Pic-nic to the Volunteers.

We a tated on Saturday that the ladies of the town were making arrangements for giving an entertainment to the 30th ion before the men leave town. A pic-nic has been decided on, to come off to-morrow afternoon, and we are satisfied that an entertainment of this kind will give the greatest satisfaction to all concerned. A committee of ladies have gone over the greater portion of the town, and have everywhere met with a ready response to their request for refreshments. As the time has been so short, however, they may have missed some families, but the ladies desire us to say to such as have not been called on, that any contribution they may choose to send in the shape of refreshments will be thankfully received. A good many were in favor of getting up a stand of colors for the Battalion. But they must bear in mind that a Rifle Regiment of the Battalion on to use colors, and that such could not have been used. Mr. H. W. Peterson has kindly granted the use of his beautiful grounds. Col. High-botham has arranged that the Battalion will march to the grounds at 3 colock. It will there go through afternoon parade, and then the men will join in the pic-nic till it is time to atteend the military concert in the evening, when they will be marched to the Drill Shed. We feel sure the pic-nic will be a most pleasant and successful one, and that all classes of the citizens will join heartily in their efforts to make it so.

Whatever contributions the ladies may have for the volunteer pic-nic, they will please send to the Town Hall by 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. have everywhere met with a ready res-

The Stratford Beacon tells of a child five years old that was lost in Elice lately and was not heard of for three days although the whole neighborhood turned out to search. At length he was found in Logan, five miles distant, having wandered all the way through the woods, and having been without food for thirty-six hours.

Attempted Highway Robbery.—The Whitby Chronicle says that Captain Spears, treasurer of the township of Uxbridge, while on his way home from that town was shot at by some person concealed amongst the willow trees that grow on one side of the road at a certain place. He had considerable of money with him, which probably "tempted the attempt," as Milton says. The shot did not take effect, and his horse starting on the run took him beyond the reach of danger

Of course he had not the money but borrowed it from Hadow, to whom he gave a cheque on somebody as security. They went to get the cheque cashed after the money was paid over, but Haddow was left to wait at a certain spot until his victimizer would return and he never came.

Inspection of the 30th Battalion.

Inspection of the 30th Battalion. The 30th Battalion was inspected this (Monday) forenoon by Lieutenant-Colonel Taylor, Deputy Adjutant General for the London District, on the field adjoining the Great Western Railway Station. Colonel Taylor came on the ground about eleven oclock, when the Battalion being in line presented arms and saluted the commanding officer. He then rode slowly down the front line and up the rear line. The Battalion was then formed into companies, and wheeled and marched in quick time. It was again formed into line, when the men were put through the man-Battalion was then formed into companies, and wheeled and marched in quick time. It was again formed into line, when the men were put through the manual and platoon exercise by Maj. Clarke. The Battalion was then formed in quarter distance column, deployed to the left, formed fours, and then were reformed into line. Several other movements of the same kind were then gone through, and afterwards the Battalion was put through the various exercises in skirmish drill.—
Three companies were thrown out as skirmishers, the other companies supporting on the right and left wings, while two companies were held in reserve in the rear. The companies were then reversed and the same movements gone through a second time. In all these movements the Battalion displayed great proficiency, and gave evidence that they had greatly improved since Battalion drill commenced. The men were in excellent actency, and gave evidence that they had greatly improved since Battalion drill commenced. The men were in excellent trim, their arms and accourtements in splendid order, and altogether the Battalion made a most creditable appearance.—At the close of the inspection, the men were formed into square, when Col. Taylor addressed them as follows:

were formed into square, when Col. Taylor addressed them as follows:

Officers and men of the 30th Battalion:
—This is the first time I have met you at Battalion Drill, and I am much surprised, and much pleased, at the steadiness with which you go through your drill. Taking into consideration that this is the first time you have met as a Battalion, you do wonderfully well. I do not mean to say that you are perfect, but you do very well, and you are certainly a credit to the District and to the County. The County ought to be, and I think is proud of you. It is highly creditable to the County that it has done so much to encourage you. If all County Councils would support their Battalions in this way there would be no need for any other means being taken to uphold a defence organization. He then referred to the recent organization of the Dominion Rifle Association, and said that branch Societies should be formed in every Town and Township—to be composed of civilians as well as volunteers—and if our population the test of the reference of the rifle County trained in the wee of the rifle County trained in the weep of the rifle County trained in the weep of the rifle of the rifle county trained in the weep of the rifle county trained in the weep of the rifle of the rifle the recent or the rifle the r S. authorities had seized eight tons of arms on the Vermoni frontier a few days since. The truth of the story turns out to be that the eight tons of arms were given up to the Fenians instead, and that they were subsequently seized by the Express Company for charges for transportation before the seizure in June, 1866. The charges were paid by the Fenians, and the arms shipped off to some other locality; but for what purpose these peaceful implements are required at this particular time no explanation is received. Taking all the very conflicting reports together, with the repetition of very confident assurances of certain American journals, given in the Spring of 1866, that the Fenian uproar is absolutely nothing more than a scheme to supply the requirement of a few shrewd vagabonds afflicted with an insattable thirst for whiskey, we are quite convinced that the Fer an bug-bear will stand watching until the leaders are drowned in their favorite beverage, or some other disaster be falls them.

Referimanded.—One of the Eramosa volunteers was brought before the commanding officer this (Monday) morning for being absent when he should have been on duty. He jumped on a hand-car that was going along on Sunday, and went down to Rockwood to see some of his friends. A sharp reprimarid was the lation were properly and persis

The officers had seats on the platform. The Chaplain, Rev. Mr. Ball preached an edifying discourse from Acts x. 1 and 2: "There was a certain man in Caeasarea called Cornelius, a centurion of the band called the Italian band, a devout man, and one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people and prayed to God alway." It will be readily understood that the lessons designed to be inculcated from these words were that it is possible to unite in one person the characters of a soldier and a christian, and that it is the duty of those who bear arms in defence of their country to be valiant also in the cause of the King of Hosts, and ready at all times to ober His call.

The Braes of Yarrow Historical Tale of the Sixteenth Century.

The Queen advanced slowly to her, and to traise her kindly from her kneeling posture.

But as Margaret Barras and Spens, my friend, my companion, and my follower, i prove how well I have remembered you by reomising that for eight weeks from this day you shall live under my protettion to gand come as you list. At the end of that period I trust you shall have found, the proofs that will cleanae your husband's honor of the black stain now resting on it. But whether you have found them or not, I must then complete my duty to the State and resign you to other hands. Rise now; for a little while we are friends again.'

Lady Spens could only grasp the hands which were given to her in token of protection and friendship, and kiss them with tearful gratitude.

The unexpected fermination of an address hich had began so ominously took all present by surprise—a surprise as happily apeared for the most part to have given satisticin, although one or two countenances opressed doubt of the propriety of what had sen done.

peared for the most part to have given satisfaction, although one or two countenances expressed doubt of the propriety of what had been done.

My lords, said her Majesty as she was about to retire, 'I trust you will make known may humor in this matter; and for the time I have mentioned I will be bounden for this lady's safe keeping.

T pray you, my liege, hear this matter to an end, broke in Angus hastily.

Thave heard enough for the present, and I have spoke my will.

"Rone here can pity the lady's position more than I—none would be more willing to help her to her desire, but justice must be done. The accuser of her husband and hereal' is within call——

"Ha, asy you; let us see the man."

"First let this be understood, that I have promised him safe passage of the Council, for, to avoid the evil that might follow upon the revelation of his crime, his person must be unknown, unless yor 'Majesty will consent to see the man in presence only of their lordships.

"Bring him hither, I say,' was the impatient ejaculation of the Queen; 'by my sooth, my Lord Anjus, it seems that you would have your beheest and not mine followed.'

"Your Majesty shall be obeyed."

"Your whelesty and not mine followed.'

"Your heat mad bodd as that of one accustomed to jack and saddle. His face was overed by a cloth mask, and, as if to conceal it as he knet before the Queen, he bowed his head down low.

"The Queen turned from him with a certain degree of contempt in her manner."

"My Lord, Arran, question the fellow.'

Spoak, sirrah, said Arran gruffly, 'what proof have your of this accusation?'

"The proofs, your lordship knows, have been already given to the Qouncil.'

"Then what seek you here?"

"This only—that to satisfy all men I have apoken honestly, I denounce, in the Queen's prevence persons of Haistane a trattor to his King and country; and swear that I hold dury words in the lists against any man the lady will find bold enough to defend her cause.'

"My lord, my liege,' cried Lady Spens hastily,' this is—cause. 'My liege, my liege,' cried Lady Spens hastily, 'this is—'

'Hush—let us hear the end.'
'I take your challenge for my lady s sake, liar and villain though you be.
The accuser sprung to his feet and turned fiercely upon the speaker.
It was Gibert Elliott who had advanced from his position near the door and stood confronting the accuser.
'You speak brave enough,' said the latter sneering.

confronting the accuser.

'You speak brave enough,' said the latter sneering.

'And, with the saint's help, will do what I say. Walter Spiens of Halstane is innocent of all thought or word or deed of treachery, and his lady is blameless as the Queen herself. In this fellow who denounces them behold Adam Scott of Tushielaw.'

As he spoke he plucked the mask from Tushielaw's face.

'Fiends burn you,' uttered the Borderer below his breath.

'Tushielaw, continued Gilbert calmly, 'the riever, outlaw, and murderer, who seeks to shield himself from the consequences of his guilt by casting the blame uron innocent shoulders. I denounce him beiore your Majesty and your lordships, and I am ready when and where you list to prove my words upon his body.'

'To-morrow, then, let this matter be decided,' said the Queen.

Accompanied by her ladies, and taking Lady Spens with her, the Queen withdrew.'

Tushielaw lowed to the nobles and seemed anxious to retire. Arran stopped him.

'Stay, Scott, you must fird some one who will be surety for your appearance to-morrow.'

'You need not fear that I will fail.'

'You need not fear that I will fail.'
'Natheless, we must have the surety.'
'My Lord, Angus, then, will answe: for as.'

me.' Mayus, exclaimed Arran, raising his heavy eyebrows, 'is this so, my lord?' 'I will answer for him,' said Angus curly as he wheeled about and retired, followed by Tushieiaw.

'For you, Master Elliott, we do not doubt that, as a gentleman of the Queen's Guard, you will full! your engagement.'

A FIGHT IN EARNEST—A short time ago in the township of Adelaide, County of Middlesex, a terrible encounter took place between two young men. There had been a chronic fead between them, and happening to meet one proposed that they should go into the field and have it out. They accordingly went at it "rough and tumble," and one received so much roughing and tumbling that he has since died from the injuries.
