AMONG THE SPORTSMEN. ANOTHER SKATING RINK PROJECT.

Carl Rungins and Ronald Cranford, German Artists, both of Brooklyn, N. Y., returned from the "North Pole" region where they had been for the past six weeks hunting with guide David Manderville. Both sportsmen met with fine success, the former securing a moose with antler spread of 63 1/2 inches—most perfectly balanced and pointed. The latter secured a fine head of 54 1/2 inches. In addition, they got one caribou and two deer each. Mr. Rungins has been here for eight successive years and reports that he never saw the moose so plentiful or so large as this year. He will return again next year, God willing.

THREW BOMB INTO BAR-ROOM

Ingersoll Alderman Who Was in Bar Lost Two Fingers From Effect of Explosive.

Ingersoll, Ont., Oct. 14. — The police of Ingersoll and district are investigating a peculiar affair which took place last night in the bar of the Kirwin House. Ald. James Buchanan was in the bar, together with several others, and was in the act of lighting a cigar, when, according to some, a bomb or some other explosive was thrown at him. Whatever it was, it exploded with terrific force, tearing away two fingers from Buchanan's right hand, and otherwise injuring him.

The man was unconscious for some time. The police are looking for a stranger who appeared at the door of the bar about the time the explosion took place.

MISSING LINK

OPENED MONDAY.

The long missing Link has been found and "the Hooper" made its first regular trip over the road Monday morning, leaving Blackville at 9.05. A resident of Renous who called at THE ADVOCATE office yesterday morning, said: If the people of Blackville and Renous do not remember Mr. Loggie in the next election, their memories must be short indeed. The advantages which the opening of this branch of railroad will give the people of Blackville, Renous and Newcastle will never be fully realized.

CHARGED WITH POISON- ING SON'S COWS

Belleville Farmer Arrested—Apples Plugged with Parisgreen Found in Pasture.

As a result of an investigation by Inspector Reburn, of Toronto, Lewis Leland, a farmer, 74 years old, has been committed for trial on a charge of poisoning a cow and a horse belonging to his son, John W. Leland. Apples plugged with Parisgreen were strewn on the ground in the pasture where John Leland's stock fed. Leland told Inspector Reburn he suspected his father.

A number of cattle were alleged to have been poisoned on the Chaplin Island Road some short time ago. Though no hidden mystery was made of the name of the culprit, no arrest was made. The man who will poison a neighbor's cow does it because he is too cowardly to murder the neighbor himself. If flogging is justifiable under any circumstance, it would certainly be justifiable here.

PLUNGED THROUGH WINDOW OF THE OCEAN LIMITED

James A. McCuish, Bound o Sydney, was Badly Injured.

TRURO, Oct. 18. — James A. McCuish, having a colonist ticket from St. John to Sydney, C. B., arose from a sound sleep in the car, he was travelling and made a sudden exit through an open window whilst the Ocean Limited was speeding at the rate of forty miles an hour into Truro to-night.

Conductor McClafferty reported the occurrence on arrival here, having concluded it was better to continue to the station and send relief, the high dive having been made about two and a-half miles distant.

When the searching party proceeded to the spot they found the man near the track beyond Onslow. He was brought to Truro and examined by Dr. Patton. No bones were broken, but it is probable that his skull is fractured. His forehead is badly bruised and discoloured, and the top of his head perforated, and bleeding in a dozen places from contact with the gravel of the road bed.

Letters bearing his name were in his pockets. So far as may be judged to-night he will recover, though he is unconscious and likely to remain so for many hours. McCuish came to St. John from Norridgewerk, Me., where he had been employed with the Berlin and Myers Company.

PECULIAR SHAPED MOOSE ANTLERS.

A Handsome Head With Thirty Points Shot at Big Bald Mountain.

A large number of citizens were attracted to the sample rooms of R. H. Gremley, Tuesday to see the most peculiar shaped moose antlers that has ever been exhibited here.

The antlers were very handsome and containing thirty points—fifteen on each—with very little variation. The web is very wide and on the back of the web are horns protruding which resemble those of a caribou. The antlers measured fifty inches. This animal was shot by Mr. H. T. Ambrose of New York, who was hunting in the Big Bald Mountain district with guide Arthur Pringle. Several who have viewed the head, claim it is a cross between a caribou and a moose, while others say it is a freak of nature. Guide Pringle says he never saw such peculiar shaped antlers but he thinks it is a freak of nature as he could see no caribou resemblance in the moose that carried these antlers. The head has been shipped to Enack Bros., Fredericton, to be mounted.

Wm. A. Bolan, of New York who was hunting at Big Bald Mountain with guide Pringle also brought out a good head Monday. It had a spread of forty-five inches with seventeen points.

H. M. Dickson, representing T. McAvity & Sons, St. John, was successful in shooting a moose in a very short time Tuesday afternoon. Leaving the Hotel Miramichi at one o'clock, accompanied by J. A. Polansky, Mr. Dickson drove to Whiteville, where they saw a moose swimming the river, coming from the opposite shore. As soon as the animal reached the shore it was shot. The carcass was shipped to St. John Wednesday.

INQUEST, NASH'S CREEK WRECK

Conductor of Special Says His Train was at Fault

The inquest into the deaths of John Morton, Robt. Whalen and Wm. Morrison, which resulted from the accident at Nash's Creek on the morning of Wednesday, Oct. 6th, was commenced at the Council Chamber this morning.

There was a large number of citizens railway employees and press representatives present.

Mr. Brady of the Railway Board of Management and Dist. Supt. E. Price were in attendance for the railway, while A. E. G. McKenzie appeared for the railway, J. L. Ralston of Amherst appeared for the Chronicle and Sun and Mrs. J. Morton, while Mr. Mott conducted the examination for the crown.

Dr. Ferguson of Dalhousie is the coroner holding the enquiry.

The following jury was chosen:—

The Jury

A. G. Adams, G. E. Asker, A. Diotte, D. E. Richards, P. O'Leary, Geo. G. McKenzie and Robt. L. Duncan. F. Henderson train despatcher at Newcastle, was the first witness examined.

Fred Henderson

I reside in Newcastle, am train despatcher there in employ of I. C. R. I am not chief despatcher. I remember the accident at Nash's Creek. Was the morning of 6th of October.

I was on duty that night.

I issued orders to No. 33 and special in charge of Con. J. H. Thompson and Driver Robt. Whalen.

Orders were delivered to No. 33 at Newcastle and to Thompson's special at Campbellton.

The orders for No. 33 read as follows: No. 33 will wait at Red Pine until 1.30 to cross 40; at Bathurst until 1.50 to cross Dickie at Jaquet River at 2.40 and run 30 minutes late Jaquet River to Campbellton. Cross 34 at New Mills.

The part of the order affecting each train would be served on each crew.

Order was delivered to Thompson and Whalen at Campbellton and Morton and McLellan at Newcastle.

It is customary to cross the trains at one station, when there was no operator at the station. There was no operator at New Mills.

This was the only order given to Thompson. He had no special order to cross at a given point. Had no order from me to cross at Nash's Creek.

Was advised of accident about five minutes after three.

Was notified by station master at Nash's Creek. There is no night man there. Was the day man who called me.

Ordered out auxiliary and crows from Campbellton, Newcastle and Moncton.

When I knew of accident I called Campbellton to get auxiliary and crew with doctors and go to wreck. The informed Newcastle round house to get their auxiliary out. Notified H. H. Bray at Campbellton and Mr. Brady at Moncton. Also notified Charlie to try and get some one at New Mills to inform No. 34 of wreck and many other incidentals. Also to Jaquet River to get a doctor and go to the wreck.

Wrecking crews went promptly, but cannot reach exact figures.

Mr. Price—This record will be produced.

Cross examined by Mr. Ralston.

The despatchers have been in Newcastle between three and four years. I have been at Newcastle nearly three years.

When I gave the men their orders I read it to them and they sign their names on the order.

Order for Thompson sent to Campbellton was repeated by Campbellton despatchers promptly.

No. 33 was 47 minutes late at Newcastle. I allowed for her to make up a little. Did not anticipate she would reach Red Pine at 1.30. She made Bathurst at 1.30. Made up nine minutes in 44 miles. Left Bathurst at exactly 2 o'clock. Left Bathurst 48 minutes late. Report from Jaquet River that she had passed at 2.38. Operator would have no reply of order to 33.

Charlie reported Thompson's special in at 2.11 and left 2.13.

Thought Thompson would cross 33 at New Mills. We figured that the special should make nineteen miles an hour, judging from past performances. The time he took to run from Campbellton to Charlie.

It would take less than 20 minutes to cover the distance from Charlie to New Mills.

At noon the examination of Henderson is still being continued.

thoroughly understands the real condition of the common people in each period and sees the difference between them and their predecessors, on the one hand, and between them and ourselves on the other. British history is admirably adapted for this kind of teaching. The instructor can trace the development of Britain's inhabitants up from the time of the Stone Age, when our ancestors were savages of the North American Indian type; through the barbarism immediately preceding the Roman occupation, to the introduction of Roman civilization, which was followed closely by Christianity. The tribal system and the grim Druidical religion of the Celts; the strength, discipline and superior refinement of their Italian conquerors; and the merciless warfare with the English invaders, form extremely fascinating topics of study. The distinguishing characteristics of the Anglo-Saxon immigrants—their fierce religion, their riotous habits, piratical disposition, trial by ordeal, and other absurd customs, all accompanied, however, by an intense love of liberty and well-developed democratic principles of government which, in spite of the then practice of slavery, and the subsequent enslavement of the masses under the feudal system, finally gave the common people the feeling that they are the natural equals of any class, afford the teacher a fine opportunity of inculcating in his pupils the love of freedom.

In considering the religious upheavals and persecutions, the pupil should be led to see that, through all the centuries of religious strife, of bloody wars waged in the name of the Prince of Peace, of inhuman betrayals and fiendish tortures, Religious Liberty, in the British and many other dominions, has slowly emerged from the depths of the ocean of popular discontent, and now men are allowed to worship

No trouble with Sunlight Soap.
Just follow the directions on the wrapper and Sunlight does the rest. Cost a little—does much—never injures hands or clothes.

The teacher should familiarize his pupils with the basic principals of, and the fundamental differences between, all the different political parties seeking the presidency. He should endeavor to do this without inflicting upon his charges his own personal views and predilections. He should place the facts within the pupils' reach, leaving them to draw their own conclusions.

Thus, by skillfully leading the student to discover what kind of people he sprang from, by what steps his ancestors slowly and painfully ascended to the high position of nationhood, and how other great peoples have dealt with similar problems, the teacher can develop in his pupil that quality of true patriotism which will lead him to the high goal of nationhood in bringing about the early realization in our national life of the inspirations of the generally despised and rejected prophets who have endeavored to lead the plain common people—the heart and the shew-bud, alas! not yet the dominating brain of the nation—out of existence, thus have ever yet been realized.

A SHORT-LIVED MYSTERY.

The letter George had stowed away in his breast-pocket told him that Aunt Lucy had not died after all. A fresh lease of life had been granted her; and as young Lucy, her niece and God child; and Tom Yelverton—who the deuce was Tom Yelverton?—were there to nurse her, Edith meant to leave for home in a day or two.

Mrs. Wyndham was buried; the blinds were up again, and the house looked as usual when the cab containing Mrs. Douglas and her husband were driven past on their way home.

Edith's eyes clouded over. How terrible it seems, George! and it might have been me!

But the tender eyes were clear again when she got out of the cab, and found Mary waiting in bear-like fashion.

Did you wonder what made mamma run away in such a hurry darling, without even waiting to tell you why she was going? Dorothy, how well you look, dear.

It was not until after dinner when they were lounging, more or less lazily, in easy chairs in the long summer twilight, that George said, laughing:

Now, Edith, Miss Archer and I are still in the dark as to how you became aware that Aunt Lucy was ill. A— you sure it was not all a hoax? You wanted some fun and so—

If you are so rude, George, I won't tell anything. I forgot to explain about the telegram.

Mrs. Wyndham had been here about ten minutes. We were sitting with the windows open, of course; and I saw a telegraph boy coming towards the house. An impossible thought flashed across my mind that you might have gone away—or have been called away—and had telegraphed to tell me so, I did not stop to think; I only remembered that we had quarrelled that morning (Dorothy, if you get married don't be cross the same time as your husband is—wait till he has come round before you express a desire to quarrel!) Well, I called to the boy through the window, and asked if he had anything for me. He gave me his objectionable yellow envelope, and I opened it, thinking only of you. But instead of it being from you it was from Lucy Pearson, saying Aunt Lucy was dying and wished to see me, I knew I could catch the express if only I was quick; so I scribbled that note for you, George.

I did not like to go without a word after being so cross, and there was no time to call at the office. Mrs. Wyndham promised to explain everything; and while I was putting on my things, she wrote out a telegraphic message for Lucy Pearson to let her know I was on my way. I gave it to the porter when he brought me my ticket, and he had it sent it off at once. Anything more you want to know?

Rather. Who was the tall, good-looking fellow who met you at Paddington? Hastings saw you together.

Did he? How puzzled you must have been! Did you think I had eloped, George? Edith laughed as she asked the question.

The other two blushed in the semi-darkness, but Douglas replied easily enough—so easily that his wife never guessed that he was telling the truth—

To be sure I did; eh, Miss Archer? Well, who was he?

Lucy's fiancé—Dr. Yelverton. She sent him to meet me, describing me so accurately that he knew me at once. He is very clever, and as far as human power goes, he certainly saved Aunt Lucy's life. Apart from his medical ability, he is a most amusing fellow—one of those men whom it is so easy and seems so natural to call by their christian names. I found myself calling him Tom in no time.

A double knock at the front door brought a look into Dorothy's face which would not have been allowed to appear had it been sufficiently light for anyone to see it. The knock was followed by the entrance of Arthur Hastings, barrister-at-law.

How cosy, I like chatting in the twilight; he said after specially greeting and being greeted by Mrs. Douglas—he had seen Dorothy and Mr. Douglas before that day.

He dropped into a low chair which was conveniently and pleasantly close to Dorothy's—closer than either Mr. or Mrs. Douglas noticed in the almost darkness.

I've come to say good-bye, Arthur announced. I must be off by the first train tomorrow.

Dorothy's face paled a little and stifled a sigh.

But you'll come again? said Mr. Douglas. What have you decided about the house?

I must either let or sell it; it is no use to me as it is. Come again? I should think so.

Mr. Douglas smiled, though there was no one to see it; he nudged his wife gently.

I shall not hurry about letting the house, continued Arthur Hastings. It will be pleasant to run down from Saturday till Monday during the summer months, and a house of one's own is better than going to an hotel.

Why not come to us instead of going to that enormous house all by yourself? We have a spare room which will always be at your disposal.

Yes, do, Mr. Hastings; we shall be so pleased to have you! chimed in Edith. What with her husband's nudge and a something in his manner, she began to see daylight, as he afterwards expressed it.

Arthur gratefully accepted the invitation, wondering if Miss Archer was pleased or otherwise.

As the servant entered at last with coffee, and prepared to light the gas, Mr. Hastings deliberately laid one hand on Dorothy's two, which were clasped and resting on her black dress. She drew them away, as was quite proper. At that moment Sarah applied a taper to one gas burner; the light flamed up brightly and before it was lowered, the barrister's heart was beating with joy; for he had learned from Dorothy's quivering lips and lowered eyes all he dared hope for just yet.

CHAPTER V.

Autumn had laid its colors on the country with lavish hand, though the weather was still summer-like in its heat; but the days were getting shorter and shorter, and still Dorothy was not won.

Mr. Douglas had turned into a matchmaker. She was anxious to do all in her power to forward Arthur's love-making.

It was impossible not to see how down-hearted he was getting at Dorothy's persistent avoidance of him. She took care to have Mary by her side always when he was there.

Mrs. Douglas was alternately amused and vexed, and determined that the next time he came he should have what she called fair play.

Accordingly when one Saturday a letter arrived saying that Hastings hoped to be with them that day, Mrs. Douglas, contrary to custom, said nothing about it to Dorothy.

After lunch the scheming creature told Mary to put on her things. I am going to call at the Pollards, and I promised Beatrice I would bring you next time I called.

Mary went upstairs gleefully, and Edith continued to Dorothy: What are you going to do with yourself?

Nothing. I feel lazy and it is too hot for walking. I shall just take a book into the garden and stay there until you come back.

Capital, thought Mrs. Douglas. Before leaving the house she instructed Sarah that if Mr. Hastings arrived before she returned, he was to be asked if he would go into the garden as Miss Archer was there.

Dorothy took possession of her favorite seat, out of sight of the house but close to the road, where she could watch the passers-by without being very noticeable herself.

She read for a time, then the book was laid on her lap and she fell a-dreaming.

By and by the drowsy hum of a bee and the quiet twitter of the birds made her sleepy. Without thinking much about it one way or the other, she gradually went to sleep.

One or two persons passed down the road but did not see her, partially hid as she was by some bushes. Then a man came along to whom Mr. Douglas's house was so familiar a sight that he never passed even a corner of the garden without looking in. This was the late Mrs. Wyndham's butler and coachman, Walters, who was now coachman to Dr. Short; but the doctor was taking a holiday and Walters had been left in charge of the house, so his time was his own. As he looked over that low garden wall he caught sight of the top of Dorothy's pretty head resting against it. Then he came a little closer and saw that she was asleep. Walters was capable of recognizing a charming picture when he saw one, and he thought the sleeping girl looked particularly charming.

He felt greatly interested in her because, of course, Mr. Hastings' attentions and palpable intentions were the talk of the town; and Walters wondered whether there would be a chance of his returning to his old situation (so much easier than the present one) if Miss Archer became Mrs. Hastings, and if Mr. Hastings should take it into his head to retire, and to reside in the house left him by his late aunt.

One of Dorothy's hands was under her book, the other was on top of it, and on the second finger of that hand were two handsome rings Mr. Douglas had given her. Walters had told himself that he would never be tempted again, but he was certainly cursed with an unholily longing after what did not belong to him, for he began to think how easy it would be to take those rings from Miss Archer's fingers without waking her.

They were nearly gone! Five seconds more and Dorothy's finger would have been ringless, but suddenly in her sleep, she doubled her fingers into her pink palm, and the hand became a fist—a most difficult thing to get rings off of without waking the fist's owner.

Dash it, muttered Walters. But then he broke out into a cold perspiration, for he heard footsteps and had only time to resume his walk before he almost ran into the arms of P. C. Lloyd, who was coming round the corner.

They spoke to one another concerning the weather, and each went his way—Walters telling himself that that was another escape, and no mistake. If she hadn't clenched her fist I would have taken the rings and Lloyd would have caught me in the very act. I can't expect to escape always; I shall get into trouble some day, and all because I've got an attack of wanting other people's things. It is as bad as measles; I shouldn't want measles, and I don't want this. I only hope it will not get me into a predicament of any sort.

P. C. Lloyd, being accustomed to notice everything, was not likely to pass without seeing the sleeping beauty.

She does look pretty! He thought without giving a thought to her rings which were again visible. But it ain't hardly the place for her to go to sleep in. An ill-mannered chap might annoy her if so be he passed along. I believe I'll take the liberty of waking her.

Hesitating before taking that liberty, the observant constable caught sight through the trees, of a gentleman hurrying across the lawn to the corner where Dorothy had established herself.

Mr. Hastings! I needn't wake her, and that's a fact. I wonder how she'll wake her? I remember once, before we were married, I caught Ruth asleep, and—P. C.

came on a fine morning day.

the Arthur Hastings came through the trees and found the lovely sleeping soundly, with her hand unfriendly wall for a pillow.

What a shame! How I should like to have that little head in my hand! But I dare not do it; I am afraid of her.

So he stood and looked at her; he looked fixedly that she soon started and opened her eyes.

I don't disturb you? he said with polite un-verity, as he turned away and held out his hand.

I actually asked! she exclaimed, flushing with annoyance and indignation. How I should like to see you out in this garden. Will you move to that seat under the tree?

She followed his suggestion to his great satisfaction, for he knew that on the seat under the trees they would be out of sight of everybody.

I did not know you were coming today, Mr. Hastings, said Dorothy, anxious that he should not think she had stayed at home in order to see him on his arrival.

Not I wrote to Mrs. Douglas telling her I hoped to get away today. She never told me, Dorothy felt puzzled. It was most unlike Edith not to have told her he was coming.

You are determined I shall know you did not expect me, Miss Archer. I suppose you wish me to understand that had you known I was coming you would have taken care not to have been alone. Is that it?

What makes you think so? Because it would be of a piece with your treatment of me; though why you should dislike me so, I tried to free herself again, but un-

NEWCASTLE, N.B., OCTOBER 20th, 1909

GUILTY OF LIBEL.

The Chatham Commercial in a long winded story of far more words than weight tells the love troubles of some half witted traveller. In doing so the writer of the article goes a long way out of his course to insult the people of Newcastle. The article closes thus: "Did he commit suicide? No, but he accomplished its equivalent. He repaired to Newcastle."

We are quite surprised that the editor of the Commercial would allow such an article to appear in his paper. If it got there without his knowledge or consent, he should retract it. If he doesn't then we take it that he is himself guilty and should be treated by our citizens in the manner he deserves.

MISTAKEN ECONOMY.

Since the Commission took over the working of the I. R. C. radical changes have been made, but whether they are changes for the better or the worse remains to be seen. Night operators by the score have been laid off along the line and trains are left to grope their way. The result is that passage becomes dangerous if not deadly. So it proved at Nash's Creek. It's all very well to fix the blame for this one accident; it will be much better if some method of supervision is devised whereby accidents will be prevented. When a boiler explodes or a wheel drops off, or a switch is misplaced, or another train happens to be sitting on the main line just around a curve, when the Maritime Express comes along at the rate of a mile a minute, the result is usually so sudden and complete that investigation can do little for the victims and their families beyond recovering the remains.

GEORGIAN BAY CANAL.

"To prevent any misconception of the attitude of the Canadian Government, it may be well to state that because Sir, Wilfrid Laurier and his Cabinet do not see their way "at present" to come to the assistance of this important canal project, it does not follow that they are opposed to its construction, or unappreciative of its merits. On the contrary, we have the highest authority for stating that the Government have not a word to say against the scheme, and that they are really favourably impressed with it. For a year or so trade in the Dominion has suffered from a contraction which has caused a contraction in revenue, and compelled the Government to put on the brake and postpone the consideration of meritorious proposals, to which, under normal conditions they would be prepared to afford assistance. In a year or so, however, the Ottawa Government will be in a position to continue their policy of aiding railways and other means of transportation in the liberal spirit which has always been extended by Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Cabinet towards legitimate undertakings of this kind." Canada, London, England. Canada is not under the burdens of militarism that affected Europe. Her chief item of expenditure is in creating routes for her commerce. She has to complete her railway system and build the Georgian Bay Canal." Sir Wilfrid Laurier at Imperial Conference, 1907.

"If the Georgian Bay Canal is in your hearts, it is just as much a scheme of my heart. It is not a scheme for North Bay alone. It interests all who inhabit the banks of the St. Lawrence. It interests the men who till the soil and raise the wheat in the western provinces. They need the shortest, best and cheapest route to the market. And it goes without saying that the shortest, best and cheapest route is the Georgian Bay Canal.

If Providence spares me, and the Canadian people leave me and my friends at the head of affairs it will be our duty to take up the Georgian Bay Canal as soon as the resources of the country permit us." Sir Wilfrid Laurier at North Bay 1908.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux as representative of the Canadian Government at the Champlain Tercentenary at Plattsburg, N. Y., stated when referring to Champlain, "Some day not far distant the Canadian Government will build the Georgian Bay Canal. Its course will follow practically the same route as that surveyed by Champlain three centuries ago, Montreal Standard, 17th July, 1909.

And Will Show Peary Was all Wrong
BUFFALO, Oct. 13.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook arrived here this morning from Cleveland in the midst of a heavy snow storm. He went directly to the Hotel. "I can only say that the actual living human witnesses of my journey to the Pole will themselves be able to disprove the distorted declarations put into their minds in the statement issued by Commander Peary said Dr. Cook this morning. "There could not be better testimony than that given by the men themselves before an unbiased body of inquirers. Commander Peary evidently regards their evidence as of the most profound importance, and so do I. It seems to me that he might have brought them along with him if he was confident that they would corroborate his story. He, however, chose not to. I will, however, send for them and place them at the disposal of any scientific or other body that may desire to examine them with the aid of any competent interpreter."

Curse You Sleep

Confesses To Murder

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Edward William Bedford, an American, was charged yesterday in the Bow street police court on his own confession with the murder of Ethel Kinrade at Hamilton, Ont., and remanded for a week. Bedford's lengthy confession contains a wealth of circumstantial detail. He said that as far as he could remember the affair occurred in the summer of last year. The man whom he met in Toronto was about thirty three or thirty four, about five feet seven inches tall, of medium build, had ginger hair and heavy drooping moustache of fair hair.

The stranger said, "If you can keep all the secrets that you can learn during the next few days I will pay you well." Bedford replied, "I am willing to do anything if there is money in it." He then gave an account of the negotiations between the two, the stranger saying that he wanted to kill Miss Kinrade for jilting him. He produced two revolvers. Bedford said, "Then you really mean to kill this girl?" The stranger replied, "No, I want you; that is the reason why I pay you."

He then gave Bedford a lot of $5 and $10 bills and told him to buy a disguise. He promised to give Bedford money to keep him out of the road and $500 besides as soon as the murder was accomplished. Bedford was then given a ginger wig and a cap, and was told to make himself look as much like a tramp as possible. He was instructed to meet the stranger in Henniker street "or something like that," next morning. Here the stranger pointed out a corner house with a balcony and told Bedford to go there about 2.30 as only the two girls would be there, and then to demand money. When Bedford went to the house he saw the man about twelve houses away, but he discovered he subsequently came to the door of the house. Bedford had the door opened for him and a dark girl of about 24. She was frightened when he forced admittance and when another girl came down stairs he emptied his revolver at her.

He fired five shots and then she fell. He ran through the house and escaped through a window at the back of the house. He caught a train about five o'clock for Toronto and stayed for the night in a cheap boarding house. He met the man the next afternoon, who told him that he had killed the right girl and gave him a ticket for Montreal. Here he received the money and a ticket for England by the Laurentine under the name of Christopher. "The man never told me his name," added Bedford, "and I have no idea how he can be found."

The man, however, gave him letters of introduction to two persons, one in Liverpool and one in London, but he did not care to give their names although he had called on both.

CALGARY, Alb. Oct. 13.—"Thank God for that, old man, you have brought us the best news we have had for many a long day, shake," said Mr. Wright, husband of Florence Kinrade, to a reporter, when shown the dispatch that a man named Bedford, in London, Eng. had confessed to the murder of Ethel Kinrade. This was the first intimation he had had of the confession and it almost unnerved him.

FIVE MINUTE SERMON

For Readers of The Advocate.

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with thy whole heart and with thy whole soul and with thy whole mind. This is the greatest and the first commandment and the second is like to this: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. St. Matt. XXII, 35-46. In these words the glorious apostle, St. Matthew, records the answer given by our Divine Lord to the Pharisees who had asked Him, tempting him, "Master, which is the greatest commandment in the law?"

These words spoken nearly nineteen centuries ago, still ring in our ears, as the pastor exhorts his people to "honor God and love thy neighbor."

But the practical side of every day life reminds us that the Pharisees of old were no greater offenders in the lack of love of their neighbor than the modern Pharisees—the pagan Christians of the present day. We find the Pharisees of the old law assembled in the synagogue, with looks of sincerity and truth and hearts of stone, proclaiming their love for God and spurning their neighbor. And the preachings and teachings of nineteen hundred years have failed to wipe out the false worship of ancient times, and today in our midst we behold the modern Pharisees, shorn, perhaps of the flowing robes of oriental splendor, but adorned with taperings none the less fantastic, and worshipping beneath hats which are temples in themselves, crying out their love for God and refusing a seat in the pew to the neighbor. Look at them as they enter the church—those paragons of beauty—see the looks of sanctity on their faces—the devil bubbling over in their hearts. Watch them brush up the aisle, pulling their costly (?) robes to one side lest they brush against the coarser raiment of some fellow creature. Watch them bow down in adoration of God and see the flames of hell reflected in their eyes as a neighbor takes a seat beside them. Hear them pray, their voices rising far above all the rest of the congregation. Then listen to their tongues as they emerge from the church, heaping the vilest epithets against the neighbor who dared to take a seat beside them. And yet we call them Christians. We call them followers of Christ who commanded: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Here is a typical example of what we might call pagan christianity. Here indeed, is an example of christian charity well worth recording in the records of hell. And yet it is not a vision—here is a picture, but a fact of weekly occurrence in our midst.

GAMBLING CAUSES RAILROAD WRECKS

Surgeons in Convention also Attribute Accidents to Jealousy and Worry by Drivers—Color Blindness a Factor

(New York Herald)

Brooding caused by jealousy on the part of an engine driver, worry by another because he had gambled away his wages and color blindness on the part of others which made them unable to distinguish signals have been some of the causes of railway accidents, according to statements made Tuesday at the eighteenth annual meeting of the New York and New England Association of Railway Surgeons, held in the New York Academy of Medicine in West Forty-third street.

Dr. R. W. Corwin, division surgeon of the Missouri Pacific, cited the case of the man who backed his train into an excursion train while he was thinking of the money he had lost at cards. He denied that railroad companies overworked their men by intention. "Sometimes drink is mistaken for brain fog and overwork," he added, "and the man who uses his hours of recreation for gambling, drinking and smoking to excess is not fit for work. I am told that the greatest trouble the manager of a large railway had was to provide counter attraction to the saloons and gambling halls to which the men went when off duty."

Continuing, Dr. Corwin said the public has a right to demand that railway employees be given sufficient rest to insure greater efficiency and safety to the travelling public, and that it might become necessary to re-organize the medical departments of the railways in order to keep the men in good physical condition and to provide them with a good environment.

Discussing signals, Dr. C. A. Pease, of Burlington, Vt. read a paper by Prof. George M. Stratton, of the University of California, saying the only signals that can now be relied upon when the weather is clear are red and green, but fog often renders these useless. According to Prof. Stratton, notwithstanding tests for the color sense many employees of railroads now in service have defective eyesight. "One hundred persons may be killed in an accident," he continued, "because of failure of the color sense on the part of the engine driver. For this reason the examinations of all employees should be conducted meticulously."

He suggested that the system of signalling by night lamps, as used in the United States navy, and the use of the illuminated arm signals in connection with the semaphore plan, be followed as closely as possible.

NO CLUE TO THE LIVERION MURDER CASE

PROVIDENCE, R. I. Oct. 13.—Chief Inspector Constant S. Horton said that the report that the local authorities expected to find an important clue in the suit case murder mystery here was false. He said he did not think that the murder was committed in this city as all the girls reported missing from here have been located with the exception of one and she did not go away until Monday. He said that he had received no formal notice of the murder from the Thirteen authorities and that he had detailed no man to work on the case here.

WHY SUFFER FROM PILES? A SHORT-LIVED MYSTERY.

Nature's Remedy is Zam-Buk.

Impressive Cures of Women Sufferers.

Wherever there is suffering from piles Zam-Buk should be applied. There are lots of reasons for this, but one of the best is that in practically all cases of piles where the use of Zam-Buk is persevered with, complete cure—not merely relief—is the result.

Mrs. Wm. Hughes, of 253 Hochelaga Street, Hochelaga, Montreal says:—"I suffered from bad itching, and protruding piles for years. Sometimes they were so bad that I could hardly bear to move about. The inflammation, the burning smarting pain, the itching, the aching, the overpowering feelings of dullness and dark despair which this ailment brings, the shooting spasms of agony—all were so terrible that only sufferers from this awful ailment can understand."

Bad as this case was, Zam-Buk triumphed, and Mrs. Hughes suffers no longer. It only needed a little perseverance with Zam-Buk, and in the end complete cure resulted.

Mrs. E. Boxall, of Scott Street, St. Thomas says:—"For months without cessation I endured great pain from bleeding piles. For as many months I tried everything which I thought would give me ease, but in the end, dispirited and still suffering, I gave in."

Then it was she heard of Zam-Buk, and she adds:—"Although I feared Zam-Buk would be like the ordinary remedies—useless—I am glad it was not. It soon proved itself to be very different. It rapidly gave me relief, and after a time cured me completely. I would like to let all sufferers from piles know what a grand thing Zam-Buk is."

Mr. F. Astridge, 3 St. Paul Street, St. Catherine's, says:—"For five years I suffered untold agony from piles. At times the pain was so bad I could have screamed aloud. On a friend's advice I tried a box of Zam-Buk. It gave me considerable ease, and I persevered with the treatment until I was cured. I wish I could convince every sufferer from piles of the value of this great herbal balm."

So one could go on quoting case after case, and it is by working such cures that Zam-Buk has earned for itself its great reputation.

Now if you suffer from this terribly painful ailment just be guided by the foregoing cases.

For internal piles melt a little Zam-Buk and thoroughly soak a wad, made of clean but old linen. Then apply to the part. If the piles are external, application of Zam-Buk is still more simple. Do it upon retiring. Next morning you will be well satisfied.

Zam-Buk is a cure also for cold-sores, and chapped cracked hands, ulcers, festering sores, blood-poisoning, eczema, bad leg, ringworm, scalp sores, burns, scalds, and all skin injuries.

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c. a box, or may be obtained post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price; 3 boxes for $1.25. You are warned, however, against cheap and dangerous imitations sometimes offered as being "just as good."

Bless the man! said Edith, laughing. Do you think no one ever proposed to her before? There have been three to my certain knowledge since she came to us—Colonel Broughton.

Mrs. Douglas implored Dorothy. No need to mention names. I did not care for either of them, Arthur, so I said no as pleasantly as I could.

You may think yourself fortunate to get her, Mr. Hastings. She is a mighty particular young person.

I don't see that! protested the young person, warmly. I could never really love but one man, and that one happens to be Arthur. I had not met him then—so I could not like him. But then I could not like the others either; so I had to send them away.

And one of them was so rich and had such lovely estates, murmured Edith, who was determined Arthur Hastings should appreciate the prize he had won.

What are riches compared with love? asked Dorothy, so bewitchingly that Arthur longed to cover her fair face with kisses.

Everyone in the house was glad to hear of the engagement, and the news soon spread.

Next day after church P. C. Lloyd stood in the churchyard with his wife—now well and strong—-anxious to offer their respectful congratulations.

I can't say I was surprised to hear of it, sir. I passed along the road yesterday and saw you, Miss, asleep; and looking extra sweet; if you'll excuse my saying so. And you, sir, were walking down the lawn towards her; and I couldn't help thinking of what might happen, so to speak.

Dorothy laughed as much as she blushed—she and her lover were equally amused.

I will never go to sleep in the garden again! she declared as she walked homeward.

Not unless I am there to wake you; he replied, wickedly.

Arthur, the idea! But it was a happy thought—to find you there when I thought you were miles away.

Then you had been thinking of me, Dorothy?

I was always thinking of you, and shall always, as long as I live. Then I shall be a happy man, my dearest.

Don't be too sure of that! I can be such a plague at times.

Can you? I like being plagued. I'm a regular torment, she continued.

I like being tormented, was his placid reply.

And I am bad-tempered and selfish and altogether horrid at times; I am really, Arthur.

Anything else?

Isn't that bad enough?

Perhaps so, thanks for warning me. But you may be all you say, and ever so much more, my Dorothy, so long as you are yourself.

Then I give up in despair, Arthur. If I cannot frighten you, I fear after all, I shall only be able to make you very happy.

That you have done already, darling, and cannot help doing, so long as you continue to love me.

They were rather silent after that, though both thought the walk from the church to the Douglas house shorter than they had ever known it before. It was a happy day, full of a joy that neither would ever forget. Dorothy was so thoroughly contented that she scarcely missed her lover when he left for town the next morning. She went singing about the house after the morning's lessons were over.

A pretty sort of sweetheart you are! exclaimed Mr. Douglas, when she appeared at luncheon bright and smiling. When Edith and I were engaged, she always cried her eyes out if I had to go away from her for a few days.

Don't exaggerate, George! said Dorothy, he had wished me goodbye for three months, which seemed a dreadfully long time to look forward to, especially as he would be on the water most of the time, and I was always timid about travelling by sea. Well, he had forgotten something, and he came rushing back for it when I thought he was half-way to the station. I must confess I was doing what he would now call a little weep, though he chose to imagine then that I was shedding torrents of tears at parting from him. He nearly lost his train, I remember, in his endeavors to comfort me. You see my unbounded grief was gratifying to his vanity,—eh, George?

But George did not deign a reply, and Dorothy said half-apologetically:

Arthur will be down again on Saturday. I don't think he would wish me to mope just because he is not here. I am sure I should make myself very unpleasant if I took to that sort of thing.

Most unpleasant my dear child, said Edith, laughing, but that sort of thing is not in your line, Dorothy. I think nature intended you for a sunbeam. Arthur Hastings is a very lucky man, and he will find it out when he has been married long enough for the first glaucoma to wear off.

I hope he will think so, said Dorothy wistfully; I want to make him very happy.

And what are we to do without you? inquired Mr. Douglas, with genuine anxiety. We shall never get a second Dorothy Archer. I wish to goodness Hastings had not turned up for another eight or ten years; and the worst of it is that he won't consent to a long engagement, I feel certain of that.

Mr. Douglas was right. When Arthur came the following Saturday he spent the afternoon in talking Dorothy into marrying him without delay.

But I think I ought to consider Mr. and Mrs. Douglas a little, Arthur; they have been exceedingly kind to me, and I don't like leaving them in a hurry. Such was Dorothy's final objection, after making one or two feeble protests on her own account, which Hastings had successfully pooh-poohed.

How many governesses do they require to educate that small Mary pray? he inquired. I mean how many at a time?

One, of course; what a question to ask.

Well, then, if I get another governess to take your place, surely Mary's parents cannot object to parting with you. Besides, I don't like your working. I am very well off; I can afford to keep my wife in something more than comfort if she chooses. That being the case, you cannot wonder, Dorothy, that I hate the thought of you working for other people—and being paid for it.

I shall go on working until I am married, said Dorothy, firmly.

Then I shall advertise at once for an estimable young lady who will undertake, etc. So, order your wedding gown without delay my darling.

But, Arthur—

I have spoken! he replied, decisively, but very tenderly, as he bent his head over hers, kiss me Dorothy; and say you will be a good girl, and do as I ask, or I shall think you do not love me.

She smiled at that.

If I promise to do as you wish, Arthur, will you promise me not to say another word about it until my successor is engaged—chosen by Mr. and Mrs. Douglas, mind, not by you, sir!

I promise. You will wear white silk, Dorothy!

If you particularly wish it; but I had intended being married in my travelling dress; it would be much more economical.

Economy be—abolished! exclaimed Arthur. Please remember that Mrs. Arthur Hastings will have no cause to practice economy in any respect.

But I am not Mrs. Arthur Hastings yet. There's many a slip you know—

There'll be none in this case, he said, confidently. In less than three months from now you will be as much Mrs. Arthur Hastings as church and law can make you. You must lose no time in getting that white silk; you look perfect in white.

Do I? Then I suppose I must do as I'm told; with a resigned sigh.

I don't believe you half like the thought of being married! said Hastings, half in fun, and half in earnest.

A quick glance from Dorothy's eyes showed her that he was partly in earnest. She chose deeds rather than words to answer him with; and when her soft kisses caressed his cheek, Arthur, like a wise man, never doubted her again.

THE END.

HEBREW POET'S

ODD WILL.

Imber: New York Genius and Hebrew Author of Great Repute Died in New York Last Week.

Imber, who was so poor that he never maintained a permanent home, left a will which gives a good idea of the man. It was written several years ago in Hebrew prose and in English, runs as follows:

"To the rabbis I leave what I don't know; it will help them to a longer life. To my enemies I leave my rheumatism. Between the Republican and Democratic parties I divide the boodle they have not yet touched. To the Jewish editors I leave my broken pen so that they can write slowly and avoid mistakes. As an executor there shall be appointed a man who knows Barnum's philosophy through and through. Written on my deathbed. Witness, Mr. Pluto, of the Underground, and his Famulus, the Doctors. As an afterthought I leave to my publishers the last bill unpaid by me. They can frame it and keep it in an annulet to ward away that class of authors."

NOT PLAYING FAIR

Great Britain proposes spending nine hundred million dollars to assist Irish tenants to purchase their holdings from the landlords. This great amount of money is not an expenditure; it is an investment and it will be a good investment if it meets its object, the betterment of the condition of Ireland. Of course, provision is made for the repayment of the advances, and in the long run the government will be financially recouped. This suggests the unfairness of the treatment by the Toronto News of the Dominion expenditures. In spirit, if not in so many words, it treats expenditure on the government section of the Grand Trunk Pacific as an investment expenditure and an element in the deficit of fifty million dollars it absurdly claims for next year. Like the Imperial advances to Irish tenants the expenditures upon the Grand Trunk Pacific are an investment; the advances will be repaid and as in the case of Ireland, the results will form a grand justification for the action of the government. It would be quite a luxury to have the News and other Conservative journals discuss political questions fairly.

New asparagus is made of bleached gutta-percha this year, same as ever.

Now the claim is made that a man may live forever if he behaves. There are some who would not think living worth while under such conditions.

Ray Lamphere, said to be money-lose, is yet able to hire the best lawyers. How do they know he hasn't any money? Well, Mrs. Guinness did not murder him. Isn't that proof enough?

The house fly is now condemned as one of man's greatest enemies. But it need not despair. New discoveries will probably elevate it to the position of man's indispensable friend before the end of another decade.

Each of our big railway companies has given orders for the construction of two million dollars worth of rolling stock at Montreal shops this winter. That ought to help some towards tiding the workers of that city over the winter.

Mr. Rockefeller rises to remark that he belongs to the brotherhood of man, doubtless meaning thereby that no human being will appeal to his concern for oil in vain, always provided the price is forthcoming. The independent refiners, of course, are beyond the pale. But John D. dearly loves the consumer.

PROPER USE OF WEALTH

Mr. John D. Rockefeller, one of the richest men in the world, offers suggestions, as he has a perfect right to do, to other men of large wealth regarding the use of their riches. Mr. Rockefeller poses as a great philanthropist, a patron of the higher education which he lacks in himself because of his life-long devotion to the accumulation of money. His great contributions have been made for the advancement of such education. The methods by which he makes this distribution may be criticised, but the purpose is undoubtedly fine. It's in some sort of remorseful restitution to the great lie of a part of the plunder which he has been enabled to wrest from the community.

So far as the purpose is concerned it does not matter that Mr. Rockefeller stands by judgement of court to be debtor in $29,240,000 to the people from whom he has extracted his great wealth by unlawful means. If in his chastened soul he is conscious of an obligation exceeding the penalty against which his lawyers are fighting, so much to the credit of his spiritual sensibility.

So we may accept Mr. Rockefeller's confessions and conclusions as sincere and heartfelt. It is a mistake, he writes, to assume that the possession of money in great abundance necessarily brings happiness. No one is more competent to testify on this point. Satisfaction in great wealth does not come from its mere possession but from its use. Capt. Wm. Kidd who was hanged at Execution Dock at London in 1704, was one of the richest men of his day; but his possessions were idle capital, the plunder of the pirate trust of which he was the head, for which even to this day search is made along the New England coast where tradition says he invested it by burying it.

Mr. Rockefeller does not advise that the possessors of great amounts of money shall bury it, even if acquired by methods similar to those of Capt. Kidd. He will not do so with the money which he has accumulated in that way. 'As I study wealthy men,' he writes, 'I can see but one way in which they can secure a real equivalent for money spent, and that is to cultivate a taste for giving where the money may produce an effect which will be a lasting gratification.'

This is entirely right. No man grows greatly rich in his country except by contributions from the community, in which he is an individual element and to which he owes compensation. His personal talent, genius, capacity for initiative and foresight determine his success above less gifted conspirators. But it is to the community that he owes what he gains.

Probably the most generous people in the world are the very poor,' writes Mr. Rockefeller, 'who assume each other's burdens in the crisis which come so often to the hard pressed.' And in this he is right. What part of the burden of the people, at any crisis in which they have been hard pressed has been assumed by the Standard Oil Trust?

NEWCASTLE, Oct. 7.—Your correspondent, in conversation with an old employee of the I. R. C. learns that the I. R. C. staff here is being very materially reduced of late. Car inspecting has been practically cut out, only two men being left on duty instead of two inspectors, and two helpers as before. The repair branch of the work here has been transferred to the big repair shops in Moncton, concentration being the order of the day. More repairs were done here than any point elsewhere outside of Moncton. The Newcastle roundhouse rebuilt last year, so as to hold seven large engines will not be needed, as only two freight engines will now be housed in it. The Maritime express each way used to change engines here, but change now in Campbellton or Moncton. The blacksmith shop force has been reduced from three men to two. Some time ago all temporary workmen were dismissed, and now quite a few of those who were considered permanent employees altogether the loss to Newcastle business will be nearly $1000 a month.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Given Up To Die

No. 100 George St., Sorel, Quebec.
"I suffered from womb disease for seven years, with dreadful pains over the front of the body, over the back and down the legs. I had indigestion and chronic constipation and the constipation was so bad that I went sometimes for ten to fifteen days without any action of the bowels. I was ill in bed for one whole year. At one time I was so low that everyone thought I was going to die, and the last Rites of the Church were administered to me. I was treated by six different doctors without any benefit."

Then I got a sample of "Fruit-a-tives," but I had no faith in them at all, and I would not have taken them only my husband begged so hard for me to try them. As soon as I began to take "Fruit-a-tives" I grew better, the bloating was relieved, the sleeplessness was cured, my stomach acted, and the bowels were moved, but above all the fearful womb pains were made easier. I have taken eighteen boxes in all and I am now perfectly well again."

The Best Food for Workers.

The best food for those who work with hand or brain is never high priced.

The best example of this is found in Quaker Oats. It stands at the top among foods that supply nourishment and vigor, without taxing the digestion, and yet it is the least expensive food one can eat.

The great food value and low cost make it an ideal food for families who want to get the greatest good from what they eat.

Laborers, factory or farm hands, fed plentifully on Quaker Oats will work better and with less fatigue than if fed on almost any other kind of food. All of these facts were proved and very interesting information about human foods was gathered by Professor Fisher of Yale University in 1908.

It is said that impetuous people have black eyes? Yes, and if they don't have them, they are apt to get them.

THREE CHINAMEN EXPIATE CRIME IN ELECTRIC CHAIR.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 19. — Three Chinamen, Wong Sing, Won Sow and Leon Sing, were electrocuted in the state prison between midnight and one o'clock this morning for participation of the Tong war in August 1907.

All three were resigned to their fate and walked to the chair without objection. A few days ago they were received into the Roman Catholic Church.

The crime for which Min Sing, Leong Gong and Hom Woon were convicted and for participation in which, Warry Charles and Joe Guey are under sentence of death while four other Chinamen have been granted new trials after having been convicted of first degree murder was the "shooting up" of Boston's Chinatown on August 2, 1907, when four Mongolians met their death and a dozen more were injured, adding the latest chapter to the tale of a long series of "Tong" outrages in this country, between the Hep Sing's and on Leongs; the aggressors in this instance being the Hep Sing Tong.

The slaying of the unsuspecting Chinese merchants and laundrymen as they sat quietly about their doorways in Oxford Place on a sultry evening in August, two years ago, was most cold blooded and brutal.

Suddenly and seemingly from nowhere appeared ten strange Chinamen, attired in American clothes in the narrow alley at the rear of Harrison Avenue, the centre of the Chinese quarters in Boston. One of the men lifted his hand calmly touched the fuse of a small firecracker to the end of his cigar. In an instant there was a roar of revolvers.

The strange Chinamen rushed madly down the alleyway firing shot after shot as they ran, yet seemingly careful to pick the men noted for their prominence in the On Leong Tong. There was a wild scramble as the terrified laundrymen and merchants sought the shelter of their shops and stores. In five minutes the "hatchmen" had passed, and in their path lay the bodies of their victims while the alley was choked with the fumes of burning gunpowder.

The police rushed in and found Chin Mon Quin, Chin Lee and Lee Hai Non, dead and Hong Shue Shung dying, the latter with a dozen or more being at once rushed to the hospital.

Special details of police were called out and the search for the murderers prosecuted with the utmost despatch, two or three of the men being taken with revolvers, still warm, in their possession and their hands and faces black with the powder from their guns. Others were found in the next few days in Quincy, Worcester, and Portsmouth, N. H., where they had fled in their endeavors to escape.

Nine men were indicted for murder in the first degree, while Warry Charles, a wealthy Chinese merchant head of the Boston Hop Sing Tong was charged with being accessory to the crime. They were brought to trial on January 20th, 1908, but owing to the illness of a juror a mis-trial resulted after the third day. WIT AND HUMOR.

THE ONE EXCEPTION

Strange that John D. Rockefeller would not own having violated the law.

Strange, how? Well, he owns about everything else.

How dear to my heart is the school I attended, And how I remember so distant and dim, That red-headed Bill and the pin that I bended, And carefully put on the bench under him. And how I recall the surprise of the master When Bill gave a yell and sprang up from the pin So high that his bullet head burst the plaster Above; and the scholars all set up a din! That active boy, Billy! That high-leaping Billy! That loud-shouting Billy that sat on a pin.

Dear Johnnie—I have the worst news for you. You know last night when you were on the sofa, and I was, well, on your knee; we knew that we were there but we did not know that little brother, Harold, was under the sofa, and this morning he told father and mother all about it. Don't come tonight, Johnnie, dear, because they won't let me see you. But you can still send me some chocolates.

Yours if you say so,

A WRONG INFERENCE

I'll have you know, stranger, that I belong to Chicago, said the Yankee.

'Deed an' wha'd hae thoct it? quoth the skeptic Scot; frae the way ye've been speaking I thoct Chicago belonged tae you.

The late Professor Shuttleworth of London was particularly fond of telling how, when he once acted as locum tenus in Devonshire, he had to proclaim the bans of marriage of a young yokel and a village maid. A fortnight later the young swain called at the Professor's office.

You put up the bans for me? he said.

Yes, I remember, replied Mr. Shuttleworth.

Well, inquired the yokel, has it to go on?

What do you mean, asked the Professor; Are you tired of the girl?

No, was the unexpected answer, but I like her sister better.

Oh, if the original girl doesn't mind you can marry her sister.

But should I have to be called again?

Certainly, that's necessary, answered Mr. Shuttleworth.

But should I have to pay again? Yes, it would cost you three and sixpence.

Oh, would it? rejoined the yokel after reflection. Then I'll let it remain as is. And he did.

O.-EN-AIR SCHOOLS

London is experimenting with open air schools. They are for poor children their session is from June 1st to October 31st and they are proving a success.

The beginning was made last summer and was purely experimental. The authorities made a grant of $2000 to see how the thing worked. They have increased the appropriation for next summer to $1000 and three schools will be established.

Each school will accommodate 75 children, divided into three schools of 25 each. The staff will consist of one head teacher, three assistant teachers, a nurse, a cook and a janitor.

Of course there are buildings which are occupied a part of each day, as well in pleasant as in unpleasant weather. But unless the weather is hopelessly bad almost all the time is spent in the open air. A blackboard is set up on an easel on the grass and the children are grouped around it.

The children are small and the course of study is light. There are games, too, and the results of all this is, in the opinion of the authorities, a more robust and healthy child.

It is said that impetuous people have black eyes? Yes, and if they don't have them, they are apt to get them.

Manitoba in calling for farm labor should more deeply impress the need of providing continuous employment on western farms.

A St. John Stone Mason Cured of Rheumatism

By "Father Morrissey's No. 7" After Seven Doctors Had Failed.

647 Main St., St. John, N.B.
FATHER MORRISSEY MEDICINE CO., LTD.
I am writing to tell you I have been a victim to Rheumatism for several years, and have been treated by seven doctors without finding any permanent relief until I got Father Morrissey's medicine. It has cured me so I am able to do my work and find I am as well as ever in my life.

Yours truly,

JOHN CRAWFORD.
Rheumatism is caused by sluggish kidneys failing to take the Uric Acid out of the blood. The whole system becomes loaded with poison, which gathers in joints and muscles, causing agony at every movement.

"Father Morrissey's No. 7" Tablets act directly on the kidneys, stimulating them to vigorous work. They cleanse the Uric Acid from the blood and free the whole system of the poison. Hence, of course, the Rheumatism is cured. For a complete description of the medicine, and a list of the doctors who have cured patients, write to the Father Morrissey Medicine Co., Ltd., 647 Main St., St. John, N.B.

FARMER'S COLUMN.

FEEDING GRAIN TO COWS

It is seldom advisable to feed whole grain to dairy cows. This has been demonstrated time and time again both by experiment stations and individual dairymen and farmers. The animals cannot make as good use of whole grain as of grain that has been ground. The Michigan station has furnished some exact data on the subject that are worth attention. The work was very carefully done and results reported as follows:

When whole corn was fed to cows, 22.75 per cent. passed through them unmasticated; when fed to heifers 10.77 per cent., and when fed to calves 6.28 per cent. When whole oats was fed to cows 12.06 per cent. passed through them unmasticated; when fed to heifers 5.48 per cent., and when fed to calves 2.98 per cent. Whole corn and oats not masticated when fed to cows 26.46 per cent. to heifers 17.50 per cent., and calves 4.78 per cent. Chemical analysis showed practically the same composition of grain as before feeding, therefore it is safe to conclude that the animal derives no benefit from grain which passes through the digestive tract unmasticated.

The results show two things: First, that feeding whole grain to cows and heifers is a very wasteful practice; second, that the younger animals are more capable of masticating their feed than older ones.

VEGETABLES IN THE FAR NORTH.

Hon. Alexander Henderson, the commissioner of the Yukon, has sent a report to the Interior Department, Ottawa, in which he says: "A few years ago all vegetables consumed in the Yukon were imported, but now potatoes, carrots, turnips, celery, cabbage, cauliflower, besides radishes and lettuce in abundance are locally grown. In many cases the Yukon vegetables are superior to those imported. Oats are also grown, but usually cut green for fodder. Native hay is used in outside districts, and butter making has been attempted, but not as yet on a large scale. In a recent report of the president of the White Pass and Yukon route, a falling off in the traffic is attributed to a certain extent to the smaller importation of perishables, consisting mainly of vegetables."

THE VALUE OF STRAW.

One of the features of the landscape which is sure to attract the attention of the traveller through the West, is the large straw stacks. Or, perhaps, there is to be seen only the smouldering remains of one of these stacks, and at once the thrifty, saving traveller from the East is sure to enquire if the straw does not contain sufficient value to warrant its use.

The American Farm World has this to say about the value of straw: "Straw contains enough fertilizer a ton to cost several dollars if bought in a commercial fertilizer. While the fertilizer elements are not so available as those found in the commercial article, yet the straw furnishes humus to the soil, which is an advantage that the commercial fertilizer does not possess."

The author goes on to show the composition of wheat straw and calculates its value at the regular rate charged for commercial fertilizers and demonstrates that it contains plant food to the value of $2.27, and this does not take into account its effect upon the physical condition of the soil.

While the above is undoubtedly true in some sections of the country, applying straw to land in some parts of the semi-arid wheat belt might be a questionable practice. It might have a tendency to make the soil too open and dry it out without liberating the plant food it contains.

Two little boys from town went out the C. I. Road hunting partridges one day last week. Their joy was unbounded when they ran across a flock and secured four. On their way home the owner of the land on which the birds were shot collared the little fellows and made them yield up their prize. From this, it would appear that tyranny was not confined to Europe. The oppressor may have thought he did a manly act, but he would think twice before doing it to a man of his size, or even half his size.

In the Johnson-Kitchel fight on Saturday last the champion knocked out his opponent in the twelfth round. Up to that time the fight was even. In the twelfth round Kitchel rushed his opponent who ducked, but received the blow behind the ear, sending him to the floor with considerable force. Whereupon the champion, springing to his feet, landed three blows to Kitchel's stomach and jaw, so quickly and forcibly that the latter went down and out. Kitchel won many friends during the fight. For notwithstanding his vastly superior weight and reach of his opponent, he fought a gamy fight throughout.

YOUNG LADY

SHOOTS MOOSE.

Miss Kate Kingston of Chaplin Island Road went out hunting big game in company with her brother, a guide. Her guide called up a monster moose on which Miss Kingston opened fire. At the first shot, which took effect in the front quarter, the fierce brute charged down upon its assailant. Miss Kingston, however, kept up the fire, sending five bullets into the infuriated beast as it advanced, and, having exhausted the supply of ammunition in the magazine, sought safety in flight to a nearby tree. The animal, however, fell dead before it reached its destination, the five bullets from a 303 Winchester, had done their work. The antlers had a spread of 54 inches with a twelve inch web, 23 points—nine brow points.
