CHINESE IN LONDON PRESENT NO PROTEST

Between Two and Three Hundred Register at Local Office.

"HUMILIATION DAY"

State Few Come to Country Under Disguise of Merchants.

Between 200 and 300 Chinese have registered in the city of London recently in pursuance of section 18 of the Chinese Immigration Act of 1923. Monday was the last day the Chinese had to register to escape the penalty of a fine for failing to register, the fine not exceeding $500 or imprisonment not to exceed 12 months or both. The final period for registration during the past week drew many of the Chinese to the local immigration office to get under the order.

Although there was no demonstration or meetings in the city yesterday by way of protesting against the regulation, as in a number of other Canadian cities, a prominent Chinese restaurant proprietor expressed his disapproval of the act in its naming the Chinese as the only race of foreigners required to register. He also pointed out that no other country made a point of requiring the Chinese to register. Asked as to whether many Chinese came in as merchants exempt as far as head tax was concerned, and later changed their occupations to restaurant proprietors, laundry men or laborers, the prominent Chinese citizen replied briefly, "Not many."

AWAIT ENVOY'S RETURN.
Canadian Press Despatch.
Vancouver, B.C., July 2.—"Humiliation Day" observation did not get off as far as the Chinese in Vancouver were concerned. Statements had been made that the Chinese indignation over the immigration department's new regulations requiring them to register, would make a demonstration of their feelings on Dominion Day.

Many of the Chinese clubs held meetings and discussed the matter, but it was decided to await the return of their envoy to Ottawa before taking any action.

IN THE LIMELIGHT AT DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.
William Jennings Bryan (left) today launched an attack in the Democratic convention to prevent John W. Davis (right) of West Virginia from securing the presidential nomination. Davis is backed by Boss Brennan of Chicago, although the two are of directly opposite types. Davis' sudden gain in votes in the convention has alarmed the commoner, who regards Davis as too great a power in Wall Street. Latest returns show McAdoo has taken away 20 votes from the Davis column, the Mississippi delegation making the switch.

HERTZOG SWEARS FEALTY TO BRITAIN

South African Prime Minister Lauds Motherland in Speech.

Associated Press Despatch.
Pretoria, S. A., July 2.—Speaking last night at a Nationalist banquet held here in his honor, Prime Minister General James Barry Hertzog, of the Union of South Africa, declared that Great Britain should and always will be, as far as his government is concerned, the first and chief friend of South Africa. Unfortunately, in the past, there had been accusations made against the Nationalists because they insisted upon the doctrine of South Africa first, but many of those who accused them were now with them on this point, he said.

It was always to be the aim of the Nationalists and his government to co-operate with Britain and to do so heartily with the rest of the dominions. As far as the outside world was concerned, his government also declared that they should look upon South Africa as their friend. Where the interests of South Africa permitted, they always would be glad to do so that the interests of other countries would not be jeopardized.

ROYALTY HAS HARD STRUGGLE TO SEE 'EX.'

Dense Crowds at Wembley Make King and Prince's Visit Impossible.

SET ASIDE A DAY

Grounds May Be Temporarily Closed to All But Ruling Family.

Associated Press Despatch.
New York, July 2.—Neither King George nor the Prince of Wales have had an opportunity to make a detailed visit to the British Empire exhibition because of the dense crowds that so each day. Captain Alfred N. Williams, of the exhibition staff, reported after his arrival here yesterday.

Two hundred thousand people visit the exhibition each day, he said, and whenever the King or the prince so they are recognized, surrounded and forced to turn back. He said a plan was under way to close the exhibition for a full day to allow the royal family undisputed possession of the grounds and the sidewalks. Captain Williams announced that the parkland to be produced would be the greatest ever performed anywhere.

It will be presented by William Lunn, a former coal miner, who is minister of overseas trade in the MacDonald cabinet. It plans to present in pasteurized form the British empire, its peoples, and their accomplishments. Some of the words are being written by Alfred Noyes, the poet, and among those who will take part will be Mrs. Herbert H. Asquith, wife of the former premier, Miss Isabella MacDonald, daughter of the present premier, and Lady Irene Curzon, Lady Diana Manners has been asked to play the Queen of Beauty.

The curtain on July 21, Captain Williams said. It will require three evenings to perform and there will be players from all walks of British life. It will be held in the stadium of Wembley.

Twelve performances of three days each will be given, so that the pageant will last from July 21 to Aug. 30. The first day will be called "Westward Ho!" and will present the exploration of Sebastian Cabot and others to Newfoundland and Canada. Africa from the time of the Pharaohs to that of Rhodes, and India from the earliest days to the present will be shown. In "Southward Ho!" on the third day, there will be the landing of Captain Cook in New Zealand, concluding with a pageant of the British Empire will pass in review.

Motive Remains Mystery In Most Brutal Murder In History of Elmira

Lorne Bowman, Charged With Killing Wife, Refuses To Speak.

NO FAMILY TROUBLES

Forty-Four Hatchet Wounds on Victim's Neck and Chest.

Special to The Advertiser.
By a Staff Reporter.
Elmira, July 2.—Bloodstains told the tale of the slaying of Mrs. Lorraine Bowman, 23, on Monday morning. Her forehead and the lips of her baby, who crawled downstairs afterwards, were smeared, as if the baby had kissed the dead mother as she lay in a pool of her own blood. The clothing of the accused husband, Lorne Bowman, 26, was also stained, according to Chief Stynes, who made the arrest.

There was no estrangement between the young couple prior to the slaying, Bowman's own family say. Although they have each been living at their homes for a time, it was a temporary arrangement, while Bowman was out of work and their relations, it is said, were most affectionate.

Bowman since his return from overseas, has been suffering from nervous trouble, his brother told a reporter, but he "was never regarded as dangerous."

Motive Is Missing.

Motive is therefore, a missing link in the tragedy.
Early Monday morning, Mrs. Bowman, young, attractive, and an accomplished vocalist, was at her accustomed place in the choir of St. Theresa's Church. She was a devout Catholic, and her husband, after their marriage, also turned Catholic, and sometimes attended the church with her. Half an hour after she returned home she was dead and her husband was under arrest on a charge of murder.

On her return from mass the young woman went upstairs to make the beds. Her husband had come from his mother's home early in the morning to mind the baby during her absence. It is believed Mrs. Bowman had the baby in her arms when she met death, because a few minutes after she went upstairs to the bedroom the baby crawled downstairs.

JUNE SAVING OF WATER 30 MILLION GALLONS

Public Utilities Continues Work of Placing Meters in Home.

RECORD MONTH

Some Misunderstanding Arises as to New Method of Charges.

During the month just past people of London consumed 163 million gallons of water from the civic water system and saved enough each day to flood the entire city quite easily with three feet of water. Sufficient water was saved during the past 30 days to make tea for an army of 500,000 men, or to fill 10,000 bathtubs. Figures given out at the public utilities office yesterday morning showed that 30,000,000 gallons of water had been saved during the past month through the installation of more meters in homes and office and factories since last summer. A year ago just a million gallons short of a million, the record 30 days for 1923.

There are twice as many homes in London now paying for water under the metering system as in June of last year. A squad of workmen meters completed a much more substantial saving in water consumption is looked for.

Some folks, misunderstanding the meter system, think water will be assessed much more for water. One woman, who entered a plea last week against having a meter put in, was shown that her bill from the water department would really be about a fifth less than she had been paying. Another woman, at whose home a meter was installed last year, found a bill of $12 where he had been paying double $60 in other years. Of course, it was apparent that the meter had been read roughly, but he never kicked until he received his bill and found it to be something like normal.

About two-thirds of the homes of London are now paying water rates under the meter system, and the completion of the work will be effected during the coming year.

We Cannot Escape
Discipline

Cites Case of Fond and Foolish
Father

Its Kinder To Teach Your Children Obedience and Self-Control Than to Give In to Them, for Life Disciplines Us All, and to the Pampered Life Shows No Mercy.

A fond and foolish father was showing me his beautiful little daughter.

"She shall always do exactly as she pleases. I never intend her to be controlled or made to obey or coerced into doing the things she doesn't wish to do," he said.

"Ah," I replied, "so you are going to let life discipline her. It is a cruel thing to do."

"What do you mean?" he asked.

"When life disciplines us, it does it with an iron rod, and it leaves us crushed and broken on the scrap pile," I answered. "In the end bitter experience teaches us the lessons that we should have learned at our parents' knees, but our hard-learned knowledge comes too late to do us any good. We can't go back and retrieve our lost opportunities or find again the happiness that we have thrown away."

"Surely," I went on, "you are not fatuous enough to believe that the world is going to be especially satiated for your child's feet, or that she is going to escape the common human lot. You know that she is bound to have sickness, and sorrow, and anxiety, and disappointment."

"You know that she is bound to meet obstacles that she cannot overcome; that she will encounter will stronger than her own; that she will find those who will ride roughshod over her tenderest feelings, and care no more for breaking her heart than they would a penny bit of glass; that many a time she will have to submit to sheer brute tyranny; that the hour will come when her very salvation will depend upon her ability to stand up and take punishment. How is she to do this if you have not taught her to obey? If you have not taught her to do the right thing, irrespective of her feelings, just because it is her duty?"

"It is not the raw, untrained troops that win battles, my friend. It is the seasoned, disciplined soldiers who wrest victory out of defeat. It is not the selfish men and women, the sports of their own desires and passions, who make a success of life. It is the men and women who are the captains of their souls who are masters of their fate."

"But the point that I am trying to make to you is that we cannot escape discipline. We can't have our own way all the time. We can't make our own rules. We can't do as we please. We have got to learn that sooner or later, our parents must teach it to us gently while we are in the cradle, or else life teaches it to us with a bludgeon after we are grown up."

"You can begin with as simple a thing as the matter of health. If you won't teach your child to deny herself anything that appeals to her at the moment, life will. It will give her dyspepsia if she eats too much. It will turn her into a neurotic, nerve-wrecked woman if she does not control her temper. It may even kill her if, for the sake of vanity, she goes out in thin satin slippers and gossamer stockings in sleet and snow."

"In a short while your little girl will be a big girl, going to school with other girls, and her happiness will depend upon her popularity. If she has been encouraged in selfishness, and the belief that her will was law; if she takes the best of things for herself, and is disregarding of the feelings of others, she will be ostracized. She will have no friends. She will be left out of all the good times. That is the way that life will teach her selfishness, and that we have to give and take in the world."

"Your girl will marry. Can you wish any greater curse on a man than a wife who has never learned to control herself? Can you imagine any woman making a success of marriage who does not bring unselfishness, and forbearance, and patience, and a high sense of duty to the task?"

"Even the happiest of marriages are disillusioning. Even the best of men are hard to get along with, and if you have not taught your girl to carry on in the face of difficulties; if you have not taught her how to give in gracefully, and to put an iron curb on her tongue and temper, her marriage is dead sure to go on the rocks and end in the divorce court."

"Life will teach her patience and forbearance, but it will be at the price of misery and tears, and a wrecked home, and little half-orphaned children."

"Suppose your daughter goes into business. There is no place in it for women who have not been taught to control themselves, who keep when their work is criticized, who cannot get along with their fellow employees and who lose interest in their work as soon as it becomes the daily grind."

"Business disciplines these girls by throwing them out of their jobs or by keeping them at the lowest rung of the ladder. The women who succeed are those who fit themselves into the office routine, who give the unquestioning obedience of soldiers, and who have the grit to put all that is in them into their tasks until they win out by sheer merit."

"No, my friend," I said in conclusion, "we cannot protect our children from life. We can only prepare them for life, and we best do this when we teach them self-control and obedience, and to do the hard things without whining. For if we don't, life does, and life shows them no mercy."

Court Victory
For Bobbed Hair

Canadian Press Despatch.
Vancouver, B. C., July 2.—Robbed hair won a sweeping victory in police court here the other day, when Magistrate Findlay told O. Owen that if his wife did not object when he visited a barber shop, he should not raise a fuss when she did. The question of bobbed hair arose out of an assault charge, brought by a young wife against her husband, Mrs. Owen had her hair cut and her husband objected. An argument started, and the wife alleges her husband threw her to the ground. The man denied this, saying he had brushed her aside and she fell.

"When you have your hair cut, does your wife raise any objection?" asked the magistrate. "No, of course not," replied the man. "Well, why should you raise a fuss when she cuts her hair?" responded the magistrate. "You had better go home and make up. The case is dismissed."

Other guests included Mrs. W. H. Pinnock and son, of Burford; Mr. Loveday and family of this city; Mr. and Mrs. J. Cook of Burnford; Mrs. Spring, Mr. and Mrs. L. Palmer and family of Brantford; Miss Gould of Glenora; Mr. and Mrs. J. Bartlett and family of Westminster, Township.

Cocoon Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with. Do not use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Multisified cocoon oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this cannot possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. Two or three teaspoonfuls of Multisified will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage. You can get Multisified cocoon oil shampoo at any drug store. It is expensive, and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Multisified of imitations. Look for the name Watkins on the package.—Adv.

THE ISLAND OF DEATH

A Weird Tragedy of a Man Who Called Himself "Monsieur the Devil."

By H. BEDFORD JONES.

INSTALLMENT IX.
THE LEADING CHARACTERS.
J. HUDSON SMITH, an American and alleged fugitive from justice in French Indo-China, who joins the outlaw band of PAUL LEBRUN, known as Monsieur the Devil, a king among cut-throats and thieves, who had been imprisoned for life. Escaping, he swears vengeance on the man responsible for his imprisonment.
LE MORPION and CUREL, cohorts of Monsieur the Devil.
FELICE BONNARD, another accomplice of Lebrun and maid to BERANGERE DES GAUCHONS, the beautiful daughter of JEAN DES GAUCHONS, the target of Lebrun's vengeance, whose South Sea island retreat is the goal of the bloodthirsty bandits. The latter effect a landing and Des Gauchons, not recognizing Lebrun, bids them welcome. Smith is weak from a wound suffered in a fight en route and rests in bed while Lebrun engages Des Gauchons in conversation near a swimming pool. Lebrun brutally murders Des Gauchons, and Le Morpion is given instructions to deal likewise with the gardener. Smith is agitated at the news, while Lebrun intimates that he knows something of the American's past that would tend to incite M. the Devil's wrath, too. Smith accuses Lebrun of bearing a false name. When Berangere arrives, she is told that her father and the others have been victims of ptomaine poisoning. Curel, observing her distraught condition, and appalled by Lebrun's depraved imagination, counter-plots with Smith to overcome Lebrun, Le Morpion and Felice Bonnard.

CHAPTER XVII.

Enmity.

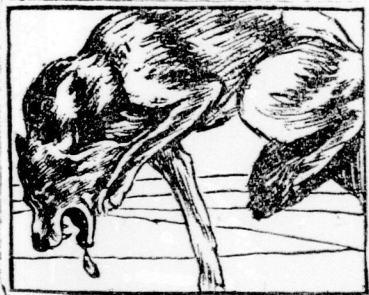

During the remainder of the evening Smith was left to his own devices, not a little to his relief. He found it exceedingly hard to digest the proposal of Curel, and he was both amazed and suspicious.

Suspicion, however, was scarcely justified—he realized this quickly enough. Here was a man who still retained something of the gentleman; coming in contact with Lebrun and what Lebrun had done, he instinctively revolted. Curel, or De Curel, must have been in ignorance of all that was intended. Certainly, he had been terribly upset upon getting here. News of the supposed ptomaine poisoning must have been broken to Berangere rather ungently; at all events, the shock had been no less severe to Curel than to the girl.

The amazement of Smith was more justified than was his first impulse to suspicion. This offer of alliance was the last thing he expected. There was some reason for thinking that Curel would be neutral—but an active aid? This was different. It was distinctly encouraging. And yet, "What about this girl, Berangere?" "I'll have to go slow until I can see her," thought Smith. "If she's some little fool, some hysterical feminine doll, I'd better put her in the motor boat and beat it. If not—well, let the future manage itself! Curel was right about my chances of surviving, however; I'd better lose no time, or Le Morpion won't be easy to handle."

So thinking, he fell asleep. In the morning his breakfast was brought by Felice Bonnard. It was not his first sight of this extraordinary person; he had met her briefly, in Saigon. When she had arranged the tray, she stepped back and surveyed him in silence. Her air was saturnine, unsmiling. "You have changed," she announced critically. "And for the better. I understood that you have undertaken to tame my mistress." In the last word was a covert sneer—a flash of the eye, a twist of the lip.

"That, I believe," responded Smith calmly, "is the arrangement. Do you object?" She shrugged. Already, without word or reason, there had risen between them a wall of intense dislike.

In all his life only once was White Fang knocked off his feet!

A cave by a spruce forest on the edge of icy desolation—

A velvet lawn about a country home, with pudgy puppies playing in the sun—

Between those two lies one of the greatest dog stories ever penned.

WHITE FANG

—the story of the wolf that became a dog—will appear exclusively in The Advertiser.

It will start Monday, July 7, and an installment will be published every day.

White Fang helped to make Jack London famous. It is a corking dog story. And it is the kind of writing that gave the world at large an insight into an ice-bound land of daring and adventure, where every moment brought its thrill.

It's the kind of a story you can't let go once you've started!

And you can start it in The Advertiser on July 7.

Then I'll have a talk with her tomorrow," said the American. He rose. "I'm off for bed—can't afford to overdo now. Good night!" "I'll help you," volunteered Curel.

They left the room together and sought Smith's bedroom. Neither man spoke until they had closed the door, and Curel had lighted the lamp. Then, blowing out the match, he looked at the American and smiled in his melancholy way. "You can't possibly mean," he said questioning, "that you'll strike tomorrow?" Smith nodded. "I'll have to be now or never, Curel. Late tomorrow afternoon, perhaps. I'll have a talk with Berangere. He broke into a quick laugh. "What's so terrible about it, after all. The odds are absolutely even. A woman against a woman. You against Lebrun, Bah!" Curel nodded his head. His dark eyes were sombre.

"You mistake," he answered. "It is not so at all. It is Berangere against Felice; you against Le Morpion; and I—against M. le Diable. Well, we shall see!" With this rather cryptic utterance, he departed.

When Smith awakened to the early morning sunlight in his room, he felt himself again—only the twinge of pain as he left the bed brought him to realization that he was good for little. Still, the weakness had gone. He dressed with cheerful confidence in himself, and went down to breakfast. When Berangere appeared he saw that she, too, seemed more like the girl she must have been. He wished vaguely that he had known her before this blow had stricken her.

He had already decided that Berangere must attend to Felice. During breakfast Smith discovered that there was something amiss with his handbag, which had slipped. After his meal he returned to his room, adjusted the binding firmly, pocketed his automatic and resolved to have a talk with Berangere at once.

Yet the house seemed oddly deserted. Before speaking with the girl he must assure himself that the others were out of the way; but he could not find them. He went to the kitchen. Le Morpion had vanished. Curel and Lebrun were nowhere.

In the hall, Smith paused before a rack of sticks. His eye was caught by a fine Malacca, and for this he discarded the heavier stick which he had been using.

Yowler Receives a Surprise When He Strikes Little Porky

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Mrs. Prickly Porky shuffled along with her two youngsters right at her heels. If she had the least suspicion of danger she didn't show it. No, sir, she didn't show it. She didn't look this way or that way, but kept her head straight ahead. Her two children kept close to her.

It was disappointing and very provoking to Reddy Fox to find that the Coyote and Yowler the Bob Cat, who were hungrily watching, as long as they kept so close to their mother there would be no chance to catch one of those youngsters. Each of the watchers knew this. But each also knew that babies just starting out in the Great World sometimes have short memories, and there was a chance that one of those youngsters might drop behind to look at something that had aroused his curiosity.

It was a sword-cane, three-edged, elegant, deadly. It was a triangular blade finely chased. "I am afraid," said she, coldly, "when I tell you that I know you."

"What?" Smith's brows lifted. "I am afraid."

"No protestations, if you please," she broke in. "I am also aware that a year or so ago you were the confidential emissary of the governor-general himself. I have remembered your face at last. You are the man who reorganized the police system. You are the man who tracked down the opium traffic from Yunnan and stamped it out. You are the man who broke up the criminal gangs along the western border."

MORROW—The Death of Le

A yowl of pained surprise and disappointment startled the Green Forest.

This very thing happened. One of those youngsters stopped to examine something that was new to him. Mrs. Porky didn't notice that he had stopped. She shuffled on with the other baby right at her heels. The mouths of all three of the hidden watchers watered. All three stole forward a few steps, taking care not to rustle a leaf. Then they crouched, waiting. Each wanted to be sure that Mrs. Porky was far enough away. Each saw the greatest reason for that stout quill-covered tail with which Mrs. Porky defends herself.

All unconscious of the disobedience of that little Porky, Mrs. Porky shuffled along. The youngster who had stopped was nearest to Reddy Fox. Reddy quivered all over with eagerness. Yes, sir, he quivered all over. It was all he could do to keep from rushing out, pouncing on that helpless-looking baby and make off with him. But he didn't do it. He didn't dare do it. He could see Yowler the Bob Cat creeping forward swiftly, and he had no mind to feel Yowler's sharp claws. He fairly boiled inside with anger. You see he felt that Yowler was going to steal a dinner from him from right under his nose. He knew that Old Man Coyote must have this same feeling, but that didn't help any.

Now it is Yowler's habit to pounce on those he catches. But he didn't do it this time. Perhaps it was because he knew that this slow moving youngster could not possibly get away from him. Perhaps it was because he wasn't yet quite certain that this helpless-looking baby was as harmless as he appeared to be. Anyway, Yowler bounded out in front of him within a paw's reach and crouched there.

Instantly astonishing thing happened. That innocent-looking baby thrust his nose under an old log he happened to be beside, and instantly a thousand little spears appeared from the hair of his coat, and he began to thrash his funny little tail from side to side. He did exactly what Prickly Porky or Mrs. Porky would have done in his place.

At the sight of those little spears Yowler's eyes grew rounder with surprise and unbelief. Of course those little spears were short and small. They didn't look very dangerous. Still Yowler hesitated. But there was no time to lose. Mrs. Porky was not so far away that he could afford to waste any time. Yowler reached out a paw and struck swiftly but not very hard. A yowl of pained surprise and disappointment startled the Green Forest.

He did exactly what Prickly Porky or Mrs. Porky would have done in his place.

At the sight of those little spears Yowler's eyes grew rounder with surprise and unbelief. Of course those little spears were short and small. They didn't look very dangerous. Still Yowler hesitated. But there was no time to lose. Mrs. Porky was not so far away that he could afford to waste any time. Yowler reached out a paw and struck swiftly but not very hard. A yowl of pained surprise and disappointment startled the Green Forest.

Now it is Yowler's habit to pounce on those he catches. But he didn't do it this time. Perhaps it was because he knew that this slow moving youngster could not possibly get away from him. Perhaps it was because he wasn't yet quite certain that this helpless-looking baby was as harmless as he appeared to be. Anyway, Yowler bounded out in front of him within a paw's reach and crouched there.

Instantly astonishing thing happened. That innocent-looking baby thrust his nose under an old log he happened to be beside, and instantly a thousand little spears appeared from the hair of his coat, and he began to thrash his funny little tail from side to side. He did exactly what Prickly Porky or Mrs. Porky would have done in his place.

The Postal Workers at Toronto.

Hon. James Murdock has his time taken up now explaining what happened in Toronto when he went there in connection with the strike of the postal workers.

Toronto newspaper despatches quote the minister as promising strike pay and arbitration to those who went out.

Mr. Murdock says he promised no such thing, and simply agreed that the strikers might return to work in a body.

The general public is to use a popular phrase, rather fed up with the Toronto situation. The leaders there, by their many turns and changes, are prejudicing the case of postal workers all over the country.

The men who, having sufficient belief in the merits of their case, went back to work, or who did not quit at all, placed themselves in a position where the public will desire to see their case fairly and fully considered by the government. These men demonstrated their sincerity in desiring that the business of Canada should not suffer, and because of that attitude are the more entitled to consideration.

It is high time the Toronto situation was cleared up for keeps. Those responsible for newspaper reports emanating from that city that are not in keeping with the facts are simply helping to muddle a situation that is already too much confused.

Knowing Our Own History.

The passing of Dominion Day serves to bring to the front the fact that Canadians as a people do not know their own history as well as they should.

Such books as Roberts' or Tracy's "History of Canada," or the more voluminous "Makers of Canada," contain a wealth of information that is not sufficiently distributed.

Canadian history is full of romantic interest. We should know more of the times in which our forefathers lived. It would not be a difficult matter to study the times and events of the whole list of premiers: Macdonald, Mackenzie, Macdonald, Abbott, Thomson, Bowell, Tupper, Laurier, Borden, Meighen, King. The history of our own nation is written in the part they played in national development.

Church Union Is Nearer.

Parliament has made good progress with the church union bill, and unless there is senatorial interference the churches petitioning parliament for the right to unite will get just about what they asked for, and that is as it should be.

The discussion of the matter in committee and in the Commons has been on a high plane, and in the latter chamber there has been practically none of the bitterness that was anticipated in some quarters. Members have contended fearlessly and frankly for the points they considered paramount, and there has been no evidence of a desire to evade the issue at any point.

It could even be hoped that the same spirit of independence in debate might be found in other discussions of the House, whereby a candid expression of opinion might come from all quarters, regardless of political affiliation.

The experience at the Ontario legislature, and again before the private bills committee and the parliament at Ottawa, has amply established the point that no legislature or parliament has the right to inflict its will on a church, or to attempt to give it spiritual advice or leadership. The re-establishment of this point in itself affords some measure of compensation for all the conflict that has been thrust upon the churches.

There should be every facility provided now to give effect to the provisions of the church union bill. The majority in the Presbyterian churches can be counted upon to deal fairly, even generously, with those who do not see their way clear to cast in their lot with the united church.

Once union is consummated it will be the duty and the privilege of the united church to go forward with the work to which it has set its hand, not simply to substantiate the claims its friends have made for it, but to win that greatest of all things, the approval and blessing of the Great Head of all Christian churches.

The Case of Col. Parkinson.

Col. Parkinson, a wealthy contractor, of Blackpool, is suing to have $13,000 returned to him. This amount was, he alleges, the first payment made by him for a knighthood, but those agreeing to furnish the title have not been able to do so. Therefore he holds he has been cheated, and wants his money back.

For years there have been stories, more or less vague, about the traffic in titles, but it is not often that a case comes out in court where the public have an opportunity to see how the thing works out, or is supposed to work.

Col. Parkinson's story is that he was to give a donation to a certain college in need of funds, and also to construct a new lecture hall. That was his part of the agreement. In return he was to be rewarded with a title. He figured that it was worth the money to be called Sir George, and it would help him in his business.

Now all he has is a very nice letter thanking him for his donation to the college. But the college was not looking for nice letters of that sort. He was after a title.

His search led him at the time into touch with politicians in the Conservative government of that day, but all the progress he made was to establish the conviction that he had been fooled. Hence his court action.

To what extent this business of buying titles has been carried on in the Old Country is difficult to establish, because those who have been successful in purchasing titles are not going to say anything about it. They would much rather bask in the assumption that the title has been bestowed on account of some peculiar service or as a mark of outstanding national accomplishment. It is from some disgruntled suitor such as Col. Parkinson that the public must learn of the pitfalls in the path to purchased fame.

If, as is charged, there is a traffic in titles, then there is a tarnish placed on the lustre that is not pleasing.

The case of Col. Parkinson has been adjourned, but the public will be keen to watch for the next step. There will be no particular sympathy for him if he loses his suit, for he was simply trying to use the tonnage of wealth to purchase a distinction that would appease his appetite for snobbery. But the public will want to know if he was stepping in a path down which others have made a successful trip.

Canada Has Not Many Cowboys.

The steer-roping contest at Wembley, about which there has been so much comment, following the proceedings to have it stopped, caused the Toronto Star to express a half wish to see the thing.

The Calgary Herald, which, from its location in the West, should know all, or much, about such events, says the Star would be disappointed. It is not a gentle sport, the Herald admits, but adds that "it is part of the activity of the country, and it is not too rough for exhibition. It is a sturdy game, in which the steer has a good chance. We did not have it last year at the Stampede. A sport that is much more graceful, quite as thrilling, and not at all rough, which the Toronto Star might see at the Calgary Stampede, is that of calf roping. To rope a sturdy young calf, twisting, turning and speedy, is very much like throwing a lasso over a bumble bee."

The Regina Leader, another western paper, is not satisfied with the Calgary paper's attitude. It wonders what the calf would say if it had a chance to appear in court and state its case. That steer and calf roping may be part of western industry does not cause the Regina paper to concede that is the proper thing for exhibition purposes. It argues that the Spaniards do not regard bull-fighting as too rough, but it is dying out.

The Leader's objection to the sport is that it encourages "human beings to seek enjoyment in watching dumb animals made to suffer in varying degrees." Continuing, the Leader claims that slaughtering calves and steers is also a western industry, but no person would think of erecting an abattoir as an exhibition attraction.

The performance of the western cowboys at Wembley is generally admitted to have been an error in judgment. Canada has too long been pictured in the Old Land as the home of cowboys and long-horned, wild cattle, and it has not done us any good.

Note and Comment.

Hamilton is calling for tenders to re-wire the city hall. Have the wire pullers stripped the place?

The season's young yet, but teaching another fellow's wife how to swim is already a fixed outdoor sport for 1924.

One of the U.S. round-the-world flyers wires Washington that he fell and broke his floating rib. He's gone on, though, as that did not keep him from flying.

Picnic parties around here have been looking for the man who wrote, "It Ain't Goin' to Rain No More." They will receive him with an axe and a claysmore.

A film 9,000,000 feet long exploded in Newark. It was probably one of those where they leave the hero tied to a railroad track, and say, "Will Sadie arrive in time to save him? Continued next week."

London's celebration of Dominion Day was impressive and orderly. The ceremony in the park was well conducted, a pleasing spectacle of young Canada rejoicing in its national birthday.

The Democrats find it hard to select a candidate. Why don't they name Andy Gump? He's all dressed up in his election hat and no-man's collar. Moreover, he stands 100 per cent for the people, and that would be a powerful election slogan.

Reginald McKenna made an interesting comment to financiers in London who were figuring on the security they could get for a loan to Russia. It was this, "You do not know what you are talking about, or else you are bad talkers."

London despatches say that more Canadians are arriving every day for the Wembley exhibition. Pretty fair showing for a country described by Howard Smith, ex-president of the Manufacturers' Association, as being headed straight for the how-woos.

A clerk in Port Arthur forgot the combination of the vault door in the bank, and it was necessary for a gang of men to kick a hole in the side so that the day's business could be carried on. Safe crackers could have made a nearer job, and would have been glad to do it at night so as not to disturb the staff.

Sanction for branch lines of the National Railways is now reported as being so tardy that the word "crawling" is used to define the progress. Still, that's pretty fair progress to be making on a run where senators are more interested in piling ties on top of the rails than underneath them.

Vacation days are coming. The warmth of summer is creeping into the air, the spring fever is invading our bones, we find ourselves dreaming of the old swimming hole, and longing to be basking on the mountain or beating down the coast of Cape Cod before a spanking breeze.

And then—we look at our job, our prospects, our interests and our ambitions, and make up our mind to stick to business this summer.

Concerning which the best advice is—Don't. Relax.

Let go, spit on your hands, and when you take hold again you can hit harder.

But, for that matter, it's a poor plan to wait for vacation for relaxation. We ought to do some of it every day.

That man can hold hardest who knows how to let go.

Keeping everlastingly at it brings success—maybe, also, paresis. Every life needs a little vagabondage to offset the bondage.

Take a day off now and then. Stack up your papers, and if anything comes up let George do it.

Get away, and don't take anything or anybody with you.

Play Haroun Al Raschid. Poke about in little shops. Chat with the pawnbroker. Get the banana peddler's ideas.

Go down to where the shipping is. At the water's edge is always the laziest life.

Or go into the country. Sit on a log and whistle a stick.

Lean back against a tree, and listen to the universe.

Find a lake, and look long at it, and let your mind run down.

Follow a brook up the way to nowhere. You are an animal yourself.

You forget that—and come to grief. Be! Don't forever be Doing!

Slow up! Let the thundering train of progress go by, and smile as you hear its receding whistle in the distance.

Celebratin' the 1st

I dearly love a holiday when I can dodge from 'neath the strain, and sit upon a grassy mound and rest the timbers in my frame.

But every time a day off comes my conscience smites me awful hard, and causes me to steer my feet around my own untidy yard.

The carrots seemed to yell at me, likewise the beets stood in a row, and hollered, "For the love of Mike, go back in there and fetch the hoe, for weeds is choking off our breath, they're mountin' up ten inches tall, and if you don't give us a leg we won't be stayin' here at all."

'Tis then I think of shady nooks way out beside some little stream, and eatin' pickles from a pin, it seems like some sweet-scented dream.

The salmon sandwich and the cake, the cold tea and the fishin' rod, I'd figured that this happy day I'd grab at these and drop my hod.

Just then I spies potato bugs a-roostin' on my spuds galore, and my tomatoes they have worms what measure up like two by four.

So when we're faced with odds like them what is a workin' man to do, who hustles to the shop each day, his hoofs a-drippin' in the dew.

Now, could I pack my basket then and gallivant ten miles from town, a-knowin' that these bugs and worms was chewing all my fodder down?

No, I'll be blowed—now cheer at this—not one small yard from home I'll go, I grab my squirtin' can and spade, my rake, the clippers and the hoe.

I batter down the weeds for keeps, I strangle burdocks by the neck, no crawlin' bug or creepin' worm gets in a lifeboat from the wreck.

So this I honor well the day like statesmen did in days of yore, by drivin' off the weeds and bugs what came to camp around my door.—ARK.

The Fears of a Child

(From the Hamilton Herald.)
An eight-year-old Detroit boy ran away from home and kept the whole city in a state of anxiety, just because his foster mother had sent him back to school for his report card and he was unable to get it. A perfectly good reason intervened; teachers were holding a meeting when he had arrived at school and he feared to interrupt them. Yet he feared more to return to his foster mother and be scolded. So he ran away, and everyone thought a new kidnapping incident had developed.

A case like this should never occur. It is well that parents be strict with children, and that they carefully examine the alibis which boys and girls are apt to offer to explain their shortcomings. But careful examination of the little one's excuses implies a reasonable attitude toward them. Fathers and mothers should not assume that their children are always offering untruthful tales, nor take an attitude of scolding. It does not help in the formation of character, which is the main job of a parent.

BE HONEST, WOULDN'T YOU?

By WALLACE M. BAYLISS.

I'd love to be an actor.
The hero in the play.
And kiss the leading lady
Each night and make her
Or, were I not the hero.
Another part would do,
I'd like to be the juvenile
And kiss the ingenue.

But should I tire of loving
It would not make me sore
To let me be comedian
And make the people roar.
Or, were I feeling moody,
With no desire to kiss,
I'd like to be the heavy
And make the people hiss.

I'd like to be an actor.
Of that I have no doubts;
But to carry in a spear,
Or act as "outside shouts";
For every actor is a star.
Like those at night above him,
I may be great; he may be small.
But all the women love him.

"I see a sign in your display window reading: 'We gladly will remove any hat from the window.'" said the male visitor in the millinery shop.
"That is correct, sir," said the manager, expectantly.

"Would you object to bringing out that hat in the center of the window, that large purple one with the orange feathers?"

"Not at all. I shall be glad to," the manager replied. Hastily he obtained it.

"Thank you so much," exclaimed the visitor. "I don't think I could have borne walking past your store any more with that thing staring at me."

Mary Ellen replied triumphantly: "I'm going to have a doll with adenoids."

Prepare the way —before you Telephone

A MANUFACTURER who employs a Long Distance in his sales, claims that the phenomenal success of a recent "Selling by Telephone" campaign was due in no small measure to the fact that the dealers were advised in advance.

He mailed each retailer a card somewhat similar to the one printed below. Three days later he called them on a Station-to-Station basis. He was able in some cases to take advantage of the lower rates that apply from 8.30 to midnight by telephoning in the evening.

The dealers were prepared and much time was saved as in many instances they had all the needed information ready. The result was that the campaign proved in, not only from the standpoint of goods sold, but the low cost per sale.

It was a glorious day—a day of brilliant sunshine tempered with fresh, cool breezes that put a tang into the air and a zest into sport. For thousands of children, old and young, Dominion Day at Springbank will long be remembered as one of the happiest of holidays.

Varied were the programs, for it was a day of merry-making. Busy committees offered baseball, softball, football, races and novelties to satisfy the whims of all.

All roads, it seemed, led to Springbank, the beautiful. Trolleys closely following each other, were crowded with merry picnickers with bagging hampers of good things to eat. A steady stream of motors made their way to the picturesque spot, and a score of lovely lawns welcomed the thousands of visitors who came for the day.

Picnics were numbered in scores. There were Sunday school picnics, family reunion picnics, railway picnics, where knights of the road and their ladies gathered with the children to laugh and sing and play. There were large picnics and small picnics, picnics that took weeks of preparation and picnics that just naturally happened when old friends got together. Every group was a picnic. Every group was happy.

ST. JAMES' ANGLICAN.

St. James' Anglican Church annual Sunday School and congregational picnic saw 450 people present. They went home tired out with the happy memories of a wonderful day.

The rector, Rev. W. L. Armitage was a busy man.

C. S. Manning was chairman of the sports committee, and put on a variety of events that won the admiration of all present. Mrs. O. E. Hunt and her band of willing helpers provided two cars for the army of hungry picnickers, and the way the sandwiches disappeared proved appreciation.

Two baseball games were keenly contested. Mr. Gilbert's class defeated Mr. Palmer's class, 7-4, and Mr. Hessel's class defeated Mr. Haller's class 7-4 and won the pennant.

COMMITTEE SUPPORTS
CLAIMS OF DEPOSITORSWest May Build
Hudson Bay Line

Canadian Press Despatch.
 Winnipeg, July 1.—If Parliament at the present session does not make provision for the early completion of the Hudson Bay Railroad, the "On-to-the-Bay Association" is in favor of the suggestion of Sir Henry Drayton that the uncompleted line be handed over to the provinces on a "lease" "upon equitable terms." A resolution to this effect was passed yesterday at a meeting of the executive of the association.

TORNADO VICTIMS
ARE BEING BURIED

Ponderous Task At Lorain
Begins—Twenty-Four
Now Missing.

Associated Press Despatch.
 Lorain, Ohio, July 1.—Lorain began burying its dead today. The prayers for those who met death Saturday in the tornado which visited this city were said in private homes, as a majority of the churches had been demolished to the extent of being unsafe.
 The death list being out to sixty-five this morning, by the finding that men and women supposed to have been in the home, are now being sought to be alive, stayed at that figure tonight.
 The devastation in several areas was so complete, the damage so appalling and the workers for clearing away the debris so few as compared with the huge task confronting them, that county and city officials are frank in expressing the belief that more bodies will be found when the searchers had completed their task.
 At the meeting of the citizens today Governor Donahy was urged to issue a national appeal for aid, it being pointed out to him that perhaps $40,000,000 damage had been done to Lorain alone. Early estimates placed the damage at between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000.
 The list of missing jumped to 24 tonight with the issuance of an official list by the Red Cross.

HABAROVSK PEOPLE
DECRY CAPITAL CITY

Private Citizens Refused Entry
Heavy Fine Is Provided.

Associated Press Despatch.
 Harbin, July 1.—Citizens of Habarovsk, in eastern Siberia on the Amur, are unhappy over the removal of the Soviet seat of government from Chita in Transbaikalia to their city.
 The change decided upon some months ago is being carried into effect.
 The first step toward removal was the publication of an order forbidding private citizens entering the city, except on business, and in special cases where citizens are able to show documents proving necessity. Violations are punishable by a fine of $200 or three months at hard labor.
 The explanation given by the authorities is that it is necessary to provide living quarters for officials of the various government departments. There is much bitterness among residents over the corresponding reduction in space allotted them.
 The committee in charge of allotments has a right to deport such citizens as prove refractory.

Report of Banking and Commerce Committee Backs Compensation Plan.

NO RIGHT UNDER LAW

Believes Government By Inspection in 1916 Could Have Averted Disaster.

Canadian Press Despatch.
 Ottawa, July 1.—"Your committee considers that the facts brought out in the interim report submitted by Chief Justice McKeown, and the evidence therein referred to, establish that the depositors of the Home Bank have a moral claim in equity for compensation by the country on account of any loss they may suffer by reason of the failure of the Home Bank."
 This is the concluding paragraph of the report made to the House of Commons this afternoon by the banking and commerce committee in regard to the claim of the Home Bank depositors for reimbursement.
 The report opens by quoting the reference to the committee of this question by the House of Commons, and the reference of Justice McKeown's interim report. It then continues:
 "No Claim By Law."
 "Your committee consider that the facts therein brought out and the evidence therein referred to clearly establish that the depositors of the Home Bank have a claim under the law of the land for compensation by the country on account of any loss they may suffer by reason of the failure of the Home Bank. It is the opinion of your committee also of opinion that in view of the representations made to the department of finance in the years 1916 and 1918, the government of the time should have made in 1916 and 1918 an effective audit under section 56 A of the bank act, and if such an effective audit or thorough investigation into the bank's affairs had been made it would have resulted:
 "1. In the immediate liquidation of the bank or;
 "2. Its amalgamation with another bank, and that the effect would have been no loss to the depositors in 1916 or 1918."
 "Your committee have studied the evidence given before the royal commission by Sir Thomas White, who was then minister of finance, and particularly his statements in regard to the bank or;
 "Your committee have studied the evidence given before the royal commission by Sir Thomas White, who was then minister of finance, and particularly his statements in regard to the bank or;
 "Your committee have studied the evidence given before the royal commission by Sir Thomas White, who was then minister of finance, and particularly his statements in regard to the bank or;

DISPUTE CANNOT INVOLVE TREATY

Former Free State Attorney-General Gives Boundary Views.

LEGAL QUESTIONS

Associated Press Despatch.
Dublin, July 1.—Appointment of the judicial committee of the British privy council to examine the legal aspects of the naming of the Irish boundary commission, has brought forth the statement from the former free state attorney-general, Hugh Kennedy, now a member of the supreme court, that "no question of interpretation of the treaty has been or can be referred to the judicial committee so far as the government of the free state is concerned."

The work of the committee, it is pointed out, will in reality be an attempt on the part of the British government to anticipate any difficulties which might arise after its award, which will have the force of law and will probably automatically transfer various populations from one jurisdiction to another. Thorough investigation by the committee is expected to obviate any claim that the commission was not legally constituted, with a consequent demand for nullification of its award.

BRITISH SCIENTISTS COMING TO TORONTO

Typical Meeting of Famous Learned Body Will Be Held in Queen City.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, July 1.—Although the British Association for the Advancement of Science is moving 3,000 miles from home in order to meet in Toronto Aug. 6 to 13, the session here will be in every sense a typical meeting of the learned body, which has exerted during the past hundred years such a profound influence on public thought in scientific matters.

In addition to sending out a large proportion of its members to each membership, the association aims to transfer as much as possible of the atmosphere of these gatherings, which are distinct events in the history of the British Isles. Scientific apparatus and paraphernalia for the conference have already begun to arrive at the University of Toronto, where the meetings are to be held, and in the latest shipment is a set of historic flags which will be placed on exhibition at the time of the meeting.

The annual perambulations of the "B. A." are recorded on a set of silk banners presented one each year by the city visited. These are elaborate affairs, bearing a device which combines the year and place of the meeting with the name or armorial bearings of the savant who fills the office of president for the time being. Among those of special interest here is the Evans banner, commemorating the first Toronto meeting in 1897, when Sir John Evans officiated; the Rayleigh standard, presented to Lord Rayleigh as president at the first Canadian meeting at Montreal, in 1884, and the Winnipeg banner, honoring J. J. Thompson at Winnipeg in 1909.

The committee in charge of the convention at the university has allotted the task of making the banner for 1924 to the ladies, who are associated with it, and an inspection of its predecessors would indicate that the creators of the gift to Sir David Bruce will have to combine artistic talent and ability with the need.

JAPANESE RADICALS FORM NON-VOTING LEAGUE

Associated Press Despatch.
Tokyo, July 1.—A new radical party, pledged to abstain from participation in elections or the present processes of government, and calling itself the Non-Voting League, has been formed in Tokyo by a group of well-known advanced thinkers.

This group came into being shortly before the recent elections, and its members refused to take any part in the voting. The ultimate purpose of the league is to replace the present "capitalistic" system of government by proletarian rule and its weapon is simple non-cooperation.

The group includes the brilliant Dr. Sazuko Yoshino, most famous of Japanese radical writers and thinkers; Professor Isao Abe of Waseda University; Tatsui Fuso, correspondent in Moscow for the Osaka Mainichi; and the Tokyo Nichi Nichi, and Keisaya Yamasaki, a prominent attorney.

EDITOR FIGURES STATES HAS NEARLY 25,000 POETS

Associated Press Despatch.
Oakland, Cal., July 1.—Williams W. Ellsworth, a magazine editor, offered in a recent lecture at Mills College here, these observations on poetry in this country:
"There are 25 poets to every 115,000 persons. One in 5,000,000 is a real poet."
"One person in every 6,000 in the United States publishes a book of poems. Two hundred volumes of verse appear annually, and 25 of these live."
"The quality of verse in the United States has improved greatly in the last decade."

RADIO DEVICE IS GREAT SHIP AID

U. S. Mapping Ship Uses Scheme To Locate Position From the Land.

WAR WAS HELP

Associated Press Despatch.
Seattle, July 1.—Equipped with a radio position finder and a sonic depth measurer, the steamer Guide of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, which has recently entered upon the task of mapping the waters off the Pacific coast to a depth of 1,000 fathoms, was pronounced in the office of the survey here the most up-to-date vessel for her work in the world.

The devices on the Guide grew out of co-operative efforts to combat the submarine in the world war. These efforts engaged the army, the navy and many American civilian electricians. The study has been continued since the war, particularly by the coast artillery corps of the army. The sound laboratory of the bureau of standards developed the apparatus used by the Guide to determine her position.

Knowledge of the transmission of sound gained in these efforts and applied aboard the Guide enables her commander to determine her position and the depth of the water in her vicinity without leaving her radio room.

To get the position of the Guide a small T. N. T. bomb is exploded astern 20 feet under the surface of the water. This is done electrically. The sound wave set in motion by the explosion travels in enlarging circles. When this wave reaches a hydrophone (a device 60 feet under the surface of the water and about half a mile from shore, to which a cable runs) the hydrophone sends a signal ashore, and a shore station automatically sends a radio signal to the Guide.

CANARIES AGAIN SING IN BREMERHAVEN SHOPS

Town Recovering From Trade Boom Staged by American Sailors.

Associated Press Despatch.
Bremerhaven, July 1.—The canary bird trade of Bremerhaven is just getting on its feet again after having been cleaned out last summer by the officers and sailors of the U.S.S. Pittsburgh.
The Pittsburgh had a pay day while here, which was during the period of Germany's financial inflation when a dollar was worth millions and billions of marks, and a canary bird could be bought for 80 cents or less. The run on the canary bird stores started the second day the cruiser was in port. By the time the warship pulled out everybody aboard, from Rear Admiral Philip Andrews to stoker, had his own little bird and the Bremerhaven canary dealers had nothing but empty cages. Orders for new supplies were placed in several bird centers in the Herz mountain districts, but the town had been completely cleared of all songsters that it required all winter for the dealers to get their business back to normal.

INDIAN COLLEGE BOYS TRAINED FOR THE ARMY

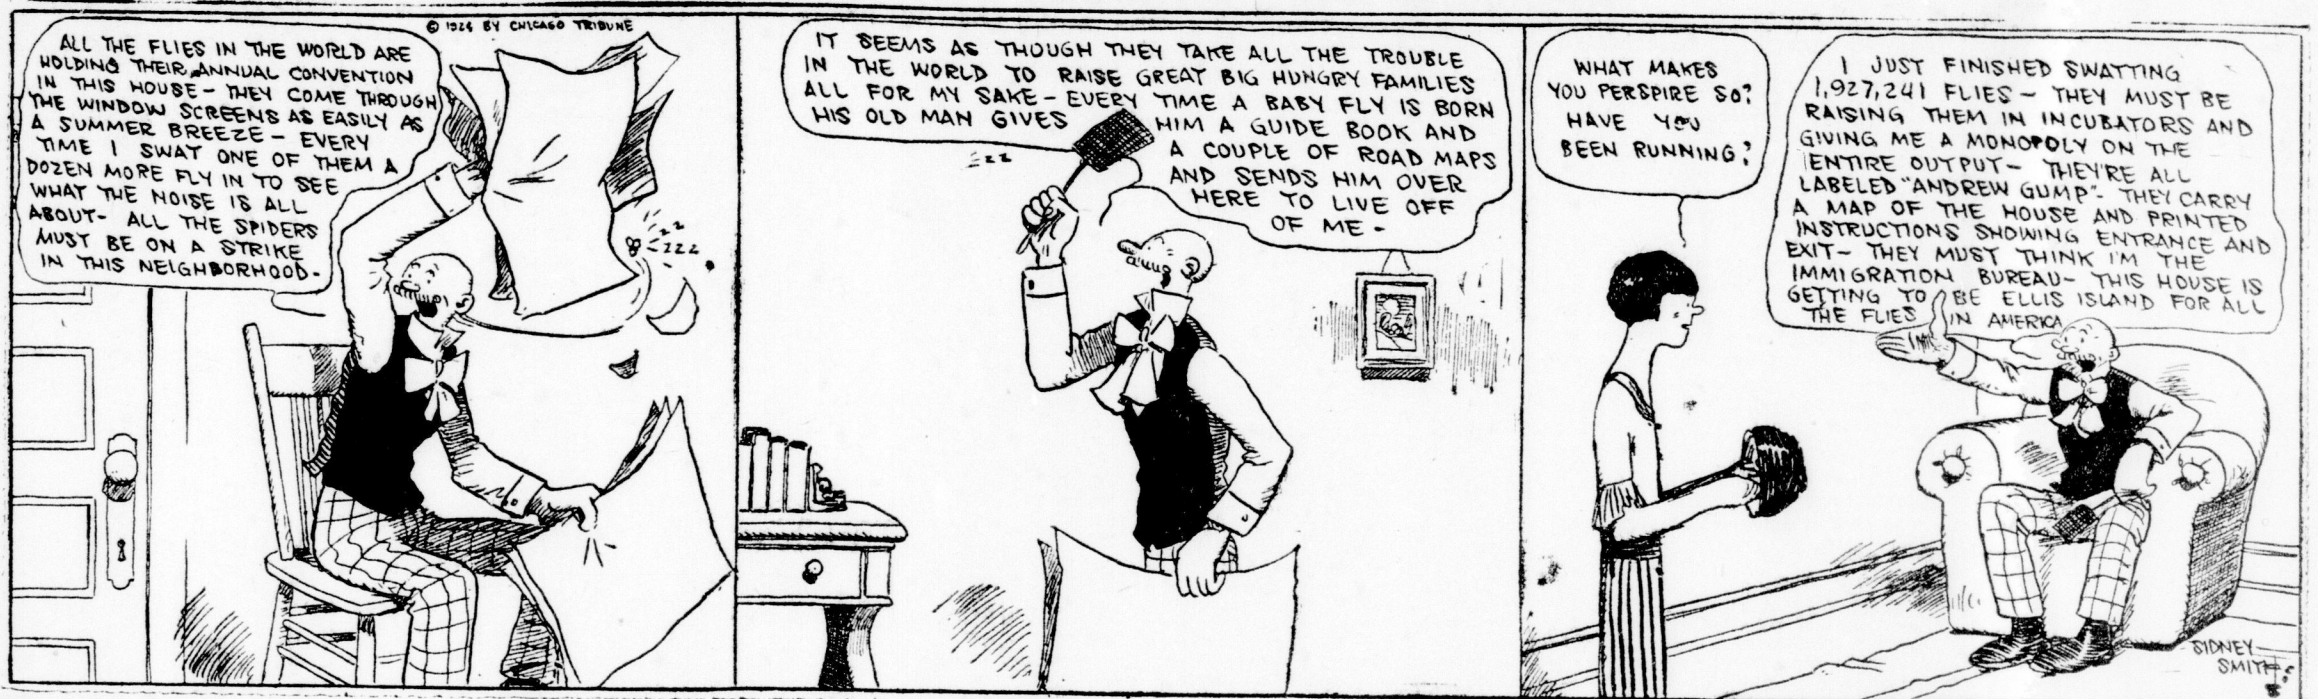

Associated Press Despatch.
Lawrence, Kan., July 1.—Thirty-seven tribes of American Indians are represented in the two Kansas National Guard units, of 80 men each, at Haskell Institute here. These are said to be the only two Indian units in the United States.
Company D of the 137th Infantry was organized at Haskell three years ago. A few days later the Haskell authorities were granted permission to organize a troop of cavalry. The infantry company won out over every competing outfit in field activities at the last Kansas National Guard encampment.

KINGSTON WAR VETERAN DROWNS AS BOAT UPSETS

Kingston, July 1.—Dick Vanaalstine, a resident of this city for the past twenty years, and a pensioner from the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, with which he served overseas, was drowned this afternoon near the high banks in the vicinity of Kingston Mills, where he had a summer cottage. It is believed that he was making his way in a small boat down the stream when the boat was accidentally upset. The coroner and a city police constable assisted in the recovery of the body.

OHIO BAKERS WILL HOLD SESSION IN LONDON
Ohio bakers, who have arranged this year to hold their annual outing at Port Stanley on July 7, coming via the Colonial from Cleveland, have arranged also for a short business meeting in London. At this meeting considerable attention will be given the bread weight law.

The local Chamber of Commerce is in communication with H. E. Trent of Toronto, president of the Canadian Bakers Association, regarding proper hospitality for the Ohio visitors. It has been suggested that a large delegation be formed of London bakers to meet the steamer at Port Stanley. This course will probably be followed, and other arrangements made for entertainment.

OTTAWA REFUSES TO CHANGE NAME

Duff Motion Is Turned Down in House by Decisive Vote.

BY MAJORITY OF 32

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, July 1.—Amid applause and with galleries again crowded, the House tonight registered its first recorded vote on the church union bill.
The division came on a motion by William Duff of Lunenburg—who has been active in opposition to the bill so to amend the title that the United Church would be known as The United Church in Canada rather than The United Church of Canada, as it appears in the bill.

The Duff amendment was defeated on this vote.
Against 30, for 52. Majority against 22.

It was a division which saw leaders of all three parties voting in the negative. On either side in the vote were members of the cabinet.

For the amendment were Hon. H.
S. Beland, Hon. Ernest Lapointe,
Hon. E. M. MacDonald, Hon. W. R.
Morrison, Hon. J. E. Sinclair and Hon. J. P. Carkin.

Premier King, Hon. George P.
Graham, Hon. E. J. MacMurray, Hon.
T. A. Low and Hon. J. James Murdock opposed the amendment.

Two members of the government—
Messrs. Motherwell and Sinclair—voted for the amendment by mistake. They rose, as the vote was announced, to record their error. The House laughed and laughed again as Speaker Lemieux, quoting rules, informed them that a vote once recorded could not be changed.

It was expected that the Duff amendment being defeated, the House would at once proceed to third reading of the bill. But there arose a difficulty. Under the rules the House has only the first hour on Tuesday evenings for private bills and the hour was already exhausted. On this ground Mr. Duff objected to the House proceeding further with the bill tonight. The speaker held that only by unanimous consent could third reading be taken. And, as unanimous consent was not forthcoming, third reading was postponed until Friday night, when the first hour is again devoted to private bills.

During the discussion Donald Suthland of South Oxford observed that disunited church would be a more appropriate name, and Mr. Martell of Hants thought that the title proposed in the bill was insulting to other churches.

PIG UPSETS AUTO, FOUR MEN HURT

One Sustains Broken Hip and Three Are Cut—Ladies
Are Shaken Up.

Special to The Advertiser.
Wallaceburg, July 1.—This afternoon at the Thomas Corner, Lambton line, an automobile, driven by Earl Milligan, in which was Fred Johnston, Harold Johnston, Stanley Bowles and his two sisters, returning from Becher, ran into a large pig which jumped into the road out of the long grass. The car was turned completely around, upset into the ditch and completely wrecked. Dr.
Richardson, Wallaceburg, and Dr.
Cathcart of Port Lambton were called and found Stanley Bowles suffering from a broken hip, Milligan cut on leg, Fred Johnston and Harold Johnston cuts on face and badly shaken up. The ladies were uninjured, yet badly shaken up. Bowles was conveyed to his home close and after further medical examination, was conveyed to Chatham General Hospital, and placed in the ditch on the opposite side of the road.

ST. THOMAS GIRL ASSAULT VICTIM

Winifred Collision Reports Being Kidnapped in Detroit.

Special to The Advertiser.
Detroit, July 1.—The case of a Canadian girl being kidnapped came to light today, when Winifred Collison, daughter of Phyllis and John Collison of St. Thomas, told the story of how she was brutally attacked by an unknown man and then abandoned on the Seven Mile road, only to be picked up by a passing motorist. She is a Michigan State telephone operator, and arrived at the home of Mrs. R. McCarthy, 6501 Mitchell street, where she lived, about 10 o'clock last night. An unknown man asked her for some street which she did not know, and then grabbing her by the throat, tossed her into a closed car. She leaves tonight in charge of her sister for London.
Detective George Simmonds, handling the case, expects to have the culprit in custody within a short time, although the girl gave a meagre description of her assailant. She is under doctor's care, owing to her nervous and hysterical condition.

WOULD-BE IMMIGRANTS TO U. S. HOLD UP TRAFFIC

Associated Press Despatch.
Montreal, July 1.—Would-be emigrants to the United States who have been waiting in Montreal for a chance to cross the line, after the new American law become effective July 1, surged around the United States immigration offices here today and forced officials to call police to break the jam that was holding up traffic.
Some of those dispersed by the police had spent twelve hours on the steps of the immigration building and the sidewalk in front of it.

Of the three ball games played, the game between the Favorite Knits of Cleveland and the London Browns was the most exciting, and drew the largest number of spectators. Knits won 25 to 10.

The Favorite Knits are well known in London through the medium of their basketball team, which played the London Shamrocks many times last winter. None of the girls that are members of the basketball team were playing today as they were taking part in a mix on the other side today.

The Knits played a very steady game, but two players, Evelyn Poduska and Tilly Valus, outshone the others. Evelyn, who pitched for the visitors, showed up at her best sides demonstrating wonderful ability as a pitcher. Tilly, besides getting a hit each time at bat, pulled off several spectacular plays.

In the other softball game played in the afternoon the Molly-O's defeated the N.O.U. from St. Thomas 18-1. This is a new venture for the N.O.U. and the reason the score was so one-sided was because the team had only practiced together three times and this was their first attempt.

In the afternoon the Molly-O's defeated the N.O.U. from St. Thomas
18-1. This is a new venture for the N.O.U. and the reason the score was
so one-sided was because the team
had only practiced together three times and this was their first attempt.

SEVENTH DEFEAT FOR LABOR PARTY

MacDonald Government Again
Loses Vote On Finance
Bill Amendment.

Associated Press Despatch.
London, July 1.—For the seventh time since coming into office, the MacDonald Labor government was defeated in the House of Commons today on a Conservative motion to amend the finance bill on a minor point in the committee stage. The amendment, which was supported by the Liberals, in spite of Chancellor Snowden's opposition, was carried by 220 to 169.

Stanley Baldwin, the Conservative leader, immediately moved to adjourn the discussion, contending there had been an immemorial custom to regard defeat in the L. & P. S. stage of a finance bill as of some consequence. Austin Chamberlain (Conservative) contended that the House should adjourn until it was known whether the government accepted the decision or not, and, in the event of acceptance, to learn if possible how many defeats they could accept without feeling bound to treat an adverse vote as a vote of non-confidence.

Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, replied that the government would consider the matter, and in the meantime the amendment was allowed to stand. Mr. Baldwin's motion was defeated by 227 to 165, the Liberals voting with the government. It is believed that the defeat will not lead to serious consequences.

FOUR MEN KILLED IN MINE EXPLOSION

Several Others Are Injured by Blast—Rescue Easily
Effectuated.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Stellarton, N.S., July 1.—Four men were killed and several injured when the explosion occurred yesterday afternoon in the Allan shaft at the coal works of the Acadia Coal Works here. Seventy-four men were in the shaft when the explosion occurred, and all had not been accounted for until midnight, when the bodies of four dead men were brought out.

Several men were injured and dead, but when discovered were in fairly good condition.

One of the rescue party discovered an old unused passage leading to the passage where the explosion occurred, and by cutting through a thin partition of earth was able to effect a rescue of the survivors much quicker than if they had been forced to clear away the fallen debris.

The redistribution committee held a session Monday evening, but did not reach a conclusion. The main difficulties are due to the fact that the redistribution committee will be unanimous, but it is understood that the government will endeavor to bring about a redistribution bill through the present session.
