Eastern League Gossip

The fans will soon be in their glory, for doesn't the Eastern League season open on Thursday, when the fastest minor league in baseball to-day will get away with the teams playing as follows: Toronto at Providence, Rochester at Newark, Montreal at Jersey City and Buffalo at Baltimore.

With the possible exception of Rochester and Newark, all the teams will have considerable changes from last year. The champion Rochester team are standing pat on their team of last season, although they have added pitcher Lafitte to the twirlers, and have secured Catcher Blair to take Erwin's place, and Alpern to fill the vacancy caused by Simmons being drafted by Detroit. Newark will have Hughie Henne to do the catching and have added Gantley, the former Washington player to the outfield.

Our own Leafs will have quite a few changes. The securing of Shaw and Deehan in the outfield making the Toronto trio in the Eastern League. True, both Shaw and Deehan hit below .200 for the St. Louis Nationals last year, but they were with a tail-end team. Grimshaw should again hit over .300 this season and both the new acquisitions will be no doubt be over thereabouts when the official averages are handed out.

The Toronto infield looks at present to be the weak spot, but Deal is gradually coming to form and even in case he should be bad, Manager Joe can step in and play the initial bag as good as anybody in the league. Jimmy Mullen, the press despatches from the war front tell us will start off the season at second and we are glad of that. Jimmy Mullen, might have got into a little disfavor with the fans last year, but those who witnessed the last Rochester series here will remember the brilliant ball he played. Take Mullen off your team and we will win easily said a Rochester scribe who was here for the series. For Jimmy was grabbing up everything hit between first and second in the season. Jimmy was a bit erratic, but this was not to be wondered at, when Maling, his sidekick, for two years was going and for Jimmy was trying to steady him. The Leafs have no better batter besides Mullen, and that is why the winning team was Vaughn looks to be slated for short and McDonald for third with Fitzpatrick doing the snubbing.

The pitching staff with McGinley, Rudolph, Newton, and Smith as a nucleus, will start off in better shape than last year, and then Gurney or Corey may get round into Eastern League form. Only two catchers are on deck at present, Vandy and Tomeman, the latter said to be a coming star.

George Gano a Two-Minute Pacer

In figuring out the dope on the prospective two-minute pacers for 1910, the phenomenal little pacer, George Gano (2:02) looms up as one of the most likely candidates for honors.

In point of conformation and appearance he is one of the most attractive pacers on the turf to-day, having the style and flash of a show horse, combined with plenty of bone and substance. Wearing few boots and no hobble, Geo. Gano is rapid-gaited, with a stride as smooth as oil and machine-like. He was the leading money-winning pacer on the Grand Circuit in 1909, earning a total of $14,308 during the season, and winning nine out of eleven races, his record being taken in his last race.

George Gano is a son of that great speed sire, Gambetta Wilkes (2:18 1/2), the sire of such other fast ones as Quintette (2:07), The Duchess (2:05 1/2), Credette (2:06 1/2), Lottie Loraine (2:04), Nancy B. (2:06 1/2), Cubahead (2:08 1/2), Erelot (2:10), Foxie Curd (2:07), The President (2:07 1/2), Gentle B. (2:08 1/2), Dr. Munson (2:10 1/2), and in addition to his rich experience on the sire's side, George Gano's dam is credited with standard records, including Crediton (2:05 1/2), thus making Gano an own brother to the latter mare.

After having shown a mile better than 2:10 as a three-year-old, being given a record of 2:24 1/2, George Gano was raced a few times as a four-year-old, his last race that season, in 1907, being at Columbus, where he finished clear up every heat to lead and won in the last time of 2:04 1/2, 2:03, 2:04. That winter found him consigned to an auction sale at Lexington, Ky., and Walter Cox, the shrewd New England trainer, was his purchaser at $700.

In the season of 1908 Gano was up against those two whirlwind pacers, Minor Heir-a-Cox and The Best (2:02 1/2), at Kalamazoo the writer saw him pace a mile right at 2:06 in the race won by Minor Heir-a-Cox had given him a record of 2:15 1/2 over a half-mile track earlier in the season, and realizing that he was up against a tough proposition with Minor Heir and the fast Canadian pacer, he wisely drew him out of his late race that season, going into winter quarters acknowledged the best stake pacer in sight for 1909. About this time several tempting offers were made for the fast stallion, and finally he accepted one, that made by three Pennsylvania horsemen—G. D. Timman of Williamsport, S. W. Gleason of North Bend and Barton Pardee of Lock Haven. The price was around $2,000.

Murphy Gets Fast Pacer.
The horse was then turned over to Jimmy Murphy, the able New York trainer, and the remarkable success the latter scored with him in 1909 more than made good the confidence placed in his ability. Gano's initial start last year was made at Forta Haute, Ind., in a $1000 stake. Star Patchen, the white-faced son of Joe Patchen, was the winner, with a

Round the Golf Clubs

Busy days are these amongst the fifteen hundred golfers of Toronto. The unprecedented spell of fine weather has tempted enthusiasts in plenty to their favorite links. Not, by the way, that they need much tempting after the absence from their pet pastime, but with April weather emulating that of June, the number of devotees anxious to take part in the ancient and honorable game has increased in proportion. Not a club in or out of the city but has been well patronized by keen players, and in many cases, temporary greens are the order of the day. Games galore have been played, with all the keenness which characterizes the golfer at the commencement of the season.

Toronto Golf Club
Out at the links of the Toronto Club only the absence of foliage on the trees reminds the observer that summer has not yet arrived. Already the first monthly handicap has been played, E. Campbell carrying off premier honors.

Here, temporary greens are being used, but in two weeks' time the others will be ready for play. The members are using a new style of club which is worthy of more than passing mention. Possessing the happy title of "Dreadnaught" the club, which created quite a furore amongst golfers in the west, and which introduced last year, combines the functions of a brassie and driver.

With those who have used it the club has become most popular, and undoubtedly will henceforward form part of the paraphernalia of the up-to-date golfer. The Silver Trophy, which is an event always productive of keen interest, is scheduled for Saturday 1.

At Rosedale Links
Rosedale members have been trying out their new course at Rosedale, and at the moment the regular greens are in service, and with a continuance of the weather the regular greens are ready in less than a fortnight.

As a matter of fact, all the new greens are in excellent shape, but as they were only seeded last year, the soil has scarcely knitted, and what was introduced last year, combines the functions of a brassie and driver.

The North Toronto Club
From Rosedale to that young and thriving organization, the North Toronto Golf Club, is no distant cry, and the club only sprang into existence last year. The club has a most promising season ahead of it.

A nine-hole course (a nine-hole one) will be ready for play by the end of next month, and the first round of the competition will be held on the new course. The inauguration of the next competition. Many new members have joined, and as this year's membership roll includes many strong players, the competition is expected to be of more than ordinary interest.

At Mississauga
The executive of the Mississauga Golf Club has been hard at it for some time in their preparation for a record season.

Hitherto the members have been playing on a nine-hole course, utilizing the last five and the last four holes of the full course, but with the replacing of the second and third holes on the Credit River, play will be extended over the entire links.

The two bridges crossing the dry creek, which were carried away by drifting ice in the recent flood, have also been put in shape. Special attention was paid last year to the opening of the clubhouse of the committee in this respect has been amply rewarded for every green is in tip-top condition.

This is a picture of the sensible, healthy, car-free man. He avoids the crowded street cars at rush-hours by using a bicycle to and from the office. And in doing that saves the price of car fares and gets the exercise the doctor says we all require.

THE HYGIENIC CUSHION FRAME—If there is one invention more than another in the bicycle line that has helped to popularize wheeling, it's the Hygienic Cushion Frame. "Makes all roads smooth," is the slogan that carried it to popularity, and it has lived up to the advance notice. The Cushion Frame gives "Fullman Comfort" to bicycling.

Horse Show Notes

Every day seems to promise better things for the Canadian and Military Horse Show, and with the opening still a week away, it is assured that it will be the greatest gathering of aristocratic people and well-bred horses Canada has ever seen, while horse show week will find the city a blaze of primrose yellow and navy blue in honor of the event that brings together the noblest of animals and their beautiful and distinguished patrons.

The show will be officially opened by Lieutenant-Governor Gibson, while His Excellency the Governor-General of Canada and Lady Grey will lend their presence and patronage, thus making it the function that all society is looking forward to. And the facts that the boxes were all sold within two hours of the opening of the subscription plan, while the committee have a dozen applications they are unable to fill, show that everybody who is somebody will be there. Numerous applications for reserved seats have also been received from outside Toronto, and when the plan opens at Tyrrell's on Thursday it is fully expected that everything in sight will be quickly taken.

Nor is it in the matter of attendance alone that the success of the show is assured. During the past week entries have fairly poured into the secretary's office. Every class is well filled, and every prominent stable from Montreal to London is represented. There are over one hundred exhibitors, and when it is known that many of them are bringing from twenty to forty horses each, some idea may be gathered of the total exhibit of horseflesh.

Neither is there any chance to doubt the quality of the horses. The names of the exhibitors are a guarantee that the horses that win in Toronto will be quite good enough to go to New York or the Olympia at London. Names like George Peppercorn, Crow, Murray, Toronto; Hon. Adam Beck, London; Hon. Clifford Sifton, Ottawa; Dr. Webster, Ottawa; Hume Blake, Toronto; Aemilius Jarvis, Toronto; Miss Wilks, Galt; Mrs. Meredith, Mr. Gulland and Mrs. Stewart, Montreal, are all that is needed to show that it will take the very best on the continent to win at Toronto.

The entries, too, are strong in those classes in which the general public take a particular interest. There are no less than seven entries of four-in-hands, two by professionals and five by private individuals; while six hunt teams make a record in that class that would rival Madison-square Garden proud. The show of jumpers, too, will be the finest ever on the continent, and there are predictions that some of the numerous entries will make the old, reliable, George Pepper and Crow & Murray look to their laurels. The light harness classes have also filled well, and with a very high class of horses. On the whole, the committee seem justified in their opinion that Toronto is about to see the greatest horse show week in her history.

PARAGON BASEBALL SCORE BOARD

The Paragon Automatic Baseball Score Board, the newest thing in baseball, will be in operation this summer at Massey Hall, when the Toronto baseball team is on the road, starting next Thursday, the day of the opening game at Providence. By an ingenious invention an invisibly suspended ball is operated from the rear of the board, in any direction, on a straight line, in any desired speed, and held at times under absolute control. Thus the original play is reproduced in as natural and vivid a manner as possible.

Another improvement in the position and progress of the base-runner is quite as successful. The position of movable bases in different designs. One design shows the runner safe, another, when a third shows the bases unoccupied.

All the plays that are made, such as strikes, balls, runs, out, passed balls, wild throws, muffed balls or fumbles, files caught, etc., are indicated by a system of movable designs, all of which are operated from the rear of the board, out of view from the audience. The list of players and their positions are conveniently displayed at either end of the board.

Every person knows that few thousand immigrants arrive every year from the old lands, and that a tremendous movement from the western states to the Canadian Northwest has been in progress for years.

What is the cause of this tremendous stampede from England and Scotland, chiefly, just now? One well posted authority attributes it to the good thing there is in it for the wily British emigration agent.

Cheaper Upper Berth Will Come in Canada

Decision of U.S. Interstate Commerce Commission Will Pave Way for Reduction—Huge Profits of Pullman Company—Antiquated System of Ventilation in Sleeping Cars Calls for Investigation.

The United States Interstate Commerce Commission has held it to be "unjust and unreasonable" for the Pullman Car Company to charge the same price for an upper berth in a sleeping car as for a lower. Reductions in rates complained of were ordered, to $1.50 for a lower and to $1.10 for an upper.

This decision is recognized as the thin edge of the wedge which will force down sleeping car charges all over the United States.

And Canada will soon follow suit. The same conditions exist here as in the United States. The Pullman Company owns the sleeping cars of the Grand Trunk Railway, while the C.P.R. and C.N.R. build and operate their own sleepers.

The investigation conducted by the Interstate Commerce Commission revealed the fact that the Pullman Company reaps fabulous profits. From the service it maintains, annual dividends of nearly $60,000,000 having been paid to the shareholders from 1899 to 1908, inclusive; that the amount of profits carried to surplus annually was not far short of that amount; that in eleven years $51,000,000 in special cash and stock dividends was paid in addition. One of the special dividends paid in 1907 was 36 per cent.

Part of the enormous profits accruing to the Pullman Company comes out of the pockets of the Canadian traveling public. Then, will the Canadian public "stand for" what the United States Interstate Commerce Commission declares to be "unjust and unreasonable"?

The Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada has enquired into the question of sleeping car accommodation and charges. The decision of the board will be awaited with interest.

HERE'S THE INTERIOR OF A C. P. R. SLEEPING CAR. IF YOU ARE NOT FAT YOU CAN CLIMB INTO THE UPPER BED, AND THE COMPANY WILL TAKE THE SAME PRICE AS FOR THE MORE COMFORTABLE BERTH BELOW.

Highly Technical Question.

The whole question of sleeping car accommodation and charges in Canada was placed fully before the Dominion Railway Board several months ago. A prominent Toronto railway man yesterday said a highly technical question, and many points are involved, as those familiar with the subject are aware. It is being solved so far as accommodation is concerned on the Canadian Northern by that railway, on its western division, running its own sleepers independent of any Pullman car company.

A gentleman holding a representative position in connection with an important Toronto organization, which has taken a leading part in the solution of many public transportation problems, said in his opinion it was a distinct injustice for railway companies to charge as much for upper berths as for lower ones. He consid-

LORD ROSEBERY APPEALS TO UNIONISTS

Drop Tariff Issue in Coming Election and Appeal to the Country as Defenders of Constitution, He Says.

LONDON, April 16.—Lord Rosebery today makes a newspaper appeal to the Unionist leaders to drop the tariff issue in the coming election and to appeal to the country as defenders of the constitution.

If victorious, he suggests that they could at once set about for a real reform of the second chamber, and when that is completed appeal to the country on the tariff policy.

The Times says Lord Rosebery's idea has its advantages.

Predicts War if America Pushes Far East Plans

Writer in Tokio Review Thinks Conflict with Japan Will Be the Result.

TOKIO, April 16.—An anonymous writer in The Tokio Central Review fears that if America continues her endeavor to increase her interests in the far east war may result with Japan. The principal cause of anti-Japanese feeling in America, he says, is the secret service funds of ship-building yards, which will be benefited by an increase in armaments.

Mr. Sugiura, a Japanese proprietor of a printing office in San Francisco, in an interview today, declared that anti-Japanese feeling is so intense in America that soon it will be an impossible place for Japanese of any class to live in peace.

AIRSHIP EXCURSION OFF BIG STRIKE INTERFERES

Party of Americans Had Hired Craft For Trip From Munich to Oberammergau.

BERLIN, April 16.—Many Americans who had arranged to go by airship from Munich to Oberammergau have been disappointed by the announcement that the Parsifal Company probably will be unable to run the service, owing to the collapse of a shed yesterday and a general strike of builders to-day.

One party of Americans came to Europe especially for the airship trip, and had arranged to hire an airship for a day at an expense of about $1500. Riots occurred near the wrecked shed yesterday and to-day, owing to workmen being killed by the collapse. The mob tried to lynch the overseers and architects, who are alleged to have sanctioned unreliable construction, in order to get the building finished before the builders' strike.

Nearly 2,000,000 men, women and children are affected by the strike, which is the most extensive in German history.

RETIALIATORY RATES ON WOOD PULP AND PAPER FROM TWO PROVINCES

Proposal Made in Washington Would Impose Excess Duty $3 Ton to Hit Back at Province of Quebec.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 16.—The latest development in the Canadian tariff situation came to light when it was learned that government officials who have been figured by the action of Quebec with respect to the prohibition of the exportation of pulpwood, and considering the idea of levying the treasury decision in which the wood pulp situation now rests.

The existing plans call for the levying of retaliatory rates simply upon wood pulp and paper made of pulp wood cut on crown lands. This has not proved very effective as a means of retaliation, because the proportion of the wood cut on crown lands as compared with the wood cut on private lands is small.

The idea now is to extend the ruling or interpretation of the provisions of the retaliatory duty provided for in the tariff, and which is now levied on wood pulp, and on paper when either is made from pulp wood cut on crown lands to such products when made from pulp wood cut on private lands. There is no difficulty in doing this in as much as it would require only a reversal of the treasury decision.

LONDON CLUBS CAN'T TOUCH ROOSEVELT

Ex-President Will Eat With Irish Party Only, But There Will Be no Speeches—Big Town Agog Over His Coming.

(Special Cable to Sunday World.) LONDON, April 16.—No visiting crowned head ever excited more anticipatory interest than does Theodore Roosevelt. The police already are considering the problem of handling the crowds which they expect will gather to see the famous president at every opportunity.

When Col. Roosevelt lunches with John E. Redmond and the Irish Nationalists in the house of commons there will be no speeches or toasts. The luncheon will be entirely informal. Since the announcement of Col. Roosevelt's acceptance of the Nationalists' invitation, many have been extended by other political organizations, but it is understood that he has declined them all. The members of the Pilgrim Club are greatly chagrined by the failure to induce him to accept a banquet from them. His excuse is that he is determined to make no speeches here except at the Guild Hall, when he receives the freedom of the city.

Col. Roosevelt will visit Shakespeare's birthplace. It is expected. The Earl and Countess of Warwick have asked him to luncheon at Warwick Castle. Lady Paget, who will arrive from America on the Mauretania, proposes to give an entertainment for him at her residence, Coombe-Warren, when possibly the King and Queen will be present.

But these and similar functions will not be arranged until Col. Roosevelt's arrival here. Indeed, his plans show a determination not to go on many social junketings here. It would seem that he intends to seize every occasion to meet prominent and interesting people, whether statesmen, men of letters or captains of industry.

He desires especially to hear a good debate in the house of commons, and it is not improbable now that dissolution of parliament will have taken place before his arrival.

KING EDWARD BENEFITS BY NEW TREATMENT FOR HIS THROAT TROUBLE

His Long Illness at Biarritz Due to Absence of London Specialist Whom He Deferred Calling.

LONDON, April 16.—One of the unwritten laws of English journalism is that no reference must be made to the disease from which the King is suffering, unless he is very ill, indeed. The idea seems to be that it is indicative to expose the secrets of the sickroom to the public gaze. One result of this is that from time to time the public learns that the King is confined to his room and all sorts of rumors fly about as to the seriousness of his disease.

One of these periods of alarm is just over. A couple of days ago it was announced that the King had begun to go out again after being confined to his room at Biarritz for more than a week. During this week his faithful subjects had credited his majesty with every disease from pneumonia to typhoid, and some of the sporting ones were making bets on the probability of his returning to England alive.

As a matter of fact, all that ailed King Edward was an ordinary attack of bronchitis, from which he is a chronic sufferer, and his long confinement to his room was due to the fact that he was not within reach of the London specialists who have worked wonders with his health, and had to submit to the ordinary forms of treatment. This man is Dr. E. R. D. Spitta of Bolton-street, who with another medical man, has worked out a development of the anti-toxin treatment as applied to bronchitis, which never failed to give the King prompt relief. A culture is made from the sputum of the royal patient, and the anti-toxin which is produced thus is swallowed in carefully graduated doses. Before each dose the patient's blood is analyzed to ascertain his resisting power, and when the King is attacked at home Dr. Spitta is in constant attendance. It was hoped that he would escape the malady in the balmy air of Biarritz, and this is why the last attack found him unprepared.

I am told that the disease in its form from which the King suffers is not dangerous, but is uncommonly trying. It takes the form of severe choking fits, requiring attention, and King Edward, who is a stickler for the proprieties and for the maintenance of his royal dignity, lives in constant terror of being attacked by one of these fits when he is making a speech or at dinner or some other public function. In fact, when he is called on to perform any public ceremony at home he always undergoes a careful medical examination with a view to finding out whether there is any chance of a breakdown.

What His Side Wanted. Samuel Untermyer, who has just received a $750,000 for merging some corporations, was being congratulated at the Manhattan Club on his recent successful conduct of a murder case. The distinguished corporation lawyer modestly evaded all these compliments by the narration of a number of anecdotes of criminal law.

"One case in my native Lynchburg," he said, "implicated a planter of sinister repute. The planter's chief witness was a servant named Calhoun White. White knew much about his master's shady side. It also believed that Calhoun, in his misplaced affection, would lie in the planter's behalf."

"When, on the stand, Calhoun was ready for cross-examination, the prosecuting counsel said to him sternly: 'Now, Calhoun, I want you to understand the importance of telling the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth in this case.'"

"'Yes, sah,' said Calhoun. 'You know what will happen. I suppose, if you don't tell the truth, our side'll win de case.'"

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

The Tire That Won't Come Off

When a Goodyear Quick Detachable Auto Tire is used on the Goodyear Universal Rim you have a combination which is absolutely SAFE. No force which would not wreck the wheel can remove the tire from the rim.

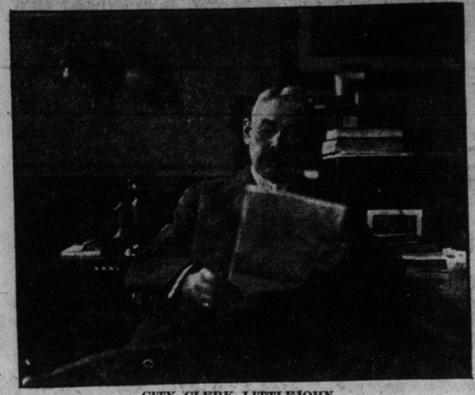

This has been proved by the severest tests imaginable. We have induced dozens of people to purposely skid around turns on rough roads with the tire in all stages of inflation, from fully pumped up to absolutely "flat," in the attempt to force it off the rim. There were rewards in store for the man who could succeed. All failed. The tires invariably stayed on. Yet the side strain under such conditions was so severe that it must have amounted to tons.

Yet when the time comes that you wish to remove a tire, the detachable flange which holds the tire in place can be unlocked by loosening one nut with an ordinary wrench, when the flange can be snapped off with your fingers and a screwdriver. No Special Tools of any nature are required.

Anyone—no matter how inexperienced—can remove or replace a Goodyear Detachable Auto Tire in 10 seconds by the watch when used on the Goodyear Universal Rim.

CHEAPER UPPER BERTH WILL COME IN CANADA

would be induced to take them, and this would conduce to the greater convenience of those to whom a lower berth is important on account of age or infirmity. The Dominion Railway Board should take the action of the United States commission into account and see that the rates for sleeping berths in Canada also are made to conform to the principle of supply and demand.

"It is time the Canadian press took up the question of fair prices, and sanitary conditions in railway sleeping cars," said W. J. Lee, to The Sunday World. "I have been reading with interest the reports in your paper of the agitation in the United States for better rates for upper berths, and consider something should be done about conditions here. But in my opinion the antiquated system or worse than no system of ventilation, with its deadly effects is even more important than that of the price of the berths."

"How many lives have poisonous, overheated Pullman cars cut off? No one can answer. Some of the most notable figures in Canadian church and state affairs have succumbed to pneumonia, contracted on a night trip. One distinguished Anglican archbishop, it will be remembered, died of pneumonia which was directly attributed to, if not actually caused by, his being penned up in a Pullman berth all night after attending a funeral at Montreal. Many similar cases could be quoted."

"Some improvement in the Pullman car service in Canada must be made. Present conditions are intolerable. The lower berths are suffocating, and the upper ones have altogether too much ventilation. If you take a lower berth you are in danger of being choked for lack of air, and you probably take a severe cold if you ride in an upper one. Government action will probably have to be taken sooner or later. There is no reason why empty upper berths should be closed down all night over occupants of lower ones. If cars are not filled, the upper berths not required should be closed up."

"It seems curious that with all the engineering knowledge of motive power and electricity, the force generated by the car wheels is not applied to some useful purpose in Canada. I believe it is now being utilized on certain railways in the United States in connection with the electric lighting of the cars. It could be just as readily applied to the running of electric fans in the Pullmans."

Abolish the "Upper." "It is just a question in my mind whether the upper berth should not be entirely prohibited. The upper berth precludes reasonable ventilation for the passenger sleeping underneath. It often gives its occupant influenza or pneumonia. Its oscillation renders it a rack of torture to many. The present upper berth is a terror for swinging just as soon as a little speed gets up. A first-class ocean liner is often as steady in mid-ocean. The consequence is that a traveler on climbing down from his Pullman berth in a morning has a raging headache and a disordered stomach. He wishes the man who invented upper berths had never been born."

"It is good news to hear that railway car builders are giving attention to the designing of an improved sleeping car. One was recently pictured in a scientific journal devoted to inventions. The new style of cars had berths raised from the floor. They were changed to sofas and couches in the day time, and apparently the upper berth was eliminated."

"The alignment of a certain number of berths to different points along the line leads to considerable hardship to the traveling public, in the way of lower berth occupants having to sleep all night in a stifling atmosphere under vacant upper berths. It was like being in a Turkish bath, in an expression often heard from people after their first night in a sleeper."

View of the Agents. Everyone would want upper berths if they were cheaper than lower ones, and there would be a wild scramble and battle royal for the cheaper tier, is the idea of passenger agents. Excursions alone would show how that might be.

Many travelers state that it is not the price of a sleeper that causes them to travel at night, but because the discomfort is actually less when the difference in ventilation and danger from disease infected berths and bedding is taken into the calculation.

A crumb of comfort for the Canadian traveler is that he is not so unfortunate in respect to this traveling accommodation, as his lordly fellow subjects in England. The British railway coaches with reasonable attention to comfort, and some regard to moderation and justice in the charges, may be within measurable distance, but the public will have to kick to get them.

He has the consolation of speedy travel, on smooth running roadbeds with very few accidents, but the compartment car, whether first, second or third class, is a constant menace.

On the European continent, especially in France, the modern corridor car and vestibuled train is making headway. Now that the public has begun to awaken to its rights and requirements on this western hemisphere of transcontinental railways, the demands of the traveler for sanitary sleeping coaches with reasonable attention to comfort, and some regard to moderation and justice in the charges, may be within measurable distance, but the public will have to kick to get them.

COOK'S ROUTE IMPASSABLE So Says Leader of Expedition That Climbed McKinley. FAIRBANKS, Alaska, April 14.—The Fairbanks Mount McKinley expedition that reached the summit of the peak started to follow the route Dr. Cook said he took, but was obliged to abandon it, as it is impassable. Thomas Lloyd, the leader, declared that no traces of Cook's camps were found. Aneroid measurements taken by the men place the height of the mountain at 20,500 feet. Ten men were in the party that left Fairbanks with dog teams in December. On reaching the base of the mountain the party went into camp, waited for better weather and planned the ascent. All were familiar with the great mountain.

The drawing room was decorated with roses and carnations mingled with palms and ferns, and the table was studded with mirror plates on which stood a tall vase of white carnations fringed in pale green tulle, the cakes and ices all carrying out the color scheme of green and white; the table was presided over by Mrs. Keran and Mrs. Daniels, assisted by Miss Rutley, Miss Daniels, Miss Rowan, Miss Korman, Miss Goodman, Miss Hendall, Miss Gould and Miss Harrison; Mrs. Hartley and Mrs. Reynolds assisting in the drawing room. LAKE GOGIAC DRAGGED FOR MISSING PATIENT

F. J. Phillips of Toronto Disappeared From Sanitarium a Week Ago.

The disappearance of F. J. Phillips, of 43 Queen's Park, from the sanitarium at Battle Creek, Michigan, is giving his family great anxiety. Mr. Phillips went to the sanitarium accompanied by his son about ten days ago. He was receiving treatment for stomach trouble, and apparently was benefiting by the treatment. He left the sanitarium about noon on Monday last week. It has been ascertained that he went to a boat and went for a row on the lake. The spring like weather possibly tempted him on the water of which he was very fond. The boatman is a small lake of about one thousand acres in extent, but the water is in places from eighty to ninety feet deep. The lake was thoroughly dragged by local authorities, and search parties explored the surrounding country, without finding any trace of the missing man. Mate Akroyd and C. Gallaher went from Toronto on Wednesday night and are thoroughly dragging the lake. Mr. Phillips was prominent in the business life of Toronto for a great many years, being president of the Phillips Manufacturing Company, and vice-president of the Muskoka Lakes Navigation Company, besides being interested in many other enterprises.

No Trouble to Have Beautiful Hair.

From The Chicago Inter-Ocean. A well-known New York society woman, renowned for the exquisite loveliness of her hair, is reported to have said: "I attribute the abundance and glossiness of my hair to the fact that my hairdresser never uses water on my head. She uses only a dry shampoo, sifting it evenly over my head and then brushing it thoroughly until all the powder is removed. "She says wetting takes the life and color out of the hair and leaves it dull and brittle. In reply to a query she told me she had made the shampoo herself—simply mixing 4 ounces of ether with 4 ounces of powdered orris root. She explains that the orris root cleanses, while the ether keeps the hair light and fluffy and retains its natural color."

A Free Trial That Means Something. Most of the "Free Offers" that appear in advertisements do not pass out very well. There is usually some string attached or some conditions to be complied with that amount to a roadblock for all you get. A notable exception, however, is the offer made by Mrs. F. E. Currah, of Windsor, Ont., as stated on another page in her ad. entitled, "Giving an Experiment." She sends, absolutely free, a box of Orange Lily, an expensive concentrated remedy, put up in pure gelatine capsules, which is sufficient for 10 days' treatment, and which is worth 35 cents. Mrs. Currah finds it pays to refer to the advertiser, that being a strictly scientific preparation, its good effects are noticeable from the start, and almost all who give it a trial continue its use until completely cured.

MILK MAY DROP IN PRICE. Dairymen Discussed Question—Resolution Re Bottles and Cans. Although no reduction has yet been decided upon it is quite probable that the going with the first of May milk will drop a cent a quart in price. At present it is retailing at eight cents for bulk and nine cents for bottled. A meeting was held at the headquarters of the dairymen's section of the Retail Merchants' Association, when the matter was discussed. It was found, however, that no announcement of a reduction could be made, since they were not sure at what price they could buy milk from the producers. Each dairymen makes his own individual contract, and at a later meeting he will decide as to whether they can afford to make the reduction. Owing to the early spring this year it is expected that there will be a large supply. It is understood that one of the big Toronto dairies is negotiating with the producers in the London district for its supply, and if the amount that can be supplied warrants it, the company may charter a special train to run between London and Toronto daily. The chair was occupied at the meeting by President Alex. Anderson, and a resolution was passed strongly condemning the practice of some dairymen and even store keepers using other than their own bottles and cans. It is the intention to prosecute anyone found guilty of the practice. This charming wrap, the Rosette, pictured on left, is the last word in spring fashions. It is a very handsome garment made of fine silk net with very rich silk embroidery. It is correct and suitable worn over any gown. The other sketch is of a smart new guipure coat, the Esmeralda. This is a really delightful model and exquisitely made and finished. It is made with fine quality silk, made with semi-fitting back, and is in extra sizes.

OPPOSITION WILL ASK COURT TO VOID TRANSFER

Surrender of Indian Reserve at Selkirk Illegal—Charges of Bribery and Manipulation Unanswered.

OTTAWA, April 16.—(Special).—It is understood that members of the opposition who have looked into the circumstances surrounding the surrender of St. Peter's Indian Reserve at Selkirk, Manitoba, will seek to have the matter laid in the courts, with a view of setting aside the transfer. Certain specific charges of bribery and underhand manipulation, which were made by George H. Bradbury, were not referred to by the minister of the interior in his reply, and the returns in connection with the deal show many singular features. The provisions of the Indian Act which parliament has written on the statute books for the express protection of unbranched Indians were not complied with in the negotiations for surrender, nor, indeed, does it appear that any attempt was made by the department to abide by the letter of the law.

TWO YEARS' WHEAT CROP BEATS LECTURE TOURS

Sir Ernest Shackleton Welcomed at Capital—Rather Develop Farthest North Than South.

OTTAWA, April 16.—(Special).—Sir Ernest Shackleton, the man who went farthest south, has only been in Canada three days, but he has already imbibed the Canada microbe and he may, next time he breaks from the beaten path, go west instead of south. The British explorer was the recipient of an address from the St. George's Society of Ottawa, in the city hall to-day, and in the course of his reply, which was characteristically humorous, he said that the Canadian microbe had got into his blood, and that he might go west instead of south. In private conversation he added that field might do him more good in the liquidation of his debts than any number of lecture tours.

Col. White of the Northwest Mounted Police wanted to engage Sir Ernest as a member of that force, but that suggestion had to be left over for the present, at least, tho the man who got farthest south admitted that nothing would please him better than to aid in the development of the farthest north, so far as Canada is concerned.

RESIDENCE AT TUXEDO PARK

City Treasurer Reports Big Increase of Revenue

It Will Cost Nearly $800,000 More to Run Toronto Than Last Year—Credit of City Stands Unabatedly High—Will Expend $6,868,755 This Year.

City Treasurer Coady says: "The council is to be congratulated on a rate of 17-1/2 mills on the dollar being submitted to a vote of no small moment in this connection is that a uniformity of the rate from year to year is appreciated by manufacturers wishing to settle in the city from annual proposals and by others who desire to invest in real estate. A uniform rate, or a rate varying but a little, enables men to calculate on the taxes property here has to bear, with the assurance that there is but little probability of sharp increases.

"The requirements of the city will, of course, increase with its growth, but while that is true, the growing value of property and business will produce a corresponding large assessment, and that fact, together with the natural increase of revenue from other sources, ought to enable council to operate so that the rate levied should vary but little, if anything, on account of the larger outlay."

"I may be allowed a word to the city council on the general expenditures. With increasing areas and population the legitimate requirements of the public service necessarily increase year by year. The important question may not always be how to reduce the outlay, but how to increase the revenue from other sources, and to rely on controllable or current revenues for all but extraordinary purposes, thus keeping in touch with the electrical cost."

"The assets of Toronto are solid and abiding, and the credit of the city is based on a sound foundation."

It will cost the city $6,868,755 to manage its affairs this year, as against $6,061,532 last year, an increase of $787,223, as shown in the annual budget issued by the city treasurer Saturday.

Owing to the increase in assessment from $233,000,000 to $270,000,000, the revenue from taxation is $4,645,510, as compared with $4,108,769 in 1909, an increase of $446,741, while the revenue from other sources is $2,223,145, compared with $1,881,765, an increase of $341,380.

Mr. Coady points out that the sum raised by taxation last year did not suffice by an amount equal to about one-seventh of a mill on the assessment, so that it was necessary to make supplementary appropriations to the amount of $91,276, but this amount was reduced by a surplus in the revenue of 1909 amounting to $69,236, making a net deficit of $22,040.

City's Bonded Debt. Following are some facts gleaned from the budget: Total bonded debt of the city Dec. 31, 1909, $25,972,983.75. There are on hand sinking funds amounting to $3,000,000.

223,500.48, leaving a net debt of $26,649,397.63.

Debitments to the amount of $3,159,000 have been authorized but not obligated. A large proportion of the money has yet to be expended.

The city's revenue producing debt is $15,853,517.92, including $7,064,727 for waterworks, and $8,788,790 on bonded improvements.

The estimated value of the city's property and other assets is over $20,000,000. The total revenue from these properties, exclusive of the waterworks, is $1,870,000.

The estimated uncontrollable expenditures are $257,000 above that of last year, and of controllable expenditures $229,926.

Since 1885 the uncontrollable and controllable expenditures have doubled. The figures are: 1885, uncontrollable $1,770,297, controllable $1,290,661. In 1909, uncontrollable $5,524,901, and controllable $2,557,531.

The expenditure on schools has increased from $311,293 in 1888, to $1,361,065 in 1909.

Credit Standing High. In his general survey, Mr. Coady refers with satisfaction to the wave of prosperity which has succeeded the financial depression of two years ago, and declares the outlook for all branches of industry to be unusually bright, adding, "In such circumstances, the credit of the city stands unabatedly high, her bonds and debentures are accepted by the best financiers as investments that are perfectly safe. During his visit to London last year to float bonds, he was impressed by the familiarity shown by leading business men with our natural resources and the clear grasp they had acquired of our business movements." He was also gratified with the confidence expressed in Canadian securities.

During 1909, the sum of $77,000 was invested in new factories in Toronto, and $159,310 in additions to factories.

The waterworks department laid eighteen miles of mains.

The total addition to the city's area by annexation was 5183 acres with a population of 25,000.

Speaking of the deepening of the St. Lawrence River and Welland Canal so as to allow large ocean liners to discharge cargo in Toronto harbor, Mr. Coady says:

The Lots are 50 x 147; high and dry, and level; the entire property is covered with an abundance of large and small fruits already bearing, including apples, pears, plums, blackberries, black and red raspberries, red and white currants, and gooseberries and strawberries. The whole section is level and the streets, which are all boulevarded, are lined on either side with shade trees.

Speaking of the deepening of the St. Lawrence River and Welland Canal so as to allow large ocean liners to discharge cargo in Toronto harbor, Mr. Coady says:

"An insuperable barrier lies in the way of accomplishing this, neither the physical nor monetary. In these days of large public expenditures, when millions are invested readily in creating or improving the great trade routes, the business men of Toronto should bestir themselves to secure what certainly appears to me to be our destined prospect, ocean commerce similar to that enjoyed by Montreal. The wealthy Province of Ontario, with its great resources, has too long been dormant on this great subject, so fraught with business life and interest to it, and no better time offers than the present for an active propaganda, when large co-ordinated schemes are being hatched."

Mr. Coady remarks that, while differences of opinion may exist as to the exact figures of Toronto's population, all seem to agree that the 400,000 mark has been passed.

Provincial Subvention. He revives a pet theme as follows: "I believe the city ought not to forget the desire so often expressed in past years that the Ontario Government should grant a subvention to the city in return for the advantages and privileges extended by the city to the government. I refrain from entering into the subject at present, and merely draw attention to it. But many aldermen and citizens were at one time of the opinion that a conclusive case had been made out for the city in those annual comments of this point, and I do not see that the case is weaker to-day than it was some years ago. I therefore express the hope that by recurring to the subject this, it may be taken up, and an effort made to arrive at a settled policy with regard thereto on the part of the city."

FIRE ALARM WIRES CUT

Brockville System is Dislocated by Misrepair.

BROCKVILLE, April 15.—(Special.)—During the night the fire alarm system of Brockville was deliberately put out of commission by the cutting of the wires above a box at the corner of Pearl and Bartholomew-streets.

Late this afternoon the break was found, after a long search. The dead wire was evidently the work of some experienced person, inasmuch as the ground wire was first pulled up to prevent the alarm sounding a warning of the break. The service wires over the box were severed. By chance Chief Brady heard a click from the attachment at the central station and at investigation led to the discovery of the dastardly offence.

Unmuzzled Canines Costly. HAMILTON, April 15.—At the police court this morning, Mrs. John Rodgers, Mrs. John Griffin and O. Stevens, were fined $100 each for allowing their dogs to run at large unmuzzled. They were the first cases tried in Hamilton under the Donnellan and Provincial order-in-council passed some time ago.

Hero of Antarctic Got Ovation From Big Audience in Ottawa.

Ottawa has been added to the score of American cities which have fallen under the spell of Lieutenant Sir Ernest Shackleton's lecture. Last night the Russell Theatre, Ottawa, was crowded with eager listeners, to whom the south pole came with oratorical clearness and power. A long series of monster moving pictures gave double emphasis to the struggle towards the south pole.

Wall Street Operators Promote Rally on Which to Sell

Good Week for Distribution Of the New York Securities

Arguments Toned About to Accommodate the Advancing Prices—Small Improvements Are Made at Toronto Exchange.

World Office, Saturday Evening, April 16.

Wall-street operators have had an excellent week in which to distribute stocks, and it would be unkind to attempt to suggest that this has not been taken advantage of. The death of one of the members of the supreme court left an opening for a re-heating of the Trust issue. This was arranged on Monday, and it is believed that the Wall-street pedigree, it found the market in line shape for a rally. Speculators who had taken a long distance view of affairs put out their trades rather freely, and the long trader and capitulated to the sagging prices. Little chance was given to outside public to buy without the profit, as prices were rushed up within measurable distance of the week's tops in a few minutes.

With the two suits out of the way for several months it was evidently thought a good time to attempt to obtain a higher outside following, and each event since Monday has been viewed through highly sensitized optimistic spectacles. Writers for the "dope" sheets have even concluded that gold exports are an advantage; that increased wages will allow a greater freedom in trade, and that declining prices for commodities are an advantage. No logical arguments have, of course, been given for these peculiar theories, but then none are wanted when the markets under the guiding hands of the syndicates correspond. It is interesting, however, to reflect that the same arguments were used at exact reverse way only a few days ago.

Notwithstanding the government report issued last week, the decline in the price of futures at Chicago was not suggested by the syndicates. It is interesting, however, to reflect that the same arguments were used at exact reverse way only a few days ago.

metal market has been helped by this news, which explains the rise in the metal stocks. Sentiment is strongly affected by copper trade conditions, and if, as now seems likely, the copper trade is gradually to get onto a much better basis, it is bound to help the stock market. This may be said irrespective of the values of copper shares.

Many prefer some other issues, such as Steel, Southern Pacific and the like. All signs point to a good stock market next week.

MUCH AMERICAN CASH INVESTED IN CANADA

Steel Trust, Standard Oil and Other Capitalists Pour Enormous Sums Into Dominion.

According to information received from the statistical bureau of the state department it is disclosed that the amount of American investments in Canada, nearly all of which are in the western part of the country and do not include the large number of manufacturing branches established and now being located in Ontario, have reached the large sum of $228,500,000.

American investments in Cobalt silver mines and other mines in the eastern districts are not included in these figures, nor are holdings of Canadian government, municipal and corporation bonds. The enormous aggregate is divided as follows: 168 companies, average capital $1,360,000. Investments in British Columbia mills and timber, 50,000,000. Land deals in Alberta, etc., 10,000,000.

Investments in lumber and packing plants, 5,000,000. Implement distributing houses, 4,000,000. American numerous capitalists who are going into Canada are the United States Steel Corporation, the Standard Oil Company and the Guggenheim interests with these Morgan backing. While much of the money which these people are taking across the line is put into mines and timber, large sums are also invested in commercial enterprises. Implement manufacturers from Wisconsin, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Iowa have enormous branch establishments at a number of strategic points through the Canadian steel belt.

There is in these vital facts an incontrovertible argument in favor of reciprocity with Canada. And there is another argument equally potent in the fact that Canadian banks significant fact that Canadian banks at this moment on deposit in the banks of New York more than $200,000,000.

Less injury than Wall Street it, self, say New York Brokers. Henry N. Roach & Co. brokers, New York, say in their financial journal: Financial Facts agrees with the press that Canada generally, and especially the New York World, when it declares that the federal department of justice did good work, raising the bucketshop centers which have hundreds of branches throughout the country. This heavy stroke should be followed by others by which well delivered bucketshop centers are to be removed by confidence men. Ordinarily it does not give its customers a gambling chance. Under the forms of speculation it commits larceny.

But the bucket shop ruins no one who does not enter it. It smashes no business but that of the fool who consents. Reckless stock gambling in Wall-street men who are innocent of it. It inflicts upon the country evils so gigantic that in comparison all the bucket shops, all the pool rooms and all the gambling houses are of minor consideration. The bucket shop is an invasion even country market towns, but it entraps individuals only. The bucket shop is a law with privilege, the stock exchange draws to its use the money of the tiniest hamlet thru the banks, insurance companies and in the wild financial institutions, and in the wild money mania which it creates sacrifices every interest to its own. It preys upon the whole community.

Drinking Habit Grows on Women Who Can't Resist Lure of Cafe

A Chicago Manufacturer "Posts" Wife in Fashionable Resorts and There's an Uproar Loud and Long From Feminine Brigade Who Eat and Drink Down Town.

CHICAGO, April 15.—When Sidney Hamilton, Chicago manufacturer, after having caused the arrest of his wife and a male companion at the door of an all night cafe, solemnly announced that he was going to request downtown cafes to refuse to sell his wife any more liquor, he started a riot.

Possibly he expected to, possibly he only hoped to. At all events, the riot is here. From the Pompeian room of Evanston, from the College Inn to Hyde Park it's raging. Families have fought over it, friends have fought over it, and still it goes on merrily. A new war is on. And the problem that started and keeps it going is:

"Is it right for the husbands of Chicago's feminine cafe brigade to 'post' their wives?"

Is it proper and good form for the husband of a wife who has got the cafe habit to order cafe proprietors to serve his better half no drinks? Should he protest publicly against his wife's drinking publicly? Or should he save such protests as he may have for the privacy of the home, or keep them entirely to himself?

Such are the questions that are rending the happy homes in which the frazier vessel has got into the habit of sailing the perilous seas of the downtown cafes.

Husband's Fall into Line. Since Mr. Hamilton first promulgated his ideas scores of husbands have threatened to follow his example; while scores of wives have threatened to see their lawyers if they did. Mr. Hamilton said:

"I am only one of many victims of a social condition existing in Chicago and other large cities. The husband is a busy man, working day and night to make a good income for his wife and family, while his wife is wasting her time, and worse than wasting it, in the fashionable cafes of the downtown district. If all husbands in this condition would take the action of requesting the proprietors of these cafes to cease serving liquor to their wives it would tend to discourage the many evils that come from a woman's drinking and running around with other men."

"Horrors!" exclaimed the dainty cafelets. "Are we to be posted like—like horrid drinking persons? The idea! How dare they interfere with a lady's pleasure!"

"Fine!" said busy husbands, who are wise to what wife does afterwards. "They would post us if they felt like it; why shouldn't we do the same to them?"

And right there hinges the hinge of the situation. The modern woman of the type under consideration insists that she shall have all the rights of man. If man can drink, says she, then she is entitled to the same privileges. If man can go into a cafe and sit down to a table and play hide-the-highballs, his better half has got a perfectly perfect right to do it, too. In short, mankind no longer need fancy that drinking in public is his prerogative.

Proof in the Doing. Woman, modern, emancipated woman, insists that she may and can do it as well if not better than he. More than that, she is doing it. So much is she doing that the hubbles in question are beginning to protest that she is doing too much, that the lure of the cafe is proving the downfall of the happy Chicago home; that it's time something was done to make it stop. In fact, say these husbands, the suffragette problem isn't one, two, three in comparison with the problem of the woman who drinks in public cafes.

"There ought to be formed a husbands' protective association to protect the vain women of the city from the wiles of Peacock Alley, the College Inn and such places," says Mr. Hamilton, leader of the Injured Husbands' Reform Association. "These drinks display drinking places are the cause of more misery than any other places in Chicago. They are the places where wives spend their time seeking admiration while the husband is slaving away at the office, and that is the beginning of trouble."

"Guilty," Only Possible Verdict. Guided by these directions, the metropolitan section investigators set out on the trail of the lure of the cafe, with the determination to run it to its hair, no matter where the lure might be. The aim was to discover the extent to which the lure had got in its work on the "vain women" of Chicago and to ascertain if it really is necessary—judging from the standpoint of a busy business husband—to organize the sort of an association that Mr. Hamilton suggested.

The results of the discoveries—judging from the standpoint of a busy business husband—may be summed up right here in advance. It is, the extent to which the lure of the cafe has led, amazed even, the fairly unsophisticated young persons of whom the expedition was composed. Suffrage is yet to come; the voting woman of the future, by the type of the new woman certainly has arrived—the one to whom the well appointed cafe is as familiar as it is to certain men such a large percentage of women of all classes who drink."

Or, there has been no shopping for the day, it does not matter. Mrs. High Ball comes downtown just the same, and she comes in numbers to make "old fashioned" Mrs. Chicagoenne throw up her hands and gasp when she happens to see.

Tea Parties Minus the Tea. Beginning with the Pompeian room and trailing northward thru the Stratford, Rector's, De Jonghe's, the College Inn, the Union, and the lesser cafes of the type, one may find any fine afternoon an assemblage of femininity that suggests public afternoon tea parties—with the tea left out.

Two p.m. usually marks the beginning of the afternoon's business. There is no danger that hubby will be taking luncheon at a cafe then, for hubby, being a slave to business, usually is back in the office long before. The business grows thru the afternoon, and is at its height at 4.30. At 5 p.m. it begins to thin out.

"You can tell just about how far from downtown our patrons live by the time they leave to go home for dinner," said the head waiter of one popular place. "Those from far out leave as early as 5. Others remain until 5.30. Still others telephone their husbands to meet them here and have dinner."

At about 7, when breaking up time arrives, is when the funny things begin to happen in these places, funny to the callous minded, but tragic to the serious observer. By this time enough drinks have been absorbed to begin to show the effects. There are all ages of women in the party, from the young girl of the early 20's to the grand-mother downtown for an afternoon's fling. The lure of the cafe has drawn them all, the drinks have enchanted them for the afternoon and suddenly they remember that it is time to leave.

During the dinner hours, from 6 to 8, there is a scarcity of the feminine specialist in mixed drinks in the cafes. The places are crowded with diners, and to women of wide acquaintance and reputable standing are "not safe." Later on, beginning at 10, and ending only the cabmen know when, comes the evening rush, the conventional mingling with the alleged gay life.

This, of course, is an old feature of city life, but never before did the night crowd in such a large percentage of women of all classes who drink."

KITCHENER AT WEST POINT. Famous British General Received With Ceremony.

WEST POINT, N. Y., April 16.—By his own request the visit of Field Marshal Lord Herbert Kitchener here this afternoon was unmarked by ceremony. The famous general arrived by rail at 12.20 and after a luncheon at the residence of Col. Scott, superintendent of the United States Military Academy, spent the afternoon visiting the school and studying its methods.

After luncheon Lord Kitchener watched the usual inspection and review of the cadet corps and later saw part of the baseball game between the army team and Tufts. He returned to New York later.

BELATED THEATREGOERS.

One of the worst of social solecisms is to be late in arriving at any function where punctuality is the essence of politeness. To keep a hungry congregation of guests from prandial refreshment shows lack enough of consideration, but the mental torture inflicted on the host, still more the hostess, by the prospect of a fall from perfection in the viands, involves a still greater lapse from the requirements of true courtesy. In nothing is the lady or the gentleman better revealed than in the care taken to avoid what will needlessly annoy or irritate either stranger or friend.

Toronto prides itself in many things justly, in some not so allowably, in others unwarrantably. But there is one department of its communal life in particular where virtue does not shine conspicuous and that connects with its unpunctuality at public entertainments. Possibly other cities may parallel its deficiencies in this respect—that any can surpass its achievements in this variety of incivility is unlikely. For Toronto has the bad—the unpeppably bad—habit of unpunctuality to a degree arguing either abnormal indifferency or an acquired heredity which has ceased even to simulate sensibility.

Nothing can be more annoying to punctual people who have got comfortably settled down in a theatre or a concert hall than a series of interruptions caused by belated comers, who push and jostle till they reach their allotted places. Not only is the row particularly affected subjected to disturbance, but the occupants of every row behind it find their view intercepted and lose the immediate stage happenings. Once is bad enough, but it is common knowledge that in Toronto it occurs time and again, and it is nothing unusual to be well on with the performance before the peace and quiet that should always have prevailed are finally secured.

Conduct of this kind is absolutely unpardonable. Occasionally it may have some excuse, but in the great majority of instances it has no justification whatever. This is readily seen from the fact that those who make least scruple about inconveniencing their fellows are the first and most clamorous to resent the experience when they by any chance become the sufferers. Inconsistency is no doubt a frequent frailty of human nature, and it is true that there are individuals inherently incapable of seeing themselves as others see them, but courtesy can be taught and practiced by taking thought.

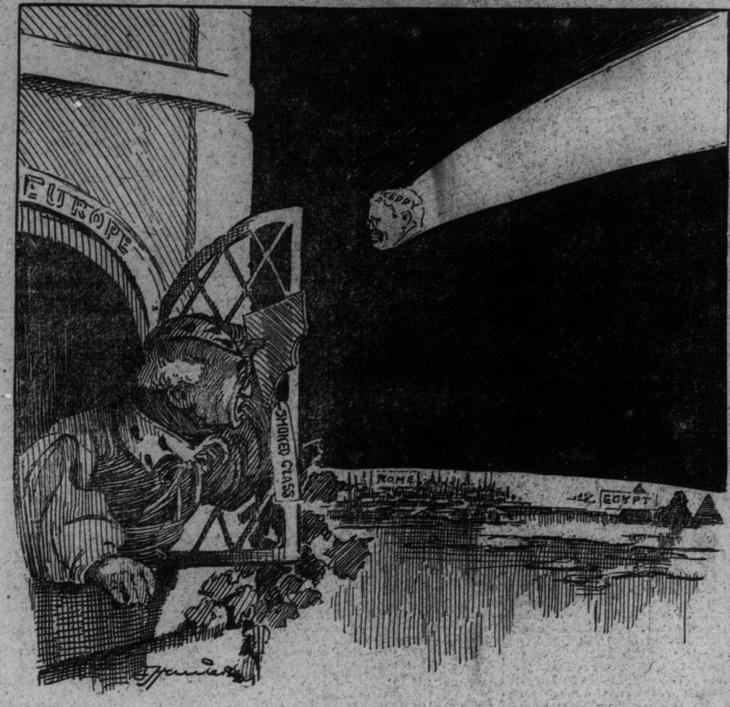

Toronto theatre and concert goers should above all things acquire the habit of punctuality. Not only will it be profitable in itself, but it will add materially to the general comfort and react upon the performers. Can anything be more disconcerting to the actor or the singer than the noise and commotion caused by the advent of would-be auditors intent on making up for lost time and taking it as a personal affront if those interested in the business of the stage hesitate for a moment before providing them with free and easy passage room? They are unfair, discourteous and altogether objectionable. Wherefore let all patrons of places of amusement in our fair city who may have been guilty of this offence against social ethics repent and reform, and let others refrain.

An Armed Menace The Franchise Joker

Colonel J. Gordon, of Mississippi, writes a striking article in the New York Herald, on "The Real Black Peril; An Armed Menace." Colonel Gordon takes pains to dispose of the idea that the south is not loyal to the nation by saying that he does not know a single southerner who would again resort to arms. Yet he sounds a warning against the unwise policy of the United States in allowing the hordes of negroes the use of firearms. There are 300,000 more blacks than whites in Mississippi, and owing to the armed negro many farms in that state are being abandoned by the whites.

STARTLING

OLD MAN EUROPE: The Saints Preserve us.

Our New Citizens

W. M. Martin, M. P. for Regina, contributes an article to The University Monthly on "Immigration."

Dealing with the rush of settlers from the Western States, from Britain and from the continent, he concludes that with the increase in population the farm will become more and more a great factor in the production of wealth. As time goes on, he says, the wealth of our forests, fisheries and minerals will be more or less depleted and at a distant date Canada will not derive the same wealth from her natural resources as she does to-day.

In selecting immigrants, therefore, it is necessary that the agricultural classes must be preferred to all others. The object of our policy should be to prevent the drift towards the cities and to bring into Canada men who will till the hitherto unbroken soil.

Figures are given showing the sources from which we derive our new citizens. In the nine months ending March 31, 1907, of a total immigration of 124,667, 55,000 were from Britain, 34,000 from the continent and 34,000 from the United States. For the fiscal year of 1907-8, of the 262,000 immigrants, 120,000 were from Britain, 83,000 from the continent and 58,000 from the United States. The following year of 1908, 146,000 immigrants, 52,000 were from Britain, 34,000 from the continent and 59,000 from the United States. For the seven months of the last fiscal year of 1908-9, 138,000 immigrants, 42,000 were from Britain, 30,000 from the continent and 65,000 from the United States.

These figures argue Mr. Martin, should effectually dispose of the contention that too many arrive from continental Europe. But in the selection of immigrants it must be borne in mind that the western provinces will witness great strides in railroad construction during the next few years, and in the building of these railways and public works many laborers are necessary.

Poetry that Lives

God sends His teachers unto every age, To every clime, and every race of men, With revelations fitted to their growth. And shape of mind, nor gives the realm of Truth Into the selfish rule of one sole race: Therefore each form of worship that hath swayed The life of man, and given it to grasp The master-key of knowledge, reverence, Infolds some germs of goodness and of right; Else never had the eager soul, which loathing, They do not, he says, "improve the powers for good digestion, intelligent work, sleep or for long life." It is a great thing for a person to say, "see how hard my muscles are," and yet, according to this authority, those hard muscles are not good for one.

Physical Exercise

A New York doctor, who is an authority on physical exercise, says one does not want to pursue those exercises that simply give one hard muscles. Hard muscles are not desirable. They do not, he says, "improve the powers for good digestion, intelligent work, sleep or for long life." It is a great thing for a person to say, "see how hard my muscles are," and yet, according to this authority, those hard muscles are not good for one.

Exercise must be a thoughtful and kindly experience. Here is where the influence of the mind over the body comes in. So often we consider this relation in respect to disease, but it is just as potent in health. A man needs a cheerful exercise, something that works mind and muscle in agreeable companionship.

Such a walk must not be a violent exercise, a frantic effort to put the muscles to the test. It must be quiet and leisurely rather. In order to give the thoughts a chance to disport themselves and the eyes abundant opportunity to rest. This is the health process according to this authority, and it seems altogether sensible.

Canadian Garter-snake

Few people understand snakes and still fewer people have any inclination to understand them. Still, the fact remains that snakes are well worth studying, and are very different from what the average individual has been taught to believe they are. Silly superstition, nervous horror and hereditary hatred of snakes have prevented many, and among them the most noted of naturalists, from studying the lives and habits of the despised, crawling things.

As a consequence, man is little ready to place his heel on the little, life-loving thing that, backs and glides and does no harm.

There is something pitifully ludicrous in the picture of a big man armed with a huge club facing a slender ten-inch garter snake; a beautiful little snake with brown body slashed with long old-gold stripes and equipped with no more means of self-defence than has an angle-worm.

He will beat it into a shapeless pulp simply because its red, black-tipped tongue darted out at him.

Perhaps there is nothing among the crawling things of earth, quite as helpless to take its own part as the Canadian garter-snake. The little fellow hasn't a tooth, no Fang and that red, black-tipped tongue that inspired the man with a club with horror is as pliable as a thread. There is not one ounce of venom in all the garter-snakes in all the wild lands of Canada.

The only defence the little grass snake has is in looking wicked, so he hisses and shoots out his tongue and bluffs his way thru.

The little snake is not always on the defensive. If approached gently as he lies coiled in the sun, he may be raised with the hand without his showing the slightest fear or annoyance, and, strange as it may seem, with man his greatest enemy, the garter-snake seems to crave the companionship of man.

FARM TRUSTS COMING

It is a commonplace that we all live on the farmer, but the natural deduction has not yet been made in commercial circles. If we all live on the farmer then the farmer has the whip hand of society. He can do as he pleases about production and supply. As a matter of fact he does no such thing. Living somewhat isolatedly he is suspicious of his next neighbour, and distrustful of all city dwellers. As a consequence he frequently falls into a trap thru his own incredulity, and thereupon becomes more suspicious than ever. It has therefore never entered into the mind of the farmer to consolidate his interests with his fellows, and consequently no agricultural trust has come out of the strong position he occupies.

There has always been an idea that farming is a mystery which must be honestly come by in order to have success out of it. No mere city man can go out and conduct a farm with any hope of prosperity. This faith is held so devoutly that only the more reckless have ever been tempted to go into farming without previous experience, and of course their own recklessness has ensured their failure and the further establishment of the faith. No business requires more care and caution and system than farming, and the class of men who go from city life to farm are not as a rule endowed with the caution or equipped with the executive capacity which is necessary for agricultural success.

The proper methods of farming may be said to have been standardized. Questions of soil and climate certainly vary with local conditions, but these problems are the simplest that have to be met. What is still more necessary for success is a commercial knowledge of the markets. It is only the most intelligent farmer who takes this under consideration. It is surprising the number of men who raise things, not because there is a demand for them, but merely because they have a preference for the crop, or because the seed was on hand, or because a neighbor raised a good crop.

The abandoned farms of eastern America are the strongest evidence of the recklessness of the average farmer. On the abandoned farms alone a great population might be supported. China can teach America profound lessons about the ability of a country to support population. What would the United States do with the present system had China's 400,000,000 people to be fed by Uncle Sam? Even the wheat yield of Great Britain runs from a lowest average of 26 bushels to a highest average of 34 bushels per acre. America's is about half as much.

Rotation of crops, intensive cultivation, manuring on a scale not yet contemplated in America, selection of seed, mixed farming with a view to the utilization of all by-products, are among the leading features of scientific farming. But the commercial intelligence and the large scale of operations necessary to do these things in the most effective way, and by means of which the best labor can be employed and used to the best advantage at all seasons, so as to eliminate unprofitable spells of idleness, have never been brought to bear on agricultural work.

The corporations have exhausted every other line of investment and development. The great railways are now engaged in laying down model farms with a view to attracting permanent settlers. If these farms succeed, as no doubt they will, it will be an argument to go further. But already private enterprise has gone much further. Wheat and corn farms on a gigantic scale have been established and are found to be exceedingly profitable in the west. The investment is the most stable that can be realized. There is always a demand for the produce. The land is always valuable, and growing in value. The returns are high. Nothing is so sure and so profitable except shipping, the great source of England's wealth.

The day of the huge agricultural trust is rapidly arriving. Farms of 50,000 to 100,000 acres may be regarded as small allotments within a generation. Just as soon as scientific farming is attempted on this scale by companies or corporations civilization will enter on a new phase.

That present day farming is conducted on a wasteful and incompetent system is patent to everybody who examines the facts. Our deputy minister of agriculture declares that the agricultural output of Ontario could easily be doubled per acre. The temptation to capital to enter this field with its security of investment and profitable return must prove irresistible. A corporation could save enough out of weeds and fences alone to make a good commercial profit over the present system.

Socialism on Trial

The socialists control a great American city for the first time. The patternmaker whom the people elected mayor, and the six councilmen-at-large, and 14 out of 23 aldermen, will soon take their seats.

What will happen to this city of 300,000 people now that the red flag waves over it?

Socialists promise to wipe out graft, institute home rule, the initiative, the referendum, and the recall, and the municipal ownership of public utilities. They promise to make the government represent those who work, instead of those who profit.

They say they can do all this because their party is supported wholly by the 25-cent piece of the workmen and workingwomen who are members, and not by capital, which has special interests to serve; because all of the affairs of the party are managed by the vote of these members instead of party bosses; because voters are active members of the party not only at election time, but at all times, and give orders to the men they have elected; that individuals are not elected, but principles.

Socialism, not as a theory, but as a practical ballot box proposition, is on trial. These socialists will have to prove their contention that they are not like other parties, which, we have found, are wont to forget beautiful platform pledges when they land. The socialists have done a lot of talking; now let's see what they will do.

Manitoba Free Press—It was Abraham Lincoln, a fairly successful practical politician who declared: "What is inherently right is politically safe."

No more public service franchises on any terms, and the termination of all existing grants at the earliest possible date. Government by the people, and not by private corporations. This is the cry in Detroit.

The wife of a New York taxicab chauffeur in her petition for alimony says his income amounts to $40 a week salary and $8 a day tips. In Toronto the taxi drivers don't make so much.

STRANGE EXPERIENCES OF GREAT EXPLORER

Discovers Unknown Zoologica Specimens in Bolivia and Brazil.

LONDON, April 9.—Relating his experiences during explorations in Bolivia to the Royal Geographical Society, Major P. H. Pawcett remarked that he voyaged up the Amazonian river were not without their dangers. There are anacondas (giant snakes), crocodiles, electric eels, sting rays and the perana, a small deep-bodied fish with razor-like teeth and an unappealing appetite for blood.

Men unfortunate enough to fall into the Paraguay—where the perana is most prolific—may be picked clean before they can be rescued. The anaconda is ubiquitous, moves by night, and has a weird cry. The major's party killed one 65 feet long, and another party reported killing one 85 feet long.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

PATTI (Baroness Cederstrom). It begins to look as if Patti, the once great singer, did really make her "last farewell" tour the last time she was over here, some five or six years ago. But Patti was the past grand master of that "farewell" business, and everybody expected that there would be still another "last in America" tour.

That "January and May" marriage of Patti, now 57, and the Baron Cederstrom, half her age, was not so much the cause of the "last tour" being the last of her growing inability to touch the high spots in grand opera. The baroness is now living in Craggy-Nox Castle, Ystradgynlais, Breconshire, South Wales, which is something of an address when placed southwest of a two cent. postage stamp, but it's easy for anyone who has tackled grand opera as successfully as Patti has.

LAST OF THE LINE

Famous Circus Rider Dies in French Capital.

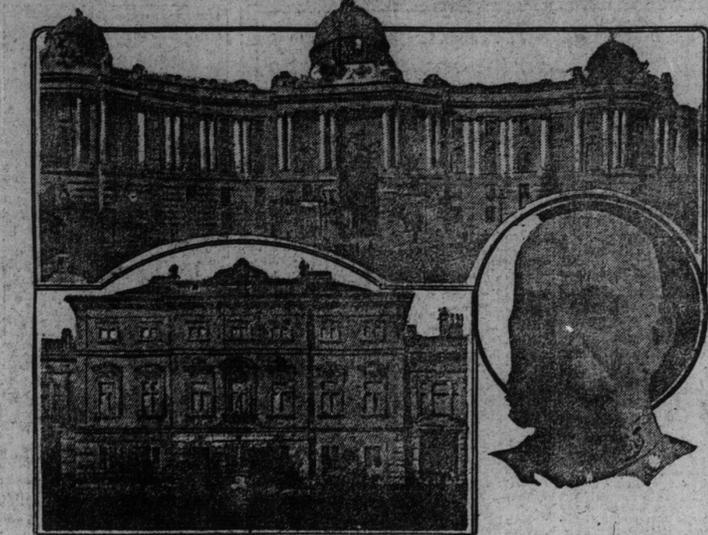

PARIS, April 9.—Charles Franconi has just died, the last of a long line of famous circus riders. His father, Victor Franconi, was the grandson of Antonio Franconi, who, having killed a Venetian patrician in a duel in Venice by a clever fencing stroke, was exiled and came to France, under Louis XV.

When in Paris in 1793 Antonio bought Astley's English circus, then in the Faubourg du Temple, and made the place a rendezvous of fashion during the revolution and first empire.

The Franconis, after that, from father to son, ran circuses in the Champs Elysees and other parts of Paris. For several generations they were the circus kings of Paris. The last Franconi circus disappeared only a few years ago, when it was turned into a cinematograph theatre.

Charles, the father of Victor Franconi, was so well known and brilliant a rider that he was commissioned by Napoleon III to break in his saddle horses for him. He died twelve years ago at the age of eighty-seven.

The last of the Franconis, Charles, kept up the traditions of the family, and was so fine a rider and an expert a fencer as his forebears. He devoted his life to riding and fencing.

THROWS VITRIOL ON LOVER OF HUSBAND

WRONGED WIFE CREATES PANIC IN ALGIERS THEATRE BY DASHING CUP OF ACID OVER WOMAN HEAD DURING THE OPERA.

ALGIERS, April 16.—A terrible scene in the Nouveau Theatre between two women, caused a panic. One of them, the young wife of a restaurant keeper, named Joseph Aposquita, tried to kill another young woman, Marie Alez, whom she suspected was the secret lover of her husband. During the performance piercing screams were heard in the orchestra stalls. A panic followed, and the members of the audience made a wild rush for the exits, during which Marie Alez, whose face was covered with blood, was trampled underfoot.

When order had been restored it was found that Mme. Aposquita, on learning that her husband would attend the performance accompanied by Marie Alez, had resolved to kill the latter. She secured a seat behind the couple, and while they were watching the stage she dashed a cup of vitriol over Marie Alez's head and then attempted to cut her throat with a razor. Marie Alez is disgraced for life, and a young girl who was sitting beside her was also badly burned by the vitriol.

O'BRIEN SHOWS HAND IN IRISH POLITICS

Aims to Unite All Classes—Taxation and Old Age Pensions Planks in Platform.

DUBLIN, April 16.—William O'Brien's "All for Ireland League" was launched last week at a convention held in Cork City, and if it does all that its enthusiastic founders predict, it will be one of the most important movements ever started in Irish politics.

As its name implies, the new league aims at uniting Irishmen of every class, creed and political persuasion in a great movement for the benefit of their common country, and the list of names of those associated with the foundation certainly indicates that Mr. O'Brien has succeeded in bringing together a number of men whom no one would have expected to join the same platform a few years ago.

The old Landlord and Unionist party is represented by men like Lord Dunraven, Lord Castletown and Colonel Hutecheon Poe, while on the other hand no one can cast any suspicion on the sturdy nationalism of men like Mr. O'Brien himself, Maurice Healy, Eugene Crean, D. D. Sheehan or T. D. Sullivan the author of the famous song, "God Save Ireland."

Against More Taxation. One of the planks in the platform is uncompromising opposition to any scheme of taxation, like the British budget, which would impose any further financial burden on Ireland, and it is hoped that the presence in parliament of a number of men pledged to this program will prevent any weakening by the official Irish party in its opposition to the budget. Another plank in its platform is the demand for protection for Irish agriculture and industries and this also is taken as breaching another link between the Irish Nationalists and the English Liberals, who are pledged to free trade.

Mr. Ginnell, M. P., who is associated with the new league, has already done good work in parliament, by securing a few days ago from a representative of the English treasury, an admission that Ireland is over-taxed. Mr. Hutecheon Poe, who replied for the treasury to Mr. Ginnell's question on the subject, admitted that under the report of the Financial Relations Commission, Ireland's taxable capacity as compared with that of the other components of the United Kingdom rendered her liable to pay $45,000,000 in 1908, instead of the actually paid taxes amounting to $45,250,000.

Mr. Hutecheon took great credit for the fact that the extra tax was $2,000,000 less than it was thirteen years ago.

Old Age Pensions.—Somewhat akin to the over-taxation of Ireland is the method by which thousands of old people are now being

ULTRA-SOCIALISM LOADS FRENCH CIVIL LIST

Aim of Radicals Is to Secure Power For Uncontrolled Disposal of the Goods of the People by the State.

LONDON, April 16.—On the assumption that another general election is close at hand Charles H. Heydemann, Ph. D., writes to show what the effect of the radical socialist program has been in France.

He states it is obvious that the aim of the Radical Socialists is to secure power for the uncontrolled disposal of the goods of the people by the state. This system of "collectivism," as he calls it, has in France found its expression in the maintenance of a large number of subordinate officials, who get as much money as they can, giving as little as possible in return for the result of universal suffrage in France. Thus every department is burdened with this subaltern official renders him a sort of inert being, who bends to all the exigencies of politics and the dictates of the party in power. These men form a nation within a nation, and it is not astonishing that the salary that these officials receive is not sufficient to support the family, and he is constrained to supplement his income by other means, and the work is not always performed out of office hours. Thus every department in France is a fictitious majority without nerve, defence or independence. The salary that these officials receive is not sufficient to support the family, and he is constrained to supplement his income by other means, and the work is not always performed out of office hours.

When there will be nothing but officials left. All the taxpayers will either be taxed out of existence or they will have gone into the state service.

Socialistic France of to-day has imbued its citizens with the souls of lizards. The will black the Government's boots for a regular tribute as long as they are entitled to wear its livery, and for over the man who provides in their livelihood—the taxpayer, the beast of burden. Incapacity, inability in high places, everyone with an axe to grind everyone begging for secure preferment, some sinecure for himself or his nephew, that is what is undermining, has undermined, France of to-day and pushed her down into the rank of a third-rate nation, the buffer state, which will probably have to bear the brunt, if it ever comes to a conflict between France and England.

robbed by the British treasury of the old age pensions to which they are justly entitled. The scandal of the old age pension administration in Ireland continues to grow daily and it is now evident that the treasury has determined on a literal interpretation of the law requiring proof of age, although it knows full well that such legal proof is impossible in the case of a large proportion of the people who were born in Ireland before 1854. In fact it will mean if persisted in, that there is no certainty until 1934 of everybody entitled to old age pensions receiving them.

Couldn't Draw Franchise To Bind Railway Company

Detroit Newspaper Finds In Toronto's Traction Experience Warning to Home People Not to Trifle With Corporation—"Joker" Invariably Gets Into Contract and People Have no Redress.

WHAT THE TORONTO RAILWAY CO'S FRANCHISE SAYS. Lines, and to extend the tracks and street service on such streets as The Toronto Railway Company will be required to lay down new may be, from time to time, recommended by the city engineer and approved by the city council, within such period as may be fixed by law to be passed by a vote of two-thirds of the members of said council; and all such extensions and new lines shall be regulated by the same terms and conditions as relate to the existing system.

WHAT THE COMPANY NOW SAYS. We are prepared at once to lay down tracks upon the several streets which appear to us to be necessary for the betterment of the system throughout the city. The streets which the COMPANY have selected are the streets upon which rails should be laid at the present time. When the time comes to consider the laying of rails upon other streets, the council will find the POLICY of the company a reasonable one.—Letter to city council.

WHAT THE HIGHEST COURT SAYS. To compel the Toronto Railway Company to extend their lines at an indefinite expense, for indefinite distances, where the maximum fare charged is five cents, seems to their lordships insupportable. The company have EXCLUSIVE POWER to "acquire, construct, complete, maintain and operate." It was intended to confer upon the company in the fullest possible way the power of OPERATING the street railway system. The main point, at the bottom of all, being, with of these two parties (the city or the street car company) had dominion over the matter of where the tramway was to go, and how it was to be operated, their lordships came to the conclusion that that right, and the exclusive right, WAS VESTED IN THE RAILWAY COMPANY.—Privy council decision.

The Detroit News recently sent a staff reporter to Toronto to investigate the traction problem, Detroit having one of its own, and his story bears a warning to his own city not to let go any public service franchise. Moreover, he finds that as a result of Toronto's experience with the street railway company this city is "overwhelmingly for municipal ownership." The News reporter says: Thanks to two decisions of the privy council, the highest court of appeal for the British Empire, coupled with the fact that the people here dislike to see a private corporation get away with something over $1,000,000 a year from excessive fares for poor street car service, Toronto is overwhelmingly for municipal ownership.

Both times that the city took its grievances to the privy council it was overruled, and had to pay all costs. The privy council insisted that the particular clause above quoted must be interpreted in connection with the clause giving the company the right to "operate," so that the judgment of the privy council was superior to that of the city engineer backed up by a two-thirds vote of the common council. As a result of the privy council decision the city has REFUSED to build the extensions desired, THEN it might offer them to some other company, totally oblivious of the fact that it is not the Toronto Railway Company that is to establish and lay down new lines and to open same for traffic, or to extend the tracks and service upon any street or streets, as provided by the agreement, is the only remedy that the city can claim.

City Engineer's Solution of Problem. At present the city has TWO street railway systems that a city needs, but one that would be possible were the company compelled to live up to its part of the contract made in 1891. Said the Privy Council: The privilege to grant to another person or company for failure of the Toronto Railway Company to establish and lay down new lines and to open same for traffic, or to extend the tracks and service upon any street or streets, as provided by the agreement, is the only remedy that the city can claim.

When it went to the Privy Council, the city very certainly thought it had a strong case," said Assistant City Solicitor William Johnston to The News, "and an adverse decision would have been a disaster to Toronto as much as it did ordinary citizens. But a lay mind and legal minds are different in any given community, dealing with questions of law and interpretation, so probably the legal minds of England could not see this case as it appeared to us in Toronto. It having been a pretty well settled case in its own right at home to work out its salvation. That there is a way out of this is doubtless true, and, in all, 11 years in the life of a community is of little consequence, so it is certain that Toronto, if it will in 1921 provide the street car question once and for all by again taking possession and holding on to its own streets.

"The present company has certainly refused to obey the city and its franchise in accepting routes, running night and open cars, making stopping places and laying tracks, yet all these things are called for in the franchise. May Escort to "Tubes." Under the plea of more rapid service, the company has cut out many stops, not only where these stops were in the middle of long blocks, but where the blocks happened to be shorter than the company considered necessary for the accommodation of the public. In a word, notwithstanding the incorporation of the Toronto Street Railway Company agreed, in the beginning, to do everything called for in the franchise, as soon as the contract was signed it has done only those things which seemed best for its financial interests. And this is why the city is in a predicament. The matter of city's control of street transportation. In fact a movement is already on foot for the construction of "tubes" in the business section of the city, with surface roads, all municipally owned, that will reach those outlying sections in which the present company refuses to lay extensions. The matter of "tubes" was put to a vote last January, and it carried by a comfortable majority; and the mayor is now being important to employ an expert engineer of national reputation to make the preliminary surveys and estimate the probable cost. This right to discontinue the street car system by the last treasury by the street car company since the date of the commencement

This Dream Cost One Hundred Million Dollars

A ONE-END VIEW IN THE BEAUTIFUL WAITING ROOM OF NEARLY COMPLETED PENNSYLVANIA DEPOT IN NEW YORK.

The gigantic dream of the late A. J. Cassatt will come true on Decoration day when trains of the Pennsylvania Railroad will run directly into the heart of Manhattan Island, under both the Hudson and the East Rivers. The work cost $100,000,000. The new station in New York is the largest and finest railroad station in the world. The tunnels under the river can handle 2400 trains a day; 100,000,000 persons a year can pass thru the station; the train yards are 60 feet below the level of the street; by the new tunnels persons will pass directly under Manhattan Island, from the west to Long Island, without so much as catching a glimpse of the City of New York; 24 giant motor engines, capable of running 60 miles an hour, have been delivered to the railroad for the tunnel service and as many more are being built.

The land necessary for the tunnels and station cost $17,000,000. Part of this land the railroad sold back to the government for its $5,000,000 New York

Songs of Yesteryear

Compiled by Thomas R. Henry, After Reminiscent
Interview With Phil Paulsraff and Louis Robie

Specially Contributed to The Sunday World

Everything has its vogue. There was a time when the genuinely melodious songs of the past, even of fifty years ago, were popular in the true sense of the term. They were the songs of the people. It appears that after the regime of rag-time and coon-songs, music lovers are demanding a return to the old popular melodies.

Mr. Thomas R. Henry, the celebrated theatrical manager, has especially compiled for The Sunday World a list of the songs which touched the human hearts in the 60's, 70's and 80's. Mr. Henry knows more than anyone in Canada about the matter and in view of the fact that Oliver Ditson Co. musical publishers (Boston) have recently issued a volume of the old popular songs, edited by H. T. Finck, critic of The New York Evening Post, the selected songs given below have particular value as indicating the best in their kind.—Editor.

ASSISTS NEWSBOYS

Marguerite Walsh Secures Clever Talent for Popular Concert in Behalf of Home Fund.

The well-known contralto, Marguerite Walsh, has interested herself in the fund of the Newsboys' Home. She has kindly consented to provide the musical and elocutionary program at Mr. T. C. Robinson's lecture for the fund at Massey Hall, Sunday, April 24.

Cecil Bruce Metcalfe proved himself to be a pianist of superior powers at his recent recital in the Normal School. He played with impetuous fire, often tenderness of expression, and with a sincere regard for the ever-changing moods expressed in the different numbers of his interesting program. This was particularly noticeable in his beautiful rendition of Liszt's B minor Ballade, a composition making great demands on the executive and interpretative ability of the performer. "The Winter Maid," study by Chopin was rather bewildering in its brilliancy and velocity, yet was perfectly clean and the Stojowski "Prelude" was significant because of the appealing melancholy and unfeignedly being of utterance rendered in its rendition. Mr. Metcalfe is a pupil of W. O. Forsyth, and his success was a demonstrative one. Howard Russell, baritone, a pupil of Mr. Francis H. Coombs, sang with splendid voice and style Clarence Lucas' "Eldorado" and a couple of other songs.

Thursday evening at the Metropolitan School of Music Miss Norma Cummings gave a special piano recital. Miss Cummings is already noted as an accomplished concert artist, being a honor graduate of the Metropolitan School of Music. Her superlative technique was acquired under her teacher, Miss May Ingleson Woodley, who brought her art to perfection. She was assisted at her recital by Stuart Jackson, the well-known concert tenor.

FUDGE TRIUMPHS

Celebrated Baritone Makes Hit at Recent Hamilton Recital.

Mr. T. Harland Fudge, the celebrated baritone, reestablished his reputation as an artistic and popular vocalist last Thursday evening when he was the principal soloist at the Hamilton concert of The Theatrical Mechanical Association, held in the Savoy Theatre. Mr. Fudge displayed the finest vocalism of operatic style in his rendering of the Prologue from L. Pagliacci. His phrasing and emotional interpretation were of the highest standard. He was assisted by Mrs. Merrifield, dramatic soprano, who sang "Elsa's Dream" from Wagner's "Lohengrin" with a style that rivalled Mme. Gadske. He was assisted also by Mr. P. Garratti, pianist, who played Liszt's No. 2 Hungarian Rhapsody with remarkable technical dexterity and positive temperament.

EXCELLENT RECITAL

Miss Johnson Appreciated in Elocutionary Program.

Miss Ida Helen Johnson, pupil of the well-known teacher of elocution, Miss Mabel Dalby, made her initial appearance in recital last Monday evening in the new Oddfellows' Hall, Bathurst-street.

MUSICAL CANADA

A very excellent number of "Musical Canada" (E. R. Parkhurst, editor and proprietor) is that for April. The magazine, which is always newswy and replete with excellent articles, surpasses this month its own standard. Miss Bagster concludes her entertaining musical story "Poor Old Potter." There is the usual quantum of musical news from the leading cities of Canada, the United States and England, notes on prominent local and foreign musicians, articles on the drama and opera and the technique of the violin. The number is especially embellished with photographs of instrumentalists and vocalists. The magazine is thoroly to be recommended to all music lovers of Canada.

Draughtsmanship Poor Amongst Best Artists

Well-Known Teacher Gives Good Advice to Progressive Pupils

In a well-known New York studio devoted to the manufacture of ornamental glass, including stained glass windows, a recent experiment which has met with sufficient success to warrant its continuance is the photographing on glass of the hands, feet and head of the figures which are to be copied in windows. The remainder of the figures is transferred to the glass in the usual way. This process adds somewhat to the cost of the work, it is said, but in some cases results have been more than justified by the extra expense.

HAMBURG DELIGHTS

Greatest Interpreter of Chopin Displays Inimitable Style at Massey Hall.

When the half-gods go, says Emerson, the gods arrive. One wonders if the Concord man meant the critics when he spoke of the half-gods. We had one of the gods of the musical world in Toronto last week, and his reception was not as enthusiastic in the critical columns as it was at the hands of his audience.

How tremendously superior we become sometimes, when other people are appreciative. It would be ever so much more to the purpose of the critical faculty if the power and meaning of the pianist's art had been explained to those who had been to listen. But exposition is a more difficult art than fault-finding and denunciation.

Mark Hambourg surpassed himself last Monday in the extraordinary delicacy and refinement of his playing in such passages as the Marcia Funebre movement of the Sonata in B flat minor, the delicious repose of the B minor prelude, or the sweet and pensive nocturne in E major. But he exhibited a tempestuous mood at other times which apparently terrified the critics. Had they closed their eyes they might have observed that the musical effect lost nothing by the vigorous manner of the performer. There are very few pianists who can be classed with Hambourg, and he certainly stands in the front rank.

Summer of 1910 Will See Some Speedy Motor Boats on Toronto Bay

French Makers Favor Small Four Cylinder Motor

After developing the one-lunger to a wonderful degree of efficiency, French small car builders are now showing a decided preference for four-cylinder motors of very small volume and low, or moderate power. An example of this is to be found in the conversion of the firm of Sizaire-Naudin, to the multiple cylinder idea, after several years devoted exclusively to the development of the one-lunger. The new production will be examined with particular interest from the fact that the firm has met with phenomenal success in the single-cylinder class, and has produced a single-cylinder racer with a ratio on stroke to bore, which a few years ago would have been declared impossible. With a bore limited to 3 9/16 inches, the firm has shown how to make a 4 7/16 inch borepower develop 26 horsepower and break all speed records for its class. Part of the result is due to a stroke of 3 1/2 inches, relatively large valve diameters, light reciprocating parts, efficient lubrication, and the use of the most appropriate of metals.

The new four is the outcome of racing and touring experience with monocylindric motors. Nominally, it is of the same power as the firm's single-cylinder model and can be fitted with the same bonnet without any structural changes. The four cylinders have a bore and stroke of 70 by 120 millimeters (2 7/16 by 4 7/16 inches) and though rated at 12 horsepower, has developed as high as 26 horsepower, on a 10 hours' bench test. The bore is long in relation to the stroke, but it is short in comparison with a second motor already designed and tested on the road, and intended for next season's market, in which, for the same bore, the stroke is carried up to 170 millimeters, or 6 7/16 inches. This is the greatest ratio of stroke to bore that has ever been attempted on a car designed for the ordinary user.

Block casting of the cylinders, thermo-siphon water circulation, high-tension ignition with fixed sparking point, all are modern features which have been adopted on the new Sizaire-Naudin. A distinctive feature is that the crank-case is divided into two parts vertically, and not horizontally, the two halves being bolted together, and each one carrying a ball-bearing for the crankshaft, as in the single-cylinder design. Naturally there is no center bearing, but this cannot be considered a novelty, in view of the fact that most constructors of small motors have decided that two bearings only are preferable. The use of ball bearings for the crankshaft, however, is new, Sizaire-Naudin being the only French maker of small motors who does not employ plain bearings for the crankshaft. They have been led to this move by their experience with the high-powered 100-millimeter single-cylinder racing motor, all of which had ball bearings throughout.

A high-tension Bosch magneto is relied on for ignition. On the model described, it is in a very low and inaccessible position, driven by external gears. It has been decided, however, to raise it to the level of the frame members for more convenient examination. The instrument is a new model just produced by the Bosch company and remarkable for its small size. It is considerably smaller than the one employed on the single-cylinder models and is provided with glass inspection plates for verifying the contacts, without dismounting. The leads pass thru a straight metal tube level with the base of the cylinders until they come opposite their respective plugs, from which point the insulated cable is passed up to the sparking plug. The only visible wire therefore consists of four vertical lengths. At present a Zenith carburetor is employed, but it will be changed later for one of the firm's own design.

Motor Notes

no use, so far as lighting the way is concerned, side lamps often irritate the driver, since they throw a light upon the fenders and the front of the bonnet. This means that the greatest comfort in night driving is had when the side lamps are extinguished and only the head lamps used.

There always has been a certain amount of danger to the experienced autist who disregards instructions and assumes a clumsy attitude when cranking a motor. Sometimes the back kicks which are experienced are due to a derangement of the timing system, or to the absent-mindedness of the autist who attempts to crank an advanced spark. Even if the spark is properly retarded, it is perfectly possible to have trouble of this sort, provided the autist fails to vigorously spin the crank. This trouble will be all the more noticeable in motors with a high compression, especially after they have been heated up, and if lazy methods of cranking are indulged in.

The life of an automobile will be long, or short, depending merely upon the speed at which it is driven, and to a large extent quite independent of the quality of the material of which it is made, or the accuracy of workmanship expended upon it. If the speed is 20 miles per hour, the depreciation will be four times as much as when the speed is 20 miles per hour. If, in turning a corner, the speed is increased, the structural parts will then be subjected to enormous stresses relative to the work the parts will have to do at a high speed on a straightaway.

It is indeed gratifying to a motorist to be able to start his motor by a simple manipulation and can be made so, and this is possible with many motors nowadays. Of course, very few, if any, engines will start in this way every time, but the chances of their

HARD GLIDDEN RUN

Tour For 1910 Over Worst Kind of Roads in Southern States.

Manufacturers of autos who purpose putting machines in the 1910 Glidden tour have begun to display an interest in highways in the southern states. Not since the old days, when armies were moved expeditiously thru the mud and over pike roads, it is necessary to have a more intelligent effort to obtain information.

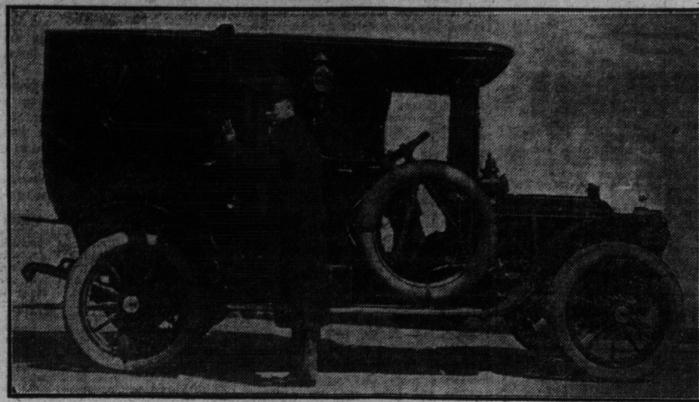

That there will be even more difficulties than were encountered in the "Wisconsin Allegiance" during the 1909 Glidden tour is the opinion of many more for pleasure purposes than to withstand the severe winter weather. When they were used, it was only when necessity demanded that the occupants usually arrived at their destination much the worse for the trip. Nearly all garages had specially prepared rooms for the winter storage of cars.

"Road conditions since leaving Louisville baffle description," writes Zirbles. "We thought we had conquered the worst of these conditions just before reaching Memphis, but instead of improving the roads became more trying after leaving that point."

In the operation of a motor vehicle there is nothing of more importance than proper lubrication. A great many good vehicles have been condemned because this matter has not been given the necessary attention.

HELPING HINTS ON HANDS HOW TO KEEP THEM CLEAN

Some Tips for the Man Who Does Dirty Work on His Own Machine.

If you wish to have presentable looking hands, before starting to work on a piece of greasy machinery take some cylinder oil and rub it well into the skin. After the work is done, to take the grime off, do not rub the hands with waste and work the dirt into the pores, but apply fresh cylinder oil or any light oil, liberally, using it the same as soap and water. When all of the grease has been cut loose, take a clean piece of waste or rag and wipe the hands. When you have wiped off the oil you will find that most of the dirt has gone with it, leaving the hands in good shape to wash with soap and water in the ordinary manner. The soap used in finishing up should be tar soap, and the motorist who tries this system will be greatly surprised at the results obtained. Kerosene, gasoline, washing powders or compounds should not be used since they harden the skin and make it crack. Especially is this true where these are used several times a day as in the repair shop.

When out on the roads the hands can be made fairly presentable by using the oil wash alone and drying them off thoroughly with waste. Most repair men are well acquainted with the foregoing hand wash, but the man who has had trouble in getting off the heavy black grease which he will accumulate in making repairs and adjustments on his own car, will find that it will beat anything in the way of ordinary soaps and compounds.

HOW RUBBER IS HANDLED

Hartford Rubber Works Company Produces an Illuminating Lesson.

What is a refreshingly novel method of at once spreading the gospel of Hartford Tires, and of disseminating knowledge of tires and rubber generally, has just been inaugurated by the Hartford Rubber Works Company. It comprises what is styled a "school exhibit," and, while primarily designed for the education of Young America, it is equally informing for men of larger growth.

The exhibit, which is mounted on large and heavy cardboard, includes samples of three grades of crude rubber, fine Para from South America, Congo from Africa, and Guayule from Mexico, and specimens of these same rubbers after they have been washed and in various stages of manufacturing, viz.: after they have been broken down by the massive rollers, before vulcanizing and after, and the fabric which is incorporated with the rubber to make the tires, also the minerals which are compounded with it before vulcanization, such as sulphur for curing it, antimony for coloring the red rubber and zinc oxide for making white rubber, and specimens of these rubber itself compounded with these different minerals. Finally there are samples of these finished products, red and white tubing, and a cross section of a complete automobile tire, showing the compactness of construction.

The whole exhibit is very neatly and compactly arranged, each sample being plainly marked, and is accompanied by a treatise on rubber giving more detailed information. These exhibits have been distributed to the Hartford schools, and one of the principals stated: "It gives the children a more practical and interesting knowledge of rubber than ever could be obtained from the text books."

EXPERT DRIVERS ENGAGE

Champions of Many Speed Events to Drive for Big Organization this Season.

The General Motors Company will be represented in the speed and endurance contests of the ensuing season by a team consisting of Louis Chevrolet and Robert Burman. Announcement to that effect was officially made yesterday. The fact that Chevrolet and Burman, whose sensational performances of last year are inseparably identified with the Buick car, are announced this year as champions of the General Motors Company will inject into the 1910 contests an element of extraordinary interest.

Gas Engine Troubles Generally Curable

Sick Engine No Worse Than Sick Horse—But the Engine Won't Die—Gas Power Best for Farmer

Continually there is raised against the gas engine the cry, "It is subject to so many different troubles." The pessimists tell us that the gas engine may be all right in a city or next to a machine shop, but that on the farm it is more often a source of annoyance. We have just been reading the veterinary columns of a prominent farm paper in which are answered the questions of readers regarding the sickness and disease of horses. The comparison, in the light of what we know about the gas engine is interesting, to say the least. The gas engine may have its troubles and its inconveniences, but we have yet to hear of an engine suffering from slight derangement of its parts that disappeared entirely before the expert could get to it. And yet we read in this paper before us of horse after horse that became sick and died, probably from some trivial disease, before the veterinary could reach the scene.

It may be all right to say that the ordinary man does not understand the horse as one of the nobles of animals, but the farmer understands his horse. A perusal of the veterinary columns of any farm journal would seem to answer in the negative. Just notice, the next time you read your favorite farm paper, how many horses have taken sick and died, seemingly without cause, and remember in so doing that a horse, once dead, cannot be brought back to life in even the best of machine shops.

We have a great respect for the horse as one of the nobles of animals, but as a labor saving machine for the use of the modern farmer, we fall to see his advantages.

Don't take another man's word that your gasoline tank is full. Look yourself. It may save you a lot of time.

HOW TO RIDE OUT STORM IN SMALL MOTOR BOAT

Better Not to Use Engine—Small Storm Sail Should Be Carried

It must be assumed that the boat is unable to hold her course. The best means of meeting the emergency will vary so greatly according to depth and size of boat, extent and type of water, material of bottom, proximity and character of coast, duration and violence of storm, etc., etc., that evidently only the general principles applicable to all can be outlined here.

The best available means of keeping the boat's head toward the waves, and of preventing her drifting upon a lee shore, must be adopted. If the situation permits and the engine will run reliably at slow speed, steering may be maintained. However, few boats can carry fuel enough to enable them to outlast a long-continued storm, and fewer still can be run slow enough to avoid diving into the big seas. There is danger of damaging the engine or propeller by "racing" when the latter is above water. If anything is ever going to happen to a boat's power plant it will happen during the time of greatest need. In general, therefore, the engine will either have stopped of its own accord or require to be stopped as a matter of prudence, and some plan must then be chosen.

Few motor boats are provided with sails which would be of any use in fair weather, but every one which is large enough to carry one at all ought to have a most substantial enough to carry a small storm try-sail. This, the small-would need to be very strong in every respect.

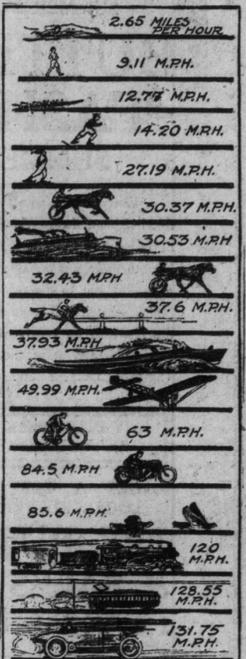

Anchoring, altho the most uncomfortable mode of riding out a storm, is often the last or only resort. Therefore, the engine should be provided with one or more anchors of suitable weight, with cables of sufficient length and strength to enable it to anchor in any depth of water. Where circumstances admit of drifting a sea-anchor may be used. One properly rigged should always be carried so that precious time may not be lost in trying to improvise one.

Whether riding to anchor or sea-anchor, plenty of cable should be given upon boat, cable and anchor. In either case a "spring" should be put on the cable whereby the boat's head may meet the waves a little better quartering rather than exactly head-on.

Every effort should be made to prevent seas from boarding the boat. Where rough water may be expected a suitably-rigged oil bag should be carried ready for use. In service it should be kept as far out to windward as is practicable. For use in open waters an open boat should be protected by substantial and well-fastened spray-hoods.

The best instruction is: Before starting prepare to meet the emergencies which may arise.

Kerosene

Fifteen years ago gasoline sold in barrel lots at two cents per gallon while kerosene brought twelve cents. To-day, owing to the gas engine, gasoline brings about fifteen cents, while kerosene can be had for six or seven cents per gallon. Inasmuch as three per cent is a fair production of gasoline and sixty per cent of kerosene from a gallon of crude oil, it is obvious that the next important advance in the internal combustion engine will be such changes as shall make the use of kerosene as generally practical and desirable as gasoline. Indeed, with the steadily large increase in the consumption of gasoline, the time is rapidly approaching when its price will be a burden, as, in fact it is already beginning to be in England and Europe.

A given quantity of kerosene actually contains about seventeen per cent more heat units than gasoline and is subject to much less variation in quality. It is also comparatively safe, the unpleasant to handle, and causes grease spots, yet does not waste from evaporation.

The inevitable conclusion must be such changes in the gas engine as now used for many purposes as will utilize kerosene of which millions of barrels are already held in storage for want of a market. Some progress has already been made in this direction, but there is still much development to be made, and the field offers large rewards to successful inventors.

Russell "30" Fully Equipped $2,350

YOU are not asked to buy the Russell "30" because this or that man has bought it, nor because its success is the most striking feature of the present season. But the REASONS WHY well-known motorists are buying it and why its success is so conspicuous are reasons enough to make any man think twice before he decides on any other car.

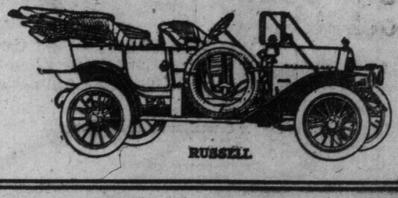

Look at the construction. Did you ever see anything like it in a car of this price?

Look at the quality of the metal—tested in both laboratory and shop. Look at the engine—an engine that makes you feel like shouting with satisfaction when you find how it works for you. Look at the perfect alignment of driving parts, transmitting every bit of power the engine brings out.

Look at the bearings—bearings with the world-famous Hoffman balls, which are guaranteed to be within one ten-thousandth part of an inch of standard—an example of the minute care shown in Russell construction.

Don't miss seeing this car. Judge by first-hand information. Ask for a demonstration—it will be given gladly.

THE WEEK IN SOCIETY

The Torsade Twist

is intended to be worn around the head as part of the Chignon, and is preferred by many Ladies who desire something different from the braid usually associated with that style. The Torsade twist has a natural simplicity that makes it attractive and places it away from the kind of hair aids that always have a set and same appearance.

QUALITY

of course is the first matter considered in selecting the beautiful hair from which it is made, and then the deft artistic and natural working out of the design produces a hair aid that is just what is most becoming to the pretty woman.

Under the Pines

What Women are Doing for the Advancement of Civilization — Suffrag News.

BY FLORA Mac D. DENISON.

Last summer, after attending all the important meetings and social functions of the International Council of Women, I spent a few weeks in the wildest part of the Highlands of Ontario, on picturesque Lake Mazinaw, with old Ben Echo Mountain and its Indian paintings recalling the days when the Iroquois was master of lake and woods. Under a clump of stately pines near my log shanty on the lake in my birch bark canoe, built by old Sawatis himself, I had time and leisure to think over what I had heard and assimilated at the International Council.

Only twenty-one short years before had that wonderful woman, Susan B. Anthony, conceived the idea of an International Council of Women. Knowing well how difficult it is to overcome prejudice and custom, this wise reformer did not organize as a suffrage movement exclusively, but felt that once women were organized and came to discuss social conditions from all sides (economical, political, etc.), they would unconsciously drift into the only logical position open to them—that of political equality with men.

Peace and arbitration, temperance, health and disease, co-education, white slavery, were talked up one side and down the other and every speaker, after many revolutions arrived back to the fact that the ballot was the only weapon they could use with dignity and effectiveness to further their many reforms. Many of our very conservative and conventional women were carried so progressively forward by such a noble cause that it was only when they got home, back to their own town or village, that they realized that their thought world had passed thru a revolution.

But it was not of the International Council that I intended to write. It really was of the lake, the woods, the wilds. Of nature in her many moods—of sunshine and shadow—of calm and storm—of beautiful skies—pristine forests and all the beauties of a wilderness country in the summertime where nature has flung her wondrous pictures about with such lavish hand.

We first get an idea and then if the idea is big enough it soon gets us. I guess the suffrage idea has got me for no matter what I try to do about it I seem to drift onto "votes for women."

What a change a quarter of a century has brought about. Clubs, societies, and organizations there were, but for women. Women could go to church and be good, but to discuss, to investigate, to think was unwomanly. Now, just take a glance at Toronto, where the Local Council representing scores of other societies, one of the latest being Canadian Business Women's Club. How our grandmothers would have shuddered at the thought of a woman going to a meeting, and how she would have shuddered at the thought of a woman going to a meeting, and how she would have shuddered at the thought of a woman going to a meeting.

What Christ Has Done for Woman

And What Woman Has Done for Christ

Of all the religions of earth, Christianity is the only one that sets the crown of honor upon woman. When we consider the age to which Christ belonged, and the country in which He lived, the people among whom He dwelt, and the estimate in which woman has been held from time immemorial in eastern lands, no one can escape the conviction that the Redeemer of mankind intended by His character and teachings to confer a special honor upon woman, and that the Divine Author of redemption intended by the birth of Christ to render motherhood forever glorious.

Christ, the Son of God, came to earth to save man from sin, but He also came to exalt woman. He made her a partner in His work, and He made her a sharer in His glory. He made her a part of His kingdom, and He made her a part of His inheritance.

Christ has done for woman what no other religion has done. He has made her a part of His kingdom, and He has made her a part of His inheritance. He has made her a part of His kingdom, and He has made her a part of His inheritance.

Christ has done for woman what no other religion has done. He has made her a part of His kingdom, and He has made her a part of His inheritance. He has made her a part of His kingdom, and He has made her a part of His inheritance.

Christ has done for woman what no other religion has done. He has made her a part of His kingdom, and He has made her a part of His inheritance. He has made her a part of His kingdom, and He has made her a part of His inheritance.

Christ has done for woman what no other religion has done. He has made her a part of His kingdom, and He has made her a part of His inheritance. He has made her a part of His kingdom, and He has made her a part of His inheritance.

Brass Tacks

Tonics for the Heart and Gizzard

No lie can hurt a man for a long time. There is little use in spending your time trying to correct lies. The lie itself will drop like a feeble shaft against the armor of truth.

The thing for us to do is to live and so to act the truth that a lie will not obtain. Lies do not hurt, it is the truth that hurts, and it behooves us to see that there are no weak spots in our lives where our names may be attacked truthfully.

There is nothing that will choke off lies and cause them to wither and die like supreme indifference. Time is a great leveler, and if we have gizzards enough to act the truth and to maintain silence about lies the lies will die and be forgotten.

Grizzly Pete of Frozen Dog says the "has-been" wears shiny clothes instead of shabby shoes.

Many men figure just how far they dare to be bad.

When we act the same in our home, wherever there's a company present or not, we have a pretty good stand-off with our family.

By Force of Circumstances

By GORDON HOLMES

Almost noiseless in its governed progress, it screamed aloud now that it was wounded to death. The silk planes, tilted to unstable angles, whistled and sobbed as they elied the headless breeze. A bellows of fear and agony came faintly thru the increasing uproar as the crippled machine plunged headlong to earth. Once it lurched violently, and a heavy body, with arms and legs sprawling, was shot straight down. It struck the ground first, some yards away from the place where the aeroplane crashed itself into a twisted and shapeless mass.

Inspector Lawson, unconscious words described the incident briefly. "Bagot fell like a dead crow, but the airship came back with wind and sound," said he.

"Well, we have all recovered our senses now," chirped Furneaux, when three inquiries were ended, and he had secured Leigh's invitation to pass a quiet week-end at the Abbey, while he wrote a detailed and confidential report of recent events in the Bridge-walk district.

"I suppose so," said Arthur gloomily. "Why do you? I thought it was only the fair sex who are uncertain, coy, and hard to please, yet you are not all these and more if you are not satisfied with last month's adventures."

If Jeffries wallows Johnson, then Mrs. Johnston will pack her book-bag and not go back to school of vaudeville.

To me, Mark Hambourg is a man into whom God has crowded a world of genius. I would call his execution marvelous, and I would call the artist even more marvelous.

Listening to his playing, one hears a sermon, a song and a prayer. One sees the man and his instrument. One sees the soul of the master and the soul of his child.

Authors and playwrights take heart and Canadian writers get busy and pen a play. Do you know that Liebler & Company have notified all agents and managers of their attractions up on the road that hereafter in all programs and newspaper advertising the name of the author and his instrument appear in type second in size only to that in which the names of the star and the play are printed?

May Irwin, always popular in Toronto, not only because she is Canadian born, but because she is always bright and charming, has won another big success in the new play, "Mrs. Jim" by Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson, authors of "The Man From Home."

Probably no young actor on the stage-to-day has occupied the position of leading man to so many of our most prominent women stars as Mr. Charles Richman appearing in "One of the Family" at the Royal Alexandra this week.

And now who can say the Scotch are "close" and "near" and "stingy"? For is not Sir Charles Wyndham Scotch in blood? and has not Sir Charles quietly done an act of generosity for the Actors' Fund that thousands of actors and actresses would never think of doing?

It is probable that Wilton Lackaye will be seen here next season in the character of Dr. Benjamin Franklin. Earle Browne, who plays the part of Red Joclyn, a yeoman in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," has written an unnamed play dealing with the intrigues of the French court during the peace negotiations following the American revolution.

That popular favorite, and singing comedian, Al H. Wilson, is coming to Toronto soon in his new romantic drama, "Metz in Ireland," and a genuine treat is promised his many admirers in this city.

and electric effects. Mr. Wilson has composed several new songs for the play which he sings which only he can sing them.

Miss Harriet Ford, who, in collaboration with Joseph A. Patterson, wrote the great newspaper play "The Fourth Estate," has gone to London to begin work on the play which she any Anthony Hope are to write for Miss Gertrude Elliott. The new effort is to be given a production in the United States this fall following Miss Elliott's appearance in "The Dawn of a Tomorrow."

"Oh yes," said Thurston the magician as he mentioned me to a seat, "I have lots of funny experiences with good people who seem to possess a wonderful faith in my powers and its pretty hard to disillusionize some of them too."

"As an instance, let me tell you something that happened right here in Toronto only the other night. You know that pet trick of all magicians, that of borrowing a hat and watch from somebody in the audience and breaking the watch into small bits in the hat, then by firing a pistol return the watch as good as ever again?

Well, right before last a young fellow handed up his watch very reluctantly. He was heard to say quite audibly, when he heard it being pounded up in his hat, that I should have to pay for it, but after I pulled it forth as good as ever he seemed quite satisfied."

"Last night," he continued, "the young fellow came to my hotel after the performance. He seemed to want to talk business and he said, 'I'm a man whose watch you smashed last night and shot right again.' 'Oh,' I says, 'and what can I do for you?' 'Well,' he said soberly, 'you can pay me for that watch, it ain't run since you shot it. I took it to a jeweler this morning and he says it works are all leaded up from that bullet you shot thru it.'"

"Another time in Philadelphia a man offered me a thousand dollars to go and make a dozen peach trees grow in his garden. I said I was clean out of peach trees and the best I could do was to give him a lemon tree. He said, 'It's too cold here to grow lemons. I want peach trees.'"

"A Gentleman From Mississippi" will begin a week's engagement at the Princess Theatre on April 18. While Burr McIntosh has been absent from the stage for several years, still it is by no means forgotten that he is a character actor of unusual genius and will be welcome here, no matter in what role he may appear. Will Deming and Beverly West are well known from their performance in "The Man of the Hour," and the other members of the company have been seen here from time to time in prominent attractions.

"The story of 'A Gentleman From Mississippi' revolves around the adventures in Washington of a newly elected senator from Mississippi, Fat, jovial Bill Langdon, who is sent to the capitol by the 'trusts' interests as an easy mark, who will concede with their ideas thru friendship for the man who put him there. The old gentleman, a cavalier of the old school, has a high sense of honor and seeing thru their schemes defeats them and comes off victorious in a fight that threatens to destroy him financially, politically, and what was even more vital to him, to smother the honor of his family. His daughters, who have been brought along, become infatuated with Washington social life and the elder becomes engaged to a congressman, Norton, who tries to put thru a bill placing a naval base at a point in the Gulf of Mexico, where he has persuaded his fiancée and her brother to invest their money. Old Langdon discovers Norton's treachery and breaks the engagement. 'Bud' Haines, a bright young newspaper correspondent in Washington, has become acquainted with Langdon shortly after the latter's arrival at the capitol and becomes the private secretary of the new senator. Knowing the perils of Washington political life he steers the old man safely past the reefs and captures the old man's younger daughter. The old man falls a victim to the charms of a dashing widow, while the pert young stenographer, who furnishes quite a bit of the comedy, surrenders to a very persistent young reporter.

At the Royal Alexandra

Mr. Charles Richman, the star of "One of the Family," who will be seen at the Royal Alexandra this week, is not one of those mushroom stars made over night by a lucky hit seldom repeated. He has won his spurs legitimately, and has reached his present enviable position thru that long and arduous apprenticeship necessary to develop the really accomplished actor. For years he has been one of the most popular and eagerly sought for of the leading actors. Role after role in the metropolitan productions has fallen to his lot. Charles Frohman, David Belasco, the Schuberts, and other famous managers have been glad to secure him for principal parts in their most important productions. His performance as the judge in "Mrs. Dane's Defence" is still remembered as the most powerful ever given that part. His more recent New York successes as leading man in "The Fighting

Hope," and in "A Man's World" have still further strengthened his position. His appearance as a star is only the logical sequel of his long list of triumphs, and the sympathy and best wishes of the American public will extend his stellar appearance in "One of the Family" by Chas. T. Dazey, author of "In Old Kentucky." Charles Richman portraying the character of John Marshall, a poor boy who is driven from his home by the taunts and jeers of his fellow youths, because of his poverty and lack of name. He works his way north, meets with success, and becomes one of the powers in finance. He returns to his former home, under another name, with the object of discovering, if possible, the secret of his parentage, and in any event of proving that he is capable of bigger and broader things than the boys who used to jeer at him. Hardship, vicissitudes, and varied experiences have taught him that men should be judged by what they make themselves, not by their pedigrees. He finds himself bitterly opposed in all his principles, by a haughty, arrogant young fellow, who believes that a gentleman should live for his pleasure. The fact that both are deeply in love with the same girl, the clash between them is deeply dramatic. Herbert Carter, John Marshall's rival in love, is the son of Judge Carter, the owner of the street railway in Danville, which Marshall and a friend are trying to get the franchise and build an independent line, bigger and better than the present system of mule cars. The play is intensely dramatic. The unexpected meeting between father and son forms the most thrilling climax.

Mr. Richman is supported by an all star cast.

At the Grand

"The Newlyweds and Their Baby," the 80c people music-show that comes to the Grand this week is a fountain of bubbling fun.

What a lovely thing is the comedy of childhood. Could anything quite touch the tender chord quicker than the sight of Baby Napoleon Newlywed crawling backwards slowly into view, his dress over his head, his fingers whimsically revealed.

Applause ripples from parquet to gallery before anybody catches a view of the baby factor. Napoleon's entrance of the nursery setting of the first act is a bit of stagecraft—the dignity of the serious touched (as by the rays of the sun) with a sense of humor.

Rosen is a cheery-faced little fellow, a wonderfully talented Lilliputian, who can gurgle and cry with the comedy of a babyhood itself. The audience applaud again at the sight of his pretty features. When he sees Mr. Newlywed and croones "da, da," the ladies look in merriment. Rosen is so good they want to kiss him.

Thruout much of the first act the infant hero is the centre of a party in honor of his seventeenth month—he is such a wonderful child that a party once a year wouldn't begin to do him justice.

After everybody laughs until they nearly cry over the antics of Napoleon the foolishness of his father proceeds to make up to the baby. The substitute Napoleon proceeds to burlesque the dear child. The moment members of the family turn their backs, make-believe baby Napoleon puffs a cigar, puts his feet on a table and observes: "It looks like a big night for this fellow. He is irresistibly droll. Very soon, however, the deception is discovered and the finale act sees the whole Newlywed family flying toward Moonlight Park, where the incubator is located, to recover the real Napoleon.

The last act sets forth the vicissitudes of Napoleon, and the adventures of the family in their search of him. He isn't recovered until the final curtain.

A company of uniform excellence develops the merriment. Countess Olga von Hatzfeldt makes an ideal Mrs. Newlywed with cameo accuracy and distinction. Dorothy Rogers scores a tremendous hit as the nurse.

George Murphy and Irving Brooks are clever. German comedians, Murphy's "My Goodness," catch line and his Sinitzbaum song cause a lot of laughs.

"The Eight Potter Pigeons" help make the "Boogie Woogie" song a hit. The Boogie Woogie Bedtime and the big stars here are bound to delight the children.

Major Knott Macn, a modern Tom Thumb, is induced to impersonate Napoleon for a time to pacify the infant's distracted parents. Rosen reappears as the baby's nurse. The play proceeds to make up to the baby.

head, Manager Morris has placed an order with a local firm which will install in the Majestic one of the most modern cooling plants ever installed in a place of amusement in the United States. The plant is now under construction, and it is expected that it will be in place before the real hot weather sets in. In addition to the cooling plant about one thousand electric lights will be distributed thruout the theatre. So far as "cool spots" are concerned, the Majestic will undoubtedly offer advantages in this connection which will be equivalent to that of watering places in and around Toronto.

Owing to the large variety of vaudeville acts always at his disposal Mr. Morris promises that all the choice fruit on the vaudeville tree this summer will be shaken down for the benefit of the patrons of the Majestic. Rather than remain idle for the greater part of the summer, the bulk of the vaudeville performers who in recent years have developed a faculty for plume their vocation during the hot weather, do so at a slight cut in salary, which in itself serves to prevent any possibility of a scarcity of good acts. Having the assurance of several of his European stars that they will remain in America this summer in stead of returning to London to their summer engagements in the music halls, Mr. Morris anticipates with pleasure for the benefit of the patrons of his local theatre, the fact that they will be afforded an opportunity of seeing some stunning and distinctly high-class vaudeville features at popular prices, which will be somewhat of an innovation in Toronto. There will be eight novelty acts on the bill this week, and the animated motion pictures which will be varied and interesting. The extra special attraction at the Star for this week is the famous Nelson-Voigt fight picture. These give an exact reproduction of this most spectacular of ring battles, and have been secured by the management at a large cost. No other picture has ever aroused more sporting comment than any other struggle for the lightweight championship of the world, such a terrific pace set by any other pugilist, than in this battle. It will be remembered that when Nelson accepted at this house he promised that something exciting would happen at this fight, and there is no doubt that the promise was fulfilled to every word which he met the "Michigan Wildcat." So, in order to show the sporting population of Toronto how Battling Nelson tried to stand against the whirlwind, the management have secured the exact reproduction of this fight on the understanding that it will be seen no other place in Canada. The burlesque, in which they will be seen in conjunction with, is also a real winner. It is staged under the title of the "Jolly Girls" and there could be a no more apt title given it. From the first to the last the show is one big hit when it comes to manufacturing laughs. The cast is one of the best chasers of the blues "that could be secured, while the girls are all of the most attractive denizens of money and change. Nor has the olio been forgotten. This is also given in good measure, and includes numerous acts that are unique in burlesque.

Beulah Watson of "A Gentleman From Mississippi" company tells a funny story of one night stand life in the sunny south. While traveling with one of Wm. A. Brady's attractions thru Texas one winter, the company found themselves booked for Christmas Day in one of the smaller towns. The members of the company determined to celebrate the day in the best manner possible, so dinner was ordered to be served after the matinee in one of the large rooms of the hotel, apart from the other guests. At the finish of the meal a cordial was ordered and some one proposed creme de coccinelle. The darky waiter stared for a minute and shaking his head left the room. Some minutes later he returned and announced, "De barkeep' he say, dat if you all wants cocaine yo' will jes' have to go to de drug do' for it."

Lulu Glaser in New Musical Comedy

Popular Actress Particularly Pleasing in One of the Best Productions of the Year

Miss Lulu Glaser, who will be seen at the Royal Alexandra next week has never appeared to better advantage on the stage than when playing a part which can only be described as a sourette role. In "Just One of the Boys," the book of which is by Rida Johnson Young, the Shuberts have supplied Miss Glaser with a part which recalls her earlier triumphs as a star, and the reception of Miss Glaser in the eastern cities where she has been appearing in her latest play the past six or seven weeks would indicate that she has a lasting success. The Shuberts are sending Miss Glaser and her company of 75 to the Alexandra Theatre, beginning Monday, April 25.

Miss Glaser's part is that of Cherry Winston whose parents have left her a large lumber camp in Michigan. Cherry lives in the camp where she has grown up under the tutelage of a negro "mammy." As her feminine friends are necessarily restricted, she throws herself under the protection of a Scotchman, an Irishman and an American, who serve as a body-guard. Each is of a different nature and Cherry has acquired a sprinkling of all three characters. She is "Just One of the Boys" among the lumbermen. Clayton Hargis, a New Yorker who owns an adjoining tract, together with a party of school-girls who are travelling under the protection of Professor and Mrs. Van Hagen, visit the lumber camp. It develops that Hargis had met Cherry a year before, and, of course, he had not forgotten the wholesome girl of the woods. He soon falls prey to her charms. The professor proposes that Cherry return to New York with the party and enter his finishing school. This is done, Cherry consents to go only on one condition, and that is that she be accompanied by her body-guard. The first scene is played in a beautiful wooded setting, the act terminating in a melodramatic feat. The party of easterners boards a special train which is slowly winding its way thru the mountain, when Cherry, suddenly determining to catch this train, strides a log and goes down the chute in order to succeed in her purpose.

The music is by William Schroeder, and the score contains a number of catchy songs which are sure to prove popular. The cast in support of Miss Glaser contains many well-known names. Among the players are Walter Lawrence, E. M. Favor, Jobyna Howland, Edith Sinclair, Irene Frasselle and Harold A. Robey, in addition to a chorus of 40.

"THE SQUAW MAN" COMES TO THE GRAND

William Faversham's Famous Play to be Presented at Less Than Dollar Fifty Prices.

When "The Squaw Man" puts in his appearance at the Grand next week, local theatre-goers will be given an opportunity to see what has been described as the closest approach to a real Indian, impersonated by a white man that has ever been given to the stage. To those who are unfamiliar with the mysteries of theatrical "make-up," Tabwaha is a real Indian, and yet he is a very good looking white man outside his part. On the stage, however, he is an Indian to all outward appearance, thoughts and speech. For years there have been Indians in various plays, but it is to be doubted if anyone was ever deceived by them. Here, however, it is different. The old peace chief of the Utes, as presented in this play, is the living embodiment and perfect presentation of the Indian of twenty years ago, as may be attested by anyone who has seen Lo upon his native heath.

The story of the Indian is in some respects an odd one. To begin with he was drawn from a living character, a real peace chief of the Utes, with whom Mr. Edwin Milton Royle, the author of "The Squaw Man," had made acquaintance some years ago. The had been written and had been accepted by Mr. George C. Tyler, of Leslie & Co., who are making the production, and Mr. Royle had gone off to Washington to attend to some business with the copyright office. There he found a delegation from the Utes, headed by Baco White, the full-blooded Ute interpreter, who were present to set before the President a petition concerning their lands in Wyoming. Mr. Royle fell into conversation with White, and when the idea struck him to make of his chief a real Indian—to outward appearance at least. He telegraphed Mr. Tyler and suggested the engagement of White to teach the actor selected for the part of the chief, the Ute language. He also suggested his employment in the play to take the part of the interpreter. He received an instant approval of his telegram and shortly afterward returned to New York with his capture.

From that time on there were strenuous days ahead. Ute is, or rather was, an unwritten tongue, and it became necessary to sit down deliberately with a typewriting machine, the interpreter and the part of the chief, written in English, and convert the part in pure Ute. The manner in which it was done was this: The lines were first read over to Baco White, and he was made to understand their significance. Then he was requested to translate them into Ute. This took time of course, but when the interpreter was able to read off a complete sentence, then it became necessary to take down the words phonetically. As an illustration, here are a few of the expressions at random from the part, and how they look and are pronounced in English:

"To do business—Nar-na-wup."
 "To betray—Too-wish-sha-ra-on-bang."
 "Tobacco—Quop."
 "Be on your guard—Ec-as-poo-noo-kaub."
 "Sit down—Caru."
 "Will hoax (or fool)—Tu-shu-ahvan-tum."

By the time six weeks had gone by a vocabulary of three hundred or so words of the Ute language had been taken down, and there the work ceased as it was more than sufficient to express all the English lines in the play in the pure Ute. Anyone who knows anything at all of the Ute language will have no difficulty in following the dialogue. In addition a pretty fair working system of the sign language was also produced and has been introduced in the play. During the run of "The Squaw Man" at Wallack's Theatre, New York, a party of Ute Indians, destined to join William F. Cody's Wild West Show in Europe, were taken to see the play, and after the performance were taken back of the stage to meet the actor representing the chief. Each in turn solemnly grasped his hand and said: "Good—damn good."

Miss Genevieve Kane A Great Horsewoman
 Says Riding is the Only Satisfactory Way to Exercise and Enjoy Country Scenery

One of the most enthusiastic horsewomen in the theatrical profession is Miss Genevieve Kane, who plays the dashing Mrs. Spangler in "A Gentleman From Mississippi," and whenever the weather permits she may be seen galloping along the country roads in the vicinity of the city in which she is playing.

"It is the only way to enjoy the country," says Miss Kane. "To go thru it on a train gives one no idea of the real beauty of the rural life and an auto is about as bad. That is a constant whizz and a cloud of dust. But the saddle is another thing. Give me a good intelligent animal, that rides, and I can get closer to nature with it than in any other way. And the exhilaration produced by a splendid gallop is something that none of your auto enthusiasts can appreciate."

Miss Kane is a Californian, and her home is on a ranch near the famous Napa Soda Springs. She was brought up in Santa Rosa, where she became well acquainted with Luther Burbank, and her garden testifies to the esteem in which the great plant wizard holds her, for it is filled with many of his rarest productions.

Hurrah For Musical Comedy

I abominate the man who is eternally sneering at musical comedy as being something beneath his notice, says the dramatic reviewer for Hampton's Magazine. Give musical comedy its due credit; such a show, neatly executed, is far more entertaining than plottish drama with its jangle of punk dialog. Musical comedy opens the way for many, many entertaining things which otherwise an audience would never get to see; it gives us a chance at the pleasure of fabrics, colors, graceful motions, alluring sounds.

The one item of physical dexterity alone is a trumpet-tongued pleader for musical comedy. Where else could Fred Stone give his wonderful lariat dance, the most amazingly dextrous and graceful dance I have ever seen, save in some quiet moment of a musical comedy? Vaudeville is the only answer. Yet many of us who would like to see the lariat dance would not care to spend a whole evening at a vaudeville show. Tell me not in mournful numbers all about how musical comedy is pile-driving the stage down into the slimy slop-swash, et cetera. Personally, I am an uplifter and my hands are curious at the task, but I'll take a musical comedy any time in preference to a "drama." If I have to have yeast, I'll take it in my sensuous and not in my intellectual. I don't mind a costume tampering with my visual sense, but I resent a brow playwright tampering with my rather proud and austere thinking apparatus because, naturally, I know more than he does.

No More Theatre Passes

Following the announcement of Manager Solman that hereafter no passes, save the regular dramatic critic passes, shall be honored at the Royal Alexandra Theatre comes a similar announcement from the managers of the Shubert theatres.

The Messrs. Shubert have found it necessary to adopt these drastic measures because the privilege had been abused in the most flagrant manner. Not only members of the theatrical profession but railroad men, tradesmen and others who came in contact with heads of the theatrical enterprises have been in the habit of quite a while of asking for courtesies, or passes as they are generally known.

The Messrs. Shubert have never been in favor of the policy of "papering" a house to boost the declining fortunes of a failure or a show which is not a distinct hit. The only exception to the rule, of course, is the requests for courtesies made by the different newspapers in the different cities.

In the future, therefore, it will be useless for anybody to apply to the Shubert office for what is known as "professional courtesies" for any of the Shubert enterprises. This applies to all members of the theatrical profession. The Messrs. Shubert, however, also announce that in order to enable the members of the theatrical profession to see the different performances in their theatres, they will arrange for professional matinees of each play, which will be given two or three weeks after the New York premier.

A circular letter to all the Shubert managers throughout the country has been issued from New York, putting into effect the same order that has been issued to the managers of the New York theatres.

Since the discontinuance of the passes by the railroads and the successful operation, the Messrs. Shubert have adopted the same policy.

Fascinating Jennie Lind

She would trip off and off, as if in an ecstasy of delight at the opportunity of singing, bowing and smiling to her audience, and giving every one present a flattering sense of contributing in a measure toward the success of the evening. She had three or four songs which showed the wonderful compass and power of her voice, and one or more of these was called for at every cert. A Swedish Echo Song in which she would echo her own voice by a sort of ventriloquism that was quite marvelous, and another in which she made a remarkable diminuendo, reaching a pianissimo as faint as a sigh, but with carrying power that made it distinctly audible at the most extreme limits of Castle Garden or Triper Hall, where the later concerts were given. This was a fine building situated at Broadway and Bond-street, and just finished in time for the second series of concerts. The hall had fine acoustic advantages, and it was a great loss to the city when it was destroyed by fire a few years later. The Winter Garden was afterward built on the same site.

One of the most haunting things to me was her singing of Taubert's bird song—"I know not why I am singing." Her shake was the finest I ever heard, so close and even as to be altogether perfect. Her voice, which she said herself was naturally stiff and stubborn, she had educated and practised into such a degree of perfection that her roulades and cadenzas were unparalleled in their execution. In her sacred songs she rose to the sublime, and on one occasion as she finished singing the aria "I know that my Redeemer liveth," I recollect that Dana Webster, who was seated in the centre of the balcony, rose from his seat and made her a profound bow. Her rapid expressive face and never-ending volume of voice made her appear like some inspired seraph delivering a divine message.

She was indebted to Sir George Smart, with whom she had studied in England, for all the traditional renderings of oratorio parts, he being at that time the greatest living authority in this school of music, but her vocal training was done under Manuel Garcia in Paris.

When first the lone butterfly sits on the wing;
 When red grow the maples, so fresh and so pleasing,
 Oh, then comes the bluebird, the herald of spring,
 And hails with his warblings the charms of the season.

—Wilson.

"THE MAYOR OF THE CITY WILL HAND OVER THE DEED"

George Grossmith's Many Good Stories

Mr. George Grossmith has permanently retired from the stage and platform—he makes this fact clear with touching regret in the last chapter of his new book, "Piano and I" (Arrowsmith, 1s.). But he has spent the early days of his leisure admirably in compiling this most entertaining book of reminiscences. "G. G." must know many more good stories, and "Piano and I" should have a series of sequels.

Referring to the limitation of greatness, Mr. Grossmith relates an overheard conversation:

Lady: Are you going to Mr. Grossmith's recital to-night?

Gentleman: Whose recital?

Lady: Grossmith's.

Gentleman: I never heard of him.

Lady: He used to act at the Savoy Theatre.

Gentleman: I never go to theatres.

Lady: But you may have heard of some of his songs. "See Me Dance the Polka," for instance.

Gentleman: No!

Lady: You must have heard of his book. I saw your own daughter reading it the other day.

Gentleman: Oh, Grossmith! You mean the man who wrote "The Deserted Village." Of course I've heard of him.

The Manager's Friend.

The "man who knows the manager" is well known to all actors. Mr. Grossmith met him at Leeds:

At Leeds I was sitting in my little room waiting to go on the platform, but I could not begin as there was such a terrible hubbub. The room was very crowded, and some people could not get their seats, or, strictly speaking, their seats had been monopolized by other people. There was great confusion, and it would have been an absolute impossibility to begin under such circumstances, so I waited until quiet was restored.

In the meanwhile an elderly gentleman in evening dress dashed into my sanctum, and said:

"Where's my seat?"

G. G.: I haven't the slightest idea.

Gentleman: Well, I demand to have my seat; just see that I get it.

G. G.: I think you had better ask the manager of the hall.

Gentleman: Who are you? Have you no authority?

G. G.: I regret to say I have not, as far as the front of the house is concerned.

Gentleman: Well, I know Mr. Grossmith personally, and I shall tell him about this disgraceful disorganization.

G. G.: I shouldn't do that, sir; you may get him into very serious trouble.

Gentleman: I don't care about that, I'm going to have my seat.

"G. G." and Sir Henry Irving were once staying at the same hotel in Manchester.

My fly was waiting for me, as I had to start earlier than Sir Henry. When the hall porter, in his red coat, opened the door for me I noticed an enormous crowd outside the entrance to the hotel. I said to the porter in a somewhat peculiar way: "Are those people waiting to see me leave the hotel?"

He said: "No, sir, they are waiting to see Sir Henry Irving."

I said: "But doesn't Sir Henry find this a bit of a nuisance?"

The porter replied: "It does worry him a bit, sir, he doesn't like it."

I said: "Well, I'll do him a good turn."

I had my fur-lined coat on. I pulled up my collar a bit, adjusted my pince-nez, pulled my Homburg hat over my brow, and strutted down the steps with the Irving gait. The cheering was great, and some of the people even followed the carriage. When Sir Henry came down a little later, he found no crowd awaiting him. I did not tell him of this adventure, but he heard of it, and spoke to me about it afterwards. With a humorous wink in his eye, he said: "You ought not to have done that. I pay these people to come every night."

An Irving Story.

The following is another excellent Irving story:

Irving, apart from being a great actor, was a consummate gentleman, and at a garden party at the famous Holly Lodge, Highgate, I introduced my elder daughter to him. He was an old friend of my father's (at whose home I first met him), as well as of myself in after years. My daughter, who is now Mrs. Stewart Bevan, was naturally pleased at the introduction, and when she afterwards met him at a party, given by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Arthur Jones, she said: "I am Miss Grossmith."

The usual twinkle came into his eyes. He received her cordially, and said: "Thank heaven you're not as ugly as your father!"

From a host of other good things, one concerning Max O'Rell may be selected:

This reminds me very much of a story that the famous Max O'Rell told me when I called upon him at his home in Toronto. Max O'Rell had given a lecture, entitled "Her Royal Highness, Woman," at which I was present.

sent. That it was excellent goes without saying, and he had a fine, appreciative audience. I was congratulating him, when he said that some lecturer had called upon him that very morning at his hotel, and had said to him:

"Mr. O'Rell, you had a fine house. I played to empty benches."

Max O'Rell replied:

"Oh, I'm sorry! What was the subject of your lecture?"

The despondent lecturer replied:

"Draughts!"

"Draughts!" was commanded by Queen Victoria in 1860 to give a recital at Balmoral. After the entertainment had finished, the Queen sent for him: Her Majesty received me so graciously that for a moment or two I felt rather dumbfounded, but I soon recovered when the Queen, in speaking to me, said: "They tell me you are very much missed at the Savoy."

"I felt that terrible choking sensation, and nearly lost my composure during the Queen's evidently noticing me, asked me if I liked the music of "The Gondoliers." Of course, I replied truthfully in the affirmative. She said she thought it was extremely delightful, and that she had it played on her orchestra. She talked with me for some little time, and eventually bowed and left the drawing-room, accompanied by her attendants. I was much impressed by her quiet, sweet voice and her delightful little smile.

"Piano and I" is a characteristically cheery, kindly little book, and should have a wide sale.

When I first entered the theatrical field I had to be satisfied with a very small salary, just barely enough to live on. After working several years with various companies, I needed the experience and accepted a stock company engagement, reproduced two plays a week, which meant rehearsal every morning from nine till twelve, then an hour for lunch, and return to the theatre for the matinee. We would report at the theatre for the evening performance at 7.30. Where in commercial life, will you find a store, factory or business office that have the hours of actual work an actor endures to get the experience that is absolutely necessary for him, to become an accomplished actor. We have neither time for enjoyment or rest with a permanent stock company, and on the other hand if you secure an engagement, if not after a few weeks, you are trudging around the managers' offices looking for work, and possibly become despondent and accept a second or third rate engagement, playing one night stands. If the manager should not be responsible, and the company does not make money, you do not receive your salary, and in all probability be stranded in some small village. Where in commercial life will you find these conditions? There are a great many people who think that the people of the stage have a life of roses, but instead it is one of thorns. If you should be fortunate and make a tremendous hit in a play, yes, then you are sought for by the managers, but how often does this occur? Think of the countless hundreds of actors and actresses on the stage, how many become popular? One in a thousand. But if anyone of that thousand would use the same amount of energy, self-denial and hardships, they would become a power in financial life. Every actor or actress on the stage to-day hopes to become a star, working on in hopes that they will make a "hit," as every chorus girl aspires to be a prima donna. Commercial life rather than the stage would be my personal advice to anyone who should ask it.

"Do you see that large woman with the diamond tiara and the bejeweled fingers?"

"Yes. What is remarkable about her? She appears to be commanding a good deal of attention."

"It is pretty well known that she forced her daughter to marry old Rockingham for his money."

"Oh, a self-made mother-in-law, eh?"

The Bank of England

One of the greatest of autocrats is the Bank of England. Imagine a Canadian banking house enjoying the sole right to issue notes that would be legal tender in Canada, acting as banker for other banks and for the government, and holding gold reserves for international banking, as well as for the very institutions with which it competed in general business. There are only some of the prerogatives of the great British bank.

Before the cheque to a large extent replaced the bank note, the sole right to issue legal tender and the restricted right, which it possesses, to issue all notes, gave the Bank of England a monopoly on money circulation which was a responsible and valuable privilege. But it is obvious that now its most important functions are its office as keeper of gold reserve for foreign banks and that of protector and dominator of domestic banks.

It is estimated that the sum of the balances kept by the joint stock banks in the Bank of England averages about £2,000,000. Upon this sum there is no interest paid. At first glance this might seem to be a source of large income. But the bank must maintain a tremendous amount of cash in the treasury to offset this gigantic liability, inasmuch as the smaller banks consider such deposits "cash in hand," and so account for them on their balance sheets. The proportion of cash maintained averages between 40 and 50 per cent, and rarely falls below 33 per cent. So it is easily understood how it comes about that crippled profits, at the end of each fiscal year, tell the tale of a dearly bought right.

The Bank of England is exempt from the stamp duty on bank-notes and the tax on profits of issue of the same, in consideration of which it pays to the government £60,000 annually. For the exclusive right of issue of notes in London and within a radius of 65 miles from the metropolis, it pays £120,000 annually.

Being the centre of the whole banking system of the United Kingdom, the Bank of England is a potent factor in governing the finances of the world. Certainly in the all-red money world its influence is unlimited. By borrowing from or lending to the market the bank controls it, and hence where money shows a tendency to accumulate, (as it is prone to do in all countries, especially those in the shadow of Wall-street), this levelling power knows how to disperse the gathering storm. The task of relieving stress produced by the abnormal amassing of funds in any one quarter has been assigned the Bank of England. This duty has never been officially imposed, but the very prerogatives and privileges of the bank make it imperative for said bank to assume the stupendous responsibility.

While we are discussing the bank of banks and sovereign of sovereigns, the Bank of England as a democratic institution must not be lost sight of. It is interesting to contrast the business methods of our Canadian banks, with their hundreds of branches, with those of a financial structure boasting only eleven branches but withal so mighty that the par-value of a share of its stock is 100, five of which shares the stockholder must own to entitle him to one vote. The average length of time of bills discounted by the Bank of England is from forty to fifty days, and their average size is about $1000. Two British names, one of which must be the acceptor, are required on all bills discounted, and they must not run longer than four months as the usual thing. The bank has made exceptions and discounted six months' bills. No debt-incumbered unfortunate need use this great iron-clad, gold-filled masterpiece of shrewdness and system for merciful assistance, for unless he knows what it is to carry around a bank-book bearing the awful mark of the bank, his bills will not be discounted.

A Favorite "Stunt" Club.
From The New York Evening Telegram.

"Can you sing, play, act, recite or otherwise entertain—or do you enjoy seeing others do these things? If so, you should join the Stunt Club." That is the invitation that the Stunt Club, which has its headquarters at the home of the originator, Mr. J. H. Goodwin, holds out to those who are fond of displaying their talent or seeing others display theirs.

Mr. Goodwin, the manager, as well as the originator of the Stunt Club, has been on the stage for 32 years, and now has at his home the smallest stage in this city. It is only 7 1/2 feet square, and the seating capacity of the auditorium is about 50. In a recent production of "Virginius" there were nine characters on the stage at one time, the greatest number in its history.

The club has been in existence only about four years and the 184 members it has had in that time include amateur and professional actors and actresses, as well as persons who can simply strum "Old Folks at Home" on the banjo, or tune up a violin, mandolin or guitar. Impersonations and monologues are always popular with Stunt Club audiences, and at almost every meeting there is presented a sketch or one-act play. One of the pleasant phases of the meetings of this club is that unless there is to be a play no one knows what will be done. That is because everything is impromptu.

Have a Perfect Circulation of Pure, Dry Air.

Your refrigerator has a great deal to do with the health of your family for, unless it is made right, you are constantly in danger from spoiled or poisoned food. For this reason alone, even if there were no other, it will certainly pay you to buy a "Eureka."

"EUREKA" Refrigerators are constructed on the most perfect system known, producing a perfect circulation of dry, cold air. This means an absolutely dry refrigerator, and sweet, wholesome food. So perfect is "EUREKA" air circulation that wet matches left for 12 hours in the cooling chamber becomes dry enough to light.

The "EUREKA" is lined with odorless spruce, or with genuine porcelain. The odorless spruce has been used with the best of satisfaction for over twenty years, and is far better than zinc or iron galvanized with zinc, as the zinc corrodes, cannot be really cleaned, and is poisonous. Story of Moltke's Readiness.
From George Von Skal's "If Germany Were Called to War," in the April Century.
When a German wishes to give an illustration of the instant readiness of the army of the empire for war, he is apt to tell how Gen. von Moltke, then chief of the general staff, was awakened one night in July, 1870, by his aide and informed that war had been declared against France. The general—so goes the story—simply said, "File No. 5," turned over, and fell asleep again. The aide opened the file and found the complete plans for the mobilization of the army in case of war with France, with all the necessary orders to the commanding officers written out and signed, and only the date left blank. All he had to do was to fill in the date and

MR. J. S. CRATE.

Formerly editor of The Sunday World, who recently joined The Toronto News staff as News Editor.

COUNTESS VON HATZFELDT

She has a real countess, is Miss Von Hatzfeldt, although she does not rely solely on this fact for her position as "The Newlywed" in "The Newlyweds and Their Baby."

That she is a very pretty woman, without saying that she has acquired an actress's already established professional prominence. All the more so, as it is of noble birth does not detract from her popularity. She has a few "chatterboxes" upon two highly interesting topics—divorce and filio.

Her father is Edmund von Hatzfeldt, descendant of a long line of German counts. Her father was German ambassador to the Court of St. James. The original family was Waldenbach, and the first count got his title from the Emperor somewhere around the year 1250, leading a German regiment to victory after the commander had been killed.

The name Hatzfeldt means "has the field." Count Edmund was obliged to leave Germany and settled in Milwaukee. There he married Anna Auer, a pretty actress, in a German stock company. The Countess Olga was born in Cincinnati and when she was a year old her parents took her to Hamilton, O., where her father conducted a small theatre. His constant exercise of the prerogative of a count, namely, high living, made his wife's life so miserable that she left him seven years after their marriage. They were divorced, and each remarried, the mother taking Olga. The father, and his second wife settled in Evansville, Ind., at which place he conducted a successful tobacco business. The mother traveled with Olga. The countess frankly admits that her title has been worth a great deal to her in a business way. It has caused her to be a feature in the program, when as Lizzie Smith or Louise Jones she would have been an unknown chorus girl.

"Of course," she says, "if the Countess von Hatzfeldt fails to make good as we say on the stage, she can not hope to live forever on her name; but the name gives her a chance to show what she can do. Don't let anybody convince you that there is nothing in a name. As I look back over my career, it seems to me that at least 50 per cent. of my success is to be attributed to that magic title—countess."

Taft's Smile.

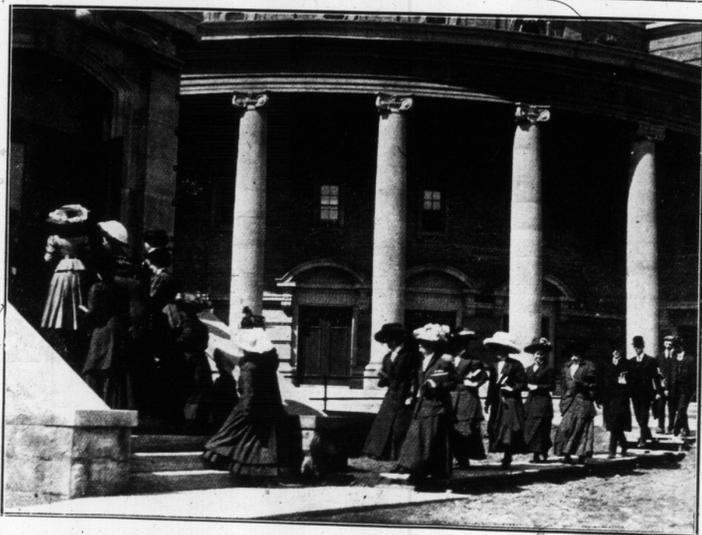

From The New York Herald.

Have you ever watched great persons when they meet their fellow humans? These great ones are sometimes bored; they are frequently condescending. They are often both. Do you know the strained smile which is an agony? It is very common among the great. If you know these things, the smile of Mr. Taft will come upon you with a sense of grateful relief. It is above all things natural, human. It seems to fit into the easy, human, soothing tones of him when he speaks. The whole man, his smile, his voice, his soothing, comfortable air, creeps into your being and gives you comfort. It makes you feel at home. He has the secret of a great humanity.
