TRANS-ATLANTIC LUMBER TRADE OF NEW BRUNSWICK AND We are able, this week, to present to our readers our usual statement of lumber shipments from the provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia to trans-Atlantic ports. We are indebted for the New Brunswick returns largely to the Collectors of Customs at the different ports, and to Mr. Snowball's Annual a time when Northumberland, Kent and Gloucester are seeking aid for the extension of their railway facilities to which they are justly entitled. At all at present there is one to every sixty male adults in the country."

And supposing I were to say that the compensation ought to come in great measure from/the trade—a remark which you received as somewhat startling from your Chairman—is that intemperate language? Who uses it? That is not used by poor fanatics such as we are, but by Mr. James, of the Stonehouse, Devonport, and Ply-factory figures.

A comparative statement of shipments of deals, etc., to transatlantic ports from New Brunswick and Nova Scotia for the past three years, is as follows,—

It is full moon acts, and in case something might octored you in my next. cur at Dongola of importance, even before the troops were massed there, I struck my tent and sent on my camels and horse to this place, and followed Wady Halfa fiye hours after I had grief were built. These boats are de lery. These were preceded by detach-

Voyageurs' camp, and shared the hospiar a raging current, and a Canadian washtality of Colonel Burnaby and my ed overboard and drowned. This piece friend Dr. Neilson for the night.

M'Calmont, of the 7th Hussars.

I found the Canadians very indignant at certain statements published about them in the English papers, and specially some made by the correspondent of one London journal. In the Gemai the day before they arrived an interview yesterday with one of the letter of its correspondent, dated from there, they were described in anything but flattering terms. Each of them, according to this correspondent, was armed either with a revolver or rumbottle-or both. When taken to task for this statement this worthy replied presentative first showed to Mr. Tagg hearsay he had set afloat a story that the boat No. 566, and this was turns out to be utterly untrue respecting a body of men who had come from their far-cistant home to serve their Queen in this expedition. I am assured by Dr. Neilson and Colonel Kennedy that the eight or ten revolvers possessed by these 360 Canadians, when they landed at Alexandria, were soon after taken from them, and that nearly the whole of them are teetotallers. and that all the rum the others have had is the tot dealt out to them as a ration.

Is observation upon it:

"Sir, such a puality of wood I have never put into the stem of a boat even on the Thames, and I have had forty years' experience. Why 'it is like touchwood; look, it breaks like a piece of glass, and, what is more, all the nails have drawn out of it as clean as possible. There is no nature in it. It might have been exposed to the weather for years. It reminds me of a piece of wood I got from the timber of old London Bridge, which had been immersed for close upon a century—but with this exception, it is not in half such good condition.

Do you think the Nile boats ought to the tot dealt out to them as a ration.

The correspondent referred to is an officer, and in trying to prejudice people at home against the Canadians was only following the fashion of, I am sorry to say, too many of his conferes sorry to say, too many of his confreres here, who think they are all wise enough and skilled enough to run the enough and skilled enough to run the but I have heard about them. They were built from timber bent from the solid, " enough and skilled enough to run the expeditionary machine, boats, railways, and all, independent of extraneous aid.

Occasion has been taken from the unfitness of some seventy-five of these Canadians for the special work they have come to do to decry the whole. And I am assured by Lord Charles Bereaford, Colonel Grove, and more recently by Colonel Primrose and others that their experience in the management of the Nile boats in these rapids has been most valuable; and, as a still further proof of this, a general order has given the Canadians complete and responsible control of the boats in which they may be engaged, and which order makes them entirely independent of interference by officers whose incompetence in such matters has often been a source of danger to all concerned. I am afraid from what I learn secondhand that many of the disasters to the boats were constructed?—Well, sir, and consequently the moment a boat bumped the side would go in.

If you were building a boat for the navigation of such a river as the Thames, would you use for the stem is a river as the Thames, would you use for the stem in a river where there is nothing more to fear than the rollers of a pier. It was a sight worth seeing, however, was this column marching into Sarras. The Hussars, camel back, are as much at home as on their English steeds. The battery of six 7-pounders—wheels on one camel and gun on another—with their Aden camel drivers, easily recognized by their turbans; and the gallant Marines, with their spiked helmets. My caravan came with the gallant Marines, with their spiked helmets. My caravan came with the rear of the column, and encamped near a detachment of the Egyptian Mountain Battery—here, however, without their guns, and on transport duty. It was fortunate for me being under cover, for about nine o'clock we had a sand-storm, to the discomfort of the troops who were encamped in the open. Well, what is a sandstorm? We have something like it, but only in miniature, in some of our English towns on a windy day in dry weather. But here the weather is always dry, for since I left the ship at Ismailia, excepting a few drops of rain at Korosko, it has been perfectly dry. As a consequence everything was as dry as dust all SCHOONER "CLAYMORE." here was one blinding cloud of dust,
