TOLSTOI AND THOREAU

"As for doing good," Thoreau writes somewhere, "this is one of the professions that are full. Moreover, I have tried it fairly, and strange as it may seem, am satisfied that it does not agree with my constitution." But Thoreau was a churchly fellow who pursued self-improvement in the most downright fashion, who was deficient in all qualities of social intercourse, and, without, somewhat of a prig in his self-life apart from his fellows.

Both protested against the state and refused to recognize the government under which they lived. Thoreau seceded and was a polky unto himself, refusing to pay the poll-tax until the State of Massachusetts abolished slavery.

Thoreau separated himself from his neighbors in order to be happy, in much the same case as one who requires to take spium for this purpose, and he succeeded so far as to be happy. "I love my life to the core and rind," he wrote once, and at the end he regretted nothing.

In both cases we have minds, singularly powerful an independent, wedged to characters of strength and purity pursuing their eccentric ways. The great gift that bridges them is that the Russian believes in Christ's teaching, saying that happiness on earth is possible only when all men fulfill it, and that he alone is above others who humbles himself before others and makes himself the servant of all.

that Jesus did not leave us a rule that was proper and sufficient for this world because he failed to conceive rightly the nature of the rule that was laid down. The public have never been greatly affected by Thoreau, and he lacks the largeness and geniality of the world's heroes. But Leo N. Tolstoi has succeeded in giving men a bad conscience, that is, a disturbed conscience, and this is one of the best things that a man can have. There is today no sect of Tolstoians. He has no apostles or disciples. Many men of lesser note have founded sects and taught disciples. He did not. The only effect that we can expect from his life is a quickened conscience, a new sense of fealty to the universal brotherhood.

GOVERNMENT AND PROGRESS

That there are limitations even to revolutions, the experience of the United States has abundantly demonstrated. They sought to establish government of the people, for the people, and by the people, and have succeeded in establishing something else. They aimed at liberty, equality and fraternity; for liberty they have trusts; for equality, paupers and millionaires in abundance; for fraternity, a deepening class hatred.

With all our experience it is yet difficult to realize how large a part governments play in advancing or retarding a country. Many are familiar with the picture Arthur Young draws of "Sunny France" before the revolution, and with the edition of his book published and changed for existing conditions one hundred years after.

Later a traveller spent fifteen years going over every foot of ground described by Young before the revolution. The country had been turned into a garden. The toilers of a hundred years earlier were well-fed, happy farmers. Filthy villages had become splendid cities without a beggar.

There is no heresy like that which says that "things are now arranged in the best possible way." The German cities are leading the way in the matter of serving their citizens in a manner we cannot yet hope to rival for a time. We can only follow afar off. But we should follow.

The government of cities is one of the most conspicuous failures of the United States. In Canada cities have not grown large enough to make the failure here so striking. But the failure is here nevertheless. The things we have yet to do in the way of tenement house reform, sanitary regulations, temperance work, child labor law enforcement, are many and compelling.

THE NEED FOR A NEW DEAL Citizens who have read with care the testimony heard during the market investigation and who also examined the statements made by the city engineer at Thursday's meeting of the water and sewerage board, must begin to realize afresh the need for somewhat sweeping changes in regard to the market and the water department.

ready been revealed to prove that the original purpose for which the market was built has been pretty well lost sight of during the last few years. The city, through the aldermen and the officials whom they have been responsible, has mismanaged the market year after year, although the conditions existing there could not have escaped the knowledge of the officials or, indeed, of most of the aldermen themselves.

As for the water supply situation, what was heard at the meeting on Thursday must have given the public a somewhat startling impression regarding the confusion and mystery existing in connection with this very important branch of our civic business. The engineer's explanations of the fluctuation in the water pressure seem to have astonished some of the solid citizens who participated in the meeting.

Those who have followed the discussion of this whole question know that two things are absolutely necessary, and that both have been subject to inexcusable delay. The first of these is the repairing of the concrete conduit, through which the whole water supply passes, so that this weak link in the chain shall be made reasonably secure.

Such attention as has been given to the market and to the water department must have convinced the taxpayers that investigation of other civic departments should not be postponed longer. The condition of the streets has long constituted a public scandal. St. John is now a growing city and its people are confident that a period of rapid progress has been entered upon.

THE CULT OF SUCCESS We are seeing today in politics and finance and industry the man-who-can-do things elevated to a hero whose success overrides all other considerations. The elevation of success to a motive which justifies itself has the character of an experiment, but it has been tried for a sufficient length of time to enable us to estimate its effects.

The pursuit of gainful effort is as old as existence of man on earth. The Greeks and Romans regarded all labor for gain as degrading. The Greeks seem to have reached that opinion through a great esteem for intellectual pursuits, which they thought means of cultivation. The Romans borrowed the view from the Greeks. The Middle Ages in turn received their notion of labor from the Roman tradition.

But it would be very difficult to mention a time when there were no rich men, and still harder to mention a time when the power of wealth was not admired and envied. The production of wealth, the love of wealth, the power of wealth have run all through human history. The religion and the philosophies have had to compromise with the facts. Even in the fifteenth century the pursuit of wealth affected the interpretation of the traditional doctrines of labor, wealth, the highest good, and of virtue; so that men of high purpose and of honest hearts were carried away, while professing disregard of wealth and luxury.

THE EXPRESS COMPANIES The express companies in the United States are, according to Mayor Gaynor, piling up against themselves another count or two in the indictment to which, sooner or later, they will be required to answer. "At my earnest request," he says, "the men withdrew their demands for recognition of the union, and also agreed to leave the settlement of hours and wages until after they resumed work. I supposed, of course, that this would settle the strike, but when I presented it to the companies they refused, at the instance of one company or of one man, to accept it as a basis of settlement, but wanted an additional condition that they should be free to reject or discharge any one on the ground that he had joined the union. They rejected what is called the 'open shop'."

THE EXPRESS COMPANIES (Continued) The express companies own no lines of railways, no cars, nor have they any great vested interests requiring much capital in their business. They are middlemen between the common carriers and the people and to the ordinary observer they would seem to be as unnecessary as a fifth wheel on a coach. Apparently there is just as much room for a freight company between the people and the railways as an express company. The railways perform the service and the express companies collect, generally an outrageously high rate for it, paying a small percentage to the carrying companies, about forty per cent. It is a rule of law that a man shall not be twice vexed for the same cause, but there is no rule of commerce to prevent him from being mulcted two or three times for the same service.

world's problem in the past was poverty; the world's greatest problem in the future will be wealth. Today our means of satisfying the needs of the world are in excess of the needs, and this creates a new condition which profoundly influences character. The struggle to live has not been one of the most important factors in the education and development of the race, but a struggle to become rich is a very different thing. We have today the touch of Midas which enables us to transmute all things into gold, but it is bringing with it a long train of evils because we have no knowledge of that higher alchemy which would enable us to transmute it into good things for humanity.

THE INFLUENCE OF THIS CULT is felt today, like the pressure of the atmosphere, in all directions. It has affected the schools and education. The country had no longer carries in his mind's eye the great statesman or leader. He no longer believes that the true wealth of a country consists in the number of such mighty names her history garners for the inspiration of youth. He wants to be a great financier, captain of industry, or trust magnate. He is told, with wearying repetition, that the days of speakmaking are past, that now money is the only thing that talks. Too rarely he realizes that it is something to be just a plain, decent citizen, performing in quietness and content the duties of every day as they come to him.

RELIGION AND SCHOLARSHIP In a recent book of reminiscences there is a sketch of an old time country doctor that is wholly delightful. The writer of the book once asked him: "What in your judgment as a medical man is to be the final destination of the human soul?" "Brother Stevenson," replied Doctor John, "the solar system are one of which I have given very little reflection. Doctor John belonged to the 'epileptic' school of medicine, objected to giving written prescriptions, asserted in regard to a rival practitioner "my books will show a greater degree of mortality than what his'n will," and once with Mr. Stevenson acting as umpire won a bet of five dollars by spelling "sugar" as "s-h-o-o-g-e-r-r." In religion also there is the "epileptic" school which falls back upon the past and to whom tradition has become stereotyped and authoritative.

NOTE AND COMMENT Mr. Asquith's speech is the plain word of a man who will fight and who will abide the result with equanimity. The Board of Trade of Guelph, Ontario, has recommended to the city council that the affairs of that city be placed in the hands of a commission. "Does the De Paysters' new baby show his aristocratic origin?" "He sure does. He tries to put his teaching ring in his eye—thinks it's a monole."—Cleveland Leader.

UNCLE WALT THE POET PHILOSOPHER The north wind comes from its retreat among the wastes of ice and sleet; it comes from some far arctic coast, and hits us where we feel it most. And now the man who blithely wrought WINTER in summer, when the days were hot, has in his ladder COMING floor and jam, limburger cheese and pies and ham. His bins are running o'er with coal, and in his barn the horses roll in hay that came from Battle Creek; and he, himself, is fat and sleek. The north wind comes with wailing cry, and dark and sullen is the sky. And now the man who spent his days in idle and in foolish ways, who loafed about the weary town and called the nation's statesmen down, is asking hand-outs at the doors of those who wrought and did their chores. The idler's larder has no jam, no kraut or wienersurst or ham; the idler's wife is weeping sore; his children raise a hungry roar. Oh, let us heed the idler's boast and give him stuff to drink and eat, and keep his children from despair, and ease his poor wife's load of care, but when the summer comes again, and there's demand for working men, let's prod the idler from the street, and make him labor and repeat!

FAMOUS GEMS OF PROSE THERE WAS WAR IN HEAVEN By Phillips Brooks

FROM A SERMON BEFORE THE A. AND H. A. COMPANY OF BOSTON, JUNE 3, 1872. AMONG the mysterious visions of the book of Revelation there is one which describes a struggle in the world of spirits. "There was war in heaven; Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought Michael and his angels." I take the text because it suggests to my mind what I want to say today; but of course this is not the time or place to deal with any of the details of interpretation that have occupied the attention of expositors. It is the general picture which is suggestive.

SMASH-UP ON I. C. R. AT SACKVILLE RIVER NAVIGATION IS PRACTICALLY OVER

Moncton, N. B., Nov. 19.—(Special)—While coming into Sackville station this morning, the engine on No. 9 express, due in Moncton from Halifax at 3 o'clock, jumped the rails and crashed into the van of a special standing on a siding. No one was injured. The special van was partially demolished and the express locomotive pretty badly smashed. What caused the engine to leave the rails is unknown. The special on the siding was in charge of Conductor M. Wynn, of Moncton, with Driver Carey Freeze and Fireman Roy McAuley. The express was in charge of Conductor G. W. Hopper, with Driver Charles Atkinson and Charles Stewart of Moncton. Fortunately the express was slowing up for Sackville station at the time and the impact from the collision was not as great as otherwise it would have been. The locomotive and mail car on the express left the rails, the van was splintered and smashed up, while the front of the engine was considerably damaged. The track was torn up for a little distance and the main line was blocked. An auxiliary train was despatched to Sackville to clear the line. To prevent wooden rails or tubs from shanking when not in use, paint them over with glycerine.

RIVER NAVIGATION IS PRACTICALLY OVER

Saturday, Nov. 19. Navigation on the river practically came to a close Saturday. This is ten days earlier than last season. The season of 1910, however, has been longer than that of 1909 as last year it did not open till April 24, whereas the steamers Elaine and Majestic made their first trips this season on April 5. On Saturday the steamer Victoria made her last trip to Fredericton, exchanging cargoes with the Majestic at Gagetown. The Majestic was placed on the blocks for the winter Saturday morning and the Victoria will go on the blocks this morning. The Fredericton sailings will be continued for a short time by the Majestic together with the Elaine. During the season the Majestic made twenty-one trips to Fredericton and the Victoria seventy-six. To make cheese straws take two and a half cups of sifted cheese and half a cup of butter. Mix thoroughly, add a pinch of salt and sufficient flour to make a dough that will roll out thin. Cut in long, narrow strips and bake in a quick oven. Sew matting with raffia and prevent unslightly stitches of thread. Raffia is very strong, and may be bought to match almost any kind of matting.

FEW BEST FOR AID. POTS

Market Inquiry Closed Friday

Many Declare Investigation Should Have Been Deeper

Aid. Potts, After Mild Questions from Recorder, Says He Was Badly Treated by Other Aldermen - Committee to Make a Report Soon - Friday Night's Evidence.

Saturday, Nov. 19. The sub-committee of the common council, appointed to investigate conditions in the country market, completed the taking of evidence last night, and within a few days they will frame their report. Many of the spectators were greatly dissatisfied with the proceedings last evening and declared that more questions should have been put to Aid. Potts, who was on the stand. The recorder's cross-examination of the chairman of the ferry committee, compared with the grilling to which he subjected Director Wisely and Mr. Dunsen, was mild in the extreme. Aid. Potts was invited to make a statement of all he knew in connection with the various causes of trouble in the country market, and when he had apparently finished, he was urged to volunteer something further. At the conclusion of his evidence he scored the committee and the aldermen who had anything to do in bringing on the inquiry. He claimed he had more to show to his credit in the service of the public than any other alderman who had been elected within two years, and said he hoped yet to be satisfied as to the reasons this investigation had been brought on. He charged that he had been treated with discourtesy by his brother aldermen, and said that he would not have been a party to any similar transaction against any of the members of the council. There was quite a large attendance of spectators at any previous evening. Aid. Sprout and Yanvar were among the spectators. Director Wisely was not present, but the chairman said he had asked that he be summoned by telephone if his presence was required. Recorder Baxter conducted the examination.

Aid. Potts on Stand.

To Aid. Potts, the recorder said: In the reports of the evidence you gave previously as to the conversation you had with Mr. Wisely, you said that you did not believe the director knew what was meant by the word "privileges." Could you tell us what place there was? You mean the conversation four years ago? Yes. Well, in regard to that I might explain that previous to Mr. Akerley's coming, the city never exercised any authority over the stands outside of the country market properly so-called, and that the first year he went there was the first year he collected rent for the stands. Did you know of anyone else doing this? Yes, all the collectors did. My uncle, Mr. Akerley, Mr. Wilson, my son, and myself. Could you give us some specific instances of this? The collectors made their own arrangements with the holders of stalls, subject to the approval of the market clerk as to location. Well, give us some specific instances of this. Previous to the time he bought his stall from the city, I always made my own terms with Quinn. Did you give us some more? I made terms with Dwyer, John Duff, Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. Walsh, James Quinn and many others. To your knowledge, over how many years did this practice exist? Well, since 1888 the collectors had made arrangements about stands subject only to the approval of the clerk as to location. Where these arrangements in the nature of a rent and tolls or was the idea to limp the tolls? Well, it was like this, if you could make one price to cover both, it was done, if not the price was arranged to cover a portion of the fees. A case arose to show how the impression has arisen that we were selling rights: Babkirk's stand rent amounted to a dollar a week, and his tolls would not amount to more than fifty cents a week. This was a dollar and a half a week. That, I considered, was not more than the stand was worth. Were you making the occupant of the stall pay more than he would have had to pay under the list of authorized tolls? Well, if you could be dead sure of getting all your fees it would not be. Had this custom been in use many years before Mr. Akerley took the tolls? Yes, ever since the city gave over collecting the tolls the collectors used the same privilege. Not in consequence of what Mr. Akerley did? The city, to get more revenue out of the market, decided to rent some stands in the middle aisle which the collectors had always considered they had the right of disposing of. The city had not been charging rent for space before Mr. Akerley came in. Your former evidence leaves the impression that what you did was in consequence of an inquiry you had made as to Mr. Akerley's methods. How do you explain it? Well, Mr. Akerley had been charging for space that I had never charged for. What had you never done? I had never charged commission merchants previous to that time. So your former evidence to be considered as being wholly relative to commission stands? Yes.

NO REQUIEMS FOR TOLSTOI

St. Petersburg, Nov. 20.—The church in the persons of the metropolitan of St. Petersburg, Vladimir of Moscow and Flavian of Kiev, and Loukianoff, procurator of the Holy Synod, decided to let to leave things as they are with respect to Tolstoy. A plenary synod has not been called and telegraphic instructions were not permissible. But according to the rights of the Orthodox church is considered out of the question. The government intends, according to the announcement, to co-operate with the church in the enforcement of its decision, although both the emperor and Premier Stolypin have indicated their desire that the great Russian be buried with the Russian rite. Repeatedly advances have been made which would permit the lifting of the ban of excommunication put on Tolstoy in 1901. The Metropolitan Antonin, himself sent a telegram urging Tolstoy to make his peace with the church, and representatives of the Russian church were sent to Astopova for the purpose of bringing the count back into the fold. Messages from Optina, Shamardine and Astopova, however, stated that until the end Tolstoy was held a prisoner by the enemies of the church.

DORCHESTER COMPANY HOLDS ORGANIZATION MEETING. Dorchester, N. B., Nov. 17.—The first general meeting of the Gold Coin Plant Company, Ltd., for organization purposes and also to consider the report of the past season's operations, was held last evening. The following gentlemen were elected officers of the company: Hiram W. Palmer, Dorchester, president; W. Frank Tait, Dorchester, vice-president; A. C. Morton, Dorchester, secretary; treasurer and manager, and the remaining directors were John W. P. Ritchie, Halifax; C. Lionel Hanington, Dorchester; Dr. E. Kennedy, New Glasgow; W. E. H. Perrin, Dorchester.

COUNT TOLSTOI, GREAT RUSSIAN REFORMER, DEAD

COUNT LEO TOLSTOI

Astopova, Nov. 20.—Peasants all day long passed through the death chamber, hung with pine boughs, where Tolstoy lies. Many of them knelt beside the bier. The silence at times was broken by orthodox chants for the repose of the soul of the dead. Countess Tolstoy sat beside the body for hours, often kissing the face. "The light of the world is out," she said repeatedly. She left the hut only to attend to matters in the school chapel, expecting that a requiem would be sung. When informed that this was not permitted she fainted. Tolstoy left a written wish that he be buried without pomp, wreaths or rites under "poverty oak," on a hillside at Yasnaya Poliana where he played as a child and where the peasants were accustomed to congregate. The funeral will be held on Tuesday and the police have been mobilized to prevent public demonstrations.

Later in the day all the peasants in the district flocked here. None was excluded from the death chamber, through which there was a constant stream of visitors, including many school children. The chamber is decorated with pine branches. The body has been embalmed and will be transferred to Yasnaya Poliana. All visitors have been given permission to photograph the body if they wish. M. Gunzberg, the sculptor, will take a mask.

No Ceremony at Funeral. It is said that Tolstoy expressed a wish to be buried on the hill at Yasnaya Poliana where he played as a child, but that the funeral should be a simple one, without ceremonial or flowers. The family, however, has agreed not to interfere with any honors that the public may desire to pay.

Moscow, Nov. 20.—The police today forbade theatres from suspending their perky banners in honor of the great Russian.

It was a beautiful late summer day with everything still green and in blossom as I approached the vicinity alone in search of the Tolstoy house. I located it, but should have said it was not a Russian home for I observed that several copies of the London Times lay on the lawn. I noticed that a lady sat on the veranda reading and I presumed that she was the Countess Tolstoy. If so, I knew she was born German—the daughter of a German professor—and I addressed her in German. "No, madame, but are not his works introductions enough?" "But," she demurred, "if that were the case our garden would be crowded all the while. I am sorry; my husband is asleep now. From what country do you come?" "Hungary," I replied.

"Indeed, our secretary, Markovitsky, is Hungarian too. You may speak with him. My husband is very old and weak and does not like to speak with visitors." "At this she ushered me into the house, where I first met the novelist's eldest son, who is perhaps 45 years old. Learning that I was an author, he admitted that he also wrote, but added that he abandoned authorship because it seemed impossible to use the Tolstoy name, since his father had already made it famous. He said he preferred to take up art and sculpture and that he was studying with Rodin, the famous Parisian sculptor.

Great Apple Orchards. "M. Markovitsky, the secretary, interrupted at this moment with a familiar 'Go napo', which is our Hungarian 'Good day,' and said it seemed good to hear his native tongue again. 'I know you want to see Tolstoy,' he said, 'but he is asleep now, so let us walk through the garden.' 'He struck me through the forest of oaks which is the scene of the great storm in Anna Karenina and then through the great apple orchards where he presented me with a Tolstoy apple and remarked, 'Tolstoy has the finest and largest apple orchards in Russia. His wife sells the product of them.' 'At 6 o'clock our walk was interrupted by the dinner bell, at which Markovitsky

Sir Wilfrid Enters His Seventh Decade in Splendid Health and Spirits and Bids Fair To Spend Many More Years in Canada's Service

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier today entered his seventieth year. From His Majesty King George V., from Premier Botha of the new sister dominion of South Africa, from Premier Asquith, from Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, and from a host of friends in Canada and in Great Britain came messages of congratulation and good wishes for continued health and for many happy returns of the day. Sir Wilfrid, who has excelled the record of any previous premier of Canada in tenure of office, and in distinguished service for Canada and for the empire, spent the day quietly at home, where he received a shower of telegrams of congratulation from far and near, and where he received the good wishes of many personal friends in the capital.

King George Sends Congratulations.

In his majesty's personal cable congratulated him on his continued good health, and expressed the heartfelt wish that he might long be spared to continue his splendid record of service for Canada and in the cause of imperial unity.

In splendid health, and with an unflagging energy and willingness for public service, Sir Wilfrid enters his seventh decade with every prospect of far exceeding the scriptural allotted span. The stress of practically incessant attention to his public duties, for over fourteen years past, has apparently left no trace of weariness or flagging energy.

Today Sir Wilfrid in health, spirits and capacity for hard work, is perhaps the youngest member of his cabinet. And this despite the fact that his only holiday this year has been practically confined to a day or so spent at his old home in Arthabaska, after his return from his arduous western tour.

No citizen of the capital is more popular, irrespective of political predilections; no party leader ever had a more devoted or loyal following in parliament or in the country; no Canadian ever held a more outstanding position in imperial recognition and esteem.

soon after the Crimean war, he devoted himself entirely to literature. His War and Peace, a tale of the invasion of Russia by Napoleon in 1812, is regarded in Russia as being his masterpiece, although his Anna Karenina, which appeared in 1876, and The Cossacks, found greater favor abroad, where his Kreutzer Sonata translations of which were published in 1890, attracted wide attention.

Tolstoy also wrote much on education and published a number of short stories and reminiscences of childhood and youth, but of recent years, he had devoted himself to religious teachings. He made Return Not Evil, his last work, a comedy. The Kingdom of God is Within You, What is Art? The Christian Teaching, The Resurrection, The Slavery of Our Time, What is Religion, and many other works on the most varied subjects.

In 1901 Tolstoy was excommunicated by the holy synod and in October 1902 he deposited his memoirs and diaries with the curator of the Rumyantzeff Museum on the condition that they should not be published until ten years after his death, and in November of the same year, he legally made over his whole fortune, including his real and personal estate, to his wife and children.

In 1865 Tolstoy wrote a powerful vindication of the Doukhor sect, which during that year had suffered great persecutions for its religious professions. On the Russian side in the defence of Sebastopol against the British and French allied forces. He first made a reputation in literature by a series of vivid sketches written from Sebastopol and when he left the army,

Then I beat him over the head until he was quiet. Just as I was about to throw the body into the well, he groaned and I saw the light. This, according to the police is part of the signed confession of Benjamin Smith, 22 years old, a farmer now in the Muncie jail. It was the climax of a remarkable record of murder. Last night Smith, his hands smeared with blood, staggered into the home of Oscar Shaw and told a story of having been attacked by highwaymen.

DEATHS - Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 18-Myron Crippen, father of Dr. H. H. Crippen, condemned to die in London for the murder of his wife, Dr. Crippen's body in a rooming house. The only person at the aged man's bedside was the woman who managed the place. Hawley Crippen, a son of Dr. Crippen, was with his grandfather during the night before the death came. Dr. Crippen was the sole support of his aged father, and since the son's flight from London with Ethel Levene no remittance had come. Facing actual starvation, he was helped by a few persons whom he had come to know during his residence in Los Angeles. The rooming house kept him free, and a restaurant keeper, at whose place he had been accustomed to buy his meals, continued to supply them but charged nothing.

H. M. Davy Finds Bottom There Well Adapted for Proposed Development MUCH PROGRESS

Says He Sees No Reason Why Dredging There Cannot Be Done With Great Speed—An Ideal Spot for a Harbor—Leaves Wednesday.

The taking of the borings, the preliminary work to the extensive development at Courtesy Bay, was completed on Saturday. H. M. Davy, engineer of the public works department, Ottawa, who was in charge, made the announcement yesterday.

Firemen Worked Hard. The North End firemen worked valiantly and to them is due the credit of confining the fire to the northern part of the building.

Damage Heavy. The damage, it is believed, will amount to fully $5,000. The firm are insured through Vroom & Arnold, agents for the Connecticut Fire Insurance Company, for $7,000.

Has Done Much Work. Since coming here last May, considering the peculiar weather which St. John is subject to, and which Mr. Davy had to contend with, under his personal supervision a vast amount of work has been accomplished.

He expects to leave here for Ottawa Wednesday. During his stay in St. John he has made a large number of friends.

LLOYD-GEORGE RAPS PEERS UNMERCIFULLY (Continued from page 1.) The specific charges against Vaughan set forth in the complaint of Wm. B. Robinson, postal inspector, is that on June 4, 1910, he devised a scheme to defraud Walter N. Altman, of Topeka, Kas., and divers other persons.

TWO GET-RICH-QUICK CONCERNS RAIDED (Continued from page 1.) "As the work of investigation proceeded, it became apparent that the fraudulent use of the mails was far more extensive than had been realized by the department. A vast system of fraud, as far-reaching in its ramifications as the postal service itself, had been developed by unscrupulous men, through the grossest forms of misrepresentation, was stealing from the people millions of dollars annually.

DEBATE ON ADDRESS STARTS LIVELY (Continued from page 1.) The lords are prepared to forego their constitutional right to reject and amend money bills which are of a purely financial character, provided that the bill, moved against "tacking," and provided that any question arises as to whether a bill or any of the provisions thereof are of a purely financial character, that question shall be referred to a joint committee of both houses with the speaker of the house of commons as chairman, and who shall have a casting vote only. If the committee holds that the bill or the provisions in question are not of a financial character, they shall be dealt with forthwith at a joint sitting of the houses.

DEBATE ON ADDRESS STARTS LIVELY (Continued from page 1.) The Liberal content that the adoption of these resolutions would render future Liberal governments as powerless as ever against the house of lords. The present situation appears to be that the house of lords will discuss the resolutions, instead of passing the second reading of the veto bill.

DEBATE ON ADDRESS STARTS LIVELY (Continued from page 1.) The session of the house of lords today was devoted to the veto bill. The Earl of Crewe introduced the measure for a second reading. Lord Lansdowne, leader of the opposition, after criticizing the bill, moved an adjournment until Wednesday, at which time he promised to introduce resolutions which, he thought, might result in breaking the deadlock of the two houses. The adjournment was taken without division.
