"KYRA,"

The Ward of the Earl of Vering.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Very soon two nimble and ingenious footmen had set out a capital cold collation under the sweet-smelling apple trees, and the whole of the party were seated.

They were young, in good health, and hungry; no wonder the blackbirds looked down from the branches scarred by the laughter and the clatter. Not that all chattered; two were rather quiet, Charlie and Percy. The former because Lord St. Clare was squatting next to Lady Mary, and absorbing her attention, the latter because he was all eyes and ears for every word and look of Kyra, who had taken up two feet of grass between Lilian Devigne and Charlie, and was employed carving cold ham, and listening to the half-muttered comments of her right-hand neighbors.

Soon, however, something more than carving ham was demanded of her. The party from Boxley comprised four young men—most of them titled—who were not slow to discover and appreciate the fresh, unspoiled loveliness of the dark-eyed girl, and when they had satisfied their appetite, they gradually drew round her and laid the usual siege.

Then it was delightful to see the mingled bashfulness and dignity with which the beautiful girl received their attacks. She had never been subjected to such a volley of flattery, deferential attention, before, and it will be forgiven her if her blushes were frequent and her pulsation quicker than usual. Then, to make matters worse, Master Charlie turned the whole of his battery upon her—just to pique Lady Mary—and she was thus assailed on all sides. Percy sat and watched; Lilian Devigne smiled.

"Dear child! How she is enjoying herself!" she murmured, as Kyra's rare laugh, provoked by some absurd compliment, rang out.

"Yes," said Percy. Then he rose. "I suppose I may have a cigar?" He lit one and dived into the wood. There he smoked in deep dejection, for fully a quarter of an hour; then he suddenly drew himself up and struck his chest.

"Come!" he said, addressing an old oak, with an air of determination, "this is folly! My eyes are opened. I love her. Yes, I love her more madly and passionately than any of these boys could do—if they tried. I am not old—I am almost as young as they are. I will win her! Yes, I will win her! Oh, my darling! my darling! shall I ever forget the sweep of your air upon my lips. I will win you—if it be not too late!"

Then he threw his cigar away, and sauntered back into the orchard. They had all gone excepting Lilian; she sat under a tree, alone and lost in thought—beautiful as a poem, pensive as a statue.

As he approached she looked up with a sweet smile, and drew her dress around her. It was almost as if she had said: "Come and rest! Here is peace and security; happy-ness without check and care—rest!" Percy threw himself down, and looked up at her. "Why have you not gone with them?" he asked; "they have gone into the woods, I suppose?" She nodded. "I should have been de trop, mon ami," she murmured, as sweetly as only she could murmur. "They are all in the heyday of their romance. I have lived through mine, so I stayed behind. And you—why did you not join them?"

There was no more charming woman in all England than Lilian Devigne, and at that moment she surpassed herself. Percy, looking at her, seemed to feel the glamour of her presence falling over him. "It" he said. "For the same reason."

Then he put out his hand, and laid it on her arm. "Lilian, it seems as if the world had gone by and left us alone—alone with the past. That is scarcely fair; we are both young—"

He looked up at her as he spoke, and his hand tightened; and his next words might have sealed his fate, but they were not spoken, for at that moment Lady Mary, closely followed by Lord St. Clare, came through the doorway, crying:

"Oh, here you are, Lord Vering! We were looking for you everywhere. Mr. Merivale has been tormenting us by a—I believe fabulous description of the museum of curiosities at Vering Wold! Have you got so many beautiful things, or has he been telling fibs? You know I have never been to the Wold."

Percy rose and looked round the group gathered about the daring young heiress.

"Not," he said, "that is my loss, not yours. What do you say, will you come and see my museum to-morrow—all of you? Come, don't say no. It is bachelors' hall, you know; but Charlie will help me to entertain you, and Lady Devigne will, I have no doubt, come and play 'Propriety.' What do you say, Lady Mary?"

"Oh, I say yes, with all my heart," said Lady Mary, glancing under her fair lids at Charlie. "You'll come, Lord St. Clare?"

"Yes, that I will! We'll all come, Lord Percy—we're dying to see the Wold."

"That's settled, then," said Percy, "and I shall expect you all at twelve o'clock."

Then they all gathered round the apple trees, talking and laughing until the farmhouse clock warned them that it was time to take flight; and at last they galloped off, leaving Lilian Devigne at liberty to send off the following telegram to Count Hudsaple:

"The blow may be struck to-morrow. Five o'clock at Vering Wold!"

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The House Party.

The Wold had been asleep so long, that when the Earl—as he was invariably called by his household—came home with the order to prepare for the friendly invasion Lady Mary had so boldly and skillfully planned, the household were for the moment electrified. Some of the younger servants—those who had been in the Vering service for a matter of a few years—looked upon it as a relief, and a most welcome diversion; but the old ones, the gray-headed butler, the sedate coachman, the house-keeper, and an army of middle-aged, old-fashioned retainers, regarded the advent of the "young folks," as they called them, with startled perplexity, not unmingled with something like intrepidation at their effrontery in venturing to break the long spell of sacred quiet and drowsiness which had held the magnificent house and grounds. The fact was the Wold had been preserved as carefully from the outside world of noise and bustle as if it had been a curious relic of a bygone age. And now the place was to be overrun by a party of wild young people, who, as likely as not, would—the housekeeper, who had thus far in lamentation, pined rather confused and at a loss, for after all what could the party from Boxley, young and buoyant as it might be, do in the way of injury to the Wold.

In 1/2 and 2 pound cans. Whole—ground—pulverized—also Fine Ground for Perculators. 172

And, after all, there was very little to be done in the way of preparation. The major-domo—in other words Stephen Grings—made it a point of honor that every room, from the old-fashioned parlors in the raftered to the grand saloon hung with crimson drapery, should be kept as clean an orderly as if it might expect a sudden inspection by its owner. There was a little extra work for the grand French chef to do, and he, instead of grumbling, was delighted.

"Milord, the earl, says it is to be a cold," he remarked when Stephen gave the order for preparation. "Very good! It shall be, Monsieur Grings! An artist can prove himself true to his art even in a cold collation. 'Meister Grings, sare, you shall see,' which meant that the great chef intended to excel himself.

It was a glorious day, and as Percy walked across the park on his way back from the river in which he and Charlie had been taking a header, he stopped for a moment, and swinging his towel toward the Wold:

"Looks quite bright, Charlie," he remarked.

"Yes," assented Charlie. "Never saw the old place look so lively. Just as if it knew there were to be pretty faces and young voices about it. Twelve o'clock they were to be here, wasn't it?"

"Yes," said Percy; then he laughed. "Have you any idea what is to be done with them when they do come?" he asked. "I hear that Bertrand contemplates something out of the way in the matter of luncheon, but that is the only thing on the programme, and the ladies care nothing for Bertrand's effects."

"Don't be too sure of that, old fellow," remarked Charlie, with a shrewdness beyond his age. "It's my belief ladies are as fond of the good things on the white cloth as we men are—or pretty nearly. But don't be worried about them, Percy. Let them alone to ramble over the old house, and about the grounds. It's quite a curiosity in its way, the Wold, you know. Young St. Clare declared that no one knew, throughout the country, what it was like inside."

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Percy colored. "That sounds like a charge of inhospitality," he said. "Nonsense," said Charlie; "you are a bachelor, you know, Percy; they can't expect anything of the kind. They'll wait until you are married."

"It is to be hoped they are all quite young," remarked Percy grimly. Charlie colored, and looked rather shy.

"Well, of course they all do look forward to your settling. You can't let Vering go out of the family, you know."

Percy scrutinized the handsome face beside him; it was as open and candid and as free from guile or deceit as ever.

"That's a foolish speech for you to make, dear boy," he said, putting his hand on Charlie's shoulder.

"You forget that, if anything happened to me, you would stand a chance of being the next master of Wold."

"Ah, no," said Charlie, "I don't forget it; and yet you know me better than to dream that I ever think of it or wish for it. No, Percy, I am not a Chester; and the old legend says that Vering will never pass from the Chesters' hands while one turret stands to overlook the land."

Percy drew his brows together thoughtfully. "My uncle never married," he said. "Fortunately for you," put in Charlie.

"He was an unhappy man," went on Percy—"most unhappy."

"Moral," said Charlie, with a light laugh; "take warning by his fate, and follow his example the contrary way. Men who never marry are—"

He paused abruptly. "Pray go on," laughed Percy.

"Well—either wise men or great fools; there is no medium."

"You have brought it down to something concise and definite," said Percy. "Then I see—that you would chance being wise for the pleasure of being foolish."

"If you mean that I'll marry if I could," said Charlie, coloring slightly, and fixing his eyes on the ground, "you are right, Percy, I certainly would."

Percy winced and looked another way. Yes, it was he feared. "You are too young, dear boy," he said.

"Now—yes—but it's a fault one soon gets the better of."

In Memoriam

Death has claimed for its own very respectable resident in the son of John St. Croix, of Pointe-a-Hay. Deceased had been a patient sufferer for many years, and that he had the advice of doctors and medical treatment he succumbed to fatal disease on June 28th. For past month his death had been expected hourly, yet when the summons was announced, there heartfelt sorrow, as he had been kind and hospitable man, and a neighbour. He had attained the age of sixty-one and leaves a wife, six sisters and nine children to mourn their loss. The funeral took place Thursday. His body was brought to the Church at St. Mary's where a burial service was read by Rev. O'Driscoll, thence to the cemetery, followed by a large concourse of people testifying to his many friends and mourners.

Why should we mourn departed friends? Or grieve at death's alarms. Death's but the messenger God sends To call us to His Arms. July 6th, 1916. ST. MARY'S

At the City Hall.

The new Municipal Council held their first meeting in the City Hall last night, Mayor Gosling and all the Councillors being in attendance. The Secretary read a letter from the Acting Premier in which he intimated that the Returning Officer had returned his writ with the indorsement that the Mayor and Councillors who shall have charge of our Municipal affairs for the next two years are:— W. G. Gosling, Esq., Mayor. I. C. Morris, Esq., Councillor. J. S. Tait, Esq., M.D., Councillor. H. J. Brewaridge, Esq., Councillor. J. J. Mullaly, Esq., Councillor. C. J. Ayre, Esq., Councillor. N. J. Vinicombe, Esq., Councillor. Before beginning business His Worship the Mayor introduced the following resolution relating to the sad news that has been flashed across the wires from the battlefield, where many of our brave boys have passed beyond the veil. He also referred to the blow that has fallen on his colleague, Councillor Ayre.

"Be it resolved that:— The Municipal Council on this its first session after election, desires to record its pride in the valour and self-sacrifice of the Newfoundland Regiment, in the recent great battle of the Somme. Although entirely unaccustomed to military affairs, young men of all classes, from all parts of the Colony, as soon as the call for help came, showed themselves eager to fight for the Empire, and for those principles of justice and liberty which are the birth-right of all within its borders. And when the great test came they bore themselves like heroes, and never flinched in the terrible task which had been assigned to them, many of them, offering up the supreme sacrifice of their lives.

To the relatives and friends of those that have fallen, the Municipal Council begs to tender its deepest and most heartfelt sympathy."

Councillor Morris in a patriotic address proposed the adoption of the above resolutions. It was seconded by Councillor Mullaly who spoke in very touching words on the loss of so many of our brave boys. The resolutions were unanimously adopted. The Mayor submitted a statement showing the financial position of the city, which indicated the necessity of collecting the taxes to date and that backsliders be made up. Councillors Ayre and Morris moved to have notices issued demanding the payment of all taxes due the city, which was consented to. A motion was passed that the present Board would not interfere by notice or otherwise with the Foremen in the employment of labor. Councillor Brewaridge congratulated the Mayor and stated he would support him in his efforts to forward the best interests of the city and was not in any way antagonistic to the work of the old Commission. He felt the

Our Baseball Column.
PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE.

The Baseballers are again to fore, and at a special meeting of the League held last night it was decided that on Wednesday afternoon a double header will be played, the entire proceeds to be devoted to Sir Wm. Horwood's appeal for funds for the maintenance of two Newfoundland Wards of 30 beds in the English Gifford Hospital.

Since the war started the Baseball League have devoted all its net receipts to the various patriotic funds, as those who perhaps unwillingly have to stay at home quite realize the deep debt of gratitude they owe to our boys who are now fighting our battles for us in France. We have heard it stated at different places that each club in the League is voted a certain amount for reimbursements at the end of each season to cover playing expenses. We are in a position to state, however, that this is absolutely untrue, and that none of the clubs receive one cent of the proceeds of any of the games.

The competing teams to-morrow will be:— Wanderers versus Cubs. B.L.S. versus Red Lions.

The first game will start at 2:30 and citizens owed a good deal to them. Councillor Tait stated that he intended working loyally for the benefit of the city.

Councillor Mullaly spoke of the work ahead of the Board, and it would require a lot of money and time to carry it out. He also congratulated the Mayor, as did the other Councillors.

Amusements.

AT THE CRESCENT.
Go to the Crescent Picture Palace to-day and see "The Law." Deceit, one of the best three-reel productions of the year, Miss Nell Craig and Edmund F. Cobb are the principals supported with a strong Essanay cast. "His Wife's New Lid" is a very funny comedy featuring Billie Reeves, the celebrated English hall comedian. "The Selig Tribune" is a real newspaper, the worlds greatest news film. To-day's issue contains some interesting and instructive items. A new musical programme has been arranged by Prof. McCarthy to accompany this big show.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN AT NICKEL TO-MORROW.

A charming show was that presented at the Nickel Theatre yesterday and it attracted the usual large audiences. It included a very interesting and thrilling episode of that delightful serial "The Strange Case of Mary Page." This wonderful story is proving most attractive. The whole programme will be repeated this evening and all should make an effort to see it. To-day there will no doubt be present all who could not attend yesterday. To-morrow there will be a grand holiday bill including a two thousand feet roll of Charlie Chaplin. It is one of his greatest items. "The Romance of Elaine" will be continued.

"MEASLES."

Hundreds of children are suffering from "Measles" at the present time, and one has to be very careful in trying to avoid the complications that often follow them. A heavy "Cough" is very prevalent during the present epidemic, and "Pneumonia" is the great danger. Avoid this by keeping a bottle of "Stafford's Phorastone Cough Cure" on hand.

Stafford's Drug Store (Theatre Hill) is open every night from 7:30 to 9:30. The above preparation is manufactured only by DR. F. STAFFORD & SON, St. John's, Nfld.

"Specialties":— "Stafford's Liniment," "Stafford's Prescription 'A,'" "Stafford's Phorastone Cough Cure."

Lieut. Rendell's Condition is Critical.

Dr. H. Rendell is in receipt of a cablegram from his son Captain Herbert, at Paris Plage, La Touque, 45 miles from Calais, stating that Lieut. Clifford, younger son of the Doctor, had had his leg amputated and that his condition is critical, though not considered hopeless by the attending physicians. Lieut. Clifford Rendell is a patient in the Duchess, of Westminster Hospital.

will be in charge of Umpire-in-Chief Chesman and Major Montgomerie. In view of the worthiness of the object we feel it is not necessary to say anything to the fans and the public generally, who on all occasions like the present are ever responsive and generous.

Of the fifty baseballers at the front, one, Lieut. Hubert Herder, has made the supreme sacrifice. Hubert played first base for the Cubs, the year the war commenced and was one of the first to don the khaki. He was very well liked and showed great promise owing to his unusual height and build and natural athletic ability. To his sorrowing family, club, and many friends we extend our sincerest sympathy.

We have to thank Mr. Orr for calling our attention to the palpable error we made in our last edition. We are sorry to have misinformed our correspondent "Cub" and offer our apologies. By the way, Mr. Orr is going to pitch for the Cubs to-morrow and great things are expected of him.

To our friend of the "Daily Star" who runs the baseball column, we have only to say that we were more than surprised at his outburst for our having called his attention to the fact that the heading of his interesting dope was being used in error for baseball instead of rugby. We have no idea of who the author is but we thought he was, at least, a "sport," for

"It takes a sport to stand the gaff. To take a panning with a grin. That's why you choke when you reject. On what you think you might have been."

Hr. Grace Notes.

Captain Parsons and Corporal Parsons, just returned from the great battle front, arrived by Saturday afternoon's train and were given a right royal welcome by all our citizens. Capt. Parsons is going to lecture in St. Paul's Hall, to-night, his subject being "Ambulance Work at the Front."

Mr. W. Chambers, of Hr. Buffett, and Mr. Albert Wareham, of Spencer's Cove, arrived by Saturday night's train and spent yesterday with their friends, leaving by this morning's train for home, via Placentia.

Miss Rose Sheppard, daughter of Mr. L. Sheppard, arrived from Boston on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Parmenter arrived from Buffalo on Saturday and will spend some time with their relatives and friends here.

Mr. John Taylor with his wife and two children is here from Pittsburg, on a holiday trip to the old home. John is one of our lads who are making good, and we have great pleasure in welcoming him and his family home, and wish them a very pleasant holiday.

I heard the bone-head parent say, "Now Clarence, put your feet away, and toddle off to bed." And Clarence, pampered little boy, proceeded to dissect the toy, to amputate its head, in half an hour the parent's a 'd.

"Now Clarence, you must go to bed—I told you once before!" But little Clarence paid no heed; his hobbyhorse he ran with speed, around the parlor floor. Ten minutes later father cried, "Now son, I will not be denied—it's time you were asleep." But Clarence hearkened not to that; he pushed some pins into the cat, and made the critter weep. And then I thought of other days, of other parents and their ways, and of my father's stork; he never

Perhaps my father was too prone to lam my aching tooth till each bone felt like an iron pill; but since that parent made me scream, we've reached the opposite extreme, the boss is giddy youth. ### Our Duty Here at Home.

It is gratifying to read of the ready response to Sir William Horwood's appeal for funds to provide beds for our wounded soldiers. In all, twenty beds have been asked for, or a little over £1000. Hon. M. G. Winter has given over $1,000, about one quarter of the amount required, and promises have come from many other directions. Is it too much to hope that, as in the case of the Aeroplane and Empire Day Funds, the mark originally set will be passed and left far below? Let us remember that we owe this, not alone to our own men, for whom the beds are intended, but to those in England upon whom will fall the burden if we do not take it up. This is an aspect of the whole large question of our share in the war which we must not overlook. The war has not merely to be fought but to be financed. What is necessary must be provided, and if it is to be provided it must be paid for. So far as we do not pay for any essentials someone else must. And that someone else is England. Let us never forget that the people of Great Britain are being taxed to-day to pay for the equipment, feeding, maintenance and transport of our troops—for everything, in fact, after those troops reach the United Kingdom, with the exception of their pay and allowances. At all times since the war called the Empire together, and particularly of late, when our men have so well played our part, those remaining at home must have asked themselves often what they could do to help and how far they were doing it. The answer is simple—if we cannot fight we can pay. We do pay, of course, but to what extent and in what manner? Broadly, in two ways—compulsorily, by Act of Parliament, and voluntarily, from the promptings of our sense of duty and of generosity. In our opinion, in the latter respect our performance has been as admirable as in the former it has been the reverse. There has not been made one single appeal to us individually which has not been answered promptly and splendidly. So much the more reason, therefore, that the Government should have taken the people into its confidence and have trusted it to bear far greater burdens than have been imposed upon it with the same loyalty and cheerfulness that have been the bright attribute of the British public across the water. Privately and as individuals we have given generously; publicly and as a nation we have not nearly measured up to our obligations. Without going into details, we can say this—we recognize that this is as much our war and our cause as Britain's; if we had been an integral part of Great Britain, we should now be paying to the public funds an amount per caput which would stagger us. In addition to numerous other taxes, various and considerable, the people of Great Britain are now liable to an income tax which has reached the maximum of five shillings in the pound. What should we say here if each of us were made to pay one quarter of his total income?

We point this out, not to find fault with the Government (we could do that, if we wished, at much greater length and with much greater force), but to emphasize the moral obligation that is upon us, in the absence of forced contributions, to maintain and increase by every cent we can spare our voluntary ones. There are some things which cannot be made the subject of compulsion and taxation—this appeal for help to the wounded is one of them. The cost of one bed for twelve months is roughly $250. If five hundred beds were occupied for that length of time by Newfoundlanders (not such an extreme estimate), the cost would be $125,000. Who will pay that if we do not?

One word more. We said above, "if we cannot fight we can pay." But there are very many who feel that they cannot even pay. They can do something else quite as useful—more useful in the long run, they can save. Nothing, perhaps, is trivier to bring home to the average man than that money saved to him is money saved to the country, but nothing is more true. It is next to impossible to convince him that money unnecessarily spent is money wasted. The money is still there, though in other hands; how can it be wasted? This is an egregious fallacy, capable of great mischief. We are not going to escape the universal consequences of the awful waste that is going on in Europe. The present and succeeding generations in this Colony will have no small burden to bear: our ability to bear it will depend almost entirely upon our willingness, at once and to-day, to economize.

Mr. W. J. Herder has received a cable from his son, Corporal Ralph, who was wounded in the engagement of July 1st, stating that he was progressing well, as also his brother Arthur. He speaks of his brother, Lieutenant Hubert, as missing; evidently he had not yet learned the sad news of his death. All three brothers must have played a prominent part in the heroic advance. Hubert, one of our premier athletes and among the most popular in the regiment, gave his life; Ralph and Arthur were wounded, and their wounds appear fortunately to have been relatively slight. We hope to hear shortly of their complete recovery and return to the regiment which can ill afford their loss.

Doctors of International "Law" must be much worried by the submarine, and many disputed points will need to be settled after the war. Now arises the question whether it is a ship of war or not. It will not be of much more than academic interest: we know what the British opinion will be if they can lay hands on the Deutschland. The matter of armament seems to be assuming altogether too much importance; it should only be relevant where a ship of a recognised peaceful type, such as a merchantman, is claimed by the enemy to be a ship of war. The submarine is, like the cruiser, a ship of war, and it should not matter whether she is armed or not.

Terra Nova's Dead Heroes

Terra Nova is now in mourning, her sons and daughters are bowed in woe—
For those brave heroes there's no returning, who were killed in France by our Hunnish foe;
When Thor the war god his trumpet sounded, and called on all who loved liberty,
"Our Boys" with strong hearts to arms they bounded, and sought our Mother across the sea.

We bade farewell on the day they started to cross the ocean to England's shore,
And though we smiled when from them we parted, we knew that some we would see no more;
To-day in France 'neath its soil they're lying, while we are mourning in sorrow here,
But they left a name that will live undying, in histories' pages for many a year.

In this great struggle they showed that daring for which their fathers were known of old,
They rushed to battle no danger fearing, with courage true and with hearts as bold
As ever Grecian or ancient Roman had shown their pluck in the days gone by,
Their skill they showed to the Prussian foe man—they let them see they could fight and die.

In years to come when they talk of daring, of deeds performed 'gainst the cruel Hun;
Dear Terra Nova she will be wearing a laurel wreath which her sons have won,
Her fame transcended will reach the ages, their names forever will be kept green,
In golden letters on history's pages, that is the manner it should be seen.

Terra Nova to-day is mourning; there's sorrow seen here on every hand,
She weeps for those who'll know no returning, to the friends that loved them in Newfoundland;
The mother dear for her boy is weeping, sheds the hot tears in anguish now,
But she knows her son is in God's own keeping, and to His Will she must quietly bow.

A father's tears o'er his cheeks are streaming, at a green mound fancy gives him a glance,
Of a lonely grave he's at night time dreaming, where his son lies sleeping "somewhere in France."
Oh, God take pity on those in sorrow, whose sons lie dead whom they once did love,
And may they meet them on that bright morning in the home that Thou hast prepared above.

IMPORTANT GAIN IN AFRICA
LONDON.—General Smuts, in command of British forces in German East Africa, has occupied Tanga, according to a statement issued by the British War Office to-day. The Germans offered slight resistance. Tanga is the second most important port of German East Africa, and the terminus of the railroad which the Germans were building prior to the outbreak of the war.

RUSSIAN ADVANCE ON STOKHOLM
PETROGRAD.—The Russian forces advanced toward Kovel and the River Stokhod at various points, and closely pressing the Germans, who were opposing them, says the War Office statement. The passage of the river is being accomplished without serious difficulties. An offensive communication says the crossing of the river have in most cases been destroyed by the opposing army. The total number of prisoners taken by General Kaledines from the Germans is 341 officers and 9,145 soldiers. He also captured 100 pieces of artillery, 48 machine guns, 7,529 rifles, 82 machine guns, 200 depots of engineering material, and figures must be added to these in the communication of which included 300 officers, 1,000 men and 45 pieces of artillery according to later reports received. The crossing of the Stokhod River is the chief credit for the explanation given to Colonel Kautseroff, commander of the Pavlograd Regiment, of the Order of St. George, 4th class, for his advance guards, led by a burning bridge under a heavy shelling and rifle fire. In the case of our submarines in the Baltic, the usual cruise sank a large German steamer loaded with iron ore in the Gulf of Bothnia. On the other side of the front we are continuing our advance west of Platana. In the case of the Gumeshan our scouts captured a large number of Turkish soldiers. We successfully advanced on an entire line of heights which the enemy spent much time in fortifying. At various points we captured the Turks to flee from positions.

BRITISH OFFICIAL STATEMENT
LONDON.—This afternoon, after the German perate attack, the German forces in entering Trones Wood were the cause of very heavy casualties among the British troops. In the west we gained a lodgment in Trones Wood, where the enemy's resistance hitherto resisted well our efforts, also gained ground east of Trones and La Boisselle. Yesterday the British Flying Corps operated several successful bombing attacks against the enemy's detrainment centres, aerodromes and aerodromes. No serious combats occurred in the result of which one German machine gun was destroyed and several others driven to the ground in a damaged condition.

LONDON BUDGET
LONDON.—On both Eastern and Western fronts heavy fighting persists. Especially the case on the Western front where the struggle is now characterized by fluctuations of fortune and the mind the warnings of correction from the opening of the Somme, that steady methodical pressure, rather than brilliant advances is expected. The British officials to-night says, the German offensive in Trones Wood, but recording the British progress east of Oporto. La Boisselle in addition to a successful offensive in the West. Before the Germans had made their British efforts. A German communication admits that the British possess Blaches, only a short distance from Peronne town which is being threatened. On the Eastern front the Russians crossed the River at many points. German correspondents are already reporting the Allied offensive has been to a standstill. The correspondent of the Berlin Tageblatt with the Russian army testifies to the effective supply of the Russian army, the efficiency of the Russian cavalry and the endless ammunition as in great part the condition of the Russian front last year. The Germans are meeting their strong attacks on the Russian front, but the view here that this is only with the loss of gaining time to perfect their material from these points. Litzovsk and Ivangorod.

BALTIC SEA FIGHT
COPENHAGEN.—Dagena Nyheder announce that a sea battle is believed to have taken place in the Baltic outside of Helsingfors Sunday night. "Voksen" was heard from several points on the coast; it is presumed that the Russian patrolling squadron

PETROGRAD, To-Day.—The Russian forces advancing in Volynia toward Kovel are crossing the River Stokhod at various points and closely pressing the Teutonic forces opposing them, says to-day's War Office statement. The passage of the river is being accomplished under serious difficulties. An official communication says the crossings of the river have in most cases been destroyed by the opposing armies. The total number of prisoners taken by General Kaledines from July 4 to 8 is 341 officers and 3,145 unwounded soldiers. He also captured ten pieces of artillery, 48 machine guns, 16 bomb throwers, 7,320 rifles, 62 limbers and depots of engineering materials. The figures must be added to those given in the communication of July 8th, which included 300 officers, 12,000 men and 45 pieces of artillery. According to later reports regarding the crossing of the Stokhod River at Ugl, chief credit for the exploit must go to Colonel Kautseroff, commander of the Pavlograd Regiment, Chevalier of the Order of St. George. Col. Kautseroff, rushing forward at the head of his advance guards, led them across a burning bridge under violent artillery and rifle fire. In the battle one of our submarines in the course of its usual cruise against German merchant steamers loaded with munitions in the Gulf of Bothnia. ### Disillusioning Maude.

RUTH CAMERON.

"It does exasperate me to see the way Maude worships that younger sister of hers. She seems to think she hasn't a fault in the world. I declare, I've a good mind to tell her what I think of her."

"Why? To open her eyes!" This with a fervor which she would doubtless have called righteous indignation.

"You mean that she does things that Maude wouldn't approve of?" "Oh, not exactly, but she's such a selfish thing and so lazy, and Maude seems to think she is perfect."

More "righteous indignation" in both eyes and voice.

If all the feelings that we justify to ourselves as righteous indignation could be analyzed, I wonder what elements would be found in them?

The Joy Of Relieving One's Mind. Envy, I suspect, would be one; spite, another; intolerance, another; and the enjoyment of relieving one's mind another.

The girl whose conversation I have chronicled fancied that her desire to disillusion Maude as to her younger sister's perfections came from a wish to do Maude a good turn because she liked her. I am afraid it came from nothing at all except the desire to do the younger sister an evil turn because she disliked her.

The older sister enjoys idealizing the younger girl. She finds exercise in that love for the idealism that it is good for the soul to keep alive.

What good would there be in snatching it away?

People are coming to know the real worth of Homestead Tea and are asking for it in preference to other brands. There's a snap and vim to the flavor that will get you when you try it.

Diocesan Synod.

JULY 10th, 1916. The Lord Bishop took the chair at 3.30 p.m. After prayers the rolls were called when 31 clergy and 21 delegates answered to their names.

The minutes of the previous session were read, passed and signed by the Bishop.

Mr. B. Dunfield gave notice of two motions in connection with education.

In introducing his resolution in connection with a Diocesan Mission, the Rev. Rural Dean Richards spoke earnestly and feelingly, and made a powerful appeal for an extension of the spiritual life of the church, especially at this crisis in the history of our Empire, and advocated the mission in Newfoundland along similar lines as that to be carried out in the Mother Country.

The Rev. W. J. R. Higgitt seconded the resolution, and it was evident from the opinions expressed by the various speakers that Mr. Richards had the sympathy of all the members. As there was a difference of opinion as to the most effective way of carrying it into operation, a committee was appointed by the Bishop to consider the matter and report to the Synod.

Mr. Blackall (upon permission of the chair) gave notice of motion re educational matters.

The House rose at 4.35. EVENING SESSION. The House resumed at 7.30, the Lord Bishop presiding. After prayers 47 clergy and 33 lay delegates answered their names at roll call.

Rev. H. Farcy gave notice of question in connection with Bishop Spencer Lodge.

The Report of the Directors of the Church of England Colleges was introduced by Mr. Brian Dunfield in a lengthy and logical address, in which he clearly pointed out the present condition of the Colleges and laid before the Synod facts and figures backing up his statements.

The Head Master of Bishop Field College, Mr. Wood, explained the reasons why the college is in the state shown to be by Mr. Dunfield.

Canon Bolt and Mr. Blackall expressed their opinions upon Spencer College and endorsed the Principal, Miss Spirling, on the faithful and painstaking way in which the work was performed. Revs. Bayly and Canon Smart also made some comments on the condition of the colleges, the latter gentleman asking what had become of the Field-Spencer Association. The motion being put by the Bishop was carried.

Mr. Dunfield subsequently put his resolutions of which he had already given notice, which were also carried. The Bishop gave several notices one of which was from His Excellency the Governor, intimating that the Recruiting Committee had invited Rev. Mr. Hollands to visit Bonne Bay in the interest of recruiting. No better man could be selected for this work for Mr. Hollands labored in Bonne Bay for nearly a quarter of a century, and knows every inch of ground in the parish.

The Bishop then reminded the clerical and lay members of the Synod that an opportunity would be afforded them to have their photos taken tomorrow (Tuesday) afternoon by Mr. Parsons, who would be at the West end of the Cathedral at 3 sharp. After the Benediction by the Bishop, the session adjourned with the singing of the National Anthem.

Wedding Bells

A very pretty wedding took place this morning at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. S. Sellars, Power Street, when their daughter, Miss Phoebe Sellars was united in matrimony to Mr. B. Edgecombe. The bride who was charmingly attired in cream voile with hat to match, was attended by her sister, Miss Hazel Sellars, while the groom was supported by his brother Mr. Arthur Edgecombe. After the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. N. M. Guy, a sumptuous wedding breakfast was partaken of by the assembled guests. The happy couple then drove to Waterford Bridge where they entrained for Upper Gullies, where the honeymoon will be spent.

Fads and Fashions.

Chiffon coat-shaped wraps are worn with flowered silk dresses very charmingly.

Gold and silver tracery embroidery appears on the latest chiffon and net toilettes.

Fine jet beads are seen on the front of some new styles of white silk stockings.

Finish the round neck with a piece of narrow ribbon tied in a fetching little bow in front.

Camisoles of broad satin ribbon are among the prettiest to wear under transparent blouses.

Silver tissue shot with pink is one of the loveliest materials to be had for evening gowns.

There are nightgowns of pongee and they are trimmed with bands of linen in contrasting colors.

Silk basques finished with cavalier tabs are charming with flowered voile skirts for bridesmaid's frocks.

Very demure is the child's frock of organdy with tiny bows of velvet ribbon set all the way down the front.

The soft pile fabrics in the most beautiful jewel-like colorings are constantly being used for the big loose wraps.

We now have skirts designed especially for gardening. They are made of linen and have many large pockets.

A Saxe blue sheer blouse is worn with a black taffeta skirt, the two being harmonized by the sash of black and blue.

Fris of tulle complete some of the new roll collars of muslin and crepe de chine to be worn with tailored suits.

There are very attractive woolen stockings made for sports wear. Some of them are striped and others have checks of bright color.

Picturesque is the frock with the skirt trimmed with narrow upstanding frills that are finished at the bottom with narrow ribbon.

One of the new pockets is the "scythe"—attached to long bretelle straps from the shoulder and adorning each hip of the short skirt.

OFFICIAL.
LONDON, July 10.
The Governor, Newfoundland: News of the Somme battle continues entirely favourable. The Allies have captured German positions on a front of about ten miles, from Montauban to Ealing. The heaviest British fighting is round Thiepval, La Boisselle, Ovillers, Contalmaison, and Trones Wood. The French are within a mile of Peronne. The guns, prisoners and material captured are increasing daily, but rapid progress is unlikely.
North of Givenchy the enemy penetrated a portion of the New Zealanders' trenches, but were ejected, leaving many dead.
At Verdun the violence of the enemy offensive has apparently diminished.
The Russian offensive has pledged enemy positions between the Styr and Stokod and threatened Kovel. Important successes have also been achieved in Galicia, where Delatyn is occupied. Many thousand additional prisoners have been captured.
The Turks have been defeated near Ezerum, where eight hundred prisoners were taken.
The Italians continue their successful offensive, capturing prisoners and guns.
BONAR LAW.
BRITISH TROOPS MAKE NEW ADVANCE.
LONDON, July 10.
British troops have made a new advance northwest of Contalmaison in the field of their offensive, north of the Somme. It was officially announced this afternoon. Three additional guns and several hundred prisoners were captured.

HILL 97 CARRIED BY THE FRENCH.
PARIS, July 10.
In a brilliant attack the French have carried Hill 97, the height which dominates the Somme, southeast of Biaches, according to an official statement issued by the French War Office to-night.
GERMANS ENTER TRONES WOOD.
LONDON, July 10.
After a sixth desperate attack this afternoon, the Germans succeeded in entering Trones Wood, according to a British official statement issued to-night. This was at the expense of very heavy casualties. The statement adds that fighting in the wood continues.
BIACHES TAKEN BY THE FRENCH.
PARIS, July 10.
The taking by the French of Biaches Village, on the bank of the Somme, opposite Ste. Radgonde, the principal suburb of Peronne, was accomplished in about an hour and a half. A French lieutenant, who took part in the assault, described the action as follows: "About noon word came for divisions to keep ready. At once our soldiers advanced to attack all along the front from Sormont Farm to Belleau on Santeles. The first German line was passed almost without fighting, so effective had the preparatory bombardment been, but when we entered Biaches at ten minutes after two, we found every house organized as a fort and supplied with machine guns. Our artillery, however, by its accuracy and power, destroyed these defences, though it still left cellars and caves full of enemies. As we entered the village, the commandant, who was at the head of the battalion with a rifle in hand, ordered the trumpeters to sound the charge. All the Germans in the village were captured or killed. The commandant was wounded by a shot from a lieutenant's revolver, but he knocked down the lieutenant with a blow from his rifle. At 2.35 the village was completely in our possession, although a recent German order had declared it to be impregnable. We are now less than two kilometres from Peronne. The recent fighting on the French front on the Somme sector is only the opening phase of a plan elaborated by General Joffre, according to a review of the military situation published in to-day's Temps. The paper says all results expected have been accomplished, and further successes are assured.

THE HOME RULE QUESTION.
LONDON, July 10.
Premier Asquith, explaining the Irish agreement in the Commons this afternoon, said that it was proposed that the bill should remain in force during the war and twelve months thereafter. If Parliament had not made further provision by that time for the Government of Ireland, the period could be extended. Representatives of the Imperial Executive, the Prime Minister said, would have the control of the Defence of the Realm. The new bill would contain general provisions reserving for the exclusive authority of the Imperial Parliament and the Government, not only the Navy and Army, but all matters arising out of the war. He emphasized that there was no intention on the part of those who might be associated with the Government of Ireland to encroach in any way in regard to the successful prosecution of the war. We have here, the Premier said, an arrangement such as never was possible before, and he appealed to members of the House to take advantage of an opportunity, which might never recur. There were features in the settlement plan, Asquith said, which none would have chosen voluntarily and as a result, there had been some misunderstanding in the Cabinet. In view of the agreement reached in Ireland, and the importance of unity, Ministers were willing to share the responsibility of submitting the proposals to Parliament, and recommending their acceptance. The dominating factor, Asquith said, which made us all willing to become parties or sponsors of this measure, in the war, in a few sentences the Premier referred to the part which the Ulster and other Irish regiments had taken in the fighting, and added, there is no patriotic Irishman but has felt that these common sacrifices have created a new bond between them and us. While not going into details, the Premier indicated the main lines of the agreement, including the exclusion of six Ulster counties. The Irish Parliament would be composed of members at present returned to the Imperial Parliament, while an Appeal Court in Dublin would be appointed by the Imperial Parliament. The Executive Government, Asquith said, had not received any specific proposals from Unionists in South West Ireland, but such proposals would receive careful and sympathetic consideration. The Premier explained that the bill was a provisional one, but saw all sorts of possibilities. With regard to that expression, and to relieve all possible doubt on that point, he continued, let me say, speaking for those who, like myself, look forward and are anxious for a united Ireland, that we recognize and agree that such union can only be brought about with the free-will and assent of the excluded area. Asquith recalled his visit to Ireland, which, he said, was made to ascertain whether the Irish parties might not be disposed to come to an agreement. As the result of what he had learned, Mr. Lloyd George was deputed to open negotiations. Lloyd George quickly discovered that agreement was possible on a basis of the immediate enactment of a Home Rule measure, with the exclusion of six Ulster counties and the boroughs of Belfast, Newry and Londonderry.

There was no section representing any substantial body of opinion, Asquith said, whose views were not invited by Lloyd George. All parties concerned took responsibility for submitting their agreed recommendations to Parliament. As soon as the Premier concluded his statement, he was pelted with questions, but referred all inquirers to the bill, which will be introduced next week.
BRITAIN TAKES NO ACTION.
LONDON, July 10.
The Foreign Office denied to-day a report cabled from the States that the British Government had protested to Washington regarding the presence of a submarine in an American port. It was also stated that Britain had taken no action.
MUCH INTEREST CREATED IN ENGLAND.
LONDON, July 10.
Much interest has been created in England over the arrival of a German submarine at an American port. The news, which was not received until noon to-day, was given much space in the evening newspapers, which, however, do not comment upon the happening. In official circles the greatest interest centres in the question whether the submarine was armed or carried torpedoes. As to the voyage and the proposal to establish a line of submarines between Germany and America, no apprehension whatever finds expression. It is pointed out that, in view of repeated voyages both of British and German submarines to the Eastern Mediterranean, crossing the Atlantic by craft of this type was not to be considered an unusual feat. The only surprising thing is that it was not done before, said one official, who added that there was no reason why submarines should not get through the North Sea, unless they meet with mishap.
SUBMARINE'S CAPTAIN SPEAKS.
BALTIMORE, July 10.
Submarine Capt. Koenig's own story of the Deutschland's voyage across is told by newspaper correspondents to-day. "I have seen," said the captain, "statements that we were forced to go a hundred miles out of our course in the Atlantic, because of British warships. That is not so. Why should we go out of our course, except to submerge? That is the simplest and most effective way to get out of our course. Besides, it is much easier to submerge. We came to Hampton Roads by a straight course from the English Channel. We did not come by the way of Azores. Altogether, from Heligoland to Baltimore we covered 3,800 miles. Of that distance, 90 miles were driven under surface water. Throughout the entire trip the officers and crew were in excellent health and spirits. Of course when we were under water for long spells the air was very stuffy. Sometimes there was some inconvenience, but it never was serious. The Deutschland was built to stay under water for four consecutive days. So you see we never reached anywhere near our submergence limit on this voyage."

Private Voisey Wires.
A message was received last night by Mr. Thomas (captain) and Mrs. Voisey, York Street, from their son Private Richard, who was with our Regiment which played such a prominent part in the big drive on the Western Front. The message came from France via Edinburg from Dick who intimated that he was O.K. and told his parents not to worry. He added that his chum, Will Hall, had also come through unscathed. This is indeed pleasing intelligence to the parents and many friends of the young soldiers and heroes. Both of them left here with the First Contingent in October, 1914, and went through the Gallipoli campaign and never once were put out of commission by illness or otherwise.

Your Boys and Girls.

Great care should be taken with baby's teeth. Just as soon as they come, wipe them morning and night with a soft cloth wet in water, a little salty.
The lower teeth usually come in two or three months before the upper teeth. Front teeth, eight to nine months. Side teeth and first chewing teeth, twelve to eighteen months. First chewing teeth or molars, five to six years.
Two middle front teeth come in, six to eight years. Two side front teeth, six to eight years. First bicuspids, nine to ten years. Eye teeth, eleven to twelve years. Second molars, twelve to thirteen years. Third molars or wisdom teeth, seven to twenty-one years.
Save the teeth, never pull a tooth out if you can help it. Go to a dentist. Brush the teeth carefully. Wash the tooth brush after using it and hang it up to dry. After brushing the teeth rinse the mouth well with plenty of water. Take the child to a dentist once a year. A nutritious diet for the mother before the baby comes lays the foundation for healthy teeth in baby.
