GEN. BACON'S

Still Engaged in Battling with the Indians.

Six Soldiers Have Been Killed and Seventeen Wounded.

The "Annihilation" Story Was a "Yellow" Yarn.

Names of the Killed and Wounded-Five Hundred Troops on Their Way to the Scene of Conflict.

Lothrup, Minn., Oct. 7 .- At 3:30 yesterday afternoon it was learned that Gen. Bacon and his small band of 70 or 72 men were still fighting on Bear Island, but it cannot be learned what the outcome of the fighting had been

An attempt was made to land on the island and rescue the wounded soldiers and get the bodies of the unfortunate bluecoats who were killed. This atfour bodies were recovered, and nine soldiers who were wounded were rescued, but the citizens were driven to the boat, and the boat driven from the shores by skulking redskins. It is said the Indians from Mille strong, to join the Leech Lake Indians, and if this is the case it will require 500 additional troops to quell the disturbance. They are reported to be well armed and going north at a rapid rate. They will probably reach Leech Lake, and Bear Island, by this morning. OTHER INDIANS RISING.

The inhabitants at Walker, Lothrup and Hachensack, Minn., are terrified beyond measure, and are armed as far as arms and ammunition are procurable. Little sleep is taken by the majority of the citizens. Since the upris-ing of the Bear Island Indians, the Indians at the Leech Lake agency remained quiet up till yesterday, but word arrived last night from the agency that the Indians have broken out,

This accident has made the agency Indians very angry, and a council is said to be in progress last night.

FIVE HUNDRED TROOPS SENT TO THE SCENE.

A special train, with 215 of the Third Infantry, from Fort Snelling, under command of Lieut.-Col. Harbach. of the department of Dakota, arrived in Walker at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Another special train left Brainerd last night with 200 or 250 more soldiers. Inspector Tinker expresses the opinion that with 500 soldiers the Indians will be subdued, but thinks there will be bloodshed, and maybe lots of it.

THE KILLED AND WOUNDED. Chicago, Oct. 7 .- The Tribune's staff correspondent at Walker, Minn., en route to the scene of the battle between Company E, Third Infantry. under command of Gen. When the full term of court sat at Duluth, Min-Jon-Dah and another buck of his tribe were wanted at Duluth to give testimony in another case similar to that of last fall, when the marshals came and arrested the two In-dians and put them in jail. During their incarceration there was intense excitement among the Indians, and many threats of a rescue were freely indulged in by the Indians. Finally, twenty of the bucks, during the night of Sept. 6, made a raid on the jail at Walker, Minn., and released the two prisoners. The two Indians then made their escape to Bear Island, and have been ever since agitating the Indians to rebellion and resistance to the government officials, and this coupled with the alleged pine timber injustice, has resulted in the present

London, Oct. 7 .- The first battalion of the Grenadier Guards returned to tempt was partly successful, so far that | London today from Omdurman, where they took part in the crushing defeat inflicted upon the dervishes by Gen. Lord Kitchener. From Waterloo Railroad station, where they left the train, to Wellington Barracks, immense Lacs reservation have started, 300 crowds of people lined the streets. The windows were packed with spectators, flags were displayed on all sides, and the most intense enthusiasm prevailed. The workmen of the town of Bolton, Lancashire, struck work yesterday in spite of the threats of their employers, in order to go to Barnum's circus. The result was that work in many factories was stopped, and thousands of pounds in wages were lost by the operatives. Satisfactory progress is being made with the scheme having for its object the federation of all trade unions. At present the efforts are mainly directed to federate kindred trades together, and in a short time a conference will be held of the carrying trades to consider the subject. Early in January and the authorities have no control a conference, attended by delegates apover them, and fear there will be more proving of the scheme, will be held for the purpose of drawing up rules for the working of the federation.

Reiterated Reports of the Poisoning of China's Sovereign.

The Kaiser Sends a Warship to the Celestials' Capital.

London, Oct. 7.-The Pekin correspondent of the Daily Chronicle telegraphing yesterday, says: "The emperor has been poisoned in the palace. "Rioting was resumed, and five Chinese were killed.

"The attacks upon Europeans continue."

The Chinese embassy claims to be in receipt of a dispatch from Pekin saying that the greatest harmony prevails between the emperor and the dowager empress. The dispatch adds that the latter, seeing the danger of rushing sweeping reforms, consented to advise the emperor in the general management of affairs, and as to the best way of introducing reforms.

Continuing, the dispatch says circumstances have shown it to be necessary that six councilors who were urging the emperor to undertake inopportune reforms be put to death. After referring to the punishment of the others, the dispatch says that since his dismissal from the Tsung Li Yamen, Li Hung Chang has abstained from participating in public affairs. The German warship Kaiserin Augusta has left Kiao Chou for Taku, at the entrance of the Pei Ho River, with 20 marines, who will be sent to Pekin to act as a guard for the German legation there.

GOOD MAN GONE

Death of the Eminent Commentator Rev. Dr. Geikie.

London, Oct. 7 .- Rev. Dr. Cunningham Geikie, the well-known religious commentator and historian, is dead. Dr. Geikie, who had been living quietly at Bournemouth since 1890, when he retired from his pastoral work as vicar of St. Martin's Palace, Norwich, was born in Edinburgh, Oct. 26, 1824. He was the second son of Rev. Archibald Geikie, former minister of the Presbyterian Church in Canaan, Conn. He was educated at Edinburgh, receiving the honorary degree of D. D. from Queen's College, Canada, in 1871, and of LL. D. from Edinburgh University in 1891. Ordained in 1848, he served in Canada and Nova Scotia for twelve years, after which he was employed in literary work in England until 1876, when he was appointed curate of St. Peter's, Dunwich, where he remained until 1879. In that year he was appointed rector of Christ Church, Nouilly parish, where he remained for two years. From 1883 to 1885 he was vicar of St. Mary's, Barnstable, from which post he went to the Church of St. Martin's Palace, Norwich. Among his publica-tions are: "The English Reformation," "The Holy Land and the Bible,"

"Landmarks of Old Testament History," "Hours With the Bible," "Old Testament Characters," "The Promises," and "The Life and Works of

The Bishop of Hereford, in addressing the Hereford diocesan conference on the subject of ritualistic practices, made the following suggestion for avoiding the dangers of the situation: "The natural and safest way would seem to be by the process of a carefully regulated local option; in other words, by requiring uses, subject to the veto of the bishop if they contravene the law or doctrine of the church."

The letter which is printed below was received Wednesday, Oct. 5, from the John Griffiths Cycle Corporation of Toronto, Ont. The Advertiser, during the past season, carried the advertising of this company, and the unsolicited words are received from a firm that never before until this year advertised in its columns. It is an example of what a judicious advertiser will reap when the proper medium is used. The Advertiser here publicly extend their thanks and appreciation of such kind words to the John Griffiths Cycle Corporation. The testimonial, coming from a company who have used dozens of newspapers for advertising their business is a distinct compliment to The Advertiser.

London Conference W. M. S. Meets at Goderich.

Interesting Memorial Service - Encouraging Reports Presented.

Goderich, Oct. 7.—The fourth annual meetin of the London Conference Woman's Missionary Society assembled in the North Street Church here Effect of the Transfer of the Manitoba on Tuesday afternoon, about 70 delegates being in attendance. Mrs. Burns, of St. Thomas, president, occupied the chair. After devotions, the various memorials and resolutions were read, and will appear in the order of discussion.

The president declined to make any formal address, but called on the three vice-presidents to give a message of greeting. Mesdames Fowler, Eccles and Dickson epoke feelingly of zeal and enthusiasm, which can only come through knowledge and the power of the Holy Spirit.

Fraternal delegates were received from the W. C. T. U. and the Presbyand solemn tribute to the lives of our to convey the message to her by letter. Prayer was also asked for a member of one of the London auxiliaries, who has just passed through a serious operation in the hospital. The communion service closed the afternoon session.

A reception from 6 to 8 in the lecroom gave an opportunity for social intercourse between the delegates and their hostesses.

evening session was well attendcd. The choir of the church assisted with several delightful numbers, and young people sustained their reputation in two appropriate recitations. Mrs. Turner, in behalf of the Goderich ladies, gave a cordial wel-come to the convention, which was gracefully replied to by Mrs. Tennent,

The reports of the treasurer and encouragement and progress. Mrs. Crothers, St. Thomas, stated the anreported five new auxiliaries — Bay-field, Stratford, Waterloo, Shetland and Tilbury-total, 94 auxiliaries, 2,004 annual members. 97 life auxiliaries, 23 mission bands. Many auxiliaries have business, and it is hinted in railway sent boxes of clothing to needy stations, and the organization is doing faithful work in forming auxiliaries. The watch tower, an exercise taken part in by three delegates, illustrated work done in China, Japan and among the Indians. Rev. J. Wilson closed the session with prayer.

THE CANADIAN CUT RATES. So far the Canadian Pacific Railway shows no signs of any intention to restore local rates in Ontario, and it is supposed that beside holding off till it renew its North Bay agreement with the Grand Trunk, the company is de-sirous of coming to some arrange-ment regarding Manitoba business before restoring rates here. At the present time and with the restoration of western rates, the Canadian Pacific has to compete with the Grand Trunk on even terms, so far as rates are concerned, in the Manitoba and north western business. This is something the road has never had to do before. and it is undeniable that upon even terms the Grand Trunk, with its Amcorresponding secretary were full of some of the business that has hitherto gone to its rival. Sir William Van Horne, president of the C. P. R., was a guest at a luncheon at the Manitoba Club given by A. M. Nanton, president of the Winnipeg Board of Trade. Sir William stated that the Corbin railway interests had been turned over to the Great Northern Railway Company, and that company would probably be found at Ottawa during the next session of parliament, seeking legislation that would enable them to build a line in Southern British Columbia and cut into the trade of that region. As such line would com-pete with the Crows' Nest Pass Railroad in the rich mineral district, Sir William declared it would be a shame if Canadian centers did not get all the trade resulting from the Crows' Pass road, as it had been built by public subsidies.

Bright and golden lay the sunshine over the village of Dorchester yesterday. Long before Old Sol had taken the autumn chill off the crisp morning air, all the roads leading to Dorchester were alive with bunches of fat cattle, highly groomed and beribboned horses, wagon loads of swine and sheep, and, best of all, many a bright-eyed, rosycheeked girl, with her sturdy swain, both dressed in their best, and bowling merrily along behind the farmer's best roadster, and the buggy that bright you could see your tace in it, while the buckles on the harness would dazzle your eyes.

It was "Donnybrook Fair" day, and there's only one "Donnybrook" this side the salt creek. The North Dorchester Agricultural Society's fair is how they call it on the announcements. But everybody for 60 miles around, knows it's "Donnybrook."

The village or Dorchester was buried clean out of sight by the good of visitors yesterday. Hundreds of people went down from London by wheel, carriage, or rail. There were in all, about 3,000 visitors.

IN THE YIIKON

Tin, Copper and Silver Found Besides Gold.

Stock-Raising Is Also Among the Possibilities.

Toronto, Oct. 7.-P. J. Baldwin, who has been nineteen years in western mining camps, and who is on a visit from the Klondike, says that the potentialities of the Yukon are not confined to gold. His observation in that country has convinced him that all the precious and commercially valuable metals are to be found there, and he is convinced that it will not be long before men are at work taking out tin, copper, silver and lead in paying quantities. He has with him a sample of oxide of tin, which is plentifully mixed with the pay dirt upon the creeks, and which gold miners now look upon as a nuisance, because it impedes suicing operations. He says that the country is rich in native much lavishness, and so little discrimicopper, and he predicts that the day nation, that a feeling almost of repugis not far distant when the Yukon will be relied upon not only for gold, but for other valuable metals.

Mr. Baldwin goes so far as to affirm that agriculture and stock-raising will thrive in the Yukon, which, he says, affords better prospects of profit in this direction than many parts of Canada.

The growth of wild hay, he says, is luxuriant, and vegetables and oats can be cultivated without difficulty. Cattle-raising is not only possible, but it can be carried on at a minimum of expense, on account of the native foods which the country affords, while the price of beef will remain sufficiently high to yield a handsome profit.

ALFRED TAYLOR, Manager.

Unveiling of a Monument to Caedmon in Whitby, England.

Speech by the Poet Laureate, Alfred Austin-A Graceful Tribute to the Ancient Bard.

On Wednesday, Sept. 21, in beautiful weather, an interesting ceremony was performed in the ancient parish churchyard at Whitby, England, on the occasion of the unveiling of a monument to Caedmon, the first English Christian poet. The chief speaker was Alfred Austin, poet laureate of England, who unveiled the monument. Our readers have seen some of his poetic effusions, and we reproduce his speech to give an idea of his prose. Mr. Austin sad: When I was invited, partly no doubt by reason of the ancient office I have the honor to fill. and partly, I believe, because of my northern blood, to unveil this most lovely cross you have erected to the memory of Caedmon, I confess I for a moment felt some hesitation as to what ought to be my reply. Memorials and monuments to distinguish forerunners of our race have during the last few years been raised with so nance to their multiplication has been' growing up in the public mind; and in that sentiment, I must allow, I have had my share. But, on reflection, I came to the conclusion, whether rightly or wrongly others must decide, that there is something in the history of Caedmon that warrants the erection of a visible record to his memory. Speaking generally, I should say that, of all men, poets stand least in need of statue, tablet or commemorative bust: seeing that, if their works attain an adequate standard of excellence, these of themselves constitute an enduring and sufficient monument. But Caedmon occupies a peculiar and excep-tional position. Chaucer has been called the "Morning Star of English Poetry," but it seems to me that the designation would be more aptly applied to Caedmon, since, with the prologue to the "Canterbury Tales," the glorious sunlight of English song already illuminated the horizon. But the somewhat rudimentary verse of Caedmon has all the tentative and hesitating character of yet imperfect dawn. He is the half-articulate father of English poets yet to be, and it is, as I understand it, not only to the lisping ancestor, but to his full-voiced descendants in this island throughout all time, that this memorial cross has been erected. For, if we look closely and carefully into the circumstances of his life and seek the cause and origin of his singing, we shall find that Caedmon serves, in all essentials, as the very type of the poet in all ages and all lands. To begin with, he was unlettered. I am' aware there have been learned poets, though Milton is perhaps the only English poet of consequence who could so be described with any approach to accuracy. As a rule, poets have but small erudition, but large understanding; to understand rather than to know, to be wise rather than erudite, being the distinctive mark and mission of the poet. Very little learning equipped the greatest of English poets for universal apprehension, and Caedmon, his remote predecessor, was wholly unencumbered with the lumber of learning, and therefore all the more impressionable to the two main earthly sources of poetic inspiration-external nature and the human heart. The disfiguring contrivances of mechanical industry have to a certain extent invaded the framework of headland and breaker in which Whitby stands; but here the sea gull yet wheels and wails, here the eagle still screams and towers, here the heather blushes and the bracken mellows, and here the multitudinous horses of the northern main still flash and fling themselves against the long dark line of your indomitable coast. But think of what your billow-beaten bluffs and wind-swept and beek-fur-rowed moorlands must have been in the time of Caedmon! Then nature wielded an unchallenged scepter; and it was from her mystic voice and majestic presence that Caedmon learned to shape his verse. (Cheers.) You all know those lovely lines of Words-

"Beauty born of wandering sound Hath passed into her face. Would it not be equally true to say that beauty born of wandering sound passes into the poet's heart? He hears the music of the tides, he listens to the melody of wind and wave, to the plaintive minor that sounds in whispering wheat or waving sedge, to the thunder-notes of the darkened dome of heaven, the aptest of scholars he learns from them how to modulate the joys and harmonize the serrows of the universe. But, if nature be the chief teacher of the poet, there is yet another to whom his debt is equally great, and Caedmon did not lack this second helpmate of the muse. It was a woman, and a woman who was both a princess and a saint, to whom he owed shelter and inspiration, and would it be too fanciful to say that Caedmon was Hilda's laureate? I have observed with some surprise that in these later days, more eager perhaps for novelty than for real originality, a sort of crusade has been organized for the extension of the influence of women. my part I am unable to see how that is possible, since their influence, one is happy to think, has ever since the days of Adam been coextensive with the feelings, aspirations and activity of man. It is they who train us to speak, it is they who teach us to pray, it is they who stimulate us to sing, and Hilda was the very source and fount of Caedmon's song. But, be it reverently said, there is a yet higher and yet more sacred influence than that either of nature or of woman, and Bede tells us what that is, where he says that Caedmon learned the art of poetry, not from man, nor of men, but from God. Thus, alike by the limitation of his requirements, by his rustic familiarity with the aspect and language of nature, by his willing submission to the elevating influence of woman and, finally, by his lips being touched with hallowed fire, Caedmon may serve and stand as the type of the English poet. That is the justification, if any be needed, of this exquisite memorial. Stress has been laid, and rightly laid, on his being a Christian poet. A poet is perforce and inevitably religious. By religious I do not mean dogmatic, much less disputatious; but his nature is steeped through and through with religious sentiment, the spiritual expression of which is an abiding sense of the infinite harmony that reconciles our definite discords, and whose practical fruits are intellectual humility and tender toleration. What more can I say? You have distened to me with kindly patience, and I must not try your indulgence overmuch. But I like to remember, and perhaps it will not be unwelcome to you to be reminded, that at the southernmost, as this is the easternmost, coast of England, there was recently unveiled another cross to another English poet, Caedmon's latest descendant in the tomb, the never-tobe-forgotten author of "In Memoriam." When he passed away he left in our hearts, and in our ears, a great sense of loss. But, in this heaven-favored isle, I still seem to hear "a thousand blended notes," the melodious voices of those who still carry forward the tra-nal sympathy and admiration.

New York Sun, Oct. 6: It would appear that the Bostons have a mortgage on the league pennant. Yesterday they won another game from the Baltimores and increased their lead to 38 points. Both clubs have still ten games to play, four with each other. The Bostons have three at Brooklyn and three at Washington, while the Baltimores are meeting the New Yorks in a series of six. If the Orioles win all ten their percentage will be .670, with 101 victories and 50 defeats, while the Bostons, by winning five and losing five can finish ahead with 671 per cent, or 102 victories and 50 defeats. As it is improbable that the Baltimores can make a clean sweep, and also quite likely that Boston will do better than an even break, the experts are generally con-ceding the championship once more to Selee's fine ball team.

Time for a Change.

Municipal reform is receiving a great impulse in Ontario, and it is time that London should share it.

Lindsay, Owen Sound, Peterboro, Belleville, Chatham, Galt, and other cities and towns have taken the lead by abolishing the ward system, and in most cases reducing the number of aldermen. The people of Stratford will vote on the question in Jaunary.

The movement is spreading to larger places. In Hamilton, all the daily newspapers are agitating for a change of men and methods in the civic administration. The Times thinks the remedy is the election of a higher type of representatives. No one disputes this; but how is the higher type to be induced to come forward? The Herald advocates the abolition of the ward system and the election of fifteen aldermen by the votes of all the electors, the aldermen to be elected for a three-years' term, five to retire each year. The Spectator also attacks the city government, both legislative and executive, to seven men, elected by the ratepayers.

In Ottawa, there is the same dissatisfaction with municipal management. This dissatisfaction has been sharpened by circumstances similar to our own. Ottawa hae undertaken an expensive drainage work, and the city council has floundered over it in such a manner that citizens are calling for an independent commission to carry the project through.

The Municipal World, a high authority, vigorously assails the ward system. The system, says the World, is productive of selfishness, sectional jealousies and personal ambitions. Frequently work is commenced and never completed, merely for the sake of giving employment to ward heelers. For the same reason work is done which would be better left undone. The ward system scatters money in small jobs and patchwork, instead of concentrating the expenditure on finished and durable work.

In London, we have no immunity from the evils which other municipalities feel, and which some, to their credit, are trying to remedy. We have here the ward system in its worst form. Proposals to reduce the wards have been in years past submitted to the ratepayers and voted down. The reduction would have been a step in the right direction, but would not have gone far enough. Aldermen would still have been elected by wards-and that is the root of the evil. Intelligent fertizens know the system is pernicious, marck, who works in the dark and is They are more to be censured for tolerating ward grabbing than are the aldermen who practice it. But apart from the extravagance and injustice to which it leads, the ward system deters many able, public-spirited men from entering municipal life. They refuse to compete with the typical ward alderman who makes a house-to-house canvass, loaded up with promises, who doles out the street improvements where they will bring him most votes, who is a hail-fellow on all the back streets, who stands in with "the boys," and nurses his little constituency from year to year. There are some able men in this year's council who were elected despite the ward system; there are some mediocrities who were elected because of it. These latter would hardly have ventured to seek the suffrage of the whole city.

The ratepayers should seriously consider these matters, and should keep up with the march of progress in other cities. The abolition of the ward system should be the first step; the reduction of the number of aldermen is advisable, but not so imperative at present. The introduction of politics into municipal affairs is deplorable, but there seems to be no cure for it except a mutual agreement between the parties. Both have found out by this time that the City Hall is worth nothing as a political machine. The Conservatives made a desperate attempt to gain control last January and succeeded. Has it helped them one iota?

A New Famine.

We have heard a good deal about a aniversal wheat famine, but a famine of another kind is predicted in Great Britain, which would be even a more curious natural phenomenon. famine alluded to is a water famine, and the strange feature of it that the rural and not the urban districts are threatened. This would seem contrary to physical conditions, but the explanation is simple. For instance the city of London cannot obtain a sufficient supply from the River Thames and its tributaries, and is drawing millions of gallons from deep wells spread over a large and increasing area. This is the case with other great British cities. It is also a fact that while the land in the country is being better drained, this drainage lessens the water supply of the couniry, and adds to that of the city. The water is taken off the land by drain pipes and carried to streams, which are utilized as sources of supply by the great cities, leaving the village and farm house to face a slowly but surely advancing famine. The more favored by nature a district is, the more rapid this process goes on. Wherever mountain and rainfall combine to make an gineer of some municipal corporation | is at hand scheming to impound the supply, and carry it many miles Already corporations are actively competing for water-bearing An English magazine says that from all parts of the country there comes the same story of streams becoming shallower and more intermittent, of wells that have continually to be dug deeper in order to get any water at all, of springs which once gushed out from the hillside and now do but trickle. So serious has the matter become that the Government has been urged to make the necessary inquiries and undertake the necessary

Fortunately this is a problem Canada will never have to face. With our magnificent waterways, a score of Londons and Liverpools could be planted right here in Ontario and they would never lower farm yard wells an inch.

Bismarck's Boswell.

It has been said that no man is hero to his valet, but that cynical remark does not hold good in the case of Dr. Moritz Busch, who has just given to the world "some secret pages' of Bismarck's history, for as an able reviewer has remarked,"There is something almost pathetic in the contrast between the blindness of confident enthusiasm which has impelled Dr. Busch ward system, and would entrust the to give publicity to these extraordinary reminiscences, and the impressions which their perusal must leave on the reader's mind." The reason that the great Chancellor's lackey makes these revelations is "because in these corrupt times truth cannot too soon be helped to her rights." He has certainly helped truth to her rights with a vengeance.

Without wishing to pose as a pattern of scrupulosity the reader of this strange story feels that if this is the real Bismarck there was much in his work that can only be described as diabolical. But we are told that Dr. Busch's attitude "towards his hero is informed throughout with the same spirit of almost idolatrous worship which led him on one occasion to apostrophise Prince Bismarck to his face as 'Mein Heiland-My Saviour.'" No doubt this worship was perfectly sincere-in the view of his minion Bismarck could do no wrong-but the effect of these revelations on the unprejudiced mind is to lessen the reverence for the great statesman which is inspired by his tremendous strength of character and unflinching steadiness of purpose. Bismarck the man of "blood and iron" who through three wars welded together the present German Empire - this Bismarck we know. This powerful personality commanded respect, and probably evoked more hate than love. But this dry pedantic report of his doings penned by the plodding vassal, shows another Bis-atterly unscrupious. No doubt it is best for the world that the truth should be told, but we cannot help feeling that it is a pity that the truth takes this color. We do not owe any particular debt of gratitude to Prince Bismarck, but we regret to meet him in the character of Mephistopheles with a "literary" laboratory for concocting slanders and a reptile press for scattering them through the land. Bismarck, the founder of the German Empire, with his brutal frankness and his supreme contempt for opposition is something like a demi-god, but Bismarck, the pressman, is a very low kind of devil. To that the reviewer of this startling book in Literature is constrained to say: "Indeed Dr. Busch might well have given to his work the sub-title 'Prince Bismarck as Pressman.' For in spite of the contemptuous way in which he used to talk of 'the reams of paper smeared with printers' ink' few journalists have done more newspaper work than the first chancellor of the German Empire at the height of his pride and power, and, let us hope, still fewer have done such base work.'

This is the "seamy side" of Bismarck's life, and its revelation of "the ways that are dark" is not creditable to human nature in general or the political life of Germany in particular. His underhand attacks against the Empress Augusta and afterwards against the hated English woman, the Empress Frederick, were marked by cunning and spite. In all this dirty work Dr. Busch was the go-between, and tells unblushingly the tale of his own degradation. His one redeeming feature is that he remains true to his idol when political disgrace came, and helped his old master to smuggle his papers out of the palace. Such fidelity is admirable, but it is none the less a pity that the service required was often of the most contemptible kind. The fact is Bismarck believed in the divine right of things, and in the divine right of Bismarck to make and guide kings, but he had no faith in the people, and hence the main use that he had for the press was not to form a healthy public opinion, but to cajole the mob into shouting against those whom he regarded as his enemies, and enemies of the Empire. In so far as he was a true patriot let him receive admiration, but may his foul use of dinary journalism find few imitators.

Miss Anglin, daughter of the late Hon. T. W. Anglin, Speaker of the House of Commons, has made a decided hit in New York, and bids fair to become a star. Canada has given the English-speaking stage some of its brightest ornaments, such as Julia Arthur, Franklin MoLeay, and W. H.

Sir Charles Tupper has been talking in England. He blames the Toronto Globe for saying that Senator Fairbanks was favorable to the lowering of the American duty on some Canadian products. Instead of waiting till he reached England to censure the Globe, Sir Charles should have called off some of his own organs while here. They did their best to impair the usefulness of the conference by personal attacks on the American commissioners, by representing the Canadian commissioners as willing to betray Canada's interests, and by predicting utter failure.

The people of Great Britain are only beginning to eat bananas, but it is hoped that in the near future a large and increasing trade in this fruit will be carried on between the British West Indies and the heart of the empire. This will be a great benefit to the slands, which are at the present moment threatened with a new trouble because of the acquirement of Cuba by the United States. Hitherto a very considerable portion of the banana supply of the United States has been obtained from the British West India Islands, but it is now said that Cuba will be turned into a huge banana farm, and that very soon nearly all the supplies of that fruit required by the United States will be obtained from that island.

The friends of the late Wm. Terriss, the English actor, have erected a memorial of him, with the inscription: "Shadows we are and shadows we pursue." Says the Detroit Free Press: While the devoted souls were about their labor it would have been as well, perhaps, to correctly quote their Shakespeare." The Free Press critic should look over his anthology before he questions another quotation, "What shadows we are and what shadows we pursue!" are the correct words, and they are those of Edmund Burke, not Shakespeare. Burke uttered this pathetic sentiment in an address bidding farewell to his constituents in Bristol. It was inspired by the sudden death of the candidate opposing him, which occurred in the midst of the Municipal Evils Must Go.

[Ottawa Free Press.] But the present growing municipal evils must go. The flat is proclaimed from the gulf to the northern fringe of civilization. The Americans are taking the means best suited to themselves to make them "go." It is time Canadians followed their example. Let Ottawa lead. We have before advocated the formation of a citizens' committee here and the present time is opportune for repeating the suggestion.

Widow Lindsay's Tiff With Detroit Undertaker.

She Funched His Nose and Now Threatens to Thrash Him With a Rawhide.

[Detroit Evening News.]

The differences between Mrs. Lucy E. Lindsay, of 341 Seventeenth avenue, and Charles F. Hess, of the under-taking firm of C. & W. Hess, on Gratiot avenue, began in 1891. They have continued with varying degrees of temperature ever since. They reached a white heat when Mrs. Lindsay, in an outburst of wrath, punched the nose of Mr. Hess in Woodmere cemetery, last Sunday, after a funeral. It was a woman's blow, and did no damage, except to the undertaker's dignity.
In 1891, Mrs. Lindsay's husband, who was a veteran of the civil war, died, and Hess secured the job of conducting the funeral. This was because both he and Mrs. Lindsay belonged to the same council of Chosen Friends. Besides collecting some $87 from Mrs. Lindsay for the funeral, Mr. Fless also obtained from the county the $40 that is allowed for the barial of soldiers. that little circumstance of the funeral, Mr. Hess and Mrs. Lindsay became acquainted, and in the end the widow mortgaged her home Seventeenth street for $1,000, and Hess got the money on the understanding that Mrs. Lindsay was to be his partner in the undertaking business. never paid Mrs. Linesay but $25, and some three years ago she obtained a judgment against him for the full amount of her claim, but she has ben unable to collect it. Mrs. Lindsay has been sadly in need of that $1,000 for a long time "I don't know what I'll do," she said this morning. "My house is mortgaged, and I can't pay the interest. I have to go out cleaning offices and take in washing, and do whatever I can to get a living. My mother is bedridden, and it takes all I can earn to take care of her and myself, to say nothing of two cats and a dog, besides the interest." "My lawyer says that Hess has fixed his property so that I can't collect the judgment. So I'm going to take it out of his hide. I'll get a good rawhide whip and I'll carry it in my belt. Then I'll go to every funeral he has and I'll baste him at every one. Did you hear what I did to him? Well, it was in Woodmere cemetery, down there at my husband's grave. Hess had a big funeral near When I saw him I couldn't contain myself. I don't want to interrupt the funeral, so I waited until the carriages with the mourners in had gone and then I went up to Hess before all the people. I took him by the arm and asked him when he was going to pay me. "'I'll pay you, I'll pay you,' he said,' and Mrs. Lindsay's voice was pitched in a high key with a cowardly tremolo in it. " 'Just wait till I get my hat,' he

" 'You won't need any hat to hear what I have to say to you,' says I. "'Just wait a minute,' he says, but I couldn't wait any longer, I was so excited. I just let go and I caught him on the end of the nose. I'm ashamed of it now, but it seems to be the only way I am to be paid. I was so excited.

"I don't know what happened then. Hees got hold of my wrists and twisted my left arm so that it's been sore ever since. But I'll go to his next funeral and I'll fix him.

"I guess I'll see the governor about it. I think he could do something. The prosecuting attorney was going to do something a year ago, when Hess returned the $40 to the county that he had had six years, but he never did it. Do you think it would do any good to see the governor? The widow and the orphan have no show in this country."

LOOKED INTO A GUN BARREL

A Bradford Boy's Fatal Experience-Yachting Party Probably Drowned.

THREE DROWNED. New York, Oct. 7.-Commodore N. Weatherby, a prominent resident of this city, and a party of friends, composed of Stephen Mallory, a book-keeper, also of this city, and Miss Savage and Mrs. William Breslin, of Waterford, are supposed to have been drowned in the Hudson River, about four miles above Troy, while on a pleasure trip, salling the commodore's steam yacht. The cause of the drowning is unknown. The yacht was found at Island Park, seven miles below the scene of the accident. The boiler and smokestack of the craft were missing. Simcoe, Oct. 7.—The body of Frank Long, an inmate of the county home, aged 60 years, was discovered in the pond near the long bridge, by John Colby, bus driver. Long was a wellknown character in the township of Woodhouse, and was doubtless insane. Apparently the body had been in the water for two or three days. SUICIDED FOR SHAME.

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 7.-Warton Walker, aged about 20 years, has committed suicide in mortification at his arrest on the carge of stealing a shotgun. He had picked up the gun a month ago on the beach, where its owner, Hardy Cook, was at work.

THE GUN WAS LOADED. Bradford, Ont., Oct. 7 .- Fred Coates, aged 15, a son of Albert Coates, cleaned a gun yesterday with the intention of going out shooting. After he got through he loaded the gun and then placed his left eye to the muzzle, when the gun went off and blew the side of his head away.

THE DOOR WAS LOCKED. St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 7 .- A peculiarity surrounding the mysterious death of William Strutts, the young Englishman, who was dead in a bath tub at the West End Hotel, lies in the fact that his clothes were in his room, which was securely locked, and the key was down in the office in his box. Strutts room was 100 feet from the bath room, and the walk in a bath robe along the corridor would certainly have attracted some attention had he been seen. Who turned the key upon Strutts clothes and then took it to the office is a mystery which the clerk and no one else about the hotel can explain.

The Plans for This Winter's Work Course and Other Social Features.

This fall and winter will be an auspicious one with the Y. M. C. A., as will be seen by the following interesting programme of work to be carried SOCIAL FEATURES.

A strong reception committee is organized, and have planned for a series of receptions, beginning on Oct. 20, to the young people's societies of the various churches, and continuing every two weeks. These social gatherings will be held on Thursday evenings. Alternate Thursdays will the "at home" night for the committee, when they will receive their friends and visitors at the building. Someone will be on duty each evening and endeavor to make strangers or visitors feel at home. A checker club is being organized, and will attract lovers of the game every alternate Friday evening.

The entertainment committee have excelled all previous efforts in providing a course of eight entertainments for members and friends for the sum of $150. This course is a very strong one, and comprises: 1. The Pasquali Grand Concert Company, who open on Nov. 4. 2. Dr. Eugene May, Nov. 15 3. The Schubert Glee Club. Dec. 8. 4. Col. L. F. Copeland, Jan. 5.

The Mehan Concert Company, Jan. 6. Miss Ida Benfey, Feb. 9.

7. The Ladies' Military Band, Boston, Feb. 24. 8. The Ariel Ladies' Quartet, March

PHYSICAL WORK. The gymnasium has been overhauled, a balcony for the accommodation of visitors is being erected, and the classes for business men, clergymen and students promise to be unusually well attended. The boys' classes will have to be divided into two sections, and taken in detachments. The bath rooms are getting a new coat on and being put in excellent shape. plunge is also coming in for a share of attention, and will be more pleasant to use than heretofore.

Another section of lockers is also being added for the accommodation of the men, and will be in place in a few days. Men will have no excuse for being subjects of indigestion or dyspepsia, with a place like this to exer-

There will be something like fourteen classes for work held in the gymnasium.

INTELLECTUAL WORK. This season classes are to be organized in business arithmetic, penmanship and practical bookkeeping, under the instruction of J. W. Westervelt, of the Forest City Business College, and all young men who need help along these lines will find the association beneficial. Mechanical drawing is a subject that will also be taught by a competent instructor.

The dark-room is fitted up, and a camera club for those interested in photography is on the list. The mandolin, guitar and banjo club is a live organization, and will be heard from during the season many times. SPIRITUAL.

The work in this department is by no means neglected. A strong committee have it in charge, and the men's meetings on Sunday afternoons will particularly strong. No pains will be spared to get the best for this service, so that those attending may get the most out of it. A prayer service is held on Saturday evenings from 8 to 8:45 in the parlors upstairs, and will be a sort of powerhouse for the rest of the work.

The circle for Bible study meets on Tuesdaye at 7 p.m., and this season are taking up a biographical course of study on "The Great Men & Israel." It will be a most interesting study, and the circle bids fair to increase in numbers, as it should do, for this particular phase of work. The meeting of Sunday school teachers for the study of International Sunday School Lessons will also be resumed the first Saturday in November, and Rev. Robert Johnston has been asked to conduct the class. This was a most helpful meeting last season, and will doubtless prove more so as the days ed for the carrying on of the same lines of work, modified to some extent, among the lads.

Every Christian man in the city should be identified with the association, and every man would find it helpful and beneficial.

DISMEMBERED AND DENUDED

The Millionaire Suicide's Body Recovered from Niagara's Whirlpool.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 7.—After 23 days the body of the Philadelphia millionaire brewer, Peter Scheunn, committed suicide by leaping off the Goat Island bridge, has been recovered, and three men, Howard Lake, and Laid Out-An Excellent Concert Harry and Fred Preston, will divide the reward of $1,000 offered by the family.

The men have been looking for the body many days, and at daybreak yesterday they saw it floating in the whirlpool. Manning a boat they started for the center, and their experience proved a terrible one. At times their frail craft would get into one of the many pools, and would almost stand on end, when they would climb to the top end, and by their weight would right their boat by lifting the lower end out of the swilring holes. It meant sure destruction to them if they allowed the boat to sucked into them. At one time a large log shot out of one of the eddles and fell on their boat.

Finally the body came near, and Lake grabbed it by an arm. The other two rowed the boat to shore, the many large swirling eddies. body was perfectly nude and limbless, being unrecognizable other than the lavish gold filling of the teeth.

Murder Mystery Cleared Up by a Death-Bed Confession.

Washington Court House, O., Oct. 7. -Eleven years ago Louis Ball was murdered here, his head being cut off with a razor, and his head and body laid across the railroad track, so as to appear that he had been killed by a train. The deathbed confession of Mrs. Jeffreys, of Hillsboro, just made in the presence of four persons, implicates herself, another woman and four men, giving their names, and telling how the crime was committed. The persons implicated live in and about the city.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 7 .- The grand choir contest of the Eistoddfod for the $500 and gold medal was participated in by five choirs of 125 voices, the selections being "All Men, All Things," by Mendelssohn, and the "Night Songs," by Stephens. The prize was awarded to the Sait Lake choir. TO FIGHT THE SCALPERS.

A concerted movement against the entire system of the ticket scalping was inaugurated Wednesday night, at the Grand Pacific Hotel, Chicago. The National Association of Merchants and Travelers attended a banquet to railroad men, at which the subject of ticket scalping was gone over in all its details. Over 250 guests were present. Resolutions were adopted authorizing the organization of a central anti-ticket scalping committee, with sub-committees and representation coming sesfrom all the states. The sion of congress will be the objective point, and effort will be bent in the direction of securing drastic measures against the scalping trade.

Immense Paper Mills To Be Established at Sturgeon Falls

By British Capitalists-An Agreement With the Ontario Government-Millions To Be Spent.

Toronto, Oct. 7.—An important agreement which secures for Ontario this city, has gone on a trip west.

—A chimney fire at the residence of Mr. Fox, Maryboro Place, gave the brigade a run at 10:30 this morning. No damage.

—Judge Wm. Elliot presided at the regular sittings of the first division court today. There were 38 cases disposed of.

—It is stated that Clark Bros., of Toronto, have been awarded the bulk contract for the erection of the Normal School in this city.

—Invitations are out for the wedding of Mr. Fred White, of the George White & Sons' Company, to Miss Helen Higgins, on the 19th inst.

—Miss Mary Dynes has returned to couple of years purchased nine valuable properties in the Golden Cariboo.
The representative of the syndicate is
Mr. Ernest A. Bremner, of London,
England. During one of his four trips across the continent in search of investment he became impressed with the vast possibilities of the pulp trade of Sturgeon Falls. He found a small company there endeavoing to erect a mill and carry on business. Lack of funds got them into difficulties, and the property passed into the hands of the syndicate, who cast about to see how the business could be enlarged. The government was approached and asked for a concession of spruce lands, and after six months of deliberation and inquiry the government yesterday agreed to grant the syndicate 75 square miles of spruce lands along the Sturgeon River. WILL PROMOTE IMPERIAL TRADE

At the present time it costs the American exporters between $6 and $7 a cord to lay Canadian pulp wood down at their mills, and even at this figure they can manufacture paper and sell lector of the council, to recover payment of $806 66, moneys alleged to have been collected from the members of the council, and not paid over.

Thanks to the concession it will not cost the Sturgeon Falls Pulp Company more than $2 per cord, and they hope, by careful management, to become a powerful competitor for the British Following is the personnel of the Petrolia football team that will play here tomorrow: Full-back, Blake; half-backs, Boyce, Dawson and McKittick; quarter-back McNauch here tomorrow: Full-back, Blake; half-backs, Boyce, Dawson and McKittrick; quarter-back, McNaughton or Brebner; scrimmage, Phoenix, Primderson, Webb, Peat, Brownscombe, McKee and Dunfield; spare men, McHattie and Jackson.

WEST LONDON WATER SERVICE

Will Soon Be in Working Order-Main To Be Tapped Tomorrow Night-City's Water Supply To Be Cut Off for Some Hours-City Hall Notes.

Tomorrow evening at 9 o'clock the city's water supply will be shut off. A valve is to be put in the main leading from the reservoir to connect with West London. Pipes have been laid throughout the new suburb, and the former burgers will soon have a complete water service. The connection is to be made just west of the west cove, by a pipe crossing the river there. Citizens will do well to lay in a supply of water before 9 o'clock tomorrow evening, as the water will be shut off a few hours.

The ice-dealers in the city are in a position to sympathize with the city fathers in their present financial difficulty. Their appropriations are almost exhausted. In previous years about this time, when one ice-man's stock ran out, he was able to purchase sufficient ice from other dealers to enable him to supply his orders, but this year all the storehouses are depleted, and it will be necessary to get the ice from outside the city. In previous years, when one committee of the city council used up all its money too soon, a readjustment of the appropriations was effected, but

PHIL'S FUN

Was Their Father.

A crowd of youngsters were bathing in the lake off Lincoln Park, when P. D. Armour came along. Mr. Armour stood and watched them. The juvenile bathers splashed about in the water as if no great man were watching them. Suddenly Mr. Armour bethought of a plan to attract attention. As befits a millionaire packer, he had a pocketful of small change. He took a handful of the coin out of his pocket and tossed several pieces among the urchins. There was a wild scramble to rescue the money from the bottom of the lake.

Heels went up, and heads and arms disappeared under water. The capitalist enjoyed it as much as the youngsters. Quarters, dimes, and nickels were tossed at random, and the fun only ceased, when Mr. Armour had disposed of all his small change. Then he walked away. "Gee!" exclaimed one grinning small boy, who looked first at the disappearing form of the magnate, and then at the eliver piece, which he clutched in his hand, "wot d'ye think to' dat? Say, he must be one o' dem Klondikers. Wisht he'd claim me as his kid."-Chicago Journal.

CAUGHT ON THE FLY

The Molsons Bank robbery in Winnipeg is as much a mystery as ever. No arrests have been made.

The net prohibition majority of the whole fourteen constituencies of New Brunswick, made up from official re-

The clergy and the inhabitants of Iloilo, have issued a manifesto in favor of Spain. The landing of troops caused a panic among the insurgents. An attempt was made yesterday morning to desecrate the grave of William Penn, Buckinghamshire. The offenders were apparently frightened by a dog barking in a neighboring college. They left a shovel behind.

It is stated that the United States secret service officers have discovered that large numbers of counterfeit $100 certificates have been produced in San Francisco, Cal. Some 5,000 of these bills were sent to the Klondike. The Society of the New York Conference of Epworth Leagues began its seventh annual convention this (Friday) afternoon. There are 10,000 enrolled members of the league and 3,500

Methodist Church members, represented by nearly 1,000 delegates. BISMARCK'S CHARACTER. What shall we conclude as to Bismarck himself, asks William Roscoe Thayer in the September Atlantic. The magnitude of his work no man can dispute. In type, Bismarck belongs with the Charlemagnes, the Cromwells, the Napoleons; but, unlike them, he wrought to found no kingdom for himself; from first to last he was content to be the servant of the monarch whom he ruled. As a statesman he possessed in equal mixture the qualities of a lion and of a fox, which Machiavelli long ago declared indispensable to a prince. He had no scruples. What benefited Prussia and his king was to him moral lawful, desirable; to them he was inflexibly loyal; for them he would suffer popular odium or incur personal danger. But whoever opposed them was to him an enemy to be overcome by persuasion, craft, or force. I discern in his conduct toward enemies no more regard for morality than in that of a Mowhawk sachem toward his Huron foe. He might spare them, but from motives of policy; he might persecute them, not to gratify a thirst for secution the proper instrument in that case. His justification would be that it was right that Prussia and Germany should hold the first rank in Europe. The world, as he saw it, was a field in which nations maintain a pitiless struggle for existence, and the strongest survive; to make his nation the strongest was, he conceived, his highest duty. An army of punybodied saints might be beautiful to a pious imagination, but they would fare ill in an actual conflict with

Dynamic, therefore, and not moral, were Bismarck's ideals and his methods. Bismarck saw both a definite goal and the road that led to it. He held that by blood and iron empires are welded, and that this stern means causes in the end less suffering than the indecisive compromises of the sentimentalists. Better, he would say, for ninety-nine men to be directed by the hundredth man who knows than for them to be left a prey to their own chaotic, ignorant and internecine pas- sions. Thus he is the latest representative of a type which flourished in the age when the modern ideal of popular government had not yet risen.—W. R. Thayer, in September Atlantic.

The World's Preference,

NOT LOVED,

"They believe you have come to see a lady who is desirous of obtaining your services as a companion," Lord Cecil interrupted, quickly. "The cause of my presence is to excuse her, to say she has been detained in the country and cannot be here today."

"My lord, I admire your facility for invention; such falsehoods, readily coined, mark a noble, praiseworthy nature," she retorted, with a smile of contempt. "It seems, then, that it is only I who am aware of the insult put upon me."

"Insult! It is no insult!" he cried, with imploring gesture. "Signora, you are cruel thus to persist in misreading me. What could I do? For two years I have been seeking you; secretly, but never tiring-always hoping. My eyes, wherever I have gone, have been perpetually seeking, seeking greedily, for one face—yours. Yet all was fruitless until yesterday, when I discovered where you lived. Knowing that, I felt I must see you-for your sake as my own; my own, because I would clear my honor from the stain it bore in your eyes. But how could I do this? Had I called at Mrs. Mannering's you would have refused to see me, for I divined well the reason of your mysterious flight; also a false representation might have been placed by stran-gers on my visit. I could not risk that; too much misconstruction had occurred already. In my desperation, my eager longing, I could recognize but one means. Without, possibly, due one means. consideration, I seized it. Blame me. if you will; but never believe I acted with any other feeling than the sincerest respect for you, signora-a respect such as I would have paid my mother. You fled under a cruel error, to remove which I have sought you for two years; desirous to tell you that my love for you has ever been as honorable as now, when I beseech you to be my wife."

Yielding to a movement of hers some time before, he had released her hand; but, struck by his earnest, respectful manner, its penitential entreaty, she had stood where she was, making no effort to leave the room. Now, as he concluded, he knelt, and ventured again to take her hand.

She did not at once remove it. There was a pause, for Maria found it difficult to master her voice to reply. Did she not love him? How fondly she alone know. Never was task more painful than hers. Yet she must not give way, for her honor, her pride's sake. But she feared her power; the strongest women are but as the weakest in such moments. One thing she felt to be imperative-that she must use some argument which should speedily conclude the interview; she dared not trust herself to listen to her lover's pleading. The one she adopted was severe to herself and him.

"My lord," she said, so calmly as to surprise herself, while she drew away her hand, "I thank you much, very much, for the honor you have done me. Trust me, I appreciate it, and entreat you to pardon any severity my words may have worn while I labored, as you said truly, under an error. I repeat, I feel most flattered, most grateful. Still, my lord, in this proposal you have forgotten two things." Lord Cecil's fair, handsome face had been raised to hers with an eager, hoping, questioning suspense, but as she had proceeded a gloom had shadowed it.

"And those two, signora?" he asked, in a husky, uncertain tone. "First, my lord, you have surely forgotten my humble origin; also that I am but a superior servant-no fit wife for you, the future Marquis of San-

"My lord, before you seek to remove the first objection, would it not be best to hear the second?"

"As you please, signora," he rejoined, almost doggedly; "but I warn you, it shall not sway me. I will never marry any other woman than you." "Hush, hush, my lord! Such a vow would truly be rash until you have learned the insurmountable reason why you and I can never be anything to each other." "Insurmountable!" he ejaculated, in despair. "Speak, signora, speak-but be merciful!" Maria, pausing, had for a second to avert her face. The agony she then experienced was never again surpassed, mentally or physically, in her future life. After, with so violent an endeavor at composure that it resembled indifference, she replied: "My lord, for a union to be happy, it is necessary for the affection to be mutual." He rose up quickly, catching his breath as one who has experienced a severe shock. He gazed at her—a pain in his eyes which pierced her to the

"And-and," he began, falteringly, 'you do not-

"My lord, I do not love you," she answered, but veiling her eyes with the silken lashes; "that is the insurmountable reason. Were I your equal; or were society to become generous and promise to receive me in all honor as Lady Carisford, I yet could not wed you. No worldly advantage should make me marry one I-I do not love!"

There was slience. Cecil was as pale as death. How could he, try as he would, mistake those cruel, calm, firm accents? His frame shook-his eyes were downcast; he leaned on the back of a chair for support.

His grief, his despair rent Maria's heart. Oh, why should they thus suf-Why could she not cast herself fer? at his feet, as he had at hers, and cry, "Cecil, do not sorrow, but smile—smile as I, for I love you"? Why might she not feel those strong arms around her? Why not feel heart beating responsive Why? For the sake to heart? pride and self-respect-aye, and for his sake, too.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Finally Lord Cecil spoke. His voice was hoarse, low and eloquent of bitter anguish, yet cold: "I am answered, signora. After what you have stated, no more can be said. I must apologize for having given you all this trouble. May I lead you to the carriage?" He extended his arm, but Maria drew

"Thanks, my lord," she answered, now very gently, sympathetically; "but considering the position I hold in the hotel people's eyes, I had better, I think, go alone."

"True-I had forgotten. Farewell." He stretched forth his hand; she took, and for an instant retaining it, remarked with some emotion:

"My lord, I grieve bitterly that I was forced to say what I did. Can you forgive me? "I have already done so," he replied, lifting his sad, but frank, eyes to hers.

"I suffer keenly-I must do so; but I honor, I esteem you more than ever, and thank you for saving me from the humiliation of being accepted from mercenary motives." Stooping, he passionately kissed her hand; then, swinging round on his heel, walked to the window.

"I am grateful for your generous opinion, my lord. I shall never cease to remember it," she murmured, as, the tears rushing to her eyes, she hastened to the door. She must go, for a wild, delirious feeling was creeping over her to approach him; to call upon his name—"Cecil, Cecil!" and in those words reveal the truth.

As her hand grasped the handle, he once more addressed her:
"Pardon my staying you, but may I inform my cousin of your address? I know it would delight her much to see you. "I should regard it as an exceeding must consider me most ungrateful." "That was my fault," he rejoined; but the dream is over, signora. You need no longer keep yourself hidden from your friends."

He turned again to the window, and Maria, stifling a sob, quitted the apart-ment. In the corridor, however, she stopped and seemed on the point of going back. "Should I not warn him against the man—the villain—he calls friend?" she reflected; adding, "No, the affair is not mine. I have no right to interfere—to act on my own responsibility. Besides, it might do harm. It was related to me in strictest confidence; and Caroline desires privacy, not publicity." With that she descended the stairs, entered the brougham and was driven back to Chester Square. Lord Carisford did not remain long at the hotel after Maria had quitted it. Certainly no better means could she have selected to effectually crush his hopes; not only this, but also to modify his despair; for her, to outward appearance, calm assertion that she did. not love him, nor ever could, though she had been of good rank, had keenly stung his pride.

"ASLEEP!" Nothing so aper's heart as the sight of her baby asleep. This is doubly true when the white lips, the fevered brow, the blue lines beneath the eyes tle hands tell the pathetic story that baby is ill. To the child that healthy, the ordi-nary ills of childhood are not a serious menace but to the weak, puny baby with the seeds of disease im-planted in its little body even before birth, they are a serious matter and frequently mean baby's death. The woman who wants a strong, healthy baby must see to it that she does not suffer from weakness and disease of the important and delicate organs concerned in moth erhood. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription acts directly on these organs, allaying inflammation, healing ulceration and soothing pain. It fits a woman for wifehood and motherhood. It banishes the discomforts of the period of anticipation and makes baby's entry to the world easy and almost painless. It insures the newcomer's health and an ample supply of nourishment. It rids maternity of its perils. It has caused many a childless home to ring with the happy laughter of healthy children. Over 90,000 women have testified to its marvelous merits. It is the discovery of an eminent and skillful specialist, Dr. R. V. MR. GLADSTONE

A Record Kept by a Near Neighbor.

The Great Man's Opinions on Many Questions-Social Dangers Ahead.

Of the many books that are being published about Mr. Gladstone, one of the most enjoyable, from the personal point of view, is a small volume containing a number of easy conversations over the teacups between Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Lionel Tollemache.

Mr. Tollemache was a near neighbor of Mr. Gladstone's at Hawarden, and the two men became intimate friends some 50 years ago. Mr. Tollemache gives a general sketch of his intercourse with Mr. Gladstone from 1856 to 1870. It appears that they did not meet again until 1891, in Biarritz, in France, where Mr. Gladstone was accustomed to go every year for a rest. Mr. Tollemache being a Conservative in politics, Mr. Gladstone, we are told, avoided almost entirely the discussion of English politics; but on all other subjects broached the great Englishman talked frankly and freely, and, Mr. Tollemache, having an extraordinary memory, a great many of these talks, especially since 1891, are given verbatim.

Naturally enough, the conversations contain but fragmentary views, taking quick turns and coming to indecisive conclusions. We summarize here the most interesting fragments of these

Mr. Gladstone spoke of English litterature of the nineteenth century as "quite extraordinary." He thought this strange "because of the Elizabethan outburst." He said that there had been practical continuity, and that this was very rare, and was, moreover, a great disadvantage to our living poets. No book nowadays produces an excitement at all equal to that caused by Walter Scott's novels. The nearest appratch was shown in Tennyson's last poems; but this was not at all equal to the interest awakened by Scott. Scott he considered the great delineator of character next to Homer and Shakes-

He thought there is a want of harmony in George Eliot's novels. "She makes such absurd people marry one another. Why did Adam Bede marry Dinah?

"After talking of American novelists and contrasting them with Scott, Mr. Gladstone said that an American had declared that he did not suppose there were ten men in Boston equal to Shakespeare.

Mr. Gladstone regarded the editor of the Spectator, Mr. Hutton, as being, at least since Mathew Arnold's death, the first of English critics. Since his own policy had been each week attacked in the Spectator he had left off taking it. This, he added, was due to his great regard for the editor. "I found that reading those weekly attacks tended, to use a vulgar term, to establish a raw." Mr. Gladstone was of the opinion that Prof. Bryce, in his social aspects of America, has not dwelt enough on the influence of wealth. He thought that the "era of wealth," i. e., of colossal fortunes, is setting in; and he regretted it. He spoke of the report that Mr. Astor has two and a half milkindness if you would, my lord. I, on lions a year. "The Duke of Westminmy part, long to see her—to—to ex- ster is a pauper to him." Over the disasy, and tribution of wealth he felt un he thought the irresponsibility attaching to the conditions of holding wealth nowadays, especially in the United States, and the difficulty or impossibility of bringing home to men the responsibility of riches held under the present conditions, is the black spot of the future.

Mr. Gladstone's strong orthodoxy will be observed in the following ob-"I asked him what he thought of Prof. Mivart's article in the Nineteenth Century, called 'The Happiness in Gladstone-If a man begins by being tipsy sometimes and ends by being dead drunk daily-if he begins by beating his wife and ends by killing her, I gin to improve as soon as he dies.

see no reason to think that he will be-He was asked if he had observed the singular absence of the sense of sin in the works of American divines of all schools. "Oh," he said slowly, "the sense of sin-that is the great want in modern life; it is wanting in our sermons, wanting everywhere." That was said slowly and reflectively, almost like a monologue.

Speaking of the Jews: Gladstone-I used to think the Irish the most oppressed people on earth; but now I think that the Jews have been even more oppressed.

But he did not take the same high view that many take of the old Hebrew literature, regarded merely as literature. He agreed with Max Muller, that, with the exception of Isaiah, the Jewish intellect did not become great until it came into contact with the Aryan intellect. He contended that Moses was a real person; the Jewish intellect lacked the imagination to create him. Mr. Tollemache tells us that Mr Gladstone ranked Disraeli as the greatest master of parliamentary wit that had ever lived; but Disraeli was never at his best after his old antagonist, Peel, died. Gladstone looked upon his character as a great mystery, and it pained him to feel that the mystery will never be solved. In one of their talks, Mr. Tollemache asked Mr. Gladstone if he did not take a thoroughly sanguine view of the prospects of this very reforming age. Gladstone-Not altogether. The future is to me a blank. I cannot at all guess what is coming. Tollemache-Do you mean that you are afraid that democracy may bring everything to a dead level, or that science is too hastily moving the old theological landmarke? Gladstone-I am not so much afraid either of democracy or of science, as of the love of money. This seems to me to be the growing evil. Also there is a danger from the growth of that dreadful military spirit.

He did not feel certain that the perfecting of war machines would make war more dreaded. Tollemache-Is not the moral standard of public men higher than it used to be? Gladstone-I should say that in England the change has been all the other way. About the continent I am not sure (after a pause), since the retiremence of Bismarck, Crispi would probably rank as the first of continental statesmen. I am no great admirer of the public career of either Castlereagh or of Metternich. But, judging as a moralist, I should say that the careers of Castlereagh and of Metternich would compare favorably with those of Rismarck and Crispi.

Being asked by another of the party what he thought of Bismarck, he replied: "He is a very big man, but very unscrupulous."

Mr. Gladstone was asked about the fall of Bismarck: Gladstone—According to English no-tions, Bismarck was clearly wrong; he insisted on his subordinates not communicating with the emperor except through him, Tollemache-Would it make much difference in England if this were done? Gladstone-Immense; but I find it difficult to give the reason.

Mr. Tollemache goes on to say:
"I remembered that Bourget fears, in his book. 'Outre Mer,' that perils may be in store for America from the exotic element—that is to gay, from the great and increasing number of German and other immigrants who are not bound to America by any patriotic tie, and who in many instances are Socialists, if not Anarchists; did Mr. Gladstone think that there is any risk of a disruption of the Union?"

Gladstone-I think none whatever. At the time of the American civil war the Union was subjected to a tremendous strain. There was a threefold antagonism; there was the opposition between the interests of some individual states and that of the federation; between emancipation and slavery, and between free trade and protection. And over these three dangers, the Union triumphed; and I can see no dangers of equal magitude to which it is now exposed.

He was then reminded of the Venezuelan dispute as an indication of the widespread animosity in America towards England.

Gladstone-I very much fear that is so. And unfortunately this is not all. We seem to be unpopular all over the world. The French dislike us. Dutch hate us, and, naturally, and so do the Germans. I cannot help wondering, when England is so much disliked, if it may not be to a great extent her own fault. Have you remarked that England has several times of late years submitted an international dispute to arbitration, and that the decision has generally been against her? This is to me a very unpleasant subject for reflection. The English are a very strange people. They have very great qualities; but they also have very

This reminded Mr. Tollemache of the case of the Alabama.

Gladstone-The case of the Alabama is a very difficult and complicated one. Tollemache-I suppose that you consider the award was extravagantly high?

Gladstone-It was enormous. Mr. Tollemache calls the reader's attention more than once to the fact that, while Mr. Gladstone was very orthodox in religion, he thought the Greeks superior to the Hebrews moraland greatly admired their religion.

This may be explained on the grounds of his passionate fondness for Homer. Mr. Gladstone, in answer to an inquiry, replied that, he was in favor of opening the professions to women, but thought they should be excluded from the franchise. If they were once given the franchise, it would be hard to prevent their having everything else. He said they would want to become judges and generals.

On being asked his opinion about mind-reading and clairvoyance, he said: "I keep my judgment in suspense about mind-reading. I don't let myself be entangled in the belief in it; but I am not violently opposed to it. There seems to be very strong evidence for the stories of second-sight at the moment of death." Ho then told of one instance when one of his old servants died, and he saw him standing at the breakfast table at the moment of his death. He said it might have been an ocular

OF INTEREST TO THE HUNTER.

The finest fishing and hunting on the continent of America is found in that region north of Toronto, Canada, known as the Muskoka Lake district. The season for partridge shooting opened on the 15th September, and the forests and woods in the interior are literally alive with them. The deer hunting season opens on November 1, and lasts only 15 days. Sportsmen who avail themselves of a trip through this country can count upon magnificent sport, as the fleet-footed animals abound in great numbers. Bear, fox, and other game are to be found in goodly numbers, and the gamiest trout and bass, and the weightiest maskinonge are the delight of all who tempt its waters with rod and line. The autumn is also a good season of the year to visit this country, when the beautiful coloring of the foliage, lining the banks of the lakes, and covering the pincushiony islands which dot the waters of Lakes Muskoka, Rosseau and Joseph, are resplendent with the variegated tints of Nature's splendor, and are reflected with astonishing vividness in the waters, with the pale blue canopy of heaven s a background, forming to the vision one of the grandest sights imaginable. UNDER THE DOME MATINEE AND NIGHT TOMORROW.

No one denies the genius of Lincoln J. Carter in devising startling stage illusions. He has not pretended to be a great playwright nor yet has he possessed a desire to elevate the stage. He is a shrewd individual, with an eye to the main chance. No one knows better than he the dramatic gauge of the masses and this is proven by the immense profits he has derived from the tours of his various plays. Every At a meeting of No. 2 committee of dollar he possesses was made by his the board of education last night, own plays, and he has undoubtedly done more for box-office money than any manager in America. He is about to forsake the melodramatic field, or at least to put forth more ambitious enterprises. The first of the new order of plays, "Under the Dome," a pretty drama, which comes to the Grand tomorrow matinee and night, is already an immense success. It will be followed shortly by the production of a big spectacular extravaganza by Carter, and a musical comedy by a French author.

Three Economic Facts.

Kingsmill's leadership in the Drygoods and Canpet trade is nothing new. For 30 years this store has been first in style, first in quality and first in the hearts of all economical shoppers. It stands today not only the oldest, but the biggest, brightest and best in Western Ontario.

The secret of the littleness of our prices lies in the bigness of our buying. Our stock is nearly as large as those of all other London stores put together -and you know that the merchant who buys in such immense quantities buys at ridiculously small prices. That's why you save money by doing your shopping

And remember that Kingsmill's leads not only in cheapness, but also and especially in style. Our buyer did not start for the European markets this summer until all the other Canadian buyers were on their way home. As a result our autumn styles in Silks, in Dress Goods, in Trimmings, in Millinery, and in Mantles are three months newer than theirs.

generally accepted, although it has a number of broadly farcical situations, but they are all of the natural consequence of the development of the plot. Realizing the necessity of having a strong company, Mr. Blaney has en-gaged such well-known artists as Miss Johnstone Bennett, George Richards, Eugene Canfield, Willis P. Eminently Prosperous Year Just Women's Refuge and Infants' Closed by the W. C. A.

Nearly $9,000 Devoted to Charity and the Treasury Still Has $6,000-The President, Mrs. Robert Reid, Suggests Improving Some of the Homes -Election of Officers.

The annual meeting of the Women's Christian Association was held yesterday afternoon at the "Y" rooms, Dundas street. The president, Mrs. Reid, was in the chair, and the attendance was large. The business was chiefly the receiving of reports and the election of officers. The association has enjoyed a remarkably prosperous year. Public interest in their work for sweet charity's sake was never greater, and the re-ports of all the officers were of a most satisfactory nature. The treasurer's statement showed the society's fortunate position, financially. After expending nearly $9,000 there remains a balance of over $6,000 to start the new year with. Hope was expressed by the president, in her interesting address, that the association would soon get the Refuge and Infants' Home better and more successfully established. Mrs. Reid also pointed out the desirability of enlarging the Home for Incurables and the Aged People's Home. The secretary, Mrs. Pattullo, present, ed the 24th annual report of the association. It showed that there were 88 inmates cared for in the Aged People's Home during the year. Five had died, and five had left. Twenty-eight patients were in the Home for Incurables, of whom 6 died and 2 were discharged. The relief committee had assisted 139 families during the year.

Many garments, quilts and blankets were distributed. The report concluded with a feeling reference to the great loss sustained in the demise of valued friend and fellow-worker, Mrs. "We are sincerely sorry to miss Peto. "We are sincerely sorry to this her kindly presence here today," the report read, "and we shall long miss the cheerful aid she was always so ready to extend to any project for the good of the association.

Mrs. Hutchinson reported for the jail committee. Mrs. M. A. Moore reported for the devotional committee; Mrs. C. A. Campbell reported for the improvement committee; Miss Fraser for the Home for Incurables visiting committee; Mrs. E. A. McKellar, for the relief committee; Mrs. J.
