. higher than in March, 1922, to last July, as a steady rise in the cost of mounting to 47 per cent. Best and July of this year were 35 per cent. above the pre-war level. In other words, the cost of living had all other things considered, having climbed 147 per cent. since 1914.
