WARNING

We have repeatedly advised property owners to protect themselves against loss by Fire, and our warning has been taken by some resulting in new clients, but—there are many yet whose minds are not made up, to whom loss of money, house, furniture and effects, is only a trifle? and to whom family consideration has not appealed. It is important, get busy now, write us or call. Perfect Protection in highest grade Companies.

The Mystery of Rutledge Hall

OR

"The Cloud With a Silver Lining"

CHAPTER II.

And very soon Sidney discovered that people were wondering whom Miss Neil would marry of her many admirers, among whom was Stephen Daunt.

From the very day of her return to Ashford a dull numb pain had been aching at Sidney's heart, a vague sense of suffering and discomfort which she could not get rid of, but which she would scarcely acknowledge to herself; but now the pain had increased to an agony which she could not ignore, although even now she would not recognise its cause.

A knock at the door made her start and turn away from her contemplation of the grave dark face which had grown so dear to her.

"What is it?" she asked hastily; and a servant's voice from without answered that Mr. Frank Greville was down-stairs and would like to see her.

"I will come down directly," Sidney answered quickly, the color coming hotly into her face; and, when the sound of the footsteps outside had died away, she hastily smoothed her ruffled hair and dashed cold water on her aching eyes, and then went swiftly down-stairs.

"Mr. Greville is in the study, Miss Sidney," said the old servant who met her in the hall; and with a word of thanks she went on and entered the study.

A slight fair young man was its only occupant; he was standing before the mantle-piece, looking up intently at the beautiful pictured face, so like Sidney's, which hung above it. At the sound of the closing of the door he turned, disclosing the face of the young man who had driven by so hastily and unheedingly that morning; and, without a word of greeting, Sidney went forward and put her hands in his.

CHAPTER III.

"Mr. Stephen Daunt," announced Dr. Arnold's gray-haired old manservant, opening the drawing-room door; and the announcement was immediately followed by the entrance of Stephen Daunt, tall and grave and languid in his gray tweed clothes, the rose in his button-hole showing redly against the dark gray ground.

Three hours had elapsed since Frank Greville had left the Gray House, after a very prolonged visit; and Sidney was alone in the drawing-room, sitting in a low chair near the open window, a volume of her favorite poet open on her knee and her brown eyes fixed upon the page; but she was not reading, for she had been sitting there for two long hours, and she had not turned over the page.

As the servant's grave voice broke upon the stillness, she started and turned her head, a gleam of impatient annoyance flashing into her brown eyes; then she rose and went forward slowly, not holding out her hand, for both her hands clasped the book she held, which was large and heavy.

"I was to meet Dolly here," Stephen said, after the first greetings were over. "She had come shopping to do in the town, and said she would meet me here and drive me home. May I take your book, Sidney?"

They were still standing in the centre of the room, where they had met, and there was just a shade of anxiety in Stephen Daunt's dark gray eyes as they rested on Sidney's face for a moment, and he took the Shakespeare from her and put it upon the table.

Sidney's face had flushed suddenly and vividly on his entrance; but now the color had faded, leaving her terribly white—even her lips were colorless; still, although she herself knew that she had grown so pale, she resolutely suppressed all other signs of agitation, and her voice was quite calm as she answered him.

"Dolly has not been here; but I dare say she will not be long now," she said quietly. "Will you not sit down?"

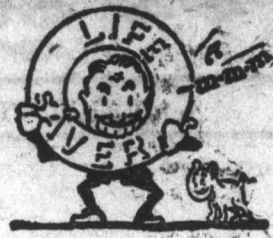

"I hope I am not disturbing you," he answered, gently. "Are you quite well this afternoon, Sidney?" he added, following her to the window as she moved slowly across the room. "You look so pale."

Sidney's pretty eyebrows were lifted a little.

"One would think that I was usually of the color of a peony!" she said, lightly. "I am quite well, even if I have less color than usual, although I used to think I was always pale."

"You generally grow white roses," he remarked, smiling, "but not quite so colorless as yours of to-day. The doctor has gone to Stroud, I understand?"

"Yes, Mr. Lanthony is very ill," she answered. "Papa is very anxious about him."

"He has long since passed the limit of three-score years and ten," Stephen remarked.

"That fact will not make his loss less felt," rejoined Sidney, with a sudden anger which brought a smile to his lips.

"Did I say that it would?" he asked, looking down at her smiling. "It only prepares us for what is to be expected. How pleasant it is here!" he added, leaning against the open French window, and looking away over the old-fashioned garden and fields to the hills beyond.

It was very pleasant in the old-fashioned garden, pleasant and still and quiet. The room was at the back of the house, and opened on to the lawn with long French windows, and it had such a fine view of the country that it was difficult to believe that one was in the centre of a bustling little town. Dolly Daunt was wont to say that there was no room at Lambwood so charming as Sidney's drawing-room, with its curious antique furniture and rare old china and its faded harmonious coloring.

For a few minutes there was silence. Stephen's gray eyes rested dreamily on the hills which the sunlight was touching tenderly; then they came back slowly and lingered on the fair pale face of the girl who stood, a slender, graceful figure, by his side.

Sidney had gone to her room after Frank Greville's departure, and changed the soft brown dress for one of dark blue velvet with yellowish ruffles at her throat and wrist, and a broad silver collar clasping her white throat tightly. She was looking very lovely with the fevered light in her eyes and the strange excitement on her face.

"Have you been out to-day?" he asked presently.

"No."

"You are getting a sad stay-at-home," he remarked, smiling down at her. "You never go for any long walks now. Did you get lazy in town, Sidney?"

"Perhaps," she answered, carelessly. "I think I will ring for some tea; Dolly will be here shortly, I dare say."

"I was to meet her at five o'clock," said Stephen, crossing the room to ring the bell. "It is almost that now."

"Yes; it wants only a few minutes to five."

"What have you been doing with yourself all day?" Stephen resumed, going back to the window; and at the sudden question the color leaped into Sidney's face, and her eyes met his for a moment in sudden fear, then almost directly the white lids sunk and the color faded again.

"I do not know," she faltered; and Stephen looked at her wonderingly; but, before he could ask her any other question, the servant appeared with the tea-equipage, and Sidney hastened away from the window with a little sigh of relief.

But, as she prepared to make the tea, measuring it into the tea-pot with her little fingers very unsteady, the question he had asked her seemed to flash before her eyes in letters of fire.

Prince Discovers Source of Beef

CONDUCTED AROUND PORT OF BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 15—(U.N.)—The Prince of Wales discovered the source of the roast beef of Old England Tuesday during a tour of the Buenos Aires port which disclosed the presence of 34 British cargo ships, many of which carry meat and bread to Britain.

The Prince was conducted around the port in a launch by President Alvarez, and the predominance of British merchantment among the vessels at berth was explained by the fact that much of England's food, especially meat, considerable wool and other prime necessities, pass through the Buenos Aires harbor.

The round of visits, receptions and operas continues to engross the Royal visitor. Buenos Aires is enthusiastic with welcome.

Every important newspaper issued a special edition of from 20 to 140 pages in the Prince's honor, and magazines are devoted to the story of Anglo-Argentine relations.

"The occasion attains really extraordinary proportions," says La Prensa, commenting on the Prince. "Due to the inherent importance of the visit. It is a courtesy mission from the world's most wonderful nation."

Seamen's Strike Becoming Serious

Hallstones kill two persons in Belgrade—Soviet Russia to permit liquor manufacture.

RUSSIA PERMITS SALE OF LIQUOR.
MOSCOW, Aug. 29.

Manufacture of liquors containing sixty per cent alcohol, and of forty per cent. vodka will be permitted in Soviet Russia from October 1, under a decision reached by the executive committee, sale of liquor is permitted throughout the Soviets Federation.

SEAMEN'S STRIKE EXTENDS TO BRITAIN.

LONDON, Aug. 30. The seamen's strike, heretofore only slightly affecting British ports, took a serious turn to-day, threatening to involve trans-Atlantic liners. A mass meeting of seamen decided to refuse to sign an except at the old wages. A strike committee was formed, and the men pledged themselves to approach other seamen with the object of a general strike. Another meeting takes place to-morrow.

Avoiding Ellis Island

VISA EXAMINATION IN LONDON.

Disappointment was in store for many applicants for visas at the American Consulate, 18, Cavendish Square, W., recently.

A new immigration department has been opened there to enable travellers to the United States to avoid the inconvenience of Ellis Island. Applicants are cross-examined as to their ancestry, health, and financial position.

Hailing from South London, a boy who said a rich American had promised him four years at a school at Silver Bay was asked:

How old are you?—17, sir.

What do you want a visa for?—To go to school.

Have you got a letter to say the school will accept you?—No, sir.

You can't go, then—next please.

The next, a woman who said she was a hairdresser was asked: Ever been to America before?—Yes; my husband is an American citizen.

Where is he?—In America with our small daughter.

By this time she was a little harassed, and when it came out that she had once gone to America with a temporary visa, married an American, and returned without him, she was on the verge of tears.

"You'll have to get a permit of re-entry from Washington," she was told.

"But I want to go to-morrow," she said. "Can't go—next please, Fred," was the retort.

Fred is the office boy, and next to the cross-examiner appears to be the most important person in the building. He hopes to be President one day.—Daily Mail, Aug. 8.

French Finances

John Bell in the Fortnightly Review: "Paradoxical as it may seem, the case of France is pathetic and yet full of hope. Her finances are in a terrible mess. At the time of writing the pound is still worth more than 100 francs. For nine months the Chamber and Senate had been engaged in the task of producing a balanced Budget. France has an internal debt of 150,000,000,000 francs in perpetual and long-term rentes and 130,000,000,000 francs in short term securities. Her foreign debt is of a crushing character. She owes England £600,000,000 and America $1,372,324,350 dollars. Her Budget deficit was 4,000,000,000 francs. France has no trade crisis, no large numbers of unemployed workers to maintain. In fact, she is importing thousands of foreign workmen every week, for her own manual labor is not sufficient for her needs. In a certain measure she is prosperous because she is able to utilize this foreign labor. For M. Caillaux stated in the Chamber the other day that without it industry concerns would have to shut down, with the result that French workers would be laid idle. Economically and industrially

Earl of Reading Outlines British Policy for India

SIMLA, India, Aug. 21.—(C.P. via Reuters)—A record crowd of visitors and a full house was attracted by the exceptional interest in an address by the Earl of Reading, Viceroy, at the State opening of the Autumn session of the All-Indian Legislature Thursday.

The Viceroy devoted half of his speech to a review of administration and the other half to surveying the position in Great Britain as a result of his visit there. He emphasized the fact that the statement recently made by the Earl of Birkenhead, Secretary of State for India, in the House of Lords had not been seriously challenged in Parliament and declared that its importance and value had not been fully realized in India. He said that the statement by the Secretary for India emphatically indicated adherence to the policy embodied in the Reforms Act without distinction in political parties.

Political Views.

The Earl of Reading said that his discussions with leaders of varying political views in Great Britain showed that, while they were all sympathetic toward India, they were equally determined not to yield to pressure nor make premature concessions. This, he continued, confirmed his own view that it was through friendly co-operation alone that India could advance to her ultimate goal. He declared that the time for the revision of the constitution had not yet arrived. Indeed, if an impartial Royal Commission were now appointed to examine the position in light of the co-operation received it would only result in disappointments. On the other hand the time was now opportune for the working of the machinery of reform. The Muddiman report he observed would remove the defects in the working out of these reforms.

The Viceroy said that the financial stringency was disappearing and that Ministers were obtaining new resources in their programmes of improvement and development. Furthermore, he continued, Ministers would recruit their own Provincial services to operate in the transferred field. The darchy could thus run even more smoothly and efficiently. The Viceroy announced the appointment of a currency commission under the chairmanship of Lieut.-Commander Hilton Young. He considered India's relations with her neighbours as satisfactory no outstanding questions being under consideration. The Viceroy dwelt at length with the need of agricultural development through a central coordinating organization.

Concluding, the Viceroy said that his term of office was approaching an end and he pleaded for goodwill and co-operation which he said offered the only path to the promised land. The Viceroy's speech was frequently applauded and produced a visible effect.

The Muddiman report referred to in the above cable was made public last March after long study of the Indian question of Government. It observed that the constitution of India had been in existence too short a period to enable a well-founded opinion as to its success, but recommended a relaxation of the control of the Secretary of State for India in matters of purely Indian interests. It also recommended that Indian Ministers should carry more weight with the Governors and should have increased responsibility. A minority report from the same committee went further than the majority in recommendations of reform declaring that nothing but the disappearance of the darchy and the substitution

Photos by 'Phone

A novel exhibition was held at the Royal Society, Burlington House, London, recently, when a number of photographs, which had been transmitted over telephone lines, were on view. Some of these 'phone photos had been sent over a distance of 3,300 miles.

The photographs shown were of all kinds, including landscapes, interiors, and portraits. Reproductions of finger-prints and a cheque complete with signature suggested ways in which this method of transmitting photographs might make the way of the "crook" harder than ever. Another interesting exhibit was a reproduction of a three-colour photograph.

While there is nothing new in the electrical transmission of pictures, the process has never been quite satisfactory before. Now, however, the difficulties previously encountered seem to have been overcome, and no loss of technique could be seen in the 'phone photos.

As the time occupied in transmission is only about seven minutes and a half, the possibilities of the method are limitless.

Helping British Shipping

World competition in shipping, as in other industries, is a very serious affair, and we are always being reminded by those in authority of the necessity of "keeping down costs."

The concern of the authorities for the welfare of industry is sometimes shown in rather strange ways. ... ever. Recently, the Merchant Shipping Advisory Committee, which is a standing committee under the Board of Trade, recommended that a certain type of motor-lifeboat should be carried on all liners.

An order was accordingly issued to the British shipping companies to have these motor-lifeboats built. This involved a very large expenditure.

Then the advisory committee discovered that the expensive type of boat which they had recommended was not really necessary, and advised the Board of Trade that another type could be used with equal efficiency, but at a fraction of the cost.

However, though approached by

M.G.C.A. ATHLETES FOR CARBONEAR.

A meeting of the M.G.C.A. Sports Committee was held on Saturday night, when it was decided to send the Club track team to Carbonear on Wednesday, to assist at the Garden Party, which is to be held there by Rev. Mr. Bugden. The athletes will leave the city by motor cars 8 a.m. Wednesday.

CRICKET MATCH.

Conception Bay vs. City.
A representative cricket team from the city will leave town by motor cars on Wednesday morning, for Bay Roberts, to compete against a cricket team representing Conception Bay. The following City players will go along:—J. C. Hogg, H. Goodridge, E. Hickman, R. Suck, E. G. Ewing, H. MacDuck, G. Reid, C. Quirk, H. Knight, N. Hunt, H. C. Hayward.

INTER-TOWN FOOTBALL.

Good Game Expected To-Morrow Night.

To-morrow night the Grand Falls football team will try conclusions with a city eleven and a good game is being looked forward to, as among the Grand Falls team are some of the best footballers in the country. The Grand Falls team has never had an opportunity before of proving their worth, and they intend to make the best of their chance and make good, as they did in no unmistakable way in baseball a few weeks ago. The line up of both teams will appear to-morrow. You can rest assured that G. F. have a first-class team when you know "Buck" Hannaford, Jim Griffin, G. V. Evans, A. Crawley and "Darby" Pitcher are amongst the bunch.

N. A. A. CHAMPIONSHIPS.

5th Annual Sports Meet, On Sept. 9th. On Saturday night last a very enthusiastic meeting of the Newfoundland Athletic Association was held in the office of Messrs. Higgins, Hunt and Emerson, Hon. W. J. Higgins presiding with a large number of members in attendance. After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and adopted, the President read a letter he had received from Mr. C. H. Hayward, of Grand Falls, donor of the Club Trophy for the past three years. With the letter there also came another cup, a duplicate of the cup which was won by the St. John's team, which Mr. Hayward offered to the Association, hoping that it would tend to stimulate sport amongst the athletic clubs of the city. The Association felt grateful to Mr. Hayward for his kindness on this second occasion.

Americans Test New Grass Paper

NEW PRODUCT HAS REPUTATION FOR SUPERIOR PRINTING QUALITIES.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Paper making stock new to America has just been tried out in the experimental paper mills of the bureau of standards at Washington. It was announced at the Department of Commerce Monday. The material is partly pulped esparto—a wild grass indigenous to Southern Spain and Northern Africa. Abroad it is known for its fine paper making qualities. It can now be delivered partially pulped to American mills at attractive rates.

Since it is now economical to consider it in American paper making, the bureau of standards made up on a semi-commercial scale samples of esparto papers with the imported stock. The laboratory assays of the finished product are now ready for American industry. The bureau reports that the imported samples to partially pulped esparto gave, after cleaning, a sixty per cent. yield of paper making fibre, and that the resulting esparto paper was stronger than soda pulp paper. In view of its reputation for superior printing qualities and suitability for book-making, its possible introduction will be awaited with interest by the paper and printing trades.

New Anaesthetic Just Discovered

LONDON.—The discovery of a substitute for cocaine as an anaesthetic was announced by Dr. C. O. Hawthorne, of Harley Street, London, W., at the opening session at Bath of the annual meeting of the British Medical Association. The new anaesthetic has been discovered by Dr. Alexander John Copeland, who was awarded the Ernest Hart Memorial Scholarship of £200 ion and were pleased to accept this cup which will be won outright at this year's sports, if this meets with the approval of the donor. It was decided to hold the annual championships meet at St. George's Field, on Wednesday, Sept. 9th. There will be only one change in the programme of last year, the Junior Quarter Mile being replaced by the hop-step-and-jump. All events on the programme will be included for the Club Trophy. The silver cup, presented by Mr. C. H. Hayward, is for the Club or Association securing the greatest number of points to be secured as follows:—1st place, 5 points; 2nd place, 3 points; 3rd place, 1 point. It was decided to open the entry list immediately for the following events:—Hurdles, Throwing Javelin, Pole Vault, 100 Yards, 1 Mile Walk, 220 Yards, 1 Mile, Hop, Step and Jump, 1-4 Mile, High Jump, Hammer Throw, "Telegram" Road Race, Club Relay, Shot Put, Broad Jump, Throwing Discus, the Hurdles will close with J. A. MacKenzie, Law Chambers, at 6 o'clock on Saturday, September 19th. The Preliminary heats will take place on Monday, September 27th, beginning at 6.30 p.m. A committee, consisting of Messrs. Thomas, Howlett, McKenzie and Cahill with executive ex-officio, will arrange the programme and do any other necessary work. Messrs. F. W. Sparkes and J. M. Tobin were appointed as a prize committee and will order the medals to arrive here the earliest possible date. Gold, Silver and bronze medals will again be given this year.

The Secretary had a letter from the Secretary of the Wanderer's Club, of Halifax, asking for a team to be sent to the annual meet to be held at that place on Saturday next, and offering every comfort and convenience to any who would go. The Association will not send representatives but the letter will be duly acknowledged. With reference to sending men for the Halifax Marathon Race, it was decided to leave this matter over until a later date.

PROF. SEELEY WILL PERFORM TO-NIGHT.
Record Attendance Anticipated.
The big attraction for to-night is Prof. Seeley's demonstration, which takes place in the Prince's Rink, commencing at 8 o'clock. The spacious arena has been cleared from top to bottom, extra seating accommodation provided, and all arrangements prepared for the handling of what is to be expected to be a record crowd. Prof. Seeley's performance in the Star Theatre on Friday, and Saturday nights, was sufficient to convince the audience that he is a man of marvelous strength. With this in view it would not be surprising that the Rink will be thronged to its almost capacity to-night. Besides the Professor's side of the programme, 4 boxing bouts will be fought, which will prove very interesting. No smoking will be allowed in the Rink.

to enable him to complete his researches at the Pharmacological Laboratory, Cambridge.
As a result of his investigations, Dr. Hawthorne said the medical profession would shortly be put in possession of a local anaesthetic with all the virtues and without any of the perils of cocaine.
Dr. A. S. Souttar, who said that cocaine was exceedingly dangerous to use, added that the new anaesthetic was almost as powerful as cocaine, and had as little toxicity as novocaine.

The "Souls for Animals" Campaign

I am rather disappointed that I have received no invitation, asking me to express my views, as to whether animals have souls or not, seeing that my friends and confidants Bernard Shaw, G. K. Chesterton and Conna Doyle have been allowed to air their opinions. Naturally I am loath to allow such an opportunity to escape me, I feel I must fix my own position in this controversy, and so I shall not permit jealousy or petty spite to rob the world of what may well be termed in years to come, the best essay since Bacon and Ham.

I see no reason why animals should not have souls; in fact I should like to think that they do, but if we create this precedent in favour of animals, where shall we draw the line? Can we in all fairness deprive the Bird World, the Fish Kingdom or the Insect Empire, of Souls? Can we decline to recognize the possession of a soul in a microbe, a germ or a molecule? I am sure we could not!
How can we discover the presence of a soul in an animal? In man it is easy, so I'm told. A man responds to certain tests, which allow us to believe his soul is real. His loves, his paintings and scenery; his loves; his ambitions, courageous, gentle, virtuous; all of which are born of the soul, but how can we tell whether an oyster is ambitious or not, or if a skunk dotter on music? Plainly the same tests won't do for man and animal. There is something wrong with the way we test ourselves for souls, because if the process were correct, the same could be used for testing out the hidden soul of the brute.

We use ourselves as the standard for soulfulness, and if the Beast of the field, the Fowl of the air, and the Fish under the sea don't seem to come to our standards, we're plainly astray in our calculations, we might even be wrong.
All good Christians, Jews and Mohammedans, as well as Buddhists, Brahmans and Shintoists believe in a Heaven, varying in detail, according to the teaching of the various creeds, but they agree on one point, "That the good shall inherit the Kingdom of Heaven." The reward for the soul of a good person, is Everlasting Life in Heaven. If we agree that animals possess souls, we must also agree that they have the same hopes in a life hereafter as any human being, but at no animal case do any wrong, as they obey their instincts, even if they kill to live, as in their nature, it must seem that each one lives a blameless life, and die with a better chance of going to Heaven, than we who have to obey the Ten Commandments, and a host of minor laws.

I should like to wake up in the next world, to find my dogs (I have a dog in my ally) waiting joyfully for me, but it would be awful to live in close proximity to a family in Typhus germs, even on the friendliest terms.
NEMO DIXIT.

A Successful Garden Party

The annual garden party at Witless Bay took place yesterday afternoon under splendid weather conditions, and proved to be a phenomenal success. The train to Tor's Cove took out several hundred passengers, the majority of whom stopped off at Witless Bay and participated in the event, whilst many people went from town by motor cars and other vehicles. His Grace the Archbishop and several of the priests and Christian Brothers were present during the afternoon. Five football teams from town, viz: B.I.S., St. Bon's, T.A., Holy Cross and Gaelic, also went out and played a series of football games, in which the B.I.S. team won out. The players were—G. Hatley, J. Jackson, H. Buckingham, R. Nolan, T. Manning, R. Power.
At night a short dance was held in the new hall, for which the C.C.C. Band supplied the music, until ten o'clock when the train arrived to take the visitors back to town.

How Can a Poor Girl Win a Rich Husband

The feature picture at the Nickel Theatre to-night will be the much talked about Distinctive picture, "The Rejected Woman," bringing together for the first time such popular players as Alma Rubens, Conrad Nagel and Wyndham Standing. Also appearing in the picture are Leonora Hughes, internationally celebrated dancer and beauty, and a group of wealthy New York society men and women. Many of the scenes are actually reproductions of such institutions of Luxury as Sherry's famous restaurant, in Park Avenue, the Hotel Ambassador and the steamship "Paris."

"The Rejected Woman," written by John Lynch, is a story of the gay and brilliant life of a rich New York man, and of the realization of the poor girl who loves him that she can never win his love in return without the expensive finery and culture of the women in his set. These things she must have, because the love of this man is vital to her very existence. How she goes about the acquisition of the coveted requisite of her love campaign,

General Smuts on Cutting "The Heart Out of the Empire"

General Smuts has sent this week to the Daily News a cable message of first-rate importance. It is well known that Canada, South Africa and other nations of the British Empire are averse to a binding European policy, and whatever views readers hold they will agree that General Smuts, who signed the Peace Treaty and is a leading exponent of the League of Nations policy, is a man whose opinion is worthy of serious study.

"I confess I am profoundly suspicious, not only of the Pact, but also of the policies behind the Pact," General Smuts cables to the Daily News. "It is said that the Pact contains no more than the Covenant of the League of Nations. Then why not be satisfied with the Covenant?"

"Why this insistence on the Pact? And why the jubilation in certain quarters over the Pact? If it is all in the Covenant, let us rest content with the Covenant."

"But in truth there is more in the Pact, or rather behind the Pact. The Pact, like its predecessor, the Protocol, tends to stereotype and entrench the settlement under the peace treaties far more than the Covenant does."

"It will encourage the Diehards of the peace settlement to stand more pat than ever."

"The peaceful reform of intolerable arrangements will, in fact, become impossible; and Europe will be lured to destruction by a false sense of security and solidarity."

"Far rather let Europe grope its way painfully to the light, and a new international atmosphere gradually arise under the aegis of the League."

"Most of the leading spirits at the Peace Conference recognised the limitations and the transitory character of much of their work, and in the League of Nations they constituted an organ to change, no less than of security."

"Thus the Covenant leaves the door open for future change. Do not let us close it; let those who build on insecure and dangerous foundations in Europe feel insecure and in danger."

"It will be a wholesome experience for them and pave the way for the necessary reforms."

"In all human probability, in the absence of reform, the present arrangements in Central Europe spell trouble, and those who place themselves behind those arrangements incur a fearful responsibility."

"An equally grave view must be taken of the Pact from another aspect. It is proposed that, under the Pact, Great Britain shall disassociate herself from the Empire and, in a matter of cardinal foreign policy, take a line of her own, leaving the other constituent States of the Empire to decide their own policies."

"Under the circumstances I feel certain that at least some of them will not follow her."

"As one who believes in the British Empire as the greatest human institution on earth, cannot acquiesce in this departure with equanimity."

"The Pact may well become a turning-point, a fatal parting of the ways, in the Empire."

"British statesmen who adhere to the new Holy Alliance may yet find that they have not only fatally dissociated their country from the progressive forces in the new Europe, but that they have cut the heart out of the Empire."

"Why not imitate Canning? Why not go forward to the uncertain future hand in hand with the young nations of the Empire rather than with the spectres of Europe?"

22-Year-Old Girl Weight, 622 Pounds

WINS "FAT" CONTEST.
NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Six hundred-and-twenty-two pounds of proud womanhood won the first prize in the annual fat women's contest at Coney Island recently, capturing the honors from 187 other contestants.

Possessor of the winning poundage is Miss Dolle Marie Jensen, 22 years old of Jersey City. En route to the contest she broke the springs of two taxicabs and became so thoroughly lodged in the door of another that 20 minutes were required to extricate her.

The girls who finished second and third made slim showings indeed, compared with the winner. They weighed only 238 and 220 pounds respectively.

Customs Officials Make Big Gem haul

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—An attempt to smuggle diamonds valued at $100,000 across the Canadian border came to light yesterday when a Customs official searching the baggage of two men who had been arrested at Syracuse, N.Y., found $55,000 worth of gems concealed in the hollowed handle of a shoe brush.

The men, who said they were Henry Margulies, of Albany, N.Y., and Abraham Treppel, a book-keeper, of New York City, were arrested a few days ago at Rouses Point, when

Sagona Returns From West

S.S. Sagona, Capt. T. Connors, returned yesterday from the Western Coastal Service. The ship made all ports of call both going and returning, the round trip being made in 9 days. Despite the boisterous weather of late, the fishermen, operating at Lamaline, St. Lawrence and St. Mary's Bay, have done well, and good catches were taken when the boats got out. The bank voyage has been the best in years, all the vessels having returned with big catches.

An important stage in the development of British trade relations with the Dominions is marked by the publication of the report of the Imperial Economic Committee, of which Sir Hatfield Mackinder is chairman. It will be recalled that the members of the Committee were appointed by the Government to consider the possibility of improving the methods of marketing food products of the Empire in this country, and they were further charged to make recommendations as to the most useful way of expending the grant of £1,000,000 per annum which was a kind of solatium offered to the Dominions in lieu of the additional preferences which were promised them at the Imperial Conference of 1923, but which the Government were precluded from offering in view of the pledge given in regard to food taxes at the last General Election.

The report, which is divided into three parts, dealing respectively with the Identification of Empire produce, with research, and with finance, provides for the marking of all goods with the name of the country of origin. A great campaign of publicity and education, costing £2000 per day for a year, is also proposed, with a view to increasing the consumption of Empire food products in the United Kingdom. The movement to be controlled by an Executive Commission formed on the model of the existing Development and Forestry Commissions. Other schemes which, it is suggested, should receive financial aid include the promotion of fruit-growing in the tropical portions of the Empire, and the carriage of pedigree stock from the United Kingdom to the overseas parts of the Empire.

The Committee point out that three desirable results will follow from the development of the home market for Empire produce:—(1) Greater prosperity for the overseas Empire; (2) better distribution of the white population within the British Commonwealth; and (3) better employment of the population which remains at home.

Doubtless a hunting cabin looks better with the bark left on the logs: sooner makes it look picturesque. Bark, however, affords an ideal breeding place for beetles, bugs, slugs, ants, and other nasty nuisances. It also causes the logs to rot quickly through the retention of dampness. Better play safe and peel 'em.—Rod and Gun in Canada.

Ttl. for 6 months ending July 1, 1925	126,020	250,726	47,900	19.1%

Bradstreet's definition of a business failure is that it must involve some loss to creditors of individuals, firms or operations engaged in ordinary commercial operations. No failures which are disassociated from the regular commercial life of Newfoundland are included. Failures to succeed without loss to creditors are, of course, not embraced in Bradstreet's returns. For these and other reasons comparison of failure reports, made up by Bradstreet's with those issued by others, cannot properly be made.

Homes That Kill Wives

(By JOAN KENNEDY.)

When the bride-to-be sits dreaming of that little nest for two which shall be called a home, romance glides her dreams. A home! It is the natural desire of every woman. And we Britons are a home-loving people. It is that bed-rock desire for home life which has helped to make us good colonisers. Wherever we go homes are founded.

But it is not of homes in the far-flung spaces of the Empire—homes graciously spacious, set amid the winds and sunshine—nor of those homes where money can command every modern invention for comfort and labour-saving, that I would write. They are not the homes which kill wives.

From Dream to Nightmare.

Approach any great city with your eyes open and you will have food for thought. Row after row, street after street, their chimneys belching impurities into the air, drab in colouring monotonously alike, cramped, jerry-built, the windows of one overlooking those of the other, and backyards filled with washing and dustbins, these little homes of Britain stand.

And in nearly every home there is a woman.

Once this woman of the drab little home was dreamer. That word "home"—a home of her own—was the pivot of her dreams. It made her eyes bright, caused her to thread with blue ribbons the pretty clothes in which she encased her girlish form, made her curl her hair and spend money on cheap silk stockings. Dreams were wonderful things when the seeking lips of the one who should share the home look here, in the dim-py light and two young people thought the world an Eden of their own.

"Broken Blossoms."

"When we are married!" How wonderful it sounded then—"our own little home!" What glamour the words held!

But the "happy ever after" of the fairy-tale didn't come just as the dreamers expected. Life for most of us in made up of disillusion.

See the bride now. You can find her by the thousand in those streets which go on and on for ever, like the brook in the poem.

Look! There is one—a woman who sits "all in a heap" in the clanging tram, tired of eye, aching of back, atrophied of soul, killed by the life in the little home around which romance once went with a pot of gold paint.

And here is another—a woman who comes slowly down the street, her hands full of bags which hold the groceries, the meat, and the vegetables, her skirts dragged at by little hands. There is a dull despondency in her face, a hopelessness which tugs at the heartstrings.

Worse Than Prison.

There are no cheap silk stockings now, and she never has any time or inclination to curl her hair. Her feet are tired, and her body aches from the never ending toil of that little house which has become a nightmare.

At times she wonders bitterly if her house, and thousands like it, were designed simply to kill women with work. Her soul shrinks, because she knows that she is but a travesty of womanhood—a machine which must go on and on.

Homes which kill wives! Follow any of those women you see in the drab streets into their homes, and you will not wonder at the dull eyes, the hopelessness in their faces. Not one of them ever has one minute of privacy. The little home is not large enough, now that children have come. Sleeping and waking, working and resting, the woman in the home is always aware that she is not alone. There must be times when she longs for solitude.

Try to imagine her daily day. There is the raucous waking of the alarm clock in the early morning hours, a sleepy baby made restive and clamouring, the getting of breakfast, the sending of children to school after "dads" has gone, the continual demands of restive children not old enough to help themselves, the noise they made in the confined space of the little home which makes no provision for them, the dirt and disorder of badly planned rooms, the arranging of meals and the buying of food, the grappling with cheap makeshifts in the way of house fittings, the drab of her surroundings, the awful sense of hopelessness, and the knowledge that one day must follow another with no variety.

Spiritually starved, her life devoid of beauty, one day after another a round of dreary monotony, a never-ending fight to keep her home clean, in spite of bad building, soot, and smoke, varied by a copper which leaks on washing-day and adds more desolation in the way of water and ashes on the floor, or an oven which will not get hot because a hole has been burnt through, or a line in the back-yard which breaks just as she has put out the clothes, this woman faces life. She is killed, body and soul, by the home in which she is installed.

If she is neurotic, narrow, and touchy, need you wonder? Her soul gets stunted in the effort to make each sixpence do the work of twelve.

Every Housewife a Heroine.

The town woman suffers most. It is in the great centres that homes kill women, crush down their spirits, turn them into automatic machines which go on until the machinery breaks down through continual use or ill-usage. Any housewife in a jerry-built, drab little home is a heroine.

Try to understand her life, Mr. Man. Whether you have installed her in a tenement house or a four-roomed flat in a suburban villa where the "char" comes twice weekly, or in any other kind of home—

You may bring the cash into the home, but that isn't everything. Your life is not so monotonous as hers, so killing in the dreary round and common task.

But your love and sympathy, given when she needs them, can help her and keep her from being utterly swamped by the "making do."

Some day we shall get improved, central heating, and communal kitchens. We shall have play centres for all the children born in cramped homes, and women will not be killed by the home in which they live. Some day spacious will do the work of a sixpence, and the eyes of women will brighten.

But the desert has yet to bloom.

Public Duty

PROTECTING BEAUTY SPOTS.

(Copied from C. of E. Newspaper.)

Outside Hayes Rectory, Kent, there is a seat for wayfarers, with a wire basket attached, and over the seat the following inscription:—

"Good friends that to this seat repair Rest and be thankful, but forbear With sordid scraps the ground to stain. Others rest here as well as you."

A gentleman was looking at this inscription and an old resident of the place who happened to pass at the moment said to him, "That notice is for folks that come from London, sir, they don't know any better."

Well, I think that statement is hard on the Londoners, who are no worse than others.

I think all town dwellers are to blame especially those who go for short holidays to the country or seaside and of all the offenders the dripper is the worst. The scandalous condition of parks and beauty spots is a disgrace to our country, and those who strew the litter are not the only ones to blame. Many of them do not realize the harm as it has never been pointed out to them that what is for the public to use must not be misused; and because we share such places with others, we are bound in honour not to spoil them for others, and that all alike are guardians for the public at large.

The appeal to the public made by the King in his recent Ken Wood speech was from his heart, and he is watching the response.

A National Bad Habit.

What can be done to cure this national bad habit? I think that there are many combined courses. (a) Public Parks, seaside towns and beauty spots should have special warning posters erected now in addition to the usual ones they have; (b) additional waste baskets are needed; (c) every mother or teacher can impress the right ideal on young people.

It is I know often the older people who are the worst offenders, but at any rate, in the future, through the children who are growing up the evil should be cured; (d) ruthless prosecution of those who break by-laws and cause destruction; (e) the most important thing is that everyone shall do his or her duty as a citizen by speaking to those they see leaving litter or doing damage and if they do not desire, to take the trouble to report them and give evidence if required. Most people are cowards in this respect.

I have just received an indignant letter from a man saying he watched for two hours damage being done in a public space! Apparently he made no attempt to stop it and so is largely to blame for it.

Strangely enough our difficulties at Ken Wood at any rate are increased by a new type of litter scatterer, i.e., squirrels which come down and root through the waste baskets for tasty bits!

There is a bright side to the picture. Some do respond splendidly. My I give two illustrations.

1. Two little girls were seen last week coming away from Ken Wood with their pinafores filled with rubbish. When asked what they were carrying they replied: "We are doing what the King told us to do."

2. At another time an old woman was seen wandering about an open space where many children play. She stooped every now and then to pick up something. A keeper asked her what she had in her bag. She replied, opening her bag, "I was just picking up the little broken bits of glass to try to save the bairnies feet."

May we all try to follow these examples of public citizenship.

AN AMERICAN FORM OF HUMOR.

How the American people, or at least some segments of them, do love jocular signs of all kinds!

I have never been abroad but when I go (you see I believe in going to bring a thing to pass by thinking and saying "when" instead of "if") I am going to notice particularly at the humorous sign is not a typically American form of humor.

It'd Hate To Be Awfully Hungry. For instance, the humorously named "Ramble Inn" was one of the earlier examples of wit. But its sign is more vulgar. In a drive over 20 miles of beautiful trail where every sunset pleases and man's improve. I observed "Dirie Inn," "Curry Inn," "Shout Inn" and "Stagger Inn." The last finally as a real triumph of the sign. I was so hungry and thirsty that I was to eat and the place were in appearance I might get that sign but I don't know. Besides, you can imagine charm and a sign like these going together? I don't!

A Final Touch.

A final touch of vulgarity at one of the loveliest curves was the insertion between one's eyes and the view of silver winding river and the distant hills beyond, of a sign whereon a dog was pictured and written across him the word "hot."

Nothing so gives the punster an opportunity to perpetuate his wit, or more likely the wit of someone whose efforts he has admired. "Beds Rest" is a great favorite. Also "Benny." And on one offensive little bit of gingerbread gimcrackery in a spot that used to be beautiful before man did his best to make it otherwise, is placed the sign "Wellkeit." And that," says the Authorman, "is fortunate because no one who has to look at it from the outside dees."

Can't You Think Of A New One?

Another form of sign wit designs the signs that grace the back of our automobiles—that is some of them. "Excuse my dust" was probably the first; and of course you know the most popular sign joke to-day "If you are close enough to read this you are too damn close." That just is getting a bit shabby. It's time someone invented a new one. I am sure the makers of signs would pay well for a wise crack along this line.

But perhaps the most interesting of all manifestations of this kind of humor are the signs put up not by individuals but by towns. "Keep in line or pay a fine" stares at me every time I pass through a certain town. And how typically American is the reminder: "Go slow and see our town or go fast and see our jail."

At least I think it is typically American. When I go abroad I will tell you if I am wrong.

Prince of Wales Tries to Reduce

SUCCESS TO HUMAN DESIRE TO PLAY ROLE OF "BOY PRINCE."

BUENOS AIRES, August 22.—A human desire to play as long as possible the role of "boy prince" in which he flashed across the consciousness of the world during the years immediately following the Great War, has led the Prince of Wales to adopt a regime of flesh-reducing and training which outdoes the rigors of some of the curés sought by middle-aged women who seek the colour and contour of youth.

Despite his careful exercise, the strain of touring the world as ambassador plenipotentiary of the British kingdom is telling on the Prince. His temper is short and he is subject to moods.

The Prince's latest battle against excess flesh was staged in the engine room of the Repulse, the British cruiser which brought him to South America. Crossing the Southern Pacific Ocean, the Prince spent hours exercising or reading in the engine-room of the vessel where the temperature was 120 degrees. He enjoyed torrid siestas there, too, while the heat removed unwanted weight.

In Africa the Prince often alighted from his train and walked, with spurts of running, for miles for the sake of his health and figure. At home he finds plenty to keep him thin astride a polo pony or in point-to-point races.

The Prince takes keen delight in social functions, and particularly in dancing. Apparently the Argentine señoritas attract the Royal visitor, for he remains always until the last dance, although he is obviously bored with official functions, military parades and the like.

Reports from the Republic indicate that the Prince is distinctly fed up with official visits, and considers the demonstrating public which welcomes him so feverishly as a nuisance. He is taking a delight in leaving the crowds in the lurch.

No member in the party aboard the Repulse has any control over the Prince. Almost always he is in a fretful bad temper on arising a fact that puts him among the great majority of his fellow men, but his humor wears off in the afternoon, or sooner if there are ladies about.

There is much speculation among the official party in the early morning as to the Royal disposition.

The Prince is boss of the ship when he is aboard her. He has discharged members of his party who displeased him, and for this reason the remaining officials are careful not to arouse his ire. With this in mind, none ever attempts to advise the Prince as to his personal or official activities.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR GUEST.

WHY?

We have a human question mark And at her age no living sage Her mind could satisfy: Whose constant call is "Why?"

"Why" follows every small command Or pleading we deny; We try in vain to make things plain, But still she questions "Why?"

Come in, go out, do this or don't, From dawn to dusk the cry which fills our ears (in smiles or tears) Is incessant "Why?"

In vain, in vain is learning deep Or wisdom's full supply, Say "all dogs bark," this question mark Will promptly ask us "Why?"

They say that God made dogs to bark And birds to sing and by, And little girls to grow long curls, She merely answers, "Why?"

One query to another leads, All wisdom she defies, With official functions, military parades and the like.

And yet from cradle to the grave, From birth until we die, The loveliest age on this world's stage Is childhood's age of "Why?"

Trippers in Irons!

The captain of a great liner is king aboard his ship, baptize a baby, imprison his passengers; in fact, do precisely as he thinks fit.

Exactly the same powers are given to the skipper of the humblest craft that ever carried trippers at a shilling or two ahead. That a paying passenger on a little pleasure steamer could ever actually be put into irons, and legally at that, is an idea that occurs to very few.

Not only can this happen, but occasionally it does happen. Time after time boisterous excursionists have defied the warnings of a steward, till eventually they have been disagreeably surprised to find themselves in irons.

The pier once reached, they have, of course, been handed over to the local police, the magistrate next morning invariably supporting the skipper's action.

For the law of the land has it that a boat, once away from her moorings, is a kingdom apart, with the skipper, whether in charge of an Atlantic liner or of the excursion boat, as actual "king," responsible to nobody.

Why Are There Waves in the Sea

As the earth revolves, an enormous "pull" is exercised on it by the moon's power of gravity. But while the land part, of course, is fixed and cannot move, the water part, or sea, readily responds and so gives what we call the tides.

But apart from this, somewhere or other there is sure to be a wind. And wind, pushing against the water, piles it up in little wavelets, each ripple in turn helping to pile up another wavelet ahead of it. In the limited area of a lake, the disturbances will be slight, and the wavelets remain as such, but in the huge expanse of the sea, the motion will go on increasing, until we get the really big waves.

Again currents and changes of temperature set up motions which result in waves. With so many "forces" in operation one can understand why the sea is never still.

Sleepy Sickness Peril

ASYLUMS BOARD AND AFTER EFFECTS.

The continued growth of encephalitis lethargica (sleepy sickness) in London, and the serious mental after-effect of the disease among children, have made the question of providing an institution where such cases could be treated an urgent one, states the annual report of the Metropolitan Asylums Board.

The most important of these after-effects have a social bearing "which may bring the patients within the sphere of the criminal law." These effects may follow mild or even unrecognized attacks of the disease.

So pressing has the question become that the board has intimated to the Ministry of Health that it is prepared to undertake the care of these cases, for which no facilities exist at present.

The increase in the number of cases of diphtheria during the past seven years compared with the three preceding periods of seven years each demands "that a more concerted effort should be made to cope with this disease, which is now certainly the most destructive of the infectious diseases met with in Great Britain."

So successful has the board's hostel for homeless and unemployed men proved that it is to be retained permanently.

In view of the strain of driving in London traffic, the board's ambulance drivers are now examined by a medical board every two years. Another innovation is the provision of electric hair driers for the use of the nurses in infectious hospitals.

America's Newest "Bootleggers"

By KATHLEEN USSHER.
America's bootleggers," not content with their enormous profits out of rum-running, have started a subsidiary industry.

Forty thousand aliens, it has been officially estimated, were smuggled into America last year under a scheme international in scope, which in dramatic interest rivals the exploits of the rum-runners.

An official investigator who recently visited the Caribbean Sea reported to Mr. J. J. Davis, the United States Secretary for Labour, that 10,000 aliens are "boot-leggers" in Cuba alone at a cost of $2,000,000 a year. "They come from all directions and by all means of transportation," he says. "Huddled in the dark holds of smugglers' vessels, they come with illicit rum and vile drugs."

The report also states that the women make the short crossing from Cuba to Florida as the "wives" of officers in otherwise legitimately operated freight and passenger vessels at a cost, including their railway fare into the interior, of from $90 to $100. Passage on fast motor boats is provided at an average cost of $35 a passenger. As these small boats have a capacity of from 10 to 20 people the business is highly profitable.

Chinese have to pay the highest fees for passage—from $150 to $200 each—because of the ease with which they can be detected.

Ghostly tales are current as to the fate of some of these unhappy aliens. According to the New York Times, a Chinese in a schooner boarded by inspectors was found concealed in the engine-room.

"Still more gruesome," it is stated, "was the fate of Chinese who were tied in sacks and thrown overboard when a cutter chased the smuggling craft."

A Canary Island half-breed, with two accomplices, took from three to five aliens every week in rowing boats behind Morro Castle, at Havana, under pretence of getting them across to America and murdered them in cold blood, throwing their bodies to the sharks after they had been stripped of valuables. And 35 skeletons, we are told, are stretched somewhere on the Florida Keys—all that remains of 35 aliens landed there by a smuggler with the assurance that another boat would pick them up and take them to New York. The boat never came.

Tunnel Under Hills

MEN MEET IN THE CENTRE.

Eight hundred feet below the summit of the picturesque Malvern hills a small army of men were recently able to shake hands and congratulate themselves on having nearly completed the tunnel on which 500 and 600 skilled men have been employed since January 1924. The task will end in the spring of next year.

Just sixty years ago another army of men were building a similar tunnel in exactly the same spot. Both tunnels now run parallel, 41 feet apart, carrying single rail tracks of the Great Western Railway.

The new tunnel is 4,785 feet long, 50 feet longer than the one at present in use. One end opens at the tiny village station of Colwell, and the other at Great Malvern. It is constructed of brick throughout and the foundation is of natural rock with concrete filling.

Like a Horse-Shoe.

More than a ton of explosives had to be used each week, and more than 100,000 tons of rock, earth, and mineral have been removed. A cross-section of the tunnel is exactly like a horse-shoe and is of the strongest type possible.

Huge air compressors ceaselessly pump 100lb. of air to the square inch into the workings, while deep shafts bored through the Malvern Hills to the level of the tunnel provide additional air for the men.

There will be one permanent shaft when the tunnel is completed. When the two sets of tunnelers, one boring from Colwell and the other from Great Malvern met in the centre, their working had been so accurate that they were less than a quarter of an inch out of the centre line, while the levelling,—that is, the floor of the tunnel—was accurate.

A rather remarkable lonely grave, with a tombstone of rock, said to have been carved from the old tunnel. Here on the top of Malvern Hills and the new borings. It is that Mr. Ballard, who was partner in the firm of Brassy and Ballard, who built the first tunnel 60 years ago. The grave is 30ft. from the monument of Ballard's engineering feat of those days. A son of Mr. F. Ballard resides close by and owns the greater part of the land through which the new tunnel runs.

As Lady Love and the Kind Policeman Dog came up over the top of the hill, Little Jack Rabbit, who had been waiting anxiously at the gate, gave a shout of joy and hopped up the Old Cow Path to meet them. "Mother, Mother!" he cried, jumping into her outstretched arms and cuddling up to her, right under her soft chin. "I'm so happy now you're safe. Oh dear, oh dear, how I worried when I saw Hungry Hawk about," and the next minute the poor little bunny boy was crying happy tears, for Mother was safe and with him once again.

"Dry your eyes and laugh with joy, Little Rabbit Bunny Boy, Mother's name with you again. Sunshine always follows rain. Now you've learned how bleak and bare Home is when no mother's there. Try to make it such a place. That no tears will mar her face." sang Bobbie Redvest from the Apple Tree. What a sweet little bird is he, always putting kind ideas into little heads and singing of love for home and duty.

Little Miss Mousie had filled the water kettle, which was singing a tune on the tiny black stove. The next minute the Cuckoo Bird stepped out of her little clock house on the wall and twittered:

Already Miss Mousie had filled the water kettle. "Well, now that you are both safe at home," barked the good Policeman Dog. "I'll run back to the Station House to answer hurry calls from little people who may be in trouble," and politely lifting his helmet, away trotted that kind protector of law and order in Rabbitland before Lady Love could again thank him for all that he had done.

As the pretty lady rabbit and her bunny son hopped up on the back porch out of the kitchen door ran Uncle Lucky and Little Miss Mousie, his tiny housekeeper.

"Thank goodness, you're safe," cried the dear old gentleman rabbit, wiping a tell-tale tear from his left eye with his blue silk polkadot handkerchief. "No sooner did we hear the news," cried Little Miss Mousie, cuddling up to Lady Love, "than we both jumped into the Luckymobile and came right over here. Just a few minutes ago dear Bobbie Redvest said that you were safe."

Then into the neat little kitchen went the four little people. Already your Uncle Dave will write the next story, hoping as he sits at his typewriter that all his Little Readers will learn a lesson from what might have happened to the little rabbit family if the kind Policeman Dog had not arrived in time.

people who look upon fighting as a sort of national pastime and regard even the most bloodthirsty murders as things to boast of. They are really Ishmaelites, their hand against every body, that again is only natural, unless he is fully armed, just as a neighbor should take advantage of him. It is among such individuals that Bolshevist propaganda is being distributed and is spreading to an increasing degree, as one of the aims of the Bolshevists is the destruction of the British Empire. That being the case, one has to be fully prepared to defend the law-abiding fellow-subjects in the Empire. We have to realize that India is a vast sub-Continent, composed of a heterogeneous population of some 315,000,000 people. There are bound to be murmurings and rumblings somewhere under the surface; indeed it is almost surprising that there are not more serious troubles under the surface. The fact that there are not, speaks volumes. We have to remember that there are many thousands of well-armed tribesmen on the North-West frontier belonging to some of the fiercest and most war-like races in the world—

NEW FRENCH RESEARCH
Professor Portier, of Paris has an important paper upon the vitamins in sea animals. He says, in an extract of food, and especially that the food elements are rich in vitamins. In the sea, as on land, fish which contain or build up. Apart from the seaweed fixed along the immense waters contain organisms which contain the green colouring matter and which float on the surface. Experiments show that the algae on the coast contain A, but the unicellular species rich in B, J. J. and K. The experiments demonstrated this by the diatom nitrochlorophyll, which is rich in vitamin B. From the urine of rats, the vitamins pass into the milk of the female of the species and the fishes and marine mollusks. Oysters rich in vitamins are known that oysters are rich in vitamins. I and myself have at my disposal the experimental of guinea pigs we have found that oysters contain a minute quantity of dried daily is sufficient to produce a pig from the onset of fact derives a special consideration that of the few animal foods a better consumption, without reaching the content by the process of great nutritive value of the not only in the substances which they contain but in the vitamins. It will more to the vitamins found in certain of the particularly in the liver made some interesting observations on this subject.

Blue Changes With Seas
can, in the first place, be microscopic animals, that the growth of the not uniform during the cold in spring and fall the summer; it becomes increased winter. The food of a being consumed in winter to undergo seasonal changes and summer he first. That is a accumulation of peritoneal organs, as for else in the liver, in an Autumn and winter, high, considerable, but because it becomes too. But it follows that varies very much according to season.

the cause of these changes? At first it is a temperature of the water, but it is not a factor. It is not a factor of position, which conditions the temperature in spring, and under the extension of the light, there is a verification of the fact that a combination of chlorophyll, 7 or vitamins is a combination of vitamins in the sea pass then into the and then into the fish.
