MABEL HOWARD, OF THE LYRIC.

CHAPTER V.

As all roads were alike to him, he kept to the high one, and, as the steed was not only "amiable," but a good goer, before very long the signor found himself in a quiet, old town beside the sea.

Having inquired the name, and learned that it was Gnosop, which the signor pronounced several times, in a tone of amazement at the ridiculousness of English names, he made his way to the inn—the "Mariner and Compass"—and having consigned his "amiable" steed and inquired for luncheon. His appearance did not create any surprise here, because they are used to foreigners at Gnosop, and the landlord showed him into a room on the first floor, and informed him that he could have a chop or a steak.

"A chop—pl! What is that?" said the signor. "Ah, well! let me have him, for I am hungry, and a bottle of red wine with him."

"Fort!" inquired the landlord. "No, claret!" said the signor, whereupon the landlord, who didn't keep claret in his cellar, sent round to the grocer's for a bottle, which, a little later on, came to the signor much unamused and disgruntled.

But while the luncheon was getting ready the signor, rolling up another cigarette, went to the window, and, being a balcony outside, stepped out.

He was rather surprised to see a gentleman leaning over the rail, for he had thought himself the only visitor at the inn, and when the young fellow turned at the sound of footsteps, the signor, with his native politeness, raised his hat and gave him "good day."

The gentleman—the signor recognized his quality in a moment—was dressed in a suit of fannels, and was smoking a cigar, with a contemplative gaze at the sea.

It was the young fellow Iris had altered, and moved toward the window. At this moment the landlord appeared.

"What time does the train come to London?" asked the gentleman.

"It will be in three-quarters of an hour, sir," said the landlord.

"Oh, well, just get me something to eat."

"Pardon!" said the signor, with a bow; "my poor luncheon is just ready—you cannot be in haste, is it not so, landlord? Will my friend have me by sharing it? Two is good company, while one is only devilish dull."

The young fellow accepted the offer, evidently dreading the bore of having to refuse, and the two went in and sat down.

The signor's usual flow of conversation did not desert him on this occasion, but though he made several jokes and really admirable attempts to pump his companion, the Englishman, though young and careless, remained a close shell, and contented himself with eating his steaks to the hilt and listening, with a half-amused indulgence, to the signor's perpetual flow of talk.

Presently the door opened, and the landlord ushered in an old gentleman, with a traveling wrap, and a small hat.

"Good-morning, my lord," he said, raising his hat. Then, seeing the signor, he added: "I beg your pardon; the landlord did not tell me you were engaged."

The signor, who had picked up his hat at the sound of the title rose with polite alacrity.

"No, no, sir!" he said, with an elaborate bow and a wave of his hand; "his lordship is not engaged. We were but discussing our meal in company. I will excuse myself—adieu! he'll be up in half an hour."

"Certainly not," said the new arrival; "my business will wait for an hour or so. Don't let me disturb you."

"But permit me!" murmured the signor smoothly. "Not for all the world would I interrupt two gentlemen at their business! Certes, no! I will go and take a stroll about this charming town. Adieu, my lord; adieu, sir! Perhaps, when I return I may have the felicity of rejoining you—is it not so?" and with an intimidating smile the signor bowed himself out of the room.

He followed the landlord to the bottom of the stairs, waited until the latter had turned into the bar, then murmuring just loud enough for him to hear, "Devolution! I have left my cigarette case!" softly and quietly went upstairs again.

After standing at the door for a moment, he went on tiptoe to the next one, opening and entering the room cautiously.

Though apparently a separate room, it was only divided from the one in which the other two men were sitting by a wooden partition—not an abandonment of view in country inns—and, to the signor's delight, he found he could hear every word that was spoken as plainly as if he had been sitting in the same room.

As a matter of fact, the signor had no special motive in overhearing the talk between the two men, but having nothing particular to do, and never having during the whole of his life missed an opportunity of committing a mean action, it occurred to him that he might as well listen as not, so he coiled himself up on a Hickey sofa near the partition, and, making himself as comfortable as possible, prepared to enjoy himself after his peculiar fashion.

CHAPTER VI.

AS A PEEK OF THE HEALM.

The young Englishman motioned the elderly gentleman to a chair.

"Sorry to give you the trouble of coming this way, Mr. Barrington," he said. "Will you have some wine? No! I should recommend a glass of brandy and water? No! A cigar then? Oh, I forget, you don't smoke."

"No, my lord; that is one of those glass-and-water-I-beg-pardon-habits—which I have not been successful in acquiring."

"Quite right," said the young fellow, lighting his cigar as he spoke. "And about this business, will it take long?"

"Not very long, my lord," said Mr. Barrington. "It was necessary that you should go over one or two papers before you left England—You have quite decided to go abroad, I suppose?" he broke off to inquire.

"Quite," said the young fellow, but in rather a doubtful tone. "Well, that is," he explained, as the lawyer looked at him questioningly, "I was told yesterday afternoon."

"Yesterday afternoon?" said Mr. Barrington, inquiringly.

The young fellow nodded.

"Yes, yesterday morning I was as firmly resolved to go to Canada and the West as I am at the present moment to finish this cigar; but yesterday afternoon I had an adventure which somewhat—well, he paused and threw himself aside a chair and laughed a little shamefacedly—"what shall I say?—unsettled me."

"An adventure!" murmured Mr. Barrington.

"Yes, but don't ask me what it was," said his companion. "Fact is, I have had so few romantic adventures in my life that I've a selfish desire to keep this all to myself. Of course there was a woman in it," he added. The lawyer smiled.

How An English Woman

VISITED THE SACRED CITY OF THE SEMSUH.

One of the most inaccessible places on earth has at long last been visited by a European—and that European a woman.

It is TA—the sacred city of those religious fanatics, the Semus.

Situated almost in the centre of the Sahara Desert, cut off from the outer world by hundreds of miles of waterless country, TA has always been forbidden ground to any but the fanatical Semus sect who inhabit it. For a Christian to visit it seemed to be so utterly impossible as to be hardly worth thinking about.

But Mrs. Rosita Forbes, taking her courage in both hands, attempted the seemingly impossible, and achieved it.

Speaking Arabic like a native, she disguised herself as a Bedouin woman, and slipped away with her caravan by night from Jeddah—the last outpost of civilization on the edge of the desert, so modestly and secretly did she go that the Arabs there believed she had escaped in an aeroplane sent by Allah.

Her troubles began immediately; armed tribes made their appearance. "Where is the rich woman who is travelling south with large stores of food?" they asked.

"I know nothing about her," replied her caravan leader, fingering his automatic pistol. "There is no woman with us, but if you want to fight as we shall be delighted."

The disappointed Arabs retired hastily.

The trackless, waterless desert was their worst enemy. Once the whole party nearly perished from thirst. They tore up the baggage saddles to give the straw stuffing to the camels, who had been without food for three days; amongst themselves their last small hoard of kewanram water, and staggered on to the unknown. Luckily, just as they were at their last gasp, they stumbled on a well.

Mrs. Forbes had letters from Sid Ibrahim, the chief of the Semus, to the leaders of the sect at the place for which she was making. Nevertheless, when she arrived there she was viewed with suspicion and distrust.

This was largely due to the treachery of Abdullah, her Arab guide.

"These people have cheated Sid Ibrahim," he assured the Semus sheikhs. "Ever since they left they have been secretly making maps. The Sid (Mrs. Forbes) held a watch (her compass) in her hands all the time. They hang a strange thing on their tent—a weapon to kill us if we come near (Mrs. Forbes' barometer), and they have spectacles (held-glasses) which make the country look big while it is tiny."

Eventually, however, Mrs. Forbes succeeded in allaying the suspicion and distrust of the Semus sheikhs.

It is impossible to wash in the desert as in Polar regions. Consequently Mrs. Forbes suffered terribly from a species of sand rash.

"We politely ascribed it to the heat, but in reality it was just dirt," says the intrepid explorer in her newly-published book, "The Secret of the Sahara."

Many times their lives were in jeopardy from robber bands. Blasted Tuaregs, mounted on swiftly-trotting camels, dated, hung upon their flanks. These people have this peculiarity, that they never remove the cloth masks that cover their faces. But they are the salt of the Bedouin race; tireless, fearless and cruel.

The end of their adventurous journey was reached at Jeddah, an oasis on the western outskirts of Egypt. For twelve days preceding their arrival the caravan had marched through a country entirely waterless, and once again they were almost at their last gasp, when they were providentially met by a rescue party of the Camel Corps Patrol, which the Egyptian Frontier Districts Administration had sent out to search for them.

ON HUNTING FOR LOST THINGS.

Don't you hate to hunt for anything you have lost?

There is something peculiarly exasperating and annoying to me and I think to most people—about hunting for any lost articles, especially if it be some little article which has managed to mislay itself in some place of small compass—where you ought to be able to put your hand right on it—and cannot.

The Vanishing Dice.

When we were playing a game the other night one of the dice slipped from a player's hand and vanished. We took everything off the table, we went over every square inch of floor within a possible radius and then, a few feet beyond what would seem to be possible for good measure. No one was satisfied with anyone else's efforts, but insisted on covering the same ground himself. And no one found the dice.

It was fully ten minutes before someone found the exasperating little object hiding among some papers on a shelf a few feet away. Everyone insisted that he had already looked there, but plainly no one had looked thoroughly.

Isn't that a typical lost article?

"It Must Be Right There"—But It Isn't.

The other night I had a still more maddening time. The tube of my favorite cure-all salve which should be of the little stand at the head of my bed had vanished. I particularly wanted it to cure a threatened ache in my arm and started out to hunt for it, confident I could lay my hand on it in a moment or two. After ten minutes of the most combing my small bedroom I was in that highly nervous stage when hunting for a thing that must be right here and isn't inducible. I was going over and over the same ground in a perfectly idiotic way. Finally I gave it up and went to bed, and having cooled off a little I stopped emoting and began to reason.

"No one could have taken that out of this room," I reasoned, it is not on the floor, or on the stand or the back of the chair, the only objects in my little summer bedroom. It is not under my pillow. Where can it be? The only place it could be would be somewhere in the bed. It may have gotten pushed down to the foot in some way. So I got up and looked and there I found it. I had looked there before—but lacking conviction, I had not looked thoroughly.

There is Nothing Like Reasoning It Out.

And the reason I found it was simply because I stopped being exasperated, got a little ray of hope, my problem, and used my mind.

I have tried the method twice since and found that it worked. Let me recommend it to anyone who has the habit of losing things, and the worse habit of looking for them in an exasperated state of mind.

Planes as Passengers.

ONLY IN THEIR HULLS DO OUR FLOATING AERODROMES RE-SEMBLE OTHER SHIPS.

The queerest-looking, quaintest, and apparently most ungainly craft that ever rode the seas are the so-called "flying-ships" that have been added to the British Navy. One can find nothing exactly like them in any other navy in the world.

In order that our fleets may be absolutely up-to-date, they are now accompanied on all their voyages by a squadron of aeroplanes. These are employed in scouting and in "spotting" for the guns. Firing is carried out at such enormously long ranges in these days that old-time methods of watching the fall of shots are useless.

No matter how keen the eyes at the masthead may be, they cannot see a distance of twenty-five miles. But an aerial observer can; so aerial observation has been adopted. It is also indispensable in reconnaissance.

The Mother of the Aeroplanes. But aircraft have only a limited "radius of action." They are unable to continue moving for weeks on end under their own power, as warships do. Therefore, "flying-ships" have been built for the purpose of transporting them.

Actually these curious craft are sea-going aerodromes, as they fill precisely the same place in the organization of a fleet as the land aerodrome does in the equipment of an army corps.

In so far as their hull is concerned, the "flying-ships" are ship-like. But there all resemblance to an ordinary vessel ends. From bulwarks upward, they are huge, oblong structures, topped by a broad sweep of flat deck that dips a bit at the after end.

This deck is the "taking-off" ground from which the machines rise and upon which they alight when descending. So that the machines may have a clear run when "taking-off," the deck is freed from all obstructions, either by mechanical devices or by constructive design.

Funnels Astern!

In one case—that of the Eagle—the funnel and navigating-bridge are placed jauntily on one side of the vessel. But in the Argus and the recently completed Hermes, the bridges and funnels disappear by mechanical means, so as to leave the whole deck open when required.

Very odd, too, it looks to see bridges and funnels dropping down inside the ship, and then popping up again, jack-in-the-box fashion. And the funnels, instead of rising amidships in the usual way, discharge their smoke astern.

This peculiarity in her hull caused a very amusing incident when the Argus paid her first visit to one of our big naval ports.

Onlookers, seeing volumes of smoke belching from her stern, thought the ship was on fire, and raised an alarm—and it took some explanation to convince them that they were mistaken.

Beneath the broad flying-deck are roomy hangars in which a squadron of aerodromes can be stowed. As the machines are wanted for use, they are sent to the deck by electric-lifts. While as the deck is, alighting upon it proves a difficult job in rough weather.

Always Improving.

Should a machine not be able to "land" there, it can drop into the water alongside and be picked up. The "flying-ships" are also fitted with workshops and all other requisites of a well-equipped aerodrome. With every new one turned out some improvement in design is made that increases efficiency.

Like most innovations in our national fighting forces, the "flying-ship" began experimentally. The "mother" of the squadron was the Furious, one of the four mystery ships introduced by the late Lord Fisher. She was turned into a floating aerodrome for the Grand Fleet.

Then followed the Eagle, acquired from Brazil and "converted" for a like purpose. After that came specially designed vessels, and these weird-looking leviathans now constitute the latest specialist section added to the British Navy—Answers.

Irish Catholic Hierarchy Hopeful of London Conference.

Prince Makes Plea for British Empire Exhibition--Balfour Leader of British Delegates -- Senator Knox Dead -- Elimination Race To-Day.

BISHOPS' REPLY.
DUBLIN, Oct. 12. The Catholic Hierarchy, meeting at Maynooth College, has replied to Cardinal O'Connell's cablegram, sent in the name of the Bishops of the United States, wishing success for the Irish Peace efforts. The cablegram says in part, "Ireland recognizes in the message, not the voice of a Province or a nation, however multitudinous its people but the voice of the Church, after Rome the most glorious in the world. We join with you in fervent prayers that as a result of the good will now existing in England and Ireland, and under the blessing of God, the sadness of Ireland's history of seven hundred years is at last coming to an end and we are on the eve of national freedom, peace and prosperity."

CABINET INFORMED.
LONDON, Oct. 12. Prime Minister Lloyd George laid before the full meeting of the British Cabinet Council to-day the subjects discussed at yesterday's Conference between the representatives of the Irish Republican party and a Committee of Cabinet officers. Little was made public regarding the details of the two meetings held by Conference yesterday, but there was some intimation that objection was made by the Cabinet officials present to the recruiting of men for the Irish "Republican army" it is probable that some steps would be taken to secure an agreement by which neither party would increase its armed forces during the present negotiations.

PRINCE URGES ACTION.
LONDON, Oct. 12. (Canadian Press cable)—Presiding over a meeting at the Mansion House to-day, the Prince of Wales made a strong plea for support of the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley, near London, in 1923. The Prince gave it as his opinion that preparations for the big exhibition should be proceeded with immediately in order to "provide employment for some of the thousands of able-bodied men who had offered their lives for their country."

FISHERMEN'S RACE TO-DAY.
GLoucester, Oct. 12. The fishermen's race, blotted out by fog to-day, will be sailed to-morrow with rivalry keener because of the postponement. After the five schooners entered for the United States fishing fleet championship had lolled about the starting buoy for an hour this morning in vapors and light air, the race was called off for the day. The first was Mary Welch with the Elsie, then the Elsie G. Silva and Ralph Brown slipped their moorings and stood out to sea to get action and a profit; last, Capt. Mary brought the Elsie back early, without a haul, but the other two vessels came together for a brisk race run to Thatcher's Island and beat back. The Elsie G. Silva outfooted her rival measurably. As a result this knock-out schooner, the only one of her type in the race, and the last to enter, was mentioned to-night in the Mariners' and Seamen's club rooms with the Elsie and Arthur James as a possible winner. The Elsie, however, continues the favorite. She is considered by those supporting her as the logical successor of the Esperanto. Her friends say she is in line because she carries the Esperanto's captain and many of his crew. She rescued the men of the Esperanto when their ship went down off Sable Island and before that time defeated the cup winner in brushes on the Banks. Her admirers assert that she will win the race because of her speed which they estimate as being at least twenty minutes faster over a forty mile course. Captain Mary said he expected to win with the Elsie, but admitted that if the wind was light the Arthur James, sailed by Judd Matheson, his mate, last fall was to be feared. The weather sharp to-night predicted a good blow to-morrow with the wind probably from west.

PRESS AND CONFERENCE.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 12. United States delegates, to the Armament Conference at their initial meeting to-day were understood to have discussed the feasibility of admitting the press to all full sessions of the Conference and to have assumed a favorable attitude toward the proposition.

BALFOUR MAY LEAD.
LONDON, Oct. 12. Arthur J. Balfour probably will head the British delegation to the Washington Conference on the Limitation of Armaments and far Eastern Affairs. It was understood in authoritative quarters to-night. His tentative acceptance was said to have been the result of pressure brought to bear upon him to alter his previously expressed decision not to attend.

THE ALAND ISLANDS.
LONDON, Oct. 12. The International Conference for the naturalization of Aland Islands to-day adopted a proposition put forward by Professor Simon Askenaz yesterday, Polish delegate, providing that Great Britain, France and Italy, three powers not possessing property bordering on the Baltic Sea, should work out a compromise plan for the settlement of the question.

POPULAR'S COUNCILLORS RELEASED.

LONDON, Oct. 12. The Poplar Councillors were released after they had signified their desire to get together to endeavor to solve Poplar's financial difficulties. They disclaimed any desire to treat

SILESIAN DECISION REACHED.
GENEVA, Oct. 12. The Council of the League of Nations has reached a final decision on the Upper Silesian question with greater despatch than many expected. The solution reached by the Council involves a new frontier line, together with certain measures providing for guarantees against dislocation of existing economic conditions. The members of the Council are confident that this solution is the only possible one, and that it will at the same time roll away one of the dark clouds hovering over Europe and firmly establish the prestige of the League. The text of the decision will be published simultaneously at Paris, London, Rome and Geneva, as soon as notified to the Berlin and Warsaw Governments.

The Latest Tribute to Newfoundland Heroism.

Our Countrymen Saved Canada.

(H. F. SHORTIS.)

For the past half a century I have been endeavoring to show to the people of the outside world the daring, hardihood and heroism of our countrymen, whether displayed on the battlefields, our mercantile marine, or the battlefields in foreign countries, naval engagements, or in whatever spheres of life they may have been placed. But not in the wildest flight of imagination could I have penned such a tribute as that which appeared in the Canadian Magazine, Vol. LVII, No. 5, of September past. The Canadian Magazine is one of the leading magazines in Canada, large, well printed and beautifully illustrated. Among its contributors are some of the leading writers and most prominent men in Canada. It is published in Toronto, and has amongst its contributors Howard McConnell, J. D. Logan and other literary men. The greater portion of the magazine is given over to historical subjects, but amongst the contents is some light literature of a high order. But it is with the historical account of the part played by Newfoundlanders during the War of American Independence that I am about to deal, and as the writer, Gustave Lanctot, has had access to the records of those lively days, we can have no doubt but the statements therein are strictly correct. Gustave Lanctot has certainly the facts presented down to perfection—giving full details as to the movements of the respective armies—the number of killed and wounded—the names of the officers, etc. I do not know the position Mr. Lanctot occupies in Canada, but he is certainly a man of deep research, as well as a cultured and facile writer. I am sure the young students in our various colleges in particular, as well as the readers of the Evening Telegram in general, will peruse the subjoined with great interest, as I have done; as it will give them a good idea of the dating and heroism of the race from which all of us have sprung. I shall now give the article verbatim, with the headline in large black type as published in the Canadian Magazine:

WHEN NEWFOUNDLAND SAVED CANADA.

(By Gustave Lanctot.)

In October, 1775, a century and a half ago, Newfoundland's first expeditionary contingent departed from St. John's to fight for the Empire. Towards Canada, invaded by two American armies, the two ships, all their sails in the wind, hastily steered their northwest course. From the oldest British Colony, these volunteers were rushing to the help of the newest sister province, now threatened with imminent conquest.

Few in numbers, but strong in patriotism, they brought to Quebec a moral support and priceless reinforcement in a war in which forces were small and every soldier precious. And they came when most desperately needed, when a feather could have turned the scales and meant the loss of Canada. During a whole winter, shut up in Quebec, hardly laying down their muskets to sleep, they helped to keep the enemy at bay and actively participated in defeating the audacious assault on the city. Then Spring arrived and with it the fleet bringing reinforcements. And their regiment was at the head of the troops which marched out of the city and put to flight the enemy triumphantly liberating Canada.

Though unnoticed at the time, the Newfoundland Volunteers of 1775 made history and asserted the principle of Imperial solidarity. In the military annals of Newfoundland there is no more inspiring page of patriotism, endurance and bravery than this episode. It is certainly worth narrating.

All modern students know that the war for American Independence broke out in the above-mentioned years was an economic struggle, an American resistance to British trade laws. The initial dispute quickly degenerated into a quarrel, and the quarrel developed into a revolt, and very soon war was raging.

Right from the start the colonies discovered that the presence on their flank of a British Canada, just as formerly of a French Canada, was a constant danger, an open door to an invasion of their hinterland. So they decided that Canada they must win over or take.

In spite of certain popular leanings, French Canada, led by its clergy and nobles, refused to join a people who, while offering them friendships and freedom, were in other quarters insulting their institutions and religion. Congress authorized the conquest of Canada. The plan of campaign was simple and promising. The first army coming down Lake Champlain was to capture the two forts of St. John and Chambly, and, after taking Montreal, poorly fortified, was to go down the St. Lawrence to attack Quebec. The second army was to march from Boston up the Kennebec River through the wilderness, strike the Chaudiere River and follow it down to the St. Lawrence, and then make a junction with the first army under the walls of Quebec for the great assault on the Canadian capital.

During the whole summer prepara-

After Being Idle for Twelve Months He is Back on Job

Ohio Man Lost A Year On Account of Stomach Trouble—Is Now Well And Strong.

"Only a man who has to work for a living knows what it means to get back on the job after not hitting a lick of work for a whole year. I lost twelve months' straight time on account of stomach trouble. One of the worse cases I guess any man ever had. Tanlac not only made me a well man again but built me up 19 pounds in weight. I am writing all my friends in other cities to tell them of the wonderful news."

The above statement was made by George B. Lowe, well-known employee of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., living at 451 McGowan St., Akron, Ohio.

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

tions went on; troops were assembled and drilled, arms and provisions were gathered, and Canada was kept in a state of alarm by continuous reports of large armies about to be hurled against the few British forces in the country.

Her position was indeed critical. Outside the forts of St. John and Chambly, gates of the country, there were not two hundred soldiers in the province. The French nobles, merchants and clergy, were zealous and willing to do their share, but the country people, most indifferent, adopted an attitude of neutrality, compatible with the selling of supplies to the invaders.

The energetic Governor, Carleton, was straining every effort to protect the province, fortifying the towns, gathering munitions and provisions, trying to raise men. In recruiting he had a useful man, Colonel McLean, who, in June, had been authorized to raise from among Scotch colonists a regiment to be called the Royal Highland Emigrants, armed and uniformed like the 42nd Highlanders. Officers were appointed and each captain instructed to recruit his own company of fifty men.

It was then that Captain Colin Campbell decided to go to Newfoundland for the purpose of recruiting. Leaving Quebec in a schooner at the end of August, he probably reached St. John's in September.

At that time Newfoundland had only a fishing station, with a floating population who came in the Spring and returned home in the autumn. Permanent settlement on the island was discouraged, and as a matter of fact prohibited. The present population did not exceed 8,000, and St. John's could not claim more than 1,500 persons; 1775 was a bad year for the colony. In September, 1774, the American Congress had passed a decree forbidding all exportation to British ports. Enforced the following year, this meant a hard blow to the islanders accustomed as they were to buy most of their supplies from the Southern colony. Threatened with actual famine, they were obliged to send vessels in ballast to Ireland for provisions.

To aggravate the situation, American privateers were prowling off the coast, plundering trade and fishing boats. Still worse, a most terrific storm swept over the island. Ships were wrecked, hundreds of fishermen's craft were destroyed, and as many as 300 lives were lost.

Not a whit daunted by adverse circumstances the colony prepared itself for defence. The islanders loyally gave their help. Batteries were reared at various points and guns mounted. St. John's defences were greatly strengthened. On a height commanding the harbor, a new fort, Fort Townsend, was constructed. Fifteen hundred stands of arms were distributed among the various harbors for the use of the citizens in case of attack. Ships of war patrolled the neighboring seas; 200 volunteers were quickly enlisted to reinforce the garrison of 459 regulars. A martial atmosphere spread over the island. Governor Palliser knew that in the hour of need "every man would turn a fighter, not a soldier."

Such was the situation when Capt. Colin Campbell landed in St. John's on his recruiting tour. Immediately he began beating up volunteers for the regiment of Royal Highland Emigrants. Terms of enlistment to recruits were posted and circulated as follows:

"They are to engage during the present trouble in America only. Each soldier is to have two hundred acres of land in any province in North America he shall think proper; the King will pay the Patent fees, Secretary's fees, and Surveyor General's besides twenty years free of Quit-rent. Each married man gets fifty acres for his wife, and fifty acres for each child on the same terms."

"And as a Gratuity, besides the above Great Terms, One Guinea Levy Money."

These were really "Great Terms," but the island's population was very small and other recruiting officers were already busy in St. John's and along the coast. Moreover a good many volunteers preferred to join the local forces. Besides most of the men were out at sea fishing. They would not return till the beginning of October. Then the "good chance" for recruiting would come. It certainly came, for about the middle of the month. Capt. Campbell had with him 130 stalwart recruits. Time was pressing to return if he wanted to enter the St. Lawrence before winter would close the river. So, availing himself of a favorable wind, he embarked with forty of his men on Heon's schooner which, unfurling all her sails, speeded away through heavy water towards Quebec. A few days later the ship General Thomas from London, with Capt. Littleworth, took on board the ninety recruits still in St. John's and started in haste, racing with the wind, to catch up with the schooner. A month later fifty more recruits sailed from St. John's, but owing to the lateness of the season, they went to Halifax, where they joined the second battalion of the regiment stationed in that city. So Newfoundland's first overseas contingent to Canada comprised 180 men, a remarkable number for the actual population and local circumstances.

In the meantime things were becoming rapidly worse in Canada. The much advertised American armies had finally moved for the great invasion. In September, with about 1,800 men, Montgomery laid siege to St. John's, while Arnold with a force of 1,000 began his remarkable march through an uncharted country towards the St. Lawrence and Quebec.

Embarking all his men—100 regulars—and munitions, Governor Carleton left the city, and sailed at once for Quebec. Montgomery ordered his victorious troops to Montreal, and sent Col. Easton with a detachment to Sorel on the St. Lawrence to intercept Carleton and his small fleet.

Quebec was now the only hope of the British. There Lieut-Governor Cramache was actively engaged in putting the place in the best possible state of defence. The garrison consisted of twenty Fusiliers and eighty men of the Royal Emigrants for a town of extended fortifications enclosing the residences of about 8,000 persons. Taking the only chance left open, Carleton ordered the enlistment of the citizens. French and English inhabitants were constituted in two distinct militias, companies were formed, drilled and armed. This brought an addition of a few hundred men, into whose ranks new men came in as the organization proceeded.

In this state of helplessness and preparation disheartening reports were continually reaching the city; Chambly had surrendered, the country people refused to take up arms, etc. On the 3rd of November the citizens learned of the fall of St. John's and the flight of Carleton abandoning Montreal to the enemy. On top of all came the news that a large body of men, Arnold's troops, had appeared on the Chaudiere, about seventy miles from Quebec.

Spencer "At Home."

INAUGURATION OF NEW ORDER.

Despite the adverse weather conditions, over 400 "friends" and supporters of Bishop Spencer College attended the "At Home" which marked the inauguration of the new order in which the school will, in future, be conducted. The affair was a phenomenal success and all who attended were loud in their praises of the new appearance which the school presents. An agreeable part of the evening's proceedings was the concert in which some of the best of our local talent performed. Amongst those present were His Excellency the Governor, attended by Capt. Saltmarsh, the Prime Minister and Lady Squires, His Lordship Bishop White, Mayor Morris, Hon. M. G. Winter, Inspector General Hutchings and many other friends and Directors of the school, whilst the parents of nearly every pupil of the college also attended. The guard of honor composed of pupils who wore the smart uniform of the Girl Guides, was greatly admired. The "At Home" was opened by His Lordship Bishop White who, in a brief address, extended, on behalf of the Directors, a welcome to all who had attended. There were, he said, four outstanding reasons for the holding of the "At Home." In the first place, it was desirable that the parents of pupils at the college should be given an opportunity to meet the new teachers, and secondly, that they should be enabled to see the building as it now is. The third reason was to incite cohesion amongst the supporters of the college and so cause them to feel that it was their care, and lastly to obtain co-operation on behalf of the school. Bishop Spencer College had a great future before it, he assuredly, its past history was one which should cause feelings of pride in those who had been connected with it, concluded the Bishop. The concert then followed and the loud applause which greeted each item was expressive of the great pleasure which the audience experienced. To single out any performer for special mention, where so many were deserving of praise, would be altogether too invidious. Suffice it to say that it has seldom been the lot of a local audience to enjoy such a delightful entertainment. The concert programme was as follows:

Pianoforte Solo—Miss Alison Renie.
Song—Mrs. Churchill.
Recitation—Miss Kathleen Fraser.
Song—Miss Marguerite Mitchell.
Song—Rev. C. A. Moulton.
Song—Mrs. F. J. King.
Song—Miss Dorothy Adams.
Song—Miss Marjorie Hutchings.
Violin Solo—Mr. D. Margolies.
The Sword Dance and Physical Drill by pupils aroused much favorable comment.

The Governor's Address.
The report of the doings of the Field-Spencer Club which was read by Mr. G. R. Williams, will be found below. A most inspiring and encouraging speech was made by His Excellency the Governor, Sir Charles expressed himself as being well pleased with all he had seen, and he was particularly delighted at the smart appearance presented by the pupils of the College, all of whom are members of the Girl Guides and wore the remarkably neat uniform of that body. He said that all those present had sprung from British stock and trails of their ancestors could still be traced in them. Referring to the alterations which had been made in the manner in which the school was conducted, he said that everything had to change, and he felt sure that all the innovations had been made with the best intentions, and he sincerely hoped that before long it would be seen that the Directors had been fully justified in making them. It was a great effort on their part, and they deserved the success which he hoped they would ultimately attain.

When the concert and addresses had been concluded, refreshments were served by the energetic ladies of the Field-Spencer Association, and afterwards, an inspection of the building took place. Those who knew the British Hall of old would find it difficult to recognize it in its present form. All the class-rooms are ideally sited for the purpose and are splendidly fitted up. A new library is being formed under the direction of Miss Weatherhead, who is an experienced librarian. A studio is also in course of preparation, whilst a cinematograph machine for the purpose of showing educational pictures, will arrive shortly. Miss A. M. Richards, B.A., the Principal, has spared no efforts in reorganizing the College, and in doing so she has received the loyal support of the Directorate and of her staff and, under its new management, a prosperous future can be prophesied for Bishop Spencer College.

The Spencer Club.
The report of the Spencer Club as read by Mr. Williams, is as follows: Honorary President—Mrs. String Fraser.
President—Mrs. George Williams.
Vice-President—Miss S. Carter.
Secretary—Mrs. Taylor.
Treasurer—Mrs. Fred Stirling.

The first meeting was called on February 27th, 1921, the object being to find ways and means of raising money for the new College Building, then known as "The British Hall." Each member present, and all others having the welfare of their old school at heart, were asked to subscribe one dollar a year for at least two years. At present 130 names are enrolled.

The first year's work consisted of:—Furnishing the Head Mistress's Room complete; providing new floor mats and umbrella stands for school; purchase of 25 tables from the British Society for use at sales, etc.; one hundred dollars donated towards Science Room of Bishop Field College.

Second year, 1920-1921:—Furnished Teachers' Rest Room complete; purchased oil-cooker, cups and saucers, kettle, etc., for use of the Club; purchased flags for decorating Hall; paid for the installation of electric light throughout the College, at a cost of $550.00.

Over two thousand dollars have raised by dances, sales, etc., during the past two years, and with all expenses paid there is a credit balance in the Bank of $815.33, together with a $50.00 Bond.

This year it is hoped to raise $1,000 for the Science Room at Bishop Field College, which is also availed of by the girls of Bishop Spencer College. There is at present in hand towards this fund the sum of $150.00, the proceeds of a small dance held in the spring.

Prune-and-barley soup, flavored slightly with lemon, is a good cold-weather soup.
Coffee may be used as the liquid in spice or ginger cakes. It gives a very nice flavor.

Fatal Motor Accident.

INJURED MAN DIES IN HOSPITAL.

Mr. John Valentine, the well known manager of G. Knowling's Hardware Department, was knocked down by a motor car on Water Street at 8 p.m. yesterday, and died two and a half hours later in the General Hospital, without recovering consciousness.

The car which was driven by Mr. Star Templeman, was proceeding along Water Street, whilst Mr. Valentine, at the time of the accident, was on his way from his West End home to the Masonic Club. In crossing the street towards Smyth Building he was hit by the car and thrown on the pavement, the front wheels, so it is believed, passing over his legs. The car was immediately stopped and the injured man was quickly extricated from underneath by bystanders, and Dr. T. Anderson quickly responded to a telephone call. After a speedy examination he ordered Mr. Valentine to be taken to the Hospital. At the time, although the victim of the accident was unconscious, his heart beats were normal and the doctor's opinion that no bones were broken was confirmed at the Hospital.

The severe shock which had been sustained, was so severe that the injured man did not recover consciousness, and despite expert medical attendance passed away. Rev. Canon Pettit was on his side at the time, but his wife had just returned home, assured that her husband's condition was not serious and the news of his death was a very severe shock to her. Mr. Templeman was completely unscathed after the accident, and whilst visiting the hospital later he fainted and had to be given medical aid. He surrounded himself to the police last night and was allowed out on bail. Dr. T. Mitchell and Mr. T. Smyth were his bondsmen.

Mr. Valentine was a native of Ludlow, Shropshire, England, and came out to G. Knowling, Ltd., about 25 years ago. He later resided for a few years in Australia, but returned to Newfoundland and to Knowling's, seventeen years ago he married a sister of Mr. S. Churchill, of the Public Works Dept. Mr. Valentine was a man of undoubted popularity and was held in the highest esteem by all who came in contact with him. He lived a quiet life, disliking anything which would bring him in the public eye, and his loss will be no light one to a community of which he was so valuable a member. To his wife and relatives, the Telegram extends its sincere sympathy in a bereavement which has been made all the more sorrowful owing to the circumstances under which it occurred.

Premier Endorses New Athletic Interest

Yesterday a representative of the National Sports Committee called on Sir Richard Squires and before he left the Premier purchased one hundred dollars worth of tickets. It will be remembered that Sir Richard offered a donation towards defraying the cost of sending our athletes to Halifax, but the N.S.C. are not soliciting voluntary subscriptions, and we think in this respect their decision is a wise one. On the contrary the Committee ought to be commended in the big Marathon Sweepstakes every dollar which enthusiasts and supporters of the new athletic movement wish to donate. Thus the object of "charity" drives removed from our entry into fields afar, and our athletes can consider themselves part of a public forward movement rather than being sent at the whim and expense of the few. Sir Richard expressed himself as being thoroughly sympathetic with the aims and projects of the Committee in having Newfoundland represented at the athletic meets in the nearby Dominion, and hoped that next season would see athletes from all over the island compete in our Olympic at St. John's, so that absolutely our pick would be sent abroad.

A Denial.

The National Sports Committee wish to emphatically deny the statement made by certain "sports" that in view of the extraordinary interest being manifested by the public in the big Marathon Sweep, that it is being "hatched" so that increased revenue may accrue by the sale of the extra tickets. Only the original number as decided upon are being realized and no extra tickets have been or will be made up. Any balance remaining after the expenses of the track team are paid will be held as a "nest egg" to provide outside representation for our athletes again next year.

Taking Out Claims.

A rush has been made on the Crown Lands Office by people anxious to take out claims on that part of the French Shore where the recent gold find was reported. Whether these claims will be productive of any gold is a matter which time alone will tell, but it is certain that the samples brought in are of exceptional quality. Prospectors are now leaving for the scene, and their reports will be awaited with interest.

The Royal Stores, Limited

Future Results

Of a Recent Order in Council Dealing With Royal Names and Titles.

When the King made the Order in Council under which Windsor became the surname of the British Royal Family, His Majesty at the same time made a decree to which little further attention has been given, but which is full of importance, and is destined to effect profoundly the standing and position of the British Royal Family. With that decree, all King George's sons become the last Princes of the reigning house who will be styled "H.R.H." with the exception of the oldest son and his eldest descendants. If the brothers of the Prince of Wales ever have any sons they will be styled Prince, but will not be entitled to style themselves "H.R.H." and their sons will become plain Mr. Windsor. Thus in two generations the cousins of the Sovereigns may be plain Mr. Windsor, and rank as commoners.

Court Etiquette Simplified.

The effect of this drastic change in the style and title of members of the reigning family will be considerable—one might say revolutionary. The commoners of Royal birth will be as other men. They will enter professions, they will go into the City those who are gifted will follow the arts, and a future King of England may have, as an uncle, a celebrated artist, actor, author, or poet, whilst others of his near relatives may be engaged in commercial pursuits.

Indeed, the time is not so far distant when there may be flourishing in our midst some big retail concern under the style of Albert Edward Windsor, Ltd.

The effect on the sons and daughters of the reigning house becoming plain Mr. and Miss will be to create a very democratic atmosphere at the Court, and much Court etiquette and ceremony that now prevails will fall into disuse.

It will render needless, or even ridiculous, many of the existing rules of Court etiquette. For example, it would obviously be absurd for a man of Royal birth who has become a commoner to be addressed as "sir," expected to stand up when he enters a room.

Moving With the Times.

Much of Court etiquette will therefore disappear, and the Court, when members of the Royal Family have become commoners, and possibly married into middle-class families, will become very much democratized. This is not to say that the monarchy will be less secure than it is at present, or that its dignity will be lessened. King George, in making the decree he did, saw quite clearly what its ultimate effects would be, and, in making it, his Majesty acted as deliberately as he did wisely.

As long as the British Empire holds together, so long will the monarchy last; indeed, the existence of the one is dependent on the existence of the other. The ultimate effect of his Majesty's decree will be to strengthen the monarchy, and bring it into harmony with the ideas of future generations who will be reared in surroundings growing increasingly democratic.

F. SMALLWOOD, THE HOME OF GOOD RUBBERS,

218 and 220 Water Street.

Even since the war how democratized has the Court become? A Princess of the Royal Family has dropped her Royal title and married a commoner. Lady Patricia Ramsay is prouder to be known as the wife of a commander of the British Royal Navy than a Princess. Our Prince is the most democratically-minded and popular heir apparent to the Throne that has ever occupied his exalted position. Perhaps never before in history did so much real meaning lie behind the words, "God bless the Prince of Wales," as it does to-day.

CUTTING EXPENSES.
"We must cut down expenses," says Warren G. Harding, and thus he charms the senses of this tax-wary crowd, beneath our load we've drifted, and hoped to see it shifted; we'd like to see it lifted before we draw a shroud. "What is the use of working?" the heartache voters say; "the tax collector's lurking to take our roll away; he watches what we're earning, he's hungry in him burning, and when from work returning, he jumps us for our pay. What is the use of saving?" the weary workers cry; "of pinching and of slaving, to put a bundle by; the tax collector's waiting, his seal is not abating, we hear his teeth a-grating, he looks on us as pie." The heavy burden never will from our shoulders drop unless there's an endeavor to make expenses stop; the foolish bonehead spending, the wanton waste unending; and Warren's slogan's "We must cut down expenses!" No wiser word's been sprung since Adam built his fences, when this old world was young; until that creed is taken, and wasteful ways forsaken, we still must lose our bacon, by tax collectors stung.

A Luxurious Laundry.
One of the most wonderful laundries in the world, as regards size, hygiene, organization, and the general contentment of the workers, is to be found in San Francisco. The main building, which is two hundred and seventy-five feet square, is divided into two immense rooms by a fireproof wall, and it has been arranged so that all the washing enters at the extreme left of the building and is discharged, ready for use, on the right. The garments are handled almost entirely by labour-saving devices, which have been installed at the cost of about $30,000. One hundred and twenty-five thousand pounds of soft soap are used every week. This is made in a special plant, so situated that the liquid soap is delivered to each battery of wash-wheels by special piping. All water is secured from artesian wells on the premises, and that used for washing purposes is softened by a specially-constructed apparatus. Every machine in the laundry is operated by electric motors, the current for which is generated in the laundry's own power-house.

Body of 4-Day-Old Bride Found in Lake.
Mrs. Norah Johnson Kettle, of Cambridge, Mass., whose body was taken from Lake Mashapaug, Union, Connecticut, was a bride of four days, and was spending her honeymoon with her husband in a bungalow on the shores of the lake. A heavy anchor was tied about the neck of the dead body. The Connecticut police believe they have one of the most startling and mysterious cases in the annals of the criminal history of that state. The dead woman was a former Radcliffe girl, and her husband, John Dunster Kettle, is a Harvard man.

Beloved.
(Song.)
O dancing wind from the sea,
O gleam in the sunlit skies,
Your glory will soon be darkened
And faint in a deep surprise;
Lean out from your window, beloved,
And let them see your eyes.
Awake, O Spirit of Morning,
And dress in your garments fair;
The flowers shine resplendent
In the wonderful robes they wear;
Lean out from your window, beloved,
In the golden cloud of your hair.
O Heart of the joyous Summer,
With your flower-encircled scroll,
I can fathom half your story,
But I cannot read the whole;
Lean out from your window, beloved,
And let me know your soul.

Fishermen! Here's the Boot for You-"Excel"!

"EXCEL" Made 'All in One Piece'

"EXCEL"

The Fishermen's Friend

All fishermen know from experience what happens to ordinary boots when used in fishing. You've seen how salt water seems to take the life out of rubber and how the uppers crack and the soles wear through in a surprisingly short time.

The "EXCEL" is a different and better kind of boot. It has been made especially to stand up under the unusually hard use a fisherman's boot gets.

The rubber and fabric in "EXCEL" boots are of the very highest quality. But it is the special method of curing, under tremendous pressure, that makes the "EXCEL" so wear-resisting. The pressure forces the layers of rubber and fabric together so that they are actually "one-piece", without losing the least bit of the life or resiliency of the rubber. Salt water has practically no effect on "EXCEL" boots. The UPPERS remain pliable and weatherproof, and resist the drying-out action of sun, heat and extreme cold far longer than other boots. Consequently they don't crack anywhere near so quickly. The SOLES are almost wear-proof, because they are made like an Auto Tire, with 8 piles of rubber and fabric welded by tremendous pressure into a "tire-tread" sole that rivals an automobile tire for toughness and durability.

strain. There is not a single feature but what has been proved necessary and desirable by tests of severest use. Your own experience will tell you that a boot with these features simply must be a better boot.

Study this picture. Learn these features. Remember them when you compare "EXCEL" boots with ordinary boots. And remember, too, that very important point which the picture cannot show, namely, that "EXCEL" boots are cured under tremendous pressure, which leaves the rubber pliable, weatherproof and wear-resisting. It is only by the use of this tremendous pressure combined with highest quality materials that the best results are obtained.

Pliable Uppers. Weatherproof and Wear Resisting. Tough Tire Tread Soles. Made "All in One Piece."

"EXCEL" Boots are sold by all reliable dealers from Coast to Coast.

Five Miles Under the Sea

Deep-sea sounding of late years has become a very exact science. No idea of the difficulties involved can be gathered simply by watching a vessel sounding off shallow coasts. It is when a ship reaches the oceans, thousands of miles from land, that the real work begins. To sink a lead to depths whose depth is the easiest thing in the world. But when it comes to working miles sailors are brought up against very different problems.

Even to-day nobody knows exactly where the greatest depth exists, for the simple reason that no instrument presently invented can reach the bottom in the deepest parts.

A theory accredited by scientists is that below a certain depth sound waves tend to sink, because the pressure of the water is so great that specific gravity is overcome.

It is widely held that when ships sink to the deepest parts of the ocean they never reach the bottom, but float suspended in the water at a depth below which their weight is not sufficient to take them.

In support of this theory it may be said that the greatest depth which has been sounded up to the present is but over five miles. But it is thought that parts of the ocean are perhaps four times as deep, and marine engineers are anxious to find some means of proving this.

In this branch of scientific research wonderful instruments are used.

Attached to the lead of the sounding, which weighs 70 lbs., and are suspended on piano wire, are specially constructed cups which close automatically and bring up samples of the sea's bed.

Time after time, sounding parties at sea have seen no trace of solid matter reached by reaching the sounding lead because the leads are not sufficiently heavy to penetrate deep enough.

All records that exist at the present time may very soon be broken by the expedition. The expedition, the first of which they will use can be suspended at a depth of seven miles. What will be found nobody can say. All existing theories may be disproved, but it is certain that some interesting data will be forthcoming.

Naturally, deep-sea sounding is essential from many points. Fog is the sailor's enemy. Soundings must be taken frequently to avoid disaster. Formerly the leads used were smeared with tallow. Many interesting specimens were brought to the surface, but they are known of the flora and the fauna that exist at great depths. Hence the constant attempts to discover better sounding apparatus.

Notes and Comments.

According to an address made to the druggists in convention at Atlantic City, N. J., the wholesale and retail drug business is being demoralized by the intrusion of individuals who are establishing drug stores in order to engage in the sale of intoxicating liquors.

A Manchester, N. H., woman recently lost her pocketbook. She hurried to newspaper office, and put in an advertisement, which read: "Will the person seen picking up a pocket-book return, etc., and avoid trouble." The advertisement ran a week without result. One night recently the woman happened to put on a bathrobe which she had not worn for some time. In the pocket she found the missing pocket-book.

Northcliffe's Pet Paper.

IT HAS A CIRCULATION OF 1,365,256 COPIES DAILY.

The most important achievement of Lord Northcliffe is the Daily Mail, and, according to "The Mystery of the Daily Mail," a volume just issued by the Daily Mail, that is no mean achievement. The paper claims the world's biggest circulation, 1,365,256 copies daily, and admits having revolutionized British daily journalism.

The late Alfred Harmsworth started the Daily Mail on May 4, 1896, on the assumption that the people of England wanted a more concise newspaper, one which would give a wide variety of news in handy form. The featuring of women's affairs was one radical innovation, but there were many others.

A beginning was made with the modest working capital of £15,000, much of which was expended between February and May in getting out private editions which were relentlessly criticized and improved until, after a solemn toast the first public edition was issued. All records were at once broken for sales and, says the Mystery of the Daily Mail, they have been broken daily since.

What is the mystery or secret of Northcliffe's success? The volume says: "People are not so foolish as not to realize that the average 'Ditto' journal is conducted with the object of gaining some social reward for its owners. At a time when millions of all sorts are trying to buy, and have bought, public opinion by getting possession of newspapers, the existence of an independent publication like the Daily Mail, which is just as independent of politicians as of advertisers and of readers, is an essential part of the body politic."

The ability to utter something like the last sentence without winking or causing others to smile is, perhaps, the mystery, the secret of 1,365,256 copies of a big advertising revenue and of Lord Northcliffe, formerly Alfred Harmsworth, who accepted a peerage without giving in return any support to the Government.

Few Unemployed in Busy Germany.

MANUFACTURERS CAN UNDERSELL ALLIED COUNTRIES ON ALMOST ALL GOODS.

James Heckacher, vice-president of the Irving National Bank, New York, who has just returned from Europe, reports an improvement both in Germany and England, compared with conditions a year ago. The improvement in Germany, Mr. Heckacher says, is patent in many ways. The people seem to be on the upgrade, he declared, and he does not doubt that in industry and commerce they will come back eventually to their former level.

"For one thing," he said, "they are working hard. They realize that in labor lies their salvation. Factories are busy in the industrial centers and unemployment is comparatively small. The Germans can undersell the Allied countries on almost all classes of goods. Financial problems constitute the most serious obstacle to Germany's rehabilitation. The depreciation of the mark, while it gives the Germans an advantage in selling abroad, becomes a serious handicap on purchases from other countries."

"In England, the coal strike hit trade hard, though it helped some concerns to dispose of surplus stocks of merchandise. Britain's coal exports now have been increased, but if her industries are to be placed on a basis at which they can compete with trade rivals the cost of steam coal must be reduced. Liquidation has proceeded throughout the Kingdom to a considerable extent, and conditions are improving, though slowly."

MUTT BEATS AROUND THE BUSH FOR A TOUCH. —By Bud Fisher

Eventful Career.

Who Founded Royal National Lifeboat Institution.

The Royal National Lifeboat Institution was founded in 1824 by Sir Thomas Huskisson, who lies buried with his wife in a tomb in St. George's Church, Douglas, Isle of Man. The Rev. William Hillier is a singularly exemplary of the vicarages of an ancient French nobleman in York of whom had resulted in the death of his first wife he inherited some property in Essex. His wife in 1813, he married the daughter of a prominent Manxman named John Hillier, and she remained his faithful friend and counselor until she preceded him to the grave by two years. His early life was passed on the continent as an equestrian, a member of Sussex, a brother of George in 1803 he spent £20,000 in an expedition against the French for coast defence against the French invasion, and the government acknowledged his services by a knighthood. His patriotism had depleted his powers, of resistance to the attacks of fortune, sugar plantations in the West Indies in which much of his fortune was invested ceased to give expected returns, and his business property had to be sold. Hillier, through his secretary, had inherited some property in Isle of Man, and there he made his home. To this fact the Royal National Institution owes its birth, the early years of the last century a succession of storms of the sea caused much shipping loss, Government ships were wrecked, and in saving—especially in 1824, saw the necessity of an organization to perform systematically a service to the public, and Thomas Hillier, a London merchant, then M.P. for the London Tavern, on the 26th of August, 1824, over which Dr. Cantillon, Archbishop of Canterbury, presided, it was resolved to form the Royal National Lifeboat Institution of Life from St. John's, on the coast of the "Old Kingdom," as Hillier's greatest triumph, he had others, only a little inferior. It was by his enterprise and energy that the Tower of Refuge, Conister Rock at Douglas, was a tower of refuge to the seaman, as Wordsworth spoke of it in "The Excursion" and that a school of Navigation was established in the Isle of Man. Despite this success, this great man was in oblivion. He had become a victim of a local bank, and it was after his wife's death, when still he was in grief, the bank failed. He did not long survive the blow. He died on January 6, 1847, and was laid to rest by the side of his wife. There was no inscription on his tomb because it was not as yet as he had died a bankrupt, his body could be buried by his friends. It is only recently that the fact that the tomb had been removed by the society which he founded in record of his bright career had been noted.

Which is the Fastest Fish?

TARPON CAN SWIM FIFTY MILES AN HOUR. It has been known to swim at this speed at which birds fly. At least it is interesting in the question of speed at which fish can swim. It is a point with a stop-watch, but in the water is a much more difficult matter. The clear water of a moorland stream you can see a trout, and a good view of trout, and, pointing the edge of a stick (pick into) it. I have dropped a small public watched the trout flash away, trying this experiment a good number of times. I have come to the opinion that a small trout can move at thirty miles an hour. I do not think that a trout is as fast as a mackerel. A mackerel weighs less than a trout, but it is in a race between the two that the mackerel would be the winner.

Face of the Porpoise. Other things being equal (writes Mother Beck in the Daily Mail), larger had the more rapidly it swims. A ten-pound salmon can swim a very good imitation of a porpoise, when hooked and dragging a line, and a heavily braked reel its speed is a matter of course. A porpoise, with its long slender body, tremendous muscular power, can swim outstrip a salmon. I have seen a porpoise that a tarpon can swim at eighty miles an hour. I have written from Charleston, Florida, I have watched a school of porpoises swimming in the formation in front of the ship, and seen them evidently in chase to some given signal, divide into separate squadrons, each of a wheeled and dashed back a good turn of the ship, to return almost immediately and take up their former position.

Disabled Ship Coming.

A message to the Furness Withy Company received yesterday stated the S.S. Canadian Trooper had picked up the Norwegian steamer Oda, a disabled colliery and was towing her to this port for repairs. The message further added that the Oda's rudder stock is damaged, and that both ships are expected to make port to-night or early to-morrow morning. The Canadian Trooper is owned by the Canadian Government Merchant Marine and is bound from Rouen to Montreal. The Oda is a ship of 2333 tons, owned by L. W. Hansen, Bergen, Norway, and is bound from Montreal to England with general cargo.

The ship at the time was moving at fifteen knots, and after seeing this message's repeated several times other spectators agreed with me that the possibility could swim just about three times the pace at which the vessel was travelling, or something like fifty miles an hour. A shark is almost as speedy as a porpoise, but it is a bit slow in starting. There is, I fancy, only one fish that could give points and a beating to a tarpon. This is the swordfish, a creature that runs to a thousand pounds or more in weight, and which for sheer strength and ferocity has probably no match in all the seas. As for the whale, which is, of course, a mammal and not a fish, its speed cannot be compared with that of some of the creatures already mentioned. Yet even so, any whale could beat the fastest ocean greyhound in a speed contest.

Growing Old Gracefully.

(By Rosalind Nels.) Of course, we poor women have to grow old (so do men, but it does not matter so much for them), but we should try not to show it more than we can help. It is a sad fact, but nobody wants to be a semi-old woman, although a really old woman is often very popular. When your hair is snow white it may look delightful. When it is just "on the turn" it often looks singularly unattractive. It is the same of us when we are half young and half old. We do not want to settle down to old age, for we don't feel a bit old, yet, alas! we often look it. Now, how can we best have off the appearance of age? Not by dressing like a young girl. Elderly fashions, please note this, I have seen apparent girls tripping along—rather painfully—and I have thought that is a smart girl, and then "she" has turned around. Oh! shades of Rider Haggard's "She"—an old woman lined and painted and dyed, and so on, had put on a short skirt and high heels and false red hair and powder and paint, and she had added thereby a truly pitiful number to her years. If it is no use, you cannot serve much better with whitening when it whitens red current jelly. Do not be too meticulous if you are getting on. Be sympathetic and cheery and kindly and humorous, but don't be a lambkin. Your gambling days are over. We can to some extent avoid the appearance of old age, but by dressing too young, not by being too playfully lamb-like, but by suitable clothes (and, if possible, suitable lights) and by avoiding all sorts of things. Not reaching old age before we need requires many don'ts. Here are some of them. Don't overdress or underdress. Don't paint unless you do it very skillfully. Don't be sarcastic—it gives you such a nasty expression. Don't make faces—you do this far more often than you are aware of. Don't neglect your skin—or your hands. Don't let your voice grow hard and loud. Don't sleep too much. Don't dwell in the past and always be comparing the present to the past, to the disadvantage of the former. Don't condemn youth. There are heads more don'ts, but here are some of the do's. Do be kind and gentle and sympathetic. Do smile and try to be an optimist. Keep cheery, and take a vivid interest in everything and everybody. Do keep your enthusiasm for life, for love, for children, and flowers, and for the tender sunshine, and for God's sweet flowers, and above all, be young in spirit as long as you can. Never be childish, but try to keep childlike in mind and soul. Put away all thoughts of age and sickness and weakness and contention. Do your best to keep the priceless companionship of the Spirit of Youth and it will shed its radiance on your stony, instead of your gully, ageing countenance. In short, feel young and you will look young, long after your grubbiness, pessimistic, consternatory friends have grown old and unattractive, for this youth and sunny old age are more or less a question as to the spirit than the body, and of thought than flesh and blood.—London Daily Express.

A SUGGESTION!

STUDEBAKER is quoted to-day close down to $78. Its par value is $100 and its dividend is $7 annually. It is easily the pick of the automobile issues as it is now earning its full dividend more than three times over, and is working at near full capacity with many unfilled orders still on its books.

It has reached over $90 this season and should easily sell again soon above that figure. Looks like a certainty for 10 to 20 points clear profit.

Traded on margin $12 per share. Margin yield 50 per cent. We have every facility for prompt execution of your orders.
