Assistants Prepare Score of Sufferers While Fifty Are Told They Cannot be Treated—Physicians Will be Admitted to Clinic.

Latest Report Says That Only Twelve May be Chosen, But Definite Information is Hard to Secure—Scientist at Beck Home For Day.

Dr. Friedman left the residence of Hon. Adam Beck at 2 o'clock for Victoria Hospital, having been notified that his assistants, Drs. Benjamin and Hundt, had prepared twenty-one patients. The other patients were taken into another room, and physicians were the only ones admitted to the clinic room. It is expected that the clinic will take three hours. Dr. Friedman has promised that all patients will have the serum within a few weeks.

Dr. F. F. Friedman, the German physician, who believes he has a cure for tuberculosis, this afternoon at the Institute of Public Health, treated twenty-one tuberculosis patients. Seventy persons affected with the disease were present waiting for treatment when the clinic began, but it was announced that less than a third of the sufferers could be treated.

Dr. Friedman arrived in the city Friday evening as the guest of Hon. Adam Beck, and until 2 o'clock this afternoon was at "Headley," the latter's home.

The visit of the scientist, upon whom the eyes of the world are centred at present, was marked by dramatic scenes. From early morning the entrances of the Institute of Public Health were thronged with sufferers and their friends anxious to be chosen for the clinic.

PHYSICIANS FROM MANY PLACES ARE ATTRACTED BY HIS VISIT

Shortly after his arrival in the city it was given out that he would hold a clinic at Victoria Hospital this morning at 10 o'clock, and long before his arrival physicians and residents of London, Sarnia, Strathroy, Aylmer, St. Thomas, Toronto, and other cities and towns, gathered in front of the Institute of Public Health at the corner of Waterloo street and Ottaway avenue.

When the people began to arrive at the institute a sign was placed on the door saying that physicians only would be admitted at 10:30. The crowd stood in the cold, and many criticisms of the

PATHETIC SCENES AS PATIENTS TRY TO ENTER AND ARE TURNED AWAY

Mothers Bring Sons and Sisters Bring Sister, But Hope Dies as They Find That Doors Are Barred Against Them.

CONSTANT STREAM OF PATIENTS DRIVEN OR CARRIED TO HOSPITAL

Shortly after 9 o'clock this morning a coupe stopped at the corner of Ottaway avenue and Waterloo street in front of the Institute of Public Health, and from it stepped a woman, well-dressed. She reached into the conveyance and helped out a boy of perhaps ten years of age, with a face lined and seamed with pain. He was small of stature, and a large growth protruded from his chest and from his back. Taking the little fellow by the hand and leading him up the steps of the institute, the mother knocked on the door.

Dr. Hill, director, and Superintendent Heard of Victoria Hospital came to the door, and the former inquired if the boy was a patient from the Sanatorium.

Could Not Be Treated.

A reply in the negative elicited a shake of the head from Dr. Hill, who informed the woman that he was afraid the lad could not be treated. In a plaintive voice the woman asked for Dr. McGreggor, and informed Dr. Hill that he had sent her there. She was then sent to the hospital.

A few moments after she left, a buggy drove to the front of the institution, and a young woman, pale and emaciated, was lifted to the sidewalk and assisted up the steps by two women, apparently her sisters.

In the Last Stages.

A smile spread over her wan face as she reached the bottom of the steps, but as one of her companions let go of her arm for a moment, she tottered and nearly fell. That she was in the last stages of the disease was apparent.

Again was the ceremony of knocking at the door repeated, and as Dr. Hill came to open it a light of hope overshadowed the faces of the woman and her sisters. The wind was blowing cruelly cold from the west and flurries of snow swept across their faces as they turned in despair from the door after being informed that they could not enter, because they were not patients of the sanatorium.

Seeking Some Shelter.

The woman half-walked and was half-carried down the steps, and the trio made their way to the sidewalk, and started up Ottaway avenue towards the hospital to find a place for the young woman, who was almost overcome, to rest herself. The crowd looked on, saddened, but without saying a word.

Next came a lad of about 17, hob-

LIBERTY OF SPEECH IN THE CANADIAN COMMONS CURTAILED BY ROGERS' MANITOBA WAYS

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Ottawa, March 15. — Today finds liberty of speech in the Canadian House of Commons greatly curtailed from what has prevailed previously during the debate. Yesterday the merits of the naval proposals could be discussed in any relevant fashion. Today an amendment can hardly be put to the section of the naval bill, which declares that "From the conceded revenue fund of Canada there may be paid and applied a sum not exceeding $35,000,000 for the purpose of immediately increasing the effective naval forces of the empire."

Manitoba Methods.

The amendment by Sir Wilfrid Laurier that the money voted shall be used "for the speedy organization of a Canadian naval service, in co-operation with and in close relation to the imperial navy," and the sub-amendment by Judge MacKenzie that such Canadian naval service should be organized along lines suggested by the British admiralty at the imperial conferences of 1907 and 1909, have been ruled out of order. Every point of order raised during the night was decided against the Opposition and in favor of the Government. The last time that Manitoba methods attracted attention was when there was a by-election in Manitoba and men were jailed for opposing the Government.

The Gaggers.

Last night's performance is likely to be regarded as equally distasteful by many people. The plan was sprung at 11 o'clock last night in charge of Hon. Mr. Rogers, Arthur Meighan, J. A. M. Aikens and R. B. Bennett, of Calgary, aided by Premier Borden, and backed in solid voting silence by such Ontario Conservatives as the two Armstrongs, Ball, Blain, Bowman, Boyce, Brabazon, Burnham, Broder, Hugh Clark, Cochrane, Crothers, Edwards, Elliott, Fisher, Hepburn, Col. Sam Hughes, Kemp, Lancaster, Lewis, Marshall, Middle-

HOPE WRITTEN ON ALL FACES

Woman Writer Describes Scenes Before Arrival of Dr. Friedman.

ONE BOY CAME FROM TORONTO

Countrymen Greet Old Friend as He Is Carried to the Door.

AS A WOMAN SAW IT.

Shivering in the chill wind, and with a dismal rain falling intermittently, some two score or more of London's physicians, with friends and relatives of patients, stood outside the Institute of Public Health on Ottaway avenue at 10:30 this morning, awaiting the arrival of Dr. Friedman. For the past hour patients had been coming, some in charge of their doctors, others accompanied by parent, husband, sister, or brother, and on every face the word HOPE was written large.

Flowers Whisper "Hope."

Over on the lawns of the hospital grounds the little white crocuses peeped out bravely in the face of wind and rain, and one fancied them whispering to the sufferers that passed, words of encouragement and hope.

It was pathetic to see the white-faced ones arriving, men and women, some young, some old, some from a distance, some from London, and some from the surrounding district. One man had brought his daughter from Toronto in the hope that the new treatment might save her. And somehow one could picture the little mother waiting at home, and how long the day will be to her, and how eagerly she will be at the train to meet husband and daughter.

Even on Stretchers.

A number of patients arrived in taxis, others by street car, and several were brought from the hospital, nearby, on stretchers.

Many a quiet tear was shed, and no doubt many a silent prayer uttered, when the moment of separation came, and the door of the institute opened to receive the patients, while those accompanying them remained outside.

Steady, Old Man.

"Hello, Charlie!" came from a couple of countrymen, standing on one side, as a young chap of about twenty was assisted up the steps by two others. "Hello, boys!" was the answer. "Steady, there, old man. Take it easy," cautioned those at his side, not releasing their tender hold for a minute.

Then came the message that the German doctor was delayed—could not reach the institute until noon, and so gradually the little group outside drifted away, one by one, to meet again in a couple of hours, while inside the institute one could picture the patients still waiting in a fever of hopefulness and anxiety for noon and the coming of Dr. Friedman.

HARROWING SIGHTS WHEN DOORS ARE CLOSED TO MANY

A Picture of Ordeal Undergone By Victims of White Plague From Far and Near ---Necessity Demands That All Cannot Be Received.

Overhead, the gray, ashen sky, enveloping all the murky, drizzling atmosphere, scraping of footsteps on the damp pavements, crunching, chugging, splashing of automobiles through the black mud of Ottaway avenue, all around groups of medical students, doctors and onlookers, and waiting here and there among the others, patients with drooping figures, flushed cheeks, pale lips and fagging steps, supported by their dear ones, equally eager for their recovery and equally disappointed when they are turned away.

Sheer against the gloom of the damp, cheerless air rises the cold, square front of the Institute of Public Health, three rows of hard, square windows, fronting the dreary north.

To Them It Is Paradise.

Nothing very interesting about it; no, but to the poor consumptive, who has come many miles, weary miles, on the railroad train, wearying to anyone, but doubly so to the poor weak frame of the consumptive, many miles over the country roads, muddy and slow-travelling, rolling away in the distance to the little green and drab country stations, to this one, ah, the great square building is heaven; yes, it is Paradise, the hope of life and health, the promise of years of happiness with home and loved ones.

Only Sanatorium Patients.

One by one, the little groups—a father and daughter, two sisters, a mother and son, a husband and wife—slowly and carefully alight from the motors and carriages, and slowly and wearily, sometimes painfully, too, walk up the cold stone walk to the door of hope. But the door is guarded by great and cold stone pillars, and the door is locked. The door opens, but the institute doctors as gently as possible break the harsh, cruel announcement that only the sanatorium patients can be treated.

Hope gives way to disappointment, dull, dead disappointment, as it has done a score of times already.

A Paradise Lost.

Broken-hearted, group after group, patient and loving friends, turn away, leaving behind them a paradise of hope, a paradise lost. It seems to them as if they had been really rescued for a brief moment, and then plunged back in the night and the waves of despair to suffer yet deeper and more poignant despair.

One young girl was accompanied by her mother and aunt. Their disappointment was so pitiable that they were told that perhaps it might be arranged. The supply of serum was very short, but, perhaps, if there was any left over after the sanatorium patients had been treated, Dr. Friedman might attend to them. They were told to go over to the hospital, and perhaps the doctor might be able to come over after his clinic at the institute.

One to Whom Life Was Dear.

Warm furs were about the shoulders of the young girl, but she shivered and shrank from the damp and cold. She wore a hat of bright colors, as if she loved flowers, and life, and light, and color, and sunshine, and brightness.

Over at the hospital someone interceded for them—some physician whom they knew. A white-capped nurse came back with the young girl and her mother. But something, apparently, was wrong with the order they brought, some technical detail, again the patient was on the point of being turned away. Her disappointment was terrible this time. In the face of it, no one could refuse her admission.

Is Finally Admitted.

She was taken in, the white-capped nurse went back to the hospital, and the mother, tired, worn, dressed in deep black—perhaps the dread disease had bereft her of other children — waited patiently without.

A father, he was not a wealthy man, already he had toiled and sacrificed many things in the vain search for

NIGHT OF PRAYER SPENT BY THOSE AT SANATORIUM

Only Five Patients Too Weak To Be Brought to the City.

Man of Forty and Little Girl of Four Represent Extremes of Age.

At the Alexandra Sanatorium it was stated that many of the patients spent a great part of the night in prayer. When the time came for them to leave the sanatorium for the hospital today it was a solemn group that assembled in the drizzling rain.

Out of the 34 patients at the Sanatorium, it was decided to send 29 for treatment. The remaining five were too weak to be moved. Among those left behind was a well-known young Londoner, standing well over six feet in height, heavily built and only a few months ago proud in all the vigor of his strength. It was stated to The Advertiser that he is weakening rapidly now.

Among those sent up to Victoria Hospital were several married men and a number of married women. The oldest patient was a man of 40, the youngest a bright little girl of four. There was a boy of five, and a number of youths. All were eager to receive the treatment.

Happy Going In Sad Coming Out

Hobbling along on a pair of crutches and assisted by a physician, a young lad from Strathroy who arrived in the city early this morning, made his way along Ottaway avenue from Victoria Hospital shortly before ten o'clock to the Institute of Public Health.

His step, in spite of his deformities, caused by tuberculosis of the bone, seemed buoyant, and a smile spread slowly over his face as the door of the institution swung slowly back and he was admitted.

At 12.30, two hours and a half later, the same young man, assisted by the physician, walked slowly through the door.

His head hung this time, his eyes were red and the smile that had lit his face as he entered, was gone. He had just been rejected. He was in the last stages of the disease. He realized that his opportunity for life and health had passed.

"I guess it's not for me," he said to a reporter, with a quiver in his voice, as he tottered to an invalid's chair, to wait until a street car came along.

HARD-HITTING PUGSLEY WARS WITH CROTHERS WILD SCENE IN HOUSE

Wordy Clash Over Minister's Allusion to Doctor.

COMMONS AGAIN A BEAR GARDEN

Tumult Went Long Unchecked—Conservatives Appeal Against Chair.

Ottawa, March 14.—There was a violent scene in the House this afternoon, and for nearly an hour complete pandemonium. Hon. T. W. Crothers, minister of labor, and Hon. William Pugsley, ex-minister of public works, were the two principal figures in the wordy encounter, but members on both sides by loud cries and constant interruptions threw the House into great disorder.

Mr. Meighen, the Conservative member for Portage la Prairie, and Mr. Boyce (West Algoma), took an active part, and the unprecedented spectacle was presented of Government supporters appealing from a decision of the chair.

"If the language of the Minister of Labor were used anywhere else than in this House I would say that it was both dastardly and ungentlemanly. Since you rule, Mr. Chairman, that under the rules I cannot apply those words to the Minister of Labor myself, I withdraw them, but I apply them to the language of the Minister of Labor as quoted in Hansard."

That was the measure of the withdrawal made by Hon. Dr. Pugsley of a direct and sensational attack on the hoodlumism which has characterized the Conservative-Nationalist relays in the House during several nights past in the present deadlock. This hoodlumism is not confined to the back benchers, but that it has been encouraged by even some of the ministers was made plain by Dr. Pugsley's vigorous and unequivocal characterization of the conduct of the Minister of Labor himself on Wednesday night last. His rebuke and demand for retraction from the minister of the latter's interruption about "Slippery Bill" was firmly pressed, and rubbed in again and again, despite the desperate efforts of a small coterie on the ministerial benches to secure a ruling from the chairman compelling Dr. Pugsley to withdraw his remarks.

How It Started.

It appears that night before last when Hon. George P. Graham was speaking on the naval bill, he made the statement that a shipyard suitable for the construction of Dreadnoughts could be established at a cost of $4,000,000. Being asked what authority he had for this statement he referred to the big shipbuilding plant at Fall River, Mass. Now, with the president of this firm Mr. Pugsley has had considerable correspondence with which he has favored the House upon many occasions. The Government supporters called out, "Your authority is Pugsley."

Whereupon Mr. Crothers, the minister of labor, smilingly added, "Slippery Bill."

Unparliamentary Repartee.

That gentleman today rose to a question of privilege. He explained that he was not in the House on Wednesday night when Mr. Crothers used the expression, and the offence had not been dealt with at the time because at the time, if Mr. Pugsley was correctly informed, his honorable friend the Minister of Labor was somewhat intoxicated.

This brought Mr. Crothers to his feet with an indignant denial, and the Conservative members shouted, "Take it back," "Order," etc.

Chairman Armstrong called Mr. Pugsley to order and the latter admitted that he might have been misinformed. He had been told that the expression had been overlooked on Wednesday night because of the minister's condition. He was delighted to learn that the information was not correct, and therefore withdrew the charge of intoxication. He desired, however, to say that the expression used by Mr. Crothers had been "dastardly" and "ungentlemanly."

War of Words.

This led to another scene of wild disorder, Mr. Crothers, backed by his friends, demanded that Mr. Pugsley should withdraw the words "dastardly," and "ungentlemanly," while Mr. Pugsley and his supporters no less vehemently insisted that Mr. Crothers must withdraw and apologize for his reference to "Slippery Bill."

Chairman Armstrong, whose voice could scarcely be heard through the incessant din and confusion, appealed to both gentlemen to withdraw their statements, and after some semblance of order had been restored, Mr. Crothers explained that he had only used the phrase, "Slippery Bill," in a general way, having no particular person in mind, but if Mr. Pugsley was of the opinion that he was the only member of the House to whom the phrase could be appropriately applied, then he (Mr. Crothers) would withdraw it.

Crothers Obstinate.

These sarcastic observations threw the Opposition camp into an uproar and once again confusion reigned. Several times Mr. Crothers was urged to withdraw or apologize, but it cannot be said that he did either. Chairman Armstrong, however, finally ruled that the minister had tried to make a withdrawal, and let it go at that.

Then Mr. Boyce, of West Algoma, who is keen on parliamentary points, insisted that Mr. Pugsley must be disciplined. He called upon the chairman to direct the ex-minister to withdraw the words "dastardly" and "ungentlemanly."

Mr. Armstrong ruled that these terms were unparliamentary when applied by one member to another, and Mr. Pugsley then said that he did not apply them to the Minister of Labor, but to the language which he had used.

The chairman, glad to close the scene in any way, accepted this as sufficient, but many of the Conservative members strongly objected, especially Mr. Boyce and Mr. Meighen, the latter formally appealing to the ruling of the chair.

Wild Disorder.

No one yet knows what became of this appeal, because in the din and uproar it was not acted upon. The discussion continued as well as it could, several members addressing the chair at the same time.

Finance Minister White, however, got a hearing and stated to his personal knowledge that his colleague the Minister of Labor, was strictly sober at the time of the "Slippery Bill" incident.

Goaded by his friends on the Government side, Mr. Armstrong suddenly changed his ruling, and declared that Mr. Pugsley must withdraw his charge that the language used by Mr. Crothers was "dastardly" and "ungentlemanly."

"That," said Mr. Pugsley, "I absolutely refuse to do. If you can suggest any stronger words in which to characterize the language of the Minister of Labor I will be glad to use them also."

Messrs. Boyce and Meighen again got into the fray, and pointed out to Chairman Armstrong that his ruling was being disregarded by the ex-Minister of Public Works.

Premier Quells Tumult.

Mr. Armstrong was quite aware of this fact, but was uncertain how to proceed. Indeed, his voice could scarcely be heard for the shouting on both sides of the chamber. At this juncture Mr. Borden entered the House and there was comparative quiet. Mr. Pugsley obtained leave to re-state his position. He said that he would bow to the ruling of the chair, and admit that he was wrong in characterizing any language used in the House as "dastardly" and "ungentlemanly." If the Minister of Labor would repeat the language of Wednesday night in any other place, however, Mr. Pugsley would lose no time in characterizing it by the same way.

This closed the incident and Judge McKenzie, of Cape Breton, resumed the naval debate.

Within five minutes the gallery, which had become crowded was again deserted, and only a corporal's guard of members detailed for duty remained upon the floor.

LOVE AWAITS HIS TRIAL CONFIDENTLY

Hearing for Wife Murder Will Commence at Owen Sound on Tuesday.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Owen Sound, March 15.—The greatest interest has been aroused all through this district in the trial of Henry Love, which commences on Tuesday next. Reports that considerable sums had been contributed for Love's defence are denied, and it is rumored that only a very small donation was received. Love maintains his coolness.

He still reads the Bible every day. In this connection, Rev. H. S. Mullowney, Baptist minister, states that he has visited Love in the cells on many occasions during the course of the winter, and the imprisoned man has always evinced confidence as to the outcome, and is cheerful at all times.

Mr. Mullowney also says that he had seen Love last Sunday, and had found him reading the Bible, and that before he left the prisoner prayed at some length as he has been accustomed to doing on the occasion of all the reverend gentleman's visits to him.

The crown has accumulated a mass of evidence for production at the trial, but how much of it will be new is not known.

LLOYD GEORGE FACES ANOTHER GREAT BATTLE

Emerges Triumphant After Temporary Eclipse Over Insurance Act.

SILENTLY PREPARING FOR LAND CAMPAIGN

T.P. O'Connor Vividly Describes Chancellor's Dark Days, When All Seemed Against Him.

[By T. P. O'Connor.]

London, March 15.

I recur to my statement so often repeated, that politicians vary in their fortunes from hour to hour. At one moment they are in the full sunshine of popularity and in the enjoyment, apparently, of tremendous power; the next they are removed from the public gaze, and for the moment their power seems to have disappeared. The world, which is not a very keen and often not a very charitable judge of human character, especially among public men, varies its verdict according to the change in the condition, though the man remains the same, and applauds or hisses him in strict accord with the place he holds in the public eye. Every politician has to pass through such experiences, and a man never ought to be in public life at all who is not prepared to confront and to laugh at these vicissitudes both in his position and in his reputation.

Again, public men by the accidents of fortune are at one moment doing the very bit of work for which they are best suited by their intellectual gifts and by their temperaments, and the next hour accident may throw them into posts for which they have no inclination and no special gift.

Dilke's Experience.

I remember such a moment in the career of the late Sir Charles Dilke When first he entered official life he was under secretary for foreign affairs; there never was a man better fitted to an office. He had travelled all over the world; he had studied the politics of almost every nation; he had almost as many friends among the statesmen on the continent as among those of his own country; he spoke French like a Frenchman; he could pick up any language in a short time, and forget it in a short time; he learned Russian, for instance, in a few weeks, enough to go on with, and he forgot it in a few weeks. When he had to answer questions in the House of Commons he could do so as no man ever did before or since, saying just enough and no more, and very often managing to use language to conceal thought, a very necessary gift in a foreign minister. Then there was a vacancy in the cabinet. Dilke had to get the place; the place was the Local Government Board. "How do you like your new office?" I asked him a few days after. "I hate it," he said, with the utmost feeling.

Architect of Disaster.

These reflections are preliminary to a discussion of the position of Mr. Lloyd George during the last twelve months. He has been a good deal out of the public eye, and for some months he seemed to have been the architect of electoral disaster. His insurance act was denounced in every term of opprobrium; an active press campaign was conducted against him; every act of mendacity and misrepresentation was employed against him and the act, and appeals were made to the folly and the baser passions of humanity. Workingmen, called upon for the first time in the history of the country to pay present money for prospective advantages, were begged to rise in revolt; and such an appeal might well be listened to, for who wishes to part with money today in order to gain some advantages years hence? The British Medical Association threw itself at the same time into the campaign, organized a strike, a boycott, and a vigorous press assault along the whole line. And one by-election was fought after another on the insurance act alone and on the gigantic misrepresentations of its effects which had been so industriously organized. And one by-election followed another with a defeat of the Liberal candidate. It looked as if the days of the Liberal Ministry were counted, and Tories began to prophesy with confidence that six months would see them on the treasury bench.

Lloyd George's Temporary Eclipse.

It need scarcely be said that such a transformation from a splendid to an apparently hopeless position was bound to tell on the position of Mr. Lloyd George, even in his own party. No man is popular in any party who leads to defeat. And, meantime, Mr. Lloyd George was very little in the House of Commons. There were great measures before the House in which he was known to have been profoundly interested all through his political life; home rule for Ireland had appealed to him from that day when he heard Michael Davitt in a small meeting in Wales, and already Davitt found a willing listener in the youth who had dreamed over the creation of a similar movement for his own country. But Mr. Lloyd George was unable to speak more than a few times in the home rule debate. Similarly there was no cause on which Mr. Lloyd George was known to feel more deeply than the disestablishment of the alien church of the rich minority in Wales. But, again, Mr. Lloyd George only spoke a few times on the Welsh bill. Out of sight, out of mind, applies to life in the House of Commons more perhaps than any place else. The tremendous and vital force which had given such impetus to Liberalism seemed for the moment to have disappeared, and disappeared under a cloud.

Making the Act Work.

The explanation, of course, was quite simple. Mr. Lloyd George all this time was deep in the interminable details, the ceaseless controversy of the insurance act He had to spend nearly every hour from the time he got up till the hour at which he went to bed in meeting the desperate and the wicked campaign that was being waged against his bill. He had to consult his officials; to meet representatives of insurance companies and friendly societies; to face hostile deputations of doctors; in short, to look after every detail of the gigantic machine which he had brought into being, and engaged in such work it was physically impossible for him to attend regularly in the House of Commons, and if a member does not attend there regularly it is impossible to take any part in debate. You want to watch, and you want to know everything that has been said and done beforehand; to intervene in the midst of a conflict, the beginning and the middle of which are unknown to you, is impossible.

Firm as a Rock.

And thus the cloud deepened and Mr. Lloyd George became more and more an obscure light. He himself felt a little of all this. When he is in a fight he is the most courageous, the most tenacious of men; indeed, if he errs it is on the side of tenaciousness, for with all his extraordinary ability, he has, like all strong men, a foundation of adamant, and when you get there you can get no farther. But he is a Celt of Celts, and he has his moods of exaltation, and of depression, and he had worked so hard—and his constitution is not very strong—that sometimes he felt so utterly exhausted that he could scarcely carry on a conversation, and in such physical states depression finds its easy entrance. But those who knew him well, and those who were accustomed to these ups and downs of his temperament never forgot the strong rock of firmness that lay underneath, and quietly bided their time until their friend was out of the entanglement of the insurance act, and then they knew that Richard would be himself again. And they also knew that during the hours of comparative retirement from the House of Commons he was brooding over the next great scheme of social reform which had been near his heart from his earliest years.

Wants to See Things Done.

Mr. Lloyd George is essentially an agitator in this sense, that he always wants to see things done, and that he thinks it is the very life and soul of a democratic party to go on from task to task in the great mission of lifting up the working masses. He never could accept the gospel of the old Whigs of the days of Lord John Russell, the gospel of rest, and be thankful. In his boyhood he had been brought up among those who could tell tales of landlord tyranny; he spoke to the sons and daughters of men who had been evicted from their holdings because they had voted for Gladstone and religious equality in Ireland; he had known in his own person as a school child the oppression of the combined forces of the squire and the parson; with his own hands he had tilled the soil of the little garden attached to the house of his widowed mother. And he felt that the time had come for a great campaign to reform the land system of England.

He Emerges Triumphant.

It was toward the closing days of the old prolonged session that Mr. Lloyd George felt himself at liberty at last to emerge once more into the full light of the parliamentary arena. His enemies had been foolish enough to challenge him on the insurance act. They attacked him when he had already won the battle. The doctors had been beaten, the working classes had begun to appreciate the gigantic benefits which the act was going to confer on them and on their families; the mothers of the country had begun to receive the maternity benefit. Above all, it had been proved that the tide which had been running so high against the insurance act had begun to ebb at last. The lies had been disproved, the objections had been met, and the doctors had been beaten horse, foot, and artillery. In addition there were already cases which proved incontestably that the workingman was about to receive the benefits he had been promised. Men and women who had paid a few shillings had been treated at the expense of hundreds of pounds for their restoration to health after the first inroad of consumption. And gay, master of all his resources, self-confident, triumphant, Mr. Lloyd George was his old self in the House of Commons again, and he routed his enemies, reduced them to shame and silence, and stood forth, the more victorious because of the dangers through which he had passed. He joked and laughed and now and then he became moving as he told some story of how the act was bringing hope and consolation and restoration of health to the suffering and afflicted. In short, he was once more the easy master of all the moods of the House of Commons.

Approaches Another Great Task.

And now he approaches another great epoch of his life. He has been silently preparing for months his new land campaign, reading innumerable books, poring over the reports of the committee of investigation, looking straight in the face at the difficulties of an immensely complicated problem—especially in an old country, and before many months are over he will be in the middle of as great a fight as any he has hitherto faced. Then it will be seen that during all these months, when he has been seeing his insurance act through and suppressing his public appearance he has, to use a good old Irish phrase—been only backin' for a lepp.

The Neal Three-Day Drink Habit Cure

The Neal Treatment consists of the administration of a perfectly harmless and purely vegetable medicine taken internally only and without any hypodermic injections.

The Neal Treatment and the methods of its administration are pronounced and conceded, by all who have investigated, to be not only ethical and professional, but entirely satisfactory. The sureness and success of the Treatment in all cases has been demonstrated and proved by Doctor Neal, who during the past ten years has successfully cured upwards of five thousand of bad cases of the drink habit, without a single failure—each one in just three days' time.

The Neal Treatment is simple, yet very effective. Doctor Neal, after many years of the most painstaking professional and thorough study, experiment and investigation, has found and demonstrated that the drink habit instead of being a disease or an inherited affliction, is due to the stored-up poison in the system, coming from the continued and excessive use of alcohol.

After making this discovery and demonstration he found the antidote for alcoholic poison. The administration of this antidote results in the neutralization of the poison. Thus antidoted and neutralized, the poison is eliminated from the system, and the desire, appetite and craving for drink is at once destroyed or lost.

This is all accomplished in each case in from one to thirty-six hours, depending entirely upon the physical and mental condition of the patient. With this accomplished, nature, aided by the recuperative and building-up treatment, soon asserts its power, and at the end of three days the patient returns to his home in a normal and healthy condition.

The Neal Cure is the most effective and safest ever dedicated to the cause of greater human happiness. There is a buoyant air in the "God-bless-yous" which daily are showered upon Neal Institutes by men redeemed.

GOVT. LAUNCHES "GAG" RULE ROGERS SAYS WILL THROTTLE; FIRST MOVE FOR THE CLOSURE

Liberal Battle for Rights of People Choked Off Last Night, When Hon. Mr. Oliver Appeals Against the Ruling of the Chair.

EDMONTON MAN, FOR LIBERALS, MAKES STRONG REPLY TO THREAT

Ottawa, March 14.—At a late hour tonight the Government took the first steps towards the application of closure in the Commons. A point of order raised by Hon. Mr. Oliver was voted down by 68 to 28, all the Nationalists voting with the Government. The vote followed a threat by Hon. Robert Rogers that closure was to be applied, and the method followed by the Government indicated that it is to be attempted at once.

It was significant and appropriate that "Honorable Bob" Rogers, the "hero" of the Macdonald by-election and other strong-arm contributions to statecraft, should have been the first Canadian minister of the crown to threaten Canada's Parliament with "gag rule." Mr. Rogers made the Government announcement at 11:30 o'clock tonight. As soon as he sat down Premier Borden entered the chamber.

The Minister of Public Works rose when Hon. Charles Marcil concluded his telling arraignment of the Borden naval policy of contribution. "If progress with this bill cannot be made, honorable members opposite cannot complain," said he, "if from this time forward the rule of debate is strictly adhered to. And if the present rules are not sufficient to make progress it will be the duty of the Government to introduce such rules as will enable progress to be made. We have set about the passing of this bill and we are going to do it."

With this last threat "Honorable Bob" sat down. He prefaced his announcement with several high-sounding sentences about "recognizing our duty to the Dominion and the Empire," and finished with his declaration of the coming closure.

Mr. Oliver Answers.

Hon. Frank Oliver, who was leading the Liberal relay on duty at the time, at once rose, amid prolonged Liberal cheering, while the Premier came into the chamber and took his seat, eliciting a counter-demonstration from the Conservatives.

"Liberalism," said Mr. Oliver, speaking slowly and emphatically, "is fully aware of the importance of the announcement which the minister has just made to Parliament. Liberalism is struck with the significant fact that if is the Minister of Public Works, and not the Prime Minister, who makes this announcement. For so important announcement of Government policy it is a unique spectacle in parliamentary government to have it proceed not from the Prime Minister, but from the Minister of Public Works. It will strike the Canadian people with some significance.

"It is no concern of ours on this side of the House," continued Mr. Oliver, "who leads this Government—whether it be the Prime Minister or the Minister of Public Works. We are not concerned with the Government's leadership: we are concerned—concerned deeply as Canadians and as British subjects—with its measures.

Free British Subjects.

"May I say on the part of Canadian Liberalism," proceeded the Edmonton Liberal, "that we have a full appreciation of the consideration which the minister has stated has been shown by the Government to the Opposition in this matter. We are free British subjects, elected representatives of the Canadian people, and it is not only our right, but our duty as we earnestly conceive it, to discharge our responsibilities to the Canadian people to the best of our conviction. We do not take our right at the hands of the Government of the day. We recognize our responsibility only to the people of Canada whom we seek to serve.

"We believe—nay, more, we know—that this measure is being forced upon Parliament and the country, with absolute lack by the Government of any consideration for the public interest, the Canadian interest, the imperial interest. The responsibility for the condition which exists in this House rests altogether with the Government. At any moment during the past ten days or nights it has been within the power of the Government, as it was the duty of the Government, to proceed with the business of the country, instead of attempting—if the word be parliamentary—to bulldoze the Opposition, in defiance of the ordinary rules of parliamentary procedure, into accepting a proposal which it believes will do great injury to Canada and to the Empire."

Mr. Oliver reviewed the circumstances leading up to the present crisis. The second reading of the bill, he said, took place on Thursday, three weeks ago. The first clause was passed on the following Friday, and on Monday the ordinary routine of the House was taken up by the committee. "The second clause," said Mr. Oliver, "is the clause which votes the money. It places a contribution proposal as against the home construction and defence policy of the Opposition. It seems to me that when the Government at 1 o'clock this morning said to the Opposition 'you must pass this section or sit here till you do pass it,' they were using an authority which is not justified by any parliamentary procedure or practice.

"We are representing a majority of the people of Canada. We would not have been discharging the trust and responsibility which is placed upon us if we had submitted to the attempted coercion of the majority of the House. As to enforcing the rules of debate, we have no complaint so long as they are used to facilitate full and free discussion. But if they are used to attempt to prevent a free discussion then we will have to exercise such rights as the constitution gives us, subject, of course, to such coercion as may be imposed upon us by the majority in the House."

Premier Starts It.

Premier oBrden had come in while Mr. Rogers was speaking. He swung immediately into second place behind the Manitoba master, and proceeded to give effect to the dictum which Mr. Rogers had laid down. He raised the point of order that Mr. Oliver was discussing the principle of the bill, which had been settled upon the second reading, and, therefore, could not be discussed in committee.

Mr. J. A. M. Aikins, who had been put in the chair, and who is also from Manitoba, immediately rose in favor of Premier Borden.

Hon. Mr. Oliver promptly appealed. A call was sent to Speaker Sproule, and in twenty minutes he had put his clothes on and taken the chair.

Chairman Aikins reported to him that Mr. Oliver had declared the vote of $35,000,000 for three Dreadnoughts was not a gift or a loan, but was a pawn in the political game which was being played in Britain and Canada. To this Premier Borden had raised the point of order that it involved the principle, which had been settled on second reading, and could not, therefore, be discussed in committee.

Rules Against Pugsley.

Speaker Sproule read the report to the House with considerable difficulty, as the handwriting was not very clear. Dr. Pugsley rose to a point of order.

Speaker Sproule declared Dr. Pugsley out of order, but the member for St. John persisted, while the Government benches roared: "Sit down."

Dr. Pugsley said he desired to move a point of order.

Speaker Sproule—A second point of order cannot be raised while a point of order is being decided.

Dr. Pugsley—My point of order is that you are not in order, and the rest of Dr. Pugsley's remarks were drowned in cries of "Sit down," while Speaker Sproule motioned for Dr. Pugsley to take his seat.

Mr. A. K. MacLean—Would the Speaker kindly read the report again to some of us? It was not altogether clear?

Speaker Sproule did so.

Mr. George Boivin, of Shefford — At the request of some of my confreres who are not very familiar with the English language I would ask that the report be read in French.

Deputy Speaker Blondin walked to the table and with some difficulty and hesitation translated the report into French.

Hon. Frank Oliver—I object to the form of the motion.

No attention was paid to Mr. Oliver's protest.

Speaker Sproule—The question is: Shall the ruling be confirmed?

The Government side shouted "Yea," and the Liberals "Nay."

The yeas and nays were called for, and the ruling was sustained by a vote of 68 to 28.

The division was a straight party one, all the Nationalists voting with the Government.

A Dramatic Situation.

There were several illuminating features to the dramatic situation. The Conservative members, by prearrangement, flocked into the chamber. But there was no stampeding of the small Liberal relay on duty. They sat back unmoved while Mr. Rogers hurled his ultimatum, turning his back upon the chair and facing his own supporters.

It was strikingly significant that during Mr. Rogers' announcement Deputy Speaker Blondin vacated the chair, and was succeeded by Mr. J. A. M. Aikins, of Brandon. The Government is evidently fearful of allowing its Nationalist colleague, who talked on the hustings of Quebec about "shooting them through the Union Jack," to put in force their arbitrary procedure upon Canadians, whose loyalty to the emblem has never been called in question. "Ashamed of him," was the comment of one Liberal member, when, in the midst of Mr. Rogers' threats, Deputy Speaker Blondin was removed from the chair.

Premier Borden was placed in the humiliating position of playing second fiddle to "Hon. Bob." It was the Premier who sought, when the House and crowded galleries were tensely listening to the sugged statement of the Liberal position by Mr. Oliver, which was punctuated by almost continuous Liberal enthusiasm, to put a stop to the Liberal's words. Backing up his minister and real leader, Premier Borden appealed to the new chairman, Mr. Aikins, to invoke the rules to stay Mr. Oliver's trenchant analysis of the righteousness of the Liberal position on the contribution proposals.

"The principle of the bill is determined upon its second reading," complained Premier Borden, "and the member is out of order in discussing it now."

Chairman Aikins promptly executed the role for which he was appointed. He ruled that Mr. Oliver was out of order, and the Conservative-Nationalist forces, including Deputy Speaker Blondin, applauded vociferously.

Mr. Oliver promptly appealed from the ruling of the chair. The committee instantly rose, and the Speaker was summoned. Mr. Speaker Sproule had retired for the night, and some time elapsed before he entered the House.

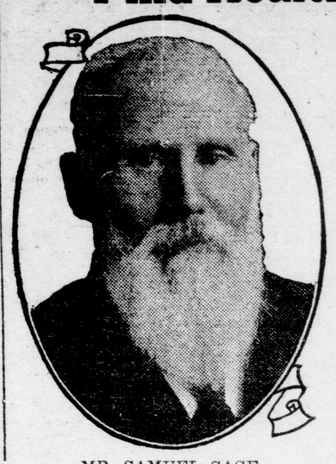
Thousands of Old People Find Health and Strength



MR. SAMUEL SAGE

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is wonderfully effective to aid digestion, thus nourishing the body and enriching the blood, which makes it especially valuable for those advanced in years.

Read what it does for Mr. S. Sage and his friends.

"I have been a user of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for many years, and find that it is the best medicine and tonic I can take. I have been troubled with gas on my stomach which causes a pain in my heart and often bowel trouble, but if I take about two tablespoonfuls of your malt in the morning when I first get up, then my food tastes fine and does not distress me. While I was on the farm I took it before each meal and found that it gave me a better appetite and sleep became refreshing. I have often recommended it to my old comrades, and they all say it does them much good.

"Many aged ladies to whom I have talked claim they could not get along if it were not for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. Some have said, 'Give me liberty or give me death,' but I say, 'Give me life and Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.'"—Samuel Sage, Adjt., Tom Custer Post, No. 178, G. A. R., Sheridan, Mich.

Get Good Fence for Your Money

FROST WOVEN FENCES are the best value because:

They are made from full-size, No. 9, heavily-galvanized wire, which has that springiness that is lacking in many makes of Woven Fence.

They are carefully woven, having laterals and stays properly placed, and fastened by a lock, absolutely secure, but which does not kink the lateral wire, and weaken it to such an extent that there is no "come back."

Laterals are waved in such a way that they have practically the same elasticity as coiled wire.

Remember that cost for posts and labor is the same, no matter what kind of a fence you buy. Why not, then, get a fence that you know is strong and durable, instead of one which has no reputation for long service?

The Frost Wire Fence Company draw and galvanize their own wire, and the material used in their Woven Fences, therefore, is absolutely the best.

Economy in buying wire fences is not getting something cheap, but, on the contrary, getting something good, because in the long-run a fence that has the service-giving qualities of the Frost Fence is worth much more to you than a fence on which you can save a few cents per rod, and which will become used up in a few years.

We are handling the complete Frost lines, which means all styles of Woven Fences and Gates as well as Lawn Fences, both in Wire and Angle Iron. These goods have behind them the best-equipped Wire Mills and Fence Factory in Canada.

LONDON, SATURDAY, MARCH 15.

DR. FRIEDMAN IN LONDON.

Dr. Friedman's visit to London, as to other places, has visualized as nothing else has done the tragedy of tuberculosis. The swarms of sufferers that have gathered round him everywhere shock the public anew with a sense of the terrible dimensions of the scourge, but there is no measuring the pathos of it all. Hopes have been excited, and it will not be long, according to Dr. Friedman, until they begin to be fulfilled or disappointed. Before he leaves for Europe again it should begin to appear whether he is to be reckoned with those who tried and failed or with the greatest benefactors of all time.

His visit to London shows Dr. Friedman no shirker of labor and inconvenience in the sacred work of relieving distress. Nothing can be more evident than that he believes himself in his discovery. Sufferers and their friends scarcely dare hope, but still they hope against hope as men have always done. The whole world hopes, and may we not be once again deceived.

PUTTING ON THE GAG.

The Government had decided to attempt an arbitrary tightening of the customary rules of committee procedure. Two weeks of solid fighting were ended, with the Liberals evidently as capable as ever of holding on. Enter Mr. Rogers at midnight to announce that debate was to be circumscribed. "After you, master," the Premier had deferentially agreed and came in to second his lord high executioner. The next Liberal speaker was to be cut down, no matter what he had to say. That was plain from the arrival of Mr. Borden, and the important manner of the new leader, whose brow like to a title-leaf foretold the nature of a tragic volume.

While the Rogers spoke, a shuffle of chairmen took place. A brother Manitoban, Mr. J. A. M. Aikins, of Brandon, replaced Mr. Blondin, and all was ready for the coup. Mr. Borden may not relish such a work, but Mr. Rogers does. He is the closure leader, a man who fits the job.

His announcement of narrower limits to discussion was a challenge promptly accepted by Mr. Oliver, who was in charge of the Liberal forces at the time. Mr. Oliver's view that it is not the Opposition, but the Government, which has defied the ordinary rules of procedure, is undoubtedly correct. What right had the Government to say that members must sit where they were and discuss nothing else until they passed the second clause of the contribution bill? Such a tyranny is particularly insolent in view of the fact urged by Mr. Oliver that the Liberal minority in Parliament certainly represent, on this naval question, the considerable majority of the Canadian people.

When Mr. Borden's appeal to the chair cut short Mr. Oliver's weighty rejoinder to the master of the administration, the chair's decision was sustained by a party vote, not on the merits of the question at all, but in accordance with the preconcerted Rogerian plan to gag the House. The episode was significant as an earnest of the arbitrary rulings that may be expected in the ensuing week. The fight is entering upon a new stage, but it can end is only one way. The Liberals will see that the people decide it.

DESPOILING A PROVINCE.

Eastern Canadians have been led to believe that the most effective and unprincipled party organization in Canada was located in Manitoba. It may be impossible to surpass the Roblin machine in depravity, but for sheer efficiency the palm must go to the more reputable, if not more scrupulous, McBride-Bowser administration. "The most perfect political machine in the Dominion, if, indeed, it does not rival the famous American Tammany Hall organization," says Mr. Cooke.

The great natural wealth of the province has been squandered, but methodically squandered. It has been treated as a political, not a public, asset. Today there is practically no arable land left for settlement; no land that the settler without capital, or with small capital, can buy at a price that will yield him a return for hard work. The population has gone ahead, but not in the country districts. Farms near a good market cost from $100 to $1,000 an acre. The province last year ate about $34,000,000 worth of foodstuffs, but about $20,000,000 worth was imported.

Mr. Cooke devotes one of his two articles to the workings of the machine. It is personally directed by Mr. Bowser, who performs for Sir Richard McBride the services that Mr. Rogers gave Mr. Roblin in Manitoba. The first and chief support of the machine is the control of liquor licenses. "There is a saying along the coast that the saloonkeeper whose district does not yield a Conservative majority, loses his license." Mr. Cooke hints at shocking conditions in the up-country among the lumber-jacks, where the traffic spreads death and impoverishment under the protection of the machine. Mr. Bowser can also control the names on the wage roll of all the important employers in the interior. The sources of revenue for most communities are railroad construction, work on provincial undertakings, such as road-building, and local works paid for by civic funds. Not only the workers directly employed on these, but the farmers and the shopkeepers dependent upon the expenditures, are coerced into voting for the Government. The lumber camps also come under the rule of the party bosses, for there are reasons why lumbermen should be grateful to an administration which has sold for $13,000,000 timber lands now worth $214,000,000.

In six years the McBride Government has sold 4,250,000 acres of land not to bona fide settlers, but chiefly to syndicates in Seattle, Tacoma, St. Paul, Winnipeg, Chicago and Toronto A well-behaved syndicate may save itself the necessity of paying anything down for its lands until it has sold out and taken its profits, but syndicates that fail to cultivate the political graces are liable to collapse. The railway and mining companies also find it profitable to favor the Government. The machine controls the civic administrations in Victoria and Vancouver, and makes the police serve its ends. All Government officials are political agents; road superintendents are particularly active, their business being to keep a vigilant outlook for all newcomers in their districts, and get them on the voters' lists.

"The real expression of political feeling in British Columbia," says Mr Cooke, "is throttled before it can be born. William John Bowser holds his finger on the political windpipe of the young province. * * * Public opinion is stultified and popular opinion drugged. There is not and cannot be an Opposition worthy of the name simply because the machine does not want an Opposition." This is a gloomy view which regards a public conscience as non-existent. The Manitoba machine and its creatures had the same belief, but there is a revolt in that province which will probably hurl the Roblin Government from power in the next election. The McBride Administration may not be yet at the end of its rope, but it must hang itself eventually.

Co-operation, not Contribution.

The Toronto Christian Endeavor Union will try to discourage slang as well as profanity. If both could be suppressed, many persons would find themselves without a vocabulary.

The son of the great Nathaniel Hawthorne has been sentenced to a year in jail for writing misleading mining literature. It seems from the number of victims that the son wrote fiction not wisely but too well.

The only Labor member of the House of Commons says the attitude of the Government is an insult to Canadian labor. He thinks Canadian workingmen are the equal of any others. To the Little Canadians such a contention is, of course, preposterous.

In the last Parliament the navy issue was not a party one. Both parties subscribed to one principle. The situation has changed. The present Government propounds a policy which has never been before the people, and upon which the parties are not united. Let the people decide between the policies and parties.

Mr. Ames, M. P., frankly says he wishes Canada to be a "province" of the Empire. Major Beattie, M. P., once protested against calling Canada a "nation." Mr. Ames and Major Beattie voice the sentiments and ideals behind the Borden naval policy. But they are not the ideals of Canadians proud of their country.

Sir Richard McBride two years ago was shouting for a fleet unit on the Pacific coast, and Borden candidates were elected in British Columbia by promising one. Today Sir Richard is shouting against a fleet unit, echoing his leader, the erstwhile Canadian navy champion. Men who are traitors to their own words should not boast of their loyalty.

According to a House of Commons ruling, the epithet, "Slippery Bill," obviously applied to Mr. Pugsley by Mr. Crothers, and reported in Hansard, is not unparliamentary. Government members are now free to refer to the leader of the Opposition as Wily Wilf, and members of the Opposition may retort upon Bludgeoning Bob (Rogers), the real if not the titular leader of the Government at present. The door is opened to a riot of nicknames. Parliamentary language connotes dignity and moderation, but how long can it preserve its reputation against the latest ruling?

FLIRTING WITH FAME.

[Fargo Courier-News.]

"Why do you insist on nibbling that hook?" said the wise fish. "You know the danger."

"Yes," replied the little fellow, "but we all have a certain appetite for glory. I am willing to take a chance for the sake of being described to that man's friends as the big fish that got away."

IT JUST LAPSED.

"Yes, I was once engaged to a duke."

"And what cruel obstacle came between two loving hearts?"

"Oh, nothing particular. We just let the option expire."

HIGHER MATHEMATICS.

[Kansas City Star.]

"Dad, you're pretty good at mathematics, ain't you?" asked the hope (and despair) of the family.

"I—I used to be," confessed old Bill Payne, scenting danger.

"Well, where a side track and a main track join they form an angle, don't they?"

"Yes."

"Well, if a wreck should tear up the track right there would it be a rectangle?"

NOT NEEDED.

[Cleveland Plaindealer.]

"Let me sell you this encyclopaedia."

"Nope. No use to me. My son is coming home from college pretty soon an' he'll know everything that's in it."

QUICK JUMPS.

[Houston Post.]

"You don't seem to be troubled by rheumatism any more?"

"Nope, I'm cured."

"Bee stings?"

"Nope, auto horn."

MARKSMANSHIP.

[Washington Star.]

"Them city chaps what was up here," said the rough backwoodsman, "said as how they were killin' time."

"Well," replied his companion, "they went about it the only way they stood a chance—talkin' it to death instid of shootin' at it."

WAY OF THE WORLD.

[Kansas City Journal.]

"She's been very busy telling me how to rear my baby."

"Well?"

"But she got into a perfect panic when I asked her to take care of the child for a couple of days. You know, I was suddenly called out of town."

IN SERIOUS MOOD.

[Washington Star.]

"You will at least enjoy the lively music during the inaugural festivities."

"I don't know," replied the statesman who was defeated. "I haven't any ear for music, and at present all tunes sound like 'Home, Sweet Home,' to me."

THE DIFFERENCE.

[Siren.]

Weiser—One stays four years and the other stays for years.

AN EXAMPLE.

HAD FIFTEEN DRINKS; DRUNK SAYS COURT

Colored Youth Expresses Disapproval of Mrs. Martha Washington.

Herbert Johnston, a colored youth, paid $5 into the city's coffers this morning for using abusive language toward Mrs. Martha Washington. He met Mrs. Washington on the street in the southeastern section of the city, and, remembering some former grievance against her, started in to express his opinion of her in words that shocked passers-by.

A Fair Exchange.

Asked if he had anything to say in his defence, Johnston gave his version of the affair, quoting some of the replies he got in answer to his accusations. It seemed that he got as good as he gave. The court imposed a fine of $5 and no costs.

Phone Cost Him $10.

Henry Sterling, who was arrested Thursday night on a charge of drunkenness after annoying the police with persistent telephone calls, was fined $10 and costs, or 21 days.

P. C. Nocnon was put on the stand, and testified that Sterling was drunk when he called at the house that night, and there was no sign of thieves in his barn, as he had claimed over the telephone.

Denied Charge.

Sterling denied that he was drunk.

"Had you been drinking that day?" asked the court.

"Well, yes," replied Sterling. I had about ten or fifteen drinks that day. I have that many every day." Whereupon the court decided that he was drunk on the night in question, and imposed a $10 penalty.

RIVER OVERFLOWED

[Special to The Advertiser.]

New Hamburg, Ont., March 15.—The River Nith overflowed its banks at midnight last night, running its course for a couple of hours across the main business street, and continuing down Union street, east of St. Peter's Lutheran Church. This morning huge cakes of ice four to five feet thick lay along the route. The water equalled the flood of 1883 in high water mark on the buildings in the vicinity. There was an immense jam above Stuart's mill dam. Most of the ice passed over the new cement dam built last fall without damaging it. The hydro-electric poles, where they cross the river between the Grand Trunk Railway and the town, were carried away and left the town without power. The damage is being repaired today by a gang of hydro employees from Berlin. It is estimated that five or six thousand dollars damage resulted from the flood here.

Flood at Preston.

Galt, March 15.—Water backing up from the still raging Grand River, meeting at its confluence the flood waters of the Speed, has caused several streets in Preston to be inundated, and boats have been brought into service to remove residents from some of the houses. The ice is piled high at the dam, and it is expected that dynamite will have to be resorted to to prevent further floods up stream. As it is, the Galt, Preston and Hespeler Railway is unable to run its cars to Hespeler.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Durham, March 15.—The Saugeen River is again running wild. Yesterday the cement dam belonging to the Coal Milling Company was instantly swept away, and for a time it seemed as if the jam at the C. P. R. bridge, a few rods below, was in danger on account of the blockade. Early this morning a big jam of ice piled up at the head of the dam of the McGowan Flour Mills, and the water soon began to rush over the sides and run down through the town, causing cellars and stables to be flooded, resulting in considerable damage in a number of cases. Cattle had to be removed from stables at considerable risk, some of them being nearly submerged before they could be rescued. This is the first flood of the season, and unless the weather freezes up a little it is hard to say what additional damage may be in store

JOAQUIM MILLER, THE POET OF THE SIERRAS

[By Special Arrangement With the Winnipeg Telegram.]

I must say a word or two today about Joaquin Miller, "The Poet of the Sierras," who has just passed away. He is the kind of singer who will make a brave showing in memorial articles, in which Bohemian writers will celebrate his picturesque career. Miller was a real old-time poet, one of the forty-niner despisers of convention. It is now forty years since he paid his first trip to England and made a little furore in polite circles in London by his unconventional dress and western verses racy of the Californian soil. And in America, during all the intervening years, he has been looked upon as a national figure, one of the eccentric products of the new world, as characteristic of the great west as Bret Harte or Whitcomb Riley. The soubriquet "Poet of the Sierras" has been well earned by this son of the clouds, for it was his delight to live up among the Californian mountain tops, a modern hermit, an unconventional recluse; but neither forgetting the world below nor forgotten by the world, Joaquin Miller, living in his log hut up among the Sierras, was as much an object for tourists' sight-seeing as Pike's Peak itself. And the poet rather liked visitors. That is how he retained his humanity. But, after all's said and done, none but a crackbrained poet would leave wife and family and the world of men to live in a log hut near the snow-line in the Sierras.

When we study the poetry of Miller we find that the thought is pretty thin. He is not a great poet in any sense of the word. He has produced some pleasing verse, but nothing that savors of immortality. As might be expected, he professes to scorn the monetary pursuits of the base world down in the valley, and scolds men because of their "shallow wit and shallow ways." In his poem, "The Isles of the Amazons," occur these characteristic stanzas:

Come, lovers, come, forget your pains!
I know upon this earth a spot
Where clinking coins, that clank as chains
Upon the souls of men, are not;
Nor man is measured for his gains
Of gold that stream with crimson stains.

There snow-topped towers crush the clouds,
And break the still abode of stars,
Like sudden ghosts in snowy shrouds,
New broken through their earthly bars,
And condors whet their crooked beaks
On lofty limits of the peaks.

O men, that fret as frets the main!
You irk me with your eager gaze
Down in the earth for fat increase—
Eternal talks of gold and gain,
Your shallow wit, your shallow ways,
And breaks my soul across the shoal
As breakers break on shallow seas.

In many of his poems he praises California, land of sunshine, framed by the sea on one side and the white-peaked mountains on the other. In his opinion, California is the earthly paradise:

Behold where Beauty walks with Peace!
Behold where Plenty pours her horn
Of fruits, of flowers, fat increase,
As generous as light of morn.

Green Shasta, San Diego, seas
Of bloom and green between them rolled.
Great herds in grasses to their knees,
And green earth garmented in gold.

White peaks that prop the sapphire blue
Look down on Edens, such as when
That fair, first spot perfection knew
And God walked perfect earth with men.

I say God's kingdom is at hand
Right here, if we but lift our eyes;
I say there lies no line or land
Between this land and Paradise.

If we were to go through Miller's poems in search for stanzas to stand as a memorial of him, I believe that this graceful little poem would best represent his style and his philosophy:

'Mid white Sierras, that slope to the sea,
Like turbulent lands. Go dwell in the skies
And the thundering tongues of Yosemite
Shall persuade you to silence, and you shall be wise.

I but sing for the love of song and the few
Who loved me first and shall love me last;
And the storm shall pass, as the storms have passed,
For never were clouds but the sun came through.

Joaquin.

CARS PILED UP

Bolt Worked Loose and Derail Was Thrown at Tunnel.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Sarnia, March 14.—Several cars were piled up and the main line blocked at the American side of the tunnel yesterday, when a derail switch was opened. It took several hours to repair the damage. The fact that no trainmen were injured is accounted for by the slow speed at which the train was travelling at the time. Express No. 5, from Toronto, was delayed for several hours until the tracks were cleared again. The cause of the wreck is explained by the officials as a bolt working loose.

DR. FRIEDMAN AND HIS CURE

Tells How He Experimented With Bacillus Originating in Cold-Blooded Animal.

OBTAINING THE IDEAL

[By Dr. Friedman.]

"The desired results I obtained immediately when I succeeded in finding a bacillus which originated from a cold-blooded animal, the turtle. This strain of turtle bacilli was originally almost avirulent and atoxic and it lost its last traces of virulence by frequent transplantations.

"When I had it in that condition—and not before—I applied the remedy to human beings. At first I injected myself with it at different times. After that I gave it to adults infected with tuberculosis. Later on to tubercular children, and, finally, when the curative effects were found invariably the same, to healthy children of tubercular surroundings for immunizing purposes.

"I have found this remedy harmless whenever I used it for patients from the earliest childhood to the most advanced age, in all forms of application—subcutaneous, intramuscular and intravenous—even in big doses, and equally efficient in all forms of tuberculosis, pulmonary, bone joint, glandular, and skin. Aside from absolutely hopeless cases whose fates were already sealed, the remedy has proved its efficiency in most instances.

"To obtain the ideal to eradicate tuberculosis as an endemic disease, it is necessary not only to cure the tubercular individuals now living, but also to protect the future generations from this infection by a method following in principle Jenner's vaccination."

(With Regards to the Pujo Committee.)

We are looking, we are looking for the masters of finance,
And it's no use fleeing from us as we dauntlessly advance
With a summons and subpoena and a warrant in our hand
And with double-barreled questions and an air of stern command:
We are trailing wily captains of the wicked system camp
And the malefactors tremble when they hear our sturdy tramp;
There are men of mighty millions who were never known to quail
Till they heard us stepping softly as we hit upon their trail.

Let the Wall street powers thunder, we are not a bit afraid,
We're the bravest little hunters that you ever saw arrayed,
We've been probing, poking, peeking through the jungle where they roam,
And when we've got 'em captured through our skill and courage high,
The fierce and savage monsters who are feared in every home;
We'll put 'em on the witness stand and make 'em testify.
We're out for big game hunting—there's a lot upon our list,
And when at last we've got em, WE SHALL SLAP 'EM ON THE WRIST!

KING GEORGE OPENS ENGINEERING WONDER

Drive Through the Streets Witnessed by Hundreds of Thousands.

[Canadian Press.]

New York, March 15. — A London cable says: Hundreds of thousands of Londoners have an opportunity today to welcome the King and Queen as they pass through the east end on their way to the formal opening of one of the engineering wonders of the world, the metropolitan water board's new $2,500,000 reservoir at Chingford. The carriage in which their majesties will drive in semi-state from Buckingham Palace to Highstone, Leytonstone, a distance of ten miles, will be open, if the weather is fine. From this point the King and Queen, with their suites, will complete the journey in close automobiles.

From his place on a specially erected royal stand at the pumping station the King will press an electric button, which, setting in motion a series of powerful explosive pumps, will release the water from a reservoir, whose capacity is three thousand million gallons. The area of the reservoir is 416 acres, with four and a half mile sof embankment. The explosive pumps will afterwards be inspected by their majesties.

Special precautions will be taken against suffragettes, and only persons holding official cards of invitation will be admitted to the reservoir for the opening ceremony.

Will Thorne, member of Parliament for the southern division of West Ham, has declined an invitation to be on the platform as one of the representatives of the borough benefitted by the reservoir, on the ground of West Ham's deep and chronic poverty.

A MONTH FOR MARJORIE

For Hurling Pot of Paint Through Home Office Window.

[Canadian Press.]

London, March 15.—Marjorie Master, the militant suffragette school teacher, who yesterday threw a pot of green paint through a window of the home office, was sentenced today by the police magistrate to a month's imprisonment. She informed the magistrate that it was her method of lifting the gauntlet thrown down to women by the Government in ignoring the question of votes for women in the King's speech in the opening of Parliament.

She was followed in the prisoners' enclosure by a male suffragette, who had harangued a crowd outside the headquarters of the militant suffragette society. He had shouted to the populace: That's the place which ought to be burned down," and the police promptly arrested him. He was bound over to keep the peace.

The suffragettes today opened another very active campaign of destruction of the mails. Many of the letter boxes in London and their contents were greatly damaged in the course of the night and this morning by the insertion of ink, oil and corrosive acids. A large force of police has been placed on special duty to guard against these outrages and to arrest the criminals.

Toronto's Rich Families Vie With Wealthy of Largest Cities in Extravagant Living

Two Silver Fox Sets for $14,000 Purchased in Fur Store—Some Women Spend as High as $10,000 a Year on Clothes—$150 and $200 Hats Find a Ready Sale—One Family Maintains a Private Orchestra at $8,000 a Year.

| Caterer's services at daughter's wedding | 1,000 |
| Monthly salary for chef | 150 |
| Three hats for daughter | 450 |

[By R. B., in Toronto Star, Weekly.]

No, these prices are not stolen from the cost-of-living booklet issued by the Motormen's Union. Neither are they "Exhibit A" in a hen-pecked husband's suit of divorce. They mean merely that plenty of rich men in Toronto face such liabilities every month and scrawl off a dozen checks with the joyous abandon of a deaf tramp hit by a locomotive. "Three hats for daughter, $450." That's the sort of thumbscrews from which the patient poor are spared.

When Toronto passed up the ladder from Little York, about twenty years ago, the quantity of surplus wealth and the disposition to spend it slipped their leash and joined the Pittsburg-Chicago-Cincinnati circuit of extravagant standards and restless ambitions. Today, the rich families of Toronto, numbering hundreds, vie with the wealthy of the world's largest cities in their spending addictions, their outlay on travel, the cost of their homes and furnishings, the elaborateness of entertainment, and the gratification of luxurious notions whether in food, clothes or social designs.

There are many men in Toronto with an income of $100,000 a year. It looks like a generous piece of pocket money. But when the wife dropped into a fur store and paid $14,000 for two silver fox sets (as was actually done the other day), it is not difficult to see where that hundred thousand will soon become about a dollar and ten cents short of a good cigar. The fourteen-thousand-dollar customer was the wife of a Cobalt millionaire, and the furs are intended to "finish off" the street costumes of herself and daughter. More than a few Toronto homes require quite $10,000 a year to meet ordinary expenses of fuel, servants, food, entertainment, travel, etc. Then $5,000 (or five dollars) may go to churches and charity, $3,000 on dress, $2,000 on pin money and incidentals. Such items are matters of common experience in this city and the figures are medium, not maximum quotations.

Extravagant Dinners.

While the spectacular performances of press-agented New York families have lowered the popular opinion of plutocracy all over America, it is emphatically untrue that Toronto's moneyed class has as yet developed many of the "effete and moribund" characteristics of the brothers and sisters in two or three centres south of the border. Toronto has yet to see its first dinner party where the guests come disguised as apes or rabbits, or where a half dozen Salomes float down from the ceiling and conduct a dance in the centre of the viands. But the event of "having a few friends in," which used to cost in Little York about $2.00 total, now runs up to $200, $500 or even more, depending on the caterer, number of servants required, etc. So that Toronto, while still relatively temperate in the "blowing in" of surplus fortunes is proving an apt desciple in the art and may some day attain the Newport standard of filling a mammoth pie with live doves.

Every year added to Toronto's life increases the wealth of the few and intensifies the arrangement of social cliques. When "the second circle" starts to rival the "first circle" in lavishness of entertainment or distinction of guests, it becomes the "first circle" to spurt forward instantly with something even more elaborate and guests even more distinguished. "Excelsior" becomes the watchword and it may be only a question of time, as with Newport, until a neurasthenic craze to outshine an ambitious rival drives the first Canadian household to announce a bathing-suit dinner party, where the guests float about the gymnasium in tubs and spear their own fish.

$10,000 a Year on Clothes.

Just at the present moderate stage, the only remarkable points of difference in the spending account of the very rich and the very poor are the price tags on clothes, summer residences and motor cars — certainly harmless in themselves, and the legitimate right of the man or woman who can afford them.

"What amounts are spent by some of Toronto's richest women on their clothes?" I asked a society woman who knows every compass point of fashionable life.

"From $200 to $10,000 a year. By the latter figure I refer to one or two ultra extravagant women who pick up five-hundred dollar dresses in Paris, pay a thousand dollars a year for jewelry, and never look at a hat that isn't marked above $200. Hundreds—literally hundreds—of Toronto women of fashion spend from $500 to $1,500 a year on clothing alone."

To prove such a statement I questioned the head of one of the largest Toronto fur establishments. "What are some of your prices for fashionable garments?"

He quoted the sale, before mentioned, at $14,000, and added: "That is unusually large. One of the biggest local sales was made the other day —$3,500 for a mink coat. A large number are made at $2,000 and $500 is a very common figure in a day's run. Although this winter has been extremely mild, more high-class furs were sold than ever in our history for the reason that the wearing of furs has ceased to be a matter of warmth primarily, but of fashion. My experience in Toronto has convinced me that no city of its size has more ready money or a greater eagerness to pay generously for the mark of quality."

Many Hats at Over $150.

"And what prices for some of your fanciest hats for women?" I questioned another dealer who comes into touch with the trade of the rich.

"Three hundred and seventy-five dollars was paid for one of our hats last season. Two hundred and fifty is not unusual, and many were sold at $150. Do they represent value? Yes, value in exclusiveness and taste as well as the best materials. The woman with a ready purse who sees the hat she wants will not hesitate at an extra fifty or even hundred dollars. The three hundred dollar sales are made, of course, to people who have abundance of wealth. Such a purchase is merely an incidental in the week's shopping."

Do you want to entertain—or rather do you want a caterer to entertain for you? If the latter, then the bill is multiplied by two or three. A caterer's services at an afternoon tea run from $50 to $150; at a wedding $200 to $1,000. It all depends whether he supplies merely the edibles or acts as master of ceremonies. More than one catering company in Toronto can fill an order for butlers, footmen, ladies' maids, chefs, in fact every person and thing outside of the hostess and guests. And no doubt, if required, the caterer could supply the guests, too.

"We can take the whole affair out of the hostess' hands," was one expert's statement, but of course that means extra money."

If one entered upon a description of the luxurious "fads" with which some well-known society devotees surround themselves, the reason of their financial extravagance would require no further explanation. One household maintains a three-piece orchestra of foreign artists at an expense of nearly $8,000 a year, nor does the orchestra play in public, but entirely for private family audiences.

That is but one of numerous indulgences which when achieved by reason of the excesive wealth, when the appetite for further novelty and more picturesque ideals of "big spending." The tendency in Toronto in these days of flowing money is shared alike by the Greek shoe-shiner and the son of the millionaire jam merchant. A good spender is the aristocrat of the hour. Everybody's doing it. And some are overdoing it.

Explorer Amundsen Asks Are Polar Expeditions Worth the Trouble?

He Says They Are—Amundsen Outlines His Plans for Dash to the North Pole—Scientific Value of Explorations.

"The North and South Poles: The Steam Boilers of the Earth" is the title of an article by Roald Amundsen in the American-Scandinavian Review, the official organ of the American-Scandinavian Foundation. The distinguished explorer tells for the first time his plans for the coming expedition to the North Pole. At the same time he answers the question, which the recent tragedy of Capt. Scott's death has again raised in the mind of the public: Are Polar expedition worth while? Capt. Amundsen writes:

Is it worth while? is the question I am often asked. Are the results such as to justify the enormous expenditure of human energy and wealth consumed in polar expeditions? Your researches may interest a few learned scientists, but of what practical benefit can they be to the men who plod in the common ways of life? No doubt this old question will lift its head again, now that my companions and I are preparing to start on our long-projected voyage to the Arctic regions.

Although the North Pole has been reached since I formulated my plans, I expect to carry them out precisely as I first stated them before the Norwegian Geographic Society in October, 1908. The experience we have gained on the Antarctic continent can be of little or no service to us, as the conditions we expect to encounter are entirely different, and we face now an expedition compared to which our trip to the South Pole was a mere pleasure jaunt. We shall probably be gone five years, but are prepared to spend seven years in the Arctic regions if necessary to complete our plan, which includes a drifting across the Polar Basin from the Bering Sea, across the vicinity of the North Pole, and out again on the Atlantic side of the continent. We know well that the undertaking is hazardous and that much suffering awaits us. Is it worth while?

My answer is that to extend human knowledge is always worth while. The time has surely come when we human beings can no longer be content without knowing even the little planet on which we live. We must realize that all that we have and are we owe to the scientists, the patient searchers after knowledge. Without them we should probably still be killing our meat with stone knives and crunching it raw. Knowledge must first come to the scientist before it can be applied to the practical everyday concerns of the world and become of benefit to all humanity.

The importance of the polar regions in the household economy of nature is little realized. The North Pole and the South Pole have been aptly called the two steam boilers of the earth. If the power they generate were suddenly to cease, all activity on the earth would come to an end. It is a new thought to most of us that life and power come out of the frozen fastnesses of the poles, and yet it is true. We have all learned in our school days how the heavier water of the Arctic regions presses in on the lighter — because heated—water of the equatorial regions, and so causes ocean currents, just as the same process in the air causes the trade winds, but it is only recently that the science of oceanography has revealed to us the stimulating, rejuvenating effect of these frigid currents on the plant and vegetable life in the ocean. The teeming fish life in the Atlantic Ocean depends for its existence on the food brought it on the currents from the virgin ice fields of the north. With the mixture of the northward flowing warm current and the southward flowing cold waters from the Polar Basin fish life is waked to activity; the fishes begin to spawn and become, as it were, resuscitated. If my polar expedition brought no other result beyond an exact study of the polar currents in question, their course, velocity and direction, as well as the animal and vegetable life they contain—then the expedition would richly have paid for itself.

The meteorological observations will constitute another important phase of our expedition. In this I am working in conjunction with Professor Hergesell, Count Zeppelin's partner, who is thoroughly in sympathy with the project. I propose to take a wireless apparatus with me, and Professor Hergesell hopes, through the generosity of some of his German friends, to establish four or more meteorological stations, to be placed in such a way that they encompass the Polar Basin, where I shall be closed in—one being probably in Alaska, one in Siberia, one in Spitzbergen and one in Labrador. If this can be done, the Fram will, through her wireless apparatus, be in constant communication with these stations; we shall all make our observations as to wind and weather at the same time, and in this way cover a much larger area for a longer period and in a much more exhaustive manner than would otherwise have been possible. What I have said of the polar currents in the water holds good of the currents in the air; they give the key to the weather conditions the world over.

In speaking of the scientific value of the expedition I wish to lay especial stress on the magnetic observations. Our work in this field will dovetail with that of the Carnegie Institution, which has at its service of the good ship Carnegie, ably directed by Professor L. A. Bauer. His vessel is constructed of wood and copper, with a special view of taking magnetic observations, and has already done much excellent work in this field in all quarters of the globe. If it is possible for me to work in conjunction with the Carnegie, adding my observations to those of Professor Bauer, both being worked out simultaneously, then the scientific world will at last have a completed magnetic record from which to make deductions. This will probably be the only opportunity for such joint investigation, as the time required for polar records is so long, and it is a very unusual coincidence that sends two vessels so remarkably well fitted for the purpose into these waters at the same time. I feel, therefore, that the vital importance of this phase of our work can hardly be overstated.

The personality of John B. The city might use the extra money to inscribe their names on an honorary tablet.

The English printing firm of Hazell, Watson & Viney, Limited, is reported to have introduced many advanced plans of social service among its 1,400 employees. Year by year some phenomenal sprinter succeeds in taking a few seconds off the record for fast running, and one wonders whether the limit will ever be reached. This year's phenomenon is Hannes Kolehmainen, the Finn, who recently ran five miles in 24 minutes 29 1-5 seconds. This is the fastest time for that distance ever made by a runner, unless the prisoners who used to escape from their Indian captors by outrunning the entire tribe may have bettered this record, but nobody held a stop-watch on them.

A palatial hospital for dumb animals is to be erected in New York city by the Women's League for Animals. It will contain an operating room for dogs, padded cells for horses, with blind staggers, apartments for sick cats, a kitchen for preparing special food for animal patients, and a roof garden or paddock where animals recovering from sickness or operations may have the benefit of fresh air. This in a city where there is shamefully inadequate provision for children ill with contagious diseases.

Fisherman? Henry Van Dyke Angles For Men and Fish and For Everything in Between

Princeton Professor Out-Waltons Izaak, for He Casts His Flies for Things That Do Not Swim as Well.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke is the greatest fisherman in America. He is a fisher of men and a fisher of fishes. And in between, on the stream of life, he fishes for thoughts, for minds, for Nature's secrets and for ideas—the great ideas his fellowmen have set down in prose and poetry.

Dipping into a well-rounded mind like Henry Van Dyke's is like gathering the gems from a whole shelfful of literary masterpieces. For he is clergyman, professor, poet, booklover, philosopher and fisherman.

And in each he is a master!

There is nothing in his stature, a little below the average in height,, to indicate greatness. There is nothing in his gentle dignity of manner to suggest a confidence in self. But half an hour's conversation with him opens the well of information and thought stored up in his big brain.

Dr. Van Dyke was born in Germantown, Pa., in 1852. He is as much in tune with the world today as when he stepped out of his college swaddling clothes with the Princeton class of '73, enjoys LIVING as much or more.

He is first of all a literary man. There is no such word as "loaf" in his dictionary of daily terms. Humanity is a constant book of wonders to him, and recreation simply another way for him to interpret the songs of the stream and the trees into words the world can understand.

Dr. Van Dyke's favorite summer pastime is FISHING. Why? Because, according to his own definition, "fishing" is not all there is to fishing."

It's the panacea for world-weariness and the pastime which brings the mind of man and the heart of nature into close and quiet communion, as well as the science of dropping the fly where the fish will bite.

After Shakespeare and Milton, whom he calls the two GREAT poets, he numbers among his favorite book friends Tennyson, upon whose verse he is considered an authority, and Shelley and Keats.

As pastor of the famous old brick Presbyterian Church at Fifth avenue, and Thirty-seventh street, New York, he won his fame as a clergyman.

Essays on literary and theological subjects and a sucession of charming stories and poetry have long since created for him a popular following among readers.

In 1900 he accepted the chair of English literature in Princeton, and since then he has found time to write and lecture, as well as to be instructor, advisor and friend to the students of the university.

Dr. Van Dyke's home is "Avalon," Princeton, a beautiful, old colonial where he leads the life of a country gentleman, writes, reads, studies and hunts.

A few days ago he spent a morning travelling and reading, an afternoon skating, and an evening as a guest at a dinner given in his honor. He is 60 years old, but——

TIRED? Not at all. He was just living one of the days of the symmetrical, well-filled life.

DENEAU LANDS BIG PITCHER; IS AFTER TWO GOOD CATCHERS

Manager of London Team Is Losing No Time in Picking Up the Good Ones—Schedule Will Be Out Monday—Silcox Wants a Job.

[BY JINX.]

The Canadian League schedule will not be issued until Monday night. This piece of information was gleaned from President Stevely this morning. The original intention was to release the schedule today, but it could not be arranged in time, thus the postponement. It will be out Monday evening for sure.

Deneau Lands Nichols.

Baseball news in its relation to the London club was a trifle scarce this morning. About the only letter of any interest received at the London club headquarters was a communication from Manager Deneau. Rube states that he has finally landed big Nichols, the pitcher, and his signed contract was forwarded in today. Nichols, according to Rube, is a real find, and he will be a valuable addition to the London Club's pitching staff.

Two Catchers in Line.

Rube has still three contracts out. Two of these have been sent to catchers and he expects to hear from them this coming week. The other one was forwarded to a likely pitcher, and if he can be landed, the local club need not worry about its pitching department.

Rube expresses regret over the death of "Chaucer" Elliott. "He sure was a dandy fellow, both on and off the field," is the tribute paid the late ex-manager of the St. Thomas club by the London club leader.

Silcox Wants a Trial.

President Stevely received a letter from Pitcher Tommy Silcox, who was released by the local management last summer. Silcox finished the season with Guelph, but was released by that club this spring. He is now a free agent, and he asks for another trial with the London club.

There is little danger of him getting it. The London club was convinced last summer, when they released him that Silcox was not fast enough for the Canadian League.

He Wants to Come Back

TOM SILCOX, former London pitcher, who is asking the local management for another trial. He was released by London last summer, and released this spring by Guelph.

INTERMEDIATES ENGAGED IN PRACTICE ON ARENA ICE

Lee Walden Was Not Present, But Will Join Team Today—Londoners in Toronto Forming Themselves Into a Rooters' Club to Cheer for Team.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Toronto, March 14.—The London Intermediates held a light workout on the Arena ice this evening, and seemed to be at home on the big surface. The players are in good shape, although they did not loosen up to any great extent.

The ice was a trifle sticky, but the Arena management have promised a good hard sheet for Monday night. The London players confined their work this evening to racing up and down the ice in order to get accustomed to the length of the rink. Lee Walden, the right wing man, did not arrive with the team, but he is expected tomorrow.

Quite a number of raft birds witnessed the practice and sized up the team. That the London players have speed was shown by frequent dashes up the ice. Grannary, the big cover point, looked to be the best man on the ice, although Billy Borland also demonstrated that he knew something about the game. Reid, the fast little centre man, romped all over the rink and seemed to feel more at home than any of the others, although the big ice space did not seem to bother any of the players to any extent. Gillies showed a great deal of speed and some nice stick work, although he did not extend himself very much. The London players are stopping at the Empress Hotel during their stay in this city. The Collingwood team is expected in Toronto Monday morning. A special train is being run from the northern town and a section of the Arena will be reserved for the Collingwood fans.

There is a big local demand for seats for the game, and it is expected that the Arena will be crowded. Referee Caldwell will officiate. A number of London students at the local universities are forming themselves into a rooters' club to cheer for the Forest City seven, and it is likely the majority of the Toronto fans will also pull for the Western Ontario team.

Some Kid, This Morenz

Davy Sneddon, sporting editor of the Toronto World, witnessed the All-Star Orillia game in the latter town last evening, and this is what he says of Wilbur Morenz, the local boy, who is playing for the All-Stars:

"Morenz and Tobin played brilliant hockey on the wings, and had it on their checks at every stage. Both showed something new in the real thing in back-checking. Morenz hung right onto Jupp, and worried him from one end of the rink to the other.

ALL-STARS BROKE ORILLIA'S RECORD

Beat Them on Home Ice by a Score of 4 to 3.

MORENZ WAS A STAR

Only Game Orillia Has Lost All Season—Ice Was in Bad Shape.

Orillia, March 14.—In the return match here this evening the All-Stars scored four goals to the champions' three, making the total for the round: Orillia 12, All-Stars 4. The ice was soft and very wet.

The game opened tamely, with a few rushes both ways. Jupp and Butterfield combined for a dangerous attack on the All-Stars' goal. Laird relieved, and Johnston, for the champions, followed up by stopping a couple of hot ones. The All-Stars' first goal was accomplished by a nice piece of combination play, Smith doing the trick in eight minutes. Both teams showed the effect of the heavy ice, and there was no brilliant play either individual or combination. The champions scored at the end of twelve minutes. Butterfield getting the goal. During the balance of the first half both teams checked back closely, and Laird and Johnston handled easily anything that came within their respective nets.

In the second half the champions started off with a different brand of hockey, but the All Stars met the pace easily and their forwards combined much better than they did in Toronto. The All-Stars scored the first two goals, Morenz getting the first in 1:10 and Tobin the second in four minutes. With the score three to one against them, the champions wakened up. Tudhope got the next in seven minutes, and Reid, with a splendid rush from point, got the fourth in four minutes, again tieing the score. The All-Stars broke away with a rush from the face-off and scored in 30 seconds. When the champions realized the possibility of a defeat and the breaking of the season's record they came to life, and for the next ten minutes kept the puck around the All-Stars' goal, and Laird was kept busy every second handing out the puck and the slush and water that accompanied it. For the All-Stars Morenz, of London; Tobin, of Stratford, and Sandercock, of Woodstock, distinguished themselves. The champions seemed to feel that the game was not of vital importance, and did not exert themselves except during the last ten minutes. The lineup:

Referee—Gren. Caldwell.

SIR THOMAS WILL REPLY NEXT WEEK

No Decision Yet Whether His Challenge Will Be Modified.

[Canadian Press.]

London, March 15. — Sir Thomas Lipton will reply through the Royal Ulster Yacht Club next week to the rejection of the challenge for the America's Cup, which he has received in a long dispatch.

Sir Thomas today expressed surprise at the comparison of the New York yachtsmen of his challenge in 1907 with the present one. The former challenge, he said, was made under the universal rule which would produce a boat capable of racing everywhere after the Americas Cup race, while the boat which would have been built had the latest challenge been accepted, would have been a freak to be thrown on the scrap heap after the race.

No decision has yet been reached by Sir Thomas as to whether his challenge will be modified.

"GUNBOAT" SMITH WON IN THE SECOND ROUND

Knocked Out Bombardier Wells, Although Latter Far Surpassed Him in the First Round—Result a Big Surprise.

New York, March 14. — "Gunboat Smith, the California heavyweight, knocked out Bombardier Wells, heavyweight champion of England, in the second round of a scheduled ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden here tonight. A right on the point of the jaw was the blow that finally put the British champion out after he had weakened under punishment.

Wells Good in First.

Wells had all the better of the first round, jabbing his left repeatedly to Smith's face and cleverly blocking Smith's attempts to counter. A hard left hook, followed with a left and right to the wind, puzzled Smith. He made wild attempts to land, missing several swings, while Wells got in lefts and rights to the face, and a right uppercut on the neck. Smith was wild throughout the round, only succeeding in landing a couple of lefts on the face.

Smiling and Confident.

Wells came out of his corner for the second round smiling and confident, but Smith rushed at him, landing a hard right in the stomach. Smith rushed again, hooking his left to the head and landing a right overhand swing to the jaw. Wells went down for a count of [illegible] and got up dazed. Smith was right on top of him, hooking left and right, and, with a left hook to the jaw and a right swing to the back of the head, sent Wells down again for a count of nine. Wells struggled to his feet, but was hardly able to raise his hands in defence, while Smith crossed his right full to the point of the jaw, sending Wells down and out for good.

Result a Surprise.

While Wells was on the floor for a count of six the bell rang, ending the round, but Wells still lay helpless. He had to be carried to his corner, and it was nearly ten minutes before he was able to leave the ring, and then had to be assisted.

The result was a complete surprise, as Wells' showing in the first round far surpassed that of Smith.

Wells weighed in at 192 and Smith at 182½ ringside.

During the Hot Springs spring series Messrs. Stahl and Clarke may get a good line on each other should the fates call for a show-down between them in October. They could work out details for next fall's classic right now but for the presence on earth of such meddlers as C. Mack and J. McGraw.

You Can Make This Saving

IN THE United States over 400,000 cars have been equipped with No-Rim-Cut Tires. Over two million tires were bought by men who watch tire-mileage closely. In Canada, in scarcely more than two years, we have sold 90,000 tires, enough to equip over 20,000 cars.

The output of our Canadian factory has jumped from 25 tires to 500 tires per day.

All but two of the Canadian automobile makers have contracted for No-Rim-Cut Tires for their 1913 cars.

In a new market, could we have made this record if No-Rim-Cut Tires were not giving increased mileage?

WHAT SELLS THESE TIRES?

There are two main causes of short life in ordinary tires. Rim-cutting and Overloading.

No-Rim-Cut Tires cannot rim-cut. No-Rim-Cut Tires are 10% oversize. These two features cut the cost of Tire mileage 48%. These money-saving features are responsible for our record sales in Canada and the United States.

No-Rim-Cutting Saves 23%

Before we made No-Rim-Cut Tires nearly one tire in four was wrecked through rim-cutting. The tremendous pressure on the fabric of the tire, where it was held by the hook-shaped side ring of the rim, brought about an internal friction that soon ruined the tire. 23% of ordinary tires are still wrecked by rim-cutting. No-Rim-Cut Tires save this 23%.

The Passing of "Rule of Thumb"

When rubber is such a variable product, how can we keep No-Rim-Cut Tires uniform in quality?

This is how:

At our Bowmanville plant we maintain a staff of chemists—graduates from leading universities. These men analyse in a completely equipped laboratory every shipment of raw rubber that enters the plant, every roll of duck used in Goodyear products.

They refine a sample of the rubber in miniature machines. They "cure" it in a miniature furnace. The product of this test is the same as our factory would produce from the same raw rubber.

The sample is then tested for strength, toughness and elasticity. It is chemically analysed to see what must be combined with it to give the greatest tire wear.

Every roll of duck used for building tires also goes through a laboratory test.

Duck that looks alright and feels alright is often rejected because it does not measure up to specifications which we know to be the best for making tires.

This preliminary testing, careful inspection at every stage of manufacture and mechanical test of the finished tires, convert varying materials into a product of unvarying quality—into No-Rim-Cut Tires which save every purchaser 48% in tire cost.

10% Oversize Saves 25%

The car manufacturer provides tire equipment for ordinary loads. But men will overload their cars. They will add heavy equipment that is not provided for by the manufacturer. No-Rim-Cut Tires are fully 10% over the rated size. Experts will tell you that each 5% increase in size adds 15% extra mileage. When we place the added mileage at 25%, we feel that we are estimating conservatively what the average car owner may expect from No-Rim-Cut Tires.

Three College Records Are Broken at the O. A. C. Meet

Two of Them Were Acquatic Records—Relay Race Record Broken Also—Saskatchewan Student Is Individual Champion.

Guelph, March 14.—There were three college records broken at this year's annual indoor athletic meet at the Ontario Agricultural College. White, of year '16, annexed two, with a high dive of 54½ inches, and a time of 1:54¾ seconds in the 440-yard potato race, while in the year 1916 won the relay in the record time of 1 min. 7 3-5 secs.

Class 1913 are year champions, with a grand total of 76 points for all athletes of the present college year, while the freshmen, 1916, are a close second with 73 points. It is a good omen for college athletics that the first year have done so well.

J. Pope, of Saskatchewan, is individual champion, with 37 points, while Palmer and Davies, both of '13, have 19 and 15 points respectively to their credit. In what is known as "floor events," 1914 leads with 51 points, while in aquatic events 1913 heads the list with 39.

The results:

15-yard dash—Pope, '14; Palmer, '13; Varey, '15.

Hitch-and-kick—Chambers, '15; Curran, '16; Palmer, '13.

GREAT GOOD WOULD ACCRUE IF AMERICA LOST THE CUP

Charles C. Allom Tells New Yorkers That It Would Be of Good Benefit to Yachting—Hopes Sir Thomas Amends Challenge.

[Canadian Press.]

New York, March 15.—In connection with reports that some other British yachtsman than Sir Thomas Lipton is a prospective challenger for the America's Cup, it develops definitely that at least one such Englishman with eyes on the cup is Charles C. Allom, owner of the fast 15-meter cutter Istria, which has made phenomenal speed in past performances.

It is regarded doubtful that Mr. Allom is the yachtsman whom the New York club members had in mind when they let it be known that another challenge was anticipated, for it was then said that the prospective challenger would propose no conditions other than those prescribed by the deed of gift upon the length of the boat.

"I have had the project of a challenge in mind," Mr. Allom, who is in this city, is quoted today as saying, "but with a 23-meter boat, under international rules, the boat to be built by a syndicate consisting of several of my friends." He had made informal inquiries of the New York Yacht Club, he said, long before the publication of the Lipton challenge. He was in no wise in competition with Sir Thomas Lipton in his challenge, and he hoped that Sir Thomas would see fit to amend his conditions so that a race for the America's Cup might be held.

"The greatest good that could possibly accrue to the sport would result from the loss of the cup to America," he said, for immediately there would be an effort to bring it back, and each effort would cause some new advance in the science of yachting." He pointed out that conditions had changed since the deed of gift of the America's Cup had been drawn so that a proportionate development of a 90-foot yacht would place it in the schooner class.

FIRST HUSSARS LOST BOTH INDOOR GAMES

Meds and Y. M. C. A. Trimmed Them in Double-Header Last Night at Armories.

The First Hussars were beaten in both games of an indoor baseball double-header in the Armories last night. In the first game, with Harry Tozer pitching, the Hussars lost by the score of 13 to 12. The game was close at all stages, the Hussars getting an early lead, but being unable to hold it.

In the second game the Hussars were snowed under by the Y. M. C. A. team. The score was a large one, and nobody kept any track of it. McLeod and Ward were the batteries for the losers.

A return game will be played next Thursday night.

Bobby Wallace of the Browns brought his contract with him when he reported at St. Louis for the training trip to Waco and turned it over to President Hedges signed. It was Wallace's eighteenth annual major league contract, and it is said for him that he has never been a holdout, though he generally takes his time about signing the papers.

BENEFITED BY THE FRIEDMAN CURE

Consumptive for Years, He Went to Germany Hardly Able to Walk.

HIS RECOVERY QUICK

Good News Comes to the Relatives of John Drover, a Well-Known Torontonian.

Toronto, March 15. — Dr. Friedman's tuberculosis cure has, it is said, already worked wonders, bordering on the miraculous, in the condition of at least one Torontonian.

It is only a few weeks ago that Dr. John Drover, a dentist, whose family live at 405 Dupont street, after reading of Dr. Friedman while in a private home of rest in Parkdale, decided that he would go to Berlin and place himself under the care of the German physician. He did so, and arrived in Germany just in time to be treated, the day before Dr. Friedman sailed for America.

When Dr. Drover left Toronto, he was in a serious condition. The disease had settled in his lungs, and knees, and he was unable to get around without the assistance of two sticks. The family have just received a letter from the patient, dated from Switzerland, stating that he had been able to dispense with his sticks, and is feeling fine.

Ill Many Years.

Dr. Drover's disease was of several years' standing. For many years he lived in South America, having a dental practice in Buenos Ayres, in an endeavor to check the progress of the disease.

Six years ago his condition was fairly good, and the family had high hopes of his ultimate recovery. Three years ago he visited Toronto again, but this time he was so sick that he was unable to leave his hotel, and his mother was the only person allowed to visit him. Up to this time the disease seemed to be confined to his lungs, but a few months ago, tuberculosis manifested itself in his knee, and he was compelled to go into a private nursing home in Parkdale.

Two letters have been received from Dr. Drover since his arrival in Germany. In the first letter he told of having received the treatment a few days before, and was feeling so much better that he was arranging to go to Switzerland for a holiday. The second letter, received a few days ago, contained the good news that he was so much better that he could get around without the aid of sticks. He also told how one young woman who had been treated was able to leave the hospital cured while he was there.

FLOODS IN THE NORTH DID HEAVY DAMAGE

Dam Near Elora Broke and Big Wave Swept All Before It.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Elora, March 15.—Damage estimated at $5,000, was caused by the sudden rising of the Grand River today. The breaking of McGowan's dam let loose a mass of water, which swept away the entire flume and one of the turbines which supplied power to J. C. Mundell & Co.'s furniture factory. The flood, which was the worst ever seen in this locality, also did damage to the Elora Furniture Company's factory and T. E. Bissell's foundry, besides many other small buildings.

SAVED THE BRIDGES.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Harriston, March 15.—The Maitland River is a mad torrent today, and if any further rains follow the mild spell the situation will be distinctly serious. Mayor Spotton had men out all day yesterday breaking up the ice jams in order to save the bridges, which for a time it was feared would be swept away.

SPEED ON A RAMPAGE.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Guelph, March 14.—The River Speed is once more on the rampage, and since yesterday there has been a rise of two feet. The water has found its way into the plant of the Taylor-Forbes Company, flooding the milling and grinding department, and castings have had to be raised to be kept out of reach of the flood. A few men from this department will be laid off, but it is not expected that the same serious conditions as last year will result.

Joe McGinnity Was Only Real "Iron Man" in Baseball Since "Old Hoss" Radbourne Pitched 37 Straight Games

Iron men may come and iron men may go, but the only real, genuine, sure-enough iron man worthy the name since the day of "Old Hoss" Radbourne, of Providence, was Joseph J. McGinnity.

McGinnity is best remembered by his string of victories, and his ability to pitch winning double-headers, and the fact that he pitched for three major league champions—Baltimore, Brooklyn and New York.

A product of that old master, Ned Hanlon, McGinnity was the finished pitcher of the McGraw school—which is that of Hanlon, with latter day trimmings a la Muggsy.

McGinnity was in the limelight last fall, when Hugh Jennings tried to sign him as relief pitcher. This was after McGinnity had severed connection with Newark, N. J., and was looking for a chance to invest his money. He is supposed to have invested it now in the Northwestern League, of which Fielder Jones is president.

The Iron Man's record is brilliant. In 1900 he led all the National League pitchers. He pitched 41 games for Brooklyn and finished with an avorage of .769. In 1904 he repeated, leading even Mathewson, his team mate, his percentage being .814.

A rise ball, delivered underhand, which he affectionately called "Old Sal," a wonderful knowledge of the batter's weaknesses, a head full of baseball lore, and so cool that thin-blooded people wore overcoats on hot days when he was near, made Joe McGinnity a nightmare for batters.

McGinnity hails from the coal mining district of Illinois and was born March 19, 1873. He was a miner before he began playing ball. As he has been out of the major league for only four years and playing in a fast minor league, McGinnity has had exceptional opportunity to judge conditions and to say whether the game is faster now than when he was with Baltimore, but refuses to do so.

Willie Keeler, says McGinnity, was the greatest of all ballplayers, and Mathewson, to his notion, is the mightiest of all pitchers.

MANY CASES WERE DISPOSED OF AT PAISLEY

Judge Klein Had a Busy Session in the Division Court.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Paisley, March 14.—Judge Klein held division court here yesterday, giving judgments in the following suits:

McDonald vs Armstrong, for board. Left over until next court, owing to defendant being sick in hospital.

Carter & Son vs. Donaldson, store account. Judgment for plaintiffs.

Atkinson vs. Davison, wages. Plaintiff had been working for a time with defendant, claiming to have re-engaged for a month or shorter time if he got another position elsewhere. Defendant claimed engagement for the fall months. Judgment for defendant.

McDonald, primary creditor, Fleming, primary debtor, and Eason, garnishee, an action to garnishee value of wood delivered. After action entered, primary debtor and garnished disputed over a quarter of a cord. Primary debtor removed the wood, same having been left in the public street opposite garnishee's residence. Judgment for primary creditor against garnishee.

McArthur vs. McDonald—Judgment for defendant.

Westman vs. Walmsley—Action for placing lightning rods on defendant's buildings. Adjourned until next court.

Mr. John McIntyre arrived here yesterday from Regina, Sask., with the remains of his brother David, and the funeral took place in the afternoon. Deceased was 29 years of age, and is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald McIntyre, three brothers and three sisters, all living in the West.

Registrar W. H. McFarlane moved his effects to Walkerton this week, and will permanently take up residence in the county town as soon as he disposes of his mercantile establishment here.

An American in Havana, who is an enthusiastic Brooklyn fan, has written a letter to Manager Dahlen calling him to account for not signing Thomas Romanach, the Cuban shortstop landed by Cincinnati. The Havana man says he tipped Dahlen off to the player a year ago, and predicts a great future for him. Romanach played last summer at Long Branch, N. J., and Dahlen had plenty of opportunity to look him over if he wished.

Some high hopes of recruit Giant infielders were given a setback when Arthur Shafer signed his contract with McGraw last Thursday. Shafer's contract is for three years, and it is said that McGraw met his terms. It is hinted, also, that McGraw was inclined to do this after a week's view of the youngsters who were trying out at Marlin as possible Shafer successors.

NO WONDER WALTER JOHNSON FOOLS 'EM—HIS PITCHING SPEED BEATS THE FASTEST RAILROAD TRAIN IN THE WORLD.

Walter Johnson, of the Washington hopefuls, throws a baseball faster than the Twentieth Century Limited travels.

If the elongated star of the Griffith pennant hopes could propel a ball along the course followed by the world's fastest train, the ball would travel from New York to Chicago ahead of the train, because the "Century" moves at an average of 120 2-3 feet per second, and Johnson's fast ball hops along 122 feet per second.

The exact speed of Johnson's fast ball has always been a matter of discussion. He has been compared to Rusie and old-time fans say the Hoosier demon had it on Johnson, but there was no way to prove this.

Men who have seen Johnson at his best are willing to swear the ball goes so fast it cannot be seen with the naked eye. Often the plunk of the ball in the catcher's mitt precedes the batsman's futile swing.

The question came up in New York one day last season when Washington was playing in the metropolis, and to settle it once for all, the big Swede was hurtled to Bridgeport, Conn., in an automobile, and a mathematically accurate test of his speed was made in the trial room of one of the big arms factories.

A device used to test the speed of bullets was used. The apparatus consists of a steel-faced plate; the distance between the screen and the plate is five yards.

An electric connection to a register gives the exact time consumed by the projectile travelling between the screen and plate. As the projectile passes through the screen, it snaps one or more of the fine wires, starting the timer, which registers until the projectile strikes the steel plate.

After Johnson warmed up he took his stand before the apparatus and pitched ball after ball. He had difficulty in locating the "plate"—the screen—at first. A strange lack of control for Johnson. But he finally managed it, and the registering device commenced to ring off the astounding speed. He reached 122 feet per second and stopped.

"Nap" Rucker, the Brooklyn southpaw, who was also in the party—and who also has some speed when he unkinks his salary fin—took a turn at the indicator and registered 113 feet per second.

Nap expressed his firm belief that Johnson could reach 150 feet per second if conditions were favorable—in fact, he asserted that on the ball field Johnson does that well. But Walter seemed satisfied to have beaten the speed of the Twentieth Century.

The speed of a high power bullet from an automatic pistol that is supposed to go through steel plates and heavy planking is but 800 feet per second.

W. LONDONER SAYS DREDGING IS USELESS

ADVOCATES GATES AT SPRINGBANK DAM

Writes Letter in Which He Says Wells Would Be Just as Good.

E. A. Pocock Thinks Suggestion Absurd—Would Not Prevent Floods.

E. A. Pocock, secretary of the West London Progressive Association, writes the following to The Advertiser:

To the Editor—I am instructed by the West London Progressive Association to write you in comment on and criticism of an interview in redredging the river and the West London breakwater, which appeared in your paper of last Tuesday. First, let me say that Mr. G. F. Robertson, who wrote you a common sense letter in this matter, was quite correct in his conclusion "That the person or persons responsible for this ridiculous suggestion lived well up on the hills, and had no property interest in West London." The self-interest tone of the article and the selfish suggestions offered, makes it quite apparent to any intelligent person that the author was a boathouse man who cannot speak of anything in the interest of the citizens of West London without scorn, and who cannot suggest anything for the betterment of the river unless he is largely interested in the advantages of his own suggestion.

He declares in his interview that the new city engineer should consider the idea "that every foot the river is dredged out adds a foot to the height of the breakwater." The difficult question for our new city engineer to solve will be, What difference it will make in flood time whether there is a foot of gravel in the bottom of the river, or a foot of backwater? If the channel were dredged out ten feet deeper it would fill up with backwater to the level of the Springbank dam. What difference, then, or how would the flood water know the gravel had been removed?

Will not some other clever riverman suggest that the city sink a series of wells in the bottom of the river? The idea is just as brilliant, in so far as a protection to West London is concerned. No, if the river is to be dredged, take down the 16-foot dam at Springbank, and the river will dredge itself at every flood, and West London would be protected.

If something in the way of a lock or proper flood gates were placed in the dam at Springbank, the river could be raised to a good height in the summer months, and let out with a rush in flood-time.

E. A. POCOCK,
Secretary, W. L. P. A.

PROSPECTS FOR LONDON BRIGHT SAY AGENCIES

The following are the reports of trade conditions in the London district, published in today's issues of two mercantile agencies' bulletins:

Bradstreet's Reports.

London reports that prospects are bright for industries and general business during the coming season. Builders are about to commence construction of a large number of houses. An oil stove manufacturing company from the United States is considering locating here. The winter's ice harvest is of poor quality. The city is likely to undertake dredging operations in the Thames River. Reports from farmers in the vicinity indicate that supply of maple syrup will be heavy this spring. Dressed hogs advanced this week to $13.25 cwt. Real estate is active.

R. G. Dun's Report.

The advent of spring weather and approach of Easter stimulated retail trade, and volume is satisfactory. Local conditions are more buoyant than last year, owing to the belated real estate and industrial activity, but slow western collections and the adjustment to higher rates of interest, cause buyers to proceed cautiously in placing orders for future delivery. Manufacturers are busy, and jobbing houses report good volume of business. Farm products of all kinds, excepting hogs and cattle, are on a much lower range of prices. Building materials are higher and good class of labor scarce, and builders for investment have very little inducement. No failures.

CAR NARROWLY MISSES STRIKING A WAGON

Left the Rails as It Was Coming West Down the Dundas Street Hill.

While coming down the Dundas street hill on Friday night, a Pottersburg car left the rails near the interswitching and narrowly missed striking a buggy which was passing at the time.

There were four people in the car at the time, and all were considerably shaken up when the car ran across the road.

WILL ADDRESS MEN'S CLUB.

Mr. T. J. Parkinson, principal of the Grand avenue school, will address the Men's Club of the Askin Street Methodist Church at the regular meeting of Sunday morning. Nominations for officers for this year will also take place after the meeting.

BROKE TROLLEY WIRE WHILE MOVING HOUSE

Walter Nichol Ties Up the Car Service and Pays Fine.

For moving a house across the tracks of the London Street Railway Company without giving notice to the company, Walter Nichol was fined $5 in police court this morning. The roof of the house caught the trolley wire, at the Hamilton road and Adelaide street, breaking it and causing a delay of over an hour in street car service on the Oxford and Hamilton road line, and also on the Ottaway and Rectory street lines.

Admitted Responsibility.

"I suppose I should have given notice," admitted Nichol.

"The bylaw distinctly says that you must give notice," rejoined the court.

Nichol stated that he thought the house was low enough to pass under the wire with safety. He had men watching to see if it would catch, but the damage was done before they had time to realize the danger.

"I can't overlook the fact that you inconvenienced thousands of citizens by tying up traffic as you did," said Magistrate Judd while imposing the fine.

Plan Suburb Beautiful at Chelsea Green

The real estate and building boom is steadily increasing in Chelsea Green. Announcement is made that Mr. Corby commences the erection of four houses on Monday. Two of these are to be built on Jaqueline street, one on Terrace street, and the other on Adelaide street.

Other builders and contractors are also starting next week, or as soon as they can employ labor. To relieve the housing situation which at present is acute, a great many residences will be built this spring and summer.

Aim at Beauty.

It is the intention of many residents of the Green to model their suburb after the fine garden cities of England, noted for their picturesque natural beauty. To accomplish this, contractors and intending house builders are laying out their house plans to the best advantage. The River Thames is another element which will add beauties to the village.

EPIDEMIC OF STREET CAR DERAILMENTS

Frost Loosens Up Joints So That Rails Spread.

An epidemic of spread rails on the street railway has been keeping the repair gangs busy for the last few days. The frost coming out of the ground has caused many joints to loosen, and the result has been to cause run-offs. The officials say they are having this kind of trouble in all parts of the city, but that there have been no serious results.

"TO LET" HOUSES ARE SCARCE IN LONDON

Nineteen People Call in Answer to the Advertisment.

A "To Let" sign is the scarcest thing in London, meaning, of course, one displayed in the front window of a house.

An Adelaide street lady advertised a house the other day. The first day after the advertisement appeared nineteen persons called at her house. The first man to call had rented the house, but later callers were ready to pay a dollar or two more to get the house.

Some real estate dealers have not a house to rent. Others have one, two, or three, most of them too high-priced for the average income. The house renting for from $16 to $22 is the one that is in demand and it cannot be had.

Some people say that there are many houses for sale, citizens expecting to realize big prices at the present time. This comes hard on the tenant.

Three Hundred Spent Evening at I.O.O.F. Hall

Well-organized committees, a varied program, and entainers of merit, brought a large number of people, who spent a most enjoyable evening, as the guests of Chorazin Lodge, I. O. O. F., in their lodge rooms in the East End Hall on Friday night.

Three Hundred in Attendance.

About 300 were present, and participated in the amusements, which included progressive euchre and dancing. Those taking part in the program and the number each gave were as follows: Mrs. Bert Morton, piano solo; Miss Minnie Steele, reading; Mr. Bowyer, song; Mr. Wilbert Short, violin solo; Mrs. F. B. Harris, reading; Mr. F. Harris, recitation; Mr. W. Wakeling, accordeon solo; Miss Gladys Udy, reading; Mr. Stafford; Mr. Walter Scott, lecture; Miss Campbell, song; Mr. F. C. Parson acted as chairman and Mrs. Bert Morton accompanist.

Won Euchre Prizes.

Mr. W. Legg and Mrs. McKay won the prizes for progressive euchre, while consolation prizes were awarded to Mr. W. Simpson and Miss Wood.

Following the program the guests were banquetted, and dancing was introduced for the remainder of the evening. McFadden's orchestra was in attendance and supplied the music.

DRESDEN.

Dresden, March 15.—Mrs. A. E. Wall and little daughter Lenore are visiting in West Lorne.

Mr. Jas. Caswell, of Windsor, is visiting his brother, Mr. J. W. Wilkins here.

Clayton Walker, clerk in Wells & Wells, left today for Mortlaks, Sask., where he has secured a position as manager of a hardware store.

Death in East London of An Old Friend of the People

An old friend of East Londoners died Thursday. This old friend had lived at the corner of Dundas street and Woodman avenue for over a century, and had seen East London grow from a rural section into a thriving industrial suburb.

It had witnessed many changes; in fact, it oversaw the erection of buildings in Queen's Park, and the killing of some of its fellows to make way for a race track, an exhibition grounds, a baseball diamond, and other modern buildings to take care of the ever-increasing exhibits that were sent to Queen's Park by the thousands in the fall of the year in order that people from far and near might congregate there and view, with satisfaction, the progress that was being made throughout London and Western Ontario.

And all the time it was watching these things it never once quavered with fear; for was it not a king of its race, and had it not been a benefactor to mankind in sheltering them from the fierce rays of a July sun, the thunderstorms of April, and the blizzards of many cold winters?

Old residents have sat under it and discussed the wars in which sons of Canada shouldered arms to take up the defence of the mother country, in foreign fields; the crops, politics, and, in fact, anything that men who have grown old in one section will talk of. Sweethearts have stood under it, and told life's old story, and although this old friend had heard many a secret, it never told; for had it not been put there and given life and strength to shelter just such people and to listen to just such stories.

Of late years, however, the old friend has shaken many times with fear as it noted the onward march of progress, for it realized that some day it would be a victim of that progress, and that before long. As young boys climbed up its sides to get a kite or plaything that had become lodged in its mammoth arms, it sighed, because it realized that some day its very body might be used for constructing the framework of kites similar to the ones that were nestling close to it, and for which the boys were climbing.

The old friend was an elm tree, and was, perhaps, the largest one within the city limits. One night forty years ago, it had witnessed a wonderful thing.

It heard two men, whom people afterward said were whiskey informers, planning to go into a "blind tiger," and after securing a drink, tell the Government officials, so that the owners of the place might be arrested and probably be cast into prison. And shortly after this conversation, perhaps it was two days, it heard a second conversation, in which a number of men planned to string one of the informers from one of its limbs and set fire to him.

A great crowd gathered at the corner of what is now Egerton and Dundas streets, and after much talking and gestures the figure of a man was carried to the foot of the tree and a rope placed around its neck. The rope was thrown over a limb, and a torch was applied to the figure's feet before it was hauled into the air. Then while the figure wriggled and blazed the men jumped around the trunk of the tree and shouted. It was a burning of one of the whiskey informers in effigy.

The onward march of progress finally decreed that the old friend must go, and on the spot from which it reared its proud head will be built a store.

VEHICLES MIRED ON CITY ROADS

Hack Returning From Woodland Cemetery Sinks to the Hubs.

BAKER'S RIG DUMPED

One Businessman Says He Will Hold the City Responsible For the Breakages.

The Pipe Line road, from the Cove bridge to the Wharncliffe road, is in such condition that it is extremely dangerous for any kind of vehicle to attempt to pass over it.

Friday afternoon, while returning from a funeral at Woodland Cemetery, a hack belonging to Hunter's livery, sank in the mire over the hubs and was nearly overturned. The occupants escaped through the doors, but had considerable difficulty in reaching a dry spot on the side of the road.

Bakery Wagon Mired.

Shortly after, a wagon, belonging to the Davies Bakery, of South London, was mired in about the same spot and overturned when the driver attempted to extricate it.

All over South London the same condition prevails, and several merchants claim that unless something is done immediately they will enter suit against the city.

Hurts Business.

"The condition of the roads over here is a hindrance to our business," said one merchant. "Not only that, but every time we send our rigs out with a load the springs are damaged. Our horses are done out trying to cover the ground, and the first time one of my rigs is damaged by the condition of the roads I will see if I cannot get damages from the city."

A Ridiculous Idea.

"This idea of spending a million dollars on electrifying the London and Port Stanley Railroad, when we need road repairing and sewers, is ridiculous, and you can bet that I for one will register a vote against the electrification."

A New Feature

This "Greater London" section has been started for readers of The Advertiser living in the outlying districts of the city, and will deal with questions of importance to Chelsea Green, Ealing, Pottersburg, Knollwood Park, West and South London.

Anyone having items which they would like to have appear in the paper should telephone them to 3670, or send them by mail.

The vessel is but recently out of the Toledo shipyards, and this is her maiden trip. Factories, ferry boats, etc., combined in saluting the pioneer of the season as she passed by on her long trip from Toledo to the straits. St. Clair River is clear of ice from Lake Huron to Lake St. Clair, and in the latter the ice is already breaking up and will soon be gone.

ROBERT REFORD DEAD

One of Montreal's Most Prominent Citizens and Businessmen.

[Canadian Press.]

Montreal, March 15.—Mr. Robert Reford, president of the Robert Reford Shipping Company, Limited, and one of Montreal's most prominent citizens, died this morning at his residence, 260 Drummond street, in his 82nd year, after being in indifferent health since last summer.

Mr. Reford was born in Belfast, Ireland, and came to Canada in 1845, settling in Toronto, where he engaged in the wholesale grocery and shipping business. For twenty years his success in that city was marked, and with a large business connection he decided to settle in Montreal.

Mr. Reford was a governor of McGill University, and during the campaign carried on last year donated over $150,000 to the university, and he also gave generously to the Y. M. C. A. campaign fund.

Mr. Reford was a member of the board of trade, and was president of the Royal Transportation Commission appointed years ago by the Laurier Administration. He was also a president of a number of financial concerns. In addition to being president of the Robert Reford Company, Limited, he was president of the Crown Trust Company, president of the Mount Royal Milling and Manufacturing Company, and a director of the Bank of Toronto, and the Lake of the Woods Milling Company, and Nova Scotia Steel Company.

BIG IMPROVEMENTS PLANNED FOR PARKS IN SUMMER OF 1913

Drawings and Estimates Will Be Ready in Six Weeks.

Will Require Twenty Years to Execute Complete Work.

Twenty-thousand more annuals than in previous years will be planted in the London parks as soon as the weather permits. The parks department has also arranged to plant this spring 10,000 herbaceous plants, and 4,000 roses of French and Belgian stock to be used in the rose garden at Springbank and the 400-foot rosebank. The remainder of the 3,000 shrubs imported last fall will be planted this season in Springbank and Victoria Parks, and the department will double all bedding stock this spring.

Plans Completed.

Superintendent Dilger will have completed his permanent plans for parks improvement in another month or six weeks. The plans already finished are complete and comprehensive in every detail. Water pipes, coniferous and forest trees, shrubs, beds and paths are all distinctly marked. The plans will require twenty years to carry out.

A zoo near Byron, arboretums, educational plots, river drives, and public baths are all included.

Transferred to Victoria.—Mr. Thos. Wilson, who for the past year has been cashier in the local office of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, has been transferred to the Victoria, B. C., branch. Mr. R. E. Martin, of Toronto, succeeds Mr. Wilson in the London office.

LIVE HOGS FEATURE OF LOCAL MARKET

Price on Monday Expected to Range About $9 Per Hundred.

The demand for live hogs was again the feature of the local market, and as only a small number of farmers brought hogs to the market today the price advanced to $13 50 per cwt. Even at this price the demand was much greater than the supply, and in all probability the prices today will prevail next week. In spite of the great demand for dressed hogs it was announced that the live hog market was easier and that the price at the weekly shipment on Monday would be about $9 per cwt.

Well Attended.

Although the roads in the country are reported to be in an almost impassable condition in some parts, the attendance was larger today than that of several recent Saturdays. With the exception of hay and straw, every line of farm produce was represented, and the demand was fairly active.

Maple syrup was offered for the first time this year, but the supply was small, as the season has not commenced throughout the country. The prices ranged from $1 30 to $1 50 per gallon and the supply was quickly sold on account of the brisk demand.

Vegetables Plentiful.

Vegetables were fairly plentiful, but there were but few changes in the prices. Potatoes, of which a fair supply was offered, were quoted at 90c per bag wholesale, and $1 per bag retail. Cabbages were plentiful, and the prices ranged from 25c to 35c per doz. Lettuce and radishes were in good demand at 40c per doz bunches. Rhubarb was firm at $1 per doz bunches.

The supply of butter was not equal to the demand, and the prices showed an upward tendency. The wholesale price of roll butter was 29c to 30c per lb, while creck butter was quoted at 28c. In the dairy hall as high as 34c per lb was asked by the sellers. Eggs were plentiful, and the prices were somewhat easier. The price by the crate was 21c per doz, while basket lots were quoted at 24c to 25c per doz.

Although but little poultry was offered the prices were slightly firmer.

The buyers of hides announced that the prices of the three grades were ½c per lb lower.

Mother of F. W. C. McCutcheon, Principal of London Collegiate—Buried Here.

Mrs. Essie McCutcheon, widow of the late William McCutcheon, of Thorndale, and mother of F. W. C. McCutcheon, of the London Collegiate Institute, died today at Madison, Wis. Mr. McCutcheon received word today stating that death had been unexpected.

Mrs. McCutcheon had been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Beatty, at Madison. The funeral will be held from the residence of Mr. F. W. C. McCutcheon, 555 Adelaide street, city. The time and particulars will be announced later.

PATIENTS, DOCTORS COULD NOT ENTER HEALTH INSTITUTE

Two Hundred Persons Expecting to Get In Had to Stand in Drizzle.

Physicians Express Themselves as Indignant at Treatment Accorded Them.

A throng of two hundred persons, made up of physicians from many places and from the city, medical students, patients and relatives of patients, gathered at 9 o'clock this morning at the Institute of Public Health, awaiting the coming of Dr. Friedman.

Had to Stand Outside.

None of them were admitted, and among the physicians there were some who had come many miles to secure admission to the clinic if possible. They were not allowed to enter the building because of orders received by Dr. Hill and Superintendent Heard.

Physicians Indignant.

Some of the physicans were exceedingly indignant because of the treatment accorded them. They were kept outside in the drizzling rain, when they had expected that they would have been welcomed to the institute and given an opportunity to watch the famous physician, and perhaps to hear some explanations from him.

Sarnia Physicians Here.

Dr. Loggie, Dr. Bell and Dr. Merrison, of Sarnia, were among those who were refused admission.

Dr. Merrison and his fellow-practitioners were disappointed by the treatment they received. They could not understand why they were not admitted, and Dr. Merrison left in disgust after standing in the rain for some time.

Arrangements Bungled.

He criticized those who had made such an arrangement.

"It is not as though we went there out of vulgar curiosity," he said. "We are anxious to see this thing for the benefit of our patients. We would have withdrawn on request, but it was discourteous to force nearly a hundred London an doutside physicians to stand outside. It was the worst treatment I was ever accorded."

THROWS HAMMER; STRIKES LITTLE BOY

Man Under Influence of Liquor Alleged To Be the Assailant.

While supposed to be under the influence of liquor at a late hour Friday night a man, whose name the city police decline to divulge, threw a hammer through the window of a York street house, striking a small boy named McNeill, on the head, injuring him so severely that medical attention was necessary. The police arrested the assailant, who is said to have appeared in police court this morning on a charge of drunkenness, and to have been dismissed. The police deny that a charge of assault has been laid.

It is alleged that the boy's assailant had been in the house in company with the lad and a woman, and that stepping outside he aimed a blow through the window at the woman, but that the lad was the accidental victim.

Dr. McNeill, who is attending the lad, says he is not in danger.

Flood Abating Danger Past

Old Father Thames has been defeated and is slowly withdrawing his watery forces from the unsuccessful attempt to invade the surrounding country. The latest reports from headquarters — the pumphouse at Springbank—state that the water is gradually receding and that all danger of a flood have disappeared.

During the night the water reached a depth of 6 feet 3 inches, which is the high-water mark for the year, but it fell over three feet short of the mark set last year when on April 6 the depth of the water going over the dam was 9 feet 7 inches.

Plan Concert.—The members and friends of the Centennial Methodist Church are enthusiastic in their endeavors to raise funds for the new school room to be built in May, and to this end the male chorus of the church is giving an entertainment. The program will consist of some of the best old darky melodies, arranged for male voices, along with funny sketches and dialogues.

21 PATIENTS ARE READY FOR THE TREATMENT AS DR. FRIEDMAN COMES

treatment they received were heard from local and out-of-town physicians.

PREPARATION OF PATIENTS CAUSES ANXIOUS DELAYS; DOCTORS LEAVE

After waiting until nearly 11 o'clock in the snow and rain, Dr. Hill, director of the institute, announced to those gathered that he had just received word that Dr. Friedman would not arrive until noon, and nearly all the physicians left. A number of them returned to the institute at 12 o'clock, and were again informed that Dr. Friedman would not hold the clinic until probably 3 o'clock, because the serum had to be prepared and the patients examined before anything could be done. Then the physicians who came to the city from other places left in disgust, after declaring they had never before received such treatment.

SARNIA PHYSICIANS LEAVE FOR HOMES AFTER BEING REFUSED

As Dr. Bell, who is mayor of Sarnia, was going down the steps, someone called to him and his associates and asked if he would return, and he replied that he certainly would not. "This is the worst thing I was ever up against," he called back, "and we are going back to Sarnia as soon as possible."

A number of local physicians also left, claiming that they would not attend the clinic.

Thirty patients from Alexandra Sanatorium were conveyed to the institution early in the morning, and other sufferers from this city, Strathroy, St. Thomas and Toronto, arrived during the morning until nearly 70 were quartered in the building.

EXPECTANT CRIES EACH TIME AUTO DRIVES UP TO BUILDING

Then began the work of examining and selecting the patients taxicab or automobile hove in sight, cries of "Here he comes!" came from the crowd, and expectant faces peered forth from behind the windows of the building. All were doomed to disappointment, however, for at 12 o'clock he had not arrived, and most of the spectators left for their homes.

Shortly after 12 o'clock Drs. Benjamin and Hundt, Dr. Friedman's assistants, arrived in a taxicab, and entered the building.

Then began a dreary wait for Dr. Friedman. Every time a to see who would receive treatment.

TWENTY-ONE TO BE TREATED.

It was announced that only 21 patients would be treated, one-third of them suffering from affections of bones and glands, and two-thirds from pulmonary tuberculosis, and that the patients from the Sanatorium would be given preference.

This announcement was a signal for many cries of despair from many of the patients gathered in the building, and many who had come miles in the hope that at last they might secure relief from the dread disease, were cast into the depths of despair by the realization that perhaps after all they would not be able to secure treatment.

TAKEN ONE BY ONE.

The patients were taken one by one into an office on the right side of the building, where the assistants were quartered, taking histories of cases and making examinations.

First a young man who had arrived early in the morning from Strathroy, accompanied by a physician, and who was affected in practically every bone in his body with the dread disease, was examined, and was notified that his case could not be treated.

"NOT FOR ME."

He was assisted out the door and down the steps, and with a shake of his head he remarked to an Advetriser reporter: "I guess it was not for me."

At 2 o'clock twelve patients had been examined by the assistants, and when asked how many had been rejected they refused to make any statement.

At 2:30 Dr. Friedman arrived at the institution, and was hurried in to make ready for the clinic.

Just before the arrival of Dr. Friedman, Dr. Hill announced that only twelve or thirteen would be treated.

LIBERTY OF SPEECH

boro, Morrison, Munson, Paul, Porter, Hon. J. D. Reid, Sharp (Ontario), Smythe, Smith, Thornton, Wallace, Webster, Weichel, Wilson (Wentworth), and Wright.

Early this morning, after the House of Commons had made its first move towards the closure by voting down a point of order raised by Hon. Mr. Oliver, Messrs. Hugh Guthrie and Fred Pardee offered an amendment that the $35,000,000 should be spent in Canada.

Again Premier Borden called upon the chairman, and again the Liberals protested. Every time a Liberal speaker showed the slightest tendency to mention the principle involved in the naval bill or to repeat any argument which had been made at any time during the past ten days, Mr. R. B. Bennett or Mr. Arthur Meighen asked that he be ruled against, and the chair would promptly act against the speaking Liberal.

Pugsley Resourceful.

Time after time Hon. Mr. Pugsley, who shoulders the main portion of the battle, was called to account, and time after time cheerfully varied his line of attack in obedience to the ruling. He showed the most wonderful resource. Finally finding the control so irksome and the debate held so strict, the Liberals started moving adjournments. Dr. Pugsley moved that the committee should rise, and again began a discussion which touched upon the naval issue. Mr. Meighen asked the chairman to rule that the merits of the measure or the details could not be discussed upon a resolution to adjourn. Dr. Pugsley protested that it was necessary to give some reason for adjournment, and the necessity lay in the fact that the measure involved problems which should be submitted to the people for their decision. Again Chairman Aikens ruled with the Government's contention, and again there was an appeal. The Speaker was called from his bed. The report was read in French and in English. A vote was taken, and the Government carried its restriction of the debate by 59 to 22

Gagged Again.

Immediately thereafter A. K. McLean having been informed by Chairman Aikens that he could not deal with the measure in principle or details, branched out into a discussion of the advisability of improving the atmospheric conditions of the chamber and the water supply of Ottawa. Mr. Meighen now raised the point that matter irrelevant to the bill could not be discussed. The chairman ruled with him and this ruling was sustained on appeal.

"If we can speak on nothing relevant to the bill, and upon nothing irrelevant to the bill, will the chairman be good enough to say what we may speak upon?" queried Dr. Pugsley, undismayed.

From nine o'clock this morning until this afternoon, Mr. Frank Carvell, Mr. Duncan Ross, Martin, of Regina, and several members from the Maritime Provinces, carried on the discussion, but were repeatedly ruled out on points of order.

$1311 ASKED FOR PERSONAL ATTENTION

Cared for Late Gilbert Bice During His Lifetime.

Messrs. Macpherson & Perrin, acting on behalf of Josephus and Tabitha Bice, of the Township of East Williams, have issued a writ against Catherine L. Harness, of Lucan, for $1,311. The plaintiffs claim that the amount is the balance due them for personal attention given to the late Gilbert Bice during his lifetime and at the request of the defendant. The plaintiffs claim that they attended deceased at different periods from March 2, 1910, to Aug. 25, 1911, and the the total cost of such attention was $1,329. Of the amount stated in the writ Josephus Bice claims $1,152 and the other plaintiff $159. The plaintiffs also ask for interest from March 13, 1913, until payment of claim or date of judgment.

Father Dies After Drinking Water; Son Asks Damages

It is understood that Mr. Edward Stewart, son of the late John C. Stewart, who died this week at his home in South London, will issue a writ for unstated damages against the St. Thomas pork packing firm on whose premises his father procured the water which is alleged to have caused his death.

Stewart was a well-driller, and was doing some work for the St. Thomas concern. He drank some water while there and was shortly afterward taken ill. His death resulted after an illness of three weeks. It is believed that the water was poisonous and unfit for drinking purposes.

PATHETIC SCENES

bling along on crutches, with one leg pitifully bent under him. A doctor from Strathroy was assisting him, and his face was lit with hope, as if he were sure that at last he would be able to get around like other boys of his age, without the assistance of a crutch. Apparently, his doctor had made an arrangement, for when he arrived at the top of the steps the door was opened and he was admitted.

A Woman and a Boy.

A woman, small and worn, in a wheel chair, pushed by one of the house surgeons approached. A colored man walked at her side, and a nurse behind her. The colored man held an umbrella over her head in an endeavor to shield her from the icy wind and cutting snow. Then an Indian lad, wrapped in blankets, was brought from the hospital. He was affected in the legs, and had to be carried into the institute.

All this time carriages, automobiles and taxicabs were arriving at the institution, and a glance into each one of them revealed the pale face of some sufferer.

Fill the Corridors.

A rumor to the effect that Dr. Friedman had only enough serum to innoculate twelve patients was circulated, and there were expressions of despair heard.

The corridors and waiting-rooms of Victoria Hospital were crowded with people, some in the hope that they might receive treatment, and others out of idle curiosity. None were admitted, however, without an order from Dr. Ross, superintendent of the Sanatorium, and hundreds of people stood on the sidewalk between the institute and the hospital and on the steps of the institute, waiting for a glimpse of Dr. Friedman.

Shortly after 10:30 Dr. Hill came out and signalling for silence, announced that he had just received word that Dr. Friedman was tired out, and that he would not appear until noon.

HARROWING SIGHTS

health and life for his daughter, came all the way from Toronto to make a second attempt to have his child treated by Dr. Friedman, but little hope was held out to him.

Waits For Hours.

He had forgotten the name of the local doctor he was referred to. He waited around for several hours, from early in the morning. The doctor was to meet him at the institute. The consumptive daughter, three years languishing under the insidious, slow-destroying, emaciating disease, sat in the waiting-room of the hospital. There were a dozen other patients who waited there with her. At length the father found the physician he was looking for. An order was secured for admission, but very little hope was held out to him that his daughter would be treated.

A mother and son came. The son was a tall, great, strapping fellow, but the color of his cheeks belied his appearance of strength. They waited in vain for a long time, and then went away, intending to return again.

Their Love of Life.

Oh, the will to live, the will to enjoy the flowers, the song of the birds in spring, the rising and setting of suns, the green of June landscapes, the gold of August wheat fields, the whispers of cool, green woodlands! Oh, the wish to live on, to stretch out the span of mortal existence a few years longer, even a few months longer, for they came, the halt and the maimed, the hectic face and flushed brow, the hacking cough and bending form, the unsteadied walk, and the measured, calculating footstep in every stage of death-in-life, yet life-in-death, and hope to the very gate of death.

Oh, the joys of the good old earth, the day with its labor, humdrum, but glorified by love and sweeter than the hope of paradise to the dying one, the going forth in the morning and the coming home at night, the evening-lamp at home, the supper-table with the family gathered round! These things are infinite in their sweetness when they are passing away, steadily, slowly, surely, forever.

Has Faced the Foe.

Dr. Friedman, may or he may not be successful in his cure of consumption. He at least has issued a challenge to a fell destroyer hitherto believed invincible. He has awakened hope in the hearts of thousands, and made nations akin with sympathy. Even in turning from his clinics patients, he declined to experiment upon, he has uncovered worlds of human tragedy hitherto unknown. He has brought closer to the attention of the world than has, perhaps, ever been done before, the realness of the universal peril of the great white plague.

Those who were admitted, they may be treated, those who are treated, they may be healed; those who are healed, if they are healed, will, with undying gratitude, proclaim the greatness of their healer.

More Precious Than Radium.

But, oh, the anguish and the grief of those who were turned away! The hopelessness of the thousands too far away to come to the physician! The monster of death will destroy hundreds and thousands before the armies of rescue are marshalled, before the new serum is proved and adopted and given to the world as a commercial product which the rich can buy and human sympathy will give freely to the poor. Today, it is more precious than radium, though its true worth may not be proved.

Pailing rumors circulated among the waiting crowd of physicians, students, reporters, friends of patients, and others who were interested.

A Host of Rumors.

"Dr. Friedman will not be here until late in the afternoon."

"Dr. Friedman has only serum enough for twelve patients."

"Dr. Friedman is too tired and exhausted to treat anyone."

"Dr. Friedman has not arrived yet, and may not come."

How those rumors pierced the sick and despairing hearts of the loved ones and friends of the patients! How those rumors damped the rising hopes of the patients they reached!

It was as though the pain, and pathos, and hope, and grief, and despair, and yearning after life, of the whole wide universe were centred in this one city, in one group of buildings, in one building, facing Waterloo street, and fronting on the long, muddy stretch of Ottaway avenue.

The Human Drama.

It was the whole human drama of the ebb and flow of hope and despair, and joy and anguish, adapted to the narrow stage of a Canadian city that Dr. Friedman probably had never heard of six months ago.

THE JUST AND THE UNJUST

By Vaughan Kester

Author of The Prodigal Judge

Copyright, 1912, The Bobbs-Merrill Company.

"What did you do after that?" asked Gilmore.

"Not much. I laid low and presently lifted my sack of coal out and ducked around to Lonigan's saloon. I went in there by the back door and left my sack leanin' against the building. Mike wanted his mail and he give me a drink of whisky if I'd take his keys and go to the post-office for him; I'd just come into the Square when I run into Shrimp, who was tellin' how old man McBride was murdered. I went into the store and found you there with Colonel Harbison, you remember, boss." Gilmore nodded, and Montgomery continued. "I hadn't a chance to tell you what I'd seen, and all night long I kept hearin' him say it!"

"Say what, Joe?"

"Say, 'Oh, my God!' like I told you, boss; I couldn't sleep for it—I wonder if he slept?"

"Joe," said the gambler, "I'll tell you something that I have only told the sheriff. I was in Langham's office late yesterday, and John North was there; he left to go to McBride's. Conklin's been looking for him this morning, but he can't find him, and no one seems to know what's become of him. Do you follow me?"

"What's North got to do with it, boss?"

"How do you know it wasn't North you saw in the alley?" urged Gilmore.

"It were not!" said Joe Montgomery positively.

"You saw the man's face?"

"As plain as I see yours!"

"And you know the man?"

"Yes."

"Then I'll tell you who you saw," said the gambler coolly. "It was Marshall Langham.

The handy man swore a great oath.

"You've guessed it, boss! You've guessed it!"

"It ain't a guess, as it happens."

"Boss, do you mean to tell me you knew all along?" demanded Montgomery incredulously.

"Yes."

"But what about North?"

"That's his lookout; let him clear himself."

Joe, shambling and shuffling, took a turn about the room.

"Boss, if it was me that stood in his boots the halter would be as good as about my neck; they wouldn't give me no chance to clear myself—they wouldn't let me. Them smart lawyers would twist and turn everything I said so that God Almighty wouldn't know his own truth!"

"Well, you were in that alley, Joe; if you feel for him, I expect we could somehow shift it to you," said Gilmore.

The handy man slouched to the hearth again.

"None of that, boss!" he said. "I've told you what took me there, so none of that!"

His voice shook with suppressed feeling as he stood there scowling down on the gambler.

"Sit down, Joe," said Mr. Gilmore, unruffled.

Reluctantly the handy man sank into the chair indicated.

"Now, you old sot," began the gambler, "you listen to me. I suppose if they could shift suspicion so that it would appear you had had something to do with the old man's murder, it would take Moxlow and the judge and any decent jury no time at all to hang you; for who would care whether you were hanged or not? But you needn't worry; I'm going to manage this thing for you—I'm going to see that you don't get into trouble. Now, listen, you're to let well enough alone. North is already under suspicion, apparently. All right, we'll help that suspicion along. If you have anything to tell, you'll say that the man who came over that shed looked like North."

"Boss, I won't say a word about the shed or the alley."

"Oh, yes, you will, Joe. The man looked like North—you remember, at the time you thought he looked like North, and you thought you recognized his voice when he spoke, and you thought it was North's voice. He had on a black derby hat and a dark brown overcoat; don't forget that, Joe, for we are going to furnish young Mr. North with a bunch of worries."

The handy man looked at him doubtfully, sullenly.

"I don't want to hang him, he's always treated me white enough, though I never liked him to hurt."

Gilmore laughed unpleasantly.

"Oh, there's no chance of that; your evidence won't hang him, but it will give him a whole lot to think about, and Langham's a pretty decent fellow. If you treat him right he'll keep you drunk for the rest of your days; you'll own him body and soul."

"A ignorant man like me couldn't go up against a sharp lawyer like Marsh Langham. Do you know what'd happen to me? I'll tell you; I'd get so well fixed I'd never look at daylight except through jail windows—that's the trick I'd serve myself, boss."

"I'll take that off your hands," said Gilmore.

"And what do you get out of it, boss?" inquired the astute Mr. Montgomery.

"You'll have to put your trust in my benevolence, Joe," said the gambler. "But I am willing to admit that I want to see North put where he'll have every inducement to attend strictly to his own business."

CHAPTER IX.
The Star Witness.

It was between nine and ten o'clock when Marshall Langham reached his office. He scarcely had time to remove his hat and overcoat when a policeman entered the room and handed him a note. It was a hasty scrawl from Moxlow, who wished him to come at once to the court house.

As Moxlow's messenger quitted the room Langham leaned against his desk with set lips and drawn face; this was but the beginning of the ordeal through which he must pass! Then slowly he resumed his hat and overcoat.

The prosecuting attorney's office was on the second floor of the court house, at the back of the building, and its windows overlooked the court house yard.

On the steps and in the long corridors men stood about, discussing the murder. Langham pushed his way resolutely through these groups and mounted the stairs. Moxlow's door was locked, as he found when he tried to open it, but in response to his knock a bolt was drawn and a policeman swung open the door, closing it the instant Marshall had entered.

Langham glanced around. Dr. Taylor, the coroner, was seated before the desk; aside from this official, Colonel Harbison, Andy Gilmore, Shrimplin, Moxlow, Mr. Allison, the mayor, Conklin, the sheriff, and two policemen were present.

Thank you, that is all, Mr. Gilmore," the coroner had said as Langham entered the room.

He turned and motioned one of the policemen to place a chair for the prosecuting attorney beside his own at the desk.

"As you know, Mr. Moxlow," the coroner began, "these gentlemen, Mr. Shrimplin, Colonel Harbison and Mr. Gilmore, were the first to view the murdered man. Later I was summoned, and with the sheriff spent the greater part of the night in making an examination of the building. We found no clue. The murderer had gone without leaving any trace of his passing. It is probable he entered by the front door, which Mr. Shrimplin found open, and left by the side door, which was also open, but the crowd gathered so quickly both in the yard and in the street, that it has been useless to look for footprints in the freshly-fallen snow. One point is quite clear, however, and that is the hour when the crime was committed. We can fix that almost to a certainty. The murderer did his work between half-past five and six o'clock. Mr. Shrimplin has just informed us that the only person he saw on the Square, until he met Colonel Harbison, was John North, whom he encountered within a block of McBride's store, and with whom he spoke. While Mr. Shrimplin stopped to speak with Mr. North the town bell rang the hour—six o'clock.

The coroner paused.

There was a moment's silence, then Marshall Langham made a half step forward. A sudden palsy had seized him, yet he was determined to speak; he felt that he must be heard, that he had something vital to say. An impulse he could not control compelled him to turn in the direction of Andy Gilmore, and for a brief instant his eyes fastened themselves on the gambler, who returned his gaze with a cynical smile, as though to say: "You haven't the nerve to do it." With the tip of his tongue Langham moistened his swollen lips. He was about to speak now, and Gilmore, losing his former air of bored indifference, leaned forward, eager to catch every word.

"I would like to say," he began in a tolerably steady voice, "that North left my office at half-past four o'clock yesterday afternoon, intending to see Mr. McBride; indeed, happening to glance from my window, I saw him enter the store. Before he left my office he had explained the business that was taking him to McBride's; we had discussed it at some length."

"What took him to McBride's?" demanded Dr. Taylor.

"He went there to raise money on some local gas company bonds which he owned. Mr. McBride had agreed to buy them from him. I was able to tell North that I knew McBride could let him have the money, in spite of the fact that it was a holiday and the banks were closed."

"How did you happen to know that, Langham?" asked Moxlow.

To Be Continued.

ST. PATRICK'S CONCERT GREATLY ENJOYED

St. John's Hall Was Filled to the Utmost Capacity.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Ingersoll, March 14.—The capacity of St. John's Hall was taxed last evening, when a St. Patrick's concert was held. The program was typical of such an event, and was greatly enjoyed. Irish songs and dances were indispensable features that gave general delight.

The Gwalior Mission Circle of St. Paul's Church has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. John S. Kerr; secretary, Miss Kate McCallum; treasurer, Miss M. Dunn; convener of program committee, Mrs. W. J. Macmurray; convener of missionary committee, Mrs. J. P. Dunn.

The Boy Scouts were out in full force at last night's general parade. A particularly interesting feature was an address by the chaplain, Rev. Alfred Bright, on the life of David Livingstone.

BARTERED A WOMAN

Millionaire-Correspondent Pays $27,500 Damages to Actress' Husband.

[Canadian Press.]

New York, March 14.—A London cable to the Tribune says:

The barter and sale of a woman for $27,500 has arranged in the courts here yesterday by the authority of a judge. The case was a divorce suit brought by Marcellus Raymund Morraud against his wife, Helena Woodley Morraud, both actors. Captain J. A. Morrison, inheritor of the Morrison millions, was named as co-respondent. The suit was undefended, and counsel stated that it had been agreed that Morrison should pay Morraud $27,500 damages.

Justice Eargrave Dean, addressing the jury, said: "The parties have agreed as to damages. The co-respondent is prepared to pay the amount, and the petitioner is satisfied to receive the sum. If there were something behind the arrangement I should tell you not to listen to it, but in this case, as far as I can see, there is nothing objectionable. Captain Morrison has practically bought this woman for £5,500."

GIN PILLS PAID FOR SIXTY-MILE TRIP

Kidney and Bladder Were Relieved in Short Time.

A bad place to get sick up in the mining district, so far from anywhere, but this man found a ready relief shortly after he took GIN PILLS. He was fortunate in being able to get GIN PILLS, even though his chum had to travel 60 miles to obtain them.

Larder Lake, Ont., March 26.

"I had been suffering for some time with my Kidneys and Urine. I was constantly passing water, which was very scanty, sometimes as many as thirty times a day. Each time the pain was something awful, and no rest at night. I heard of your GIN PILLS and decided to give them a trial at once. I sent my chum 60 miles to get them, and I am pleased to inform you that in less than six hours, I felt relief.

In two days, the pain had left me entirely. I took about half a box and today I feel as well as ever and my kidneys are acting quite natural again."

Zion Congregation Regret the Departure of Three Leading Families.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Fanshawe, March, 15.—An event of interest took place in the Zion Church, London Township, on Friday evening, on the occasion of the near departure of three of the families of the congregegation, Mr. and Mrs. Snell, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Harding, and Mr. and Mrs. G. Fitzgerald.

After a good program, rendered by local talent, the respective families were called to occupy chairs at the front of the church, by the the pastor, and an address was read by Mrs. Rev. Shaw, while Mr. G. Carrie handed a gold-headed cane suitably engraved with the name of the recipient, to each of the gentlemen, and Mrs. T. McGuffin gave a gold-headed umbrella to each of the ladies.

R. H. Harding, S. Snell, and G. Fitzgerald replied suitably in acknowledgment of the gifts, and afterwards lunch was served in the sunday schoolroom. These families have been active in church circles at Zion, and will be much missed in the community. Mr. Harding has been leader of Zion choir for about eighteen years.

The Zion choir also met at the home of Mr. S. Snell, 8th concession, London Township, and surprised Miss Hazel Snell, presenting her, a respected member, of the choir, with a beautiful cut glass fruit dish.

SINGLE SESSIONS FOR KINDERGARTENS WILL BE CONTINUED

Change Only in Such Cases as Overcrowding Necessitates It.

Opinion of Members of Committee in Regard to Work Differs.

The special committee of the board of education, at a meeting held Friday afternoon, decided to make no change in the present system of single-session kindergartens, except in schools where overcrowded conditions make it necessary to hold afternoon sessions, and in those cases only until such time as additions can be built and the necessary accommodation secured. The kindergarten teachers will, however, be required to report at their schools in the afternoons to assist the teachers for primary grades in their duties.

The topic was introduced by Trustee W. W. Gammage, who moved that the board return to the double sessions of kindergartens as in 1912. A lively discussion followed as to the advisability of this move, Dr. Teasdall and Dr. Shaw taking issue with Mr. Gammage, who stated in support of his motion that as the duties of a kindergarten teacher were less strenuous than those of the teachers in the other grades, there was no reason why they should not perform a full day's work instead of half a day.

Duties Discussed.

Dr. Teasdall contended that the duties of the kindergarten teachers were very arduous ones, and to insist on a double-session meant a decrease in their efficiency.

Dr. Shaw dealt with the question from the point of view of the child. "Afternoon sessions are a failure, no matter how you work it," he said. "In the afternoon a child of 5 or 6 years is not fit for anything except rest or play." The double session might be used for the time being in schools which were overcrowded, but only until such time as conditions could be remedied.

Trustee Strong read a communication from Miss Clara Brenton, supervisor of kindergartens, outlining the work done by the teachers in the afternoons. They spent several hours in the school building each afternoon, preparing work for the next day, or else visited in the homes of the pupils.

Cost Now Excessive.

Trustee Hunt upheld Mr. Gammage, claiming that the cost of keeping up the kindergartens was excessive. Mr. Dennis then read the following amendment, which was seconded by Dr. Shaw, and carried: "That this committee recommended to the board that morning sessions of kindergarten classes be conducted in such schools as provide ample accommodation for the proper carrying on of the work, the teachers of the morning classes to report at their school in the afternoon and assist the teachers of the primary grades. And that double sessions be conducted, as in 1912, in the schools not providing proper accommodation for all the kindergarten pupils in the morning. No. 1 committee to consider and bring in a recommendation to the board, at its next regular meeting, re adjustment of salaries. The arrangement of the teachers' work to be under the direction of the inspector, supervisor of kindergartens and the principals of the respective schools."

WILL OFFER ASHPLANT $2,800 FOR SERVICES

Assistant City Engineer Brazier To Be Offered $1,800 a Year.

The salaries of City Engineer Ashplant and Assistant Engineer Brazier have not yet been fixed. At the meeting of the finance committee Friday Ald. Richter moved that the chairmen of No. 1 and 2 committees and the mayor confer with the engineer and assistant engineer as to the salaries they will accept.

Engineer Ashplant in his application asked for a salary of $3,000, but the finance committee will see if he will not accept $2,800. It is proposed to offer Engineer Brazier $1,800.

The board recommended that the city accept the deed of ownership for the Chelsea Green bridge.

A recommendation to No. 2 and 3 committees was passed, suggesting that these committees confer together on the questions of the alterations necessary to the east end town hall, in order to accommodate the east end police station and give additional room to the fire department.

It was recommended that Ashland avenue, East London, be moved to the easterly limits of the Leonard property.

The petition for a curfew bylaw was not discussed. The petitioners themselves asked that it be left over until they could send a deputation before the board.

The street railway service came in for some criticism. The mayor stated that the new city engineer would be instructed to see what steps could be taken to improve it.

The board will be represented at a joint meeting of the city and county next Wednesday to arrange the county assets and liabilities affecting the newly-annexed districts.

MUCH OPPOSITION TO MALE TEACHERS

Clause Finally Adopted Adding Men to Staff for Grade Seven.

No. 1 committee of the board of education presented a report at the special meeting of the board Friday afternoon, which contained a clause that called forth considerable discussion before it was adopted. It was, that two additional male teachers be appointed to the public school staff, duties to commence Sept. 1 next.

"I move that the clause be struck out," said Dr. Shaw. "I would rather increase the maximum salary of lady teachers of grade seven, than add to the staff of young men." He argued that the work of the seventh grade could be taught just as efficiently by lady teachers as by male assistants, and at less expense. The young men, he said, enter the schools here at a salary considerably higher than the maximum salary paid to female teachers of long experience. In our schools they receive valuable training and experience, and as soon as they have got that, go West. "We want men to train as principals," he said. "Why we want them in the seventh grade I cannot see."

Explains Reasons.

Trustee Gammage explained that the object in this was that in case the principal takes sick, there is a man to take charge of the school It is also advisable to have more than one man in a large school in case of accident or emergency of any kind, he said.

"There's a lot of work to be done in the playgrounds which ladies cannot do," said Dr. Teasdall.

Inspector Edwards assured the board that both candidates were men of exceptional ability and considerable experience, and he considered they would be a valuable addition to the staff. The clause was adopted, the new teachers to commence on a salary of $800.

The other clauses of the report were adopted with little discussion. They were: First, That the petition of the male teachers of the Collegiate for a readjustment of salaries, be filed; second, that the petition of the women teachers of the public schools for consideration of their salaries if a readjustment was made, be filed; third, that Miss Gilchrist, school nurse, be granted an increase of $100 in her salary, to date from Jan. 1; fourth, that the tender of the W. E. Sanford Company, of Hamilton, to furnish suits for the cadet corps in connection with the Collegiate at $6.50 each be accepted; fifth, that a woman instructor of physical culture be appointed to the Collegiate Institute, and that the committee have power to advertise for applicants; sixth, that the lady principals of the following public schools be given $100 per annum in addition to the regular salary, for the extra work and responsibility placed upon them: King street, Quebec street, Colborne street south, Richmond street and Chelsea Green.

CORRESPONDENCE

Our Jewish Fellow-Citizens.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

Please grant me some space is your valuable paper to reply to Rev. Mr. Appleyard's letter, protesting against the misrepresentations in the Free Press. I am pleased to say that it is very gratifying to me to learn that a clergyman of the Christian religion did not entirely make such absurd and unjust statements, expressed at such an uncalled-for time, in the Free Press on the 12th inst.

Well, sir, I am a man that raises my hat to a man when I know he is one, and I sincerely regret having unjustly offended Mr. Appleyard, and I am pleased to be in doubt that the Christian religion does not possess such a clergyman as he was represented to be by the Free Press.

In reference to the information he wanted, no matter for what cause it was, so long as it was a private one, he had a full right to it, and especially when the original statements were not his own. It may be right that the Jews of the world, not only of New York, possess 75 per cent of the real estate, and I might say, 75 per cent of the financial resources of the world, and who is to be blamed? Can you blame a person for wanting to eat when he has nothing to eat? Can you blame a person for wanting to live when there is a crowd of people trying to keep him down, and his only way of possessing his freedom as a human being is by gold when he has given you all his brain-gold?

I am still, sir, demanding Mr. Nero Caesar the Second (whom, by the way) I know, to prove his statements, and in the name of justice, decency and self-respect, I ask him of what race are the largest slum owners and other evils in New York, Montreal and Toronto, and the whole world? Are they Jews? If you want to accuse the Jew, sir, of evils, accuse him for carrying the largest number (in proportion to other nationalities) of champions of freedom and progress, socialistic and anarchistic strike leaders and organizers of different progressive movements. Then, sir, I will be proud to know my place. It seems to me that the Free Press, so long as I have known them, and that is for the past thirteen years, are constantly abusing and misrepresenting the Jewish race. Since I am a Canadian of this city, I do not know of a Jew having offended the Free Press in one instance, or even if one had done so that is surely no reason why the whole Jewish nation should be abused. Well, I want to tell you, Mr. Free Press, that since the second epoch of the Jew leaving Jerusalem (according to the Old Testament), and until today, the Jew has taken all the abuse piled on his shoulders and carried it, but the spirit of Samson and the Maccabees is inspiring the twentieth century Jew, who will fight you with your own weapons unless he is given a chance to develop the spirit of Moses, but the only reason I can see why they abuse the Jewish race is because they cannot hold ground with them, not even in the course of gold. I am, for fair play,

M. LERNER.

Edison's Kinetophone Now Perfected---Soon To Be Seen

Moving Pictures Which Sing, Talk, Whistle, Splash, Etc.—Took Great Inventor Four Years to Perfect the Apparatus—Perspiration, Not Inspiration, His Explanation.

[By Arthur Benington in Toronto Star Weekly.]

I have heard a photograph make a speech. I have heard a photograph sing "Annie Laurie." I have heard a photograph whistle. I have heard a photograph bark. I have heard a photograph play a violin and a piano at the same time. I have heard a photograph squirt water from a siphon and splash in a bathtub.

The photographs that did these extraordinary "stunts" were moving-pictures upon a screen. Every motion of the figures in them was accompanied at the instant by the proper sound.

The seance took place in a big room on the top floor of the Edison laboratory at Llewellyn Park. The screen on which the photographs moved and talked occupied one end of the room; the lantern that projected the pictures was near the ceiling at the other end. A stolen peep behind the curtain revealed a large phonograph, with its horn open toward and almost touching the canvas screen.

Tomorrow night in a hundred theatres the world at large may see just what I saw last week.

Everybody who has watched moving pictures has asked why they could not be combined with the phonograph so as to produce all the illusion of an actual happening. Edison asked himself this long ago. It seemed so easy. In fact, it was with this very idea that he first made moving pictures. But it was not nearly so easy as it seemed. It took Edison himself and hundreds of expert assistants four years of incessant work to make it possible.

Worked All Night.

One night Edison walked into the library of his works, sat down at a table, lit a big cigar, picked up a pencil, and began drawing diagrams on a sheet of paper.

Edison paused in his sketching only to light fresh cigars or to walk over to a glass tank and get a drink of water. He smiled at his sketches, and over some he lingered for hours. Edison's model was in his mind and he saw it there as clearly as if it had been an actual object before his eyes. About dawn he picked up his sketches, put them in a drawer, turned out the light, and went home to bed.

Less than four hours later he was back at his desk. He sent for one of his lieutenants, handed him the sketches, and spoke to this effect:

"Here are some possible ways of harnessing the phonograph and kinetoscope together so as to make talking-moving pictures. Please have them worked out."

Try Out All of Them.

A newcomer in the works remarked that there seemed to be a superfluity of ideas, and asked would it not be better to pick out the one design that seemed most meritorious and work it out thoroughly.

"If you or anyone else can say which design seems most meritorious, all right," said the lieutenant. "Mr. Edison sees more different ways of doing a thing than there are parts in a phonograph, and neither he nor we can tell which is the best until we have tried them all. Often it is the most unlikely design that develops into the best result."

Day and night the draughtsmen worked over those sketches, making careful working designs for each. Every now and then Mr. Edison dropped into the draughting room and inspected the work. As each design was finished he and his lieutenants went over it carefully. A few were rejected at once. In others, "the old man" suggested changes. Others he sent to the engineering staff with orders to carry them out into working models.

There were two distinct sets of designs, for two distinct problems were to be solved. As Edison sat in his study he saw in imagination a phonograph so improved, so acute in its hearing, that it could stand thirty or forty feet away from a stage and catch every sound that was made on it, and so accurate in its reproducing power that it could repeat every sound just as it had received it. He saw also this improved phonograph harnessed to a kinetoscope by an apparatus that kept them in perfect time with each other, both in receiving and delivering. The two problems, then, were the more sensitive phonograph and the synchronizer.

Must Work Together.

"When the two instruments are receiving," he explained to his assistants, "they must stand side by side at a distance from the stage sufficient to get the whole stage in focus, but when they are reproducing, the machines must be separated by the length of the hall. Therefore the synchronizing apparatus must be able to work at a distance."

Years pass. The making and remaking of models is incessant. The phonograph has been entirely rebuilt, you might also say reinvented, for there is scarcely a part of it that has not been changed. The synchronizing mechanism has been perfected. Everything is working like a charm.

"Mr. Edison," says Mr. Hutchison, the chief engineer, "we are ready for the final test of the kinetophone."

The duplex machine is set to work. The pictures appear upon the screen and the figures in them talk and sing to perfection.

Mr. Edison sits and smiles and criticises. He has not seen many of these films. A comic initiation into a secret society takes place before his eyes, and he laughs merrily as the man in the picture is rolled on a barrel, spanked with staves, ducked in a tub, doused with seltzer water and made to sing a song.

"It's all right now, is it not, Mr. Edison?" asks Mr. Hutchison.

Let Boys Have It.

"It seems so," replies the "old man." "But before you tell anybody about it turn the machines over to a couple of boys and let them play with them for a few months."

"A few months" protests one of the lieutenants.

"There's no hurry," remarks Mr. Edison.

Mr. Edison's "there's no hurry" is heard a thousand times by his assistants. By it he means that time is no object in comparison with perfection.

Mr. Hutchison picks out two 16-year-old boys who know nothing about kinetoscopes or phonographs; two youths of average intelligence but no technical skill. To them the new child of Edison's brain is turned over.

A few months later Mr. Edison says to Mr. Hutchison: "How are those boys getting on with the kinetophone? Have they wrecked it yet?"

"Not at all, sir," replies Mr. Hutchison. "They have done nothing worse than scratch up a few films."

"Let us go and see," says the chief. So Mr. Edison walks in on the boys, who are playing with the kinetophone.

The boys proceed to give a show for Mr. Edison's benefit. He notes how perfectly the sounds from the phonograph correspond with the movements of the speaker's lips and hands. He smiles at the performance and finally turns to Mr. Hutchison and says:

"Now you may go ahead and manufacture and sell the machines."

The Epitaph on Captain Oates Rises to the Sublime—Captain Scott's Last Message Also Noble in Form—An Epic of Heroism.

Of the epitaph inscribed on the cairn built to Captain Oates' memory—"Hereabouts died a very gallant gentleman"—the Paris Temps said, "These men find the right word at once. They require no effort to raise themselves to the sublime." Commenting on this, the London Spectator says: "No one, certainly, who has a sense of the value of words and of the greatness and dignity of simplicity will have failed to note the telling quality of the messages from the Antarctic expedition. Captain Scott's message is already an heroic legend. The epitaph on Oates is quite Elizabethan in inspiration."

"When new statues of heroes come to be set up, if we cannot get sculptors worthy of them," says the Saturday Review, "let us be satisfied with an inscription, and go for it to the author of the perfect words upon the tomb of Captain Oates."

An Epic of Heroism.

In a special article the Daily Telegraph points out the singular splendor and dignity of "sailors' English."

"Could an acknowledged master of the English language, possessed of the same raw materials of facts and mental impressions have told the story of the last days of Captain Scott's party more eloquently than the leader — a naval officer untrained in the art of writing—told it for himself?" asks the Telegraph.

"Seated in a tent pitched in a howling wilderness, with death staring him in the face, he set out to place the experiences of himself and his companions on record, and he used the simplest words, each having just the right emphasis. He did not strain after effect, but wrote down what was in his mind, and the result is not merely an epic of heroism, but an example of pure, pellucid English.

Sailors' Letters.

"Was it not Swift who said that 'proper words in their proper places make the true definition of style'? And someone else has declared that propriety of thought and propriety of diction are commonly found together, and that obscurity and affectation are the greatest faults of style. Does this throw any light on the curious fact that sailors, perhaps the least well-educated of professional men, have written letters which have lived not because they are records of great events, but because they are examples of a clear style of narration? It may be said that the writers were men of action, and that this explains the rare quality of their letters, but sailors are not the only men of action, and their written words is pre-eminent for its directness, simplicity, and lucidity. Possibly the truth is that they are not only men of action, but go to sea with little education, that they owe most of their culture to their own efforts, and particularly to observation at first hand, and that they live with nature, and are, therefore, supremely natural.

"We Find a Man."

"Captain Scott's education—a combination of the practical and theoretical—was at an end when, he was about fifteen years of age, and thenceforward the sea was his university. Yet it is this man—no whit different in many respects from his contemporaries who were prepared for their profession on board his majesty's ship Britannia at Dartmouth—who has left us a wonderful narrative of his last great quest. It is a short, concise story, without an unnecessary word, marked by a restraint which is marvellous if we remember the circumstances—a small tent pitched on a snow-enwrapped desert, with a hurricane howling around him and his companions dying by his side.

"Somewhere Pascal has said, 'When we see a natural style we are astonished and charmed, for we expected to see an author and we find a man.' Perhaps the singular charm of the writings of sailors is due to the fact that they are men before they become authors. Certain it is that no other profession has produced such writers as that of the sea.

Not a New Trait.

"This is not a new trait. It is apparently permanent; it has existed from all time. Honest in heart, sailors put down their thoughts without thought, as it were; what is in the mind is transferred to the paper. They do not pause to wonder what this man or that will say; their written word is a mirror of their minds. Sacred or profane, their thoughts are recorded by their pens without any hesitation. The same characteristics mark the letters of John Hawkyns and Francis Drake as those of Nelson, Collingwood, and St. Vincent.

"'We have to choose either a dishonorable or uncertain peace, or put on virtuous and valiant minds to make a way through with such a settled war as may bring forth and command a quiet peace.

"'There must be a beginning of any great matter, but the continuing unto the end until it be thoroughly finished yields the true glory.

"For the Lord is on our side, whereby we may assure ourselves our numbers are greater than theirs.

"'We are all persuaded that God, the giver of all victories, will in mercy look upon your most excellent majesty and us your poor subjects, who, for the defence of your majesty, our religion, and native country, have resolutely vowed the hazard of our lives.'

Masters of Style.

"There we have the great Elizabethan sailors using their pens—men of rough life and no education, and yet masters of style, whose words, after the passage of centuries, live, and remain an inspiration. They owed little to the school, nothing to the university, but everything to life itself, and their words are still fresh.

Down through the centuries, the biographies of the great sailors of every age yield phrases which still ring true, phrases with a pith and a crispness all their own. Captain Appleton, 1652, writing home of the recapture of the Phoenix, relates that 'at the appearing of the morning stars they entered and possessed the frigate in a short time.' Admiral Vernon tells his wife of his 'good health to go through all these glorious fatigues.' Again, Hawke, after the battle of Quiberon Bay, ends his dispatch thus, 'As to the loss we have sustained, let it be placed to the account of the necessity I was under of running all risks to break the strong force of the enemy.' Anson writes to congratulate the victorious admiral and to tell him that his majesty 'is fully satisfied that nothing was omitted that could be done to gain and improve the victory.' These are a few examples of the terse, virile English of men who had had little or no education, but had merely lived close to nature, with their eyes and ears open, and, let it be added, with the Bible—that model of a direct literary style—as the constant companion of most of them."

A Noble Epitaph.

Lord Curzon, speaking of Captain Oates—the Eton boy, the cavalry officer, the South African hero, the English gentleman—asks: Does history contain a finer picture than this young fellow, only 32 years old—exactly the same age as Sir Philip Sidney at Zutphen—walking out of the tent into the shrieking snowstorm to give up his life for his friends? Have the greatest prose writers in the world ever composed a nobler epitaph than the words which the search party cut upon a rude cross in the vicinity of his self-sacrifice—

"Hereabout died a very gallant gentleman"?

"Why do politicians wear high hats and frock coats?" asked the person who makes trivial inquiries. "Well," replied Senator Sorghum, "the high hat and the frock coat constitute the appropriate attire for occasions both of mourning and congratulation. And every election makes a politician feel as if he were going to a funeral or a wedding."—Washington Star.

"You remember that note I put in the pocket of one of the coats we shipped out?" said the first seamstress. "Get an answer?" inquired her chum. "Yes, got a letter today from the man who bought the coat. He inclosed a needle and requested me to thread it. Said the buttons were not sewed on very well."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Poetry of Matthew Arnold

[Right Hon. G. W. E. Russell in the Manchester Guardian.]

I have sometimes been told that I overrate Arnold as a prose writer and underrate him as a poet. Of his prose I shall today say nothing, and with regard to his poetry I am content to accept his own self-judgment.

"My poems," he wrote in 1869—"my poems represent on the whole the main movement of mind of the last quarter of a century, and thus they will probably have their day as people become conscious to themselves of what that movement of mind is, and interested in the literary productions which reflect it. It might be fairly urged that I have less poetic sentiment than Tennyson, and less intellectual vigor and abundance than Browning. Yet, because I have more perhaps of a fusion of the two than either of them, and have more regularly applied that fusion to the main line of modern development, I am likely enough to have my turn, as they have had theirs."

In this passage Arnold seems to ignore the most obvious reason for the undoubted fact that, at the time when he was writing, both Tennyson and Browning enjoyed a far wider popularity than his. That reason, I think, was that they both had given their whole lives to their art, whereas Arnold only wrote in the scanty leisure hours of a laborious profession. If circumstances had enabled him to give himself wholly to poetry he would have written more; he would have commanded a wider audience, and would have obtained that firm touch and assured mastery of his art without which no man can hope to dominate his readers. The divinity who presides over poetry rejects a half-hearted service, or at best rewards it with a partial and qualified success. Arnold gave up to school inspecting what was meant for the delectation of mankind; and this, not because he loved the work—how could he?—but because he wished to marry. When he retired from official life he made this frank confession to the assembled school teachers who had presented him with a testimonial:

Though I am a schoolmaster's son, I confess that school teaching is not the line of life I should naturally have chosen. I adopted it in order to marry a lady who is here tonight, and who feels your kindness as warmly and gratefully as I do. My wife and I had a wandering life of it at first. There were but three lay inspectors for all England. My district went right across from Pembroke Dock to Great Yarmouth. We had no home. One of our children was born in a lodging at Derby, with a workhouse, if I recollect aright, behind, and a penetentiary in front. But the irksomeness of my new duties was what I felt most, and during the first year or so it was sometimes insupportable.

Contrast this hurried, exhausting, and yet unsatisfactory life with the experiences of Tennyson and Browning. When Arnold ought to have been meditating, in undistracted peace,

On Man, on Nature, and on Human Life, he was examining little girls in needlework (of which he did not know a stitch) and little boys in music (of which he did not know a note), and listening to lessons on "Avalanches—The Steam Engine—The Thames—India Rubber—Bricks—The Battle of Poictiers—Substraction — The Reindeer—The Gunpowder Plot—The Jordan." While he was thus employed Browning was stretched on the turf among the rose trees in his father's garden, or tracking Shelley's footsteps in the Euganean Hills, or floating in Venetian sunshine. Tennyson was declaiming his earliest and most perfect lyrics as he strode over the Lincolnshire Wolds, or studying nature with a lover-like assiduity in the recesses of the Trossachs and the Tintern woods.

Had Arnold been able or willing thus to give his whole heart and life, till he was forty, to his art, he would have been a better artist. He would have acquired more ease and fluency. He always longed for poetic utterance, as his only adequate vent, and sought it earnestly with tears; but the effort is too perceptible and the result sometimes disappointing. But thought, with more abundant leisure, Arnold would have been a better artist, yet his poetry could never have been popular. In the first place, it is profoundly, if not morbidly, melancholy; and, as he himself said, "the life of the people is such that in their literature they require joy." But not only his thought—his very style—is anti-popular. Much of his most elaborate work is in blank verse, and much in exotic and unaccustomed metres. And again, his ear often played him false. His rhymes are sometimes only true to the eye, and his lines are overcrowded with jolting monosyllables.

The sandy spits, the shore-lock'd lakes.

Couldst thou no better keep, O Abbey Old?

The strange-scrowl'd rocks, the lonely sky.

These lines Mr. Frederick Harrison cites as proof that, "where Nature has witheld the ear for music, no labor and no art can supply the want." And I think that even a disciple may without disloyalty add to the collection:

As the punt's rope chops round.

Yet, when all these admissions have been made, it remains true that Arnold was a poet, and that his poetic quality was pure and rare. We saw just now that he said of himself, long before he had come to his full fame, "I am likely enough to have my turn." He had it, very definitely, and for the reason which he gave above—that he had applied his "fusion" of poetic gifts to "the main line of modern development"—or, in other words, that his poetry interpreted certain tendencies of thought which swayed men's minds in the reaction from the Anglican revival. He revolted against what he called,

Polluting rites, extern and vain.

though he felt, as keenly as anyone, the "enchantments" of the Catholic religion. He dismissed, with a rather excessive contempt the idea which Wordsworth had so gloriously embodied—that the recollections of childhood may be "Imitations of Immortality." The joy which the poets of all ages have agreed to seek in "hope, and a renovation without end," he found in the immediate contemplation of present good. He was deeply imbued by the sense that human existence, at its best, is inadequate and disappointing. With stately resignation, he accepted the common fate, and turned a glance of calm disdain on all endeavors after a spurious consolation. He did not question the abstract freedom of the will, but he saw that in its exercise it was circumschibed and hampered. All round he seemed to see

Un-o'erleaped Mountains of Necessity,
Sparing us narrower margin than we dream,

In a passage of pathetic beauty, he likened his lot to that of the cloistered votaries of a decaying faith:

Wandering between two worlds, one dead,
The other powerless to be born,
With nowhere yet to rest my head,
Like these, on earth I wait forlorn.

When he wrote that disconsolate stanza, it did indeed seem as if all faith were decaying. The dogmatic presumptions of the past had been rudely questioned. "Liberalism," in the sense Newman abhorred, had laid waste the sanctuaries of tradition. "Lord, the heathen, are come into Thine inheritance," was the cry of many hearts. "When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?" was a question which refused to be silenced. The old world, of authority, prescription, tradition, seemed to be fading away. The scientific temper was dominant. Men were told that nothing was credible except what could be proved by an appeal, in the last resort, to the organs of sense. The new world, in which Ethic should once again be exalted above Logic, and the spiritual forces of human life should again challenge the denials of materialism, was as yet "powerless to be born." It is true that Arnold lived through this forlorn interval, and saw at least the beginnings of the "Second Spring;" but his poetry belongs to the period of transition, and bears on every page the traces of a spirit which longs to believe, but finds belief impossible—a "sad lucidity of soul." In "A Wish," to which I referred the other day, the poet discards the conventional consolations of a deathbed, and entreats his friends to place him at the open window that he may see yet once again—

Bathed in the sacred dews of morn
The wide aerial landscape spread—
The world which was ere I was born.
The world which lasts when I am dead:

Which never was the friend of one,
Nor promised love it could not give,
But lit for all its generous sun,
And lived itself, and made us live.

This solemn love and reverance for the continuous life of the physical universe may remind us that Arnold's teaching about Humanity, subtle and searching as it it, has done less to endear him to many of his disciples than his feeling for Nature. The mood of pensive introspection, the mood of unsatisfied longing, in which so much of his poetry is written, appeals only to certain souls at certain stages of their experience. But when he turns from the perplexities of the human lot to the loving contemplation of the "Mighty Mother," he is at his best and brightest. He shakes off his melancholy; he steps gaily into the light and air; and we follow him with bounding pulse up "the awful Alpine track," or down the "broad, lucent Arno Vale," through "the cheerful silence of the Fells," or across "the stripling Thames at Bablock-Hithe."

Arnold's Nature-worship is, in his writing, as it was in his life, the antidote to his melancholy. When he gazes on the sunrise in the "Valais depth profound," or the purple fritillaries in the "river-fields," or "the blossoms red and white of fallen May," he forgets at least, for the moment, the "stern law of every mortal lot," which at other times presses so heavily on his soul, And then he perform for us, his readers, exactly the office which in his "Memorial Verses" he ascribes to Wordsworth:

He laid us as we lay at birth
On the cool flowery lap of earth;
Smiles broke from us and we had ease.
The hills were round us, and the breeze
Went o'er the sunlit fields again,
Our foreheads felt the wind and rain.

Our youth returned, for there was shed
On spirits that had long been dead,
Spirits dried up, and closely furl'd,
The freshness of the early world.

MEXICO'S FIGHTING STRENGTH—IN CASE OF AMERICAN INVASION.

If the United States intervenes in Mexico, every Mexican will be an enemy. The rival leaders and forces that have been fighting each other may be expected to turn against the Yankee invader and fight side by side. This estimate of the country's fighting strength is as nearly correct as it is possible for an expert to make it, in view of the present chaotic condition in Mexico and the difficulty of getting fresh information.—EDITOR.

WHITNEY REFUSES TO GIVE DETAILS OF HYDRO FINANCES; OPPOSITION WANTED RETURNS

Accounts of Mr. Beck's Department and T. & N. O. Will Not Be Given to the Public in Detail, Sir James Declares, Despite the Request of Liberal and Labor Leaders.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Toronto, March 15.—Warm words were expressed on the floor of the House yesterday afternoon in a discussion upon a motion of Mr. Sam Clarke (West Northumberland) for a return showing a detailed statement of the financial doings of the hydro-electric power commission for the year ending Oct. 31, 1912. The motion brought the House to a division, a rare occurrence on the question for a return, and Mr. Clarke's motion was defeated by a vote of 50 to 15, Mr. Studholme voting with the Opposition for the return. He explained that although he believed that every dollar expended by the hydro-electric commission had been spent properly, he thought the commission should prove this to the satisfaction of every member of the House, and the principle expressed in the Opposition's motion was right.

Right to Details.

Mr. Clarke, in making the motion, said he thought the House had a perfect right to the details asked for in his motion, as the hydro-electric affairs were in the same category as those of Government.

Mr. J. C. Elliott (West Middlesex) showed how difficult it was in the public accounts committee to intelligently consider matters of expenditure without details.

Hon. Mr. Lucas, acting provincial treasurer, said the hydro-electric affairs were different from those of the other departments of the money of the various municipalities, that the disposition of the money was of interest to the local municipalities and was not of provincial interest. He suggested that the Opposition had sinister design in asking for details, and declared the Liberal members did not love the hydro-electric scheme as ardently as they say they do.

Sir James Whitney said the order for the return should not go, one of his reasons being that there was so much congestion of work in the King's printer's department that it would be impossible to get the details printed in a report within a year, and allow the other ordinary work of the department to go on. He said, too, that all this information was accessible in the hydro-electric commission's offices to every member of the House.

A Red Herring.

The leader of the Opposition declared the acting treasurer was trying to draw a red herring across the track in attempting to show that the hydro-electric affairs were distinct from those of the other spending departments of the Government. He said when it suited the convenience and wishes of the Government the hydro-electric department was considered a part of or not a part of the regular departmental affairs of the Government.

The remainder of the brief sitting was occupied with a consideration of private bills.

Julian Hawthorne Sent to Prison

New York, March 14.—Julian Hawthorne, Dr. William J. Morton and Albert Freeman are guilty of using the United States mails to defraud the public in connection with the promotion of four mining properties in Canada, which the three men knew to be worthless.

This verdict was brought in at 5:45 o'clock this afternoon in the United States District Court by a jury which had been deliberating for twenty-seven hours upon the guilt or innocence of the accused.

Judge Julius Mayer thereupon sentenced Albert Freeman to serve five years and three days in the Federal Prison at Atlanta; Julian Hawthorne to serve one year and one day in Atlanta Prison, and Dr. Morton to serve also one year and one day in Atlanta Prison. Ex-Mayor Josiah Quincy was acquitted of the charge brought against him by the United States Government.

The prisoners were given over to Marshal Henkel, handcuffs were snapped upon their wrists and they were taken away to the Tombs, where during the next ten days they will await the decision of their counsel as to whether their cases shall be appealed.

RECORD BANK DEPOSIT MADE AT SARNIA THIS MORNING

$6,400,000 to Cover New Stock Issue of Imperial Oil Co.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Sarnia, March 15.—When the whistles blew at 12 o'clock today the sum of $6,400,000 had been deposited in the local branch of the Bank of Commerce. This sum, believed to be the largest individual contribution ever handled by a bank in Western Ontario, perhaps in Canada, was to cover the new issue of stock in the Imperial Oil Company.

The new issue was $4,000,000, and the new stock was issued at $160. This brought the amount to $6,400,000, and it was necessary for stockholders to have their subscriptions in at noon today.

The Imperial Oil Company has increased its stock from $6,000,000 to $10,000,000. There is to be further increases to $15,000,000, it is stated on good authority.

FRIEDMAN APPLIES VACCINE TEST TO MANY AT TORONTO

Cases Treated Comprised Almost Every Known Form of Disease.

Number of Children in Consumptive Evironment Were Immuned With Serum.

Toronto, March 15. — The visit of Dr. Friedman, the much-discussed German doctor and scientist, to the city yesterday, proved to be an event that, in the opinion of many of the doctors who viewed his operations, is the most important of a clinical nature that Toronto has had for some time past. There were eighty-one cases in all treated, about one-half of which were children, and a point of particular interest was that a fair proportion of the latter had not developed any signs of a tubercular character.

posed to infection in their homes, the mother in many cases being affected with the disease, and the injection of the serum was for the purpose of prevention and to immunize them.

The cases treated in the morning were practically all adults, and with the exception of nine were of the commoner kind, pulmonary tuberculosis. The other nine were of all kinds—enlargement of the cervical glands, tuberculosis of the kidneys and bladder, tuberculosis of the knee, of the ankle, and of the wrist joint, and together with the lung cases were in practically all stages, except where the disease had reached too advanced a stage, or, in the case of pulmonary tuberculosis, where there had been a recent hemorrhage.

Treated the Children.

In the afternoon Dr. Friedman visited the Sick Children's Hospital, where the injections to immunize were made, in addition to a considerable number of others of various kinds, where the disease was advanced. In connection with the latter were several cases that had been under observation in the hospital, and of which X-ray photographs had been made.

Dr. Friedman expressed himself as very much pleased with the reception accorded him in Toronto and the fair-minded attitude with which he was received. The doctors of the city, while withholding any expression of their expectation of the results, all appeared optimistic and are awaiting results with an open mind. One of the doctors who has been most closely associated with the scientist on his visit here, said: "We have the greatest possible hope in this new method of treatment, and the only honest and proper way to give any verdict on the matter was to have Dr. Friedman come here and do the work, and leave it for us to judge from the results as to the value of the cure."

LIFE UNDERWRITERS HOLD THEIR BANQUET

John A. Tory, President of Association for Canada, Present.

The annual banquet of the life underwriters was held at the Tecumseh House Friday night. The various life companies were well represented. The president of the local association, Mr. Charles T. Glass, occupied the chair.

The speaker of the evening was John A. Tory, the president of the Life Underwriters' Association of Canada. President Glass, in calling the meeting to order, referred to the life agent's work in a humorous vein, after which he called on John A. Tory, to deliver his address. The latter referred to his boyhood days spent near London. He had always regarded London as one of the prettiest places he had ever visited, and longed to become a citizen.

He made comparisons between present conditions and those ten years ago, when an agent would cross a street to avoid meeting his competitor.

He referred to the splendid work accomplished by the Canada Life Underwriters' Association in securing sane legislation, with the result that Canada today has the best insurance act in the world, and the evils of rebating and twisting were practically a thing of the past. The practical abolition of the rebate evil had saved 22½ per cent of all the commissions coming to them, which, on $100,000,000 worth of business annually written in Canada, at, say, $30 per $1,000, meant $3,000,000 retained in the pockets of the life agents. It was further estimated that under the changed conditions 11 per cent of the renewal lapses had been saved.

A hearty resolution of thanks was moved by Mr. G. H. Nichol and seconded by Mr. C. E. German, and unanimously carried.

The musical part of the program was carried out by Mr. R. T. Collins, and his songs on each occasion were responded to with encores.

Mr. Joseph Vivian presented five new applications for membership.

The following were present: John A. Tory, Charles T. Glass, G. H. Nichol, George H. Davis, George McBroom, W. J. Underwood, A. N. Udy, H. N. Fleming, P. L. Waylett, D. A. Sinclair, T. L. Newton, H. E. Gates, J. G. Boucher, Frank E. Fallon, S. C. Tweed, R. G. Collins, J. E. Thurlby, Joseph Vivian, Charles Myrick, W. H. Robinson, W. R. Waugh, R. P. Pearce and C. E. German.

BERLIN BOY DROWNED

Fainted From Excitement, and Fell Into Two Feet of Water.

[Canadian Press.]

Berlin, March 15. — Arthur Kellerborn, 11 years of age, son of George Kellerborn, of St. Jacobs, was drowned in two feet of water this morning. He was watching the ice floating down the stream, and, becoming excited, fainted. He was found drowned by his brother.

TWO MINOR ACTIONS.

Mr. Justic Kelly presided at the sitting of the weekly high court this morning, at which but three cases were considered.

Re Petch and Willocks—This was an application under the vendors' and purchasers' act to confirm the report of the local master at London by which he found that the vendor, Robert J. Petch, has a good title in fee simple to lot 23, first range south of the Longwoods road, in the Township of Mosa. The court confirmed the report. Mr. F. E. Perrin represented the vendor, and there was no solicitor for the purchaser present.

As the action of Belcher against Ryckman had been settled out of court, the motion in this case was not proceeded with. W. R. Meredith for the plaintiff.

A motion in the case of Reardon against Reardon. The motion was allowed to stand for an indefinite period. W. R. Meredith for the plaintiff.

Plan "All Fools'" Concert.

In presenting the concert at the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium on April 1, the committee in charge of the "All Fools' Day in the Old Red Schoolhouse" entertainment have been very successful in securing some of the best local talent that is available, and an evening with much fun-provoking merriment and altogether unique in character is looked for. All school children should see this concert, as it will picture to them what their parents went through 50 years ago. The Dumpling twins will be unusually interesting, and to witness Pat bringing his truant son back to school, tied hand and foot, in a wheelbarrow, will also have its funny side.

SIGNBOARDS WOULD BE BETTER THAN ANY PUBLICITY EXPERT

Suggestion That City Resort to Plackards Along Railways.

J. Grant Henderson Does Not Deny Failure to Get Industries.

The question whether London should again ornament itself with a publicity commissioner will be debated at a meeting of the city council Monday night.

One alderman has stated that he will move that the salary of the mayor be increased by $500, and that the question of getting new industries be left in his hands, to appoint a commission of citizens or to adopt other methods of getting in touch with industries. This is not with the idea of making the mayor publicity commissioner, but to place the responsibility upon him.

Don't Want Commissioner.

Among citizens there seems to be a consensus of opinion that another "industrial commissioner" should not be appointed. That the citizens can do more toward securing industries than any professional "booster," seems certain, as all of the new industries that have been induced to come to the city have been secured by the mayor or aldermen or citizens.

Mr. J. Grant Henderson, as asserted before, has not secured one industry for London. The Wilcox industry, the only one about which any claim has been made since Mr. Henderson was challenged as to the truth of his putting London on the map, was secured by Mayor Graham and several others.

Talked Cheap Power.

On two occasions Mr. Henderson has stated to The Advertiser that the cheap power in other places was the most difficult problem in the securing of industries. He said London was greatly handicapped. Mr. Henderson does not p[illegible] make this claim, and citizens are wondering what other excuse he can produce.

Mr. W. J. Clark, who has been watching the futile efforts of Mr. Henderson and others, states that in his belief it would be a splendid thing for London to use large boards along the Grand Trunk Railway from the Niagara border to the Detroit border, setting forth the advantages of this city.

"There are thousands and thousands of wealthy men who travel these routes, and the city would derive great benefit," he said.

NO SERIOUS DAMAGE IN FLOOD AT INGERSOLL

The Water Got Away Much Faster Than Usual This Spring.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Ingersoll, March 15. — Not in years has the ice moved out of the ponds and streams so quickly as has been the case this week. Practically all of the ice has disappeared from local ponds, the process taking but about four days, when usually it is extended over a couple of weeks. Although all the streams and the river have been very high, no serious damage has occurred.

Despite the bad condition of the roads the market today was well attended by country people. Butter and eggs now constitute the bulk of the offerings. Poultry is being marketed in somewhat limited quantities, and the demand is keen. Prices today were: Butter, 30 to 32 cents a pound; eggs, 22 to 23 cents per dozen; chickens, 60 to 80 cents each.

Tapping the Trees.

Many farmers were quick to take advantage of the fine weather this week to tap their maple trees, and according to reports there has been a splendid run of sap. Some of the syrup-makers have had one or more boilings, and the prediction has been made that next week considerable syrup will be marketed.

An Old Resident.

By the death of Mr. John Shelton, Ingersoll has lost an old and widely-known resident. He was in his 80th year, and prior to coming to Ingersoll was engaged in farming in Dereham Township. He is survived by two sons, John and George, of Dereham, and three daughters—Mrs. George Manzer, Foldens Corners; Mrs. John Moyer, of Toronto, and Mrs. V. Bullock, of Los Angeles, Cal.

The funeral of Frank McMulkin, sen., who was killed on the G. T. R. crossing Thursday afternon, will take place to the Ingersoll rural cemetery on Sunday afternon at 2:30 o'clock.

NO GAS AT BRANTFORD

No Heat to Cook Meals Nor Power to Run Presses.

[Canadian Press.]

Brantford, March 15. — Owing to a break in the gas main of the Dominion Gas Company at the Cockshutt bridge, caused by the high water in the Grand River, the supply of gas for Brantford was cut off this morning. From indications there will be no supply until late this evening. The newspaper offices are tied up, using gasoline, or setting by hand. Many will be without means to cook meals, and also without heat.

CALLED HIM "WALLINGFORD"

Kansas Promoter Thinks It Libellous and Sues Edmonton People.

[Canadian Press.]

Edmonton, March 15.—W. R. Clarke, the Kansas promoter, who floated the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway, has issued a writ, claiming $50,000 for libel against the Edmonton Bulletin. The article complained of referred to "Wallingford," and Clark, in his statement of claim asserts that he is thus connected with the character in the well-known book, in which are described the efforts and methods employed by a young man to defraud the public. It is understood an offer of settlement on the basis of an ample apology was made by Clark's solicitors to the Bulletin, but was refused.

Y.M.C.A. PRESENTS CAUSE WORTHY OF PUBLIC ASSISTANCE

Not Money-Making Concern—Aims Are Altogether Altruistic.

Work Is Heavy and Money Is Scarce—Help Is Needed.

In these days, when so much importance is attached to the attraction and encouragement of industries, sight must not be lost of the fact that there is one enterprise in this city which is conducting an industry of first importance to London, which is entitled to the moral sympathy and financial support of all citizens. The industry in question is the Young Men's Christian Association, and its particular line of business is that of character building, the making of good citizens.

Not an Ordinary Cause.

It differs from the ordinary business enterprise in that it is not a money-making concern, those investing in it being satisfied with dividends in the shape of young men saved from baneful influences which beset them on every side, and in the rescuing of others who have early in life started on a downward career. How well this work is carried on by the association in London, the reports of its operations year after year amply show; indeed it can with truth be said that to its untiring efforts many a useful citizen owes the position he holds in the community today.

Money Is Required.

But though the members are enthusiastic and indefatigable in the most praiseworthy work, it requires money to keep the organization running, and in this respect the citizens of London have been ever ready to lend a liberal hand.

Costs $9,000 a Year.

The cost of carrying on the work of the Y. M. C. A. in London amounts to $9,000 per annum, this being not a large sum when the immense good accomplished is considered. The income from membership fees and rent of the upper part of the association building on Wellington street does not exceed $2,000 annually, so that at the end of each twelve months there is an unavoidable deficit of $4,000. Such was the case last year, and will be this year unless the citizens once more respond to the association's appeal.

Membership Big.

The annual report for 1912 showed a total membership of 930, which demonstrates the popularity of the association, but even if it were doubled, the financial standing could not be improved, for it is recognized by all that not until the association, like that of other cities, possesses a building large enough to permit of providing lodging accommodation for members whose homes are out of the city, can it be made self-supporting. It may not be too much to hope that the time is not very far distant when London will have a Y. M. C. A. building of the kind referred to.

Present Needs Urgent.

Meanwhile, present needs are urgent, the association is confronted with last year's deficit of $4,000, and if it has only its natural revenue to depend on, this shortage will be doubled at the close of the present year.

To Wipe Out Debt.

To meet this present and prospective deficit, and also to wipe off a floating debt, the association has decided on a three days' subscription campaign to raise the sum of $12,000. The campaign, which will be of the "whirlwind" variety, will commence on the morning of Tuesday, March 25, and will close on the evening of Thursday, March 27. The campaign will be in charge of a committee of between 90 and 100 enthusiastic workers, who intend to make a complete canvass of the city. Nobody will be intentionally overlooked, and no contribution or subscription will be considered too small. The desire is to give everybody the privilege of co-operation in this way in this splendid work.

Cannot Stand Still.

It has been well said that no progressive industrial concern can stand still—it must forge ahead or go out of business. This is as true of the Y. M. C. A. as of any other enterprise. London can no more afford to let the Y. M. C. A. stand still than it can afford to lose any of its other industries. We must at all hazards retain the benefits of its educational department, its religious work, which includes shop meetings in the big shops of the city three days a week during the winter; its week-day and night Bible classes, its physical department, with gymnasium, its work among the boys and young strangers in the city, and the influences of the association's international ramifications.

Must Be Kept There.

They are here, and must be kept here. It would be a distinct loss to the city were Y. M. C. A. efforts to be relaxed in the slightest degree. Rather should they increase and expand, and the citizens have it in their power to make that possible.

Watch out, then, for the coming three days' campaign, and be ready to do your part in the worthy work of saving young men.

CORRESPONDENCE

A Plea for Good Roads.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

There is a lot of talk at the present time about the Little Canadianism and the Larger Canadianism. But how would it be to coin a new phrase and speak of a common-sense Canadianism? We are talking in this city about a Federal Square and electrification—very nice things in their way. But bring common-sense to bear on this matter. Is it rational, expedient, or right to bother about these things, when we have such glaring, absolute needs before us?

What would we think of a man who bought a $6,000 automobile, and whose front steps and entrance to his house were a disgrace and menace to the community

We would say he was crazy. But let us speak softly, for I think that is pretty nearly our position.

Interested persons are talking Federal Square and electrification, and in Parliament they are advocating spending millions on a navy. But what about our roads?

On Thursday night a call was sent in to the fire brigade to come to a fire in South London. The motor truck and the truck from No. 3 station were stuck in the mud, and could not get to the fire. Is not this a plain evidence of a greater need for better roads than is the need for such luxuries, under present financial circumstances, as a Federal Square, or even electrification?

Could not our council institute a general tax for the whole city for better roads? I am paying for curb and gutter outside my own property, but will promise to make no kick if there is another system of effective taxation brought forward to meet this (to my mind) grave and pressing need.

It is time we got down to hard pan re this subject, and went in for permanency and solidity in our road-building.

We have got beyond the cedar post foundation stage in our house-building. Let us get beyond the gravelling and patching stage in the road-building for our city.

WALTER H. BIGGS.

TAKING A STRIKE VOTE

Trainmen Making Demand on Nineteen Roads at Chicago.

[Canadian Press.]

Chicago March 15.—A strike vote by 6,000 local members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen has started at the yards of nineteen railroads affected. It is expected the vote will be completed by next Tuesday.

A. F. Whitney, vice-president of the brotherhood, said that he was confident the vote would be in favor of making a demand on the roads for the terms which have been refused the committee on negotiations. The demands do not involve more pay except for overtime and night and Sunday work. The firemen are not affected.

The roads involved include the principal east and west trunk lines and the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern, the principal belt line.

CAUGHT BY BUZZ SAW AND PAINFULLY HURT

C. R. Partlow Had a Close Call From Losing an Arm.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Dorchester, March 15.—Mr. C. R. Partlow narrowly escaped a serious accident at the home of Mrs. Shields. While sawing wood his coat-sleeve caught in the circular saw, drawing his arm in, and cutting his elbow, which required many stitches by Dr. Banghart.

A number of our public school pupils had a rather lively experience yesterday. They were amusing themselves walking on the ice, which had become jammed in the river west of the village, when one young girl slipped and fell into the water.

But for the timely assistance of some of the larger boys, however, who pulled her out, the affair might have resulted fatally for her, as the water was very deep at that point.

Beyond the shock and a bad wetting she escaped without serious results.

The W. M. S. of the Methodist Church at their regular Easter meeting on Wednesday afternoon entertained the young ladies of the Mission Circle in an "at home." A good program, consisting of responsive readings, singing by the members, and also a delightful piano duet by Mrs. (Rev.) Kerr and Miss Hattie Roth. Mrs. A. L. Chittick and Miss Lulu Hazen also rendered a vocal duet in a very pleasing manner.

After the program a very dainty luncheon was served by the ladies of the W. M. S., and a pleasant social time was enjoyed by all. The Easter offerings of both the older society and circle were very liberal.

Miss Leota Dale entertained a number of her young friends very pleasantly on Thursday evening in games, etc.

Jaques Boats Discontinue Call at Port

The Pere Marquette officials in this city have received word from the Jaques Line to the effect that the business received from London would not warrant the continuance of calls at Port Stanley during the coming summer.

FLOOD DANGER IS PAST AT ST. MARYS

River Rose Rapidly, But Snow Is Now Nearly All Gone.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

St. Marys, March 15. — The annual spring freshet and breaking up of the ice on the River Thames took place yesterday. Between early morning and the noon hour the flood water had risen three feet six inches, about three feet less than a year ago.

The mild weather of the past few days and the heavy downpour of rain of Thursday night started the ice going. If the rain keeps off for another two days there will be no further danger of flood.

Rev. Mr. Malott, of the Methodist Church, who was injured a few days ago by being thrown out of a cutter, through the horse shying at a bale of hay dropped on the roadside, is able to be out again.

Mr. John Brooks, of Wellington street south, has sold his 100-acre farm in the Township of Downie, lot 20, con. 10, to Mr. Wm. Good, of Waubay, South Dakota.

Many properties in town and country are beginning to change hands, and lands are increasing in value.

London, March 14. — The total of broken windows at the home office was added to this afternoon by Marjorie Masters, a suffragette school teacher, who threw a pot of green paint through one of them, scattering the liquid over the bureau. She was arrested.

What is suspected to be a suffragette plot to damage the great new water reservoir at Chingford, in the northeast of London, which King George is to open tomorrow, was frustrated by the arrest of a woman this evening, who was concealed in a recess of the works. She refused to give her name or any other information.

"WORLD WILL SOON KNOW THE TRUTH"

Comment of Dr. MacGregor When Told of Illness of Ray Sparling.

Jackson, Mich., March 14.—Warden Simpson said today: "Though I am not in the habit of talking for publication about the affairs of prisoners under my charge, I do believe that Dr. MacGregor is innocent of the charge on which he was convicted."

Doctor's Statement.

Jackson, Mich., March 14.—"The world will soon know the truth," said Dr. Robert MacGregor, when told of the serious illness of the remaining Sparling boy, Ray, at the home of a sister in Port Huron.

The doctor, who was nearly prostrated by the news, has directed his attorneys to watch the case of Ray Sparling closely, giving them expert medical advice in the line of handling it, as the boy's illness is similar to that of his dead brother, Scyrel, for whose death the physician is undergoing a life sentence.

Sparling's Condition.

Port Huron, Mich., March 14.—The condition of Ray Sparling was unchanged today, according to information given out by his mother, and Dr. E. W. Morey, his attending physician. The doctor stated that the youth stands a chance for recovery, but refused to comment on the similarity of symptoms between Ray's illness and that of his brother, who died under unusual circumstances, other than to say that he believes it is hereditary. Should the boy recover he would not be able to work for many months, the physician says.

GREATER MIDDLESEX ASSOCIATION HOLD EXECUTIVE MEETING

Publicity Pamphlet Describing County's Opportunities Considered By Members.

Between 20,000 and 25,000 Will Be Printed for Circulation Abroad.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Greater Middlesex Association was held in the county council chambers on Friday afternoon, when proofs of a 36-page publicity pamphlet for distribution in the old country were considered.

President Glass stated that there had been considerable more delay in the preparation of the pamphlet than had been expected at first, but that it would now be finished in a few days. Grants of $1,000 and $500 had been received from the county and city councils respectively, and as soon as $1,000 is spent on the campaign the Ontario Government will donate $333.33.

Explains Opportunities.

The pamphlet is so arranged that the possibilities and opportunities of Middlesex County are set forth.

Communications were read from the department of agriculture offering the association all the assistance possible in the distribution of pamphlets.

The matter in the pamphlet was criticized to a certain extent by the members of the executive, and a number of suggestions were made that will be included in the pamphlet if too much time is not taken up in the preparation of the matter as suggested.

A resolution was passed of which the matter was accepted as prepared, and the special committee was empowered to complete the work. The question of the number of pamphlets to be printed, 20,000 or 25,000, was also left in the hands of the special committee.

Got Small Grant.

W. J. Bartlett, special commissioner of The Advertiser in connection with the Greater Middlesex campaign, was granted $25 for his work in assisting in the formation of the association and in some work on the pamphlet.

The offer of the London Free Press of a silver cup for a competition among the alfalfa growers of the county was accepted, and a committee composed of President Glass, Secretary Dawson and Warden A. K. Hodgins, was appointed to take charge of the contest.

Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

BIGGEST BIBLE CLASS

Move Started To Have One at Washington With Bryan as Head.

[Canadian Press.]

Washington, March 15.—Fifty clergymen of every denomination, headed by Rev. H. S. Pinkham, of the Emmanuel Baptist Church, will call at the state department late today and urge Secretary of State Bryan to take the leadership of what they hope will prove the greatest interdenominational Bible class in the world. If Mr. Bryan accepts it will immediately be known as the "Bryan Bible Class."

The plan is to engage some great hall in the centre of the capital and hold services for men there on every Sunday afternoon. It is part of a general movement to get men, and especially young men, into the church. Every member will be compelled to fill out a card giving his name, address and religious leanings. These cards will be given to the ministers of the several denominations, who will immediately make personal effort to add the Bible class students to their churches.

Secretary Bryan has been much in demand by the religious denominations since he took office. He has been asked to lead a Bible class in at least one church, and yesterday was pressed to deliver two or three lectures on Christianity in aid of the church recruiting movement. So far he has made no promises.

BALLOT TAMPERING PROBED AT FOREST

Judge Macwatt, of Sarnia, Reserved His Decision After Hearing Evidence.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Forest, March 14.—Judge Macwatt, of Sarnia, held an investigation here today into the alleged tampering with local option ballots after they were counted by the town clerk.

W. J. Porte appeared for the town council, and W. Haverson, of Toronto, for the anti local optionists.

The evidence, which took three hours, was given by the following: C. P. Reed, returning officer; H. Durham, poll clerk; R. Karn, town clerk; G. Maxfield, chief of police, Alex. Jamieson and Wm. Sheppard, scrutineers; Wm. Gilles, high constable at poll, N. Tripp and C. W. McCordic. Judgment was reserved.

The high school pupils held their annual oratorical contest in the town hall here last evening. Three prizes were given, 16, 10 and 8 volumes of English classics, and were won by Howard Walker, Miss Via McCordic and Lister Pettypiece, the three contestants reflecting credit on their school and training.

Other pleasant features of the program were selections from the Glee Club, a solo from Miss Steele, and one from Miss Wilson, and an instrumental from Miss Needham. Dr. Hubbard, chairman of the board, acted as chairman for the evening, and the judges were Miss F. Rawlings, Rev. J. Cornish and C. E. Woodworth.

ALEX. W. SMITH'S MODEL FARM AN EXAMPLE OF WHAT MAY BE ACCOMPLISHED IN E. WILLIAMS

Sheep That Win Grand Championships and Abundant Crops of Grain Do Justice to Proud Claims of Township.

BUT ONE MUST FIRST DRIVE THROUGH MILES OF IDLE LAND

Facts About East Williams

Population, 2,800.

There are 43,331 acres of the best land for general farming.

Churches, 8.

Schools, 10.

Good town hall.

Stave and saw mills.

Flour mill and foundry.

4,200 acres lying idle (estimated).

[By W. J. Bartlett.]

Ailsa Craig, March 15.—After passing through miles of country, which is mostly pasture land, and should be producing the finest grain crops, it was with the greatest pleasure I sighted the model farm of Mr. Alex. W. Smith, ex-M. P.

As a practical farmer, Mr. Smith is well known for miles around, and his famous sheep have captured the highest championship honors in the States and Canada.

Won Grand Championship.

At the World's Fair, St. Louis, Sanford, a Leicester ewe, gained the grand championship, and won $1,000 in prizes.

As a general farmer, Mr. Smith has accomplished big things. He follows a system of crop rotation, and believes the best results can only be obtained in this way.

Last season his wheat turned 40 bushels to the acre, oats 55 bushels, and barley 50 bushels per acre.

I pointed out to Mr. Smith that there were many abandoned farms in the district, and he at once plunged into the matter.

Too Much Pasturage.

"Unfortunately there are," he stated, "and there are too many farms being pastured.

"This has been going on for years. The young farmers have been attracted by the glare of the West, and are gone.

"Then, again, we simply cannot get hired help. I try to keep three men all the time, but succeed only half the time.

"The Greater Middlesex Association should have been started long ago, but late in the day as it is, we must work shoulder to shoulder to attract hired to Middlesex.

The Hope of the County.

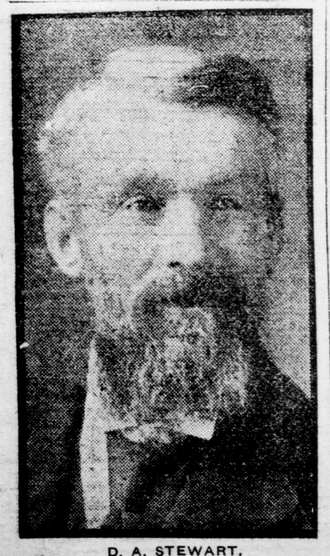
"I believe a practical farmer should be sent to the old land in the fall to give lectures on the resources of Middlesex. I hope the matter will be taken up right away. Things have reached a serious condition in North Middlesex. Nothing but prompt action will avert further disaster."



D. A. STEWART,
Clerk of East Williams, and a Veteran Farmer.

EX-WARDEN SAYS ADVERTISER HAS THE RIGHT IDEA

S. R. Gillies One of Leaders in Movement for Regeneration of the Township.

Splendid Farms Rented for Pasturage Demands Speedy Change.

[By W. J. Bartlett.]

Ailsa Craig, March 15. — One of the "live wires" of this district is S. R. Gillies, president of the board of trade and ex-warden of the county.

He is thoroughly conversant with every agricultural interest and is putting forth every effort to boost things.

He is greatly interested in The Advertiser's publicity campaign, and had some encouraging things to say about the movement.

The Right Idea, He Thinks.

"I am glad The Advertiser is bringing the great resources of Middlesex before the people," he stated.

"Every farming interest around here has greatly suffered through lack of hired help. The young farmers got the west fever some ten years ago and left the township, leaving the old folks on the farms."

Rented for Cattle.

"They, unable to secure help, rented their farms to cattlemen at the low price of $2.50 per acre, and thus the best farming land in Canada remtains untilled.

"There are thousands of idle acres in the township and the farm buildings are going to rack and ruin.

"I have not overdrawn things a bit. Anyone acquainted with the township will bear out what I say.

Help an Impossibility.

"It is impossible to get help even at $2 per day at present, and something must certainly be done to bring about a different condition of affairs.

"We organized a board of trade here a few months ago and we will leave no stone unturned to bring this section of Middlesex right to the front."

GREATER BURDENS STILL.

"A booming European trade can just bear its present burdens without revolution; how would a pinched and half-idle world-industry bear greater ones still?" asks the Nation.

SOLITARY CONFINEMENT.

"The existing periods of this cruel form of government—solitary confinement—are all too long, and will, I fear, remain so till Providence has given us imagination enough to understand what it means to be caged up alone in a space of eight feet by twelve, for twenty-three hours out of twenty-four, during ninety, or even during thirty, consecutive days," writes Mr. John Galsworthy to the Nation

A LEGACY of 1909.

The European situation, says the Times Vienna correspondent, has been poisoned ever since the annexation of Bosnia by Austria in 1909. "That lies at the bottom of much that is least satisfactory in the present international situation. It is important that the settlement of the present crisis should not leave Europe so sorry a legacy as that bequeathed by the crisis of 1908-9."

AS THOUGH BY MAGIC FARMERS WENT TO WEST

D. H. Stewart, Township Clerk, Says Things Have Changed in East Williams.

Only One Buyer Is Required Now, Where Five Formerly Did Business.

[By W. J. Bartlett.]

Ailsa Craig, March 15.—My visit to East Williams would have been incomplete had I not called upon Mr. D. A. Stewart, the township clerk, and veteran farmer.

Mr. Stewart was born in the district 71 years ago, and for 30 years applied his activities to general farming.

"Things have certainly changed in East Williams," he asserted. "Some fifteen years ago agricultural prosperity was visible everywhere; the farms were certainly well worked.

Cleared By Magic.

"Then came the Winnipeg boom, and as if by magic the farmers' sons went wholesale to the West.

"It was undoubtedly the great publicity it received that attracted the young men, and nothing could hold them back.

"At that time the township was noted for its grain crops, and there were five buyers. Now there is only one.

"Dairying, too, was good years ago, and I used to make a trip to London every week to dispose of the products of the farm.

Hundreds of Idle Acres.

"There are 2,400 acres of good land lying idle at the present time; that is, the farms are rented for pasture.

"If this vast acreage was worked, the good old times of prosperity would be evident again.

"I understand that most of the immigrants who come to Canada go to Toronto.

"If a competent man met the steamers at the landing port and distributed suitable literature of the need of men in Middlesex, we would be able to secure many laborers.

Deserves To Be Famous.

"This township is one of the finest in Ontario, and for general farming, dairying and fruit-growing should be more widely known."

Tid-Bits From Middlesex County

[By W. J. Bartlett, Advertiser Commissioner.]

Spring will soon be here.

Not how much land you work, but how thorough is what counts.

Peter McArthur is a live wire. Give the sluggards a shock, Mac.

Middlesex has now proved itself to be the Banner County.

Peter Elson should have identified himself with the Greater Middlesex publicity campaign long ago. Hurry up, Peter!

Spraying fruit trees with lime sulphur 1 to 9 should commence this month.

The man behind the plow rules the world.

The Greater Middlesex Association should have a competent man, provided with suitable literature, at the port where emigrants land.

The average farmer suffers from lack of sufficient modern agricultural implements.

Every farmer should keep an account of his operations.

T. A. Baker, Woodbank, says the London market square should be covered. He is not alone in his opinion.

The middleman has played with the producer long enough. Get after him, farmers.

Co-operation is the keynote to success. Stand firmly together.

OPTIMISM WILL WIN BACK THE LOST SONS

Editor Croft Among the Foremost to Improve Conditions—His Newspaper a Great Influence in East Williams.

Ailsa Craig, March 15.—An extraordinary state of affairs exists in this township. Agriculture at all seasons of the year is practically at a standstill.

The finest land is being pastured, owing to scarcity of labor.

Many fine houses and barns are in a dilapidated condition and very little effort is being put forth to right matters.

A generous supply of hired help will alone improve things, and the farmers are building their faith upon the efforts of those who are behind The Greater Middlesex Association.

Aid the Settlers.

Many farmers believe that some scheme could be entered into to give financial assistance to laborers in the old land to settle here.

Prominent in the fight to improve the existing conditions is the secretary of the Ailsa Craig Board of Trade, and editor of the Ailsa Craig Banner, Mr. R. D. Croft. He is devoting considerable attention to the matter and is optimistic of the future.

A Crying Shame.

"East Williams must have settlers," he emphatically stated. "It is a great shame to see thousands of acres of fine farm land lying idle.

"We must not let the great west have all its own way. We must educate our young farmers to a realization of the golden opportunities right here in Middlesex.

"I have been all over Old Ontario from Sarnia to Montreal a number of times and have observed the country closely, and I can truthfully say that, in my opinion, Middlesex is the finest agricultural section in the province. Western Ontario, properly settled, is a huge, but none the less, real garden.

"All the People With You."

"I cannot too strongly express my approval of your Greater Middlesex Campaign and the way it is being handled. Practically all the people are with you irrespective of their political opinions."

In the Banner published by Messrs. Croft & Wright, Ailsa Craig, and East Williams have an influence that is stamped with progressive personality. It stands in the front rank of rural papers, and does not print a dull line. The Banner is and will be a good banner for East Williams to follow, and The Advertiser owes its thanks for past co-operation in the Stay in Ontario campaign. In common with most of the other rural papers, the Banner has been among the keenest advocates of a thoroughly sane agitation. Each of these papers in its district can be a great power to check the exodus, and the direct results, though long in coming, will yet be seen.

Daniel Webster's Political Suicide

[By Rev. T. B. Gregory.]

It was 63 years ago that Daniel Webster made the speech in the United States Senate which blasted his political hopes and sent him, broken-hearted, to the grave.

Mr. Clay, the "Great Compromiser," was in the midst of his last great struggle to save the Union, and on the 5th of February the grand old man introduced his plan in the Senate and followed it with one of his most eloquent speeches, a speech that was full of the kindliness and love of country that always characterized the great Kentucklan's efforts.

Almost immediately thereafter appeals began pouring in upon Webster to unbosom himself upon the all-important theme. "You can save us, Mr. Webster; and you alone. In the name of God and our distressed country, make a speech." Such, in substance, was the animus of the flood of letters that rolled in upon the senator from Massachusetts.

On the 7th of March the "Great Expounder" arose in his place in the Senate to make the much-called-for speech. Expectation was on tiptoe. The silence was like that of the Day of Judgment. "What will he say? What will he say?" was the query that was

A MODEL FARMHOUS E IN EAST WILLIAMS.

FOUR GENERATIONS OF HUNTS

Samuel Hunt, the senior member of this group, was born on the 3rd of April, 1829, in the Township of Westminster, lot 63, West Talbot road. He lived upon this farm, which his father got from the Government, for over 72 years, and then moved to London (South) with his youngest son, A. M. Hunt, secretary of the Western Fair board. He was not only a prosperous farmer, but he kept himself well posted in all the current events of the day, and does so still. While on the farm he was a regular attendant of the North Street Methodist Church, on the Westminster circuit. He was a member of the trustee board for upwards of forty years, and the recording steward of the circuit for 27 years. He was a member of the annual London Conference for a number of years, and a delegate to the General Conference of 1882, 1883, when the union of the several Methodist churches was consummated, and was a delegate in 1890. He is a great lover of music, and used to "pitch" the tunes in the church services before organs were introduced. He now attends the Askin Street Methodist Church and Sunday School, being a member of the adult Bible class. He had two sons and two daughters. He has ten grandchildren and seven great grandchildren.

Ezra S. Hunt, eldest son of Samuel Hunt, was born Jan. 1, 1855, and resides on the old homestead. Besides running the large farm, he has been engaged in municipal work for 21 years, and is now going through the township the 34th time. He has been a member of the trustee board of the North Street Church, and a local preacher for 34 years, and is entering on his 40th year as leader of the choir. He has been a member of the annual conference for 26 years in succession, and a delegate to the General Conference of 1898, 1906 and 1910. He has three sons and three daughters, and six grandchildren.

Ewart B. Hunt, eldest son of E. S. Hunt, was born Aug. 15, 1882. He is an energetic and prosperous farmer, and lives on the west end of the old homestead. He also is a member of the trustee board of the Westminster circuit, and a great lover of music.

Samuel Donald Hunt, son of Ewart B. Hunt, was born March 10, 1912. He is a bright boy for his age.

LEFT-HANDED PEOPLE

Sir J. Crichton-Browne and Ambidexterity.

Sir James Crichton-Browne, speaking in London recently, expressed strong disapproval of the attempt that is being made to introduce ambidextral (use of both hands) teaching. The occasion was a lecture before the Society for Child Study given by the school medical officer for London, Dr. James Kerr, who had said that while he did not approve of left-handed children being taught to write with the right hand, he thought there might be some advantages in it, especially as all our machinery nowadays was adapted for the right hand.

Sir James Crichton-Browne, who was in the chair, took up this point and said that some years ago he issued a series of questions about the use of the right and left hands, and he found from the replies that 5 per cent of men and 3 per cent of women were left-handed. This gave an average of 4 per cent. When Darwin made observations of the hops and twining plants in Kent, he found that 96 per cent went round spirally with the sun and 4 per cent in opposite direction, and in the spiral shells of molluscs it was found that the differentiation from the normal was in exactly the same proportion. These facts all pointed to the condsion that the problem of left-handedness went deep down into the laws that regulate the solar system, and he for one was not at all inclined to fly in the face of evolution. Associated with the problem of left-handedness was the question of speech—matters which influenced the right side of the body affected the left side of the brain and vice versa, and he believed that left-handedness was simply a transference of certain functions to the opposite side of the body or the brain. There were intermediate cases, of weakness where there was a wobbling of tendencies and where you had neither definite left-handed men nor definite right-handed men, and in these cases the best thing was to leave it alone. Some people advocated ambidextrous training, but he strongly discountenanced that, and could produce an enormous number of physiological arguments against it. Those who had attempted ambidextrous training invariably found that what they gained with one hand they lost with the other, and the late Lord Lister was a case in point. Lord Lister once told him that the advocates of the ambidextrous training theory urged on him that it would be useful for a surgeon to be able to use both hands equally, and so he began to practice by cutting his meat with the left hand and by using his knife always with the left hand. But he soon found that as he gained dexterity with the left hand he lost it with his right, and so he gave up practicing ambidexerity and was content to remain right-handed.

NELSON'S GRAND-NEPHEW DEAD

Earl Nelson, Aged 90, Was Father of House of Lords—Unworthy of His Great Namesake.

The death occurred recently of Earl Nelson, "Father" of the House of Lords, in his 90th year, at Trafalgar House, near Salisbury.

Earl Nelson was an interesting personality by reason of his zig-zag descent from the great Nelson, and his pension of £5,000 a year, which, granted for three lives only, now ceases. He was a vigorous and active old man, and brought himself prominently before the public by typical Tory performances. He was a grandson of Susannah Nelson, sister of the hero of Trafalgar. She married a Bolton, and her son took the name of Nelson on succeeding to his uncle's title. The late Earl succeeded to the title at the age of 12 in 1835, and he lived in the mansion which the nation built on an estate purchased from the public funds for £90,000, and presented to the fortunate heirs of the admiral. This was in addition to the pension of £5,000.

Others in the district—tenants of the Earl—were not so well housed. In fact, early last year the Salisbury Rural District Council decided to take proceedings against his lordship in regard to certain cottages at Whiteparish which were in a bad condition. Subsequently alterations were carried out, and the summons was not issued.

At the beginning of last year, too, the Earl cut down some of his subscriptions. In a letter of apology for non-attendance at a church fund meeting at Westminster, he wrote:

"I have been so hard hit by the taxation of the present Government that I have the greatest possible difficulty in living here (Trafalgar House) and keeping up my subscriptions. I am very sorry cannot give any money help."

The Bishop of Willesden, who spoke at the meeting, did not like this letter, and said so frankly. "Sub Rosa" made caustic comment, too, and some calculations showing that £380,000 had been paid to him in pension money, and that the capitalized rent of the £90,000 estate, at £2,500 a year, totalled £190,000.

The late Earl had a scheme for the reform of the House of Lords, retaining certain bishops, and finding place for lord mayors, county council chairmen, heads of universities, and presidents of learned societies. His eldest son met with a fatal accident eight years ago, and he is succeeded by his second son, Viscount Merton, who was born in 1857.

A study of the above picture will show that in it are presented four generations on two sides of two families. The infant in short clothes appearing in its mother's arms, is the fourth generation. To the left of the mother and child appear the mother's mother (the infant's grandmother), and the mother's grandfather (the child's great-grandfather). Then on the mother's right appear her (the mother's) father and grandfather, who are the child's grandfather and great-grandfather on the father's side. The only person missing from the picture is the infant's father.

PATHETIC SCENES AT FRIEDMAN DEMONSTRATION

A Swarm of Consumptives Gather at Montreal—Patients Come Long Distances in the Hope of Getting Treatment —Some Sad Incidents.

Montreal Herald, March 11: Girls, women, boys and men, most of them bearing the hectic flush which early marks the intended prey of the Great White Destroyer, early today stormed the entrance of the Royal Edward Institute offices, hoping for the opportunity of treatment by Dr. Friedrich F. Friedman, the German scientist, who arrived here today to show Canada what can be accomplished by the secret serum of his own invention, obtained, it is believed, by the cultivation of a germ in turtles.

So great was the swarm this morning of consumptives who eagerly sought an application of his remedy, that scores were sent away, their disappointment alleviated by an invitation to return on Friday.

The authorities of the King Edward Institute, anticipating crowds of curious people, had policemen stationed at the entrance to the Belmont Park; but the interest of the general public was languid.

As for those affected with the dread disease, a sadder procession could not be conceived than that which wended its way to the institute.

Girl Came Far.

One young girl came 126 miles from Cookshire, to be treated. Tremblingly she waited the decision as to her acceptance at the institute, as one who might be placed under treatment.

Her parents had died of the disease; she had had a hemorrhage; her face had the significant flush; her joy that she had been taken in for preliminary examination was pathetic to see.

Young girls walked feebly to the institute; mounted the stairs with difficulty; old men crawled along; not a few of the affected children, drawn chiefly from the poorer classes, had to be carried upstairs by the attendants.

Young married women, in some cases accompanied by their husbands, were seen. In one case the husband was not sure whether his wife would be accepted for treatment, and his silent agony was distressing to witness. When however, he was informed that he might take his wife out to luncheon, and be back at 2 o'clock, his gratitude knew no bounds.

"No treatment today!" echoed a young man in despair.

"No; come on Friday; and come tomorrow for your medicine."

"But I was told to come today."

"It was a mistake; come on Friday."

Kept Patients Waiting.

All the patients were placed in large glass-roofed apartments, kept cold; and there they waited for hours—men, women and children—patient, silent; while some with the hacking cough; others in a state of torpor. But the young and fair and hopeful girls, smitten so early, like a canker in the rose—this was the moving sight.

One young girl, wearing a lamb jacket, a fashionable hat, with golden hair and a bright red spot on both her cheeks, excited sympathetic regard. She sat apart, silent, waiting her turn.

She had heard of the great miracle-worker and came of her own volition. She had evidently been in a better environment than that to which most of those present had perforce to adapt themselves to.

Young men whose clothes hung loose upon them, who were barely able to breathe, who were fagged out in coming up the steps; women with children whom they carried—it was all moving in the last degree.

And then the process of selection—this was heart-breaking, though none made moan or cry. All could not be selected.

First, there was the local selection—that is to say, the local institute authorities had made what they thought suitable selections for Dr. Friedman. Then Drs. Hundt and Benjamin followed with a second test and examination before the arrival of Dr. Friedman's two assistants.

That did not necessarily mean that when the famous man himself saw the patients, he would of necessity inject the serum into all of them. But it was a testimonial as to the care with which the first examination and selection had been made.

Plenty in Two Months.

Colonel Burland, whose sympathy is unwearied, consoled those who had not been selected for examination by stating that the institute would have the serum for abundant treatment in two months—if it proved to be a success.

Three nurses stood at the front door to admit the patients who came from all parts of the city; some came in sleighs; from Point St. Charles and the East End, from everywhere in and about Montreal.

As 12 o'clock drew near, the tension was extreme. The two policemen braced themselves; the press photographer, with his cooled heels in the snow all morning, got his camera ready; the authorities of the institute, with Colonel Burland at their head, waited for the auto car; sixty students of McGill were lined up inside to give the doctor a rousing reception.

Operations Done Quickly.

And then the auto dashed up, and Dr. Friedman leaped out and walked up the steps, upon which Colonel Burland met him, bowing and smiling, but tense and pale, with his little black moustache, his scar and his piercing dark eyes.

Up the stairs they all went to a room which had been specially prepared and in which seven selected patients were to be operated on.

The demonstration for practitioners was to follow, but this was to give a preliminary knowledge of the modus operandi.

The students were ranged in front; the doctors were grouped around, and the patients—one man, two girls and four women—waited their turn. The vaccine or serum, which is derived from a turtle, after the latter has been innoculated with the microbe, or virus of consumption, produced by culture, is injected sub-cutaneously.

Dr. Friedman, with his needle, his methodical processes, his unfailing sympathy, his quiet confidence, impressed the audience.

There was perfect silence while the demonstration lasted; but all were impressed with the consciousness that they might be on the eve of a discovery which would do more for humanity than any other blessed gift which had been bestowed upon it.

The patients were thankful to be selected, and submitted to the operation with patience.

Colonel Burland, Dr. Hardy, Mr. Blake, of the staff, were profoundly interested in the proceedings, of which Dr. Gordon, himself no mean authority on consumption, was an interested spectator.

The cases were those for which hope may be entertained.

Of course, those in the last stages of the disease stand no chance, even with this miracle-working serum, not that Dr. Friedman positively rejects any patient or says the case is hopeless; but he instinctively selects those who seem by their condition to offer hope.

Such were the seven patients selected out of the 100 who had assembled in the glass room today.

The operation did not last more than three quarters of an hour. When the proceedings were through Dr. Friedman was rushed off to the Mount Royal Club where Colonel Burland entertained him at luncheon. At the close of this function the party drove back to the institute, where seventeen other patients were operated on by inter-muscular injection.

The possible cure will not begin to show itself at once; but in the course of a month there should at least be visible improvement.

DAME MAYER TELLS HOW SHE FOUND A CURE IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Suffered for Three Years From Rheumatism, Headache, Palpitation, and Bright's Disease — Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Her Kidneys and Made Her Well.

Huberdeau, Argenteuil County, Quebec, March 14.—(Special.)—"I am always glad to tell of my cure, because I sympathize with others who may be suffering as I did." So says Dame Joseph Mayer, well known and highly respected here.

"For three years I was a very sick woman. Rheumatism, headache, palpitation of the heart and Bright's disease were my succession of troubles, but Dodd's Kidney Pills cured them all. I used twenty-four boxes to complete my cure, but they certainly made me well.

"I will never be without Dodd's Kidney Pills in the house."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cured Dame Mayer's ills because they are all caused by diseased kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure diseased kidneys and with cured kidneys straining the seeds of disease out of the blood, the rheumatism, Bright's disease, headache, and palpitation of the heart are bound to disappear.

You never heard of a case of kidney disease that Dodd's Kidney Pills would not cure.

The speech was a great one because Webster made it, but it was full of disappointment to the north. No, disappointment is not the word. It is altogether too mild. The speech literally maddened all who were opposed to the institution of slavery. For did not Webster fail to say one word against slavery? And, worse than that, did he not actually advocate the constitutionality of slavery and of the Fugitive Slave law? Did he not tell the Northern Abolitionists that in attempting to interfere with slavery they were traitors to the constitution and an enemy to the Union? Did he not tell them that, while he hated slavery, it was still his duty, as a lover of the Union, to abide by the solemn provisions of the supreme law of the land?

No speech ever delivered in the Senate of the United States produced such an effect on the country. The conservatives, North and South, were overjoyed, but the anti-slavery men were furious. Horace Mann exclaimed: "Webster is a fallen star." "Webster," said Charles Sumner, "has placed himself in the dark lists of apostates." Whittier named him "Ichabod," and mourned for him in verse as for one dead. Said Theodore Parker, "I know of no deed in American history done by a son of New England to which I can compare this but the act of Benedict Arnold." A member of the Bay State Legislature, speaking to his fellow members, referred to Webster as the recreant son of Massachusetts who misrepresented her in the Senate. "Daniel Webster," said Henry Wilson, "will be a fortunate man if God, in his sparing mercy, shall preserve his life long enough for him to repent of this act."

In the midst of the maledictions that fell upon him, Webster wrote to a friend: "I regret this much; but I hope I may be able to stand, though I stand alone. At any rate, I shall stand till I fall. I will not sit down."

Webster's supreme ambition was to be president of the United States, but the "Seventh of March Speech" made such ambition an idle dream. In the convention of 1852 he received but 29 votes, as against 159 for Scott. He was indeed Ichabod—his glory had departed.

Skin Peeling Nature's Aid to New Complexion

[From Woman's Tribune.]

Mercolized wax is a natural beautifier. By flaking off the devitalized surface skin, it merely hastens nature's work. The second skin layer, brought gradually to view, exhibits the healthy, youthful color produced by capillary circulation. This because the capillaries are thus brought nearer the surface; also because the new skin is unsoiled by dust and dirt. This wax, to be had at any drug store (an ounce will do) is put on nightly like cold cream, washed off mornings with warm water. Its work usually is completed in from seven to ten days, long enough not to show too marked results from day to day, or cause pain or detention indoors.

A face bath to remove wrinkles, made by dissolving an ounce of saxolite in a half pint witch hazel, is another natural beautifier, since its astringent and tonic effects smooth out the wrinkles in accordance with nature's own process.

"Do you mean that girl with the spots on her face?"

Overheard in a Street-Car. There's a lesson right there!

Little blemishes of complexion, small sores, eruptions, spots, are not only unpleasant to the person afflicted, but are the first thing noticed by other people.

A little Zam-Buk applied at night to spots, eruptions, sores of any kind will do wonders.

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL

a measure which, whilst leaving unimpaired—of course (laughter)—the authority of the Imperial Parliament and in no way affecting the integrity of the Empire, will yet devolve on the Irish people some greater measure of control over their own affairs." In other words, by getting rid of the present Government you would not get rid of home rule. (Hear, hear.) If we do not solve it they will have to. Because I am certain of this, that after the experience we have had during the last six or seven years, and after the passage of this bill through Parliament, no Parliament that is ever likely to assemble again at Westminster will authorize any Government to suppress the passionate desire of the Irish people to govern their own affairs. (Cheers.) There are some things that cannot be done, and that is one of them. See what it involves! You say to the Irish people "Give up self-government. Give up the dream, the hope, the aspiration. We won't have it. Tear it out of your hearts. Pull down O'Connell's statue in Dublin and put up one to Sir Edward Carson in its place. Obliterate all the memories of hundreds of years and forget all you learned from your fathers and all that you have been teaching your children. Abandon all these things as idle hopes, wicked dreams, and entire delusions and come and be governed by us." That is a sheer impossibility, and therefore as no democratic Parliament will authorize again the policy of coercion, any Government, whoever is prime minister and whoever is chief secretary, will be face to face with the problem of how to meet this Irish demand.

Belfast's Alternatives.

Mr. Birrell went on to say that nothing was plainer than that this long controversy was coming to a close. But they were told that the one obstacle was the determined dislike of a number of persons in Northeast Ulster to being placed under a National Parliament assembled in Dublin. The least people can do who go about saying that if this home rule policy is pursued it means civil war—the most appalling thing in the annals of mankind—is (Mr. Birrell said) to state in black and white what they want. That they have never done. On two occasions they moved amendments, but in neither did they define what they meant by Ulster, nor did they say what this part of Ulster really wanted. Now, however, it does seem to be generally understood that when they speak of Ulster they do not mean Derry. (Cheers.) At the present moment Ulster is represented by a majority of home rulers, and we know now that by Ulster they mean Belfast and the four adjoining counties with a population all told of 992,000 people, which is considerably less than the population of the county of Durham. These people are prosperous merchants, bankers, shipowners, shipbuilders, people engaged in the linen trade, the whiskey trade, and the tobacco trade. Their commercial interests are bound up with the rest of Ireland, for there is nothing more remarkable than the fact that a large amount of money saved by agriculturists in the south, the east and the west of Ireland, finds its way into Belfast and the adjoining districts, where there is a great industrial community and a good deal of room for Irish capital. Belfast trades upon money pouring into it, in small individual sums but great in the total, from the rest of Ireland. Therefore, I want to know what is to happen. What does Belfast want? Belfast says "Leave us alone." That is nonsense. If they are left alone they will be left to the control of the Dublin Parliament.

Only three courses are open. They can, if they like, become an English county. Then they will be subject in their education department to Mr. Pease at Whitehall and they will not like that because the education system in Ireland is totally unlike the English system and in Ulster they are very devoted to their purely denominational system. Then they have their own board of agriculture in Ireland. Will they like being handed over to Mr. Runciman? They have been rather uneasy about him lately (Laughter.) Of course, they might be a Scotch county, many of them being of Scotch blood. They might be handed over to the lord advocate, Mr. Ure. He is an excellent man, but would they like it? (Laughter and cheers.) Let us do Northeast Ulster justice. It is intensely Irish from top to bottom; and, what is more, Protestant Ulster in historically the home of the Nationalist movement, and the home of the land movement, and there are thousands of tenants in the northeast of the province who greatly regret how slowly land purchase is going forward owing to the unwillingness of landlords in that part of the country to sell their land to tenants. Ulster is Irish to the back bone, and if you put to them frankly the alternatives to the refusing of home rule, they will, after consideration, much as they dislike the idea of being placed under a Dublin Parliament, prefer that to becoming part of either England or Scotland. If they will not be England, Scotland or Ireland, they must be something on their own. (Laughter.) They must have law courts of their own and judges of their own, an education department of their own, a local government board of their own, and a board of agriculture of their own. In fact, these 992,000 people, will have to have a Government of their own, and it will cost a great deal of money, and it will separate them from their Irish fellow-subjects. All I complain of is that those gentlemen in Ulster do not put these alternatives before their people. They say "Leave us alone" when they cannot be left alone.

An Invitation to "Ulster."

I have always been willing to deal gravely and seriously with the Ulster question. There are hundreds of thousands of stalwart men in Northeast Ulster who do not relish the idea of throwing in their lot with their Catholic fellow-subjects in other parts of Ireland. I do not blame them for not liking it, but I ask them gravely to consider an alternative and put it before us for consideration. Then, and then alone, can business be done. I honestly do not believe they will be able to make proposals that will either satisfy, or be possible for them. But, however that may be, I challenge them to tell us what they want and what government they propose should be set up for themselves. As for shooting them down, who intends to shoot them down? They say, "will the soldiers of the King march through Belfast and mow down with their horrible artillery the Protestants of Belfast?" The answer is "No; don't ask us. We have no intention of doing it." At the present moment the only persons I think of as being in any danger are not the Protestants, but the Catholics of Belfast. (Hear, hear.) They are the people who alone, up to the present, have suffered hardships. They have been driven from the shipyards, deprived of their livelihoods, and hundreds of them have been compelled to leave their families behind and come over here to seek work. Those are the people whose lives and whose homes have been interfered with and are in danger. Of course we must protect them at all costs and all hazards, and whatever steps we take for their protection will, I am sure, receive the support of the people of this country.

Approaching Solution.

I am very glad to think that this great question is approaching solution. There is a good deal to be done before the bill becomes law, and there is still a possibility of a settlement on this question with the House of Lords, which will have an opportunity in a month or two of reconsidering its judgment, somewhat too hastily arrived at, the other day. We shall look on with interest, but our interest will be more for the House of Lords than for ourselves. We shall be more curious to see what they do than alarmed by what they do. I hope they will approach the question a second time in a spirit of statesmanlike consideration, and will ask themselves what will be the consequence of saying to the House of Commons, after the House of Commons has twice recognized the Irish demand, "You shall not have it."

The Food Taxers' Dilemma.

Proceeding to discuss other political questions, Mr. Birrell said it was only the other day, politically speaking, when the Tory party lost a number of its most distinguished men because they were free traders or anti-food taxers. The Duke of Devonshire, Lord Balfour, of Burleigh, and Lord George Hamilton disappeared in a night, and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach went up mysteriously to the House of Lords. At last Mr. Balfour had to make room for a "whole-hogger" pledged to the cause of an empire bound together with the glorious bond of taxes on food. And yet Mr. Bonar Law wrote a letter supporting a candidate at Flint who proclaimed that "a vote for the Tory is a vote against food taxes." "What," Mr. Birrell asked, "did all those poor men die for? They ought to be recalled to life and installed on the front Opposition bench. They have won." But was the country quite safe in assuming that the flag was hauled down for good? Would it not be brought out again on a convenient occasion? The experience of the past seven years proved that it was altogether unnecessary to tamper with our free trade principles. What was wanted was free trade for the accumulation of wealth and wise laws for its distribution.

With regard to Mr. Lloyd George's land inquiry, Mr. Birrell said there was no subject on which inquiry was more urgent. The agricultural industry was still the greatest industry of the country, and our food supply was a matter of growing importance. When the information had been obtained and sorted out and discussed the time would come—not till then—for wise and courageous legislation. There was also a land problem in the towns, for we all had to live on the land. Partisanship ought not to enter into this question, and he hoped the Tory party would learn by their experience on the insurance act, and that, when the land question arose, they would put their minds into the common stock with Liberals and consider the problem from the point of view of getting the most possible out of the land and rearing upon it a noble and an enduring race. (Cheers.)

"Seeing People Off"—Sewing Machines in Offices—The Simplicity of Writing Smart Sayings.

There is probably nothing more aggravating than to make a mad rush for a train, "whipping up," as it were, all the street-car conductors along your route, only to find upon arrival at the depot that "the train is 60 minutes late, Miss!" The haste, the anxiety, the entreating of street-car men have all been for naught, and the prospect of waiting for 60 long minutes (never an hour, if you would speak in railroad parlance) is, to say the least, decidedly uninviting. The time drags interminably, and it seems hours instead of one before the welcome sound of the train whistle is heard.

But all this is probably not so tiring an experience, nor does one at any time during the hour (beg pardon, 60 minutes!) feel so absolutely inane, as in the few minutes, when after accompanying a friend to the depot, you wait, "duty bound," until his or her train pulls out. Conversation lags; you smile, foolishly, and say common-place things, and, on the whole, the cry of "All aboard!" is as sweet music to your ears.

It seems odd, after a recent experience of this kind, to return from a local depot and pick up a volume of Max Beerbohm's essays to find one headed "Seeing People Off." And, strangely enough, the famous Max describes feelings so similar to our own that I cannot forbear quoting what he says:

"I am not good at it. To do it well seems to me one of the most difficult things in the world, and probably seems so to you, too. . . . The dearer the friend and the longer the journey and the longer the likely absence, the earlier do we turn up at the depot, and the more miserable do we feel. . . . And now, here we were, stiff and self-conscious on the platform; and framed in the window of the railway carriage was the face of our friend; but it was as the face of a stranger—a stranger anxious to please, an appealing stranger, an awkward stranger.

"Have you got everything?" asked one of us breaking a silence. "Yes, I have," said our friend, with a pleasant nod. "Everything," he repeated, with the emphasis of an empty brain.

"You will be able to lunch on the train," said I. "Oh, yes," said he, with conviction. He added that the train went straight through to Liverpool. This fact seemed to strike us as rather odd. We exchanged glances. "Don't it stop at Crewe?" asked one of us. "No," said our friend, briefly. He seemed almost disagreeable. There was a long pause. One of us, with a nod and a forced smile at the traveller, said: "Well." The nod, the smile, and the unmeaning monosyllable were returned conscientiously. Another pause was broken by one of us with a fit of coughing. It was an obviously assumed fit, but it served to pass the time. The bustle of the platform was unabated. There was no sign of the train's departure. Relief—ours and our friends'—was not yet."

We have heard it rumored that more than one lady stenographer in London does not hesitate during the absence of her employer to pull out a bit of embroidery from a desk drawer and lose herself for a few minutes in the delightful mysteries of shadow, eyelet, Wallachian, or punch work. It has even been said that a number of most acceptable Christmas gifts have been made during spare moments in a number of these same London offices. But probably none of the fair typists of the city will deem it wise to emulate the step taken by a stenographer employed in the state offices at Denver, Colorado. A recent dispatch says: "State Auditor Kenehan was astounded yesterday when he saw an expressman installing a sewing machine in a private chamber of a supreme court justice. "I don't have anything to do about four days out of the week," explained the pretty girl stenographer, "and I thought I might as well sew up here.' Within an hour the sewing machine left the state house."

Now, ye office maids, with a liking for sewing, born perhaps out of stern necessity, what do you think of it? How convenient it would be if a sewing machine formed a part of the furnishings of every office—Sister Mary's school dresses could be put together in a trice; the family supply of sheets might be hemmed between spells of typewriting and dictation; you might even sandwich in some of the family mending along with letter filing and adding up figures! But don't ever let the manager find it out, or, like the man in Denver, he would pack your sewing machine off home, and perhaps send you after it! Some employers are so heartless!

Just to show how easy it is, the writer of this column armed herself with a pencil and clean sheet of paper, and decided to spend a minute or two this morning in dashing off a few "breezy bromides," "restful zephyrs," "pointed paragraphs," or any other name which you may apply to the spicy little three-line hits at human nature which we all appreciate in print occasionally. At the end of an hour the paper had assumed the appearance of a white sea with black islands floating thickly through it, or like one imagines a darkey would look when shaving! And the "pointed paragraphs"? Could only think of one, and that was (I think the printer should set this up in ten-point; I worked so hard at it): "We never hear a woman brag to another woman about how little it cost her to have a last year's hat retrimmed." Now, don't you think that quite clever of

JOY OF HER LIFE IS THOUGHT OF HER DEATH

Famous Authoress Builds For Her Grave-to-Be a Tombstone Depicting "Hope," and Says Dying Is Best Moment of Existence!

[BY LAURA GILLAM.]

Evanston, Ill., March 15.—"The cheerfullest moments of my life are those I spend contemplating death!"

MRS. ELLA WOOD DEAN STANDIN G BESIDE THE TOMBSTONE SHE HAS JUST DESIGNED FOR HER OWN GRAVE.

The words are those of Mrs. Ella Wood Dean, famous American author and globe-trotter. She has just startled the world by designing and building her own tombstone—she who am doing," said Mrs. Dean to me as she stood beside her great monument and smiled.

Yes, actually—smiled!

"It's only that people think so! People don't realize, you see, how beautiful and wonderful death is—how much more wonderful and beautiful it is than life!

"If they did they would make their lives brighter by thinking oftener of the coming of death!

"Now you see, with such an idea of the beauty of death, I felt I was the only person alive who could properly put it into marble. So I decided to design my own tombstone and to have it built to suit me exactly.

"I cannot tolerate these veiled figures of grief, forever weeping—the kind which decorate all our cemeteries. They do not TRULY represent death.

"Why, the leading figure in my tombstone is the figure of Hope! For death is the one REAL hope we have!

"This figure walks through a field of poppies. Poppies are symbolical of sleep. To me our life here seems but a sleep from which we hope—from which we will—awake into a better and happier world. I cannot believe that 'from dust we come and to dust return.' That seems such a hopeless thought when we think how wretched and trivial our life is here.

"And really, none of us really believe it. It is instinctive in us to hope for a hereafter. The earliest Egyptians believed in a resurrection. The Hottentots, the Chinese and the Indians all believe in a 'happy hunting ground,' and bury food, clothing and weapons with their dead.

"On the other hand, a group of professors at Harvard have agreed to make every attempt after their death to communicate with those on earth!

"So if death is just a new life, it should not be met with weeping and sorrowing.

"As a little girl I got the prevalent idea that God was a terrible being with a severe countenance. But as I gradually conceived the universe—the planets and the mysterious force that brings blossoms and fruits out of hard, impossible earth—the Great Unknown overhelmed me, and I knew death, too, must be marvellous.

"So, as I start on my annual trip around the world this spring, I shall greet it with cheer and hope, and especially because I am leaving at my grave-to-be a message that death is good!"

Mrs. Z. with whom the Original Person and the Head Nurse and all the rest of us had contracted for the maternal care of Billy at $2.50 per was not the only person who was willing to take Billy. "If you will dress him nice, I'll keep him for you and take care of him and I won't charge you nothing," said one of the Daughters of the Empire at the meeting of the St. Elizabeth Chapter when we asked their advice about Billy. That was a good offer. And we would like to have taken it. But we were already in negotiation with Mrs. Z. All except the weekly "consideration" was settled that day. And we could not "go back" on our partly-made bargain. Mrs. Z. had the refusal of Billy as it were. And then there were the Tears of the Ten-Year-Old. They weighed in the balance so we felt we would have to keep our word to Mrs. Z. Then there was the little care. The Head Worker bought the little cart. Not one of those that carry the baby about three inches above the sidewalk. They jar too much. This was one of wonderful collapsible variety, which may be used as either a perambulator or a parasol. It was duly delivered at B Street. One more thing accomplished.

WHEN A LAXATIVE IS NEEDED—"CASCARETS"

Gently Clean Your Liver and Constipated Bowels While You Sleep.

Take a Carcaret tonight and thoroughly cleanse your Liver, Stomach and Bowels, and you will surely feel great by morning. You men and women who have headache, coated tongue, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and are all worn out.

Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels.

Remember, a Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning. A 10-cent box from your druggist means healthy bowel action; a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Don't forget the children.

PROBLEMS OF THE FAIR SEX SOLVED BY CYNTHIA GREY

[Correspondents are requested to make their inquiries as brief as possible, and to write on one side of the paper only. It is impossible to give replies within a stated time, as all letters have to be answered in turn as they are received. No letters can be answered privately.]

Attention, "J. B. P."

Some time ago a correspondent, "J. B. P.," was good enough to send me the name of a weaver of rugs from old carpet. I find I have mislaid the same, and wonder if the above-mentioned reader would kindly forward it it again. It is desired by two readers of this column.

Perplexed Pauline.

Dear Miss Grey: Would you please answer these questions:

1. What would be a nice costume to wear to a masquerade party on March 17th?

2. Would a sheet of music be a nice present for a girl friend?

3. What will take an ink-stain out of a linen handkerchief?

4. What is the latest book?

PAULINE.

A.—1. I can think of but one costume that would seem suitable, that of the Irish peasant girl. You would make this, I think, with a short green skirt and bodice laced across the front. No doubt you have seen pictures of them.

2. Yes.

3. Moisten the stain with clear water, then sprinkle with a little salts of lemon, and place the handkerchief in the sun for, say, ten minutes. At the end of this time wash thoroughly, using no soap, and hang again in the sun and air to dry.

4. M ydear, there are so many 'latest books" and "best sellers" that I should hesitate to name any of them. Why not ask at a book store?

Her Parents Object.

Dear Miss Grey: I am 17 and there is a young man in love with me, and he is about 21. He often asks me to go with him to the show with some of my friends. My parents object to me going. What do you advise me to do?

PAULINE.

A.—Follow your parents' wishes in the matter, Pauline. You can't make any mistake in doing that, you know. Your parents more than anyone else in the world have your best interests at heart.

Who Shall Speak First?

Dear Miss Grey: I have always been under the impression that when a young man meets a girl on the street it is his place to speak first. Lately I was told that it was the girl's place to speak first. If it is the girl's place, very few do this. I have always spoken first to a girl. A. F. B.

A.—There is no rule or precedent in regard to such matters. Whoever notices the other first should speak.

Buys Her Gum.

Dear Miss Grey: I am 20 and have been going with a man of 35. He frequently buys me spearmint gum and peppermint candy. Do you think he loves me and ever intends to marry me? AGNES.

A.—I never heard of spearmint gum and peppermint candy being an indication of deep affection on the part of the donor. Better wait for further proof before you think so seriously of the man, Agnes.

PIE RECIPES YOU WILL LIKE

Old-Fashioned Lemon Pie.

Pare lemons very thin and cut the yellow peel into thin strips. Remove every particle of the white part from the lemons, which cut just as thin as possible; then fill a pastry-lined dish, covering each layer with New Orleans molasses and sprinkling over it the yellow strips, which must have no white on them or it will make the pie bitter. Two layers of lemons and molasses will be sufficient. Cover with more pastry and pinch the edges well to the under crust so the molasses won't come out. Bake until the crusts are done. Serve cold.

Banana Pie.

Bake a pastry crust and when cold fill with this puree: Press three ripe bananas through a sieve after peeling and scraping off all the stringy parts; mix the pulp with a teaspoonful of lemon juice and sweeten generously; then fold into this pulp the whip from one pint of sweet cream and serve immediately.

Canned Fig Pie.

Drain the figs from their syrup; then split each fig and lay in a dish lined with short pastry. Sprinkle with a teaspoonful of lemon juice and cover with strips of the pastry. Bake in a moderately quick oven until under crust is done. Serve cold.

Raisin Pie.

One cupful of raisins, one cupful sugar, one cupful water, three tablespoonfuls boiled cider or two tablespoonfuls vinegar, and one tablespoonful flour. Cook together a few moments, then place in a pastry-lined tin and cover with a top crust and bake.

The Birthday Calendar

IF THIS IS YOUR BIRTHDAY

Attend to your interests with care. If in employ do not allow scheming acquaintances to influence you against those over you. You will gain by steady application.

Those born today will succeed where courage and quick action is necessary. They should be taught not to yield to quickly-taken fancies, for although their loves and hates are short-lived, their results may not be so easily forgotten. (March 15.)

IF THIS IS YOUR BIRTHDAY

You are fortunate and will have much prosperity and good cheer. Remember that a joy shared is doubled, and avoid quarrels, for they will go against you.

Those born today will have sterling qualities, and will be respected and admired by many. In business they will be generally successful. Naturally serious, they should be encouraged when young to see the cheerful side of work and play. (March 16.)

BEADED BAGS

Imitations of the beaded bags that our grandmothers carried are more favored than ever. They are singularly appropriate as an accompaniment to the pannier and old-fashioned flounces and fichus.

Among the newest of these beaded bags are those in a deep maroon. Some of these are quite plain of surface, while others have a pattern; a quaint posy, an oak leaf or a beetle picked out in silver, gold or black beads.

A few of the bags are envelope shape, the flap being held with an antique-looking silver or gold brooch. These have handles of white silk cord, and inside are three or four dainty little vanity fittings.

There are also rose opera and carriage bags made from odd bits of oriental embroidery, beautiful embossed and brocaded velvets and satins, and even bits of costly furs.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

LOBO

A cordial invitation is extended to all ladies to attend the next meeting of the Lobo Women's Institute, which will be held on Wednesday, March 19, at 2 p.m., at the home of Mrs. Dugald A. Graham. Roll call answered by Easter sentiments. The district president, Mrs. (Dr.) Wilson, of Parkhill, is expected to make her official visit and will address the meeting.

THAMESVILLE

Thamesville, March 14. — The regular meting of the town branch of the Woman's Institute was held at Mrs. E. F. Best's. The following program was presented: "Birds," Miss Duncan and Mrs. J. A. Stewart; a reading from "The Schoolmaster's Friends," Will Carleton, Miss Gage; "Business Points," Miss Coutts; instrumental solo, Miss Mason, Wabash. There were a large number of ladies present and the afternoon proved a nenjoyable one.

MOUNT BRYDGES

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Mount Brydges, March 14.—The March meeting of the Mount Brydges branch of the Woman's Institute was held this afternoon at the spacious Baptist parsonage, the home of the hostess, Mrs. (Rev.) Mason. There was an attendance of 38, and the chair was occupied by the president, Mrs. Monger. The meeting was very interesting, and the ladies present thoroughly enjoyed three very excellent papers, as follows: "Life and Work of Robbie Burns," by Mrs. (Rev.) Kannawan, of Strathroy; "Easter," by Mrs. Somerville, of Strathroy, and "Home Nursing," by Miss Jennie Taggart.

Mrs. Supper, a visitor from Vancouver, spoke briefly, and Misses Allie Veale and Clara Root contributed musical numbers which were much enjoyed.

The April meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. (Dr.) Thompson. An interesting number for this meeting is a demonstration of salads and their preparation by half a dozen of the members.

NEW SLEEVE IDEAS

The changes introduced into the new spring sleeves are particularly noticeable, probably because the reign of the kimono sleeves has been so long and so undisputed. The kimono sleeve has not entirely lost caste by any means.

The shoulder puff surprised many an interested student of costume when it was shown recently on a blouse of batiste.

The slight fullness over the shoulder was gathered into a wide band of embroidery, about four inches below the round of the shoulder, and from this band the sleeve fell with the fullness of the bishop sleeve to the wrist, where it was gathered into a deep cuff of embroidery finished with lace.

KATHERINE LESLIE'S HOME CHAT

THE DUTY OF THE HOUSEKEEPER IN THE MATTER OF FOODS.

More and more it becomes necessary for the housekeeper to give her personal supervision to all the foodstuffs that are brought to her door. And this she can only do efficiently by taking an intelligent interest in all the work done by the health departments throughout the Dominion. The exhibits—arranged by the health departments—of diseased meats from animals and fowls are highly educative, and women who have carefully studied these exhibits, which are so skillfully prepared that there is no mistaking any characteristic symptom, will be able to detect these symptoms in meat or fowls that come into their homes for consumption. A watchful housekeeper told me of two experiences she has had this winter with diseased fowls. On one occasion she was called to the kitchen by her daughter who had been watching the cleaning of a turkey just sent from the country. This young daughter had been encouraged by her mother to note very particularly the symptoms of disease in fowls at the last health exhibit. As the cook drew forth from the bird its entrails, the daughter noticed the enlarged liver all covered and rough with white spots and recognized them as the same as those she had seen on the liver of one of the diseased fowls at the health exhibition. She promptly called her mother, who at once sent the bird for inspection. Sure enough the turkey was tuberculous! The white spots on the liver were tubercles. Needless to say the turkey was not eaten. Her next experience was with a pair of chickens whose poor, lean conditions when unwrapped made them suspect. She watered the operation of cleaning the fowls and found that her suspscions were correct. The entrails were all spotted with tubercules. There is something very abhorrent in the thought of eating diseased meat. After hearing a recital of this kind, that one knows to be absolutely true, one is tempted to renounce flesh eating for ever. How is one to know what abomination one may be eating? For when, as the custom is, fowls, birds of all kinds, are cleaned of their entrails by butcher or dealer, one has not the means of recognizing their diseased condition, and one may go on eating meat that is full of disease and death. It is a horrible thought. On women should devolve the duty of seeing that meat inspectors do their duty thoroughly, and every butcher who sells meat or fowls that he knows to be diseased should be boycotted and punished. There is no department of household management that belongs so exclusively to women as that of clean, wholesome food, nor one that calls for so much conscientious and perpetual vigilance on their part.

RED ROSE TEA "is good tea"

Character Study of Sir John Simon, England's Youthful Solicitor-General

[By A. G. Gardiner, Editor London Daily News and Leader.]

There was once a conspirator who when he came to the scaffold made a speech in which he said, "I could never believe it right that some men should be born into the world ready booted and spurred to ride, and others ready saddled and bridled to be ridden." And having uttered this protest against the world as he had found it he took his leave and disappeared through the trapdoor. But the words live and there could hardly be a better text for a stateman's career. There is one sense, however, in which, no matter how we adjust society or how nearly we approach the ideal of equality of opportunity, there will always be men who come into the world "ready booted and spurred to ride." These do not point to their ancestors or to their acres for their authority. They bring their letters of credit with them from a far country and we honor them at sight. It is not necessary for them to elbow their way through the crowd or to attract attention by insolence or eccentricity. They appear and the crowd miraculously opens out before them. They prance down a rose-strewn path to a shining goal.

The most conspicuous example of the "booted and spurred" class among the younger public men of the time is Sir John Simon. Macaulay, applying to Byron the fable by which the Duchess of Orleans illustrated the character of her son, the Regent, said that all the fairies, save one, had been bidden to his cradle and had brought their several gifts. But the malignant elf which had been uninvited came last, and being unable to reverse what her sisters had done for their favorite, had mixed up a curse with every blessing. It is difficult to associate fairies with Manchester, but fairies there must have been who revisited the glimpses of the moon about Moss-side forty years ago. And most amiable fairies they were. They crowded round the cradle of John Allsebrook Simon, and showered their gift upon hem. And, best of all, there was no uninvited fairy to turn all the blessings to bitterness—unless, indeed, unqualified Success is a malignant elf in disguise.

His Success.

There is something to be said for that view. Success in such a measure as Sir John has had must rob life of much of its adventurous delight. (I speak here only of his public career; in his private life he has known the bitterest sorrow.) To have the sun perpetually shining on one must make one hungry for a rainy day; to find that Apollyon always yields at the first onset must make one yearn for a foe who will not fly. When everything is very easy, life must be very hard, and a little dull. It must be what billiards is to an expert. The joy of billiards, like the joy of any other game or business, is in its uncertainty. If you do not know what is going to happen, there is delight in the happening. But to the expert, who can go on making cannons and red winners and losers almost in his sleep, billiards must be the last expression of boredom.

Now, to pursue the analogy, it is difficult to imagine that Sir John Simon ever found any problem on the billiard table that he was not sure of solving. Whatever he wanted he has got. Whatever he wants, one feels that he will get. The prizes of Oxford, the prizes of the Bar, the prizes of Parliament, have fallen to him with a certain inevitableness that causes no surprise. When at 37 he became Solicitor-General, no one commented adversely on the appointment of so young a man to so great an office. On the contrary, everyone agreed that there was no other appointment which was thinkable. And yet one has to go back a century—to the days when statesmen ripened early and died young, generally of port wine and free living—to find a parallel to his achievement. Charles Yorke, it is true, was Solicitor-General at 33, and grumbled because he had not done better. But Charles Yorke was the son of a Lord Chancellor, and he had a devouring appetite for office which finally led to perhaps the most tragic personal episode in the political life of his time. For when every great and self-respecting lawyer had refused to accept the Lord Chancellorship and became the instrument of George the Third's despotic aims, he took the office, went through an agony of shame and repentance and died within twenty hours under circumstances which are generally slurred over with a kindly hand by the historian.

No Shop Window.

It is his freedom from insatiate ambition of this sort which is one of Sir John Simon's chief claims to distinction. His career has been extraordinarily undemonstrative, almost deliberately humdrum. He is like a tradesman—if such there be in these days—who relies absolutely upon the quality of his goods and refuses to advertise or to lavish his arts upon a showy shop window. Montaigne says that when he was a young man without wealth he made a brave show in his attire in order to impress the world; but when he came to his estates he allowed his chateaux to speak for him. That is Sir John Simon's way. He leaves his estates to speak for him. He does not advertise. He did not, like his famous contemporary at Wadham, burst upon Parliament with a brilliant display of fireworks. He made his entrance with a plain, unpretentious speech on a practical issue. And as he began so he has continued. He aims neither at epigram nor at wit, and displays a chilly scorn of all rhetorical devices. His appeal is never to the passions, but always to the mind. He treats his audience with respect. He does not offer them an entertainment, but an argument, and his hold upon the great constituency of Walthamstow is a remarkable witness of the power of an intellectual appeal to the democracy when that appeal is based on sound knowledge and just thought. He avoids all exaggeration and over-emphasis. Emotion never breaks through the icy reserve of a temperament naturally under a rigorous discipline, and further restrained by the influence of Oxford, which does not help a man to be expansive. So neither yields to temper nor betrays it, but goes on his way with an imperturbable gravity and a serene persuasiveness that nothing can disarm. Whether with a jury or a political audience, his method is the same. He weaves no magic spells, indulges in no artifices. Most of the famous pleaders rely largely upon histrionic effects. Sir John Simon is entirely free from them. He has a cultivated urbanity of manner which makes his presence and address pleasing; but his aim is to convince his hearers, never to stampede them. His mind is at once capacious and minute, and it is extraordinary luminous. There are no dim recesses and no mysteries. The result is a rare atmosphere all light and air, coupled with a certain lack of surprise and of imaginative stimulus. The demesne is wide, but it is all revealed, all radiant, all perfectly laid out. You may wander at large without fear of being lost and without the hope of experiencing any adventure or getting any unexpected vision.

To understand his merits and his limitations, we may contrast him with the two most original minds in the House of Commons—those of Mr. Balfour and Mr. Lloyd George. He has none of the speculative curiosity which makes Mr. Balfour so fascinating and suggestive a personality. Mr. Balfour seems like a voyager in space who strays accidetnally into the affairs of our curious little planet and takes an amused interest in them. But it is the sort of interest which Gulliver took in the affairs of the Lilliputians. He hears our lamentations, but he hears them as "a tale of little meaning, though the words are strong." The drama is amusing enough, but it is a drama of marionettes moved by some power that "Turns the handle of this idle show."

It is the realm of ultimate speculation and inquiry that alone truly engages his interest. He himself admitted that the House of Commons did not "extend his mind." Hence his light contact with facts, his apparent levity in handling theories, his perplexing obscurantism. But hence also the refreshing air he brings with him into the narrow realm of dogma and fact; hence his power of stimulating thought and enlarging the horizon of the mind. Sir John Simon has nothing of this quality, and he has as little in common with the empirical genius of Mr. Lloyd George, whose mind works as if there were no such thing as solemn doctrines to be considered and as if the world were a new problem that had to be solved according to the perceived facts and without regard to the operation of theories. No one ever called Mr. Lloyd George a philosophic Radical. Sir John Simon is a philosophic Radical. His thought proceeds on strictly academic lines. In the clear realm of his mind cause and effect follow as the night the day, and political doctrine is an exact science which admits of no question. This formal, unadventurous thinking gives stability to politics. Its value has never been better illustrated than in the co-operation of Mr. Asquith and Mr. Lloyd George—the one giving inspiration and ideas, the other the authority and restraint of a powerful grasp upon first principles. Without Mr. Asquith, it may be said that Mr. Lloyd George could never have achieved his schemes. The ballast in the hold is as essential as the bellying sail.

A Parallel.

The admirable clarity of mind of which I have spoken expresses itself in speech equally lucid. The most complex argument "he will unloose, familiar as his garter." He moves through the labyrinths of the law with an easy assurance that communicates itself to the hearer. He has that rare gift of making difficult things seem simple and crooked things seem plain. It is the result first of clear thinking and next of clear speaking. He does not cloud his meaning with words, but exercises that economy which the skillful etcher employs to secure the simplicity of his effect. This does not mean that he always speaks briefly. On the contrary, his speech on the telephone arbitration occupied ten days, and is the longest legal utterance on record. It means simply that he is never verbose or redundant.

In all this it might be supposed that one was describing Mr. Asquith. And in method and habit of mind, clearness of view and statement, severe restraint of manner, and cold, rather unimaginative processes, there is a strong likeness between the two. Sir John Simon's mind works with something of the same mechanical perfection as the Prime Minister's. "It is as though you put a penny in the slot at one end," said a friend of his, "and the verdict of the jury drops out at the other." But there are differences. Intellectually, Sir John Simon is a slighter man than Mr. Asquith. He gives none of that impression of rude, natural force, of elemental power, that his leader conveys, and he will never dominate the House of Commons with the same masculine authority. It would be difficult to explain the wide gulf between the two men in the Parliamentary sense. It certainly does not represent an inferiority of conviction in the younger man. There is probably no one on the front bench today the quality of whose Liberalism is more universally appraised than Sir John Simon's. It is at once advanced and instructed. It is the product of a Nonconformist origin and Oxford culture, the fruit of whose co-operation is not always so satisfactory.

His Future.

Sir John Simon's natural foil in the House is Mr. F. E. Smith. The rivalry between these two old foes of the Oxford Union has become the most entertaining problem of personal politics. They are at the poles in temperament and conviction. In their methods of speech, and in the way they pursue their several ambitions In solid gifts, in the enduring qualities of character, in sincerity of opinion, there can be no doubt that Sir John Simon has the advantage. But in brilliance and adventurous insolence Mr. Smith is easily first. He is free also from the air of polite weariness that afflicts his rival and gives him an appearance of having found us all rather trivial people and of being bored with our follies.

So far as one can foresee, the career of these two men will be largely bound up with the destinies of the country. Each is in the rare position of having either of the two great offices in the state within his ultimate reach. Sir John Simon has gone farthest, although he has striven least, and in the language that Mr. Smith will best appreciate, he looks like the better "stayer." But on the other hand, he has more rivals in his own stable for the Premiership than Mr. Smith has. For the Lord Chancellorship he has none.

If this sketch seems dull, the fact must be attributed to its true cause. The lives of successful men are dull. If Sir John Simon is to become interesting he must show us that he can fail, he must be discovered in some splendid indiscretion, he must burst through that panoply of restraint with some flame of passion. Then we shall know that he is not only with us, but of us. A. G. G.

BABY AND THE DOG.

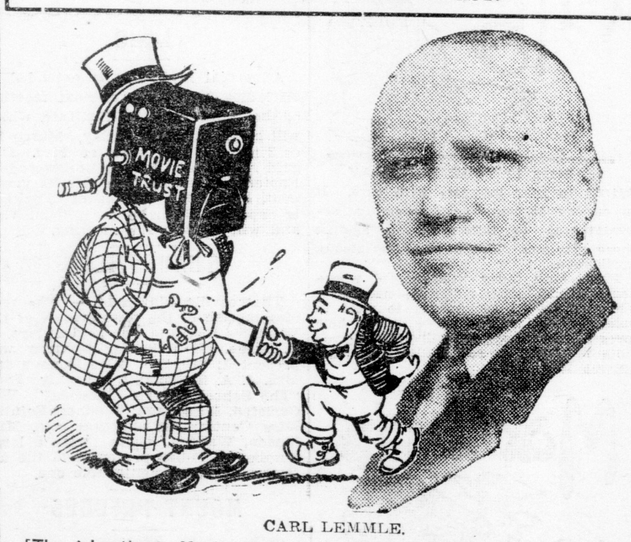
Dickens' lovers will be interested in two facts that illustrate the unabated hold that their favorite author still has on the public. A largely-attended exhibition of Dickensia has been held at the Grolier Club, New York city, at which the only considerable section of "Pickwick" manuscript known to exist was to be seen; at the other end of the world, members of the ill-fated Capt. Scott's expedition are reported to have solaced their weeks of imprisonment in an igloo by reading aloud each day a chapter of "David Copperfield."

"Does your husband ever tell you you have poor taste?" "Frequently." "And what reply do you make to him?" "I think of what I married and say nothing."—Houston Post.

IMMIGRANT STARTED AS ERRAND BOY AND ENDED BY LICKING THE "FILM TRUST."



CARL LEMMLE.

[The Advertiser's Moving Picture Expert.]

Piling nickels into fortunes is the business of Carl Lemmle, the president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, New York. He's a smiling, gentle, kindly, soft-voiced, little man, not over 45 years old, and about 5 feet tall. A few years ago he was a poor German boy without money or friends in a strange country. Today he is one of the most important men in the moving picture business. "Come on into the madhouse," said Joseph Brandt, the hurry-up publicity man, "and maybe I can get you five minutes with the man at the top." By the time I reached the private office of Carl Lemmle, not that day, but 24 hours later and just before closing time, I realized the timeliness of the nickname.

Everybody—and that means scores of clerks, office boys and stenos., business managers and heads of all kinds of departments—was doing business at a mile-a-minute pace.

"There's not so much to tell," he began, sliding back into a two-sizes-too-large, revolving chair, and looking with a fatherly eye on a great, big, imposing desk before him. "I arrived in New York at the age of 17, friendless, unacquainted with the language, and with $50 that I didn't dare to spend for fear I might need it worse, as my only capital. My first few jobs only paid me in experience. Then I got a wonderful $4-a-week place as errand boy in a drug store right here in New York. But I wanted more nickels than I could get out of $4 and I went west to Chicago. There I worked up at all sorts of jobs, but I couldn't pass the $18 mark. So I moved again. This time I went to little Oshkosh, and that's where I started up the ladder."

Carl Lemmle's career in Oshkosh began with a $15 job as cashier in a clothing store. When he left it, because he still thought he could make more money, he was drawing $4,000 a year and had saved $3,000.

"I had a notion," he said, "that with that much money I could start a chain of 5-cent stores. I went over to Chicago to see what could be done, and one rainy night I dropped into a little moving picture theatre. I knew right away that was my new business. And I began that night to build it."

Three weeks after that date Carl Lemmle owned his own theatre in Chicago. About two years later he was the owner of a manufactory, a film exchange and some more theatres. When he commenced to pay $2 a week license for the privilege of using certain companies' films, he hated it, thought it unjust and began to fight. "I saw," he told me, "that eventually these companies would put me out of business if they kept on. I had to fight them. It was very hard. First I had to buy films from abroad altogether. Then a few companies in this country got the independent idea and began making films outside the licensed group. Finally other independent companies grew up. We held a little meeting and organized for self-preservation and mutual benefit. Now I believe it is safe to say the Universal Film Manufacturing Company is doing 40 per cent. of the business.

The Universal Film Company has eight brands, each representing a different producing company. They are the Imp, Rex, Gem, Victor, Powers, Champion, Nestor and Bison. A western site for moving picture-taking, covering 12,000 acres, has just been leased by the Universal at Hollywood, Cal.

When Sciatic Pains Burn Like Fire Rub in 'Nerviline'

It Kills the Pain, Cures the Suffering, Destroys Every Trace of Sciatica.

READ THIS INTERESTING LETTER

"I think you ought to make your claims stronger about the marvellous power of Nerviline on Sciatica, and Lumbago." This is how Mrs. A. C. Corrigan opens her letter, written from Victoria, "So many people are suffering, and so few get proper treatment, that I am anxious that thousands should know of how Nerviline cured me. Sciatica is just about the most awful pain humans are called upon to bear, and in my case there was at times the additional misery of Lumbago. Nothing attracts attention to particular forms of suffering like personal experience, and that is why I am so enthusiastic about Nerviline.' I had the luck to use the right remedy (Nerviline) almost at the beginning, and cleaned it right out of my system. But most people use the wrong remedy and get Sciatica in chronic form. Nerviline eases the pain at once, and stops the inflammation before it becomes chronic. I say that a liniment that has power enough to kill the pain of Sciatica is a remedy everybody should know about, for it would snuff out in a wink a little ailments like Neuralgia, Lumbago, Strains, tired muscles and inflammation from cold."

No home should ever be without Nerviline—get the large 50c family size; trial size 25c, at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

That Stab-Like Pain in the Back Is a Sure Indication of Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Anna Rodriguez writes as follows from her home in Valencia: "For a long time I suffered with failing strength and nagging headaches. My condition grew steadily worse, my limbs became bloated and shaky, I was sallow and thin, felt rheumatic pains, dizziness and chills. I unfortunately didn't suspect my kidneys and was nearly dead when I discovered the true cause of my sufferings. I read so much about the wonderful health and strength that comes to all who use Dr. Hamilton's Pills that I felt sure they would help me. Such blessings of health and comfort I got from Dr. Hamilton's Pills I can't describe. They speedily put me right, and their steady use keeps me active, energetic, strong and happy. # The London Advertiser

This is purely an educational campaign. To appreciate this great book one need not be a church member or a religious man or woman. It should be available for EVERYONE and often referred to and read here and there as the most interesting of all books—the book which has governed the development of the world's civilization. No matter how many Bibles you own, you need this one, as its pictures vivify the Bible narrative—giving it a present, living interest.

The Only Really Illustrated Bible in the World.

Heretofore the word "illustrated," as applied to a Bible, meant merely a few allegorical "pictures" of Biblical events taken from any source and "conveniently" placed in any part of the book, merely as embellishment inserts, but not directly alongside and explantory of the verse intended to typify or make plain; but our publishers, at an outlay of $50,000, prepared accurate illustrations DESCRIPTIVE of the VERSE which they accompany, and placed directly next to the verse of the scene described—the only place it can be looked for or found quickly, the only place the illustration is a help to you—making this the FIRST and ONLY complete ILLUSTRATED Bible.

John Wesley; His Conversion

[By Rev. T. B. Gregory.]

It was 175 years ago that John Wesley received the light which made him a Methodist, and, later on, the founder of the great religious organization which today girdles the earth with its song, prayer and exhortation.

"By Peter Bohler," writes Wesley in his journal, "in the hands of the great God, I was, on March 5, 1738, fully convinced of the want of that faith whereby we are saved."

Little did the Moravian preacher, who was the instrument of Wesley's conversion, little did Wesley himself dream of the tremendous results that were to flow from that day's work.

When fully convinced that "salvation was not a matter of creed or liturgy, but of a living personal faith in Jesus Christ," Wesley let himself loose with all the burning zeal of the old Crusaders. As Minerva sprang full-armed and panoplied from the cleft brow of Jove, so Wesley became at a bound the greatest of evangelists. In the old "Foundery" in Moorfields he began to shake England as England had never been shaken before. Great multitudes came to hear him, and in 1739 the first Methodist Church was organized.

For fifty-three years Wesley kept up his wonderful work, preaching on an average eight hundred sermons a year, here, there and everywhere, indoors and out, day and night, winter and summer. He discoursed to more people in the course of his life, perhaps, than any man who ever lived. And yet in 1790, only a few months before he died at the age of 88, he wrote: "I do not remember to have felt lowness of spirits for a quarter of an hour since I was born."

When Wesley died, in 1791, there were in Great Britain, the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands, 19 circuits, 227 preachers, and 57,562 members. In Ireland there were 29 circuits, 67 preachers and 14,006 members. There were also eleven mission circuits in the West Indies and British America, 19 preachers and 5,300 members. The number of members in the United States was 43,265.

Today in the United States alone there are 62,000 Methodist churches, 44,000 preachers and 7,000,000 actual church members, representing a population of not less than 15,000,000. In all the world there are, approximately, 20,000,000 English-speaking Methodist church members, the major portion being in the United States, Canada, the British Isles, South Africa and Australia.

Not a day passes on which a new Methodist church is not erected or a new Methodist society organized. The unconquerable spirit of its great founder is still strong in Methodism, and the evangelicism which began in the old Foundery in Moorfields is as busy as ever, not in Moorfields alone, but wherever human beings are found upon the globe.

There is something awe-inspiring in the thought of the meeting between the Church of England clergyman and the Moravian preacher on that fifth day of March, 1738! What a study it is for the psychologist! What an illustration of the power of an idea, of the omnipotency of sentiment, of the all-conquering strength of a thoroughly-aroused and enthused personality! Bohler looks into Wesley's eye, speaks a few earnest words to him, and the quiet, easy-going rector, with the suddenness of a flash of lightning, becomes the mighty evangelist, the consummate organizer, the immortal founder of a society of twenty millions of souls whose influence is felt around the world!

MR. CHESTERTON TRAVERSES VICTORIAN LITERATURE

His Criticisms and Appreciations of Famous Writers —Dickens, Carlyle, Tennyson, Ruskin, Pater, Thompson, Shaw, Kipling.

Mr. G. K. Chesterton has certainly written one of the liveliest volumes in the Home University Library — Williams & Norgate's splendid 1s volumes.

He skirmishes through "The Victorian Age in Literature" in 251 pages and his pace is so lively that the editors explain "that this book is not put forward as an authoritative history of Victorian literature. It is a free and personal statement of views and impressions about the significance of Victorian literature made by Mr. Chesterton at the editors' express invitation."

Mr. Chesterton's way of treating Victorian literature is quite individualistic, but he explains that a writer's "attitude to his age is his individuality: men are never individual when alone." So he "deals with the great Victorians, not only by dates and names, but rather by schools and schemes of thought." Mr. Chesterton's main divisions are four. (1) The Victorian Compromise and Its Enemies. (2) The Break-up of the Compromise. (3) The Great Victorian Novelists; and (4) The Great Victorian Poets. This will certainly be a book read by all interested in literature. We quote some of Mr. Chesterton's "views and impressions."

Dickens' Thirst.

"A mere sympathy for democratic merrymaking and mourning will not make a man a writer like Dickens. But without that sympathy Dickens would not be a writer like Dickens, and probably not a writer at all."

"The rise of Dickens is like the rising of a vast mob. This is not only because his tales are indeed as crowded and populous as towns; for truly it was not so much that Dickens appeared as that a hundred Dickens characters appeared. It is also because he was the sort of man who has the impersonal impetus of a mob."

"Dickens was a mob—and a mob in revolt; he fought by the light of nature; he had not a theory but a thirst."

William Cobbett.

"Three years before the young queen was crowned William Cobbett was buried at Farnham. It may seem strange to begin with this great neglected name rather than the old age of Wordsworth or the young death of Shelley. But to anyone who feels literature as human, the empty chair of Cobbett is more solemn and significant than the throne. With him died the sort of democracy that was a return to Nature, which only poets and mobs can understand. After him Radicalism is urban—and Toryism suburban."

Carlyle and Tennyson.

"Carlyle's two eyes were out of focus, as one may say, when he looked at democracy; he had one eye on Valmy and the other on Sedan. In the same way, Ruskin had a strong right hand that wrote of the great mediaeval ministers in tall harmonies and traceries as splendid as their own; and also, so to speak, a weak and feverish left hand that was always fidgeting and trying to take the pen away, and write an evangelical tract about the immorality of foreigners. Many of their contemporaries were the same. The sea of Tennyson's mind was troubled under its serene surface. The incessant excitement of Kingsley, though romantic and attractive in many ways, was a great deal more like Nervous Christianity than Muscular Christianity."

Ruskin's Prose.

"It would be quite unfair to say of Ruskin that there was any major inconsistency between his mediaeval tastes and his very unmediaeval temper, and minor inconsistencies do not matter in anybody. But it is not quite unfair to say of him that he seemed to want all parts of the cathedral except the altar. As an artist in prose he is one of the most miraculous products of the extremely poetical genius of England. The length of a Ruskin sentence is like that length in the long arrow that was boasted of by the drawers of the long-bow. He draws not a clothyard shaft but a long lance to his ear: he shoots a spear. But the whole goes light as a bird and straight as a bullet."

Pater's Stiffness.

"In Pater we have Ruskin without the prejudices—that is, without the funny parts. I may be wrong, but I cannot recall at this moment a single passage in which Pater's style takes a a holiday or in which his wisdom plays the fool. Newman and Ruskin were as careful and graceful stylists as he. Newman and Ruskin were as serious, elaborate, and even academic thinkers as he. But Ruskin let himself go about railways. Newman let himself go about Kingsley. Pater cannot let himself go for the excellent reason that he wants to stay; to stay at the point where all the keenest emotions meet, as he explains in the splendid peroration of "The Renaissance." The only objection to being where all the keenest emotions meet is that you feel none of them."

Culture Was a Man.

"One other name of great importance should appear here, because it cannot appear appropriately anywhere else: the man hardly belonged to the same school as Ruskin and Carlyle, but fought many of their battles and was even more concentrated on their main task—the task of convicting liberal bourgeois England of priggishness and provinciality. I mean, of course, Matthew Arnold. Against Mill's 'liberty' and Carlyle's 'strength' and Ruskin's 'nature' he set up a new presence and entity which he called 'culture,' the disinterested play of the mind through the sifting of the best books and authorities. Though a little dandified in phrase, he was undoubtedly serious and public spirited in intention. He sometimes talked of culture almost as if it were a man, or at least a church (for a church has a sort of personality): some may suspect that culture was a man whose name was Matthew Arnold."

"He reminded us that Europe was a society, while Ruskin was treating it as a picture gallery. He was a sort of Heaven-sent courier. His frontal attack on the vulgar and sullen optimism of Victorian utility may be summed up in the admirable sentence in which he asked the English what was the use of a train taking them quickly from Islington to Camberwell if it only took them 'from a dismal and illiberal life in Islington to a dismal and illiberal life in Camberwell?'"

Thompson—Shaw.

"None of the minor poets were able even to understand Francis Thompson: his sky-scraping humility, his mountains of mystical detail, his occasional and unashamed weakness, his sudden and sacred blasphemies. Perhaps the shortest definition of the Victorian Age is that he stood outside of it."

"Now upon this interregnum, this cold and brilliant waiting-room which was Henry James at its highest and Wilde at its worst, there broke in two positive movements, largely honest though essentially unhistoric and profane, which were destined to crack up the old Victorian solidity past repair. The first was Bernard Shaw and the Socialists; the second was Rudyard Kipling and the Imperialists."

"The primary position of Bernard Shaw towards the Victorian Age may be roughly summarized thus: the typical Victorian said coolly: 'Our system may not be a perfect system, but it works.' Bernard Shaw replied, even more coolly: 'It may be a perfect system for all I know or care. But it does not work.'"

Rudyard Kipling.

"It is really impossible to criticise Rudyard Kipling as part of Victorian literature, because he is the end of such literature. He has many other powerful elements—an Indian element, which makes him exquisitely sympathetic with the man that crushes the Indian; a vague journalistic sympathy with the men that misrepresent everything that has happened to the Indian; but of the Victorian virtues, nothing."

March Weather Rheumatic Weather

Victims Can Cure Themselves With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

With the coming of March people who are afflicted with rheumatism begin to have unpleasant reminders of their trouble. The weather is changeable—balmy and springlike one day, raw, cold and piercing the next. It is such sudden chnges of weather that sets the pangs and tortures of rheumatism, lumbago and sciatica going. But it must be borne in mind that although weather conditions start the pains, the trouble is deeply rooted in the blood, and can only be cured through the blood. All the lotions and liniments in the world can't cure rheumatism. Rubbing may seem to ease the pain while you are rubbing, but there its value ends. Only through the blood can you cure rheumatism. That's why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have so many thousands of cures of this trouble to their credit. The new, rich blood which they actually make drives out the poisonous acid and rheumatism is vanquished. Among many sufferers from rheumatism who have been cured by this medicine is Miss Mary B. Kelly, South Dummer, Ont. Miss Kelly says: "Some time ago I had a very bad attack of rheumatism. At times I would be confined to bed for a couple of days and would seem almost paralyzed with the intense pain in my back and legs. At such times I could not walk and my joints were stiff and swollen. I consulted different doctors and took their medicine, but did not get more than temporary relief. At this time a neighbor advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I got a supply. After taking a few boxes I found they were greatly helping me, and I continued their use until the trouble completely disappeared. I can strongly recommend this medicine to others who suffer as I did from the pangs and tortures of rheumatism."

If you suffer from rheumatism, or any other disease of the blood, begin to cure yourself today with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.

BRAVE BRITISH TARS KEEP SHIP AFLOAT FOR SEVENTY DAYS

Refuse to Leave Their Steamer Though Their Lives Were in Danger—Officers Honored by Lloyds —A Terrible Ordeal.

From the midst of a crowded gathering of city men in Birchinlane, London, Eng., recently, one gentlemen rose—after several had spoken—and, turning towards a row of men who were strange in that assembly, for they were either sailors or mechanics, and were obviously shy and ill at ease, he said: "I don't think any case of the saving of a ship by the prolonged, ingenious, and devoted efforts of her men ever appealed to me like this one. It is the most extraordinary story of its heroic kind I know." The shy men kept their eyes on the carpet and fidgetted.

Seventy Days' Ordeal.

The occasion was a presentation by Lloyd's underwriters to the captain and five officers of the Snowden Range, a steamer which, broken and dismantled, survived over seventy days of hurricane weather in the Western Ocean on her voyage from Philadelphia to Leith; the most remarkable voyage of modern times, testifying both to the quality of the ship and her men.

When she arrived off the south coast of Ireland it was long after her case was considered hopeless. "It seemed," said one of her men, "as if Providence meant we should all but founder, and in the end overdid the business and left it to us to keep her afloat. I don't know how it was done."

Salvage Men's Interest.

The presentation was made in the committee room of the Salvage Association and the remarkable nature of this salvage had brought more shipping men than usual to the ceremony. The doorways were crowded, the antechamber overflowed, and some visitors even tried to hear the proceedings from round a bend of the staircase. The surroundings of this finish to a romantic story were prosaic and city-like enough. At the head of the committee table Sir Edward Beauchamp stood and retold the story of the affair, somewhat as though he was stating a business proposition.

But when, in such a place as that, the chairman of Lloyd's declared quietly that "never in the annals of the mercantile marine, filled though they might be with instances of courage and devotion to duty, had there been a more striking instance of seamanship, courage, and resolution than was displayed by the officers and crew of the Snowden Range," it was felt by all there that it was a privilege to be present.

A Frail Hero.

City men murmured "Hear, hear," keeping their eyes fixed on bookshelves full of the records of ship-trouble, on the faded photographs on the walls of old wrecks, and on the model of a clipper ship in a glass case, while the relation of the narrative went on. The six men of the Snowden Range sat in a row by the windows, smiling nervously.

Captain Dickinson himself, an astonishingly frail hero for such a great story of the sea, had his eyes cast down all the time, pulling at a fair moustache. He looked slightly disinterested.

Before such a company it was necessary but to hear the bald facts to appreciate the story. "Shortly after leaving Philadelphia—Nov. 22 — the wheelhouse and chart room were stove in by heavy seas. On Dec. 5, when 800 miles from the Irish coast, the rudder broke. The vessel fell away into the troughs, and the huge seas breaking over her damaged the lifeboats. The steamer was laboring heavily. Sail was set to keep her as steady as possible, and a boat was launched for an attempt to patch up the rudder. That attempt and others failed. A jury rudder was tried, and the fruitless attempts at this makeshift continued from Dec. 6 to 30."

Sticking to the Ship.

Sir Edward asked his hearers to imagine the feelings of the crew when, after a fortnight of heavy weather in a ship without a rudder, the vessel often entirely submerged by vast seas amid torrents of rain, snow, and hail, they had to make up their minds whether they would leave her and take to the boats, or trust that luck would bring along another ship to pick them up.

Another ship did come along, and advised the crew of the Snowden Range to leave her. They refused. In another fortnight the steamship Welshman sighted them, and after three attempts got a hawser aboard. Several times the hawser broke. The weather grew worse, the barometer fell still more, the Snowden Range was continually under water; and she had been at sea 50 days. "Hadn't you better abandon her?" signalled the Welshman. "Decline," was signalled back. "Will remain till the end."

How Port Was Reached.

The Welshman got her off Queenstown; and the hawser broke in a gale. The rescuer had to abandon her helpless charge. The one anchor of the Snowden Range—crowning disaster—would not hold the ground. She drifted towards the rocks.

Her skipper was not done, however. Searchlights showed him his only chance, a narrow channel—through which, so a tugboat captain had explained to the Snowden Range, earlier that day, she could not be towed. The crippled steamer drifted in before the gale, broadside on. But by alternately putting the engines ahead and astern the Snowden Range was got through the place where "she could not go."

Sir Edward Beauchamp turned to the sailors present. "I tell you, Captain Dickinson, and the officers of the Snowden Range, your countrymen are proud of your deed."

The Captain's Thanks.

Speaking quietly in reply for himself and his comrades, the ship's master was very brief and modest. "I wish to thank you for your generous gifts which are much appreciated. After all is said and done we only did our duty, and never expected any reward of this kind."

Captain Dickinson received a check for £400 and a gold watch. Mr. Adamson, mate, £140. Mr. Taylor, second mate, £70. Mr. Bambridge, chief engineer, £140. Mr. Hewitson, second engineer, £70. Mr. Irvin, third engineer, £50.

MAJOR-GENERAL JIM IS THE BELLY AND BOOTS OF THE ARMY.

The belly and boots of the army—that's Maj., Gen. James Buchanan Aleshire, on whom falls the responsibility of feeding and moving the American troops.

He houses them, too—and clothes them. In fact, he is the man who is responsible for getting them to the field of battle equipped with the necessary implements of war and in condition ready to use them. Transportation, feeding, paying, etc., are all under his care.

And he's the first man who ever had such a difficult job. He made it for himself. And he knows his business about as well as anyone on earth.

Gen. Aleshire is an Ohioan by birth. He was graduated from West Point just in time to get into the Apache Indian mix-up in Arizona, New Mexico and Mexico as a second lieutenant of cavalry.

It was while fighting Indians that Gen. Aleshire showed an unusual ability to care for the men of his command and for other commands. It was only natural that he should be called into the quartermaster's department therefore, and he's been there ever since.

Up to a few short months ago there were no less than four different staff departments that looked after the moving, clothing, feeding and paying of the troops. Gen. Aleshire always did think this was wrong. Supplies of all kinds should come from one department, he thought, and with the aid of Gen. Wood and a few others he talked Congress into creating one big supply department for the army. And then he was made IT, with the rank of major general.

GEN. J. B. ALESHIRE.

The department is called the quartermaster's corps. It's the branch that puts the strong right arm in army, and Gen. Aleshire is the man who invented it.

A JOURNAL ROOM.

"A journal room is to be provided at the British Museum, wherein will be available for students of all sorts the principal literary and scientific publications of the world. How much this will mean to the eager seeker for the latest knowledge can scarcely be recognized by the general reader," says the Westminster.

Had a Dry, Tickling Sensation In Her Throat.

COUGHED ALMOST ALL NIGHT.

A bad cough, accompanied by that distressing, tickling sensation in the throat, is most aggravating.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is rich in the healing virtues of the Norway Pine tree, and for this reason it will quickly stop that tickling in the throat which causes the dry hard cough that keeps you awake at night.

Miss Margaret MacDonald, Port Hood, N.S., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. I took a severe cold, coughed almost all night, with that dry, tickling sensation in my throat. The first bottle did me so much good, I thought I would try a second one, which I am pleased to say resulted in a complete cure. I can strongly recommend it to any one suffering from a cough or any throat irritation."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper, 3 pine trees the trade mark; price, 25 and 50 cents.

BARREL STAVE SNOWSHOES WILL BUCK THE DRIFTS.

Any Boy Can Make These With a Few Nails and Blocks in a Moment or Two.

Barrell staves make fine snow shoes if you know how to use them.

The staves should be sandpapered until they are smooth. Two staves are used for each shoe. They are fastened together as shown in the sketch.

The fitting for the foot is made from the sole and heel of an old shoe, which is cut as shown, with straps to go over the ankle. The shoe soles are nailed securely to the boards. The straps can be made of an ordinary book strap.

Such a pair of snow shoes will do as well as the very best kind.

This Editor, Unafraid, Starts in to House-Clean Old Ben Franklin's Town--- Our "Model" Quaker City!

But "Poor Richard" Would Gasp, Indeed, to See What City Gangsters Have Done to Scare Off Marlen Pew.

[BY LIVY S. RICHARD.]

Philadelphia, March 12.—What a free newspaper, with a brave editor, can do to arouse a community, and how a gang-system strikes back, are now being most vividly shown in Philadelphia, still "corrupt" in spots, but no longer contented.

The newspaper is the News-Post, only nine months old.

The editor is Marlen E. Pew, a fighter for the common good.

Our story starts in a sordid row in the underworld.

Harry Hartman, fireman, is a heeler of Jim Carey, the "bloody Fifth" ward-boss for the Penrose-McNichol gang, who is also a city magistrate, with power to fine, imprison or release.

Hartman one night, on the street, beat the woman with whom his brother lived. She fainted. Seventeen-year-old Rose Gowberg, at a window, saw the woman fall and rushed out with a glass of water. When Hartman started to drag the reviving woman away, Rose screamed. Later Hartman came back, grabbed Rose and ran her to the station house, where she was locked up for the night. Next day Magistrate Jim bound her over in $200 to keep the peace.

Rose Gowberg is a respectable girl.

The older newspapers in Philadelphia pay little attention to such incidents. Pew featured it.

Pew asked by what right a law-breaking fireman used the machinery of justice to vent a grudge.

He wanted to know about the brand of justice that Carey represents.

He sketched a few facts in Carey's public career.

Those facts hurt. Carey sued Pew's paper for $50,000 damages to his "character."

It soon developed, of course, that back of Carey was the whole jungle system of capitalized privilege and blackmailed vice.

Pew tore the lid off and called spades spades. For once, staid Philadelphia was forced to take notice. The revelations became the talk of the town.

There were threats of daily suits for criminal libel. Pew invited the gang to sue. Indeed, he kept up a galling fire of facts so hot that bluffing would no longer do, and Carey had to sue.

This was how Carey and his gang backers went about it:

Twelve warrants were fixed up in a gang lawyer's office one morning, sworn to before a gang magistrate at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and could easily have been served on Pew at his office before he left it at 5.

Instead, without notice, a constable pulled Pew out of bed at his home at midnight, dragged him four and a half miles across the city and thrust him in a cell amidst groaning drunks. Bail in real estate amounting to $500 in each warrant was demanded—$6,000 in all.

This was $1,000 more bail than was required in the case of Henry Clay, a former gang director of public safety, whom a jury recently convicted of having been in a conspiracy with contractors to defraud the city of $200,000. It was nine and one-half hours before friends could be notified, the magistrate located, bail supplied and Pew released. All this time Mrs. Pew with two small children, were left alone, newcomers in a strange community.

So raw was this frame-up that other newspapers broke their accustomed silence. They paraded the facts. They denounced the manner of the arrest. A deluge of protest resulted. Pew's nine and one-half hours in jail promised to end in a revolution. Already things have happened:

One of Pew's charges against Carey was that he had paid $25 to a henchman named Boyd, a juror sitting in a street railway damage case, to "hang" the jury. Jury-fixing in behalf of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, a corporation long the football of politicians and now Morganized, but still charging 8-cent fare if you get a transfer, has been a gang specialty, known of all but never punished. Boyd's confession, sworn to, had been placed before District Attorney Rotan, a Penrose-McNichol creation, and he had refused to move, claiming the case was covered by the statute of limitations. But Pew's arrest and the stir it made caused the bar association to take the matter up and it is now going through the motions of a probing. If it fails to act, the play of publicity will continue. For Pew is determined that this rich corporation, which is one of the cancerous centres of Philadelphia's corruption, shall be brought to book. It has never had a fearless editor on its trail before. Pew's paper is the first to hit straight and hard at the big grafters highest up. His courage is inspiring others.

Another result is a real movement to do away with the present magistrate system and substitute a municipal court. Philadelphia has 28 magistrates. Anybody on the inside will charge that no more than three of them are fit to sit. The others are grafters, in league with the wolves and rats who make up the Penrose-McNichol machine. The shaking down of vice is common. Releases signed in blank are carried by gang heelers for the benefit of politically valuable crooks, thus virtually turned into licensed criminals.

For years Philadelphia has heard talk for municipal courts, with clean judges working systematically, as in Chicago. Pew's paper and the jolt to public opinion caused by the manner of his arrest are converting talk into action. The fight for legislation is now on at Harrisburg. And the gang this time knows that it is to be a REAL fight. NOT a SHAM battle.

These are some of the immediate results of one editor's nine and a half hours in jail. They happened quickly. The campaign for a freer Philadelphia, however, is only in the skirmish stage now. There will be bigger doings soon. For the common people at last have found a newspaper in their interest that can't be bluffed or bought. They are rallying around it. A fact which spells the doom of the festering old system.

THE STORMING OF LUCKNOW

Story of British Valor 55 Years Ago—A Superb Victory.

The storming of Lucknow, an assault which comes very near being the high-water mark of soldierly valor, if it is not quite such mark, began fifty-five years ago on March 8, 1858.

Russell, of the London Times, thus describes what he saw as, just before the beginning of the fight, he looked out over the scene:

"A vision of palaces, minarets, domes, azure and golden; cupolas, colonnades, long facades of fair perspective, in pillar and column; terraced roofs—all rising up amid a calm, still ocean of the brightest verdure. Look for miles and miles away, and still the ocean spreads, and the towers of the fairy city gleam in the midst. Turrets and gilded spheres shine like constellations. Here is a city more vast than Paris, and more brilliant, lying before us."

But underneath the mask of smiling beauty upon which Russell gazed lay the face of grim-visaged war. Lucknow was a huge honeycomb of houses, a city more than twenty miles in circumference, with a turbulent population of seven hundred thousand souls. It had a garrison of one hundred and thirty thousand fighting men, with an overwhelming force of artillery.

The Sepoy leaders had spent months in making the city, as they believed, impregnable. Besides the three great lines of defence each great building was itself a fortress, and everything which ingenuity could devise and toil execute had been done to make the place secure.

The task of fighting a way across these triple lines and through the tangle of fortified houses, each girdled with rifle pits and plentifully loop-holed from foundation to roof, might well have damped the courage of the British. It was a prospect well calculated to cool the ardor of the bravest men.

But men of British blood had never stopped to parley with fear when duty had them in hand, nor did they break the good old rule before Lucknow. There were only twenty thousand of them, assisted by some nine thousand Ghoorkas under the Jung Bahaduh, but when Sir Colin Campbell gave the word they sprang to their work as cheerfully as though they had been going to a picnic.

It was glorious, the way those men of Britain—Irishmen, Scotchmen, Englishmen—took hold of their fearful task!

Generally speaking, by the storming of a place we mean to indicate a single action, sharp and soon over, but the so-called "storming" of Lucknow was in reality several actions, stretched through twelve awful days—from the 9th to the 21st. It was not a siege. There was no investment, no formal approaches, no sapping and mining—it was, in the literal sense of the word, a storm, repeated a dozen times in as many days.

And, incredible as it may seem, the British won. The formidable lines were one after another carried; the innumerable fortresses were taken, and the British flag was once again unfurled above the Residency. Lucknow had fallen. The twenty thousand Englishmen, Scotchmen and Irishmen had beaten the great city of seven hundred thousand souls and its garrison of one hundred and thirty thousand fighting men.

But no word about Lucknow, however full, would be complete without at least a reference to Sir James Outram. In the previous November, as he was evacuating Lucknow, Sir Colin Campbell left Outram with four thousand men to hold the Alumbagh, and for three months Outram held the perilous post right in front of Lucknow, his handful of men bearding a great revolted city, with one hundred and thirty thousand fighting men.

Attacked no less than six times in front, rear and flank by a force of over sixty thousand men, Outram held his own, and was right there when Sir Colin returned to win his great triumph of March 1858—a triumph that ended the great mutiny and re-established British rule in India.

A COLD ROMANCE.

CHANGING THE GULF STREAM.

It is seriously proposed to change the American climate by act of Congress. House Bill No. 28,289, introduced by Representative Calder, of Brooklyn, and referred for consideration to the committee on naval affairs, would authorize the spending of $100,000 on an investigation of "the feasibility and cost of causing an obstruction to the Labrador current passing over the Grand Banks of Newfoundland." The scheme had its origin in the imagination of one of Mr. Calder's constituents, a mining engineer named Carroll Livingston Riker.

At present the Gulf Stream and the Labrador current meet in a head-on collision east of Newfoundland. The current from the Arctic regions pushes the other aside and makes its way down the American coast, chilling the air of Boston and every other place within reach. Mr. Riker estimates that if the result of the conflict of currents could be reversed, every vestige of ice in the Northern Hemisphere would be melted. At the point of collision the sea is only 200 or 300 feet deep. If it were deeper, the colder stream would sink, and flow harmlessly beneath the other. The plan is to shunt it off toward the deep sea, where this would happen. Mr. Riker proposes to accomplish this if someone will let him have a thick rope. He will stretch this across the sea floor at the desired point, causing the sand brought by the cold stream to silt up little by little until it forms a mole across the banks. Two years, in his opinion, would be long enough to show substantial results.

LONDON'S LOWEST LEVEL.

One of the tragic elements in London poverty is the tendency of certain districts to become the home of a population sunk to the lowest depths of penury, hoplessness, and degredation. There are several black spots to which this description might with justice be applied, and, judging from the replies to The Daily News and Leader religious survey schedules, parts of Bermondsey go as near touching the bottom as any borough in the metropolis. "We are the poorest and lowest type of humanity, with very little care, hope, or ambition," is one despondent verdict from that locality. "Miserable homes and awful want, laziness and beggary, general lack of discipline and absence of any interests for spare time, wide-spread indifference to all forms of religion"—such are some of the forces that are dragging Bermondsey down, and keeping it down.

Formed Watery Pimples. Itchy and Had Horrible Burning Sensation. Lost Some of Finger Nails. Could Not Open Hands. Cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

235 N. Lisgar St., Toronto, Ontario.—"For seven years I have been troubled with salt-rheum. It came out on my hands and formed kind of watery pimples all over them which became itchy and it had a horrible burning sensation which caused me a good deal of pain. It came out on my hands in the fall and remained there till after spring. I might mention that I lost some of my finger-nails by the disease. During this length of time I was utterly useless, as I could not open my hands. I tried several other patent medicines without a bit of relief. Some of my friends advised me to try Cuticura Remedies so I sent for samples and by using them there was a great improvement. Then I went to the druggist and bought one cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment; after using them I am glad to say I am completely cured. I had given up all hope of being cured. I can say to all those who have suffered as I have, not to lose courage but to give Cuticura Remedies a fair trial." (Signed) Miss Lillian Irwin, Oct. 13, 1911.

Young English Mechanic Writes Amazing Poetry

[London Daily News and Leader.]

There have been many discoveries of workmen poets of late — plumbers who verse the mysteries of lead piping, policemen who measure their beats, and all that—but at best they have been but possibilities ruined by Rudyard Kipling. After rousing comment on the strange and interesting fact that they had thought it worth while to write verse at all, when it is so much easier not to write it, usually the poetry of the workmen has been dropped into obscurity again; as drop the volumes of the cultured young people with money who actually pay for the publication of their verse.

But Mr. John Helston, who has discovered himself recently to Lady Margaret Sackville and Mr. Austin Harrison, is sure to surprise those who know what the real metal sounds like when it is tried. Indeed, the surprise is as great as though the jobbing gardener, or the plumber, or the gas fitter, in the midst of his job, were suddenly to become unearthly with the authentic light of the uplands of Parnassus. Mr. Helston seems to be the rare and indisputable IT.

A Shy, Clever Mechanic.

Mr. Helston, who is 35 years of age, is an engineer's fitter, and takes great pride in his knowledge of the lathe and his ability to adjust delicately turned metals. One would judge him to be a quiet and clever young mechanic, rare only because of his wide and various reading. He has the usual shyness of a really able English mechanic, the usual brief and sardonic comment on affairs, and the evident wish to get the interview over. When he gains confidence and warmth he uses the crude and forcible words of a class-conscious democrat — the language of the proletarian concerning established authority after he has been stung. There is not the least glimmer, though, of "the light that never was." One's profound astonishment comes on reading the poet's manuscripts.

His work is reminiscent of Keats, Shelley and Swinburne; but perhaps it is all the better for that. For he has only recently taken to writing at all. Mr. Helston is another instance of the Spirit (which favors a very few people by moving their language into a measure and beauty impossible to the general) passing over the cultured, and touching the hand of—an engineer's fitter.

A Bun-Shop Impromptu.

To show there was no trick about it, in a city bun-shop Mr. Helston took his fountain pen and a copy-book and produced the following. He imagined himself standing by a seashore alone at sunset:

SEA-LONE.

The sea speaks; and her lonely voice is heard
With far-off passion by the inland pine.
A silence in the west grows more divine
With echoes of her immemorial word
That sadness which in sunset might have stirred—
There, where the heart of day's deserted shrine
Lets out its last of life incarnadine—
In her, for votive memories afterward.

For me, I wait and listen. In my blood
She shakes the pulses with that solemn tone,
There is some secret Time has made her own
Too long, too large; not all her maidenhood
May hide some longing hardly understood,
Or is it I who would not be alone?

Strange Genesis of Genius.

Mr. Helston began work as a messenger of sorts at the age of fifteen, posting down to the east end with parcels. He has been a clerk in a furnishing house, and is not sure whether he left there for incompetence or because he hated the smell of varn-

CLIMATE AND COMPENSATION.

Perhaps one of the most obvious and yet least appreciated examples of the "compensation" with which the body meets changes in external conditions, is shown during the changes which occur in the body to meet the changes in weather from summer to winter and back again. Certain lower animals grow a warmer coat in autumn, shedding it in spring; but our own bodies make changes in far more ways than this. True we ourselves use warmer clothing, but that warmer clothing cannot meet all the requirements. The body machine itself must alter its rate and style of running in many little details, but usually it does this so gradually, during the fall and spring, that we do not notice it. Again, consider the further and much more rapid compensations which occur during the winter itself, permitting a person, well-housed and warm indoors, to go out into a temperature 40 degrees below zero and take no harm or actually derive benefit from it. Think of the commonplace that people who sleep with windows opened, suffer a little for a time when they are shut. "What one is used to" is merely what one is compensated for; and the most important principle to remember is this: Slow, patient persistence will generally secure the necessary changes in the body to compensate for almost any external change, within the limits of compensation in that particular direction, of the particular body under consideration.

In other words, when anyone says: "I can't stand so and so, it would kill me," the usual reason why they can't do it is that they never have done it. If you cannot run upstairs the reason, provided you are not diseased in some way, usually is that you have not run upstairs before. The reason some children "cannot eat meat" is simply that they never have eaten meat. This is but one example of a general rule, applying to all the ordinary activities of ordinary people, while in health.

DISEASE AND COMPENSATION.

Disease of many kinds, other than the infectious diseases, the chemical poisonings, and physical injuries, or initial physical defects, are due, in a sense, to lack of compensation. This lack of compensation may be due to strains so great that the ordinary healthy body cannot meet them, despite the high reserve force nature provides for just such occasions; or the lack of compensation may be due to injury or disease or even absence of the organ which ought to do the compensating called for.

Thus the ordinary healthy child can run around the block without hurting its heart, because if its heart is sound it contracts faster and harder for a time to compensate for the increased output of heat and energy. But the child with a heart poisoned, say by diphtheria, cannot run round the block or does so at immient risk of death, because the heart cannot compensate; or, trying to, may wreck itself for good. But even the unpoisoned heart may not be able to compensate, if it is not used to compensating, so that the child who is never allowed to run at all, may in time, reach a state of inability to run.

But compensation can be overdone. "Athletes' heart" is an example of too much effort at sudden and violent compensation, especially in men not in good training and put to do work suitable only for a man in the pink of condition. The same man, after he is "trained," does with impunity things that would have been fatal to him before he "trained." Even in the pink of condition, efforts excessive for that condition may easily be made and produce similar eeffcts.

THE "I WILL" DOCTRINE.

Whole philosophies or sects or teachings have been based on mistaken exaggerations of these commonplace facts. For instance, it is taught that those who "will themselves to do things," can succeed at anything, while those who "lack will power" must always fail. The fallacy in this is the usual one of mistaking one useful and very essential but by no means all-conquering factor for the total needed. Of course, the individual who will not try anything new obviously cannot succeed in it; but by no means all compensations required in the body are within the body's powers, they may be elicited by care and patience and persistence. But the compensations required may be beyond the limits of any body. A delicately brought-up woman, who, in an effortless life, has never lifted more than ten pounds of weight at one time with either hand, suddenly facing an emergency requiring the lifting of a hundred pounds, may think she can't, and therefore may not try; but if she tries all her reserve force, with all the compensations she can draw on at the moment, may only suffice for lifting ninety pounds; if so, she will necessarily fail to lift one hundred. Some other woman, used to heavy lifting, would pick up the hundred pounds, not as a crisis in her life, but as a most matter-of-fact proceeding; while a third woman, just as unused to lifting as the first, but having a greater reserve and more flexible compensations, might manage two hundred pounds. At the same time no ordinary person, never mind what his reserve or compensations, could handle one thousand pounds, while the limit for the great majority lies far below that figure.

SONGS OF CY WARMAN; POEMS SHOW WARMTH OF A NATURE THAT LOVES MEN AS BURNS DID

Londoners Should Be Proud of Recently-Published Volume of Verses That Contain Genuine Heart Throbs by the Author of "Sweet Marie."

The book of the "Songs of Cy Warman," just published, makes one feel glad that London can claim him as one of its citizens. One naturally links the name of Cy Warman with the song, "Sweet Marie," because that was sung by everyone, but it is by no means his best, nor does it give you a just estimate of his ability as a poet.

Cy Warman is best when serious. A verse from "Indiana" says:

"I'll come back to Indiana when this wicked war is o'er;
I'll come back to Indiana, and I'll leave you love, no more;
We shall walk and talk together, here
beneath our native sky,
I'll come back to Indiana by-and-bye,"

He meets a soldier's fate on the battlefield and the song winds up "softly":

"Take me back to Indiana—he was groping for our hands—
Take me back to Indiana—there's a girl in old Vincennes—
O, it grieves me sore that sorrow soon shall dim her azure eye;
Take me back to Indiana, by-and-bye."

It is a good way to judge of poetry and songs by ascertaining whether they contain lines that could be used as quotations, and there are many here. For instance, from "Here Below"

"Just sift a little sunshine in the

and again

"Don't cluster up your kisses,
For my cold and clammy brow.
This life is long and lonely—
Come, and let me feel them now."

"The Long, Hard Hill," is another of those in serious mood.

"But the love that had come to them
Was the true love that endures," and like "John Anderson, My Jo,"

"The frost is on the heather,
And the snow is on the rill
And they're coasting down the short side
Of the long, hard hill."

And he strikes a true note when he says:

"Ah! Love is sweet and hope is strong,
And life's a sunny sea,
A woman's soul is in her song,
And you'll remember me."

But the best of all his writings is "Will the Lights Be White?" There is no more manly man in the whole world than the railway engineer. He must be a man every inch. He faces danger every minute from the time he starts until the trip is finished. Real life is full of many heroic deeds of the railway engineer. The occupation calls for no weaklings. A steady head and steady nerves are needed to pilot the great engines over the road. This should be given in full:

CY WARMAN,
Who Recently Published His Poems.

"Will the Lights Be White."

Oft when I feel my engine swerve,
As o'er strange rails we fare,
I strain my eye around the curve
For what awaits us there:
When swift and free she carries me,
Through yards unknown at night,
I look along the line to see
That all the lamps are white.

The blue light marks the crippled car,
The green light signals slow,
The red light is a danger light,
The white light, "Let her go."
Again the open fields we roam,
And, when the night is fair,
I look up in the starry dome
And wonder what's up there.

For who can speak for those who dwell
Behind the curving sky?
No man has ever lived to tell
Just what it means to die.
Swift towards life's terminal I tread,
The run seems short tonight;
God only knows what's at the end—
I hope the lights are white.

If Cy Warman had written nothing else this would entitle him to a good place among the poets of this continent.

"Under the Willows" is one of the sweetest songs in the book. "We Never Know" is touching, and "God Is Love" is far superior to the majority of the hymns in our hymn-books. "The Cry of a Shipwrecked Soul" brings some the truth of the first two lines:

"Not many men are wholly bad,
None altogether good."

And yet, when you read his tribute to Dr. Drummond you are willing to admit that Dr. Drummond was altogether good.

"You who have broken bread with him,
Have lingered, laughing late at night;
You will know why mine eyes are dim
With tears that blur the lines I write;
Dare's won he's frien', I'm not forget,
Dat small cure of Calumette."

And whoever has visited Denver will read with pleasure and approval:

"Denver, sunny Denver,
I know the skies are clear,
I know the winds blow softly,

Although the leaves are sear;
I know the sunlight lingers
On mountain, hill and plain.
Round Denver, dear, old Denver—
I'm going back again."

Denver is destined to be one of America's best residential cities, and in the days to come may put Paris in the shade. With thousands of miles of prairies to the east of it, and thousands of miles of mountains to the west of it, with scenery unsurpassed in the world, and a climate where the sun is always shining, there is sure to be one of the earth's greatest cities.

This review is already too long. Let me close, and I cannot do so more appropriately than in the language of Cy Warman:

"But there's a consolation in
The thought that when we're dead,
If we have written something good,
Our efforts will be read!
And friends will plant forget-me-nots,
And come and sit and sigh,
And irrigate our grave with tears,
When we go off and die."

The seriousness of the volume, of Cy Warman's songs is refreshing and elevating. The thread that runs through them all is sterling. It will do good and not harm. There is not a word that he need ever regret having written and least of all his lines on the "Hereafter."

"But whatsoe'er the future be,
If there's a life for you and me,
To last through all eternity?
'Twere well to keep this point in view:
Do unto man, thy whole life through,
As thou would'st have him do to you."

Altogether Cy Warman's songs leave a sweet taste in the mouth, and a feeling that the author is a man of the type of Robert Burns, the great Scottish poet. There seems to be more truth than poetry when he says:

"In my hands I hold the heather,
And my feet are in the Terns,
Of the land of Annie Laurie,
And the home of Bobbie Burns."

"Now I put the hills behind me,
And o'er the ocean gray,
I gaze out towards the occident,
With tear-wet eyes today;
To earth's mainland—America—
My tired spirit turns,
From the land of Annie Laurie,
And the home of Bobbie Burns."

One cannot help feeling that no one can tell how much good a volume of songs such as that just published by Cy Warman will do. Who in the lifetime of Robert Burns estimated even in a faint degree the good his life would be to the world? There were ministers who denounced him, but we know better today. The whole world knows that for the good song-writers and poets the light will always be white. The name of Cy Warman will be found among those who "loved his fellow-men," and clearly before him the white lights are visible.

Neurasthenia

THIS is the fancy name which scientists give to the disease commonly known as nervous prostration or nervous exhaustion. It is an ailment peculiar to this age and this continent.

The placid, contented life of our ancestors has been left behind, and everywhere there is rush and strain, whether on business or pleasure bent. Sometimes it is the cares and worries of business, but oftener the strain of attending the round of society and amusement, which brings on collapse of the nervous system. It may be the lady in high society who is the victim of it, or it may be the girl in the factory.

You lose interest in life, feel tired and languid, find your daily duties a burden, cannot get proper rest and sleep, have headaches and indigestion, are nervous and irritable over little things, some of the vital organs fail in their functions, and you become down-hearted and discouraged.

Any treatment to afford you more than mere temporary relief must increase the nerve force in the human system. The food you eat has failed to do this, so Nature must receive help from outside, just such help as is supplied by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, because this food cure is composed of the ingredients which go to form new, rich blood and new nerve force.

This idea of nourishing the nerves back to health and vigor is comparatively new. It has proved to be the only means of rebuilding and revitalizing wasted nerve cells.

While Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is put up in pill form, you should look upon it as a food rather than as a medicine, because of its building-up influence on the system. Natural and gentle in action and yet wonderfully potent in its reconstructive influence, this treatment is admirably suited to the needs of women who are pale, weak and run-down.

It fills the body with rich, red blood, restores the appetite and improves the digestion, thus enabling the body to get the benefit of the food you eat. It rekindles the vitality of the nervous system, and through the nerve fibres carries vigor and energy to every organ in the body. You soon feel better and look better. Hope and confidence are restored. The organs assume their natural functions and you find yourself well on the way to health and happiness.

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL ON THE BELFAST PROBLEM; PREDICTS IRISH UNIONISTS WILL ACCEPT HOME RULE

Their Commercial Interests Bound Up With the Rest of Ireland—Will Prefer To Be Under a Parliament at Dublin to Being a Part of England and Scotland.

Mr. Augustine Birrell, M. P., the chief secretary for Ireland, addressed a public meeting in the Parr Hall, Warrington, recently. Mr. C. E. Parker, the president of the Warrington Liberal Association, was in the chair.

Mr. Birrell mentioned that he was in Warrington in 1868, when Mr. Gladstone, in association with Mr. Grenfell, was contesting Southwest Lancashire. The business upon which Mr. Gladstone was then engaged was the disestablishment and partial disendowment of the church in Ireland—not the Church of Ireland, but the church in Ireland. (Hear, hear.) He was assailed with abuse which is almost out of date despite all the efforts of Mr. Bonar Law. (Laughter.) He was called a renegade, a turncoat, a blasphemer, and a robber of God. The excited population in Northeast Ulster declared that were any such infamous proposal carried into law they would throw the crown into the Boyne; they would set up for themselves; they would not survive the degradation and the disgrace of seeing the Episcopal Church in Ireland disestablished. It was done all the same (hear, hear), and now you would not find even amongst the bishops, the deans, and the dignitaries or the incumbents and the curates of that church a single voice that would be raised in favor of a restoration of that church to its former position. Its adherents are still a relatively small part of the population, but they enjoy throughout the length and breadth of that land a respect and feeling of friendship and goodwill which were never theirs whilst they usurped and assumed an authority and a connection to which they had no right. These things are a parable. What was true of the Established Church is true now of the home rule bill. (Cheers.) We are going on with it. About that you may rest assured. (Hear, hear.) Although it has suffered a rebuff in another place we had fortunately made arrangements (cheers), which will enable it in a few months to be sent up again and again; only what happens to it the third time will not matter. (Laughter.)

Some Things That Cannot Be Done.

Some time ago in this very hall Sir Edward Carson presented with much vehemence his case against home rule. I meet that case (Mr. Birrell said) by a simple statement of my own absolute belief that whatever you hope and mean to do in Ireland, be you a Unionist or whatever you please, you can no longer govern Ireland except by conceding to her this great gift of self-government, which all the representatives from every part of Ireland, except a small corner in the northeast, have for thirty years persistently demanded. (Cheers.) On two separate occasions, divided by a period of twenty years, the House of Commons has passed a measure establishing a subordinate parliament and conferring upon Ireland a local executive responsible to that Parliament. Those steps can never be retraced (hear, hear); and how does anybody who comes after us propose to govern Ireland? What is the good of asking Ireland to send 101 members year after year for more than a hundred years to an Imperial Parliament to represent and voice the wishes of Ireland if, after they have made their demand again and again, you say to them. We don't mean to pay any attention to what you say"? (Cheers.) There are some things which really cannot be done. And if at a general election England, Scotland, and Wales made it plain to the Irish people that they were not going to get home rule, would the Irish people haul down their flag? ("No.") Would they send their leaders into exile? Would they, instead of home rulers, send to Parliament supporters of the Unionist party, the landlord party, and the English interest? They would do nothing of the kind, and therefore you would be faced immediately after your general election with exactly the same problem of how you are going to govern Ireland.

An Insistent Problem.

"Nothing is easier," the Unionists said when they were out of office. "Strong government; resolute government." They had tried it for twenty years, and they pointed to some beneficent acts of Parliament that they passed. But every one of those acts was the natural result of the Nationalist movement in Ireland. The Nationalist party were the authors and they were entitled to the credit of all the beneficent legislation for Ireland that had been passed during the last 25 years. (Cheers.) Supposing that Mr. Bonar Law were to obtain at the next election that small majority for which, honest man that he is, he is always ready to pay the full market price of the day (laughter), and he had to concoct his first King's speech, he would, I am sure, call to his assistance that same body of astute and able men who helped him to prepare his Ashton speech (laughter), for he has told us that that remarkable utterance, which has since been suppressed as unfit for family reading (laughter), was no product of his own unaided brain, but a limited company affair (laughter), and passed by a board of directors after full consideration. (Laughter.) Those same gentlemen would, I am sure, help him in the concoction of his King's speech and I am as certain as that I am standing here that it would contain a paragraph something to this effect: "And with regard to Ireland, his majesty's ministers propose to lay on the table of the House at a convenient moment

ELDERLY FOLKS! CALOMEL, SALTS AND CATHARTICS AREN'T FOR YOU

Harmless, Gentle "Syrup of Figs" Is Best to Cleanse Your Stomach, Liver and 30 Feet of Bowels of Sour Bile, Decaying Food, Gases and Clogged-Up Waste.

You old people, Syrup of Figs is particularly for you. You who don't exercise as much as you need to; who like the easy chair. You, whose steps are slow and whose muscles are less elastic. You must realize that your liver and ten yards of bowels have also become less active.

Don't regard Syrup of Figs as physic. It stimulates the liver and bowels, just as exercise would do if you took enough of it. It is not harsh like salts or cathartics. The help which Syrup of Figs gives to a torpid liver and weak, sluggish bowels, is harmless, natural and gentle.

When eyes grow dim, you help them. Do the same with your liver and bowels when age makes them less active. There is nothing more important. Costive, clogged-up bowels mean that decaying, fermenting food is clogged there and the pores or ducts in these thirty feet of bowels suck this decaying waste and poisons into the blood. You will never get feeling right until this is corrected—but do it gently. Don't have a bowel washday; don't use a bowel irritant. For your sake, please use only gentle, effective Syrup of Figs. Then you are not drugging yourself, for Syrup of Figs is composed of only luscious figs, senna and aromatics which can not injure.

A teaspoonful tonight will gently, but thoroughly, move on and out of your system by morning all the sour bile, poisonous fermenting food and clogged-up waste matter without gripe, nausea or weakness.

But get the genuine. Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna." Refuse with contempt, any other Fig Syrup unless it bears the name—prepared by the California Fig Syrup Company. Read the label.

Chorus Scene in "The Heart Breakers," a musical play at the Grand next Friday, matinee and night.

MUSIC and DRAMA

The Grand's Attractions.

Today, Matinee and Night—"The Girl From Montmartre."
Monday and Tuesday, March 17 and 18—"In Old Kentucky."
Wednesday, March 19—"The County Sheriff."
Friday, March 21, Matinee and Night—"The Heart Breakers."
Saturday, March 22, Matinee and Night—"Freckles."
Monday, March 24, Matinee and Night—"The Red Widow."

Topical Songs Today.

There are few musical comedies that have the number of either songs or dances that "The Girl From Montmartre" does, the medium in which Richard Carle and Hattie Williams will appear at the Grand Opera House twice today. The musical numbers total nineteen, of which Mr. Carle's "I've Taken Such a Fancy to You," and Miss Williams' "Don't Turn My Picture to the Wall," "Whoopla, Father Doesn't Care," and "Ooo-Ooo-Lena," are the favorites. Two other popular numbers are "Half-Past Two" and "I'll Be Waiting at the Window," which are sung by Moya Mannering and Edwin Nicander. Then there is an octette, "Oh, Doctor," that invariably receives six encores. And for a funny duet, if you can imagine Mr. Carle lilting such a thing, there is "In Spirit Land," which he sings with William Danforth, his principal comedian.

"In Old Kentucky."

"In Old Kentucky" is scheduled for presentation again here at the Grand Opera House on Monday and Tuesday evenings of next week. A simple story of Kentucky life, first laid in the mountain regions, and later getting down into the blue grass domain, where the major portion of the incidents are supposed to occur. This play is one that leaves an impress upon the mind. One who has seen "In Old Kentucky" can never entirely forget brave little Madge Brierly, who loves Frank Layson, the aristocratic young horseman from down in the "Blue Grass," and who sacrifices much to save the life and fortune of her manly sweetheart. Then, there is the gallant colonel, and sweet, delightful Aunt Alathea, Lorey, the moonshiner, whose life is devoted to carrying out one of those mountain feuds that results in bloodshed; faithful old Uncle Neb, who has trained a score of pickaninnies around the stable yard to make capital music as a juvenile brass band; then there is fleet-footed Queen Bess (the fastest mare in old Kentucky), who wins the Ashland Oaks, when ridden in superb style by brave little Madge, dressed as a jockey, and countless other features too many to recall now.

"The County Sheriff."

The theatre-goers have a treat in store when "The County Sheriff" comes to the Grand next Wednesday evening. This is one of those quiet melodramas that burns little powder. Still abounding in heart interest and thrilling climaxes, it tells a beautiful love story of the plains, with just enough comedy to relieve the intensity of the dramatic situation. The story is told in four acts, and special scenic and stage equipments are carried for the entire production. Mr. Lem B. Parker, the author, has added very little fictitious embellishment to the already interesting story. The costumes, which are historically correct, is a feature of the performance. "All the world loves a lover" is an old adage and a true one, and one of the most fascinating stories of the love of two men for one woman that was ever told, is the basis of the play, "The County Sheriff." Seat Sale opens Monday at popular prices.

Big Holiday Attraction.

Headed by George Damerel, last seen as the "Prince" in "The Merry Widow," and now the latest aspirant for stellar honors in the musical comedy line, "The Heart Breakers," will be seen at the Grand Good Friday, matinee and night, March 21. The piece is under the direction of Mort H. Singer, who has sent in the past few years some of the best musical comedies that have gone out of Chicago. Unlike most of musical comedies of the present day, "The Heart Breakers" has a clearly-defined plot and a very pretty love story running through it, dealing with the efforts of a club of young men, who try to revenge themselves on all womankind by ardent love-making, and after winning their affections throwing them over. Among those that are worthy of mention are "Your Eyes, Your Smile, and You," "My Honolulu Honey Lou," "The Tale of the Bashful Bumble Bee," "If I Had a Hundred Hearts," "The Songs You Used to Sing to the Girls You Used to Love," and many others. The cast is headed by George Damerel, who became famous through the "Merry Widow" waltz, and includes a perfect Princess chorus. The piece is in two acts; the first takes place at the Saxon Club, in New York, and the second at Munger Castle, in the Adirondacks. Seat sale opens Tuesday, 9 a.m.

"Freckles."

With a most truthful dramatization of Gene Stratton-Porter's powerful story, "Freckles," by Neil Twomey, the play is proving as great a success as was the novel. The Grand has secured this play for Saturday next, matinee and night. A dramatization of the best seller of all the best sellers should in itself be sufficient to create a dramatic furore, for it must be remembered, that over a million people have read "Freckles" and have raved over it. There is no disputing the fact that for strength of its beautiful simplicity, the story stands as a masterpiece. These attributes inculcated into such a picturesque environment as the great "Limberlo swamp," are far stronger where the eye aids the remaining scenes than where all is left to the imagination. Twomey has brought out, with a vivid forcefulness, every prominent incident; he has been religious in sticking absolutely to the text, and so those who are familiar with the splendid nature of the Irish boy, with his pure love for "The Swamp Angel"; with his sense of right and wrong; with his friends and his enemies; with his sweet songs and ready wit, will know "Freckles" far better, and will admire him more, after they have seen the play. "Freckles" is under the direction of A. G. Delamater. Seat sale opens Thursday at special prices.

Raymond Hitchcock and "The Red Widow."

At the Grand on Easter Monday, matinee and night, March 24, Cohan & Harris will present Raymond Hitchcock in the musical play "The Red Widow," a work by Channing Pollock, Rennold Wolf and Charles J. Gebest. "The Red Widow" will be described on the program as a musical play. It is said that the story is too substantial, too well knit and coherent for a musical comedy. The first act has its locale in London, but that is merely to start Cicero Hannibal Butts, a retired millionaire (Raymond Hitchcock) on his way to St. Petersburg with a beautiful young woman known as "The Red Widow," so that he may become harrowingly involved in dynamite and pistol plots treacherously conceived by a band of Nihilists, in which "The Red Widow" is the leader, to snuff out the life of the Czar and such other royal personages as may stray within her range. He will be assisted by Flora Zabelle, who will be seen as the designing "Red Widow." Seat sale opens next Thursday at 9 a.m.

A MAN sometimes buys a car that is not just what he wants. The question of price forces him to choose one far short of his ideal.

Saving the duty of 35% would perhaps bring the right kind of car within buying distance.

The TUDHOPE is such a car as men want to own.

AND IT SAVES THE DUTY.

In finish, appearance and proportions it is a man's car. It has the long wheel-base, the large wheels, the low, well-balanced body and spring equipment that make a steady, easy-riding car.

A turn at the wheel tells the story of the Tudhope Motor. The Tudhope is the silent, powerful machine that men admire.

This car is sold at the Tudhope duty-saving price.

It is the car you want, at a price lower than you would expect to pay.

If you are about to choose a car that does not come up to your idea of what a car should be, if you are about to pay the 35% duty on the kind of car you want, see the Tudhope first.

Winston Churchill Criticizes Language of Bonar Law

Accuses Unionist Leader of Giving Criminal Advice to Ulsterites—Says He Has Shown Himself Unfitted for a Responsible Position in Parliament.

"The Relief of Derry" was celebrated recently at a luncheon at the Hotel Cecil, London, in honor of Mr. David C. Hogg, the man whose return to Parliament robbed the Unionists of their last claim to a majority in Ulster.

Mr. Winston Churchill, chairman of the home rule council, presided, and among those who supported him were Mr. John Redmond, Mr. Ure (lord advocate), Mr. Eugene Wason, M. P., Mr. Percy Illingworth, M. P., Mr. Oswald Partington, M. P., Capt. the Hon. A. C. Murray, M. P., Lord Hemphill, K. C., Mr. Robert Harcourt, M. P., and many others.

A Famous Victory.

"Mr. Hogg's victory," said Mr. Churchill, "was a timely, and may well prove a famous, one. One can hardly imagine any electoral episode which could at that particular moment have more fully embodied the features of a triumph—(hear, hear)—a triumph, a battle-flag, a trophy, bringing with it encouragement all along the fighting line—that was the victory of Derry. (Hear, hear.)

"But the victory of Derry was much more than any mere triumph of partisanship—(hear, hear)—much more even than a valuable encouragement given to the parliamentary forces who are sustaining this long contest. It was a victory less of partisanship than of conciliation and goodwill. (Hear, hear.)

"It was a victory which represents much that we hope for in the new Ireland, which is coming every day into being—(cheers)—and has, we confidently hope, a fine part to play on the stage of the world's affairs—(hear, hear)—an Ireland prosperous and competent, loyal and free. (Hear, hear.)

Minority Rights.

"The Prime Minister said speaking earlier in the year, that there was no case which would better have repaid good and reasonable presentation than the case of the minority of the Ulster representatives. (Hear, hear.)

"But what have we had? During the whole of these long discussions, have we had one word of sober reason, or of genuine goodwill, from those who have constituted themselves, in the House of Commons, the spokesmen of the Ulster minority?

"We have had during all these months nothing but hothouse hatred and incubated bigotry. (Hear, hear.) We have been confronted with a jeering succession of violent and etxravagant threats; and at no time or period have we seen, in Parliament at any rate, any desire to face the real facts of the situation or meet the real needs which Ireland demands, and which, this time, she shall have. (Cheers.)

Mr. Bonar Law's Extravagances.

"The wildest threats, the most absurd statements, have come from the leader of the Unionist party himself. (Hear, hear.) No one should, I think, be more careful and circumspect in the language which he uses than the leader of a great English party—possessed with the idea, as he so frequently tells us, that he is shortly to be summoned to undertake the august responsibilities of the first minister of the crown. (Laughter.)

"Mr. Bonar Law prepares himself for the duties of an English prime minister by adopting, eagerly and recklessly, every statement, threat, or assertion, however extreme, that the most rabid partisans in his own faction are able to utter. (Hear, hear.)

"We have heard from his language applied to violence, which, I venture to say, would make his due execution of the law practically impossible if ever he were himself called upon to undertake those responsibilities. (Hear, hear.)

"We have heard the absurd threat, which I understand has been circulated in some quarters of Belfast, that the Ulster minority would secede to Germany. (Laughter.) We have heard this absurd threat, so ridiculous that no man in his senses would have cared to notice it, actually repeated with gusto in the House of Commons by the leader of the Unionist party. And it is only on a par with such extravagance that Mr. Bonar Law, in a recent speech, should have endeavored, most improperly, to draw the person of the sovereign into a great and fierce political controversy of this character.

Criminal Advice.

"Anyone who could be so minded as, for party purposes, to give criminal advice of that character—(hear, hear)—to the constitutional ruler of this country," said Mr. Churchill, "to step down into the arena of party politics and take violent action against a great portion of his fellow-subjects, and the overwhelming majority of one of the kingdoms over which he rules—anyone who gave such criminally foolish advice as that has shown himself to be unfitted for responsible position in the Government or Parliament. (Cheers.)

"When the history of these events comes to be written, and these hotly-contested matters are reviewed in the cold light of another age, how very different will the attitudes of the English Unionist leader and the Irish Nationalist leader appear! (Prolonged applause.) On the one hand, folly, spite, and venom in defeat on the other, statecraft, generosity and goodwill, marching to victory." (Cheers.)

Catholic Tolerance.

Mr. Hogg, in a modest reply, attributed his return to "a happy combination of broad-minded Protestants and tolerant Catholics, who had the patriotism and good sense to stand together upon an occasion which will be memorable in the history of England and Ireland." (Hear, hear.) He believed that when home rule came the parties in Ireland would be practically reconstituted, with the many interests of the people reflected in their members, and that there would be no division whatever along religious lines. (Hear, hear.)

A Prophecy Fulfilled.

Mr. John Redmond, proposing the health of the chairman, expressed the special hopes that Irishmen had of Mr. Churchill's association with their cause. "This is indeed a happy occasion," he remarked. "We have assembled here to celebrate the relief of Derry." (Applause.) One of the most distinguished of Irish orators, Thomas Francis Meagher (who was condemned for rebellion), once used these words: "Derry in older times fought for the privileges of a king. Let us hope she may yet fight for the rights of a nation."

"Well," said Mr. Redmond, "that day of which he prophesied has come." (Cheers.)

Dealing with the Unionist position he pointed out that in the south and west of Ireland Unionist leaders were making it clear that, if the bill passed, then they would be quite willing to join their countrymen in working for the common good of their country. (Hear, hear.)

The irreconcilable section in Ulster, he believed, was much smaller than people in this country supposed. "I have no hesitation in saying," Mr. Redmond proceeded, "that I can conceive scarcely any price too big to pay in order to start home rule with a united people."

"There Will Be No Opposition."

'Anything that will safeguard these men's interests and liberties, anything that will increase their representation far beyond that which they are entitled to by their numbers, any claim of that kind we will be the first to accept." He denied, however, the right of a small section to dictate to the rest of Ireland. No community of men had ever rebelled except against oppression; and if there were oppression, then Ulster would rebel, and would be right. "But," Mr. Redmond added, "there will be no oppression and therefore there will be no resistance." (Cheers.)
