AYER'S

Cherry Pectoral.

Whoever complains of sore throats in their throat, or who are afflicted with coughs and colds, or who are suffering from bronchitis, or who are afflicted with asthma, or who are suffering from any of these affections, will find relief in the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

The Church in Scotland.

The annals of the Catholic Church in North Britain are, perhaps, even more interesting to the general reader than those of England. They possess, indeed, an extraordinary character, as well as a deeply tragic character. No portion of Europe was more radically affected by the great reformation of Martin Luther than the Lowlands of Scotland, and on the other hand no part of Europe was more heroically steadfast in clinging to the ancient faith than were some of the Highland glens and Hebridean Islands. The early history of Catholicity in Caledonia stands forth with surprising distinctness and detail, although it is surrounded by a huge mass of merely popular tradition and legendary lore. In that priceless masterpiece of biography, "The Monks of the West," by Count Montalambert, the lives and adventures of the noble missionaries who went with the renowned St. Columba or his successors to the rocky fastnesses of Inverness and Ross-shire, as well as to the stormy Hebrides and Orkneys, are admirably narrated, and form a selection of personal history as fascinating as an Oriental tale, and as edifying as almost any other spiritual reading.

St. Columba is generally believed to have been a native of Donegal. In the year 563 he set out with twelve companions for the Island of Iona, the most famous of the western isles. Here they founded a monastery and a school of theology, which were to prosper and win for the Irish people the rights of which they have so long and so ruthlessly been deprived. In our own land we have seen Archbishop Lynch, Bishop Mahony and other distinguished members of the Ontario clergy come under the standard so firmly and faithfully held aloft by Parnell and his party. These eminent ecclesiastics have contributed handsomely to increase the "sinews of war." In this Province we find that the clergy of Quebec have led off nobly and well, and Montreal is to be congratulated on the demand for Ireland's rights a grand universal chorus. Over the border we find the same enthusiasm, the same desire to be foremost, existing in all ranks of the Hierarchy.

A notable instance is that of the Archbishop of Chicago, who was among the first to swell the $10,000 list of the Garden City. Then the other day, while in solemn conference, the Bishop and Clergy of Trenton, New Jersey, made the Irish question a subject of special discussion and action. Bishop O'Reilly, who is so fondly known to the Irish Catholics of Montreal, presided, and gave an earnest of his patriotism in passing resolutions of sympathy with Ireland, and backing these up with a large subscription.

The preamble to the resolutions and showed plainly just how the conference felt. It read: "That, whereas the eminently Catholic Irish nation has been struggling against political oppression for seven hundred years, and for three hundred of those years has suffered untold wrongs for the Faith as well as for Fatherland; and whereas, it is not only a duty of honor, of charity and of justice, but, still more, an eminently priestly act to sympathize with the oppressed and to assist them in their struggle."

One of the resolutions set forth that the priests of the diocese should encourage their people to take an active interest in the struggle for freedom of their Irish brethren.

And then, in crown to his work, the conference authorized the bishop to transmit by cable the following message of good will and encouragement to Archbishop Croix:

"The priests of my diocese in conference assembled this day unanimously request me to offer to the bishops and priests of Ireland and to the Irish parliament their entire sympathy and best wishes for the success of the National cause."

What happiness, now courage, and strong determination must not such tidings of aid and affection bring to the Old Land and inspire into the hearts of the rising generations. Truly the spirit of a nation never dieth.—Montreal Post.

Prince Louis Napoleon's Prayer.

A prayer in the hand-writing of the Prince Imperial was found among the papers in his desk at Camden Place. In publishing it the Morning Post adds: "The elucidation of his high character alone justifies the publication of such a sacred document, which will prove to the world how intimately he was penetrated with all the feelings which most become a Christian, and which give higher hopes than are afforded by the pains and merits of this transitory life." The following is a translation:

"Oh God, I give to Thee my heart, but give to me faith. Without faith there is
