Hatred Is a Poor Weapon.

W. S. Haney, M.L.A. for West Lambton, has thrown himself into the political fight in that riding on behalf of R. V. Lesueur, M.P., the Conservative nominee. Mr. Haney is young, has a forceful style of delivery, but is causing the Conservatives no small amount of worry about the way in which he gives vent to some of his convictions, if they can be classed as such.

He was a speaker at a meeting at which Sir Henry Drayton was the chief attraction, and at the conclusion of a vitriolic attack on the prime minister turned to the chairman and stated:

"In fact, Mr. Chairman, I hate Mackenzie King."

It is regrettable that Mr. Haney has allowed himself to be so far removed from the field of logic and reason that he seeks to appeal to the voters on the basis of personal hatred. No doubt he felt that he was speaking in the presence of Sir Henry Drayton, who had been minister of finance and had seen much of public life, so it was necessary for him to say something very unusual and very startling. Even that does not excuse the statement, nor does his youth and inexperience.

In this way Mr. Haney has destroyed his usefulness in this campaign. A man who brings hatred into public life and boasts of it cannot possibly reason things out according to common sense. There is a growing desire on the part of voters to have clear facts placed before them; whether or not they agree with a speaker, an audience will listen to a man who speaks with sincerity born of conviction, and who can bring logic to bear on his position. But when he forsakes this ground and makes his appeal in passion and hatred, he forfeits at once his right to a fair hearing. He cannot carry conviction because his outlook is warped and his premises and conclusions are bigoted and biased. Thus, failing to carry conviction, his usefulness in a campaign ceases.

Mr. Haney could very well pause to consider the direction in which he is going; his political friends would be doing the young man a kindness by relieving him of further campaign work until he emptied himself of his venom. We would suggest that Mr. Haney read the last speech given by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Western Ontario, when he was speaking to a body of young Liberals. The old chief in his long career had possibly seen instances where young men mistook hatred and bias for candor and logic. Toward the close of his remarkable utterance he said:

"If you will permit me, after a long life, I shall remind you that already many problems rise before you; problems of race division, problems of creed differences, problems of economic conflict, problems of national duty and national aspiration. Let me tell you that for the solution of these problems you have a safe guide, an unerring light, if you remember that faith is better than doubt, and love is greater than hate."

Two Street Railway Policies

Mayor Wenig's statement of policy on the street railway issue consists of two chief points. The first is that he would have the city approach the street railway company with terms. The second is that these terms should be either purchase or a new franchise, and to choose between the two he wishes the ratepayers of the city to vote in December on a ballot containing the following three questions:

1. Are you in favor of purchasing the street railway at a price of $1,255,000?
2. Are you in favor of purchasing the street railway by arbitration?
3. Are you in favor of granting a new franchise for fifteen years with the option of purchase by the city any one year during that period?

This is a new statement but not a new policy. With one minor change, it is the same policy which was proposed to the city council one year ago and rejected almost unanimously by that body as contrary to the city's interest. The objections to it remain the same. They may be summarized as follows:

1. It places the city in the unfavorable position of soliciting the company which is admittedly outwitting the spirit of its present contract with the city.

2. It leaves only a choice between purchase or granting a new franchise, with no possibility of action for those who at present wish neither of these courses.

3. It is an open admission that the city's present case is hopeless and a surrender of by-law 916 and the terms which it stipulates. The alternative to this policy is presented by Ald. Frank McKay, chairman of the finance committee. Ald. McKay believes that the company must submit its proposals to the city and that the city must remain determined to have the company acknowledge the city's rights in the present contract. Until circumstances bring about this condition Ald. McKay would permit the street railway to continue on its present basis of operation, a policy which the railway company is apparently anxious to avoid.

It has been said that bylaw 916, the present contract, full of holes and can not be enforced. This is to be true, and assuming from experience that the company is willing to take advantage of this misfortune, other means remain. A bus company is willing to provide the service for South London which the street railway should, but refuses to give. The bus experiment deserves a fair trial, as does any other expedient which will strengthen the city's position. In short, the city has everything to gain and nothing to lose by seeking such means. The company, inversely, is likely to find an increasingly unfavorable position as time goes on.

There are probably few people in London who wish resort to violent measures with the street railway company or who wish to see the company receive less than its just and fair deserts. The proper and reasonable attitude appears to be that the company must admit and be governed by its contract with the city, subject to modifications required by present necessities. Not a surrender of that contract but a determination to preserve it is the policy which the city should pursue.

Social Life and Clothes in Schools.

Those responsible for the conduct of secondary education in Toronto feel that it has become necessary for them to curtail the amount of time spent on social activities. One principal went so far as to say that he did not favor even one school dance, "because the preparation for such an event occupied the attention of students for weeks to the detriment of their scholastic progress." So there is going to be a stricter regime in the Toronto colleges.

No doubt the reason for this is that the social side of school life had been overdone. The same problem, perhaps in a slightly different form, is apparent in London, and has led several of the trustees to declare themselves in favor of a plan that would regulate the style of dress worn, during school hours. They have felt that some of the scholars were overdoing it, and that others whose parents were not in a position to maintain a similar standard felt the contrast.

The mother of five children expressed a view on this point that is worth noting. As long as her children went to public school she could afford to dress them, because all the children there were from the same district, and most of them came from average homes where there was the same need for economy and simplicity. When the two older girls went to collegiate she found it necessary to dress them better because the other girls going there from various sections of the city were wearing better clothing than her children had at public school. This meant an added tax on the family purse, because, as this mother expressed it, "perhaps foolishly, I want my girls to be dressed as well as the rest." So she found herself drawn into a competition that she did not desire and which she could not afford.

The Galt Reporter in a recent issue used a very apt phrase in describing what it considered the proper outlook of those receiving secondary education, when it urged them "to remain simply boys and girls while they are in collegiate classes." Teachers know very well what the problem is, but only to a limited degree can they handle it. They can regulate the extent of social activity centered in a school, and keep it within bounds so that it does not obscure the more serious business of training students for their life's work. Parents can do even more than teachers by wise counsel that will eliminate competition in dress and prevent any hurt to the feelings of those whose parents wisely recognize the necessity of economy in the outfit for their children's school clothing.

Come and See It.

The business of promptly and accurately giving the public the news in a graphic way is being well demonstrated at The Advertiser office during the world's baseball series. On a platform in front of the office is erected the back-ground of a baseball diamond. When a ball is pitched the sphere on the board moves; what happens to it is at once recorded on the board; if it is struck the ball goes to the location where it has been hit on the field of actual play.

Discs show exactly where each runner is on the bases; if he is put out it is shown immediately. Radio equipment in The Advertiser office picks up each play as it is announced on the ground where the game is in progress, and the spectators here know almost instantly each play that has been made.

The Advertiser invites its readers to come down in the afternoon, Sunday excepted, and watch this method of reporting these great ball games. The only drawback is that we cannot provide seats, but then the performance is absolutely free here, which is some recompense for the price that would have to be paid for a seat at the place where the games are played.

Note and Comment.

A young man got his first job in London this week, and worked harder than any other person around the premises. This was real fire prevention.

The woman who adorns herself with a string of glass beads no doubt sympathizes with her New York sister who was robbed of a $750,000 necklace.

Manitoba Free Press: "Some of those politicians who tell us the country is going to the dogs are often just cute enough to own quite a bunch of hounds."

Patrons in a New York restaurant handed over $12,000 to bandits one night, while they secured only $200 from the till. You see, the customers had only arrived.

Wasn't it just a trifle contrary that the Massey-Harris Company should select another Liberal, Joseph N. Sheenstone, as president to succeed Hon. Vincent Massey?

The manner in which workers and canvassers are coming forward and offering their services for the E. S. Little campaign in London is the best evidence of what these people think of the candidate and the policies he has enunciated. It is this willingness to work that wins elections.

Getting Trained

There's experts in the land today, they're training at our boys and men, a different style than when I dwelt upon lot four, concession ten.

There's experts in the land today who teach us how to jump and run, they specialize in circus stunts and thrill the aged and the young.

And they are telling us likewise how children need such training too, and so they herd them in a row and show them just what things to do. If little Johnnie's kind of weak they make him exercise a spell, and build a muscle on his arm and keep on getting strong and well.

Perhaps the way we're living now makes antics needed such as these, to straighten out each crooked spine and stiffen little wobbly knees.

No doubt it's right that we should have these experts camping in the land, to show them how to track their feet and how to run and sit and stand.

Yet I can't help think back a spell to days what's gone to come no more, when I was dwelling as a lad upon lot ten, concession four.

'Twas then we got our exercise in simple ways and plenty too, and on our framework sinew dwelt, great lumps of heavy muscle too. And we took exercise all right to drive the poison from our pores, and most of it as I recall we gathered up when out of doors.

But even then there was a man to give direction to the cause, and see that we observed the rules, and noted all the standin' laws.

And that director was my dad, a kindly soul as boy could knock, directin' of me now and then and pointin' out the way to go, and I recall the rules he had, he'd beckon to his little son, and tell him how to demonstrate just how that bucksaw should be run.

25 Years Ago Today

(From The Advertiser, Oct. 10, 1900)

An appreciable difference in the height of the water in the river has been made by the completion of the dam at Springbank.

There are 95 pupils attending the London normal school, which was opened this spring.

The flag on the clubhouse of the London Rowing club is flying at half-mast out of respect to the memory of the late G. D. Sutherland, who was an officer of the club.

Application has been made to the license commissioners by William and James Hunter for the transfer of the tavern license of the Grand Central hotel, corner Ridout and King streets, to F. E. I. Patton.

H. J. Pettypiece, M.P.P., of Forest, was in the city yesterday.

Detroit London old boys had a well attended meeting at the Hotel Renaud there on Monday night to organize for the winter months. Those following were elected as officers of the association: President, Dr. F. B. Leys; vice-president, J. S. Jennings; treasurer, G. E. Wilson; secretary, Charles Sullivan; delegates to the international association, J. W. Burriss, A. Lashbrook; executive committee, J. D. McPherson, C. L. Sanagan and John Thomas.

To the Editor

Vote On Cadets.

London Woman Does Not Believe That Council Should Decide Matter Without Opinion of the People.

Sir—The reason the council did not allow the vote on cadet training to go to the people was they were sure it would be voted out, and rightly so. If the boys of the city can not be many except they have a uniform on their backs and a gun across their shoulders—well it does not appear as if their training in the home and schools was of much value.

Dean Tucker at the meeting of the council made the remark that the Prince of Peace had not yet arrived, and that there was much unrest in eastern countries and it would be a shame if British subjects did not give aid when necessity arose. In the same breath he declared that the cadets are not a militaristic body. How does he reconcile the two statements?

The ratepayers should take steps and have legislation passed by the government that not a dollar should be spent except by the vote of the ratepayers. EAST END MOTHER.

Editorial Opinion

LONDON'S EXPERIENCE.

(From the Peterborough Examiner.)
 LONDON is one Canadian city in which fire prevention has been tackled in a progressive manner by means of an organization of businessmen and civic heads known as the fire chief's cabinet, which has been doing splendid things in making London safer from a fire standpoint.

Between Jan. 29 and March 18 of this year the cabinet had 1,317 premises inspected, of which 612 were to be found in good condition.

In 705 cases orders and instructions were served on owners or occupants requiring hazardous conditions to be remedied, and subsequent inspection proved the instructions were being carried out.

The inspection work was only a starting point. A thorough survey was made of the community's fire alarms, water distribution and fire-fighting systems, and recommendations made to the council.

As a result of what has already been accomplished, London, which had a bad fire record, is becoming rapidly "fire safe."

POOR LITTLE RICH BOY.

(From the Glasgow Herald.)

IT IS the youthful Duke of Norfolk to whom American visitors have given the title of "The Poor Little Rich Boy." They cannot understand why a youth of 17, who has inherited property valued at twenty millions sterling, should be kept in an ordinary house, instead of a castle, and should be limited in pocket-money and in his recreations. The 17-year-old son of an American millionaire would probably have everything his heart desired. In Britain, however, the holder of an ancient title is brought up to a sense of the responsibility of riches, and the Duchess of Norfolk is, very wisely, training her boy in a way that will insure that he shall be worthy of his honored title, and that the income of the estate shall be carefully conserved until he comes of age.

The City—and Home Again

By Mackellar McArthur

Out on the farm near Appin, in Ekfrid township, where Peter McArthur lived and worked and wrote his wholesome philosophies of Canadian life, his son, Mackellar McArthur, is carrying on in the double pride of being a Canadian and a farmer.

The Farm, Ekfrid, Oct. 9.—Winter with its daily routine of chores, the seed time and harvest slipped by in their seasonal order. Fall with its seedings and final garnerings was half gone before the necessity came for me to pay a visit to the city. All year I had been busy attending to each different day's work. Occasionally I thought that it was about time I spent a day or two in town, but I could think of no particular need for making the trip. A few days ago the necessity did arise and I turned a grateful team out to pasture, boarded the morning train and in an hour I was in town.

Before going many blocks I found myself passing nearly every person walking in the same direction. A farmer is supposedly a plodder, for he is more accustomed to walking behind a harrow or a plow than on a sidewalk. But no matter how often I checked my rate of speed I was soon going again, full steam ahead.

City Has Strange Smells. Then my nose began to register. I was in an atmosphere of strange smells, and my nose sought to define each one; whiffs of concentrated perfume, of strange tobacco, of cooked food from grills and restaurants, of burnt gasoline, and unnumbered other undefined odors. The country is not without its odors and smells, some fragrant, some flagrant, but I was acquainted with them all. Those of the city were strange and they tended to bewilder me.

I found the city much as I had expected to find it, the same crowd of strange faces, the same bustle, the same interesting store windows. After my business had been attended to I walked around for an hour before meeting a friend and going to an engaged play. Before another two hours had passed I was wheeling the final two miles home. The wind blew in my face and soothed a headache caused, undoubtedly, by too much smoking. Then home and supper and I stepped out on the level. There was the smell and feel of rain in the warm, southeast wind which made the shadows dance in the moonlight. Over everything there was peace and a wonderful quiet. For a few minutes I seemed alone, then I heard the strident rhythm of the crickets and the soft splash and thud as an apple, "waxing over-mellow," fell to the earth.

What the Country Means. I saw more clearly why the country meant so much to me. Around me, every day, as I work there is the endless inspiration of growth, and the marvel of the ripening grain and fruit. I see on every side the results of my own labor, and feel the joy and satisfaction of knowing that I am doing something essential to the life of the nation.

I am not so foolish as to think that every man or woman is suited to farm life, or that the city is unnecessary. But I do think that a life on the farm is the heritage of every Canadian, and I know that there is happiness and contentment in the country for those who seek to understand it and who are not afraid of the days of physical labor which are but part of the price we pay for the rewards which are ours.

Mutual Investments Help Men Sleep at Night

THE MUTUAL LIFE OF CANADA has had the benefit of shrewd, far-sighted counsel in the placing of its investments. Government bonds, Municipal bonds and debentures and such securities form a very large proportion of the total investments of the Company. Many of these, purchased during the war period and its aftermath, will yield high interest for long terms to come.

The strength of these selected investments means absolute security for Mutualists. The profitable income they assure lowers the cost of Mutual insurance, because under the Mutual principle, the entire net profits are paid back to policyholders.

Let us send you the Mutual Book which explains in full detail.

Time Payments on General Motors cars

WE take pleasure in announcing important reductions in time payment charges on General Motors cars—notwithstanding the fact that General Motors charges have always been extremely low.

The important thing to the purchaser is the total cost of a car. The time payment charge is a part of such total cost when the car is bought on time. These reductions therefore mean, in such instances, a substantially lowered total cost.

It is the policy of General Motors to pass on to the car purchaser economies wherever effected—in financing as well as in engineering, manufacturing or merchandising operations.

The purchase of a car out of income is a universally accepted practice. Six years ago General Motors organized the General Motors Acceptance Corporation (GMAC) to make credit available at the lowest possible cost to purchasers of General Motors cars.

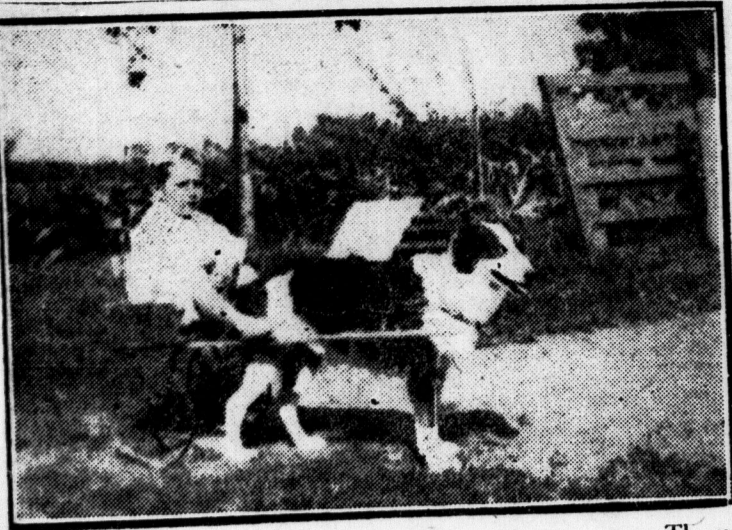

The standard time price of any General Motors car is the cash delivered price, plus only new GMAC charge.

MME. DE LOZINA EXPLAINS RUSSIA THE GREAT DREAMER

Tells How a Nation of Ideals Failed in a Practical Crisis.

AT CANADIAN CLUB

Just the truth about Russia. The beauty and the tragedy of it. This is what Mme. C. Liubeck de Lozina Lozinsky brought vividly before the Women's Canadian club in the course of her address yesterday afternoon.

"When the Bolsheviks came into power in 1917," declared the speaker, "the entire educational system was changed. Boys and girls were put into the same classes, and the main object of the instruction given them was to make them communists."

"Special courses warring against religion were instituted. The children were taught that the laws of nature, the higher than the principals of religion, and that they must not be Christians, but just perfect beasts. You know it is much easier to encourage bad instincts in children than good ones. The result has been that children coming from the finest families are learning to steal. They told that anybody's property is the property of all. And so it has been going on."

"Students of sculpture must spend part of their time learning to be blacksmiths, and so on. Culture is frowned upon. Children of laboring men may enter college without examination, while very stiff tests are required of the children of men who do not work with their hands, but with their brains."

"The Russian before the war was a dreamer," she said. "We would go out into our gardens and read and dream by the hour. And because we stayed on the earth so much, we were much acting. And that was bad for Russia. For our dreaming all ended with the revolution. And our beautiful, happy days were all gone. Our most cultured men were dreamers. A few years at university was considered nothing to them and they were not prepared to spend a whole lifetime in academic study and dreams."

"This was very wrong. There should have been a new way of thinking, not a new way of dreaming. But there was no such law and many, going there as young students, would stay on and dream the years, dreaming and dreaming. And especially did they dream about politics. And all the time they were trying to put their ideals into practice. And our teachers encouraged us to dream."

"Those of us who went on to university were taught there theoretical things rather than practical things. That's why we were not prepared to look in the eye of real life, so had such a hard time when the revolution came."

"It was not the thing for women of the nobility to go to high school and university. But my father was a very broad-minded man, and so I was allowed to go to high school and university. (Mme. Anna de Lozina's father was the late William I. de Schteglitoff, minister of justice in the czar's cabinet and later president of the imperial council. He was also first professor of criminal law in the law school of Petrograd. He was imprisoned by the Bolsheviks and killed by their hand in 1918.)"

"In contrast to the old happy life in Russia, when education was disseminated by dreamers to dreamers, Mme. Anna de Lozina told of the present educational systems in Russia. In 1914, five million Russian children were attending school, and this was four times the number which attended school a decade before that time. Today, under the Bolshevik system, with all its promises, only two and a half million children are in attendance at school."

"When the Bolsheviks came into power in 1917," declared the speaker, "the entire educational system was changed. Boys and girls were put into the same classes, and the main object of the instruction given them was to make them communists."

"Special courses warring against religion were instituted. ## QUARTERLY BOARD OF V. O. N. MEETS

Miss M. Duffield Gives Report of Work and Also Child Welfare Conference.

A splendid report on the work being done by the V. O. N. was given yesterday afternoon by Miss Margaret Duffield at the quarterly board meeting of the Victorian Order. Her report covered the activities of the nurses during the past four months, and showed that, though the work to a great extent had been preventative and instructive, many calls had been made and much assistance given those needing the attention of the nurses.

Miss Duffield also interestingly reported on the session of the child welfare association held last week in Ottawa which she attended. She stated that the work being done by this organization was not only interesting but instructive.

Yesterday's meeting was the first to be held in the new nurses' residence on Horton street. Fred Landon, the president, occupied the chair, and in a few remarks he pointed out the comforts of the new home. Many of the furnishings of the residence, in fact almost all of them, had been donated by members of the board and a few interested friends. The V. O. N. headquarters were now not only central but also comfortable. He pointed out, however, that there was still need for other furnishings and hoped that they would soon be donated to the same.

A plea for clean linen and cotton has also been made by the nurses, as their supply is diminishing very fast. They will be glad of any donations from friends and ask that they be left at the office on Horton street.

Dr. Ferguson, recently appointed to the board as medical advisor to fill the vacancy left by Dr. Hill, was present and spoke briefly, commending the nurses and board members on the work being done.

At the conclusion of the meeting the nurses served afternoon tea.

talk of the crime for which Garrison had been convicted.

Val Haines, who had been so positive that Garrison could not make good his escape, sat on a gill box and whittled as the afterglow faded over the lake. Cap'n Needham stood with folded arms and watched night come, a fine figure of a man, with bushy white hair, a smooth-shaven face, hands gnarled from forty years on and about the water, eye steady and clear from a lifetime of gazing into clean distances.

From out on the lake, where a wisp of white mist lay, came the sounds of a guitar softly played, and once when the gentle breeze came toward them it brought the sound of a girl's voice, singing sweetly. Haines stopped whittling and clicked his knife shut with something like impatience in his manner.

Three men who had been standing near by without taking any part in the general conversation stirred themselves. They started to walk toward the eastward, the taller, who was unusually tall, in the lead, the next in stature immediately behind him, and the third, who was not more than five feet six, in the rear.

"Good-night, Brothers," said Ezra. "Good-night, Cap'n Needham," returned the taller.

"Cap'n Needham, echoed the second.

"Needham," mumbled the shorter one.

Others departed until none was on the beach except the old man and Haines. Needham gazed out beyond the docks and cocked his head to catch again the faint sounds of music.

"Janet's staying late," he said. "She'll be going away soon, and she likes the evenings on the water." The other grunted. "Well, I think I'll turn in, Val."

SPINDRIFT

An Adventure of the Great Lakes

By HAROLD TITUS

INSTALLMENT 7.

The village of Fairport straggles along the shore of the Garden Peninsula just before that land reaches its extremity in Point Detour, on one side of which rolls Lake Michigan and on the other Green Bay. There are perhaps a score of houses under the balsams, scattered along half a mile of shore line, and in front of itself rest the weather-beaten net houses and docks of the fishing rigs.

Under those cedars on fair summertime evenings the village gathers. Everyone, from Cap'n Ezra Needham himself down to the youngest toddler in any of the homes, appears there, the children playing noisily during the interval between supper and bedtime and the older ones to gossip or argue or yarn.

Usually the group is loosely knit and the talk most casual, because the Fairport men are hard workers and evening brings relaxation, but tonight the children played alone while the men stood closely about Cap'n Needham who read aloud from the Esplanade newspaper which had been delivered by the mail carrier only an hour before.

The cap'n had had other mail. For instance, he had received returns for a shipment of fish which were small enough to provoke the usual growling of the underpaid producer; also, he had opened and read a letter from a man in Racine, son of an old friend, who had promised to come and go to work as wheelman of the cap'n's tug Wanderer, saying that he had changed his mind. This was of consequence to Ezra, as he had been working short-handed for weeks, waiting for that man. But this and other matters were relatively unimportant compared to the news item which the cap'n had just finished reading aloud to the group of silent fishermen.

"Well, they'll get him," said a tall man with a sailor's visored cap set rakishly on his well-poised head. "There's not a chance in the world for him to make a clean get-away."

"No, I guess not," said old Ezra, as he folded the newspaper. "Haines, you and I come pret' near been witnesses in that case, didn't we?"

"Maybe you did," the tall man responded. "I wasn't there when it happened, you'll remember."

"That's right, Val, here, and I had gone up to Marquette that week," Needham explained to one who stood near him. "That was just a little while after my old tug burned, and I certainly was in a bad way. I'd been ruined for sure if I hadn't got a bargain in the Wanderer up there. I took Haines with me to do some work on her because I wasn't acquainted with anybody in Marquette's crowd."

"We got her fitted, but Val decided he wanted to try something else besides fishing and so I sent back for one of the Brothers to help him bring her around. That's right, Val: You pulled out the afternoon before the killing, didn't you? I mind our watching the yacht come to anchor. The crew landed just above us. You talked to some of 'em, I recall."

"Yeah," Val Haines nodded, his head "And that night old Thornberg got his."

"He did," Ezra frowned. "That was a brutal murder, and I've never felt sure from the beginning of the trial that they got and convicted the man who did the work."

"Man who did it?" Haines's scuffing comment was explosive. "I'd like to know what more evidence anybody'd want than they had against that man! Didn't he have the gun that killed Thornberg and the money stolen from Thornberg on him?"

"Yes, there was strong evidence. I'll admit. I never saw the man, but from what I read in the papers, and that loss of his memory, now, there might've been something to it. I never did like to see a man's liberty taken away on circumstantial evidence."

"You got the right man," Haines said, positively. "You're a little chicken-hearted, Cap'n. If I like the old man shrugged and his blue eyes winked.

"Meby," he said. "Meby it is, but somebody's the sea of a of seemse pretty tough to me."

"No more'n he deserved," growled Haines. "He's out now, but you can bet they'll get him again. You can leave it to Bart to do his share if the fellow's come this way."

"You bet," assented another in the group. "Bart's a darned lively sort of man."

They spoke of Bart McManus, the sheriff, who, with a deputy, had only been gone from Fairport a short time after warning the village to be on the lookout for Garrison.

That had been the first news of the escape and the country-wide search to reach the rather isolated village. The newspaper which Ezra received had given them added detail and now the group broke up, some leaving, others remaining to looks at me the way he did back then? Then his body couldn't?"

Haines spoke. "No use being too soft-hearted," he said brusquely. "I've never seen any man any dumb thing that needed killin'. I'll do it. Wait till I get my gun."

He went out, with a word for someone who stretched the net house. Garrison looked up as this other stepped into the mellow rays of the lantern.

It was a girl. He saw first her hair, like plaited gold, bound closely about her head, and then her eyes, wide and blue. Her throat was very white against the dark sweater she wore, and her hands were long and slender. Under one arm she carried a guitar.

"What's the matter, father?" she asked quickly.

The old man moved toward her, making it a point to screen sight of Taffy's body.

"Janny," he said, with an obvious effort at self-control, "Taffy's been hurt. He got hit by a car and his back is hurt. Haines has just gone for his gun." Pause. "It's the best thing for him."

The girl's lips tightened. She did not reply, but her father seemed to know what she intended to do when she leaned her guitar against the door.

"Don't think you'd better, Janny. It's no use, and you'd remember how his eyes looked."

"Don't be foolish, father. I'd have to reply, but he's good-bye, wouldn't he?" Her voice caught a trifle. "And Taffy—our friend, isn't he?"

The cap'n stepped aside, and the girl went to the net house where the dog lay and stooped beside him.

"Taffy? Know me, old fellow?" Her voice was light and sweet, and very glad indeed.

She stretched out her white, slender hands for the dog's head. After a moment the warm lotion came to his eyes. Then the dog's eyes opened and he closed his eyes, breathing rapidly.

For a moment they remained so, the two men watching the girl who touched the dog's head in a touch of friendly assurance. Before any of them moved or spoke footsteps coming at a run sounded outside. The men turned as Haines entered, an automatic pistol in his hand.

"Ready?" he asked.

The cap'n nodded. Janet rose without a word or a look at any of them, picked up her car and walked out into the darkness.

The three lifted Taffy, trying their best to be gentle with him. The dog moaned as his weight settled to Haines' arms, but when Ezra's hand cupped his nose in a brief farewell he opened his pleading, soft eyes again and seemed to be trying to waggle his tail.

Haines carried Taffy out. The cap'n extinguished the lantern. He stood in the doorway beside Garrison until the one shot sounded from down on the beach. Then he sighed and said:

"Now, that's over." Relief was in his voice.

"They waited for Haines to return, saying no more, but through Carl's eyes Garrison's mind was running for a moment. He was sure of his presence in the locality, his reason for going on—because he must go on. He had helped Taffy, now he needed to help himself.

The automobile was coming down the road, and as Haines swung its light to the net house, the car approached rapidly.

Carl's pulse quickened in measure. He was in danger now, he must be gone, and yet he could not leave without excuse. His appearance associated with hasty departure might excite suspicion.

The driver of the machine brought it to a halt. Needham moved a few paces forward and Carl, for no reason at all, followed him.

"That you, Cap'n?" a man called, getting out of the car.

"Yes, Oh, hello, sheriff! Back so soon?"

WEDDINGS

NIXON—BREWER.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Brewer, 1 Broughdale avenue, was the scene of a pretty wedding this afternoon, when their youngest daughter, Vera Isabel, became the bride of Mr. George Allan Nixon, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Nixon of Brick street. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Capt. Edwards of the Robinson Memorial church.

At 3 o'clock the bride entered the living-room on the arm of her father and took her place beside the groom under an arch of asparagus fern and white satin streamers, in the center of which was hung a white bell. The wedding music was played by Miss Eleanor Clark, who wore a smart gown of blue canton crepe. The bride's lovely gown was of white georgette, delicately brocade in gold leaves. It was fashioned with a yoke and tiny sleeves, with the skin tending from the high waist line. The hem and sleeves were marked with crystal beads. Her wedding veil, worn previously by her two sisters, was made in an old style and held in place by a bandeau of lily of the valley and pearls, and her flowers were a shower bouquet of valley lilies and Ophelia roses.

Miss Anna Brewer was her sister's bridesmaid. She was smartly gowned in sand canton crepe with heavy lace trimmings, and wore a bandeau to match. She carried an arm bouquet of deep pink roses. Two winsome flower girls were the little Misses Hilda McCormick, niece of the groom, and Jean Smith, daughter of the bride. They were trocked in pale blue and carried baskets of flowers. Mr. Robert Nixon was his brother's best man.

Following the ceremony Miss Irene McIntyre played a pleasing violin solo.

The bride's mother was gowned in black canton crepe, heavily beaded and the groom's mother was also in black crepe.

A buffet lunch was served in the dining-room, where the bride's cake centered the table. Later the bride and groom left on a motor trip to Buffalo and through New York state.

The bride travelled in a smart navy blue serge coat, with bonus waist band and hat to match. She also wore the groom's gift, a lovely fox fur.

On their return to the city, Mr. and Mrs. Nixon will reside on Brick street.

McKillop—Horton.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Horton, Lynhurst, St. Thomas, was the scene of a lovely wedding this afternoon, when their daughter, Frances Isabel, became the bride of Mr. Vernon Archibald McKillop of this city, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald McKillop of Farley Place, St. Thomas. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Martin of the First United church, St. Thomas, before the immediate friends and relatives of the bride and groom.

The house was prettily decorated with palms, ferns and pink and white cosmos and sweet peas, the ceremony taking place before a mantle in the living-room, banked with palms, ferns and pink and white cosmos.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a winsome ivory duchess satin, enriched with pearl trimmings. It was fashioned with a court train, lined with pink georgette and showing an ornamentation of the pearls. The bridal veil of Brussels lace was made in the new cap effect, and the bride's flowers were a shower bouquet of white and pink roses and lilies of the valley.

Master Franklin Begg, made a quaint train-bearer in smart white satin suit, while little Miss Helen Pincombe of Lynhurst, acted as flower girl. Her frock was a bouffant white model, worn with a small, pink shoe buttoned and white slippers. She carried a white basket of pink rosebuds and baby's breath, tied with a large bow of pink tulle.

Soft organ music was played throughout the afternoon, the wedding march being rendered by Mrs. John Robinson Fitcher of Middle-land, sister of the bride. During the signing of the register, Mrs. Huzel McKillop, aunt of the groom, sang beautifully "O Fair, O Sweet and Holy."

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast and reception was held, the bride's table being effectively centered with the wedding cake and decorated with pink and white sweet peas. Guests were present from London, Toronto, Orillia, Chicago, Windsor and West Lorne.

For travelling the bride donned a gown of brown crepe satin, a modish coat of neodepoint cloth, trimmed with brown fox fur, and a smart brown velvet hat. Following a motor trip of about two weeks' duration, Mr. and Mrs. McKillop will take up their residence on Windsor avenue, this city.

Western's Teams Hop Off Today - Switch Fights At Arena To Saturday Oct. 17

PURPLE AND WHITE FORTUNE CHANGES

Western Shows Two Strong Squads In Gridiron Battle Today.

The complete change of fortune, which has greeted Western in the gridiron game, is amply demonstrated in the fact that the purple and white shows two teams into battle today, whereas in former years, the school met with great difficulty in turning out one good team.

As it stands today, Western has over thirty-five players to draw from, and everyone of them can be thrown over the boards to do their stuff with no doubt being held of their abilities. Coach Fickley has put the boys through all the paces, and they are ready for varsity. If the visitors hope to come away with a victory they will have to go through a tough battle for the purple and white means to give no quarter and asks none.

Both the intermediates and Juniors went through light workouts last night, and the coach expressed himself as well satisfied.

Locals Have Advantage. Western has the advantage over the other schools in that it has practically all of last year's players to draw from. On the half line, Mowry, Simpson, Maxwell, Kennedy, Warren and Hauch provide a choice of which few schools can boast. For ends, the coach has selected Little, Russell, Donchie, and for flying wing Howell, Conkle and Simpson are well prepared to take up the quarterback duties at quarter, and the linemen will be drawn from Osborne, J. Russell, Comford, Calder, White and Jordan, Morton and Turville are the possibilities for snap position.

However, from the way the candidates have been turning out to the practice, there need be no worry as to whether they will make a good showing or not. Some 25 players are eligible for the team, and the majority of them will get into the game against O. A. C. this afternoon. The starting squad will be selected from McCulloch, Donohue, King, Simpson, J. Russell, Russell, Lerner, Hickey, C. Kautch, H. Palk, Diamond, Budge, Bristol and several others.

Granted good weather, one of the largest crowds of the season is expected to witness the contest. The Junior-O. A. C. game starts at 1:15, with the big struggle at 3:15.

MISS D. R. FOWLER NEW BRITISH GOLF CHAMPION

Associated Press Despatch. Westward Ho, Eng., Oct. 9.—Miss D. R. Fowler, North Devon, has won the British women's golf championship today, defeating Miss Joy Win in the 36-hole final by a score of 10 to 11.

Mrs. Fowler, who also holds the championship of Somerset, was the British women's title last year. Joyce Wethered did not defend her title in the tournament last year.

ABE GOLDSTEIN LOSES

Butte, Mont., Oct. 9.—Dixie Labold of Butte received the judges' decision over Abe Goldstein of New York, former bantamweight champion of the world, in a slashing 12-round fight here last night.

Associated Press Despatch. Butte, Oct. 9.—The bout between King Solomon and Jim Maloney, scheduled for tonight at Braves' Field, was postponed until tomorrow night because of rain.

Associated Press Despatch. Ebor, Oct. 9.—The fight between Jackie Jones and a local contender, who sprang a sensation on Hamilton fans in his first appearance in this country by providing Howard Mayberry with one of the most sizzling battles he was engaged in during his short reign as Canadian bantamweight champion, will meet Freddie Thompson of Oswego, N. Y., in the main event of the night.

He tied Mayberry up in knots on that occasion, but couldn't hurt the Duke of Dunelm. However, he was a decision over Phil O'Dowd, the long Columbus flash. This year Vincent is developing a punch which is probably for it's the wallop that counts in the shorter bouts in vogue on this coast.

The water in his eye, apparently, for Thompson has met some of the best in the world in his career. Vincent, a former Carl Trenhaile twice, Joe Lynch, Young Montreal, Hobby Ebor, Bud Taylor and several others.

He is a fine boxer, has a good right hand, and has never been knocked out.

Jackie Jones has been secured for the first fight here. He is another product of the land that gave probably the greatest little piece of fighting machinery that ever stepped into a ring.

Jimmy White, who had won his first over a month ago at Niagara Falls, and heart got a good licking as a result.

He stunk the usually good-natured Ebor into a regular fight. It was this Ebor who uncovered the punch he has suddenly discovered in the most recent of his many come-backs.

Officials of a Toronto club, looking Ebor over, were convinced he was their boarding house.

Barnes' Return To Home City Excites Local Fight Fans

Local Boy Will Fight Semi-Final To Vincent-Thompson Set-To. ACTION ASSURED.

Bob Barnes, former London amateur, who has become something of a sensation since he started a professional boxing career and around Detroit will appear in one bout of a double semi-final on the card to be staged at the arena next Saturday night. The bouts were switched to Saturday night in view of the big Liberal rally being held at the arena Friday night, at which Premier King will be the chief speaker.

Either Charlie Thompson of Syracuse, who outpointed Johnny Martin in one of the two sparkling bouts on the last card staged here, will be Barnes' opponent or one of several others with whom local officials are in touch.

The appearance here of Barnes has aroused immediate interest among those who remember his work as an amateur. He was an especial favorite of St. Thomas, where his willingness to fight all comers without quibbling over size or weight quickly found him a fan.

Vincent in Main Co. Freddie Vincent, the little Welsh pugilist who sprang a sensation on Hamilton fans in his first appearance in this country by providing Howard Mayberry with one of the most sizzling battles he was engaged in during his short reign as Canadian bantamweight champion, will meet Freddie Thompson of Oswego, N. Y., in the main event of the night.

WESTERN INTERMEDIATE GRIDDBERS, WHO MEET VARSITY TODAY.

This year, Western has landed some of the finest rugby material in the history of the school, and the team steps out this afternoon against the strong Toronto Varsity squad in their first scheduled game, which is hoped will be the initial step towards the title.

The Hamilton Cubs and the enthusiasm they have been showing in practice bids well for success this season. Reading from left to right: W. W. ## ASSURES SATISFACTION IN PIPE REPAIR WORK

Blades Shop Well Known Throughout City and District.

Most smokers of pipes, and their numbers in the world are legion, have often told themselves, "Gee, that was a good old pipe and I hate to throw it away. It's not much good since I broke it but if I could only find somebody who understands repairing them the right way I'd be all set."

But in many cases the speaker does not know where to take his old faithful to be given new life and because of this many pipes are thrown away which otherwise could be repaired.

Scores of Londoners who find themselves in such dilemmas about a large proportion of his trade. He is known to most of the smokers of London as a past master in the art of repairing pipes and the reason he is considered such is that he turns out only work of the highest order. However, Mr. Blades' ability in this respect is known outside London as well. It is not a rare occurrence for him to have some especially valuable pipe sent to him from Northern Ontario or Western Canada. He does a great deal of work for persons all over Western Ontario also.

W. Newman Gives Advice On Tires

Noticeable Heat Is Due to the Fabric Bending.

The heat that is noticeable in a tire after it has been run on for any distance or length of time, is generated by the tire itself, due to the bending and flexing of the fabric and rubber. The amount of heat in a tire depends upon the rapidity and extent of its action.

A tire on a car overloaded or an under-inflated tire heats more rapidly than it would if it was properly inflated and properly loaded. Similarly, an old tire, due to weakness, is more susceptible to this heat producing action than a new tire.

William Newman of 91 York street, an expert in repairing tires, points out that there is absolutely no reason, so far as a blowout is concerned, for a reduction of air pressure before going on long journeys or during hot days.

The maximum increase in air pressure that could be expected, under any conditions, would not exceed fifteen pounds—the average tire does not get more than six pounds. Anyone can readily see that this small increase in pressure will not blow out the casing.

HARLEY-DAVIDSON SALES ARE LARGEST IN WORLD

Popular Motorcycle Is Used Chiefly For Great Outdoor Sport.

"You've read about motorcycling being the greatest outdoor sport," says J. A. Barnard of 338 Talbot street, "and you've read about the 1925 Harley-Davidson being a mighty good machine, and now you may be interested in knowing a few facts about the company that makes these motorcycles.

More Harley-Davidsons are sold today than any other motorcycle in the world.

"Harley-Davidson motorcycles and side-cars are now sold and used in 119 different countries.

"They are manufactured in a factory that has 12 acres of floor space and that employs 1,800 workmen.

"Harley-Davidson machines are now used by more than 1,700 police departments in the United States alone.

"Walter Davidson, president; William Davidson, vice-president; William Harley, chief engineer, and Arthur Davidson, secretary, the four men who formed this company 21 years ago are still the active heads of the firm."

BUY YOUR COAL NOW, IS CHANTLER'S ADVICE

Leading Fuel Dealer Advises of Impending Shortage of Anthracite.

Some 25 years ago saw the beginning of what is today one of the leading coal supply centers in London. It was back in the days when coal sold for $5.25 a ton that G. J. Chantler and his brother, F. W. Chantler, started in business.

The yard today, at 263 Bathurst street, provides a service to citizens of London which is efficient in every detail.

The brothers continued their partnership until about four years ago, and today G. J. Chantler is sole owner. The Chantler business has been built on a constant effort of real service to the customer. This policy has won Chantler Bros. a splendid reputation for fair dealing and consideration of the requirements of others and has enabled them to hold the confidence of customers and win new patrons.

In view of the coal situation as it exists, it is the advice of Chantler Bros. that those who want to make sure of their coal supply for next winter should get their stock in now.

Warnings to this effect have been issued by the government authorities and are being augmented by the united voice of the coal dealers themselves who are in close contact with conditions.

THEATRE ATTRACTIONS for the COMING WEEK

HELEN WARE WILL APPEAR IN LONDON

Famous Tragedienne Features In A Fascinating Devil At the Grand.

Not the least interesting feature of the production of A Fascinating Devil, by Myron C. Fagan here next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights, is that it marks the return to the stage of Helen Ware, who has long been considered one of America's leading tragediennes. That fact alone should make the production of A Fascinating Devil one of the important events of the theatrical season.

Immediately upon reading the foregoing, some close students of matters theatrical may arise in loud protest to say that Miss Ware never retired from the stage. In a certain limited sense they will be right. She never officially and formally retired in the manner made famous by so many tragediennes, but never released of late she has not been seen on the stage as often as it is the public's due to see an actress of her calibre.

It is that Helen Ware has reached that point in her career where she feels it necessary to broaden the sphere of her activities in the theatre. She never has lost her desire to continue acting. But she feels that she has talents as a director, and during the past few seasons she has been seeking every opportunity to give scope to the play of these talents. And since she is like most humans in believing that she can do only one thing at a time if she wishes to do it well, she has given up acting when engaged in directing.

Offered Leading Role. Thus it is that during the past few seasons the theatre-going public has seen her only in a few fleeting acting engagements.

Miss Ware's most recent essay at direction was with the well-known summer troupe at Provincetown, Mass., known as the Wharf Players. With the ending of the season of this company she decided it was high time that she return to the stage in person. Having made that decision, she acquiesced readily when Mr. Fagan offered her the leading role in his play.

A superb cast is coming here in this latest creation from the clever and facile pen of Myron C. Fagan, who has had such notable successes as Two Strangers from Nowhere and Mismates. Heading the roster is Helen Ware, perhaps the most talented emotional actress of the present-day stage, who has had a role which favors strongly of her work in Within the Law, The Woman and The Celebrated Case. In support of this star comes Frederic Burt, identified with nearly every important actress, among them Julia Marlowe, Mrs. Fiske, Ethel Barrymore, Maude Adams, and many others; Bernard Nedell, the Valentino of the speaking stage, a clever young actor who is one of the most popular stage leading men in the country.

Romance of Gay Society. Florence Mason, last seen here with William Hodge, William Williams, a prominent character man, Harry Redding, equally so, Faith Gage, who first played the little cripple in The Fool when it had its first presentation on the coast; Bruce Evans and Albert Toyal.

An ensnaring romance of gay society on Long Island is the description of A Fascinating Devil. Filled with thrills and unusual situations, that keep one guessing, the plot revolves about the machinations of a handsome rogue, the kind of a Don Juan who comes awailing into exclusive society and leaves a trail of aching hearts in his wake. The part of a wealthy society matron, who marries the charmer is played by Helen Ware. The attempts of the fascinating devil to rid himself of her form the basis of a highly interesting and thrilling plot. These dramatic moments give Miss Ware's talents an opportunity previously unknown.

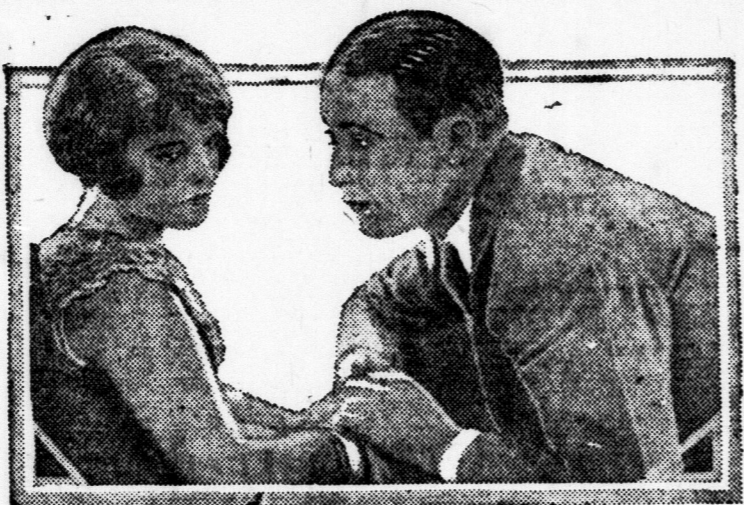

COMING TO THE GRAND. Scene from Anne Nichols' laughing success, Abie's Irish Rose. Three days, commencing Thursday, Oct. 15. Matinee Saturday.

MONTE BLUE FEATURED IN THE LIMITED MAIL

The Limited Mail, the Warner Bros. classic of the screen, which begins a three-day engagement on Monday at Loew's theatre, is a picture of Elmer Vance's thrilling melodrama of the west, directed by George Hill.

The story concerns the fortunes of Bob Snobson (Monte Blue) a ne'er-do-well easterner who turns tramp and joins forces with Spike (Edward Gribbon) and Potts (Willard Louis), two others of the carefree brother-chorus girl returns to disturb his romance, and further complications result when Jim is killed in a wreck due to Bob's carelessness in missing a danger signal. Bobbie falls into a stream when he follows Bob in his grief-stricken wanderings, and the man sacrifices the boy to rescue the mail train from a landslide. How Spike rescues little Bobbie, how Caroline's faith is restored and she and Bob find happiness together forms the climax to the dramatic Monte Blue and Vera Reynolds in an epic of the huge steel monsters that rush headlong over the shining tracks, "The Limited Mail," coming to Loew's on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

LON CHANEY AT LOEW'S THURSDAY

Norma Shearer, the Celebrated Canadian Film Star, Shares the Honors.

Thousands of motion picture enthusiasts of London and district were patrons at Loew's last week to see The Unholy Three, a production that featured Lon Chaney, a film star of excellence. Thursday, Friday and Saturday, next week, Chaney is again coming to Loew's theatre, this time in The Tower of Lies, a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature with a flash of poignant drama to its end. In addition to Chaney, Norma Shearer has an important role in this picture which ends in a whirlwind of effectiveness. The story is a faithful and artistic adaptation of Selma Lagerlof's prize-winning novel, The Emperor of Portugalia. In reality this famous novel has been made one of the classics of the motion picture world. The acting is always of a high order, with all the players more than fulfilling expectations, and some of the rural backgrounds, with fig-

BLOSSOM TIME AT GRAND TODAY

Fascinating Operetta To Be Presented Matinee and Evening.

Blossom Time, the fascinating Franz Schubert operetta, which was so enthusiastically received here on Thursday and Friday evenings, will play matinee and night today. No musical play within the memory of present-day theatregoers has been accorded the united and unanimous praise that has been accorded Blossom Time in this city and in every other place in which it has been presented. Founded on the life and romance of Franz Schubert, the great composer, Blossom Time possesses all the elements that go to make up the perfect musical play. It has a fascinating story; music of the most entrancing kind, most of it being compositions by Schubert himself; delightful and clean comedy and most colorful embellishments in the way of scenery and settings, and with the same splendid cast that appeared in New York for a year, another series of perfect performances is assured.

Lon Chaney, Norma Shearer and Ian Keith in The Tower of Lies, adapted from Selma Lagerlof's world prize story, The Emperor of Portugalia, at Loew's on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

ures silhouetted against the horizon, are almost idyllic in their beauty.

The story is of a farmer whose life is lifted from the routine of drudgery by the birth of a daughter. Love transforms his life and that of his sober wife. Father and daughter unite as emperor and empress, with a farmer boy taking the role of prince. The handmaid of the Scandinavian estate is killed and his son with-draws credit from the tenants.

Then follows a series of dramatic incidents which give Chaney and Miss Shearer plenty of opportunity to win new friends and present a finale that will grip young and old, shop girl and sophisticate, as few picture can. The Tower of Lies will be supported by three excellent acts of Loew's vaudeville, a mirth-provoking comedy and news of the day.

PUBLIC MEDICAL SERVICE FOR YOUNG NOW EXTENDED TO PRE-SCHOOL AGES

Extension of the periodical health and physical examination of school children to those of pre-school age is the next logical step following the striking success of results of examination of kindergarten children in city schools, as revealed in figures just published to local authorities.

In 575 children just examined, 576 defects were found. The early discovery of these defects will permit of their correction, but if they had been discovered when the child was three or four years old, they could be eliminated with half the expense and trouble, it is asserted.

Especially accelerated would be the elimination of nasal and postural defects in the child. Orthopedic defects would be corrected with very little trouble. On the other hand, this group of non-medical diseases, it is pointed out, in children of pre-school age they could be cured without any interference with the normal life of the child.

Examinations were started in London schools some years ago with the appointment of a school nurse, who examined the children for defects that already existed. There was no system aiming at preventive measures. Curing, not prevention, was placed foremost.

Right against disease was aided by the appointments of a school dentist and of several more school nurses. With the assistance of the medical profession, health surveys were made of every child in the public schools, and a card index system inaugurated.

This year a system of compulsory examination of all children starting school was introduced. For the first time, kindergarten pupils have been the subjects of a survey which has just been completed. The work was carried out without objection from parents. With the co-operation of the parent, it is hoped to extend the surveys into the home of children of still fewer years.

Briefly, the suggested plan is as follows: Early in the school year, the children attending the public schools report to their teachers the names of any children in their family or district who are not yet of school age. The parents of such children will then be asked by letter to bring their children to one of the examination centers. Here doctors will prescribe remedies for any defects that they may find. By a card system all cases will be followed up to see that the doctors' recommendations are carried out. By this means, it is hoped that all children entering the public schools will be free from physical defects, or else undergoing treatment to remedy any that may exist.

In some cities the plan has already been tried, and has proved a great factor in promoting health among school children.

HEALTHY HERDS STILL NECESSARY

Pasteurization a Great Protection, But Does Not Fill Whole Bill.

Considering the vast literature on milk, comprising as it does the subjects of animal husbandry, chemistry, bacteriology, biology, sanitation and epidemiology, one might be inclined to believe that there would be nothing further to say with regard to this important food. But experience teaches that the more known about milk and its use, the more fully realized is the limitations of knowledge as to the exact nature of what is being dealt with. The phases of the subject with which health authorities are concerned at this moment is the public health desideratum that milk must be the normal secretion of a healthy, contented cow and rendered safe by proper pasteurization.

The recognition that much tuberculosis in humans is of bovine origin laid the foundation for the widespread application of the tuberculin test of cattle as a public health measure. However, partly on account of the great economic question involved in this procedure and largely to eliminate the broader epidemiological significance that is involved in the relation of milk to such diseases as typhoid fever, septic sore throat, etc., the process of pasteurization was introduced.

With the widespread application of pasteurization there developed a decreasing emphasis in some quarters on approved sanitary methods of producing milk, based on the idea that since the milk is to be pasteurized, there is little need for much concern as to its healthfulness before such treatment. This idea is unsound because it is contrary to reason and experience.

In the first place, doctors say, one need not expect that pasteurization or any other process can convert the abnormal milk of a discontented, unhealthy cow into the normal product that would come from a healthy cow. That this is the true public health idea has long been recognized from clinical observation in pediatrics.

DISEASE CHANGES WITH FASHIONS

Thin Stockings, Short Skirts Now Blamed For New Affliction.

All teachers of hygiene give a certain number of lectures on dress and the materials of which clothing is made; a discussion of colors and their relation to heat absorption, materials, and their properties regarding both moisture and air retention. Dress reform has been advocated and practiced in various parts of the world, but attention does not seem to have been generally drawn to certain diseases clearly caused by fashions and dress.

Everyone knows that in the later years of the last century, chlorosis of young girls was excessively common. Chlorosis has almost completely disappeared, so much so that many younger physicians are inclined to believe that it did not occur as frequently as the statements of the older physicians would have us believe. Girls in all walks of life suffered. Those who exercised and those who worked for their living suffered equally with the pets of a fat and of society, who could afford leisure and the best of food.

Those who are inclined to doubt the existence of chlorosis may well be asked to explain why the disease was found in girls and not in boys, and why the older physicians should have made this mistake in diagnosis. The main exciting cause of the disease was almost certainly tight lacing and the wearing of tight corsets, and since these articles of costume have been abandoned, the disease has practically disappeared. The charge against corsets was first made in 1895, and has recently been supported by the observation of physicians in various parts of the world.

A new disease seems to have taken the place of chlorosis. This disease produces thickening of the skin and subcutaneous tissues. The affected area is red, does not pit on pressure, and the pallor produced by pressure disappears at once. There is a feeling of cold, pain and pressure. Both legs are affected as a rule, and the condition is seen mostly between the ages of 14 and 20 years. It is more troublesome in the cold season.

It has been suggested that the cause of the disease is the lack of protection of the lower legs, which is now so common, there being no skirts to cover them, and thin silk stockings being often the only covering. While this has not been definitely proved to be the cause, it is certain that this particular condition has been observed only since short dresses and silk stockings became popular. One may well ask why the disease is not even more common. The answer, according to those who have studied it most, is that the exciting causes are efficient only when there is some constitutional defect in the capillary circulation of the skin and subcutaneous tissues, which may be allied to a constitutional condition which leads to the true erythema induratum of Bazin.

The most deplorable feature of ailments due to the decrees of fashion is that no amount of teaching or argument will have the slightest effect in stopping them. On the other hand, fashions are fickle and few of them remain in vogue long enough to do any very great amount of damage.

HOUND AND RABBIT IN HEALTH GAME

Doctors Complain People Let Disease Run Too Long Before Calling Aid.

"The old familiar saying that 'an apple a day keeps the doctor away' was based on the idea that the doctor never came to see anyone unless he was quite ill, and, as a rule, very ill," said a well-known doctor recently. "We used to hear it said that Mrs. Jones was so sick that she had to have the doctor, and the poor doctor, when he was called, was supposed to work miracles. Being only human, of course, he often failed."

"The way we have been employing our doctors reminds one of the rabbit races they hold down in Texas. A jackrabbit is let out of his pen and has a clear run to his hole. After he has a fairly good start, a greyhound is let loose. Of course the hound takes after the rabbit, but sometimes he catches the rabbit, but often he doesn't.

"So it is frequently with the family doctor. Disease breaks loose in some member of the family and everybody wants to give it a good start. The doctor, like the hound, is under serious handicap. Perhaps he and nature will catch up with the disease and save the patient, but on the other hand perhaps they won't."

"In one of the places where they race rabbits there are two or three old jacks who have never been caught. These wily old rabbits, as soon as they are let loose, lay back their ears and make a beeline for their holes. No hound so far has overcome his handicap and caught them."

"We have some diseases which are in a class with those wise old rabbits. Once they get a fair start, nothing known to medical science can catch them—cancer and tuberculosis, for instance. Folks must come to realize how important it is not to put the greyhounds of medical science under a handicap if they are to cope with such treacherous diseases and save human life."

COMPLETE SERVICE FROM PRODUCERS TO CONSUMERS

Thirty-six years ago when Mr. Rawleigh started business he took his products direct to consumers. That way they became known as Rawleigh methods. But Rawleigh methods have steadily become more comprehensive.

As the company grew it went to larger markets and began buying more of its raw materials from first hands. Now it imports immense quantities of important materials from many countries that are selected and bought from producers and shipped direct to its factories by its own employees.

On the islands of the Indian Ocean, where three-fourths of the vanilla grows, Rawleigh has had its employees and buyers, with a branch at Tamatave, Madagascar. Now it has its own extensive producing vanilla plantations on Grande Comore Island, midway between Madagascar and Zanzibar. They are operated by a staff of about 75 employees. Here vanilla is cultivated, bought and cured. The company's seagoing cargo boat gathers vanilla from adjacent islands to its branch at Moroni, where its employees are building roads for its motor trucks, warehouses and a wharf from which to ship vanilla, ginger, geranium and other materials direct to the factories.

At Tamatave, Madagascar, the company has an office and warehouse, and a branch at St. Marie Island nearby. Away out in the Indian Ocean in the Reunion Islands they are making investigation for opening another branch. In Mexico and the West Indies other employees have been buying, curing, and shipping vanilla.

Ottawa Snores While the Battle Roars

Senator Andrew Haydon, National Organizer of the Liberal Forces

More Election Excitement in a Municipal Ward Than at National Headquarters—Central Organization Gives Way to Provincial and Local Party Management—Little Dictation From Capital

By F. G. GRIFFIN

A GENERAL election is going full blast. Each party is out at all costs to save the country. The fate and future of this fair dominion of ours is trembling in the balance. Far and near is the battle joined and the very air is saturated with the clash of contest. Hundreds of orators at thousands of meetings between the Atlantic and the Pacific have been pouring out billions of words—in fact, it is calculated that if every word spoken about politics for the past six weeks were placed end to end they would make an imaginary line that would stretch to the new Plaskett star.

That is how bad it is, and yet Ottawa, of all places, doesn't seem to know a thing about it or give a care.

Toronto may be having Conservative convulsions; Quebec may be a little chaotic over new alignments; the battle of the century may be raging in the Maritimes; and out west the farmers may be kicking the shafts out of the political apparatus.

And Ottawa just turns over in its sleep and gives another snore; or awakens up just long enough to show that it is more interested in hockey than the House, more concerned about the prospects of the Senators than the Senate.

Now this is strange. For when you think of politics you think of Ottawa. Indeed, it is to reach Ottawa, paradise of politics, that so many scores of excellent gentlemen of many and diverse tendencies and temperaments have been praying and preaching, struggling and scrapping, hoping and pining, of recent weeks. Ottawa, you'd think, is the heart of it all. There centres the storm that is raging across Canada.

No doubt the average elector, conscious of the hullabaloo in his own home town, the fracas in his riding where two or more antagonists are busy belaboring each other with vigor, reckons that Ottawa must be a hot spot these days. He has a vision of each party's big headquarters, of bustle and speed, of strings being pulled, of hundreds of clerks keeping tab, of telegrams pouring in and pouring out, of rah-rah enthusiasm and frantic commands that reserves be rushed to Quebec or the breach be filled in Ontario—an organization something like one of the war-time Victory loan drives or a big tag day. He is quite wrong. There is more organization in a ward than at Ottawa headquarters and more excitement at a country convention than anywhere in the vicinity of Parliament hill these October days.

The Capital is Deserted

OF course, this is regarding Ottawa as national headquarters. For, locally, Ottawa, with two seats to fill, has its own fight. And it is one of the most interesting constituencies in Canada, with the population divided by the politicians into three classes, "Protestants," "Irish" and "French."

You notice Ottawa's political lethargy first of all in the Chateau Laurier. The capital always lacks energy between sessions—indeed, unfriendly critics have been known to call it, when the House is not sitting, a dead town. But at least you would see ministers about the hotel; and an occasional member who had no crops to thresh or other particular business to do at home and found the capital as good a place as any to pass the time between legislative spasms. And you would also notice financial or business or legal notables who had come down from here and there in regard to this or that particular interest.

The capital is somewhat in the position of being the lady fair who sits on the sidelines, not bothering greatly about whose prize she will be when the din dies and the victor is proclaimed.

Between sessions, normally, Ottawa breathes in its sleep. But now it is to all intents and purposes in a state of suspended animation. The prime minister and the leader of the opposition have been away dueling across Canada and back. Ministers and ordinary members have forsaken Ottawa and its sham fights for real fights in their old constituencies. They are too busy battling at the moment in the front line trenches of their own backyards to pay visits to general headquarters. So headquarters is empty while the field marshals, generals and staff officers are out fighting for their lives with bayonets and gas bombs like mere privates. For the moment it is every man for himself in the great open spaces—a personal fight for survival.

And so Ottawa is at the moment a deserted village. It is filled with silences. Not a voice speaks in this place of oratory. A walk through the parliament buildings reveals them as echoing catacombs through which occasional attendants flit like wraiths. The east and west blocks seem silent, drear, unpopulated. Of course, there are civil servants to be seen in great numbers. But they are shadowy in the background. The landscape lacks the vitalizing touch of vanished forms and vanished voices.

It is indeed at the Chateau that the lack of force in Ottawa as national headquarters in a hot election fight is first noticeable. Gone are the politicians. In the rotunda are several nuns, a priest or two, several clergymen, social service workers of both sexes—delegates to the child welfare convention which is holding meetings in the hotel. A party of girl school teachers on tour enter and swarm around the white bust of Laurier and then chatter at the cigar stand as they buy picture postcards. A stout American and his tall son swagger across smoking big pipes, trying to wear holiday mackinaws like Gathneau woodsmen . . . and falling by a wide margin.

Both Old Parties Decentralized

BUT, in spite of this quietude round the Chateau, you still expect to find in the city the national headquarters of each party places of bustle and excitement. And this is where comes the greatest blow of all. For the Conservative party has really no headquarters office at all. And to find the Liberal nerve-centre for the dominion—as you hope—you go through a modest side-door in the middle of Sparks street, climb up some back stairs and enter a set of rooms that is as quiet as some of those offices in the smaller town buildings where staid lawyers have their lairs.

Three or four clerks are working as calmly as they would for an old-fashioned manufacturer. There is an utter absence of shouting, pep, ringing bells, sweating messenger boys and the whole whirligig of dynamic energy which you look for these days of organized efficiency. One of the dingy rooms is crowded to the roof with campaign literature. In another an earnest gentleman is dictating, with the leisurely ease of a Thomas Hardy, a treatise on the tariff. Campaign literature—here is the real and virtuous ally the only function of the Liberal party's national headquarters these days: the dissemination of knowledge, the broadcasting of facts, the scattering of arguments and the interpretation of figures. Efforts are made, by the issuing of a speaker's handbook and other pamphlets, to get a standardization of argument and policy throughout the country and provide the stump speakers in the furthestmost back blocks with hot shot for the opposition.

The Liberal headquarters is really an intelligence department of which Senator Andrew Haydon is in charge. The same is true of Conservative headquarters. It too is a fountain from which knowledge springs. Dr. Tolmie, the national organizer of the party, was not in Ottawa at all at the time of one's visit. He was out like the rest in the forward fighting lines. There is, it is true, a central committee of which Sir James Loughheed is chairman and which is at once a sort of final court of appeal in disputes of matters of policy, as well as a board of strategy. But there are no frills to it. The members simply meet in the room of Sir James or one of the other members and carry out their decisions without fuss.

The fact of the matter is that both parties are largely decentralized in the present campaign. Each province has its own headquarters and each constituency largely runs its own show. It is in places like Toronto, Halifax, Winnipeg or Edmonton that fighting headquarters must be sought. There is little dictation from Ottawa. In this regard the election generally has a kind of a go-as-you-please aspect and is galloping to its climax like a headless horseman. It is really made up of a tremendous number of individual fights all over the country, guerrilla warfare from coast to coast, instead of a highly organized massing of battalions on either side with their movements ruled from the one centre. Indeed, the election is, in effect, a series of provincial battles.

So Ottawa, for both parties, is reduced to the level of a clearing house and has far less significance than the provincial centres. On the occasion of speaking tours such as Mr. King and Mr. Meighen have been making, once these are decided on in a general way, it is the provincial organizations which determine where they had best speak, subject of course to the approval of these highly placed gentlemen themselves. If Meighen's itinerary is to include three places in Ontario it is the moguls in Toronto who decide the places where his words will sound most effective. If King is to give two great strategists who decide where they would tell to the greatest degree. In this way, in an election, the provinces are largely autonomous from the viewpoint of both parties.

Canadian elections are apparently fought on a haphazard basis that differs from the machine-like system of the United States or the highly organized methods of the Old Country. Here the candidates are usually local men; their appeal is local largely except in the case of one or two leaders; and each fight is so local that it is only occasionally that the sounds of it spread outside the borders of the constituency. In England dictation from a centre is quite usual and candidates of national significance are frequently foisted on a constituency to which they are personally strangers which therefrom takes on an interest that is nation-wide. In Canada local organizations choose their own candidates almost invariably and Ottawa is not heard from as a general rule, which also tends to rob it of any particular claim to being national headquarters in a contest.

Not always was the lack of organization at Ottawa headquarters as noticeable as it is now. Even in the 1921 campaign both parties had, by all accounts, much more elaborate show places there than they have at present. But it was found that the effort was largely a wasted one and that there was wholesale duplication of provincial efforts. And so for the sake of unity and economy the provincial organization was depended on almost entirely in the present fight, from the viewpoint of actual blood and dust, while Ottawa sank to the level of a mere munitions factory from which vast quantities of political powder and shot are shipped by both parties' publicists.

Some of them will tell you at Ottawa that lack of party funds had something to do with the economy end of the affair. These, it appears, are not what they used to be. "The man who serves his party nowadays," said one Ottawa cynic, "must be a patriot for he has no hope of reward." And he pointed out that there were no titles, no railway subsidies, no contracts (everything being now done by tender), and scarcely any patronage within the gift of a successful party except judgeships and senatorships, both of which are scarce and not suitable as gifts to all kinds of supporters. So that there was no longer anything to attract money to the party except the purest motives of political faith and conviction, unless it might be personal or business interest in legislative possibilities. So both parties, according to this authority, are actually "skimped" for money to-day. No longer is the feed trough filled to overflowing. And Ottawa has sunk into insignificance as a central filling station from which the dominion might be "sweetened."

Political Morality Higher

ON the other hand, another authority declared that the party funds are as big, in the present election, as ever they were. But here again they were administered provincially. He argued that Ontario and Quebec were undoubtedly the big sources of such funds and they were kept in those provinces, though, at times, money might be sent from them to assist along the cause in other provinces.

One thing he did point out and that was that very little money was used nowadays for corrupt purposes. The expenses of candidates had grown enormously of recent years: what with the need for automobiles, printing, stamper meetings, etc. In this regard it is interesting to recall the fact that the governor of one of the American states was asked to account for the seemingly huge election expenditure of $100,000 and that he showed that no less than $70,000 of it was taken up in the printing and mailing of a single post card to every one of 4,500,000 voters. And in Canada this informant could not think of any successful candidate who could possibly carry on a campaign without spending a minimum, absolutely legally, of $2,000.

He went on to say that he noticed in the last few years a marked improvement in the standard of political morality in Canada. This he attributed largely to the breaking of party lines in the war election of 1917 when voting was on a big principle that touched the hearts. Previous to that, he declared, 90 per cent. of the voters were partisan and 10 per cent. were independent or corrupt. The effect, he argued, of the 1917 election had been to increase independence and decrease corruption. He also thought that conviction counted in a Canadian election far more than formerly and that oratory counted for less.

He said that the Progressives were a sign of the new thinking within recent years on a scale that had changed the old standards and left the old parties and their methods with the necessity for a somewhat changed outlook. It was the Progressives who had carried decentralization to an extreme degree, leaving the direction of the fight to the individual localities. This plan the other parties had had to follow largely. And thus Ottawa has more and more lost its capacity for central control.

So that to-day Ottawa is neither the head or heart of the battle. Ottawa does not direct or in a way influence the affair. The capital is somewhat in the position of being that lady fair who sits on the side lines, more or less asleep, not bothering greatly about whose prize she will be when the din dies and the victor is proclaimed.

She's on the Way, But Not 'Arrived'

Woman In Business Gets Most of the Work, But Little of the Credit

By THE STENOGR.

SAY listen! Have you ever noticed how much drivelt we gotta read in the newspapers about the Woman in Business? Huh? How she has arrived. How she dresses too smart. How does she do it on her salary, dearie? How her cheeks are too red and her lips ditto. How her skirt is too short and her hose too transparent—and how she flirts with her boss? Sure you have noticed. Well, you can take it from me that this is the bunk. Mosta this piffle is written by guys who never saw the inside of a business office. Being in on the ground floor, as my Old Man says, I oughta know, and I wanta tell you that the W. I. B. is right there with the goods, intelligent, snappy, capable, industrious and sensible. Of course, there's the odd exception, like there is in any other line of work.

But has the W. I. B. arrived? Not so's you could notice it. Transportation in her case has been held up, BUT, she's on her way. The W. I. B. is in business but not of it. She does mosta the work and gets none of the credit. Woman in all lines remains "unhonored and unsung" because we don't know her. Man having been the chief actor for so long has kinda hogged the scene, and as he has also controlled the spotlight, through the press, he has had more publicity, and consequently more "big time" jobs. We know our great men better'n we know our great women. But the W. I. B. is tired being an understudy. She wants a leading role and she intends to get it.

Any woman will tell you who has entered any calling or profession formerly controlled by man that she has had to fight for a toe-hold. Does this apply in the world of business—Man's Work? I'll say it does! Talk about "self expression." Well, the woman who wants to pull off anything like that better stay outa business—that is, unless she has enough money to put on her own show. The W. I. B. is not charged up with any initiative, and no demand is made on her for any. The average boss thinks he has a corner on all that stuff. Woman was made to carry out Man's ideas. That she should have any valuable ideas of her own? Tut! tut! Absurd! Is the W. I. B. so stupid that her opinion can never be asked with beneficial results? Such would appear to be the case.

Mosta the employers still lack that wider, larger vision which would enable them to see that best results in any line of work are to be obtained by men and women working together, on an equal footing, and not in opposition. The W. I. B. has no desire to oust man—only to work on equal ground—equal pay and recognition for equal work. Most men in business are kind, considerate, even indulgent, to the woman who is content to be an underling, but let her aspire to be his rival! Nothing doing. Now, the sensible W. I. B. does not want any privileges on account of her sex. Nix on the gallantry stuff. She wants to be judged on her merits. Why should a man be paid twice as much money as a woman when she does the work just as well, and often better, in the same time? I ask you. Why do girls get the same training in school as boys, if when they start out in life they must be underlings?

The men will say—"But we can't depend on the women to stay in business. They get married." Say, how many married women are in business and supporting husbands and children? Is this taken into account in making up their pay envelope? You know it is not.

Does the W. I. B. paint her face? Being obliged to be always two or three jumps ahead of the styles—she does. But why pick on her? "Aren't we all" in the painting business these days? Is she a swell dresser? She's gotta be. It's all very well for these writer guys to rave about how the stenographer should do no hand painting, and should dress in that nice, lovely shirt-waist with the long sleeves, and the long, plain skirt. Say, listen! How much ase would the modern employer have for such a steno. Take it from me, she'd last about half a day in mosta the offices. Does the modern employer dress in garments handed down to him from his great grandfather? I ask you. Well, then, he wants to see his office filled with, bobbed hair, marcelled ditto, rosy cheeked, stylishly dressed maidens. He chooses his stenographer as much for decorative as for useful purposes, and any girl who does not put up a good front soon makes a fade-out. Even at the employment offices it is the girls who can dress the best who get the preference. So, don't blame the girls for trying to look nice. They gotta.

As for the W. I. B. flirting with her boss. Piff! She hasn't time for one thing. W. I. B.'s are hardworking creatures. Now when business is not what it oughta be and what we all wish it were, employers have had to watch their overhead very carefully, and the W. I. B. in most cases has had to do double duty. Being a good sport, she doesn't mind. She wants to take her share of the hard times. BUT she also wants her share of the good times when they come. For another thing, she is an honorable, upright, self-reliant individual—writer guys to the contrary notwithstanding—and she has no desire to appropriate the property of another woman, having dreams of her own in which married men have no place. There's the old exception, of course, the feather-brained creature who would flirt with her shadow, and the W. I. B. who has never had a real sweetheart; but in nine hundred and ninety-nine cases out of every thousand the most jealous of wives might turn the spotlight on the relations existing between her husband and his stenographer or his bookkeeper, and she would find nothing to accelerate her pulse or disturb her temper.

As the master is seldom a hero in his own eyes, so the modern employer is seldom, if ever—but from what I have already said, I guess you know what I mean.

SIDELIGHTS ON PEOPLE
NOW IN THE SPOTLIGHT

Falling in Love Has Wrecked Many a College Career—Mr. Coolidge Likes Wallabies

FALLING in love, says the eminent dean of Columbia College, Herbert E. Mawkes, is one of the chief contributing causes to the poor records many young men leave behind them when they step out into the cruel hard world from the shelter of their Alma Maters.

The noted educator is very blunt about the matter and the facts, as he sees them, have been duly presented to the governing body of his institution for their careful consideration.

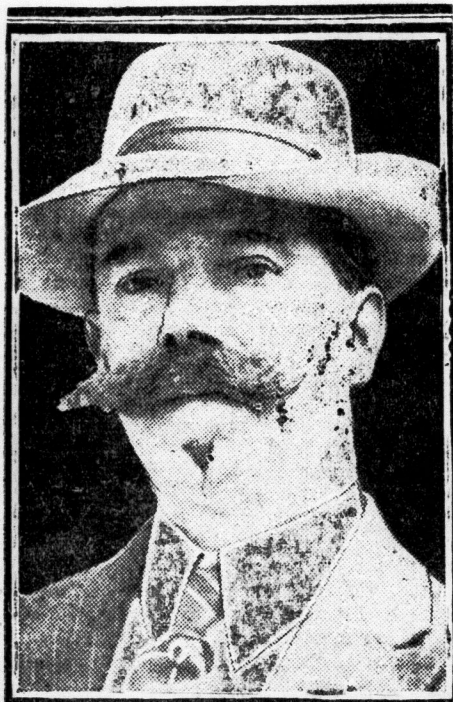

There are of course other reasons for lack of scholastic brilliance. The worthy dean is prepared to admit this. A combination of low intelligence, lack of funds and falling in love can also be responsible. Or the reasons may be ill-health, family trouble, plain laziness and falling in love.

"The great and commanding challenge to education during the next decade," he says, dealing with the general situation, "is the more accurate knowledge of the kind of young people we are trying to educate. We must not only know the level of their native intelligence—this we can determine accurately by means of our mental tests—but we must learn their biologic and economic background, their interests, their ambitions and their characters."

Now, Prof. Mawkes may be entirely correct and this matter of falling in love may be a distressing problem in the colleges and universities. It has been so considered by many less educated and far-seeing men for many centuries. But the odds are forty dollars to a banana peel that Prof. Mawkes, assisted by the entire faculty of Columbia College, their friends, close relatives and any mechanical aids he cares to use, cannot do a thing about it.

ONE of President Coolidge's admirers offered to present him with a wallaby. But America's chief executive did not know whether it was a new kind of motor car or an Australian drink. Unwittingly he showed his ignorance of cross-word puzzles. Almost anyone could have told him that the wallaby is a seven-letter word meaning small species of antipodean kangaroo.

MOTHERS looking for nice and new fairy tales to tell their small children could do worse than repeat in proper form the news story of greed and its awfully horrible effect which recently issued from the depths of Russia.

Canada may shortly be visited by one of the few remaining examples of the old-time feudal lords. He is the Seigneur de St. Jean, whose manor-house stands on the half-French, half-English Isle of Jersey, and he has made a great commercial reputation as a producer of exceptionally fine potatoes.

In the great city of Moscow, little children, there is a house which is not so great, being, to put it quite bluntly, rather a punk sort of apartment in one of the poorest sections of the city.

Now there is a law in the great and rather famous metropolis of Moscow which, for all practical purposes, abolishes landlords. In other words, the boarders instead of being bossed around by a zarina of a woman form a little soviet committee which runs the place, fixes room rents and looks in the roof and does all the other necessary things.

And this committee, dear children, in the poor but proud tenement we spoke of, determined to wager a bit of the house surplus. Several lottery tickets were therefore bought in the name of the house.

Some jolly old sort of a good fairy must certainly have been looking around that portion of Moscow for the next thing these poor people in the punk tenement knew, they had won a prize of 100,000 gold rubles.

This was indeed a little bit of very all right and the poor people were as happy a collection of bimboes as one might see in a couple of weeks. Ah, and aha two or three more times. These visions of undreamed wealth made streaks of greed appear on the unruined surface of tenement life.

The richer poor people decided that the money should be divided according to the amount of rent each paid and the poorer poor people said no, so they all went to court about it.

And the judge of the court in his dignity, majesty and wisdom said that not one of the tenants was to receive one solitary single section of a ruble. It may be spent on the house, re-building, repainting and putting in nifty plumbing but not a copper goes to any individual.

And in addition, by court order, there will be erected in the tenement courtyard a little brass sun dial which will stand there for ever and ever to remind all who see it of the vanity of human hopes and the wrong of human greed.

A PAGE ABOUT PEOPLE
Sidelights on Men and Women in the Public Eye

RECENTLY there appeared in one of the best known of American weekly newspapers an article which discussed the meteoric careers of a half-dozen or so unusual women. They were obscure women catapulted into fame by public sympathy. They reaped great financial rewards on the stage or in the movies following bursts of publicity when they had been robbed, shot their husbands or their husbands had shot someone else.

The article intimated that these ladies owed everything to the miracle-working powers of newspaper headlines.

This seems hardly correct. It would be nearer right to say that they succeeded in making themselves well-known and rich because they had the brains and ability to take advantage of the publicity they received.

Mary Louise Spas, the ex-Cinderella girl of millionaire Browning, is the most recent one mentioned in the article. Mary Louise, whose beauty seemingly is not the type which the camera can easily catch, has been offered numerous theatrical contracts. This the newspaper publicity has done for her. But the odds are high that Mary Louise won't last unless she has much ability as well.

For every woman who has crashed into fame following a burst of space in the daily news and has stayed famous there are a dozen who had the same start and never got anywhere.

Years ago two young ladies took part in an affair which resulted in the shooting of the American millionaire, W. E. Stokes. They promptly signed a vaudeville contract to appear at Hammerstein's. They appeared and did their stuff without as much as a ripple of applause.

"If they want to play next week, they have to shoot a couple more men!" said a veteran theatrical magnate.

Peggy Hopkins Joyce, the much-married, no doubt owes much to the publicity she has consistently received, but she is nevertheless as clever a woman as ever had tea at the Ritz.

Edith Bobe, dressmaker, who was the victim of a spectacular jewel robbery, had the sense to turn the notoriety she received into business and is now the modiste supreme.

Mrs. Edith Kelly Gould, who achieved fame by marrying into the Gould millions and added notoriety by testifying that her husband drank a quart of whiskey before breakfast every morning and took a bath once a month, had no lack of talent. Maybelle Gilman Corey, who married the multi-millionaire steel magnate, was a stage success when she met her husband and only used the additional notice to boost herself a few more runs up the ladder.

The same is true of Evelyn Nesbitt, formerly the wife of Harry Thaw, and Imogene Wilson, whose battles with Frank Tinney, the comedian, provided a great deal of semi-sensational reading, may have been silly in matters pertaining to the black-face laugh-maker, but she still had enough native cunning to make use of it, and the last the public heard of her was that she was about to wed the richest sausage-maker in Germany.

Fought as a Soldier
To Avenge Her Father

Josefa Is Only Sixteen Years Old—But She Has Spent Ten Years as a Warrior

TO the present list of war heroes there can now be added the name of Josefa Garcia, a Mexican Amazon—not one of the buxom misses so beautifully described in the classic writings of the Greeks, but a sixteen-year-old youngster who has just retired after ten years with the army and is now peacefully kneading bread in a village bakery.

Josefa's father was an army man, a colonel under General Trevillo. When she was merely a mite, so young that she scarcely remembers it, her mother died, and her father, after a series of makeshift attempts to place his daughter temporarily with relatives, decided suddenly to take her with his regiment.

Dressed as a boy, she lived the life of a soldier and none of her father's friends suspected that she was not Jose but Josefa. Discipline was lax among Mexican troops. Officers and men were followed by swarms of people, whole families, dogs, pigs, and even carts, bearing their household chattels.

So there was nothing unusual about the presence of the colonel's so-called son.

Josefa saw a great many battles during the revolutionary period between 1915 and 1920. Perhaps the most outstanding in her memory was the brutal engagement on the oil fields at El Ebana, when soldiers on both sides threw away their arms in their efforts to avoid the deluges of burning oil which had suddenly been introduced by the commanders.

But it was Josefa's last act as a young soldier that makes her story remarkable, even for Mexico. Jack Starr-Hunt tells it in a recent issue of the New York Herald-Tribune. The girl was standing with her father in an observation trench. There were intermittent bursts of rifle fire, and Josefa, hearing a cry, turned to see her father fall. He died almost immediately. The rage of a tigress seized her and she leaped from the trench. The men of her father's command followed, amazed and a trifle bewildered at her fury. The opposing forces immediately in front were wiped out or put to rout.

Then, having had her revenge, a revulsion of feeling swept over the girl. She felt sick of war, sick of fighting, sick of the sound of guns and the smell of blood. She disappeared.

Months later a provincial newspaper man, passing through a small village, found her there, a baker's assistant, and once more in a feminine role. He heard her story from other villagers, and with the aid of army records checked up. The facts related above are what he found.

Men Advised to Wear Much Less Clothing

This Is the Edict of Prof. Hill—He Ought to Know—He's a Man

MEN who make jokes about women's fashions are hereby ruled out of order and ordered to go and hide behind the nearest barn.

A noted British scientist, Leonard Hill, physiologist of the British National Institute of Medical Research, says men's clothes are a crime. At least as much a crime as parking too long on the main street. Mr. Hill, who is being paid a good salary for knowing such things, points to the clothing of the womenfolk as an example worthy to be followed.

Women wear sleeveless and low-necked clothes. Good. So should men.

They rarely wear tightly-fitting collars. Good. Neither should men.

They cut their hair and expose their necks. Fine.

"Thin layers of silk are all that protect large areas of lower limb from the air and the sunlight. An excellent idea from the point of view of health."

Men, the learned doctor declares, have much to learn from the deadlier sex in the matter of dress.

He does not mean, of course, that the husky male should be more feminine in his costume, but he does reiterate that he should not burden himself with peculiar contraptions like collars and ties. Man should, furthermore, wear less.

And women, he adds, might simplify their costuming and eliminate accessories which are added as decorations to please their fathers, husbands and sweethearts or odd bits which are mere swank.

The reason for all this startling revolution is very scientific. The little ultra-violet rays are behind it all. They are very easily discouraged, these rays, and would not think of attempting to penetrate woolen clothing.

Yet they are, in Prof. Hill's opinion, of the utmost importance in keeping the body in the pink of condition. Men must give the little violet emanations at least half a chance.

A SIGNAL OF DISTRESS

A STORY related recently by Admiral Sir Walter Cowan concerns the rector of a certain remote country parish who bought a new flag for the church tower.

As it fluttered gaily aloft, it was eyed with marked approval by his parishioners. All were delighted save one, an old naval signaler, a newcomer to the village, who was observed to be looking askance at it.

"Don't you like our new flag, Jack?" asked the worthy rector one day when he chanced to meet him.

"No, sir, I don't," replied the old signaler. "Nor would you, parson, if you knew the meaning of it."

"Indeed! And what does it mean, pray?"

"It means, 'in distress: want a pilot.'"

Ready to Oblige

AS he was getting into his motor car he was stopped by a pretty young girl. "Please help the Working Girls' Home," she begged. "Certainly," he replied genially; "but I haven't much time. How far away do they live?"

A PHILANTHROPIST—YES
BUT A MILITANT ONE

Canon Baynes-Reed, Well-Known War-Time Padre, Has Sane Method of Giving Charity

IT is now generally accepted as an indisputable fact that indiscriminate charity can do as much harm as good.

To be a successful philanthropist, a man not only requires an inborn instinct for generosity and the means to satisfy it but also a considerable amount of sternness, the ability to regularly refuse requests and to supervise the donations he does make.

One of the most open-hearted of Canadians and one of the dominions' finest philanthropists, taking the paragraph above as a definition, is Canon W. L. Baynes-Reed, now rector of St. John's church, Toronto. Canon Baynes-Reed is very well known to thousands in all parts of the country as Major Baynes-Reed, D.S.O., one of the most widely respected of C. E. F. padres. His good works, however, are known only to a few.

He shepherds his flock of parishioners with meticulous care. In all cases of sickness, distress or want, he offers his aid without delay. But the worthy pastor's activities do not cease with the dispensation of assistance in material things. He realizes perfectly that some of those he finds in need of aid are incapable of accepting it. There are undoubtedly those who are quite truthfully in dire straits financially but who cannot make proper use of money when they do get it. Canon Baynes-Reed therefore not only insists that the funds he provides be utilized for the purpose for which they are provided but also that they be expended both wisely and well.

For the canon is a militant as well as a beneficent pastor. There are instances by the score to prove this but one or two examples will suffice.

The first of these serves to illustrate his insistence on wise expenditure. Learning that a certain widow in his parish was in need of the actual necessities of life, the canon dug down in his pocket to the extent of a ten-dollar bill. A day or so later, in order to ascertain how the recipient of his generosity was faring, he paid a second visit to the widow's home. The first things that greeted his eye as he entered, were a pair of highly colored chromos in ornate gilt frames hanging in a conspicuous place. They had not been there on his previous visit and the canon became suspicious.

"Striking pictures," he remarked. "Where did you get them?"

"Well, sir, I am very fond of pictures," was the woman's answer, "and so when I was up at .....s department store yesterday and saw these on sale, I thought they would brighten up the house so I bought them with the money I had left over from the ten dollars you gave me. Aren't they pretty?"

"They are pretty enough, I suppose," was the canon's somewhat dubious comment, "but my dear woman, you now need provisions much more than you need pictures."

"Take them right back where you got them and have their value turned into groceries," were his curt instructions. The woman followed them.

The second incident is excellent evidence of the militant characteristics of the former chaplain.

In the second case, as in the first, Canon Baynes-Reed had contributed financially to a family in urgent need of food and warmth. There was no question of the urgent need. The money, however, unfortunately fell into the hands of the husband and head of the house who was much more concerned with providing stimulants for himself than with providing food for his wife and children. Accordingly the money was expended in obtaining complete control of a keg of beer.

Scarcely had the keg reached the home of destitution before word of its arrival had been brought to the canon who had paid for it. It wasn't many minutes till he was personally on the scene. And it wasn't many seconds after his arrival till the keg of beer was no more. As the pastor entered the house, he saw, leaning temptingly against the wall of the shed where the keg had been deposited, an axe. Seizing the weapon with the same spirit of righteous indignation that actuated him when he enlisted for overseas service and swinging it with the skill and force of a true woodsman, he crushed in the head of the keg. A vigorous kick spilled the contents on the shed's earthen floor where the beer was soon absorbed.

Canon Baynes-Reed proved then and there as he has on a host of other occasions that there is a great deal more to philanthropy and true generosity than merely giving away money.

PERHAPS you have never heard of Mother Jones. She is a leader among men and the idol of the rank and file of American miners. Yet she scorns woman suffrage and the standard methods of wielding political influence. She puts her trust, in her search for power, in a strong contralto voice, a big forefinger and vivid language. And at the age of ninety-five she is still militant.

A few weeks ago she published her autobiography, a book which deals in large measure with her activities as an organizer for the miners' union, and a crusader against the evils of child labor.

It is crowded with a slam-bang collection of anecdotes. Scattered through it are attacks on the labor leaders of to-day as compared with the old-timers.

"Many of our modern leaders of labor," says Mother Jones, "have wandered far from the thorny paths of the early crusaders. Never in the early days of the labor struggle would you find leaders wining and dining with the aristocracy; nor did the wives strut about like diamond-becked peacocks; nor were they attended by humiliated, cringing, colored servants."

"The wives of the early leaders took in washing to make ends meet. Their children picked and sold berries. The women shared the heroism, the privation of their husbands."

Mother Jones' methods were usually very direct and always both picturesque and dramatic. Twenty-five years ago she was fighting against child labor in the mills of Pennsylvania. She took a number of child workers on a "march" through the eastern states. The army finally reached New York and Bostock's Coney Island circus extended an invitation to one and all to be present at an afternoon performance.

After the show Mother Jones made a speech. The animals' empty iron cages were scattered about the platform beside her. Mother Jones put her children into the cages and they clung to the bars as she talked.

"Fifty years ago there was a cry against slavery," she said, "and men gave up their lives to stop the selling of black children on the street. To-day the white child is sold at $2 a week. Fifty years ago the black babies were sold C.O.D. To-day the white baby is sold on the installment plan."

The speech was a typical Mother Jones oration. A well-dressed young man in the audience laughed. The speaker stopped and pointed her finger at him.

"Stop your smiling, young man," she shouted. "Leave this place and go home. Go home and beg your mother to give you brains and a heart."

He rose and slunk out, followed by the eyes of the children in the cages. The people sat still and out in the rear of the circus tents a lion roared.

The lions always seemed to roar when Mother Jones was around. The story of her career is a medley of lockouts, evictions, strikes, tragedy and struggle. On one occasion she spent several weeks in a Colorado cellar prison, "fighting rats with a beer bottle," as she herself puts it.

Clarence Darrow, who knows her well, describes her as a woman whose "deep convictions and fearless soul always drew her to seek the spot where the fight was hottest and the danger greatest."

King George Once Posed for McClure Who To-day Cleans Chicken Coops

THIRTEEN years ago J. Crossland McClure was an outstanding figure in the empire's art circles. King George, clad in his coronation robes, posed for him at Buckingham Palace and McClure made a statue which was later erected in Madras. He had made a name for himself as a sculptor some time before that when he designed and erected a South African war memorial at Leicester.

Five years ago McClure disappeared. When the war broke out he volunteered but was rejected for physical reasons. He gave up his work as a sculptor and went into munition factories, dockyards or wherever he felt that he could do the most good. At the conclusion of hostilities he did not return to his art and his friends gradually lost track of him.

He has now turned up as Mr. Mc., porter and man-of-all-work at the Robin Hood Inn, Richmond Park. He serves drinks, cuts the grass, cleans out the chicken coop and performs all manner of odd duties.

He explains quite simply that his financial condition makes it impossible for him to resume his former occupation. He has not become embittered by his fate nor given up hope. He feels that the years he has spent in highly menial tasks are an asset instead of a liability. They have greatly widened his viewpoint, he declares.

The fact that this is a very good study of Col. Mitchell, the stormy petrel of the U. S. air force, with a group of young officers, is of secondary importance. Its chief interest to Canadians lies in the fact that it reveals the fact that the uniform of the American force is now almost an exact copy of that used in the Royal Air Force. It is interesting, too, to note that the faces of the officers are characteristic of half a dozen different races. There is no particular similarity of feature or expression which stamps them all as American. The U. S. army would seem to share the melting-pot traits of the country it serves.

SEEK HEALTH WORKERS AMONGST CLERGYMEN

Are In Splendid Position To Aid In War Against Disease.

Among the professions outside of the health none affords greater opportunities to advance the cause of the health than the ministry, with its possible exception of school teaching. Clergymen daily come into contact with cases of distress, crime, infidelity, mental and religious unrest which have their cause and active power in physical conditions and surroundings.

A move is now underway in many sections of the United States to recruit ministers in public health work.

EDWARD JOHNSON, famous Canadian tenor, who will appear at the London arena on Monday, Oct. 19, under the auspices of the London Kiwanis club.

EDWARD JOHNSON COMING TO ARENA

Famous Canadian Tenor Will Appear Under Auspices of Kiwanis Club.

One of the proudest claims for Canada today is that she produced Edward Johnson, the world's foremost tenor, who is to sing in London at the arena on Monday, Oct. 19, under the auspices of the Kiwanis club.

This performance is noteworthy in that it is the first time this great artist has been presented at popular prices, due to the desire of the Kiwanis club to place it within the reach of all classes of citizens to hear Mr. Johnson sing.

The story of the great Canadian tenor, whose appearances at the Metropolitan opera house have been memorable in the chronicles of musical New York, is the story of a progressive career. When Edward Johnson abandoned a gloriously successful career in light opera to devote himself entirely to the greater forms of the lyric drama, some of his friends thought that the young tenor was deserting a field in which his future was assured in favor of a course which led through trying turns to an apparently indefinite goal. But the translation from Broadway celebrity to a small Italian opera house, a transition effected only after four years of intensive study, proved to be a genuine step forward. In ten years Edward Johnson rose steadily up the operatic ladder until, on November 19, 1922, he reached the pinnacle to which all singers aspire—a leading role at the Metropolitan opera house.

Mr. Johnson's debut at the Metropolitan was in the difficult role of Avito in L'Amore de Re, a role which offers little opportunity for vocal display, but which taxes the arts of dramatic and lyric skill to an unusual degree. It was hardly an occasion for a sensational debut—and yet the town resounded with the praise of Edward Johnson before the following evening.

JOIN THE THROG OF RED BLOODED MEN AND WOMEN

Get More Pleasure Out of Life and Be of More Use in the World by Toning Up Your System With This Well-Known Household Remedy

There are people who lack the red blood to give color to their lips, warmth to their hands and brightness to their eyes.

These people tire easily and cannot compete in school, store or shop with the more energetic. Their blood being thin they are nervous and do not sleep well. Arising in the morning unrefreshed they begin each day badly and miss much of the pleasure of living.

To become active and energetic, like most red-blooded Canadians, these people need a blood-building tonic.

A tonic that gives strength, that revitalizes weak nerves, that increases the appetite, and aids digestion, will put color in the cheeks and lips and give vigor to the step. That means new joy in living, increased usefulness and longer life.

Wherever you find a person who has taken Dr. Williams' Pink Pills faithfully you find an enthusiastic friend of the tonic that has made life in a mean more in many ways.

These blood-making pills have been used by three generations of Canadians and in almost every community, however small, can be found those who owe health and happiness to this famous household remedy.

Weak and Run Down.

"I wish from my heart I could persuade every person who is run down in health to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial." Thus writes Mrs. Louise Mitchell, Oak Point, Man., who further says: "About a year ago I was a weak woman, suffering from a run down system and impoverished blood. Any little exertion would cause my legs to tremble and my heart to throb violently. I could not sweep a room or walk fifty feet without being exhausted. Then I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after taking only six boxes I am as well and strong as ever. I can walk and run without stopping every few seconds gasping for breath as previously. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will keep me steady in the future if ever my blood needs building up again, and I shall always find pleasure in recommending them to anyone needing a tonic."

There are many troubles due to weak, watery blood easily overcome by a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The sole mission of this medicine is to enrich and purify the blood, and when that is done all the varied symptoms of anaemia disappear, and good health returns.

Help for Nervous People.

Are you pale and weak, tired most of the time, out of breath on slight exertion?

Are you nervous, is your sleep disturbed so that rest does not refresh you?

Is your appetite poor, your digestion weak and do you have pains after eating?

If you have any of these symptoms you need the help of such a reliable tonic as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Read what Mr. W. W. Francis of Calgary, Alta., says of this tonic: "After returning from overseas," writes Mr. Francis, "my whole system was in a badly run-down condition. I became nervous, irritable, pale and lost weight. Of course I was given treatment and recommended many tonics, some of which I took, but with no apparent result. At last I could not even sleep. My sister, who is in England, wrote and urged me to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial, and I can scarcely say how glad I am that I took her advice. My friends were surprised at my complete recovery, but I assured them it was due entirely to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I now always keep a box on hand in case of emergency."

Relief From Indigestion.

When the stomach is feeble and food lies in it undigested the poisonous gases distend the walls of the stomach and cause serious interference with the other organs, especially with the action of the heart and lungs. These poisonous gases have other ill effects. They are absorbed by the blood and so weaken and corrupt it as to cause aches in remote parts of the body and the formation of unhealthy tissue everywhere. Experience shows that these troubles vanish just as soon as the stomach is made strong enough to digest the food. In other words, it needs a tonic that will enable it to do the work of changing the food into nourishment. The tonic ought to be one that will agree with the most delicate stomach and this is exactly what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do.

Here is a bit of convincing proof given by Mrs. Chas. Laddner, Ellerslie, P. E. I., who says: "For some years I was a sufferer from stomach trouble. Everything I ate caused distress, sour stomach and belching. I could not eat meat or potatoes, and I grew weak and nervous. No medicine seemed to help me until I was persuaded to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and these simply worked wonders. I took the pills faithfully for a couple of months, by which time every symptom of the trouble had disappeared, and there has not since been the slightest symptom of stomach trouble. No wonder I praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

TO EXPECTANT MOTHERS

Letter From Mrs. Ayars Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Spring Valley, Sask.—"I took the Vegetable Compound before my last confinement, when I got to feeling so badly that I could not sleep nights my back ached so across my hips, and I could hardly do my work during the day. I never had such an easy confinement and this is my sixth baby. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the 'Farmer's Telegram' and wrote you for one of your books. We have no druggists in our town, but I saw your medicine in T. Eaton's catalogue. I am a farmer's wife, so have all kinds of work to do inside and outside the house. My baby is a nice healthy girl, who weighed nine pounds at birth. I am feeling fine after putting in a large garden since baby came. (She is as good as she can be). Yours is the best medicine for women, and I have told about it and even written to my friends about it."—Mrs. ANNIE E. AYARS, Spring Valley, Sask.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent medicine for expectant mothers, and should be taken during the entire period. It has a general effect to strengthen and tone up the entire system so that it may work in every respect as that here intended. All druggists sell this dependable medicine. Give it a trial.

ST. LAWRENCE DEVELOPMENT FAVORED BY MAYOR SLOGGETT

Elgin Candidate Urges Improvement of Port Stanley Harbor By Government.

SEN. McCOIG SPEAKS

Special to The Advertiser by Staff Reporter. St. Thomas, Oct. 9.—A great gathering of Liberals was held at Port Stanley this evening, addressed by Senator McCoig, Chatham; Mrs. John Beavis, Brampton; Candidate G. H. Sloggett, Alex. Darrach, St. Thomas, and N. Cornell, chairman of Port Stanley.

Mayor Sloggett, in his address, declared himself for public ownership, and the St. Lawrence development scheme. The latter, he said, was the only sane method of national development, and better conditions, giving cheaper power, light, and water, would be a substitute for American coal. Mr. Sloggett pointed out that the only development of Port Stanley harbor had been accomplished under the Liberal tenure of office, and should be elected as federal candidate, he would do everything he could towards placing Port Stanley on the map as a lake port.

Man of Integrity. The candidate explained that he did not solicit the nomination as Liberal candidate, the leaders in the party having come to him and prevailed upon him as a man of integrity and honesty, to allow himself to be placed in the field as a candidate. "I am new in the game," he said, "but I am anxious and will try to learn. I will ever be my life to learn, and to the best of my ability and to look after your interests."

Mr. Meighen's efforts along the tariff lines. "If Mr. Meighen is so desirous of being in power, but put it up with the tariff, he should be interested in playing up a variety of interests which will make the rich richer and the poor poorer."

Shoe Industry Prosperous. Mrs. Beavis, comes from good Canadian stock. She and her family have lived in Brampton for 192 years, and she is especially competent to speak of conditions in her district. After an association of 23 years in the boot and shoe industry, she states that the industry was never more prosperous. The J. W. Hewitson Co. of Brampton had doubled its factory floor space in the four years, besides purchasing a huge factory at Acton, Ont. She told of what the Liberal government had done for the Port Stanley harbor, deepening and making it into a creditable lake port.

For Mr. Meighen, the speaker had nothing but the most severe criticism. "In the old days a traitor, a man who preached against his country, was hanged, but today Mr. Meighen, a would-be premier, broadcasts the supposed 'blue ruin' from east to west."

They were hiding in a haystack near Silver Plains, forty miles south of here. The men captured were: John Stanton and Alex. Shupeniuk, alleged murderers, and George Labodniuk, alleged bandit. ### TO PROCEED WITH TRIAL OF PEPALL

Efforts To Have Charges In Connection With Bond Scandal Tried In Court of General Sessions.

Canadian Press Despatch. Toronto, Oct. 9.—Trial of Andrew H. Pepall on charges in connection with the Ontario bond transactions scandal might properly proceed in the court of general sessions now being conducted by Judge Coatsworth. An application to have Pepall's trial expedited, which was heard yesterday and adjourned until today, was granted by his honor today.

Judge Coatsworth confined his remarks to expression of opinion rather than a court order. He said he had no doubt that the court of general sessions had all the facilities and qualifications for trying the Pepall case, "and so far as it is in my power I will direct the crown to have a bill of indictment brought before this court." Pepall's case was to have come before the general sessions, commencing next week.

R. H. Greer, K.C., introduced a motion to have the trial of W. W. Dunlop, former inspector of prisons and charities in Ontario, expedited in a like manner. Judge Coatsworth will render a decision on this application on Monday next.

LIBERALS OF OXFORD CAMPAIGN IN EARNEST

Conservatives Attempting To Sway Progressives To Tory Banner Without Success.

Special to The Advertiser. Woodstock, Oct. 9.—Liberals in Oxford have started their campaign in earnest, and although the first campaign speech by Dr. D. J. Sinclair, candidate in North Oxford, was not made until last night at Kintore, feeling throughout the north riding has indicated for some time past staunch loyalty to its traditional party.

Fervent efforts are being made by the local Conservative organization to sway the Progressives to the Tory banner, but in both north and south the former F. O. adherents are turning to the Liberal tents as the best method of solving their own agricultural problem.

One of the most concrete examples of the poor support being accorded the Conservative group in South Oxford was a recent meeting held in the interests of Donald Stewart, a member of the last parliament, at Sweburg, when 31 men, women and a boy turned out to greet the Conservative member.

PROMINENT SEAFORTH MAN DIES SUDDENLY

J. R. Habkirk Drops Dead At Home After Short Illness.

Special to The Advertiser. Seaforth, Oct. 9.—Mr. J. R. Habkirk, of Seaforth, dropped dead while sitting on the edge of the bed at about 10 o'clock on Thursday night. He had been indisposed for two or three days previously. Wednesday he resumed his work at the Robert Bell foundry. His widow and three children survive. Mr. A. Habkirk, of Port Colborne, Mrs. Platt, of Seaforth, and Mrs. Milton Chesney, of Toronto.

The Tide of Politics

Sloggett's Kindly Act Brings Charge of Vote Buying—Archbishop Gauthier Urges Priests to Keep Out of Politics In Montreal Diocese.

Special to The Advertiser. St. Thomas, Oct. 9.—One of the regrettable parts of the election in St. Thomas is the charge of buying votes, made out of a paltry sum of $100,000 by Mayor Sloggett, Liberal candidate in this riding. A city teamster in hard circumstances appealed to a feed merchant in east Tabbot street for some fodder for his team. Being refused the teamster appealed for backing to Mayor Sloggett, who had helped him on a similar occasion during the past year.

Mr. Sloggett asked the merchant if he couldn't let the poor man have some feed in view of the fact that he was working and would be able to pay soon to which he received the following answer, "Rather a dear vote, isn't it, George?" And the merchant has the nerve to spread an erroneous view of the story all over town.

JUDGE RELEASES MURDER SUSPECT

Declares Crown Has Not Produced Sufficient Evidence For Trial of Chinaman.

Canadian Press Despatch. Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 9.—Declaring that the crown had not produced sufficient evidence warranting the trial of Wong Foon Sing on a charge of murdering Janet K. Smith in Vancouver on July 26, 1924, the grand jury in the assize court presided over by Mr. Justice D. A. McDonald, returned a "no bill," and the Chinese house boy, who has been out on bail, will be formally released.

Seeks To Annul Secret Marriage

Judgment Reserved By Justice Mowat On Application of Girl's Father.

Canadian Press Despatch. Toronto, Oct. 9.—Judgment was reserved by Mr. Justice Mowat today on the application of the father of a girl designated as "Mrs. Jay," for annulment of her secret marriage, until such time as it will be known whether or not the attorney-general for Canada wishes to intervene.

The husband, called "Mr. Jay," was brought to court and heard his wife tell of how they had met at the homes of friends and had married. The husband had said he was unable to support his wife, and was agreeable to an annulment.

Revolutionary Revisions In Rules of Board of Trade Adopted

Chicago, Oct. 9.—Revolutionary revisions in the rules of the century-old Chicago board of trade, ending a stormy battle for more than six years over grain marketing methods, were adopted today by an overwhelming vote of the membership.

One rule is expected to curb wild price swings; another creates a business conduct committee to supervise trading ethics and protect the public interest, and a third major change permits outside members to vote by mail, a point in controversy for ten years.

The changes and the recent creation of a modern clearing-house system have the endorsement of the department of agriculture, charged with supervision of the exchange, officers said. The changes made by the Chicago board today are expected to be followed by other exchanges and Minneapolis already has adopted almost identical amendments.

Violent price swings such as occurred last winter may be curbed under the new limitation rule, which provides that on ten hours' notice the directors may declare an emergency exists and place a limitation upon daily price swings. The directors may then prohibit trading during any day at prices above or below a certain percentage of the closing price of the day. To directors must be present and a two-thirds vote is necessary, and on motion to declare it ended a two-thirds vote against is necessary to discontinue it. A member violating the regulation will risk serious penalty.

CANADA Helps Her Farmers

CANADA has long recognized agriculture as her greatest basic industry. Hence, whatever benefits the farmer, benefits Canada. In recent years much has been done by the government in enacting legislation, by Council in passing regulations, and by the Department of Agriculture in putting various policies into effect all with this end in view—helping the farmer.

As already indicated, the introduction of grading in connection with the selling of many of our products has done much to help the farmer and improve our marketing opportunities, but grading is not by any means the only line of effort undertaken. In fact, there are very many lines along which efforts are being made to help the farmer either directly or indirectly, and so promote the interests of Canada generally.

To cite only a few of these lines, and barely to mention some of the things being done, the laws passed to help out or the policies in effect to promote the industry, the following paragraphs are submitted.

- I. Helping the Farmer Sell His Products: (a) The Stocker Trade with Great Britain re-opened April 1st, 1923, after 30 years' suspension. In 1923, 57,672 cattle were shipped to Great Britain; in 1924, 79,455 cattle, while for 1925, up to Sept. 24th, 73,800 cattle have gone forward, so that it is probable that over 100,000 head will be shipped this year. (b) Improved Practices on Canadian Stockyards have been brought about by the Department's control of live stock exchanges and stockyards. (c) Feeder Shows and Sales were organized in 1923, and are generously assisted, encouraging the proper feeding and finishing of our beef cattle. (d) The Meat Inspection Service, by establishing the reputation of Canadian meats on foreign markets, has done much towards the building up of a profitable outlet for our live stock. (e) Shipping Point Inspection for Fruit, first put into effect last year, is meeting with the approbation of growers and shippers. (f) The Market for Canada's Tobacco Crop is being extended, and the demand increased by effective propaganda by the Department. II. Improving Quality: (a) By Grading Produce, such as butter, cheese, hogs, apples, potatoes, eggs, wool, grass and clover seed, and hay, the quality of these products marketed is being improved; the buyer is able to place confidence in the product, and the selling price is consequently enhanced. (b) By Plant Breeding Work, new varieties of cereals, fruits and vegetables are being produced. Mention need only be made of Marquis and the new Garnet Wheat, of the Melba Apple, and the Melba Apple, to illustrate the value of this work. (c) By the Distribution of Pure Bred Sires, (bulls, rams and boars), vast improvement has been brought about in our flocks and herds, which improvement would have been impossible save for this assistance. (d) By Assisting Agricultural Exhibitions by money grants and by assisting live stock exhibitors in the payment of transportation costs for their exhibits, the value of quality is being brought more closely to the attention of the farmer, and the spirit of emulation aroused. III. Encouraging and Improving Production: (a) Certification of Seed Potatoes has done a great deal to encourage the use of Canadian seed potatoes in the United States, while the use of such certified seed has improved the quality of Canada's potato crop generally. (b) Flax Growing has been greatly developed in some districts, revived in others, and introduced in still other parts of the Dominion. (c) Tobacco Growing has been encouraged, and valuable assistance given, in production and marketing, in the older tobacco districts of Quebec and Ontario, while this year the possibilities of certain parts of British Columbia have been investigated, with such satisfactory results that the work will be extended next year. (d) Egg Laying Contests, started some four years ago, have increased in popularity and number, there being now thirteen contests in operation. As a basis for registration and certification, these contests have already caused a wonderful improvement in Canada's poultry flocks. (e) Silver Black Fox Farming is being set on a stable basis by the inspection of foundation stock commenced by the Department two years ago, and now nearing completion. Fox diseases have for some years been the subject of study at a special laboratory maintained for that purpose, while a new Fox Research Station is now being established to assist in solving the problems of feeding, breeding and disease control. IV. Lowering Cost of Production: (a) The Introduction of Crop Rotations, proven satisfactory after a number of years' trial at the various Experimental Farms, is helping the farmer make better use of his land. (b) The Introduction of Better Cultural Methods is resulting in conservation of energy, increased returns and lower costs. (c) The Introduction of Better Feeding Methods for Live Stock is helping the farmer make better use of his feeds, and increase returns from his live stock. (d) The Introduction of New and Better Varieties of cereals, fruits, vegetables and special crops such as flax and tobacco gives the farmer better returns from the land he has under cultivation, with certainly no increase in cost of production. (e) The Illustration Stations of which there are now some 150 scattered throughout the Dominion, by demonstrating under actual farm conditions the rotations, cultural methods, feeding methods and new varieties of various crops tried and found satisfactory on the Experimental Farms, serve as object lessons to farmers for mile around and show how costs can be reduced and returns increased. V. Protection Against Fraud: (a) Fertilizers are controlled by the system of analysis, registration and inspection maintained under the Fertilizers Act. (b) Feeds are sold under conditions prescribed by the Feeding Stuffs Act which place severe penalties on dealers selling feeding stuffs not up to standard, or likely to be injurious to live stock. (c) Seeds, under the Seeds Act, 1923, are sold by grade, and are subject to inspection while the sale of seed containing noxious weeds is prohibited. (d) Canned Goods must be equal to the standard of quality described on the container, and up to weight. All canned fruit, vegetable and milk labels must be approved by the Department before they may be used. VI. Fighting Disease and Pests: (a) Wheat Rust Eradication on the prairie is a step nearer by reason of the determined efforts now being made by the Department. A staff of trained pathologists and plant breeders has been organized, a new Rust Laboratory is being built, the breeding of rust resistant varieties is proceeding, and eradication of the host plants, barberry and buckthorn completed. (b) The Eradication of Bovine Tuberculosis is gradually coming nearer the bounds of possibility, by reason of three different policies of the Department. (i) Accredited Herds, there being now 1945 herds of pure bred cattle fully accredited, that is, declared absolutely free from tuberculosis, while 2187 other herds are in process of accreditation. (ii) Restricted Tuberculosis Free Areas have been established in the Carleton district of Manitoba and the Chateaugay-Huntington district in Quebec, the first in 1923, the second in 1924. A third area, consisting of the Province of Prince Edward Island, is now under test, while it is hoped to commence work in the Fraser Valley of British Columbia in December of this year. (iii) Under the Supervised Herd Plan, herds are tested by officers of the Department, but no compensation is paid for reactors, as is done in the case of accredited herds and restricted areas. (c) Cattle Mange, Hog Cholera and Glanders are effectively controlled by inspection. (d) Injurious Insects, grasshoppers, European corn borer, gipsy moth, spruce budworm, and brown fall moth, would inflict more damage were it not for control measures carried out by the Department.

Want Reservations In Geneva Treaty To Reduce German Responsibility.
 Associated Press Despatch.
 Locarno, Switzerland, Oct. 9.—A gentlemen's agreement for Germany, designed to lessen her responsibilities as a member of the League of Nations, was the particular problem wrestled with today by the Locarno security conference.
 It is not an easy matter. France does not like it. Great Britain would prefer to have nothing to do with it, but Germany pushed the idea of such an agreement vigorously.
 The plan is that the allied powers, all of which are members of the League of Nations council, would jointly and individually undertake to bring into existence at Geneva some reservation to article XVI of the League of Nations' covenant, whereby Germany would be free to abstain from punitive expeditions ordained by the league against aggressor nations.
 Tomorrow's plenary sessions will doubtless throw some light on this issue, which may be referred to as a crucial question of the conference, for if Germany can get into the league it is generally presumed that she will be content with a special declaration proclaiming her eastern alliances inviolable. Sectional conversations by the leaders, including Count Stryzky, the Polish foreign minister, and Dr. Eduard Banes, foreign minister of Czechoslovakia, marked today's feverish activities. Everybody was optimistic except the Germans, but they are described as "pessimistic for home consumption. There is here that Germany wants something—evacuation of Cologne, diminution of French occupation of the left bank of the Rhine, and colonies.
 It is pointed out that the German delegates hesitate about returning to Berlin shouldered with an engagement to join the league, but with empty pockets.

Watford Pioneer Called By Death
Mrs. Mary Stapleford Had Reached the Advanced Age of 100 Years.
 Special to The Advertiser.
 Watford, Oct. 9.—The oldest resident of this village, who was probably the oldest Canadian born resident of Western Ontario, Watford's only centenarian, passed away early this morning, when Mrs. Jane Stapleford, widow of the late John Stapleford and mother of ex-rev. John Stapleford, died at the residence of her son, at the ripe old age of one hundred years, one month and twenty days.
 The late Mrs. Stapleford was born in the township of Salford, near Hamilton, on August 18, 1825, and was a great-niece of Robert Land, the pioneer founder of the city of Hamilton. She was twice married, her first husband being Aaron Nelson, whom she married in the township of Nelson, on April 13, 1844. In 1852, the family moved to the township of Brooke, near this village, and lived there for six years, later moving to Fort Huron, Michigan, where Mr. Nelson died. Her second husband was John Stapleford, whom she married in 1860. They settled in Watford about a year later and she was a resident of this village for over sixty years.
 To the first union, six children were born, two of whom survive, Abner Nelson of Oregon, and Mrs. Sarah Wise, of Port Huron, Michigan. To the second union, four children were born, all of whom survive; three sons, Josiah Stapleford of Aberdeen, Washington, Sanford of Watford, and Homer of Yale, and one daughter, Mrs. F. C. Lowry of Port Huron, Michigan. The direct descendants of deceased number one hundred and twenty-six.
 On August 18 last, Mrs. Stapleford had celebrated the one hundred anniversary of her birth by holding a reception on the front veranda of the family residence, where she received the personal greetings and congratulations of many friends. The municipal council presented her with a bouquet of American Beauty roses, the receive making the presentation.
 The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon, with service at the family residence and interment at the Watford cemetery.

THINK of the immense saving in time, in building a house when ONE board is made to do the work of FIVE!
 GYPROC Board when used in place of sheathing, not only saves time but it gives you the valuable advantage of fireproof construction. It makes a stronger wall too.
 GYPROC Board costs less than ordinary sheathing and is applied in much less time. GYPROC used also as an interior finish for walls and ceilings will enable you to complete your building from three to five weeks earlier and save proportionately on labor costs.
 GYPROC is pure gypsum plaster cast in broad, smooth, straight-edged sheets, flexible and easily handled. These sheets of solid rock serve as an insulator against heat, cold and moisture. They can be sawed and nailed as easily as ordinary lumber.

KEEP DECIMAL SYSTEM IN HUNGARY CURRENCY
 Magyar Officials Favor Florin As Opposed To Austrian Kronen.
 By A. R. DECKER.
 Special to The Advertiser and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright, Vienna, Oct. 9.—Hungary is considering changing its currency from the crown to the florin or florin, on the basis of 20,000 crowns to one florin.
 Many schemes have been suggested, some proposing the use of the Austrian shilling because its gold parity is the same, and to facilitate trade between neighbors, but the majority do not want Hungarian currency bound with the Austrian. Others want the English pound, but a majority favors maintaining the decimal system.
 Some propose an abrupt return to the gold crown, but fear of arousing hopes of valorization of the old currency and internal obligations has dissuaded the government, and reference to the florin historical unit is favored.

Mocha Temple Reception Attended by Michigan and Ontario Lodgemen.

PARADE AT NIGHT
Band Heads Pilgrims, 50 Candidates Are Initiated At Masonic Temple.

With the blare of trumpets and the roll of drums the members of the Mocha Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of London last night opened their reception to the visiting Shriners who had come from Ontario, Michigan and other points to attend the semi-annual ceremonial and business meeting.

Promptly at 7:30 o'clock the craftsmen of the London chapter paraded from the Masonic Temple to the headquarters of the visiting tribesmen at the Tecumseh Hotel.

Resplendent in their dress of red, green and gold of the Masonic order, the members of the Mocha Temple band and the Mocha Temple drum corps led the procession south on Richmond street. The officers and nobles brought up in the rear.

At the hotel the visiting Shriners formed and returned to the Masonic Temple.

The white billy-goat, which is synonymous with Masonry, was a feature of the parade. Fifty candidates were initiated into the mysteries of the glaring desert sands, and it was only fitting that the traditional mascot should be a part of the ceremony.

Business sessions and the reception of the visitors lasted until 10 p.m. An entertainment was then given in the temple by the Masonic musicians.

COCKSHUTT AIDS BECK MEMORIAL

Lieut.-Governor Is Honorary President of Sanatorium Endowment Fund.

Special to The Advertiser.
Toronto, Oct. 9.—The province-wide campaign to be waged from Nov. 20 to Nov. 28 to raise $500,000 for the Beck memorial endowment of Queen Alexandra sanatorium at London received a notable impetus today with the announcement that Colonel Hon. Harry Cockshutt, lieutenant-governor of Ontario, has accepted the honorary presidency; Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, premier of Ontario, and W. E. N. Sinclair, leader of the provincial Liberal opposition, the honorary vice-presidencies; Charles A. Magrath, successor to Sir Adam in the chairmanship of the hydro-electric power commission of Ontario, the chairmanship of the provincial campaign committee, and S. C. Norsworthy of Toronto, superintendent of Ontario branches of the Bank of Montreal, the treasurer.

The deathbed appeal of Sir Adam to his friends to raise this fund to insure the continuance in perpetuity of the war against tuberculosis and in aid of its sufferers, has not fallen on deaf ears.

Provincial headquarters were opened today at 504-5 Northern Ontario Building, 330 Bay street, Toronto, from whence Mr. Magrath issued the following statement, announcing his acceptance of the leadership of the campaign, and commending the Beck memorial endowment to the generosity of all Ontario: "I have accepted the chairmanship of the provincial committee of the Beck memorial endowment for the Queen Alexandra sanatorium because I believe we can honor the memory of the late Sir Adam Beck in no more appropriate way than by insuring the perpetuation and wide usefulness of that institution, which he and Lady Beck founded, and to which they gave so much of time, money and self-sacrificing devotion.

"During his last illness he repeatedly urged that an endowment be raised to provide additional income, which would help to bridge the difference between the amount patients cared for were able to pay and the actual cost of maintenance. Shortly before his death Sir Adam gave the initial $10,000 to start this fund. On the basis of the present capacity and work of the sanatorium, this difference amounts to from $25,000 to $35,000 annually.

Leadership Bore Fruit.
"It is due to the wise leadership of Sir Adam, who was the sanatorium's president from its foundation to the time of his death, that this institution has grown into a place where medical experts in the treatment and prevention of tuberculosis proclaim it one of the finest, most ideally situated and best equipped institutions of its kind on the American continent. Its great service of health and healing, its leadership in preventive work, its efforts in modern research and training, in the treatment and care of tuberculosis which it serves. At the present time there are 292 patients at the sanatorium. Every section of the province is represented in the list of those who are being helped back to health. The city of Toronto is represented by 32, London by 37, and 137 are from widely-scattered sections. Because, therefore, of the province-wide service of this institution, the opportunity will be given to all sections to contribute to this fund during the campaign.

"Sir Adam Beck can no longer lead forward this work. He has thrown the torch to us. In carrying it, the people of this province will not only honor his memory, but will give the light of hope, health and healing to thousands who suffer with this dread disease, and will carry forward the war to stamp out tuberculosis.

"Our committee will ask that those who lead in the business and professional life of the various municipalities throughout the province join hands with us in a concerted effort to raise this memorial endowment fund during the period of Nov. 20 to Nov. 28."

HODGINS SPEAKS AT DORCHESTER

Progressive Candidate For East Middlesex Attacks Tariff and Senate.

by Staff Correspondent.
Special to The Advertiser.
Dorchester, Oct. 9.—At a fairly well-attended meeting held in the interests of Mr. A. L. Hodgins, Progressive candidate for East Middlesex, here this evening strong reasons were advanced by Mr. Telfer, president of the East Middlesex U. P. association, Mr. Laidlaw of London, and A. H. Hodgins why the Progressive party is better qualified after four years' experience to look after the interests of the farmer, which, after all, is the foundation of prosperity.

Regret was expressed for the far-reaching influence of the party newspapers.

"Since the fathers of confederation sank party differences for the common good, we too must sink party differences for the national good. If, as the custodians of a great heritage, we fail, we can never have a nation that we as Canadians can be proud of. In days gone by, a man who turned from his party was a turncoat and a yellow-jacket, but today he is the savior of his country. If by individual thinking he sees his party going astray he turns about and uses his God-given common sense and judgment.

"The Progressive party stands for measures that make for moral uplift, economy, wise expenditure of the funds entrusted to them, whether of municipality or nation, and for individual thought in parliament."

Mr. Hodgins, when questioned by the temperance people, stated that he was prepared to stand by the temperance issue even to the extreme measure of prohibition. Mr. Hodgins also favors a low tariff and the abolition of the senate. William Armour acted as chairman, and at the close of the meeting three rousing cheers were given the candidate.

DEER HUNTING TIME NOW.
Up in the North Woods the boys are already bringing in their game. In the district north of the main line of the Canadian National Railways, between Quebec and Winnipeg, the moose and deer season opened Sept. 15 and will continue until Nov. 15. Throughout this district, which covers millions of acres, big game is always very plentiful, and every hunter who goes north is almost sure of bringing back his full complement.

South of this line to the French and Mattawa rivers the open season for deer and moose is from Oct. 25 to Nov. 30, both dates inclusive, while in the territory yet further south, i.e., south of the French, Pickering and Mattawa rivers, the open season is from Nov. 5 to 20.

The district adjacent to the French, Pickering and Mattawa rivers is easy of access, and is one of the famous and popular hunting grounds of Ontario. Keen, dyed-in-the-wool hunters go up to this country of trail, river and lake every year, and are always successful.

There can be no better vacation than one spent in these northern Ontario woods. Clean your gun, assemble your kit, and get ready for a real he-man holiday. Any Canadian National Railway's agent will gladly supply you with full hunting information and particulars of special and regular train service.

Printed leaflet with details of this service and general information of interest to hunters may be had on application.—Adv. xt-031

MAN'S BODY FOUND IN SMALL CREEK
Badly Decomposed Body Believed to Be In Water Some Time.

Special to The Advertiser
Woodstock, Oct. 9.—The badly decomposed body of a man about 50 years of age was discovered this afternoon in a creek near Richwood village, by a man who was passing along the bank of the river. The body was found standing in an upright position with the head a few inches below the surface of the water near the bank, and a county coroner, who was called, voiced the opinion that the dead man had been in the creek some ten days or more.
High County Constable Hunt, who was called to the scene of the discovery, was unable to find any clue as to whether the unfortunate man came to his death by violence or not, while a search of the clothing failed to reveal anything that might lead to the establishment of the man's identity.
The body was clothed in a suit of fairly good material, but the man's general appearance was such as to indicate that he may have been a farmer or laborer. The body was removed to a Drumbo undertaker's at the order of the coroner, but an inquest has not yet been decided on.

Strachey Lifts Gloomy Veil From British Trade Reports

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, Oct. 9.—Industry in Great Britain is well on the way to recovery, declared J. St. L. Strachey, editor of the London Spectator in an address today before the Canadian Club. Mr. Strachey deplored the gloomy views held, he said, by many of his countrymen. He said he was no believer in pessimism, which served no useful purpose. No matter how bad conditions were, it was always possible to look back to the days when they were immeasurably worse.
Mr. Strachey said that Britain was not only recovering trade, but British manufacturers were opening up and developing new markets of agriculture. Increase in sales in the automobile industry was in itself a sign of advancing prosperity.

Weekly Farm Notes

Sheep Prove To Be One of the Most Profitable of Agricultural Lines—Higher Priced Potatoes Are Expected Throughout Dominion—Record-Breaking Yield of Crops Is Reported in All Provinces.

While the recent heavy showers have caused some damage to crops in eastern and northern Ontario and have held up fall wheat seeding around Guelph, on the whole the moisture has been beneficial. Generally speaking, the past summer has been rather dry. From April to July, there was no rain in Western Ontario, and not a drop fell during the month of August in the eastern half of the province. As a result, the stems and wells dried up and even the sub-soil lost its moisture. The present heavy showers will remedy this condition, will revive pastures and insure a good start for the extra large acreage of fall wheat promised this year. Fall plowing will be carried on in full swing, thus saving much valuable time in preparing soil for seed next spring. Roots and corn still to be harvested will not be affected.

END OF HIGH SHEEP PRICES?
Sheep have proven one of the most profitable agricultural lines in the past few years. When everything else was tumbling values for wool and lamb began to improve, and have kept it up fairly well until the present time. As a result sheep breeding is again becoming popular and practically every province reported an increase in the number of these animals last year. Furthermore, breeding stock has boomed, good ewes being almost unobtainable this summer. But the cycle of high prices has been completed, according to officials of the United States department of agriculture. These authorities claim that sheepmen the world over, attracted by the better prices of wool and lamb, have added to their holdings, and now, unless there is a big improvement in world business, there will soon be more lamb and wool than Mr. Consumer can handle. Lamb is scheduled to go down next spring, and wool may follow in a few months. U.S. officials advise no more speculating in wools; if it is a case of sheep or cattle, buy cattle, they say. Of course, as these men also point out, sheep should be always remunerative in rough or partially cleared country or where they are kept in a small way in connection with mixed farming.

WESTERN WHEAT GRADING BETTER.
Although first threshing reports from the west, as one would naturally expect, graded very low, the quality of the later grain through the separators has improved. The first grain cut, and therefore the first ready for the thrasher, was that prematurely ripened by extreme hot weather. Naturally the kernels were shrunken and of otherwise poor appearance. The stuff going through the mill today, however, is from evenly ripened fields. On the whole the quality of the grain should be good, as the weather at harvest time tended to make the grain hard and dry. Unfortunately, since the publishing of more optimistic reports from both Ottawa and Washington, prices have commenced to drop. This movement, however, will not continue very far, in the opinion of experts, who point out that although the crop is exceedingly good in Europe, the exportable surplus of wheat from United States and India is away below normal and therefore Canada should have things fairly well in her own way on the world's markets.

HIGHER PRICED POTATOES.
All indications point to higher priced potatoes. Values were ruinously low last season, and as a result farmers in both Canada and United States cut down on the acreage. In New Brunswick this reduction amounted to 25 per cent, and while less drastic in other sections, the decrease was considerable. Following this inauspicious beginning came a season of generally poor weather. In the western provinces crops are good, but in Ontario and Quebec, where the bulk of Canada's spuds are produced, but 75 per cent of a normal crop is expected. The same is true of United States. Furthermore, blight is still reducing prospects in Ontario.

While wheat is still the leading product of the west, we, in the east, are too prone to believe that prosperity on the prairies absolutely depends on the leading bread cereal. As a matter of fact, King Wheat has been losing his grip on the west for the past ten years and now, fortunately, while a poor yield of this grain is still a serious factor, it does not mean ruin. Mixed farming is steadily replacing the one crop cultivation, and when once fully established, solid prosperity, as we have it in rural Ontario, will settle on the west. A few figures taken at random from recent western statistics indicate the direction of the wind. Though this branch of agriculture has sprung into existence since the war, 85,000 acres of corn are under cultivation. In Saskatchewan this year, with excellent prospects for a bumper yield, though unheard of ten years ago, every other farm throughout the west is now growing some sweet corn. In 1915 Alberta imported from outside the province 4,118,000 pounds of butter. This year farmers in the "sunny province" will produce 25,000,000 pounds of butter, 8,000,000 pounds of which will be exported. In 1921 Alberta was still bringing in eggs and poultry; today she exports well over a hundred carloads of eggs. Dairy production has increased at the rate of 15 to 25 per cent each year for the past decade in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.
RECORD YIELDS REPORTED.
Despite the fact that Ontario farmers harvested bumper crops last year, according to figures issued by the provincial government, another record season is reported. All crops harvested to date, with the exception of hay and clover, are not only above the average yield but are higher than the big harvest of 1924. A record in fall wheat has been established with an average yield of 30.4 bushels per acre. The average yield for the past 43 years was only 21.7 bushels. The total crop amounts to 22,894,000 bushels, or the largest since 1915.
On the whole, the Canadian apple crop will be a light one this year. With the exception of Ontario, there is reduction in every province from the figures of a year ago. The Nova Scotia crop has been badly hit by unfavorable weather. Capable of producing almost 2,500,000 barrels, a poor "set" following blossoming reduced this potential figure to about 1,500,000, while a heavy drop and fungus diseases have finally cut the estimate to little better than 800,000 barrels of clean fruit. Frost reduced prospects in British Columbia early in the spring, leaving a possible crop of 700,000 barrels compared with 777,000 a year ago. In Ontario, on the other hand, close to a record yield is promised, and the fruit will be clean. The latest government estimate of the total crop is $82,880, but many growers think that this is much too conservative. Furthermore, there has been considerable improvement in size since the official guess was announced. On this date it would appear that a million barrels are certain. There is a good crop in the Eastern States, but it is poor in Italy, in Italy, and continental Europe conditions are poor. As a result, the export outlook is fairly bright.

Despite the hostility to government grading of dairy products intended for export, when that policy was adopted about three years ago, the scheme is now meeting with general approval. Over a million boxes of cheese, representing over 100,000,000 pounds, and 608,000 boxes of butter have passed through the graders' hands to date, compared with three-quarters of that amount for the same period a year ago. The quality of the cheese shows the considerable improvement, the lower grades registering a steady decline, but butter has fallen off slightly.

Desks of Distinction and Charm
To-day! saw
It is really not at all relevant in the midst of an ad. on furniture to write of what I saw today, except that beautifully governed women are set off in a home appropriately furnished.
The twittering of a wee birdie called my attention to a beautiful display of silks and velvets on the main floor. The soft, lustrous satin backed crepes gleamed in the artificial lights. The glowing tones of split rayon, rested against the chartruse green to which Madame Lanvin stands godmother—a riot of colors were there, suggesting in their graceful folds the new flaring silhouette. The velvets beautifully cut onorgettes were so fine and flexible that I did not need to see them made in order to learn of their softness.
But whether they were satins, velvets or broadcloth silks, there was such a variety that it seemed no matter what one's taste was, it surely would be satisfied.
