I think my time is coming to an end. However, there are many other problems involved in this bill and in this particular provision of the bill. It is partly a matter of trust. The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources and his government have lost the faith and the trust of the Canadian energy industry. That may be the biggest obstacle to development today. There is no longer the kind of trust in the government that is necessary to encourage the private sector to get on with the business of developing the projects necessary to achieve energy self-sufficiency.

I have spoken about western Canada but, of course, my heart is in the development of resources off the coasts of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. I do not believe for one minute that that development will go ahead in this climate of distrust. I do not believe that development will go ahead until the government re-examines its policies and legislation like Bill C-48, listens not only to members of this House but also to the energy industry across Canada, and reviews its policies in the light of the valid criticisms which have been made.

There is no need for furore in this House on subjects like energy legislation. Surely all hon. members realize and recognize that not just members of this House but all Canadians are trying to achieve the same goal. In opposing provisions like Clause 10 seeking amendments and challenging other provisions in this bill, we on this side of the House are trying to achieve one thing: we are trying to get the government to re-examine its policies, to look at the criticisms which are being made and to act upon them because we think if that action is taken, if policies are re-examined, if the proposed laws are rewritten and if a sensible approach is taken to pricing and to other aspects of the energy dispute, then the private sector, even if with the help of Petro-Canada, will get on with these projects. We will achieve energy self-sufficiency and not be involved further in debates like this, which are damaging not just to the Canadian economy but to all Canadians. They create regional conflicts which are totally unnecessary.

I will finish simply by saying; let us get on with the task. In the interests of Canada and Canadians.

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I have taken a keen interest in this bill, Bill C-48. We spent a fair amount of time on it in the committee. All members of this House worked on it there. We have done a number of things because I think we feel it is an important bill.

I have a particular interest in the energy field because my riding depends on the energy industry to a large extent and has an interest in it. In fact, roughly 15 per cent to 20 per cent of the jobs in my riding are created directly by the energy industry. If we think about it in real terms, that means roughly one job in five. In addition to that, of course, capital is generated for the community and for the constituency. There are dramatic spin-off effects in my riding.

Bill C-48 applies to what we call Canada lands, which I have always known as the Northwest Territories and the Arctic. My interest goes back a long time, mainly because the town in which I grew up, the town of Grimshaw, was called Mile Zero of the Mackenzie Highway. For years the Mackenzie Highway was the only route into the Northwest Territories, and as a result of that, any goods, food, equipment, produce or anything which had to go up into the northern communities, had to go up through my community. I grew up with a sense of the north, a sense of its importance, a sense of its potential, and a sense of the opportunities which are in that area.

I feel that Bill C-48 is a very important bill. As I have said in other talks I have given on this bill, I think it is literally the beginning of the future of the north. It is literally the foundation of what will happen in that part of the country. One thing I feel is absolutely essential is that we recognize that anything this bill does must deal with long-term opportunities for the north.

This week I have had an opportunity to reflect on just what "long term" means. My wife's grandmother is visiting us in Ottawa this week, and she is a little over 90. I will not give her exact age because I might get into deep trouble, but there are some real implications when we think about what she has seen in those approximately 90 years. She has seen the development of the car from nothing more than a bit of steam and wood and nothing very sophisticated to what we have today. She has seen the total development of the airplane industry, to the point where we now have jumbo jets flying around the world. She has seen many things happen in those 90 years. She has seen us advance from having no airplanes to seeing a man walk on the moon. For that reason, this bill is really important because we are talking about the future of the lands up in that part of the country. We are talking about beginnings, and this bill is a foundation or a jumping off point for development in that part of the country. The question right away is, what will happen in the next 90 years in that part of the country? I feel very strongly that Bill C-48 is an important bill. It has to be dealt with very carefully. It should be given very careful consideration.

Tonight I would like to focus on the motion which deals primarily with what we call ministerial discretion. I am very concerned about ministerial discretion because I think there are some dangers and some possible abuses of power involved. I believe one of the dangers is centralization of power. I think it can be very serious if we concentrate power into just a few hands or in just a few people.

• (2120)

The second danger in ministerial discretion as it affects this bill is the fact that it involves government from afar. Westerners are familiar with that kind of experience, familiar with some of the frustrations that can bring about. The ministerial discretion in Bill C-48 may result in effectively developing an atmosphere whereby a government from afar can exist. We have the territories which are many miles away from this House of Commons. If decisions are made here by one minister or a small group, a very strong case can be made for the development of government from afar.

The other danger is that you end up with decisions made behind closed doors. Those decisions automatically become suspect because they cannot be questioned. No one knows what has gone into them. When they are made behind closed doors, there is always a question, always a concern.

The fourth point ties in all of my previous points. Ministerial control is concentrated in a small area. If we look at the ministerial discretion in this bill, we find that the minister has tremendous power. I want to illustrate that by dealing briefly with one part of the ministerial discretion.

Under this bill, the minister has the power to tell the producer, the oil company that happens to be involved, whether to produce or not, how much to produce, where to ship what is produced, when to ship and who to ship it to. It even goes so far as to say at what price the product will be shipped. That is quite frightening. That literally covers the whole aspect of the development of oil and gas in our Canada lands in the north.

This was discussed with the minister in committee. I and other members questioned him on it. We asked the reasons for it and the importance of it. His response basically was, "Trust me." Why should we trust him? Aside from the personalities involved, and I do not want to get into that, we must recognize that we may well be talking about 90 years, a long time. This is just the beginning. We must recognize that this is the foundation or footing for the long-term prospect.

Even though this minister may not abuse the power, he will not always be the minister of this department, not always the minister responsible for this legislation which will have such a dramatic effect on the north.

An hon. Member: Thank heavens for that.

Mr. Cooper: My colleague says, "Thank heavens for that". We as Members of Parliament with responsibility for this bill must make decisions that protect us for the future. Legislation must look to the long term, and we must recognize possible abuses and dangers in the long-term development.

No one would argue whether discretion is necessary. I do not argue that. What I argue is the level, scope and possibilities of discretion, especially when that discretion has very few boundaries, checks and balances. There is a fine line between good legislation and bad legislation, and a fine line between discretion and an abuse of power.

I want to deal briefly with those clauses of the bill that involve ministerial discretion. Under Clause 10(2), the minister determines the exploration agreement which includes the dates and terms. Under Clause 12(1), the minister may enter into an exploration agreement without a call for public tenders, if he determines that is not in the public interest. Regardless of whether this minister is the minister for all time, which he will not be, at some point in the future that clause has to be subject or open to some kind of abuse. There must be some form of protection to assure us that no minister or government will abuse those very fundamental privileges.

Under Clause 14(1), the minister may select any proposal put before him. There is a lot of power there. Under Clause 15, if there are no other proposals put in front of him, he may enter into a proposal with any party he chooses. We do not know whether the conditions of the first proposal are the same as for the second. Things could change. That too is open to abuse.

Clause 35 really intrigued me. It allows the minister to change the operator, to go in and, on his own, to literally change the operator of a particular drilling program going on in a part of the country. This opens up a whole series of questions and concerns, or at least it should. That is pretty fundamental.

Let us take Dome Petroleum Canada as an example. It could be developing an oil well in the north, have taken it from the exploration stage through financing by initial investors, through the initial development, until the well is drilled and ready to operate so that it can bring the oil out of the ground. The minister can walk in under the authority of Clause 35 and change the operator. In other words, he can say to the operator, "You have done a wonderful job, a super job, and now it is time to let somebody else take over". That can cause all sorts of problems and have all sorts of implications. It is subject to abuse.

I referred earlier to Clause 48(1) (a) as having far-reaching implications. It talks about the minister ordering the commencement or continuation of drilling, where to deliver the product, when, what quantity and at what price. As I said, it covers the whole gambit in the development of oil. All of those powers are concentrated in one man and are in the hands of a few of his officials and colleagues.

Subclause (b) gives him the right to cease production. That kind of power or authority centralized in one area becomes extremely worrisome. We can see the potential for abuse. The opportunity for misuse is wide open.

Clause 48 is subject to appeal under Clause 56. Let us look briefly at Clause 56. Motion No. 7, which we are addressing tonight, calls for Clause 10 to be subject to appeal under Clause 56. The minute we think of a hearing, we think of some sort of arbitrator, judge or jury, or someone to whom we can present our case. You become the complainant and they the defendants. When one thinks of an appeal process, one thinks of a neutral board one can address, lay his claim before, make his case and hope for an unbiased, neutral and fair hearing.

• (2130)

Let us look at Clause 56. Who holds the hearing? The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) holds the hearing. Who is the judge? Again, it is the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Who is the jury? It is the minister. Here you have a complaint on this side against the minister, Mr. Speaker. You appeal it. Who do you appeal it to? Not over here but to the same minister. I believe this is something we should be concerned about.

This bill is important. We are talking about the development of the north. We are talking about the future of the north. We are talking about the opportunities for northern people, northern Indians, northern Eskimos. We are talking about their opportunities for jobs. We are talking about their potential for education. We are literally talking, Mr. Speaker, about their future. Any bill that does not properly address that, that does not fairly look at their needs, that does not fairly look at the potential they have, and that does not, in some manner, in a very definite, careful and fair way present them with an opportunity, is not doing its job. I do not believe, Mr. Speaker, there is room for abuse.

If we were to look at the goals of Bill C-48, as my colleague, the hon. member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby), said, we should be looking at energy self-sufficiency for our country. That has to be our concern. We should be making sure the bill addresses development. We have to see that development focuses on Canadian companies and uses Canadian employees and Canadian people. Any bill we bring forward has to benefit Canadians. I do not mean just the Canadians living in Toronto, and I do not mean Canadians living within 50 miles of the American border; I mean the Canadians that live in that area, and I mean the Canadians that live throughout the rest of Canada. We have to address that.

Motion No. 8 addresses those issues. It addresses oil self-sufficiency for our country. Motion No. 9 talks about Canadian content and the importance it has for our country, the importance it has for our potential, and the importance it has for our future. Motion No. 15 first deals with the environmental concerns we have to face in an area such as we have in this country, an area that is ecologically very sensitive. Second, it deals with the Canadian content of manpower obligations and manpower opportunities.

I was in Inuvik a couple of weeks ago. One of the things the mayor of the town, who appeared before us in committee, talked about is the opportunities available to people in this country to develop their job skills, to employ them in working in their home areas, to earn a livelihood, and to contribute to our country and to our economy.

My time has just about run out, Mr. Speaker. In conclusion, let me pose a couple of questions. First, why do we not have any public boards to which appeals could be made? Why do we not have an opportunity for public appeal? Why do we have one appeal opportunity only, and that is to the minister who is the target of your complaint in the first place? Why does this bill not address the importance of diffusing power? I do not mean diffusing it from Ottawa to Hull; I am talking about diffusing it from the federal government to the territorial government, which will want to have provincial status one day. Why does this bill not protect the people from all kinds of abuses of ministerial discretion, a possibility which we can see when we study the bill for nothing more than a few minutes? This is an important bill. It provides an important opportunity. It gives Canadians an important chance. We have to do it right the first time.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 7 in the name of the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson). All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to an agreement reached, the motion stands deferred.

The question is now on Motion No. 8 in the name of the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson). All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: According to the agreement reached, the motion stands deferred. The question is on Motion No. 13 in the name of the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson). All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The motion stands deferred. The question is now on Motion No. 15 in the name of the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson). All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it. I declare the motion defeated.

Motion No. 15 (Mr. Wilson) negatived.

The question is on Motion No. 41 in the name of the hon. member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly). All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: According to the agreement previously reached, the motion stands deferred.

Mr. Bill Kempling (for Mr. Wilson) moved:

Motion No. 14

That Bill C-48, an act to regulate oil and gas interests in Canada lands and to amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act, be amended in Clause 16

(a) by striking out line 19 at page 9 and substituting the following therefor:

"ment shall not exceed ten years from the or, where"

(b) by striking out line 23 at page 9 and substituting the following therefor:

"successive terms not exceeding ten years".

Mr. Andre: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. I was looking at the list of motions and their grouping. I wonder why we have not had a division on Motion No. 16 as well as on Motions Nos. 9, 10, 11 and 12.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In reply to the hon. member, in terms of the grouping, my understanding is as follows: an affirmative vote on Motion No. 8 would dispense with Motions Nos. 9 and 10. A negative vote on Motion No. 8—and this vote cannot be determined until after the period of deferment has been reached—would mean the question on Motion No. 9 would be put. A negative vote on Motion No. 9, would mean that the question on Motion No. 10 would have to be put. An affirmative vote on Motion No. 9 would dispense with Motion No. 10. But an affirmative vote on Motion No. 9 would avoid the question being put on Motions Nos. 10, 11 and 16. A negative vote on Motion No. 9 requires the question being put on Motion No. 10. A vote on Motion No. 10 also disposes of Motions Nos. 11, 12 and 16, seriatim. Whether or not a vote would have to be taken on Motion No. 16 depends upon the series of votes.

Mr. Andre: A point of order. It was our intention, at least, that on Motion No. 8 a decision would be rendered by yeas and nays. Perhaps some members straightening the seams in their trousers gave the Chair the wrong impression of our intention.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I heard the voice vote and I declared the motion lost. There are five members on the opposition who rose. The division stands deferred according to the procedure adopted by Parliament.

• (2140)

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, perhaps it is naïveté or inexperience on my part, but the problem I have is that the vote itself has not yet been taken since it was deferred. I am concerned that simply by losing the voice vote it is automatically assumed by the Chair that the recorded vote—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member is in error. There are no automatic assumptions by the Chair. When the actual vote is taken, a decision will be made at that point whether or not subsequent motions have to be voted. Until such vote is taken a decision cannot be made.

Mr. Deans: If I may ask for Mr. Speaker's guidance on a point of order, I am concerned that at the time the vote is taken, which will be some days from now, the votes that will be put to the House will be only those votes which are recorded—

Mr. Nielsen: As deferred.

Mr. Deans: Yes, the only votes which will be put to the House will be the votes that are recorded as deferred at that point.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member is mistaken. At that point the Chair will proceed as indicated in the statement by the Chair. If, for example, Motion No. 8 is decided in the affirmative, some others are not necessary. If it is decided in the negative, at that point the Chair will proceed to put the other votes.

Mr. Deans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready to deal with Motion No. 14?

Mr. Harvie Andre (Calgary Centre): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a few remarks to Motion No. 14 before we dispose of it. Motion No. 14 deals with the exploration agreement and, in particular, with the time or the duration of any agreement written between the minister and whatever company or association of companies the agreement includes.

The original Bill C-48 came before the House and then went to committee. It contained the language that the term of the agreement was not to exceed five years. In presentations before the committee by representatives of the industry and others who appeared, very strong representations were made that five years, given the nature of the lands in question, was in fact inadequate. Five-year exploration agreements and leases are typical in areas such as provincial lands, onshore lands or easily accessible lands, and it is a reasonable period of time. But five years in areas under the jurisdiction of the Canada lands, in the Arctic, offshore, in iceberg alley off Labrador and so on, are simply inadequate. For example, the drilling season in the Beaufort Sea in an excellent year, if everything goes well, may be four months. For a third of the year one can drill in the Arctic if everything goes well. If five years is appropriate for Alberta where we do not have these considerations, where we can essentially build year round, then perhaps 15 years is more appropriate for the Beauport Sea.

Certainly Dome Canada has explored in that area for more than five years. Everyone hopes its discoveries are commercial, but this is not known yet. It is still very much in the exploration phase, even though Dome has been up there for far more than five years. It was suggested by some of the witnesses who appeared before the committee that the language of that clause should read a minimum of five years rather than a maximum of five years in order to give some certainty. The Bar Association indicated that five-year terms for exploration agreements may well be too short, thereby resulting in uncertainty on the part of the industry and consequently greater difficulty in concluding agreements. Certainly banking institutions, the people who put up the money and the investors, will want a little more certainty and a little more time before they proceed.

Motion No. 14 would merely suggest that the language of Clause No. 16 be altered so that the terms of an exploration agreement did not exceed ten years. It would allow that extra bit of time. It could be cut back if circumstances warrant. For example, if one authorized an exploration agreement off the coast of British Columbia where year round drilling is possible, five years may be appropriate. On the other hand, if one is looking at an exploration agreement in Lancaster Sound, which is an area geologists consider to be highly potential, five years is hopelessly inadequate for an exploration program in that area. In the interests of, in fact, putting in place legislation which will lead to the development of this area, the government would be well advised to take this extension.

I realize that subsequent to the original act, there was an amendment by the government to add the language, "Where the minister considers it necessary, eight years may be the extension." This was a concession to the original error in judgment. This language is very awkward—"The term of the agreement shall not exceed five years or, where the minister considers it necessary, eight years." The amendment before the House would clean it up. It would be a lot more reasonable, given the nature of the lands in question and the fact that we are dealing with the high Arctic, offshore areas such as iceberg alley off Labrador, and so on. An extension to ten years would be highly reasonable. Therefore, I commend it to the government. I suggest the government would be improving its own legislation considerably by accepting the motion.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I should like to participate just briefly on this motion. We on this side of the House are opposed to this amendment. The House must understand that there is relentless pressure by the industry, even by segments of the government of the United States on behalf of the oil industry, to get this bill amended, watered down and changed so that the industry can continue its beneficial regime of past years.

Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, you could take a look at an article which was written in 1973 by Professor Andrew Thompson, entitled, "Canada's Petroleum Leasing Policy—A Cornucopia For Whom?". The criticisms in that article were really the beginnings of this bill. It referred to a regime which was pretty easy on the oil companies. We virtually gave away our leases in the north, with no time limit, with no concern for whether they should be developed once they were given, with no concern for what was happening up there in the area of industrial spin-offs.

An hon. Member: The Canadians would not take it.

Mr. Waddell: I am not referring to the Canadians who would not take it. We gave it to people who could afford to do it. At that time it was foreign capital. It is true that a lot of Canadians would not do it. Perhaps they did not see the benefits, but they do now. I do not think we should make a similar mistake. There was relentless pressure to water down the bill, and the government has watered it down. Instead of strengthening the bill, the government has watered it down. I know that the hon. member for Calgary Centre (Mr. Andre) wants to put forward the interests of his friends in the oil industry, and that is fine. On this side of the House we are prepared to listen to those claims if they are reasonable. In the past they have not been.

• (2150)

A few minutes ago I heard the hon. member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby) speak about the tar sands. But he did not know anything about the tar sands. He talked about private enterprise in the tar sands. The government has offered the people who are developing the tar sands world price for their oil, but they have said that they want more. They always want more, more. That was even too much for the Premier of Alberta. Apparently it was not too much for the Conservative party, but it was too much for the Premier of Alberta who finally threw up his hands and said it was too much.

The government has backed off this bill very substantially. It backed off by changing the Petro-Canada "back in" somewhat. It backed off from the original draft by changing the Canadian content requirement because it was too tough in the original draft. It backed off the royalty holidays to the industry. In a few days we will get to all these items where the government has backed off. It backed off slightly in this section by changing the term to eight years. I suggest that the government ought not to back off any further, Mr. Speaker. That term should be kept at five years. I know what my friend, the hon. parliamentary secretary, will say. His speech will be to the effect that this is the difference between the Liberals and the NDP—the Liberals are for eight years, the NDP is for five years, and the Tories are for ten years. He thinks he has the radical middle now, but I would call it the muddled middle. That will be the tenor of his speech, so he does not have to make it.

I say that we should not back off any further on any of these clauses. We have already backed off far enough and we should keep this clause as it is.

Mr. Roy MacLaren (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) suggested that since his party takes the position that the duration should be five years and the Conservative party spokesman proposed ten years, and since the Liberal party suggests eight years, that I would be satisfied with the legislation as it stands. He is right. The normal term under an exploration agreement in Bill C-48 is five years, with the provision that the minister may grant an extension to eight years if he considers that exceptional circumstances warrant it. In our view, the ten-year term proposed is too long to permit a holder of an agreement to have the right to explore on Canada lands without the scrutiny that would be involved in renegotiations. We recognize, however, that there will be occasions when the particular circumstances require an extension. It is for that purpose that we have provided for the possibility of an additional three years, for a total of eight years. We believe that this is sufficient time to permit exploration to go forward. We certainly want to avoid the situation which has occurred in the past where companies with exploration rights have not taken the initiative in developing those rights for the benefit of the Canadian people.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed to the motion will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it. I declare the motion lost.

Motion No. 14 (Mr. Wilson) negatived.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway) moved:

Motion No. 17

That Bill C-48, an act to regulate oil and gas interests in Canada lands and to amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act, be amended in Clause 19 by striking out lines 8 to 10 at page 11 and substituting the following therefor:

"rated in Canada and be Canadian-controlled and have Canadian ownership rate of not less than fifty (50) per cent in 1981, fifty-five (55) per cent in 1982, sixty (60) per cent in 1983, sixty-five (65) per cent in 1984, seventy (70) per cent in 1985, and a minimum Canadian ownership rate of seventy-five (75) per cent in 1986 and so on; or".

He said: Mr. Speaker, I have a captive audience opposite, but I have only a few minutes in which to start this speech on the Canadianization part of the bill.

Generally speaking, this government has been a disaster in the last couple of years. The only bright spot that the public thought it could see was Canadianization. In my speech tomorrow and the speeches of some of my colleagues, we shall show what Canadianization is. It is a bit of a sham because the public thinks it is public ownership. It is not, Mr. Speaker; it is changing the big boys—the Rockefellers and the big American boys—to big Canadian boys, the Domes, the Novas and so on. In the course of my speech, I will show how Canadians will suffer once again as a result of this. They will put up the money for exploration and development, and it will go into a few private pockets. Instead of American pockets, it will go into the Canadian industry's pockets but not into the pockets of the people.

Mr. Evans: Not true.

Mr. Waddell: I would ask the hon. member opposite to read the bill and then come here tomorrow and listen to my speech on Canadianization.

The Canadianization requirements are simply empty promises, Mr. Speaker. Under this bill, the control of our oil industry, which is still 75 per cent foreign controlled—

Mr. Gray: Sixty-seven per cent.

Mr. Waddell: We will talk about that tomorrow and I will give the figures then. In 1974, the government promised that it would take the country to 50 per cent Canadian control and ownership. It promised that again in 1979 and in 1980, and we will likely hear it again in 1981.

In my speech I will make the point that the taxation and carried interest provisions of the bill do not reflect the schemes found elsewhere in the world today. In Norway, the state-owned company receives 50 per cent to 80 per cent carried interest versus the proposed 25 per cent carried interest proposed for Petro-Canada. Great Britain and Norway both impose taxes double or triple those contained in Bill C-48.

In my speech I will show that once again we are the suckers when compared to the regime in Norway, Great Britain, even Australia and Mexico. I will deal with each of those regimes and show how ours compares.

I shall also show in some detail what will happen as the result of this bill. I shall suggest that in the stock market we will see a lot of small Canadian companies that will be shells for foreign multinational oil companies. The bill provides for grants of 93 cents on every dollar. Just think of it, Mr. Speaker, you get 93 cents from the taxpayer to drill in the north, in the Canada lands, the west coast, east shore and offshore.

Talk about wealth; my friends to the right talk about capitalism. There is no capitalism here; it is simply government largesse. The government will pay 93 cents out of every dollar required to drill, but will we get public ownership for that? No, just a limited public ownership through Petro-Canada. Dome and Nova and all the other corporations will be made rich, and the Canadian taxpayer will pay. I shall show all that in my speech, Mr. Speaker.

I ask hon. members opposite the name of the largest oil company in Canada. Is it Petro-Canada? No, it is Dome Petroleum. Let us admit that Canadianization is not public ownership. It will rip off—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

• (2200)

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[Translation]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 40 deemed to have been moved.

[English]

PUBLIC SERVICE—COST OF LIVING DIFFERENTIALS APPLICABLE TO AIRPORT FIREMEN

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Mr. Speaker, on July 15 I rose in the House to ask a question of the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Johnston). I was speaking on behalf of some of my constituents, the firemen at the Vancouver International Airport. They are concerned about the strength of their position in bargaining for a wage settlement in a bargaining unit comprised of maybe 20, 30 or 40 people.

The government's position as the employer is that national unions represent national employees across Canada. The minister admitted to me in the House at that time that this does create a problem of disparity for employees. I pointed out to him that whenever you have equality on a national scale, you have a high level of unfairness for the employees. Local conditions in each area of the country vary so much that a national agreement creates benefits for one area and problems for another area. For example, wage scales of the firemen at the Vancouver International Airport compare very unfavourably with those of their fellow employees in New Brunswick. In some parts of the country, employees have a wage scale of $3,000 a year more than their counterparts either in the local city or the provincial fire departments. On the other hand, the firemen at the Vancouver International Airport are paid about $6,000 a year less than their counterparts in downtown Vancouver or those who work for the provincial government.

The employees at the Vancouver International Airport are paid the same as those in Moncton, but the cost of living in the two areas is astronomically different. I do not know how the President of the Treasury Board can work for an agreement which is supposed to be equal when it is incredibly unfair.

He admitted in his answer to me that it is unfair and that the government is trying to work out regional benefits for some of the employees, I suppose some kind of a cost of living clause or something like that. However, it has not been forthcoming. I suggested to the minister that what we need perhaps are regional bargaining units in order to strengthen the hand of some of the employees in the regions. The minister told me that would not be the right way to go. I am not sold on the idea, but I simply tossed it out as a suggestion as something that might protect those in the most vulnerable positions.

It seems to me that whenever you have the government promoting this kind of equality it favours the strong rather than the weak. The strong are either those in a bargaining position who can easily expose the vulnerability of society by withdrawing their services—as firemen could do across the country—or those who have large voting blocks within the union. That is precisely the problem we are faced with in the national unions today, for example, a bargaining union in British Columbia consisting at most of several hundred people and a bargaining unit in central Canada comprising several thousand people. You can see what would happen in a national vote with numbers like that. It reminds you a little of the Prime Minister's (Mr. Trudeau) referendum formula and how that is supposed to work for the country.

There is no way employees who work for the federal government in British Columbia will ever end up with a package to meet their needs, because the large voting block in central Canada will consistently outvote them.

It is in the interests of the President of the Treasury Board to have a national union so that he can always pit one group against the other. Is that his scheme? It is the same scheme the federal government uses in supposedly trying to solve disparities invoked upon the people. The government settles with one tribe and antagonizes several other tribes. This is exactly what it is doing with the national unions.

• (2205)

What happens then is that those who are working in the British Columbia region are focusing on those working in central Canada and they become the enemies or the antagonists, rather than the employer. This is not a bad scheme.

I am focusing right now on the matter of the employees of the fire department of the Vancouver International Airport, but the same thing holds true for immigration officers, those working in the penitentiary services, the parole service, or any of the other bargaining units in the PSAC. Whenever you have a national union bargaining for all employees across Canada, you have inequality that creates an innate unfairness with regard to large segments of that union within the country.

As I said, it is in the government's interests to promote that kind of friction within the union so it can get the kind of package which is cheapest and looks best for the employer, but works a hardship.

I should like to know from the parliamentary secretary tonight whether there is to be something laid on the table for the employees at the Vancouver International Airport, because they will soon be in a strike position and they need a settlement. Even if they were not in a strike position, the disparity they are facing in their salaries is sufficient to make some of them lose their homes, and it is taking away the money they need for their groceries. I would like to have a commitment from the parliamentary secretary tonight that there is going to be some kind of settlement which will recognize the element of fairness that should be part of all bargaining and which will provide a settlement for those workers at the Vancouver International Airport.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Norman Kelly (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I may misunderstand the nature of this debate, but I thought the Public Service Alliance insisted on a national or uniform pay scale right across the country, while it was the Treasury Board that was attempting to negotiate regional rates of pay that are in some way related to the average rates of pay of outside firefighters in the areas where those firefighters are employed.

So, I am pleased to tell the hon. member that the negotiators are prepared to consider any proposal by the union to rectify regional disparities. I think the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Johnston) and the hon. member opposite can find common agreement with that understanding.

As for the establishment of several bargaining units for such a widespread group of firefighters, I would have to tell the hon. member that this appears unlikely, but such a matter would have to be decided by the Public Service Staff Relations Board.

RAILWAYS—REQUEST FOR INTRODUCTION OF VIA RAIL LEGISLATION

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, the question I raise this evening arises from a question I posed on July 13, 1981 as it appears at page 11454 of Hansard. At that time I directed that question to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) asking for clarification about a rumour at that time of a potential cutback of roughly 20 per cent of VIA Rail services in Canada. The minister indicated he was not able to give a firm answer in the House at that time but that he was in full agreement on the need for a new VIA Rail act and other items that were ancillary to the improvement of VIA Rail.

Since that time, as you know, action has been taken by the minister through his announcement of July 27 when he announced the cutback of some 20 per cent of Canada's rail passenger service in a unilateral and arbitrary manner, at which time the House was not in session, and at a time when Members of Parliament and members of the public had no opportunity to consider that decision.

• (2210)

Mr. Speaker, I find the minister's action shameful and it is causing a great deal of anger, outrage and regional discord throughout the country. The decision has grave implications for hundreds of thousands of Canadians who use and rely on the rail passenger service in this country. It has grave implications for at least 1600 workers who will be affected directly, plus countless other workers who will be faced with job losses and dislocation as a result of the indirect effects. There is no question that this decision has long-term implications for many people.

While I am happy to see the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) in the House this evening and I appreciate the fact that he is here—I know he is a very busy man who has a lot on his platter—I was expecting his parliamentary secretary to be here this evening to talk about the cutbacks and how they relate to the labour component of the service. It is interesting to note that the parliamentary secretary who, although he is loyal to the minister and does support wholeheartedly the actions of the minister, represents a large area—the Winnipeg area—where some 500 people will be directly affected as a result of this cutback. He is also aware, I am sure, that the removal of the Northern Transcontinental will have a tremendous effect upon the tourist industry. I am sure he is aware there will be no direct service between Saskatoon and Winnipeg. The town of Rivers, Manitoba, will be deleted from this service; Watrous and Melville will have no service at all. It is a very serious state of affairs.

The other thing that bothers many of us is that there is a double standard in the minister's announcement. He has given the commuters a year to adjust and respond to his decision, but for those most affected by the regional and trans-continental cutbacks, the guillotine will fall on November 15.

Today, in the House, the minister admitted the costing order is out of date, inadequate and unfair. That view was shared by the Canadian Transport Commission, in a decision which was published recently with regard to a hearing that was conducted in the Province of Manitoba. The minister admitted as well that there would be changes. The costing order is at the heart and core of the financial problem with VIA Rail. Under the costing order, 63 per cent of their budget is uncontrollable because it is spent on services that are provided by CN and CP, which is basically a carte blanche, cost-plus or open-ended, however you want to describe it. Since the minister acknowledged that we should have a new VIA Rail act to outline clearly its mandate, it should be brought before the Parliament of Canada for a full parliamentary debate.

Since we have such a problem with the costing order, I cannot see why the minister is proceeding with such undue haste. Lay-off notices have been served, new schedules are being implemented. I heard today that they are scrapping some of the existing railway passenger cars in anticipation of the cutbacks on November 15. To all intents and purposes, it is a fait accompli.

I understand legal action will be launched tomorrow. Even while legal action is being taken, all these things are happening. The minister is forging right ahead. There is a vigorous debate going on in the House, the Senate, the Joint Committee on Regulations and Statutory Instruments, as well as throughout the country. The minister proceeds in his arrogant and arbitrary fashion. It is not inconsistent with the actions of this government, as evidenced by its pursuit of the Constitution and the energy program.

The minister should understand that clearly because I think he does understand Canada. He has had much experience travelling back and forth across this country, working on the constitutional task force.

• (2215)

Given the fact that the minister understands the regional make-up and the diversity of this country, I cannot for the life of me understand why he would refuse to conform to what has become a very historical and traditional practice in this country, and that is the practice of holding public hearings on issues which are so important and fundamental to the Canadian people. The minister refuses because he says it would take too long and that he is not excited about giving the CTC a direction. Well, the routes which are being dismantled were in fact established through very extensive public hearings, based upon the criteria of public convenience and necessity by the CTC. If the government of that day did not agree with the CTC decision or directive, it should have used Section 64 then. It should not wait two years before using it. To me that is really the fundamental part of the violation of the spirit and the intent of Section 64 as it conforms to the principle enshrined within the National Transportation Act. I think this is a very, very dangerous precedent.

Today I was handed a document, which was provided by the Railway Transport Committee, the rail economic analysis branch, dated October 21, 1981. I would be pleased to table it because, out of 18 different applications, on only two occasions were public hearings not held. The precedent is clearly established. I urge the minister with all the conviction I can muster to reconsider his plan and to give the Canadian people an opportunity. I urge him to give those who are affected an opportunity to be heard. I urge him to defer the decision and let the Canadian traditional and historical process in this country work. I think the minister will find that his job will be a lot easier, and he will derive a great deal of satisfaction—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but his time has expired.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am surprised by the psychology displayed by my friend, the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), here tonight and the other day. I took it for granted that he was a man of great passion, dedication and rather rapid action. I thought that was him, but I can now almost believe that he has been saved for the demonstration of the opposite by the fact that he stayed in power for a relatively short period of time, because the only thing he has been talking about—or the main thing; I should not be unfair—besides the great lessons of democracy he has been giving me and others so generously is the concept of a delay. He is looking for a delay. He thought he would bring about delay by invoking action through the Canadian Transport Commission, which he knows well would have taken two, three or four years. There is no other way.

There are 21 different routes to look at when holding public hearings.

Mr. Mazankowski: Parliamentary committee.

Mr. Pepin: Then, realizing that I would not go for that and realizing that the route we have taken by order in council is quite legal under Section 64 of the National Transportation Act, he took a second kick at the can by suggesting that the matter should be sent to the parliamentary Standing Committee on Transport and delayed there until June 20 or thereabout.

Then tonight he says we should delay it until we have found a miraculous formula for the financial relationships between the railways and VIA, that is, an amendment to costing order R63-13.

Mr. Mazankowski: Just offering you a way out.

Mr. Pepin: That would take some time also. Then, on July 13 he said we should delay until we rewrite the VIA legislation. That is four occasions for delay. When do you do anything under that system?

Mr. Mazankowski: There are options for you. Take one of them.

Mr. Pepin: One cannot do anything under that system, so I came tonight really to talk about the VIA bill and to cheer up my hon. friend by saying that I take that responsibility very seriously. The last time I told him I was in favour of one. Now I have received the first approach to it from my department. I suggest that when he was holding my portfolio he too asked his officials to provide him one. I do not know. Maybe we could exchange notes at some point. At least we could exchange a verbal communication. The choice I will have at one point—and I am quite willing to talk about it with my predecessor—is a long bill or a short bill. What would be included would be a structural part and a more dynamic part. The framework of that is being developed now. I should be presenting it to cabinet in the coming months, but I am not at all reluctant to talk about it in the Standing Committee on Transport.

Mr. Mazankowski: But you won't have a railroad by then.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. minister, but the time alloted to him has expired.

• (2220)

REQUEST THAT GOVERNOR OF BANK OF CANADA BE INSTRUCTED TO LOWER INTEREST RATES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, on Wednesday, October 14, I asked the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen) on behalf of the Spadina voters who sent me here if he would instruct the Governor of the Bank of Canada to lower the interest rate structure to a tolerable level. The minister's reply was disappointing. He merely saluted the worn-out dogma that high interest rates are anti-inflationary. Is he still asking Canadians to believe that he will cure high prices by pricing money higher than this country has ever seen before in order to cool down inflation? This was the policy of the late Conservative government, to concentrate spending power in the hands of a few, a policy that pleases those few and only those few.

This is still Conservative policy, as shown by the fact that when the leader of the nominal opposition asked questions on this last week, he was careful to avoid asking that the interest rate be brought down. He just said, let's have a review. He asked that there be subsidies to home owners rather than a new interest rate and investment policy that would bring health back to our economy.

What is disappointing and new is that the Liberal government, through the Minister of Finance, has also completely surrendered now to the philosophy of making the rich richer and the poor poorer. This present government and the one before it proved this policy to be a failure.

Inflation ran at 10 per cent in 1977. In four years, while inflation rose from 10 to 13 per cent, interest rates were going from 12 to 15 to 18 to 20 per cent and beyond. They had nothing to do with stopping inflation.

The government's new energy prices, up one third from last year, are sure to push inflation higher still. Will the minister care if interest rates rise to 25 or 30 per cent? The question is, how long can we wait for the minister's dogmatic policy to cure inflation? In fact, his cure is worse than his disease. His high interest rates are not cooling down demand as much as they are choking off production and supply and making inflation worse.

The number of officially unemployed jumped in one month, September, by 18 per cent. That is, 144,000 more Canadian men and women are not allowed to work productively. Does the minister like that cure for inflation? The Spadina voters clearly do not.

Small business bankruptcies jumped in that same month by 26 per cent. Spadina is the major small business centre for Ontario, if not for Canada. We have retail stores, specialty service shops, hundreds of textile and clothing manufacturers and distributors, the printing trades, the office furniture and supply trades, the restaurant and entertainment establishments and many more small and medium-sized businesses. Does the minister take pride in driving them into bankruptcy at a rate now increased by 26 per cent?

We have, I admit, very little farmland in Spadina, but our people do like to eat. We are told by the National Farmers Union that farmers now no longer spend 15 but 30 per cent of their income on carrying charges. No wonder grocery prices are rising faster than any other part of our cost of living. The banks take their share before we eat.

Does the minister plan to price food absolutely beyond the reach of Canadian working people? That might cure inflation in a sense, but not many of us would be around to enjoy it. There is, of course, one small group who are not suffering. The assets of the five largest banks in Canada went from $42 billion in 1970 to $260 billion in 1980, a fivefold increase.

Their profits went from $362 million in 1970 to $1,186 million in 1980, an increase of two and one quarter times. During that time, this Liberal government, whose Minister of Finance tells us about his daily conversations with the bankers, generously reduced their effective tax rate from 46 per cent to 16 per cent, less than a bank teller pays. How did the banks respond to that handout? Those corporate welfare bums increased the spread between the rate they pay to their depositors and the rate they charge their borrowers by 50 per cent.

• (2225)

The working men and women, Mr. Speaker, and small business operators of Spadina have recently shown this government that they are not the docile and stupid voters that this government thought they were when it sprung the Spadina byelection. If the minister persists in feeding his friends, the bankers, by starving the people who produce the wealth in Canada, the rest of the Canadian voters will soon send them the same message.

Mr. John Evans (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): The hon. member for Spadina (Mr. Heap) has suggested, as the primary thrust of his comments, that the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen) give the Governor of the Bank of Canada a directive to immediately lower interest rates. I think members of the House should remember that the fundamental cause of high interest rates we now face is the rate of inflation. There are also other factors. We have talked about these in the House a number of times in the past. Those factors related to the degree of monetary restraint that is being followed by the Bank of Canada. It relates to the growth of demand for credit that we have seen in this country. It relates to the U.S. interest rate situation, which is a contributing factor. It relates to the supply shocks we have seen in the marketplace over the last three to four years, the rapid rise in international oil prices, food shortages or crop failures in certain parts of the world at different times. All of these factors have led to our inflationary situation. All of these factors, Mr. Speaker, are leading to high interest rates.

The Bank of Canada, Mr. Speaker, has one tool and one tool only at its disposal; that is the growth rate in the money supply. It can make the money supply grow faster or it can make it grow slower. The Bank of Canada cannot, by some wave of its magic wand, nor can the government, cause interest rates to be 15 per cent, or 30 per cent or 5 per cent. It relates to the supply of credit. The Bank of Canada has control over the supply of money, but that is all.

If the Bank of Canada makes the supply of money grow faster, as in the particular situation we are in now, certainly in the very short term, because there is more supply of money, interest rates would tend to come down. The effect of that, Mr. Speaker, would be that in the medium term we would have worse inflation than we have now. In fact, we would have higher interest rates and higher inflation in the medium term than we have now. Now is the time for us to attack the problem of inflation, Mr. Speaker, and get it down, once and for all, and to set the stage for stable and sound economic growth and employment, low rates of inflation and prosperity in the future.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being 10.30 p.m., this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

At 10.28 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Friday, October 23, 1981

The House met at 11 a.m.

● (1105)

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

IMMIGRATION

ADMISSION OF POLISH REFUGEES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. John McDermid (Brampton-Georgetown): Madam Speaker, Canada has always been known as a compassionate country and has helped out many times in world crises by accepting its share of refugees, as in the case of the Hungarians, Czechoslovakians, Vietnamese and others. Now 30,000 Polish refugees located in camps in Austria need help desperately. Therefore I move, seconded by the hon. member for Malpeque (Mr. Gass):

That the government heed the urgent appeal for help from the Canadian-Polish Congress, the refugees, and the foreign minister of Austria, and immediately increase its quota of Polish refugees to Canada and send aid, in the form of warm clothing and food and medical supplies to the refugees in Austria.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent of the House for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF RUSSIAN INVASION OF HUNGARY—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, I move, seconded by members of both other parties, in this case seconded by the hon. member for Parkdale-High Park (Mr. Flis) and the hon. member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans):

That in memory of the events which began in Hungary on October 23, 25 years ago today, this House express its abiding opposition to the continuing totalitarian suppression of real freedom in Hungary and in all other countries so controlled, its sincere gratitude to those thousands of Hungarians whose reason for coming to Canada was so tragic and whose contribution to Canada has been so great, and its deepest sympathy to all those who lost family and friends in the valiant fight for freedom and against totalitarianism, and whose sacrifice free people must never forget.

I remind you, Madam Speaker, that this motion has support from all sides of the House.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

HOUSING

HOME OWNERS AFFECTED BY MORTGAGE INTEREST RATES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, yesterday the minister responsible for housing indicated that if members of the House of Commons had hardship cases related to the renewal of mortgages, and difficulties in getting mortgage interest rates that people could afford, they should send him details. I have approximately 190 cases here which I want to send over to him. Therefore, under the terms of Standing Order 43 I move, seconded by the hon. member for Beaches (Mr. Young):

That this House direct the minister of housing to contact each of the families whose names I have provided today, and between now and Monday assure that in no case will they be forced out of their homes as a result of exorbitant mortgage interest rates.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

RELIEF SOUGHT FOR HOME OWNERS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Cooper):

That this House deplores the procrastination and the delay of the Minister of Finance in providing help for persons losing their homes because of mortgage renewals. Is the minister waiting until the crises vanish, until the homes of hundreds are lost and the women and kids are freezing in the snow, before providing relief?

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

S.O. 43

AIR SAFETY

FINDINGS CONTAINED IN DUBIN REPORT—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Madam Speaker, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) will know of the 1977 directive issued by his officials which said that no punitive action should be taken against airlines for safety violations until full consideration had been given to the possible embarrassing and political implications to the minister. The Dubin inquiry has also exposed the fact that recommendations to prosecute airlines were not carried out because of a concern about embarrassment to the minister. I move, seconded by the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski):

● (1110)

That this House direct this irresponsible and incompetent Minister of Transport, who places his own political safety before the safety of thousands of air travelling Canadians, to withdraw this 1977 directive and then resign.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

AGRICULTURE

CROP DEFICIENCY PAYMENTS TO APPLE GROWERS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Fred King (Okanagan-Similkameen): Madam Speaker, I rise on a matter of urgent necessity affecting thousands of farmers in Canada. Apple producers in British Columbia's Okanagan Valley, together with apple producers in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, are experiencing a critical cash flow problem as a result of disastrously low prices for 1980 apple crops. This problem is intensified by high interest rates and by the protracted failure of the Agricultural Stabilization Board to finalize the terms of the 1980 crop deficiency payments to which these Canadian farmers should be entitled. I therefore move, seconded by the hon. member for Oxford (Mr. Halliday):

That this House directs the Minister of Agriculture to act immediately to disburse stabilization deficiency payments respecting the 1980 apple crops to Canada's apple producers.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

HOUSING

SUGGESTION THAT HOME OWNERS SHOULD TELEPHONE MINISTER'S OFFICE—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Mark Rose (Mission-Port Moody): Madam Speaker, I too rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 to move, seconded by the hon. member for Nanaimo-Alberni (Mr. Miller):

That in view of the announcement by the minister of housing, Mr. Cosgrove, to intervene personally to assist those Canadians faced with the dismal prospect of losing their homes because of high mortgage rates, and in order to give the minister a final chance to do something about the housing crisis that exists in this country, this House notes that the minister's office telephone number is (613) 996-5132 and that all Canadian families seeking assistance from high mortgage rates—

Mr. MacEachen: That is absurd.

Madam Speaker: Order.

Mr. Rose:

—should call the minister's office, collect, at (613) 996-5132.

Madam Speaker: Order.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

COMMEMORATION OF HUNGARIAN RISING IN 1956—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parkdale-High Park): Madam Speaker, I seek the attention of all hon. members of this House respecting an urgent and pressing matter under the provisions of Standing Order 43. I move, seconded by the hon. member for Don Valley West (Mr. Bosley):

That today this House commemorates the rising of the people of Hungary against oppression during October, 1956, by expressing its sympathy to all of those who lost family and friends during the struggle for independence and by acknowledging the great contributions people of Hungarian origin have made to the development and cultural heritage of Canada.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

INDIAN AFFAIRS

BRITISH COLUMBIA REGIONAL OFFICE—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Lorne Greenaway (Cariboo-Chilcotin): Madam Speaker, after many years of enduring intolerable conditions on Indian reservations in British Columbia, and out of a sense of complete frustration, a group of British Columbia Indian women this summer staged a protest sit-in at the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development regional office in Vancouver. These women were protesting what they firmly believe to be the indecision, inaction and mismanagement of the department in British Columbia. So far the only result of this protest has been that 53 of the women were individually charged and now have to face the crushing costs of court appearances. Therefore I move, seconded by the hon. member for Okanagan-Similkameen (Mr. King):

That the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development immediately furnish the Standing Committee on Indian Affairs and Northern Development with a reference to investigate all charges of mismanagement and inefficiency relating to the operation of the British Columbia regional office and direct the committee to report its findings to this House.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

AGRICULTURE

IMPACT OF HIGH INTEREST RATES ON FARMING COMMUNITIES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Geoff Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Madam Speaker, hundreds upon hundreds of people from the Hamilton-Wentworth area recently signed letters pleading with the Government of Canada to do something about the high interest rates which are devastating our farming communities. These are 1,100 letters collected by the Wentworth Federation of Agriculture which I am now sending to the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen)—young lady, he is sitting right over there—and there are another 500 of these letters on the way to my office. Therefore I move, seconded by the hon. member for Burlington (Mr. Kempling):

• (1115)

That the Minister of Finance pay attention to these 1,600 voices from my area as they add their pleas to those of many other Canadians concerned about the crisis in the agricultural sector due to this government's high interest rate policies.

Mr. MacEachen: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Madam Speaker: The minister might raise a point of order after question period. We have to finish the motions under Standing Order 43 just now.

* * *

UNITED NATIONS

TRIBUTE TO PEACEKEEPING OPERATIONS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43. Tomorrow is United Nations day. At the same time Canada has just honoured General Burns, the commander of the First United Nations Emergency Peacekeeping Force, with the Pearson Peace Medal. In honour of United Nations Day, in honour of 25 years of United Nations peacekeeping, in honour of General Burns, the Canadians who have given their lives to United Nations peacekeeping and the many Canadian Armed Forces men and women who have served United Nations peacekeeping, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Beaches (Mr. Young):

That this House express its best wishes to General Burns and record its recognition of the fine service by Canadians in United Nations peacekeeping forces, and that this House affirm its faith in and support for the United Nations and its endeavours.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

HOUSING

MINISTER'S UNDERTAKING TO HELP HOME OWNERS

Hon. Bill Jarvis (Perth): Madam Speaker, my question, I am sure not unexpectedly, is directed to the Minister of Public Works. Given the situation where the government's minimum figures show that approximately 800 Canadian families per week are losing their homes to high interest rates, the minister indicated yesterday, and I want to quote him accurately, that he would attempt to respond to those cases where there is genuine concern that homes would be in jeopardy. Does this undertaking include, in addition to those 800 families who will lose their homes this week, next week and the week after, families who are already in jeopardy, that is, families whose homes are subject to foreclosure or power of sale action? Second, what is the exact mechanism established by the minister? Is there a special Zenith telephone number, is it open during the weekend and during hours that would accommodate Canadians in all time zones?

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, I wish the hon. member would quote exactly from Hansard. I will read my answer of yesterday:

I will attempt to respond to those cases which are brought to my attention, those cases where there is genuine concern that homes would be in jeopardy before the other financial institutions respond to the Royal Bank initiative or the budget. I would be happy to receive any case from any individual Member of Parliament who is genuinely concerned there is a hazard that the home will be lost.

Those were the words that I used yesterday. I draw to the attention of the hon. member the newspaper clippings that were dropped on my desk. They do not by themselves indicate the text that I just quoted. First, I indicated that I expect

Members of Parliament on all sides of the House to have made some attempt individually and shown some effort to assist people by contacting the mortgage holder. In referring items to me, I would appreciate it if Members of Parliament could assist by identifying the mortgage holder, the date, and the person whom they contacted in an attempt to assist, before referring the matter to me.

I will therefore have to return these newspaper clippings that were given by the hon. member for Hamilton Mountain. They do not illustrate the question of genuine hardship. Indeed, on a number of the newspaper clippings where the question is asked, "Will the new monthly payments force your family to move or rethink your budget," there is no answer to that question. Therefore I have no indication that the questions are genuine.

CASE OF INDIVIDUAL AHOP HOME OWNER

Hon. Bill Jarvis (Perth): Madam Speaker, the minister will already have received the petitions tabled by the Leader of the Opposition last week. I would not expect that the minister's answer yesterday would lead Canadian home owners to believe that the only access they have to the minister is necessarily through a Member of Parliament. I hope the minister was not implying that.

● (1120)

If he wants a specific example, may I ask the minister to explain why, this morning, his office, and the official designated presumably by his receptionist, did not return five telephone calls from Carol Rogmans, head of a single parent family, and an AHOP purchaser, whose CMHC payments eight days from now will increase from $294 a month to $652 a month? After leaving five unanswered messages, she telephoned the office of the Leader of the Opposition where, I assure him, there is a genuine concern for people like Mrs. Rogmans. Is there, in fact, a mechanism for people like this Canadian? Or was yesterday's answer simply a grandstand play to save the minister's political skin?

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): I answered that question in my first answer. I indicated I wanted the Members of Parliament to illustrate a genuine concern and to give me the background, the particulars of the case, the mortgage holder, the attempts, the demonstration that the member says he has just shown me in helping people. Members of Parliament have a responsibility to Canadians, as I do. I expect you to help Canadians, as I am attempting to help Canadians.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF SPECIAL PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE

Hon. Bill Jarvis (Perth): What can a member do if a minister will not reply, with all his staff and officials, to five phone calls from someone in a desperate situation like this? I do not want the minister to think I am angry; I am outraged. But that is not going to help people like this; my outrage is not going to help these 800 Canadian families. I should like to ask the minister most seriously, will he consent to a House order later this day, establishing a special committee of the House of Commons, adequately staffed, with full facilities, to commence work this week to respond to the plight of Canadians like Carol Rogmans? Will he consent to that later today?

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Since the middle of August, Madam Speaker, I have indicated I have been attempting to respond to individual cases. I have met with large groups of people submitting petitions on their own behalf and on behalf of other Canadians. I have met with representatives of the industry. I have given advice to the government. More than that, yesterday I offered that if Members of Parliament, in using all of their personal resources, the resources that the Government of Canada and this Parliament gives to them, after using all of the resources of individual members, are unable to get any help from the mortgage holders, who are the people who have the major financial responsibility, my office will attempt to respond to individual Members of Parliament. I expect something more than just a phone call, and something more than just the press clippings that are produced to me, like this one, without any details whatsoever. That is not a genuine attempt.

RENT INCREASES FACING TENANTS

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): My question is also addressed to the minister responsible for housing. The consumer price index shows that tenants are facing the largest rent increases in ten years, and that the worst is yet to come. With vacancy rates at zero in some centres, Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation warns that the average Canadian tenant looking for accommodation in new buildings may face rent increases of 100 per cent over current levels in the next 18 months. In view of the minister's offer to aid personally home owners faced with mortgage renewals, what system does the minister propose to aid tenants hit by sky high rent increases? Will the same opportunities for ministerial assistance to cases brought forward by MPs be extended to tenants as well as property owners?

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): In answer to a number of members I indicated my concern about tenants. In addition to reviewing the problem of rollover situations, I have given advice to the government about the difficulty facing the rental sector, as well as home owners. That advice has been given to the government. When the government presents its total financial plan, its budget to this House of Commons, you will have the opportunity to see what is the government's response.

In addition to that, this government, unlike the previous government, moved to do something about the tight rental situation by giving, for example, tax credits to encourage the construction of new rental accommodation, to take the pressure off the market so as to alleviate the price in the rental market. In addition to this, last year we increased the amount of social housing by 5,000 units, and this year by an additional 2,500 units, unlike the report offered by the previous government of the Right Hon. Joe Clark, that said they should get out of social housing totally.

● (1125)

FORECAST OF DROP IN HOUSING STARTS

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the minister responsible for housing. The minister's top housing bureaucrat, the president of CMHC, said that Canada's growing shortage of rental accommodation will become an even greater crisis than that now faced by property owners facing mortgage renewals. Yet, using the forecast of CMHC, next year the level of housing starts will be 135,000, only 60 per cent of the number required to meet the demand for housing. The minister repeatedly claimed that this year starts will be 170,000. Why is he bragging about underproducing homes by 50,000 starts?

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): On the contrary, Madam Speaker. As I indicated yesterday, one of the first things the government did upon assuming office in recognition of the difficulties ahead was to reintroduce the capital cost allowance to increase the amount of starts in the multiple area. This is why, since the government has taken office, the amount of multiple starts on a quarterly basis has increased in Canada. It is also why during the last month, recognizing even an increased hazard, I have given advice to the government which I hope will be reflected and apparent through the financial plans presented to the House in the budget.

* * *

AIR SAFETY

DUBIN REPORT—REQUEST THAT OFFICIALS BE RELEASED FROM THEIR DUTIES

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport, regarding the Dubin report on air safety. In view of the indictment in yesterday's report that senior transport officials "resist vigorous enforcement action even in the most blatant cases" and have "demoralized the enforcement specialists", and that Justice Dubin specifically asked the minister to intervene directly because there is no confidence whatsoever that existing management will correct the situation, will the minister relieve Mr. Owen, Mr. Arpin and Mr. McLeish of their duties until the minister can show to the Standing Committee on Transport that there is a working or functioning mandate to protect public safety in the air?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I said yesterday the essence of what I believe on that report. It is an excellent one; Volume 2 is an excellent one. I accept the substance of the report, and after discussions with my officials we accept most of the specifics of the report. That is clear.

Another thing I said yesterday was that we would bring up in two or three months' time a progress report on each of the recommendations, or blocks of recommendations, of Justice Dubin. Again it will come out very clearly as to what is to be done. However, there has been a philosophical debate on the spirit of enforcement.

My department in the past has been more lenient, tending toward education, convincing and proselytizing, or whatever one wants to call it. Justice Dubin recommends a much firmer implementation of rules. This is accepted by my department now, and clearly it will be done. But this is not black and white. There are nuances. I suggest my hon. friend read recommendation No. 69 wherein Justice Dubin said:

> The enforcement policy should recognize the respective roles of detection, conciliation and imposition—

It is a question of balance. After having gone slightly too much to that side, we must not go too far to the other side either. That again will be done.

CONDEMNATION OF ADMINISTRATOR

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Madam Speaker, Justice Dubin said that transport quality at headquarters resists enforcement action which has led to unsafe practices. The minister talked about philosophy and nuances. Justice Dubin pointed out such things as aircraft flying in Canada, haywired up with outboard motor gas tanks, and a commercial airline trying to take away a passenger's seatbelt to keep a door shut which was flapping back and forth.

● (1130)

In view of the statement that Mr. McLeish made, to the effect that as long as he is air administrator of Transport Canada he will not change the approach to enforcement, will the minister relieve at least that one official of his duties until he can demonstrate that he is willing to change his attitude, particularly in light of the documentation by Mr. Justice Dubin in his two reports that the administrator has, with full knowledge, allowed unsafe situations to continue to exist?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, my hon. friend reminds me of the gentleman who was travelling on a ship and, upon being told that there was trouble with the engines, decided to go to the captain's cabin and shoot the captain as a safety measure.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Pepin: I do not intend to do that. My department recognizes that mistakes have been made in the past, and it is willing and eager—and the minister will make very sure that this is done—to rebalance the methods of enforcement. This will be done, and very vigorously indeed.

Oral Questions

SCREENING OF LEGAL ACTIONS AGAINST AIR CANADA

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Madam Speaker, I do not know what relevance the shooting of the captain of the ship has to what Mr. Justice Dubin has said. I think it may be more relevant in a parallel situation.

Mr. Justice Dubin's findings that Transport Canada management make safety inspections, and I quote, "ineffective", and has rendered safety analysis, and again I quote, "useless", hardly inspire confidence in the travelling public, particularly myself, as I have to travel from here to northern British Columbia.

On February 20 this year, while the minister was in charge of DOT, his director general of civil aeronautics prevented court action against Air Canada, a Crown corporation, because "this particular case risks serious embarrassment to the minister". That is quoting the director general. Does the minister agree that he should be protected from embarrassment when public safety is involved, or will he make a recommendation to scrap at least the DOT-Air Canada committee's power to screen possible legal actions against Air Canada?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, obviously I do not intend to enter into the details of all the case studies that the judge brought up. My hon. friend is an intelligent man and he knows that in all these matters there are different versions of what really happened. I do not intend to rehash the past. I do not think that it is in the national interest or in the interest of aviation to do that.

The important thing is that, on the basis of the premises, which I am not debating, Mr. Justice Dubin came out with a set of 75 new recommendations added to those in the previous report—on which, by the way, I have already acted in line with what Mr. Justice Dubin recommended. I do not intend to rehash that. I take the recommendations in the report, and that is what is important. These recommendations will be implemented.

* * *

HOUSING

SITUATION OF AHOP HOME OWNERS FACING MORTGAGE RENEWALS

Mr. John McDermid (Brampton-Georgetown): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Public Works who is responsible for CMHC. There are some 6,179 AHOP mortgage renewals coming up in the region of Peel alone. The minister has promised to intervene personally in cases of severe hardship. Can he tell us what his plans are to deal with the AHOP owners who face increases from 8 per cent to 20 per cent on first mortgages, and to 19.75 per cent from nothing on second mortgages. All 6,179 will become due before April of 1982. Can the minister assure us that he will be able to handle all these cases when I refer them to him?

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, the implication of the hon. member's question is related to the undertaking I made in the House yesterday. I would point out, first of all, that I was talking about the interim period, until such time as the government's budget is presented to the House.

I would also indicate to him that last year, one month after assuming responsibility for Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, the first thing I did was to address the situation of those in AHOP who needed additional help. As a result of that, for the last two years we have given increased subsidies to those people under those programs. I recognize the difficulties they are facing. In light of the representation made by those people months ago, and knowing the difficulties they face, I can assure the hon. member that they are people who have been considered, and that forms part of my advice to the government.

ABANDONMENT OF AHOP HOUSES

Mr. John McDermid (Brampton-Georgetown): Madam Speaker, as usual the minister's answer does not solve the problem. I should like to ask him why he has not acted on the AHOP situation when the problems were brought to him well over a year and a half ago? I would advise him not to fall back in his answer on the handout offer of $60 per month which he made to the AHOP people. That is a smokescreen, considering that 40 per cent of the units built in Peel, some 2,737, have already been abandoned as of July 31, 1981.

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, I would be repeating myself if I said that, one month after the difficulty of the AHOP owners was brought to my attention, the government moved to continue the original program which was designed to encourage and assist people of a particular income level to get into home ownership. We did that. I admit that the escalation of interest rates above 20 per cent within the last two months presents a much different picture. As the result of that I have looked at the situation, and have given advice to the government.

I would say to the hon. member that there is another problem with the AHOP program in some areas, and that is the de-escalation of property values. Sometimes this causes people to look at their situation and conclude that, if property values are not going to increase, irrespective of interest rates, they do not want to continue to try to build equity in a property. That is another reason why some people left those programs.

REGISTERED HOME OWNERSHIP PROGRAM

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Public Works who is responsible for housing. Hundreds of young Canadians are today building a fund for their first home through the Registered Home Ownership Program, which has a maximum limit of $10,000, with a maximum contribution of $1,000 per year.

The minister knows that $10,000 would not be enough for a down payment on a home today. Has he made any representations to the Minister of Finance to increase the maximum ceiling in this plan?

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, the point made by the hon. member is one that has been brought to my attention by a number of people in the last couple of months. It is one of many, many representations that have been made to me and to the government.

On the point that the program would not help people at all and would not even provide a downpayment, I would draw the attention of the hon. member that there are some parts of Canada where real estate can be acquired, freehold, at modest prices.

For example, when I visited London last Sunday, I was told that under a community services program there was a large community where the price of homes now for sale is somewhere between $30,000 and $40,000. I would argue that the $10,000 would make a very good start toward a down payment on those types of homes.

REQUEST THAT MAXIMUM PERMISSIBLE LEVEL OF SAVINGS BE RAISED

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the same minister. The points raised by the minister do not answer my question. Secondly, they are certainly the exceptions in Canada. The people who are saving for homes today are costing the government very, very little. I am again asking the minister will he urge the Minister of Finance at least to double the present maximums, which would be more realistic in the light of today's prices for homes, and to provide for a catchup? Let us give the young people a chance to have homes in the future.

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, in response to the question I indicated that I could not, of course, go into the specifics of the advice that I have given to the Minister of Finance. I do not want to deal with specifics. Of course one of the difficulties, or one of the objectives, when giving any particular advice, is that we attempt to respond equitably to all people. For example, I have had questions of difficulties, prospective difficulties, and difficulties now faced by renters; and in all of the advice that we give we have to attempt to provide equity not only in the housing sector but also equity as between people facing problems with housing and those who are facing difficulties with employment, and so on, about whom we have heard.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

THE CONSTITUTION

CHARTER PROPOSALS ON LANGUAGE RIGHTS

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce-Lachine East): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Justice. I was shocked to read this morning that the government might amend and weaken the charter proposals on language rights by making them compatible with Quebec's Bill 101. Would the minister tell the House whether the government intends to back off its proposal with respect to language rights and, if so, what is the justification for such an about face?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Justice and Minister of State for Social Development): Madam Speaker, what the Prime Minister said was that if there is any suggestion to improve on the charter, it will be welcome. What we are trying to do is very simple. We want to make sure that Canadians who speak English and move to Quebec have the right to go to English schools. In return, we want to have the constitutional right, for the first time in the history of Canada, for francophones in the nine other provinces to have their schools. If the words in the charter can be improved, that is fine. The goals are well known. We think it is about time that we had equality in schooling across the land for Canadians who speak English in Quebec and for Canadians who speak French in the rest of Canada.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

• (1140)

LABOUR CONDITIONS

EFFECT OF INTEREST RATES ON UNEMPLOYED WOODWORKERS

Mr. Lyle S. Kristiansen (Kootenay West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. For thousands of unemployed forest industry workers, yesterday's "stand pat" interest rate announced by the Bank of Canada, and predictions of 19.75 per cent stable interest rates for the rest of the year, equal the stability of the grave as Canadian woodworkers face a two-front attack by the Government of Canada. Many of those workers, like tens of thousands of other Canadians, cannot afford to renew their mortgages or build homes because of the government's carbon copy of United States policy, and now they, in their thousands, find themselves thrown out of work as dozens of mills close down, some permanently, again because of government policy and the decline in housing starts.

When is the government going to stop this two-front assault on Canadian woodworkers who now face over 37 per cent unemployment in the western plywood sector, a sector which is 85 per cent dependent upon the Canadian housing market? When is the minister going to recognize the state of emergency which exists in our hundreds of lumber and plywood-based communities, and what is he going to do about it now?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I found one question in the speech which the hon. member made, namely, when are you going to stop the two-pronged attack? I suggest that there is no such two-pronged attack in the policy of the Government of Canada.

Mr. Kristiansen: Madam Speaker, I see that the policy of the government is that, once it has driven woodworkers from their homes and they do not need money for their mortgage payments, it will drive them from their jobs as well.

* * *

FORESTRY

EXPORTS OF LUMBER TO UNITED STATES

Mr. Lyle S. Kristiansen (Kootenay West): My supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. Under Standing Order 43 yesterday I raised the question of mounting pressure in the United States. The governor of Oregon, a number of northwestern Congressmen, and two associations in the American lumber industry are putting pressure on the Reagan administration to impose quotas on imports of lumber from Canada. I would like to know, and thousands of Canadian woodworkers particularly want to know, what response the minister is giving to this matter, and what action he is taking to lobby the Reagan administration to protect our jobs in the United States.

Hon. Herb Gray (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Madam Speaker, we are certainly aware of the situation described by my hon. friend. We are raising this with the American authorities to point out that the Canadian situation does not in any way justify such action. We will be continuing our efforts to do whatever we can to see that it does not take place.

* * *

DISASTERS

DESTRUCTION BY FIRE OF RIVERPORT SEAFOODS PLANT IN NOVA SCOTIA

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Madam Speaker, I, too, wish to direct a question to the hon. Minister of Public Works. On Saturday, September 26, a $20 million fire destroyed the Riverport Seafoods Ltd. plant which employed more than 600 people. The fire also completely destroyed the federal government wharf adjacent to the plant.

I therefore wish to ask the minister, since I immediately informed him of this disaster, whether his officials have as yet completed their surveys of Riverport. Since there is a need for continued docking space for the 23 ships in that area which are company owned, as well as privately owned, and operate out of that port, when does the government plan to rebuild this much needed facility?

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, if, indeed, the hon. member has brought it to my attention, the officials of my department have not as yet brought that matter to my attention. Had the hon. member given me notice of his question today, I could have been in a position to respond to him today; but having now been put on notice of the question, my attempt will be to respond to him this day.

Mr. Crouse: Madam Speaker, I regret that the minister was not informed, because I did notify him on the Monday following the $20 million fire.

Mr. Nielsen: And he doesn't know about it.

ROLE PLAYED BY DEPARTMENT OF FISHERIES AND OCEANS

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Madam Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion, but in his absence I would direct it to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans, since he has a related responsibility in this particular field. Riverport Seafoods Ltd. was a major employer in this area, and there is concern that high interest rates, and a slackening demand for fish in the United States, which is creating extreme difficulties for Canadian exporters, could result in excessive delays in the plant being rebuilt.

I therefore ask the minister, in view of our high unemployment rate, whether any of his officials have been in contact with the management of this company to determine their future plans? If so, has he indicated to them that all possible assistance under his department will be made available, for rebuilding, and what, if anything, was the response?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, I am not acquainted with contacts which have been made on the issue of rebuilding. I know that the question of rebuilding the wharf has been the subject of discussion. We are getting an assessment of the costs and the conditions. I might say to the hon. member that our role in this matter is to advise DREE, if DREE is involved, or other federal departments, as to the availability of fish in order not to increase the overcapacity problem which is pretty general on the east coast.

In spite of the warnings which I have given over the years, companies have expanded beyond what the resource could carry. I am not saying that this is the case concerning Riverport. Obviously, the company will have to make its own decision, and they have not had formal contact with the Department of Fisheries and Oceans, to my knowledge.

AGRICULTURE

CROP DEFICIENCY PAYMENTS TO APPLE GROWERS

Mr. Fred King (Okanagan-Similkameen): Madam Speaker, I must confess that I am having voice problems because I have neglected to eat my apple a day.

Mr. LeBlanc: Watch your Adam's apple.

Mr. King: However, my question is directed to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture. The minister and the parliamentary secretary, if he is present, are very much aware of the hardship which has resulted from months of delay in authorizing deficiency payments to the Canadian apple producers following the disastrous prices achieved for the 1980 crop. They also know that the national average price achieved for the 1980 apple crop was 6.85 cents per pound, which is comparable to 11 cents, the five-year average. In this circumstance will the parliamentary secretary undertake to ensure that the minister fully understands that deficiency payments to Canadian apple producers, under provisions of the Agricultural Stabilization Act, must now be despatched without any further delay?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Acting Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, I must take the question as notice, and I will immediately bring it to the attention of the minister.

An hon. Member: Where is the parliamentary secretary?

Mr. Pepin: I am sure that we will have an answer by three o'clock this afternoon.

DELAY IN MAKING PAYMENTS

Mr. Fred King (Okanagan-Similkameen): Would the hon. gentleman also take the following question to the minister? This question is also directed to that minister, who knows full well that the protracted delay in making stabilization payments to the farmers has been due to outdated methods of calculation, to a large extent. This, together with totally unrealistic tonnage limitations, is responsible for much of the unhappiness which presently surrounds the functioning of the Agricultural Stabilization Act.

Will this question be conveyed to the minister? Will he assure this House, as soon as possible, that active steps are being undertaken to upgrade and update the way in which this act fulfils its role in keeping Canadian agriculture viable?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Acting Minister of Agriculture): Bis, Madam Speaker.

• (1150)

THE ECONOMY

INCREASE IN GOVERNMENT REVENUES

Mr. John Gamble (York North): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance who, on numerous occasions in this House, has indicated very clearly that one of the reasons we are suffering from high interest rates in Canada is increased inflation. He has directly connected the two of them. I wonder if the minister could indicate what part has been played in the government battle against inflation by such government programs as the increase recently in the excise tax in Canada, the proposed increase in the price of postage stamps, beginning in January, and the extraction from the Canadian public over the next 5 years of some $50 billion?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the hon. member has put together in his question a number of separate policies, but obviously he has referred as the main point to the energy agreement between the province of Alberta and other provinces and the Government of Canada, which has obviously resulted in higher energy prices and will continue to have that effect, even though the price in Canada will be lower than world levels. I believe his party certainly has subscribed to the necessity of higher energy prices, for very important national objectives. There is absolutely no doubt about it, that increased energy prices contribute to increases in the cost of living. That is clear. What has happened in other countries is that these energy price increases have been absorbed by the population in an effort to meet the challenge posed by energy price increases in the world.

RATE OF RETURN PAID ON CANADA SAVINGS BONDS

Mr. John Gamble (York North): Madam Speaker, the minister will recognize that in the course of that absorption to which he makes reference, inflation increased, and what we have are three specific illustrations of inflation producing policies of this government. One of the other problems that confront people who are renewing their mortgages, the minister will recognize, is the competition that lending institutions have with respect to the availability of funds. Can the minister tell this House how he has contributed to the availability of funds with respect to lending institutions when he has competed with them by setting a rate of 19.5 per cent for Canada Savings Bonds?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I have already dealt with that question earlier in the session and have recognized that by putting a limit on the amount of CSBs that could be bought by an individual an adverse effect might occur. But since that time mortgage rates have lowered, and I do not regard the CSB rate at the moment as an obstacle to the flow of additional funds into the mortgage market.

[Translation]

AIR TRANSPORT

REQUEST FOR DETAILS ON QUEBECAIR AND REGIONAIR ISSUE IN MANICOUAGAN REGION

Mr. André Maltais (Manicouagan): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. At the opening of the Gagnon airport on October 13 of this year, the people of Gagnon submitted a paper to me and to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport in which they criticized the quality of services provided by Quebecair, and again yesterday the town of Schefferville sent another telegram to the member for Manicouagan, stating that Quebecair had practically stopped all services in that area. Considering the fact that air transport is an essential service in our area, is the Minister of Transport prepared to provide full information on the services of Quebecair and Regionair in the northern towns in the riding of Manicouagan and also on the middle and lower North Shore, and would the Minister of Transport ask the Canadian Transport Commission to check the routes and rates for the type of airplanes used in this area, with a view to preparing specific recommendations for future use, all this in order to assist people who need air transport since there is no alternative means of transportation and air transport is thus an essential service?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, actually I think we have acted in the best interests of the honourable member, who represents a vast territory, by considerably improving local airports. We also have a study on aviation operations on the North Shore which should come out in a matter of days or weeks. As to the representations made by his constituents to me through him I think that they should also be addressed to the Canadian Transport Commission. In fact, I think this was done and subsequently the Canadian Transport Commission held a public hearing in Sept-Îles a few months ago, if I remember correctly. And why go to the commission? Because it is largely up to that body to look after the licences it grants, and when carriers do not operate effectively the commission takes it into consideration when licences are up for renewal and also when granting new licences. So, while the hon. member should certainly continue to listen to the representations of his constituents and pass them on to me, I would suggest that he might concentrate his efforts, and he has done so most of the time, on the Canadian Transport Commission.

* * *

[English]

FISHERIES

MARITIME POLLUTION CLAIMS FUND

Mr. Ted Miller (Nanaimo-Alberni): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans and concerns Bill C-48 and some of the provisions in that bill. The minister is aware of representations from the Canadian Labour Congress, in particular, regarding the Maritime Pollution Claims Fund, which they feel is totally inadequate to compensate fishermen, and recommendations to the minister to have that fund changed in that it should become a first recourse to fishermen. I should like to ask the minister in regard to compensation related to offshore drilling whether he will now make representations to the Minister of Transport regarding the Maritime Pollution Claims Fund, and also to his government, particularly the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, to see that Bill C-48 reflects that concern of fishermen about offshore oil pollution, and that a fund be set up within Bill C-48 that gives compensation firsthand to fishermen, with that fund claimed from the polluters?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, the issue has been one of very considerable communication between the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources and myself. In fact I have given, as an example of the way an enlightened approach could be taken, the pollution claims fund administered by my colleague, the Minister of Transport, where the changes made have gone a very long way to meet the concerns of fishermen and plant workers, and generally to protect those who are earning their living from the sea.

On the question of drilling under the provisions of Bill C-48, again we have had many communications. I think the bill was very substantially improved as a result of those representations and those made by members on both sides of the House. Certainly I will continue to exercise this type of enlightened communication with my colleague, if and when it is required.

NECESSITY FOR FISHERMEN TO TAKE LEGAL ACTION

Mr. Ted Miller (Nanaimo-Alberni): Madam Speaker, those on this side of the House, and particularly members of this party, really do not think there has been very much enlightened discussion on Bill C-48. It still requires court action for fishermen to claim compensation for what has been claimed by a Norwegian study to be inevitable offshore pollution because of oil rigs. I would like the minister to give some idea to the fishermen on both coasts of what his role in C-48 has been. He seems to have been particularly silent. There is no jurisdiction in that bill which gives the fishermen any confidence that the minister of fisheries is really protecting their interests, and the interests of offshore fishermen and shore workers is particularly important to the Atlantic maritime provinces. We would like to see some assurances in Bill C-48 that the compensation fund can be accessible to fishermen for what may be very, very serious economic implications to the fishermen of Canada.

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, the intention of the co-operative approach which I have used, for example, with the Minister of Transport, is exactly to avoid duplication, and in fact to make sure that those who expose the fisheries to industrial dangers are very conscious of what they are doing. Obviously it will take some time before we develop the sort of regime we have in transport by regulation. I think, by use of the claims fund, we have given the fishermen very considerable protection. I will take this approach in the case of Bill C-48, but at no moment have I abdicated my responsibilities under the Fisheries Act, and if I am not satisfied with the protection the fishermen are afforded under the Fisheries Act, there are powers held in reserve.

Madam Speaker: The hon. member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine.

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Madam Speaker, I had a question for the Minister of Veterans Affairs, but he left the House before the end of the question period so I would like to have an opportunity to question him on Monday.

* * *

• (1200)

WESTERN DEVELOPMENT FUND

REQUEST FOR ANNOUNCEMENT

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. He will appreciate the fact that under the energy agreement with the western provinces the government will realize upward of $60 billion over the course of the next five years.

The minister also knows there has been a commitment made by the government to the Western Development Fund, which we now learn has been cut by half, to the amount of $2 billion. People in western Canada have given up on any thought that there will be any money forthcoming. They now have a new appreciation of the meaning of the word eternity.

With respect to the announcement regarding the Western Development Fund, will the minister tell us precisely when we can expect it, and when the consultative process will take place with western governments so there will be an announcement of this paltry sum to western Canada?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I am surprised that the hon. member would describe $2 billion to $4 billion as a paltry sum.

An hon. Member: Where is it?

Mr. MacEachen: I believe that is a good illustration of his sense and how seriously we ought to take him.

An hon. Member: You spend that in a week and a half.

Mr. MacEachen: In direct answer to the question, the parameters of the Western Development Fund were set out in the budget last October. If the hon. member will refresh his memory by looking at the budget he will realize he has misstated the facts in his question today.

I have already indicated that the Western Development Fund is still in existence. If there is to be any further announcement made to change or confirm the fund, it will be done in the budget, as it was done last year.

MONEYS AVAILABLE IN FUND

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): The amount of $2 billion is a substantial amount of money, but it is paltry when compared with the amount of money being taken out of western Canada. That is the point I was making. To use a golfing term, the minister and the government are caught "in a bad lie" with respect to this fund. He knows that. We had estimates tabled in the House of Commons last February indicating $350 million allegedly going to the Western Development Fund. There has been no precision with respect to that amount of money. When may we expect that? Should we expect it during the next fiscal year, or just before the next election?

An hon. Member: The next election.

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I do not understand the hon. member's question when he talks about precision. He might put some precision into his questions so I may answer them.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

* * *

PETITIONS

MR. PAPROSKI—VIA RAIL—CUTBACKS IN PASSENGER SERVICE—TABLING OF REPORT OF CLERK OF PETITIONS

Madam Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the Clerk of the House has laid upon the Table the ninety-first report of the Clerk of Petitions stating that he has examined the petition presented by the hon. member for Edmonton North (Mr. Paproski) and finds that it meets the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

* * *

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Nielsen: I have a point of order, Madam Speaker, which relates to the exchange which took place yesterday between myself and the government House leader with respect to Remembrance Day. Since that time we have had a fairly positive statement by the Minister of Public Works concerning the budget date.

Perhaps the Minister of Finance would stay for a moment. Despite my request that the minister stay to respond to my point of order, Madam Speaker, he has left the House. He is still behind the curtain.

An hon. Member: He is hiding.

Mr. Nielsen: He may be hiding.

Mr. Kempling: He is getting out of the kitchen.

Mr. Nielsen: Perhaps if the Minister of Finance—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. If the hon. member has a point of order he must raise it now, regardless whether the minister is in or out of the House.

Mr. Nielsen: The Minister of Finance obviously heard me raise the point of order and call his name three or four times. Nonetheless, he chose to leave the chamber. My point of order was based on the exchange yesterday between the government House leader and myself with regard to members planning their constituency obligations next week. I know the government House leader cannot give a reply now as to the date of the budget so I will have to put the question again next week. There seems to be a clear indication from the Minister of Public Works that we might have been accommodated since he announced the date of the budget as November 9. I hope that is true.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, the Minister of Finance who is unavoidably absent at this time, is aware that I intend to discuss with him some time during the next few days, the request presented to me recently from the members of the opposition. So I do feel that at one of the upcoming meetings of the House leaders, which are the best place for discussing and deciding on this type of question, I shall be able to report on the matter to the hon. member.

* * *

[English]

PRIVILEGE

MR. FLIS—S.O. 43 MOTION OF MR. BOSLEY

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parkdale-High Park): Madam Speaker, my question of privilege arises out of a motion under Standing Order 43 proposed by the hon. member for Don Valley West (Mr. Bosley). He clearly tried to mislead the House when he said that he had agreement from all three parties on his motion. When I gave him my agreement, it was an agreement from the member representing Parkdale-High Park, because I do have a large Hungarian constituency. I made it very clear to him that he did not have the agreement of all—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. This explanation is not necessary. That motion was dealt with by the House. Since it did not get unanimous consent, we have to consider that it has been dealt with.

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, what I did say was "members of all parties". I did not say "parties".

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

ADVISORY COUNCIL ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN

TABLING OF ANNUAL REPORT

Hon. Judy Erola (Minister of State (Mines)): Madam Speaker, it is my pleasure to table the Annual Report in both official languages of the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women.

* * *

PETITIONS

MR. NYSTROM—VIA RAIL—CUTBACKS IN PASSENGER SERVICE

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Madam Speaker, I ask leave of the House to lay upon the Table a petition signed by some 2,375 people in my constituency, primarily of the city of Melville and the town of Ituna, concerning the discontinuance of VIA Rail on the CNR main line which runs through our constituency. They are asking that the rail line and the passenger service be maintained and also be improved as a service to the people of my constituency.

Madam Speaker: Motions. The hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe; stand. The hon. member for Etobicoke-Lakeshore; stand. The hon. member for Vancouver Quadra; stand. The hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe; stand.

Is the hon. member for Yukon rising on a point of order?

* * *

POINT OF ORDER

MR. NIELSEN—PROCEDURE RESPECTING CALLING OF MOTIONS

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, on a point of order. I have noticed in the last couple of days the Chair has been calling the names of only the three members who have motions standing under this item on the Order Paper, notwithstanding that in two instances there are several items standing in the name of a particular member. For instance, the member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Clarke) has several motions standing in his name. The case is the same with respect to the hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty).

● (1210)

I would not want to see our getting into a practice whereby we simply lump all these items together. In saying this I mean no criticism of the Chair. I know that the Chair wishes to save as much time as possible in trying to lump these motions under a single name, but I believe the practice is that each of the items should be called. If that were the case, then one could follow what the Chair is doing. However, in the case, for instance, of the last four items under the name of the hon.

member for Vancouver Quadra, who is not in the House today, he might wish to rise on one of those, and he would not know on which one to rise. I suggest to the Chair that at least the name of the hon. member in whose name the motion stands should be cited seriatim as we go down the list. I am not suggesting it is necessary to read the whole motion but at least to repeat the hon. member's name so that I and other members can follow the list of the motions seriatim.

[Translation]

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, with due respect, I do not want to make the decision for you but I merely wish to comment on the point raised by my colleague. I believe it would be easy to correct the situation. I know he has no intention of taking the government by surprise and asking the member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Clarke) on Monday or Friday or any other day to move his motion for concurrence of the committee's report and thus bring about a debate. As a result of our talks I understood that the government would be given advance notice, and if that was the case his point of order is irrelevant. You would be given advance notice, Madam Speaker, so that the member for Vancouver Quadra could rise and move the appropriate motion concerning one of the four reports on the Order Paper. So unless it is my colleague's intention to play a trick on the government and take it by surprise, I fail to see how his point of order could be relevant in the circumstances.

[English]

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, the intervention by the government House leader did not deal at all with the point I raised. I am simply suggesting very respectfully to the Chair that the proper practice—it has always been so in the past—is for the Chair to call each of the items in order. In the last couple of days I have noticed that they have been lumped. I do not like to see our getting into loose practices, and I believe they should be called in order.

As far as the comments of the government House leader with respect to tricking the government are concerned, I have been sitting here and taking lessons from him since he has been sitting in the House, and I consider him the expert in the trickery department.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker: As far as I can recall, it would certainly not be the first time that I called a motion in the name of a member, knowing full well that there were three or four motions under that member's name. They have already been grouped. This is a practice I follow almost automatically when motions start to accumulate under a member's name. However, when I call a member's motion, he is perfectly free to say he would like to discuss this or that motion. He may rise and I could then give him the floor. I have no objection to calling the member for Vancouver Quadra four times in succession, if that is the wish of the House, but I felt that having called on the member for Vancouver Quadra, he was perfectly free to say at that time: "Yes, as a matter of fact, I would like to discuss such and such motions listed under my name". I can do that, however, and if he insists, I will!

MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER STANDING ORDER 26

[English]

FORESTRY

UNEMPLOYMENT IN FOREST INDUSTRY

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Madam Speaker, I ask leave, seconded by the hon. member for Kootenay West (Mr. Kristiansen), to move the adjournment of the House under the provisions of Standing Order 26 for the purpose of discussing a specific and important matter requiring urgent attention, namely, skyrocketing unemployment in Canada's forest industry, which has neared the 18 per cent mark and shows no signs of abating, and the shutdowns and lay-offs in the forest industry that are the result of current economic policy, which means disaster for the communities that depend on the forest industry for their livelihood.

Madam Speaker: The hon. member gave me notice of his intention to seek the adjournment of the House to discuss the matter of the high unemployment situation in Canada's forest industry. I must remind the hon. member that applications for debate in similar situations have been made in the past, and in this regard I want to quote one of my predecessor's statements which I extract from Hansard for February 13, 1978 at pages 2786 and 2787. He said, and I quote:

> In terms of individual communities and industries, the Chair has often been in a difficult position when attempting to adjudicate upon these matters because the terms of the Standing Order, as such, are to give leave or an opportunity to hon. members to bring matters of a crisis nature before the House which would not otherwise come before the House. Yet, it is not envisaged that that rule ought to be used to bring what are considered crises from individual constituencies or industries before the House.

In addition, as I said on October 14 last, economic problems are of a continuing nature and do not justify the allowance of debate of an emergency nature. The hon. member is no doubt aware that there are four allotted days remaining in the current supply period. I am sure there will be those opportunities and many others for him to bring this important matter before the House. Therefore, I regret that I cannot comply with the hon. member's application.

* * *

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 2,411, 2,612, 2,706 and 2,803.

Order Paper Questions

[Text]

GRAIN BOXCARS ON CN RAIL LINES

Question No. 2,411—Mr. Malone:

1. (a) Did grain boxcars No. CN-420234, CN-475620, CN-478854, CN-425876, CN-481247, CN-487524 and CN-484457 arrive in Rosalind, Alberta on April 1, 1981 to be filled with grain (b) were they already filled with grain and, if so (i) at what location were they filled (ii) how many miles did they travel from where they were filled to Rosalind, Alberta where they were expected to be refilled?

2. Are full grain boxcars or grain hopper cars on CN rail lines sent to elevator sidings to receive grain to find they are already fully loaded and, if so (a) how frequently and what is the reason for the error (b) is the cost absorbed by the railway company or by the farmers directly (c) is CNR taking measures to alleviate the problem and, if so, what measures?

Mr. Robert Bockstael (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The management of Canadian National Railways advises as follows:

1. (a) Yes.
   (b) Yes.
      (i) Vegreville and Lamont, Alberta.
      (ii) 1,660 miles.
2. (a) Rarely. In this instance the error was the result of elevator and yard congestion at Vancouver. On March 28, the date the cars were switched, Canadian National had 912 loaded cars of grain in Vancouver terminal; the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool elevator was 97 per cent full; and due to the congestion, the day shift placed the seven cars in an empty storage track at the elevator. The night shift, with instructions to lift all empties, placed the seven cars on a train of empties for return movement and spotting in the field. Once the error was discovered, the cars were returned to Vancouver where they were subsequently unloaded on April 11.
   (b) The cost of the extra transportation was absorbed by Canadian National in this case.
   (c) Canadian National is continually striving for the elimination of this type of error.

CONTRACT WITH CANADIAN MEDIA CORPORATION

Question No. 2,612—Mr. Stewart:

Did the Department of National Health and Welfare and the Department of National Defence issue a contract in the amount of $144,000 to Canadian Media Corporation for the acquisition of media time and space and, if so (a) for what purpose (b) what was the total amount of media time and space (c) what was the corporation's commission?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Minister of Supply and Services): The Department of Supply and Services awarded two contracts to Canadian Media Corporation, one on behalf of National Health and Welfare and the second one on behalf of the Department of Labour for the acquisition of media time and space.

(a) (i) for the purchase of media time and space in support of Canada-France agreement on social security advertising program.

(ii) for the purchase of media time and space in support of the National Plan of Action advertising program.

(b) (i) $16,000 for the placement of print advertisements in support of the Canada-France agreement on social security.

(ii) $128,000 for the airing of television commercials in support of the National Plan of Action advertising program.

(c) (i) None.

(ii) None.

CONTRACT WITH FIELD AVIATION LTD.

Question No. 2,706—Mr. McKinnon:

Was Field Aviation Limited, Toronto granted a contract for $4,200,000 to repair and overhaul aircraft components and accessories and, if so, which components and in what number?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Minister of Supply and Services): Yes. Field Aviation Limited was awarded a contract in the amount of $4,200,000 to furnish the following services to DND during the period April 1, 1981, to March 31, 1984.

(a) Preparation of major equipment allotted to Aircraft Maintenance Development Unit (AMDU) Trenton, Ontario, for storage at AMDU or its storage site, Mountainview, in accordance with CFTO C-05-010-009/AM-000.

(b) Preservation of major equipment for storage.

(c) Removal of major equipment for storage.

(d) Removal and/or replacement of aircraft and aero-engine components, parts and assemblies from major equipment in storage.

(e) Performance of work related to or associated with execution of above tasks as directed by the commanding officer, AMDU. Such work will be, in the main, performed by personnel who are on standby status pending completion of trial flights or awaiting completion of work, rectification of snags, or supply of replacement aircraft parts or components found unserviceable upon removal of aircraft from storage.

(f) Support to aircraft maintenance as directed by NDHQ, Director of Aerospace Support Engineering.

CONTAINER TRAIN SERVICE FROM PORT OF HALIFAX

Question No. 2,803—Mr. Crosby:

1. Does the Canadian National Railways operate special trains to carry container boxes from the container loading facilities in the port of Halifax to destinations in Montreal and beyond and, if so, what is the size and specifications of the trains?

2. (a) For each year 1978 to 1980, what was the frequency of the service (b) will such frequency be maintained or increased in 1981 and, if not, what is the reason for any decrease?

3. Are steps being taken by CNR to ensure that the service will be maintained in the future if Dart Container Lines leaves the port of Halifax and the volume of container traffic decreases and, if so, what are such steps?

4. Is the government aware of any action that can be taken by shippers or others to ensure that CNR does not decrease the frequency of the service and, if so, what is such action?

Mr. Robert Bockstael (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The management of Canadian National Railways and Transport Canada advise as follows: 1. No special trains are operated for this traffic. High speed freight trains scheduled on a six-day per week basis handle container and other time sensitive traffic. If necessary, additional scheduled trains are operated to handle excess traffic.

2. No special trains were operated for container traffic during the noted time period. The frequency of the scheduled trains was maintained.

3. Subject to demand, the present scheduled service will be maintained.

4. CN Rail mainline freight services are designed to accommodate traffic being offered in a timely and efficient manner. As long as shippers maintain the current level of traffic between Halifax and Montreal, CN Rail will not consider cutbacks in its freight service schedules. The government is not aware of any other action that can be taken to assure the current frequency of service if traffic volumes are not maintained.

[English]

Mr. Smith: I ask, Madam Speaker, that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Madam Speaker: Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADA OIL AND GAS ACT

MEASURES RESPECTING OIL AND GAS INTERESTS

The House resumed, from Thursday, October 22, consideration of Bill C-48, to regulate oil and gas interests in Canada lands and to amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on National Resources and Public Works, and Motion No. 17 (Mr. Waddell).

Mr. Deans: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order on a matter Your Honour may wish to consider over the weekend. I am referring specifically to the revised notes Your Honour prepared respecting motions to be put to the House in relation to Bill C-48. The practice, apparently, has been, under normal circumstances when questions have been grouped together, to put one of the motions and hold the balance over.

The example I give is that the grouping was Motions Nos. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13 and on. The ruling was that Motions Nos. 8, 9 and 10 seemed to offer alternatives and would be put to the House as follows: the question would be put on Motion No. 8; and affirmative vote makes it unnecessary for the House to decide on Motions Nos. 9 and 10; a negative vote necessitates the putting of the question on Motion No. 9.

I raise this point because at some subsequent date we will be taking the standing votes on a number of different motions related directly to Bill C-48. If we were to pursue the practice of receiving yeas and nays on only one of the votes, as we did last night, and not receiving yeas and nays on the subsequent votes, we would then be required, in the middle of taking the standing vote, to stop the process and to receive yeas and nays for subsequent votes which would, I put it to Your Honour, delay or at least extend the period of time for taking the vote, perhaps unnecessarily. It would also make it extremely difficult for the House leaders to sit down at some point between now and the day the recorded votes are taken and to decide on standing votes on some motions but perhaps not on others in order to expedite the business of the House.

I would like to ask if over the weekend Your Honour would consider as an alternative in matters such as this, where there is a large number of votes, that the yeas and nays be taken in every instance and that it then be recorded as to whether there is to be a standing vote subsequently. Then we would know for sure when we enter into our discussions which of the votes are to be recorded and which of the votes may in fact not need to be recorded, so that we can sort out the business of the House in a more expeditious way.

● (1220)

Madam Speaker: I am not sure that would expedite matters, but I am willing to look at the suggestion of the hon. member and study it. If the House leaders agree, we can perhaps study the procedure the hon. member is suggesting and comply with it, but it will have to be looked at very closely.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Madam Speaker, last night I gave a preview of my speech. Now comes the speech. I called Bill C-48 a sleeper. By and large the press and the public of Canada have ignored this debate. They have been preoccupied with the Constitution and their own individual economic concerns, usurious interest rates when they have to renew their mortgages. I understand that. However, there is no point in assuring the political future of Canada through a new Constitution without ensuring an increase in domestic ownership of the energy sector of this country. That is the key for our future.

Today I want to begin the debate on the Canadianization parts of Bill C-48. These clauses of the bill lie at the heart of the National Energy Program. They are the ones under a barrage of unparalleled criticism from our American friends. I want to tell the government on behalf of our party, and indirectly the United States government, that the objectives of the National Energy Program will get our support, and I think public support, provided the legislation is tightened up to fully reflect that. These objectives need to be spelled out. I will get to that in a few minutes.

I regret to say there has been evidence in the last few days that the Canadian government is backing off the National Energy Program and its objectives under American pressure. Yesterday we heard from the responsible government agency that there is a loosening up of the rules of Canadian ownership. Yesterday in Washington the American administration laid out quite clearly to Congress their objectives in dealing with Canada over these provisions. They said three things. First, they want Canada to end the discriminatory grant system. Second, they want Canada to stop the takeovers of American firms in the energy area. Third, they want Canada to rein in the Foreign Investment Review Agency. I am sorry to say the Americans are winning this game of pressure. All one has to do is read the speech made last week by the American Ambassador to Canada, who said FIRA was reined in.

What is happening behind the scenes and is perhaps not reflected in the House in day to day questions is that there was planned by cabinet what I call an NEP II. It was to be in the budget, but it is gone. We are not going to have an industrial strategy through an expanded FIRA which would really be the NEP II.

What we are going to see time and time again over the next few months is the government backing off those principles outlined in the National Energy Program. It is a pity. I want to talk a bit about those principles. The first principle is domestic Canadian control of the energy industry. Why do Canadians want this? My amendment is related to this because it substantially increases not ownership, but Canadian control of the energy industry.

Canadians want this for a number of reasons. They do not like the predatory practices of the oil companies. This is not just the ravings of some far-out, left-wing socialist radical. The evidence is all here in government reports in Canada and in books written internationally over the past five years. The Bertrand report showed price-fixing and predatory practices over a period of years. We are not surprised at the Stoner commission hearings now going on. The oil company lawyers express outrage. The evidence is strong. This is not new. I refer to Anthony Sampson's book "The Seven Sisters" published some time ago. He is a distinguished international author. The book shows the same practices having been continued internationally over the past 50 years.

Canadians want to control their own energy industry. They want to stop those predatory practices. The Canadian people want to control their own energy industry because they want to stop the outflow of capital. The argument is often made that the involvement of foreign companies in our oil sector has been a much needed source of foreign capital. That argument is a myth. Since the 1974 increase in oil prices, there have been capital exports. The industry started the capital outflows approach with $2.1 billion between 1975 and 1979. If dividends and interest payments were added, the total outflow goes to $3.7 million in that period. These are not my figures but figures from page 17 of the National Energy Program which show that we have been exporting capital.

Third, Canadians feel that decisions that affect the basis and scope of development should be made in Canada, not abroad. A good example is the Hibernia, which is being developed and is about ready to go. What a tragedy that the decisions will basically be made in New York, because Mobil has the leases and control of Hibernia. Canadians want those decisions made in Canada, not in New York or Houston.

Another reason Canadians want domestic control of the energy industry is that under the present system we lose the research and development technology. Last year in the House of Commons the hon. member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent) showed by letters and documents that Imperial Oil is sending all its research on the tar sands projects to its parent, Exxon in New York. We have research in heavy oil and tar sands. It is the forerunner of that kind of development in the world. What do we do? We allow the foreign-controlled company to send all the exclusive contracts in research and patents to its parent in the United States.

These kinds of practices have to stop. The evidence is there. I have cited some of it. One would have to be blind to miss it, and the Canadian people are not blind. They may be preoccupied, but they are not blind.

The second principle in the National Energy Program which is good is that there be a substantial public presence. Petro-Canada is very popular in this country. Just ask the Conservative party. You can look further, at the polls. Individual MPs send out questionnaires or householders to their constituents. I send them to the people in Vancouver-Kingsway. I asked my constituents what they thought of Petro-Canada and government involvement in the oil industry. By far the results showed that the people like Petro-Canada. They want a government oil company and they want it to be active and expanded. An article the other day in The Globe and Mail reported that sales by Petro-Canada are up in the stations they have taken over in western Canada, Pacific Petroleums. In eastern Canada they will soon be putting the Petro-Canada signs on Petrofina stations. When they do that, Mr. Speaker, the people will receive their Petro-Canada credit cards and sales will go up. People support this. This is important for us to understand.

• (1230)

But this government—and this is where we differ from them—has not followed this principle through.

An hon. Member: Where do you differ from them?

Mr. Waddell: My friend asks me where we differ from them. I will put it very specifically. What the government and the bill will do is take large American companies and replace private companies with large Canadian companies. In other words, they will take the Rockefellers and the Mellons of the United States and replace them with the Blacks and the Blairs of Canada. I must say Conrad Black wrote me a nasty letter after my last speech in the House of Commons, but I still think he is distinguished. I am sure Mr. Blair will write me a letter after this speech, but I think he is distinguished too. The pricing decisions they take will not be any different from those of the large American firms or large Canadian firms.

When Bob Blair of Nova Corporation and these other companies get control of the production of oil in Canada, as they will through the National Energy Program and through this bill. They have control of the pipelining. When they get control of the refining, then they will be in a position to influence the distribution and price. This is exactly what the Rockefellers and Mellons did in the United States. It is exactly the pattern, and we will have the same kind of pattern in Canada.

An hon. Member: You would rather have Marc Lalonde running it.

Mr. Waddell: I do not want to have Marc Lalonde running it. I would like to see an increased role for—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. It is the practice of the House that members refer to other members of the House by their constituencies, or in the case of cabinet ministers by their functions.

Mr. Waddell: Someone asked me if I liked Lalonde running it. I was not referring to the minister; I was referring to the name. I would be pleased if I could continue with my speech.

Since the introduction of the National Energy Program in the budget of October, 1980, with its grants and incentives to Canadian-owned companies, there have been a number of corporate takeovers and reorganizations that have taken place in this country. For example, there is Petrofina, Hudson's Bay, Aquitaine, Great Basin, Shell and so on. There have been some changes. Of the $6 billion in takeover costs, the Canadian ownership has increased by only 3.5 per cent. Canadian ownership of Canadian oil and gas production has increased, after all that action and everything that was promised, by only 3.5 per cent to 34.8 per cent. This means our oil and gas industry is still over 65 per cent foreign-owned. No other industrialized country in the world, Mr. Speaker, would permit that kind of situation.

My distinguished and hon. friend to my immediate right asks me what we would do. Let me tell him what the social democratic alternative would be. We would make Petro-Canada number one in the industry. We would operate it in a different way so that Petro-Canada is the leader in the industry. For example, we would try to protect small Canadian business by having Petro-Canada supply independents with gasoline. There would not be any price gouging. We would not appoint Liberal hacks to the board of directors or any hacks. On the board of directors we would have representatives of small business, representatives of the consumer and representatives of environmental interests and of native interests, so that Petro-Canada would be unlike the other oil companies. Also, there would be a substantial role for Petro-Canada in operating with northern native people in taking over and controlling some of the properties that may eventually be transferred in partnership with Petro-Canada and some of the native corporations I expect to be set up when land claims are settled. This is in fact a different way of approaching the issue.

Another principle in the National Energy Program is that there be an industrial strategy with real energy security tied into the whole program. Canadians want the benefits derived from energy development to stay in Canada.

The stakes in the energy play are simply enormous. I quote from an article in today's Globe and Mail by R. Donald Pollock. Mr. Pollock is chairman of the industrial policies committee of the Science Council of Canada. He says that in 1980—and he is talking about these stakes—

> —the net income of the petroleum industry in Canada accounted for almost 30 per cent of the total net income of all non-financial industries—up from 17 per cent in 1972. The figure is expected to go above 40 per cent by 1990. Unless Canada can reduce the level of foreign ownership in this sector, foreign firms will have the cash-flow from Canada's petroleum resources to acquire even larger sections of the Canadian economy or to ship out profits on a massive scale.

There it is put rather succinctly. If we do not have that control in Canada, we will see ourselves open to a capital strike, which we have seen. When my friends on the right get up and talk about rigs going south, that is a capital strike. All the lobbyists and pressure on the government, the price pressure on oil, results basically from foreign companies taking capital out of Canada. What kind of energy security or energy strategy is that if we are always going to be prone to having that happen any time a government wants to have a program? I say that Canadian private industry is quite prone to invest their capital abroad too if they do not like the Canadian energy policy. The Blairs and the Blacks will take all the benefits for a little while, and then when they do not like the policy, when there is something that conflicts with their own private profit, they will take their money out too.

This is why we must have more public ownership. We do not have to have public ownership of everything; I am not advocating that. But we have to have a mix. We have to have public ownership as number one.

Mr. Andre: You sound like a bricklayer in East Berlin.

Mr. Waddell: My friend from Calgary Centre (Mr. Andre) should listen to my speech, as I listened to his speech.

An hon. Member: What a joke!

Mr. Waddell: Then he might learn something.

Mr. Kempling: You cannot take it.

Mr. Waddell: My friend from Hamilton as well. My friend from Hamilton is bigger that I am, so I do not want to insult him too much!

Let me tell my two hon. friends and my hon. friends opposite what other countries have done. There was always an outrage in the committee when I raised the point of why Canada cannot do the same. Oh, we cannot do that for all kinds of reasons. It would hurt the industry. The government could not do that. It would be like the post office. We are talking about the energy industry and suddenly we get the post office. Look what Great Britain has done. The British National Oil Corporation first claimed 51 per cent share in all oil production and it negotiated the purchase of it at market prices. This was the corporation that was in effect nationalized by Winston Churchill—

An hon. Member: Pardon?

Mr. Waddell: —that great radical socialist. That is true. My hon. friend should look at the history of it. It was Anglo-Iranian. I will pass it on to my friend.

An hon. Member: The British National Oil Corporation is a different company.

Mr. Waddell: The British national oil industry offers participation to joint venture partners, including foreign-owned firms, but retains control of all projects. In Norway, Statoil, the government oil company, can take up to a 70 per cent interest in any block of land it does not already hold. Statoil takes this interest after a find, but before development, and makes no payment for past exploration expenses. Compare this to the Canadian regime we are debating.

In Australia, foreign companies are allowed to explore, but only Australian and naturalized foreign investors are allowed to produce energy resources. To qualify as naturalized, a foreign company must have 25 per cent of its equity owned by Australians, a majority of Australians on its board of directors, and a public commitment to increase Australian equity to 51 per cent. I will deal with the Canadian situation in a minute, but this is one example at which to look.

• (1240)

Mexico nationalized its oil industry in 1938. It does not have to fiddle around with PIP grants and so on. In fact, it controls its industry fully. But one must be realistic; this will not happen in Canada at the moment. However, there is room for a great deal of expansion of public ownership. I think the government would find that there is a great deal of support among Canadians for it.

Let us look now at Canada. The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) said in New York on November 18, 1980:

> Do you suppose that a party proposing to reduce foreign control—
>
> He meant foreign ownership.
>
> —to 50 per cent within ten years would be regarded as anything but cautious to a fault?

Canada is cautious to a fault. We are going for a 50 per cent ownership by 1990. It will not be controlled, not public, but private ownership by 1990 and Petro-Canada will have a 25 per cent carried interest in Canada lands only. The previous owners are to be compensated for this back-in. This is the great radical policy about which our friends to the south are worried and about which our friends to the right get sick.

I should like to give an example of why Bill C-48 is so weak. I gave this example once before. I asked the government to reply to it or to deny it. I asked the minister in committee whether he agreed with it, and he said, "Yes". This is under the provisions of Canadianization. If Imperial Oil and Petro-Canada were to go into a joint scheme, we would see in development in the north and offshore all these schemes under this new program. The reason for going into it is that they want the grants; there is a grant system. I will deal with the grant system in a minute. They want some very rich government grants. If my friends want capitalism, why do we have all these government grants?

Mr. Andre: They do not want it.

Mr. Waddell: The reason for government grants is that the industry will not go into the area without receiving these huge grants.

Let me look first at how one qualifies for the grants and at the example of Imperial Oil and Petro-Canada entering into a project together, 50-50. We must remember that 70 per cent of Imperial Oil is owned by Exxon, the largest corporation in the world, a large multinational oil company. I use the example of Petro-Canada because it is owned 100 per cent by the Canadian government, it being the Canadian government oil company. If there were to be 100 shares in this consortium of Imperial Oil and Petro-Canada, Imperial Oil would take one half and Petro-Canada would take the other half. I said that Imperial was approximately 70 per cent foreign owned, which means approximately 30 per cent Canadian owned. If the Americans laid claim to the 50 shares taken by Imperial, they would get 70 per cent of the 50 shares, which would be 35 shares—and they would be classified as foreign shares—and the remaining Canadian portion would be 15 shares, which would be called Canadian. If we add that to the 50 shares of Petro-Canada which of course are all Canadian, then we have a project which is deemed to be 65 per cent Canadian owned. This is a Canadian ownership consortium, but in fact it is 50 per cent Canadian controlled and 50 per cent foreign controlled.

I should like to give a second example; the previous one was just a warm-up! This one will show how bad and how phony the system is. Let me take the case where Imperial Oil goes in with 70 per cent. It could be Shell, Gulf, Texaco or any foreign company. If they were put in for 70 per cent and Petro-Canada or any small wholly-owned Canadian company was put in for 30 per cent, this group would receive a production licence and grants and it would be called Canadian owned.

I will indicate how it works. Imperial Oil is 70 per cent owned by Exxon, so 70 per cent of the shares would be 49 shares or 49 per cent. These would be classified as foreign. The Canadian content of Imperial would be 30 per cent of the 70 shares which is 21 shares or 21 per cent. Petro-Canada or the small Canadian company which is in for the other 30 per cent would be all Canadian owned. It would receive 30 shares. In this project in which Imperial has 70 per cent of the action, under this scheme and this bill, 49 per cent would be foreign-controlled and 51 per cent would be Canadian controlled. This in fact is a foreign controlled play. This is Canadian ownership, and Imperial owns 70 per cent of that particular play. It is a sham, it is a fraud, it is an illusion. I would not call it Canadianization; I would call it "Lalondization".

The government has gone to the Canadian public to try to put two things over on it. One illusion is that suddenly we are taking under public control the Canadian oil industry. As I asked last night, what is the biggest oil company in Canada? What is the biggest Canadian oil company? It is not Petro-Canada; it is Dome Petroleum. It is being put into private hands and the so-called Canadianization of the Canadian north is a shell game. We will have consortiums which look like they are Canadian but in fact are foreign controlled. This is the point of Motion No. 17.

I said that I would talk about the grant system. I want to say something about it before I conclude. It is very important to look at that system. In the past the Liberal government has used the taxpayer and the consumer to finance multinational expansion in Canada and their takeover of our energy industry. It was done by welcoming them in with virtually no controls and by giving them grants, write-offs, depletions, superdepletions and every kind of grant that we cannot get in our taxes but that these oil companies got over the past 20 years. Now the Liberals will make the taxpayer and the consumer pay to finance the buying back of the industry, not into public hands but primarily into private ones.

I should like to tell the House about these grants. I have outlined how one can get around being called a Canadian company. If one is a Canadian company, one can receive grants of up to 93 cents on every dollar in order to explore. It seems to me this is an incredible amount. For every dollar the company spends, there could be up to an 80-cent grant and another 13 cents in tax breaks. What do we receive for this? We receive a 25 per cent Petro-Canada interest. For that kind of giveaway 25 per cent goes to Petro-Canada. We get some taxes and royalties but basically we give out billions on grants.

What kind of system is this? Under the grant system we will give a 65 per cent Canadian-owned oil company in 1981 one dollar for every four it spends on frontier exploration. What equity will the taxpayer receive in return? As I said, Petro-Canada will receive a 25 per cent share of the exploration agreement and bears its proportion of the expenses as work progresses. If the well is shown to be capable of production before 1983, Petro-Canada must pay compensation for a share of the expenses prior to 1981.

● (1250)

Through the new grant system taxpayers put up over four times the amount the company does for exploration on Canada lands but receive only a one quarter interest in the project. For example, if the government puts up $40 million for a project, it receives a 25 per cent ownership, whereas the private company puts up $10 million and receives a 75 per cent ownership.

When the grant system is combined with tax breaks in the income tax system, the largesse for the private sector, provided at public expense, is even greater. The maximum benefit for a Canadian-owned company is an after tax and grant cost of only seven cents on every dollar spent on exploration.

If multinational companies actively engage in exploration they are better off under the NEP. Under the old tax system their after tax cost was 37 cents on each dollar spent. Now, under the tax system combined with the minimum grant, their cost is only 28 cents on the dollar when exploration is done on Canada lands.

I could cite figures until you become tired, Mr. Speaker, but I think I have made my point. I have said that the nuts and bolts of the National Energy Program do not live up to its objective and, in my book, this is misleading to the Canadian people. It seems to me that we suffer from a singular lack of vision in this country. We are still a colony. This American pressure on the limited National Energy Program is a good example of that. I gave examples of what other countries have done which show that we are a colony. We are afraid to take action. We need a new Constitution but we also need a crusade, as it were, to get control of our own economy.

I am sorry that the government is going to back away from expanding FIRA, from an NEP II and from an industrial strategy. This is the key sector of our economy.

I referred earlier to Anthony Sampson's book "The Seven Sisters" and I should like to conclude my remarks by quoting what he said at page 311:

> For the West's dependence on energy is now so fundamental and so expensive in terms of investment, that the planning and forecasting cannot be left primarily in the hands of private corporations.

That was his conclusion after a study of the industry. I say that the light of the evidence I have cited today with regard to the petroleum monitoring agency, the flawed grant system, the Bertrand report, the public opinion study—just about everything that has been written about the industry—calls for the government to have enough vision to make sure that Canadians gain control of this industry through the public sector, by and large led by Petro-Canada with the involvement of provincial Crown corporations and the small independent producers in western Canada.

If that mix were put together and this bill were amended to delete the loopholes and incredible giveaways, then there would be some justice for the Canadian people and the Canadian people would respond.

Mr. Harvie Andre (Calgary Centre): Mr. Speaker, the remarks of the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) were full of so many inaccuracies and contain so much false information and such absurdities that it would take the rest of the afternoon to straighten out the facts, and I do not know how long it would take to get that party to believe the facts.

The hon. member criticized the grant system. I must say that this party agrees with him on that. If he would like to get together with us to see if we can find a way to get the government to drop this absurd grant system and go back to a tax-based system under which individuals knew the rules and could make decisions, rather than having a bunch of civil servants processing the grants, then we might make some progress.

When the hon. member criticized the grant system, I wonder whether he was aware of just how badly it is being administered by the government to which he wants to give even more authority. Is he aware that last fall when the PIP program was announced, a number of small independent Canadian oil companies went to the government to see what they should do about the new program because they wanted to get on with exploration. They wanted to know then they would get the grants, and they were told by the assistant deputy minister of energy, mines and resources that it would be about next May. Consequently, a number of them borrowed money from their banks and then drilled exploratory wells, but they are still waiting for the grants, Mr. Speaker.

This government to which the hon. member wants to give more authority has not yet figured out how to work the system. The bankers are clamouring for their money; they are laying off staff; their employees are moving to Denver. The Denver immigration office has stated that it has hundreds and hundreds of applications from Canadian oil men—these are not these big, ugly multinationals but Canadian citizens—who are being driven out of this country by the National Energy Program, with its bureaucratic controls and grant system. Yet the hon. member wants to give the government more control. How many Canadians would that drive to Denver? How many individuals who would like to stay in Canada is he prepared to see move to Denver before he will give up the absurd notion of turning more power over to the government?

Mr. Ouellet: Do you have the names of all these people? Produce them.

Mr. Andre: The minister is talking now. I know that these are only western Canadians. I realize that they are not real Canadians. Most of them are from the west and therefore are of no concern to a man of his stature.

Mr. Ouellet: A point of order, Mr. Speaker. I think the hon. member is very unfair. I asked him to give us evidence and a list of the names of these people who are lining up in Denver. He accuses the hon. member who spoke ahead of him of making a number of false assertions but I think he is even more inaccurate. I resent very much being told that I do not care for Canadians who live in other parts of Canada.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. minister does not have a point of order. He will have an opportunity to intervene in the debate and answer.

Mr. Ouellet: A question of privilege, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member has made his point. The hon. member for Calgary Centre (Mr. Andre).

Mr. Andre: I will be pleased to bring in a newspaper clipping at two o'clock which gives the man's name.

Mr. Ouellet: A newspaper clipping!

Mr. Andre: It is a Mr. Jim Davis of the U.S. immigration office.

Mr. Ouellet: Oh, come on!

Mr. Andre: What kind of proof does the minister need? As a matter of fact I may be able to find a personal example. On Wednesday evening a number of people who came from Hungary originally were in town to celebrate the anniversary of the Hungarian uprising. Some of them had settled in Calgary at that time and had done rather well in the oil business. I talked to three who own individual companies and they have all moved 75 per cent of their business to Denver. They felt that they had been run out of Hungary and are now being run out of Canada and they do not want to go. The evidence is there for anyone who is prepared to look.

The hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway said that we need more control. This shows that he does not know anything about the oil industry. It is the most controlled and regulated industry in Canada. You cannot get a piece of land, you cannot drill a well, you cannot run seismics, you cannot bring on production, you cannot put in a pipeline, you cannot put in a refinery, you cannot put in a service station—you cannot do a single thing without getting a government licence or permit. There is nothing left to control. The government controls everything now.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order please. It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At one o'clock the House took recess.

[English]

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. When the House rose at one o'clock, the hon. member for Calgary Centre (Mr. Andre) had the floor.

Mr. Andre: Mr. Speaker, in concluding my remarks at one o'clock, I was pointing out to the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway that when it comes to control, every single aspect of the oil and gas industry is under government control. There is nothing that a company or an individual can do which does not require government authorization of one form or another. Whether it is in leasing the land, drilling a well, running seismics, putting in pipelines or whatever, the government is in total control. The only freedom which is still left is the freedom to decide whether they are going to make an investment or not. That is the only freedom left. An individual or a collection of individuals gathered in a corporation still have that freedom in Canada. They can consider the rules. They can decide whether it is attractive enough, and they can assess the risk and decide whether or not to make the investment.

The fact that they have that freedom is what offends the New Democratic Party. It says that in exercising that freedom, some of them are deciding to go to Australia or the United States, that it is terrible that they have that freedom, that they should not be allowed to have the freedom to invest their money where they want, and that an end should be put to that freedom by nationalizing them all. In essence, that is what the New Democratic Party is saying. It is the kind of mentality which East Germany had prior to building the wall in East Berlin to keep people from exercising their freedom by leaving and walking across the border.

The New Democratic Party calls it a capital strike. Well, if an employee does not like the conditions in a company and he quits to go to work for another company, he has not gone on strike; he has simply quit. He is exercising his individual freedom. A strike is something else again. As a result of the NEP, the oil industry is exercising its freedom; freedom which, hopefully, it will not have taken away, if we are to call ourselves a free and democratic country.

Before lunch the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Ouellet) was asking me to provide some proof about what is happening in terms of money and people crossing the border. I would say that he would have to be blind not to have seen what is happening in Canada. If he wants the opinion of the Governor of the Bank of Canada, I ask him to read some of the Governor's speeches which point out that the exodus of billions of dollars, which is responsible for our high interest rates in large measure, is a result of the NEP, which is another interesting paradox, if you will.

The New Democratic Party spent a good deal of time this week saying interest rates are too high, outrageously high; and we agree, they are outrageously high. Then the party spent the rest of the period today saying, "We want more of the same that caused the interest rates to be high; we want more of that kind of activity", which, according to the Governor of the Bank of Canada, is responsible for our interest rates being two or three points above those in the United States.

The minister asked me to provide proof. I have in my hand an article from the Calgary Sun, dated October 6, 1981, which quotes from the Denver Post. It states:

—U.S. immigration is now processing 'literally hundreds' of requests for work permits from Canadian oilmen.

The Post quotes Jim Hardin—

I believe I previously said Jim Davis before; I apologize.

The Post quotes Jim Hardin, a Denver U.S. immigration official, as saying: "There's been a big rush in the past year . . . we've never had anything quite like it."

There has never been anything quite like it in Denver, this mass exodus of Canadian citizens to the U.S. This is occurring because the Canadian government has made it unattractive for them to pursue their trade, to use their talents, to use their skills here in Canada, even while claiming it wants us to be self-sufficient. I do not consider that a strike; I consider that to be people exercising their freedom. I know a lot of them personally, and I know they are not going there because they consider Denver a better place to live than Calgary, Edmonton, Red Deer, or wherever they came from. They are going there because they want to make a living. The Canadian government, through its policies, has said, "We are not interested in the talents you have to offer; fend for yourselves".

Mr. Waddell: Alberta has accepted the NEP.

Mr. Andre: The hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway talked about the big, ugly multinationals. I want to read him a story contained in a newspaper which he should accept as being of high credibility, the Toronto Star, dated October 18, 1981, a column by Irv Lutsky. It reads as follows:

Here is what Larry Darling, president of Concept Resources Ltd., says in the company's latest annual report: "At this time we wish to thank the Liberal Government of Canada for its National Energy Policy.

"Without this policy, Canadian enterpreneurs might have stayed only in Canada and thus would have missed the international opportunities the Liberals so much wanted them to find elsewhere.

"Without this new energy policy, Canada could not have been self-sufficient in oil by 1990. We are now assured of success—the same success we have with the Canadian Post Office, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, Canadian National Railways and Mirabel Airport.

"On a smaller scale, without this policy, Concept would not have found the Givans and Cowans wildcat wells. We would not have opened our offices in Denver and Billings (Mont.). Finally, had it not been for the Canadian government, we would not have discovered the Hailstone Dome oil field in Montana.

"Thank you, Pierre Elliott Trudeau and your Liberal party followers, for your help and assistance in furthering our cause for free enterprise."

● (1410)

The hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway applauds the 25 per cent confiscation of privately held lands north of 60 and offshore. Let me quote him a letter from a Canadian-owned small oil company, one he is supposedly interested in. This is a letter to the hon. Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) which states as follows:

Dear Sir,

Paramount Resources Ltd. is a Canadian independent which has been active in the lands defined as Canada lands in the recent National Energy Policy. Paramount, as operator for a consortium of Canadian companies and individuals, has operated four drilling ventures over the past two years at a total cost of over ten million dollars, perhaps not a large expenditure when compared to expenditures in the Beaufort and East Coast regions, but certainly significant from our standpoint. The program consisted of one well at Liard D-29 costing about $8,000,000 and three wells at Cameron Hills near Hay River, Northwest Territories which cost about $750,000 each.

The Government of Canada has in place a program called The Northern Mineral Exploration Assistance Regulations (SOR) 66-404 as amended. Before initiating each program, our company applied for a grant pursuant to these regulations but were advised the program was not funded and therefore no money would be available. The Liard D-29 well went considerably over budget but we proceeded anyway. By March 1980, we had expended about $5,000,000, the threshold expenditure for obtaining superdepletion allowances exactly at the time when the superdepletion allowances were cancelled. It is our understanding that we will receive no superdepletion allowances.

In each drilling venture, Paramount earned their interest from a foreign owned company, thus increasing Canadian ownership in these frontier areas. The four wells were only modestly successful resulting in two gas wells at Cameron Hills. The royalty rate, when we began our program, which we considered to be applicable was ten percent.

On October 28, 1980, the Government of Canada has seen fit to confiscate twenty-five percent of the interest we have earned, and paid for at great expense, with no restitution or compensation whatever. Apparently this government will allow Paramount to continue to pay one hundred percent of the costs of developing and maintaining this property until the property is ready to be placed on production. In addition, this government has indicated they will take forty percent of the profits of a fifty percent additional interest. As well, this government placed an additional eight percent tax on any revenue from this property. All of this was done, we understand to "Canadianize".

If Paramount was a foreign corporation, we might be enraged. As a Canadian company, I can find no words to describe the rape and plunder the Canadian government has perpetrated on our company. The government has effectively deprived Paramount of all possible incentives in the past and has effectively removed the prospect of any profit in the future. Paramount would like to presume that you have only made an error and therefore will rectify this situation immediately.

That letter is signed by C. H. Riddell, President of Paramount Resources Ltd., and I think speaks volumes for this effort to Canadianize the oil and gas industry. The national energy policy and this bill have nothing at all to do with Canadianization; they have everything to do with a desire for more revenue and a desire for more direct government intervention, because this government, like their soulmates to the left here, the NDP, does not like freedom of choice to be left with private citizens or private Canadians. It wants more of it held in its hands. This government was able to convince the editorial writers of the Toronto Star that it is Canadianizing, but the Canadians down on the ground doing the work, certainly in oil and gas, frankly do not believe it. They are enraged and outraged, and some of them are moving out of this country, and all of this to Canadianize. Responsible people should not behave this way, yet there does not appear to be any way in which we can get them to behave responsibly.

Mr. Roy MacLaren (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the previous speaker seems to be in his usual state of indecision about whether he supports Canadianization of the petroleum industry or whether he does not. It is hardly a new feature of the ambivalent Conservative position on the National Energy Program and the subsequent agreement with Alberta, and it is not surprising that we should again see that confusion today.

The fact is that the terms of future oil and gas exploration and development in Alberta have now been settled with the Alberta government, the main producing province. I find it difficult to distinguish among the previous speaker's comments whether he was even aware that this agreement had been reached. He seemed to focus entirely on the policies of the federal government as if those same policies were not now adhered to by the Alberta government. Coming from Alberta, he must, however, be conscious that the Alberta government has now committed itself to a Canadianization program parallel to that fostered by the federal government. The Alberta government has itself undertaken not merely to administer such a program but to pay for the incentives to encourage Canadianization of the oil industry as it pertains to the province of Alberta.

In these circumstances, I find it puzzling to understand what the hon. member for Calgary Centre (Mr. Andre), is so excited about. I must infer from what he says that he believes the actions of the Alberta government are wrong, that the Alberta government reached a bad agreement with the Government of Canada. If that is his viewpoint, I wish he would just simply state it instead of implying such opposition throughout his presentation.

The previous speaker spent some time quoting from the Toronto Star. I do not know that any great purpose is served by quoting back and forth from various newspaper articles, but since the hon. member opposite initiated the process I might draw his attention to an editorial in the Ottawa Citizen of July 20, which reads in part:

The Conservative opposition . . . wants the federal government to ease off on its Canadianization plans under the National Energy Program.

The editorial goes on to say:

They are, in fact, doing nothing more than parroting the big, U.S.-based multinationals and American politicians who wouldn't recognize their own hypocrisy if they met it stark naked at high noon.

The editorial points out the contradictions in the position of the Conservative opposition, if indeed they have any position, would be worth reading into the record, but I would rather deal with the substance of the question of Canadianization and not engage in these footling exchanges of newspaper editorials.

Before the announcement of the National Energy Program, the Canadian petroleum industry was some 72 per cent foreign owned and 78 per cent foreign controlled based on production; that is on upstream revenues. Since the National Energy Program, which is almost one year old, foreign ownership of the petroleum industry had declined about 6 percentage points to 66 per cent, somewhat greater than my colleague, the hon. member of the NDP, indicated. Foreign control has been reduced by about 10 percentage points to 67 per cent. We are gratified on this side of the House by the progress that has been made, both in the public sector by the activities of PetroCan and in the private sector which has responded with initiative and imagination to the various incentives provided under the National Energy Program.

The most significant events causing that change in ownership in the past 12 months were, of course, the acquisition by Petro-Canada of Petrofina, the acquisition of Conoco's 52 per cent interest in Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Company by Dome Petroleum, the acquisition of Aquitaine Canada, by the CDC and, more recently, the acquisition of a one quarter interest in Suncor by the Ontario Energy Corporation.

Those are major acquisitions which have reduced the level of foreign ownership in the Canadian petroleum industry. They contribute, in fact, to a total sum of $6.7 billion which has been spent on the acquisition of foreign companies which are over the $100 million price range. Of course, other smaller acquisitions have taken place by companies active in the Canadian petroleum industry and, indeed, by some companies which have hitherto been participants in that most dynamic sector of our economy.

• (1420)

In addition to those acquisitions, the Canadianization policy has made substantial progress in terms of farm-ins by Canadian companies on foreign company lands. There has been activity as well in the formation of new exploration companies with foreign and Canadian participation. No doubt these activities will increase when the petroleum incentive legislation is passed.

Reference has been made to the relative merits of grants under the petroleum incentives program and the previous system of tax allowances. I would remind the hon. member opposite that it is his party which wanted to remove super depletion, which is one taxation measure that was used in the past as an incentive. His government, in its ill-fated budget of December 1979, undertook to remove that superdepletion incentive from the petroleum industry.

On the broader question of taxation versus grants, there can be no doubt that the tax-based incentives program under the previous system benefited mainly foreign-controlled companies because those companies had the tax revenue to benefit from the tax incentives. Consequently, that former system worked against the interests of a number of Canadian-controlled smaller companies which did not have the revenue flowing from their activities that the larger corporations had. For that reason, we have turned to the system of direct grants as a more equitable arrangement from which all in the petroleum industry can benefit, particularly Canadian-controlled companies.

As we move into the petroleum incentives program as well as the agreement between Alberta and the federal government, we have every reason to expect that the present satisfactory rate of Canadianization in the petroleum industry will continue and, in some respects, probably accelerate.

No doubt farm-ins and new exploration ventures will increase as the provisions of Bill C-48 are implemented. We expect the incentives program to bring further development to ensure a greater opportunity for Canadians to participate in their own petroleum industry.

I wish to conclude my contribution to this part of the debate by bringing to the attention of hon. members the substantial progress which has been made in our petroleum industry.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 17 (Mr. Waddell). All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Section (11) of Standing Order 75, the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

An hon. Member: I didn't see five members.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You are supposed to have five members rising.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We will now proceed to Motion No. 18 in the name of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde).

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources) moved:

Motion No. 18.

That Bill C-48, an act to regulate oil and gas interests in Canada lands and to amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act, be amended in Clause 23 by striking out lines 33 and 34 at page 13 and substituting the following therefor:

"other than a designated Crown corporation to the extent that it holds a Crown share or the minister holding a share on behalf of Her Majesty in"

Mr. Roy MacLaren (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I simply wanted to note for the benefit of the House that the way the original Clause 23(5) of the bill was worded, it may have appeared that any share held by Petro-Canada, whether acquired in a private transaction or as a result of the operation of Clause 23 of the bill, was immune from reduction. The intent of the legislation, however, is that it is only the 25 per cent Crown share acquired under Clause 23 that is immune from reduction.

It is the purpose of this motion, Mr. Speaker, to clarify that point. The amended wording makes the intention of the section much clearer.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 18 (Mr. Lalonde). All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay. I declare the motion carried.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We will now proceed to Motions Nos. 21 and 22 which have been grouped for debate. Motion No. 21 is in the name of the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson).

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre) moved:

Motion No. 21

That Bill C-48, an act to regulate oil and gas interests in Canada lands and to amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act, be amended in Clause 27 by striking out lines 36 to 42 at page 15 and lines 1 and 2 at page 16 and substituting the following therefor:

"(2) Her Majesty in right of Canada is hereby vested with and the minister on her behalf shall hold a share sufficient to render the interest holder with a Canadian ownership rate of fifty percent".

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway) moved:

Motion No. 22

Canada Oil and Gas Act

That Bill C-48, an act to regulate oil and gas interests in Canada lands and to amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act, be amended in Clause 27 by striking out line 40 at page 15 and substituting the following therefor:

"fifty (50) percent share".

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member for Etobicoke Centre.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, I am glad some hon. members are saying just Etobicoke because pretty soon it will all be Conservative in Etobicoke and you will just have to say Etobicoke.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: If the hon. member will speak to the motion before the House, please.

Mr. Wilson: Mr. Speaker, this is a motion which will point out very clearly the distinction between what we in the Progressive Conservative Party stand for and what the socialist elements of this country, the Liberals and the New Democratic Party, stand for. I am glad the hon. member has finally admitted that his party is the socialist party in this country.

● (1430)

Mr. Lang: You are against Canadianization.

Mr. Wilson: I am glad the hon. member refers to Canadianization. I am going to point out to him a means of achieving Canadianization without the tremendous cost entailed in the Canadianization—nationalization—approach the federal government is following in Bill C-48.

Mr. Chénier: Tell us about Petro-Canada.

Mr. Wilson: The Progressive Conservative approach is a very simple approach.

Mr. Chénier: Simple and simplistic.

Mr. Wilson: We have supported the objective of 50 per cent Canadian ownership of the oil and gas industry. When we were in government, we administered the Foreign Investment Review Act to that end and, during that period of time, my colleague, the hon. member for Saskatoon West (Mr. Hnatyshyn), administered and was moving toward a broader energy program which would do just that as well; but the very fundamental difference was that we would encourage Canadian ownership, we would encourage investment by Canadians and we would not take the negative approach of discouraging foreign ownership.

The different means of achieving this is the very key to the motion we are debating right now. It is a very important motion in relation to its impact on broader economic factors, particularly the level of interest rates in this country, and I want to come back to that later on in my remarks.

Mr. MacLaren: Don't hurry.

Mr. Wilson: The hon. member says "Don't hurry," because he does not want to hear about the link between his approach to Canadianization—nationalization—and the impact it has on interest rates in this country. He has walked out because he cannot bear to hear the truth.

Mr. Kelly: He has heard it before.

Mr. Wilson: The motion on the Order Paper in my name is a means by which we could maximize Canadian private sector investor involvement in the development of oil and gas on Canada lands. We would ask the operator of any project on Canada lands to seek out the maximum Canadian ownership. In fact, we would provide an incentive for the operator to seek out the maximum Canadian private sector involvement in any project or consortium. To the extent that we would not be able to achieve 50 per cent Canadian ownership, at that stage we would ask the Crown, either through Petro-Canada or another Crown corporation, to take up the shares necessary to achieve the 50 per cent Canadian ownership objective.

Mr. Lang: Is this the newest flip-flop?

Mr. Wilson: This would be using the Crown corporation in the traditional Canadian way. If the private sector is not able to achieve a national objective, at that stage the Crown corporation comes in and achieves that objective. In this way we would encourage Canadian ownership. We would maximize the development of projects in the north and off the east coast, and again we would use the Crown corporation in the most appropriate way, as opposed to imposing it on every development in the north.

Let me come back to that because there is a very important difference in that there would not be the same level of confiscation. There would not be confiscation in the approach we would take. It would be done through encouragement of the private sector, which historically has been the way in Canada. What I want to do is to set out the current approach of the Liberal government to the development of Canada lands, because it is within the over-all context of government control and ownership that we must view this whole matter. Under this bill we know that the Crown corporation will have the right to take 25 per cent of every project in the north. We also know that under this bill the Crown corporation would be able to convert that 25 per cent ownership interest at no cost to a working interest when the production stage is reached and after a considerable amount of money has been spent on its behalf. Again let me underline the fact that this would be at no cost to the Crown corporation.

During the exploration stage the government and the Crown corporation would have access to all confidential information produced by the consortium, again at no cost to the government or to the Crown corporation. During this period the Crown corporation would have a vote on all decisions taken by the consortium. That means it would have a vote on any exploration work and any decisions affecting future development. Again let me underline the fact that it would have that vote without any financial responsibility. How many instances can hon. members opposite cite to me in which an operator can be bound by the decision of a non-participating—in a financial sense—participant? There have been no other indications of this in my experience in business. The decision by private sector investors as to whether to proceed with a development can be swung by someone who does not have to participate in the costs of that development. I see an hon. member opposite looking at me in a very puzzled way. I looked at this matter in a very puzzled way at first too.

Mr. Thacker: But he will never understand it.

Mr. Wilson: There is another situation in which the Crown corporation can participate at no cost, and that is in the acquisition of the shares of any consortium the Canadian ownership of which falls below 50 per cent. The consortium would have an opportunity to increase the Canadian ownership rate to 50 per cent but, if it does not, the Crown can come in and acquire that shortfall at no cost. It is the combination of these free benefits that I maintain will reduce the level of development in the north.

There is another element which I think is important but relates to a future amendment. Let me just refer to that now. The government can designate, without any justification or reason at all, and not on the basis of a shortfall in the performance of an operator, the Crown corporation as the operator and ask the initial operator to move all his equipment out. The government could put the Crown corporation in as the operator without paying any compensation to the private sector at all. The Crown corporation would then be in a position to bid against private sector participants in various parts of the north. With the knowledge the Crown has gained as a non-paying participant in a number of these developments at the exploration stage, the Crown can bid against other operators in the north. It has the advantage of having that free confidential information.

In addition to all this, the government is in a position to control the degree of development in the north by ordering three individual drill holes in one particular year. These can cost upwards of $50 million each. Regardless of the impact that it may have on any program that is in place, there is no recourse to that. When a discovery is made, the government can designate when it is defined as being a significant discovery, when it is commercial and, if it is commercial, when it goes into production.

● (1440)

Finally, the government can issue a production order which states when production is to begin, the rate of production, the purchaser of the production and the price at which that production will be sold. All this is at the discretion of the minister. It is against that background that we have to look at the intent of the bill and the intent of the motion which I am putting forward.

When you look at this broad degree of control and broad degree of ownership position provided under Bill C-48 and at the same time the imposition of a 25 per cent ownership on the private sector investors, you can clearly see that the broader impact and force of this bill can hold back the rate of development in the north. It will not encourage the rate of development. It is that that we on this side are most concerned about.

We believe we must move ahead with development of the north. As I said many times, we have been waiting for over ten years for this legislation to come forward. We had hoped it would come forward on a basis that would encourage rather than discourage development.

We have a degree of confiscation here without compensation for the future. I believe that will withhold development. That is the main thrust of the objections that we have to this motion. This proposal in Bill C-48, if it is not amended, is punitive and negative.

The minister has said on a number of occasions that there will be compensation for the retroactive back-in of 25 per cent on discoveries such as the Hibernia and the Beaufort Sea, where work has been done and oil and gas have been found. This will be on a retroactive basis, but there will be compensations. If we look at the degree of compensation related to the level of exploration expenditure that has taken place to date, accelerated to some extent according to the amount of inflation that has taken place, it has no bearing at all on the value of the oil in the ground.

The reason I make this point is that there is a considerable amount of other exploration expenditure which has already taken place in dry holes, fields that will never come onstream. There will be no compensation for that. An oil or gas company which goes into the north, where the risk is high, the environment very difficult to operate in and where costs are very high, does not expect to find oil and gas in every drill hole they put down. However, when they do find oil, they expect to get proper compensation for it. The compensation formula put forward by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) is totally inappropriate and inconsistent with the costs and the ongoing value that has been developed in those fields.

There is another element in this which we must look at. It is not a philosophical element at all but a straight practical argument. Over a period of time the Government of Canada will take 25 per cent control in any project in the north and in the offshore. As the size of these projects increase, the cost to the federal government of their ongoing commitment to invest in the production stage of these projects is going to be immense.

There is another element here. Because of the size of these projects, which will be in the $8 billion, $9 billion, $10 billion range and even higher as time goes on, the 25 per cent ownership position of the government will become the dominant position. Very few private sector investors will be able to afford 25 per cent or even 20 per cent participation in any of these projects. What is going to happen is that the decision-making, not just for one hole here or one hole there but for all the fields across the northern part of this country, will be dominated by one player, the federal government.

Time and again in the development of the oil and gas industry in this country, we have seen a diversity of decision-making, a competitive nature in the industry and the ability of different elements in the industry to develop different types of technology in competition with each other, so as to make those important discoveries which in some cases have totally bypassed other members of the industry.

Let me draw attention to the West Pembina field, a very important discovery, one of the largest oil discoveries in Canada in recent years. That was the second discovery in the West Pembina field. The first one was at about 5,000 feet. No one thought there was anything farther down other than one company which had some technology. It went down the other 5,000 or 6,000 feet to the 10,000 or 12,000-foot level and made the largest oil discovery in recent years. That is the nature of the industry. If we had one dominant factor in the industry making all the decisions, maybe the West Pembina type of decision would not be made.

An hon. Member: Why not?

Mr. Wilson: An hon. member asks why not. The reason is there will be one dominant factor in the industry in the north that will be influencing very heavily all decisions. If that 25 per cent holder does not decide to go down, he can swing the vote. That is the fundamental difference. If you have a spread of ownership and decision-making, those decisions will be made.

That is how Hibernia was discovered. Two other companies had spent a lot of money but could not find anything there. Another company came in and said that if they did such-and-such, they would find it, and they did. We need that diversity of opinion if we are going to have development of this industry proceed.

As I said, our opposition to this bill is not just philosophical, although the debate does point out a very strong philosophical difference between the two parties and the little red rump at the end here. We believe the approach that we have put forward in Motion No. 17 will strengthen the private sector, strengthen the industry as a whole and strengthen the over-all development of our oil and gas resources in the Canada lands.

There are other problems we have to recognize. There are problems I related in the broader picture I presented about the greater control of the government in Canada lands and the burden placed by that control and ownership position of the government on the private sector. I do not think it is appropriate at this stage to develop all those points if I am going to hold myself to the topic of Motion No. 17.

● (1450)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: If I may have the hon. member's attention, the motion before the House is Motion No. 21. Does he know which motion he is speaking to?

Mr. Wilson: I was given the wrong number by one of my colleagues.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member's comments have been relevant to the motion. He just happens to have the wrong number.

Mr. Wilson: Behind Motion No. 21 is the broader, philosophical approach to the whole question of Canadianization. Many people have asked what is the difference between the approach of the Conservative party on Canadianization and the approach of the Liberal party on Canadianization? As I said in my earlier remarks, when we were in government we accepted the 50 per cent objective of Canadianization in the oil and gas industry. I shall also remind members of this House that we made no attempts, contrary to what many members have said, prior to the 1979 election to weaken the operations of the Foreign Investment Review Agency. I was in cabinet and I had some involvement with the operations of the Foreign Investment Review Agency. During that time we were trying to improve the operations so that it would not be the stumbling block to investment, which has been the case since our time in government and was the case before our time in government. At no time were the operations and general intent of the Foreign Investment Review Agency undermined. I believe before and during our time in office the statistics show the operations were about the same.

We feel there is a positive way of achieving Canadianization and a negative way in achieving Canadianization. We have chosen the positive way. It involves greater encouragement to job creation and to investment in this country. It does not entail the very powerful negatives we have seen develop over the last few months.

Let me give a few clear indications, apart from the very clear differences under Bill C-48, how we would proceed on Canadianization. We would encourage Canadian ownership. The budget of the hon. member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie) would encourage Canadian ownership of companies through the Canadian stock investment plan. This plan would provide a shelter for Canadian investors against capital gains of Canadian-owned and controlled companies. We felt this would strongly encourage investment in Canadian companies, and would have a very positive effect on the Canadian ownership position in the Canadian oil and gas industry.

The proposal we put forward on Petro-Canada, a proposal that was made public shortly after the fall of our government in December of 1979, provided for a broad Canadian private sector involvement in that company. It also provided for Petro-Canada itself to go out, as part of its mandate, and buy a Canadian subsidiary of a multinational oil and gas company. We did not tell them they had to do that; we said that the new board of directors might find it was appropriate for the company to do it, and that they might find it was within their financial means to do it. We provided the financial means during the course of the proposal on Petro-Canada.

Another way we encouraged Canadian investment in this country was through two amendments on the treatment of capital gains and on registered retirement savings plans. One of the amendments allowed farmers to take $100,000 of their capital gain on the sale of a farm, place it in an RRSP and use the RRSP funds to invest in the Canadian economy. This, again, would have provided a strong incentive to the acquisition of Canadian common shares.

The key approach we would follow would be to encourage Canadian ownership through incentives. We would use the private sector, both companies and individuals, to participate fully in this process.

In contrast, the Liberal approach has been a more negative approach. In Bill C-48 they impose their 25 per cent ownership, and not full compensation for that ownership, on projects that are under way. They would not take the risk that the private sector had taken in bringing the project to the exploration stage.

The Liberals have proposed a tightening of, and a greater intervention in, the activities of the Foreign Investment Review Agency. We do not know where that stands.

The Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Gray) has said that is still in the mill. Other sources have said that that proposal has been pulled back. We do not know where it stands. We do know, however, that the existence of those proposals is casting a cloud over future investment in this country.

I believe the government must say one way or the other where they stand on that issue. Until we have that proposal dealt with one way or the other, it is going to have a negative effect on investment in this country. If there is a negative effect on investment in this country, there is going to be a negative effect on job creation. When we have 8.2 per cent unemployment, 900,000 people unemployed in this country, and expectations are that the number will increase further as we go further into the winter, we should not be deterring investment and we should not be deterring the creation of jobs in this country. Finally, the Liberals have interposed a much greater degree of state involvement through the operations of Petro-Canada.

In my earlier remarks, I said that Petro-Canada was perfectly eligible to go out and buy the subsidiaries of non-resident oil and gas companies. What we saw in the acquisition of Petrofina was the sloppiest acquisition that I have seen in my 18 years of experience in the investment business. A year ago September the shares were trading at less than $60 a share. Somehow or other, rumours got out that Petro-Canada was going to buy Petrofina. So what happened during that period? We had periodic run-ups in the value of those shares to the point when at $90 per share they said, "Yes, we are going to buy this company." What price did they say they would pay for it? Not $90 per share but $120 per share, more than twice the value of the company when those rumours started to occur and when Petro-Canada started the negotiations with Petrofina. This is what I mean when I say it is the sloppiest operation I have seen in my experience in the investment business. That sloppiness has cost Canadians, through the increased amounts of money that have been sent out of the country to create jobs in Brussels, many valuable tax dollars which could have been much better spent in this country.

An hon. Member: Consumer dollars.

Mr. Wilson: The minister said in defence of the price paid, "We only paid a premium of $30 over the $90 and that is consistent with the premiums that have been paid in other takeovers in North America over the past year." Again the minister misled the House, as I said a minute ago, because the premium he paid was not $30 over $90, but $60 over $60, the price at which the shares were when the negotiations started. That is costing us money.

That is why we said in the approach that we put forward on Petro-Canada a couple of years ago that we wanted Petro-Canada governed by private sector disciplines so they would not waste the tax dollars of people in this country. They would have been more careful—

Mr. Chénier: You wanted to dismantle Petro-Canada.

• (1500)

Mr. Wilson: No, sir. I hear the old myth surfacing once again. The hon. member said that we wanted to dismantle Petro-Canada. That was back about five years ago, in the early stages of the development of Petro-Canada. The former minister of energy can set the hon. member straight on that. When we were in government, we said that we would help Petro-Canada to grow and to be a powerful, profitable, large company in the oil and gas industry. This is what the proposal we put forward was to do. It would have been a stronger and more effective company in the oil and gas industry. It would have done more to create oil and gas development than the company which is being run by the government at this point in time.

I should like to return to the point at issue which I was discussing before I was interrupted by the Groucho Marx opposite. The key of the Liberal approach is more government ownership and more government intervention in the economy. Basically, it is negative in its direction.

The approach put forward by the Progressive Conservative Party would have led to a more positive investment environment in Canada, to more job creation, to a stronger Canadian dollar and to less inflation. This is the key. If it leads to less inflation, it will lead to lower interest rates. There is not a man or a woman in the country who does not believe that we need lower interest rates. This is the approach we would take if we were in government today. Canadians are becoming more and more anxious to see the Conservative party on the government side of the House so that it can make decisions which will create jobs and reduce the onerous level of interest rates.

I want hon. members opposite to listen carefully to my remarks. The Liberal approach clearly results in a negative business climate. I do not think there is a man or a woman in business in the country today who would say that the business climate is good. Yesterday I had occasion to speak with a man who said that the business climate in Canada is the worst he has seen in his 16 years since returning here. This is a major complaint. It is the sort of comment with which we are faced. On top of that, the government is imposing a negative attitude.

Mr. Kelly: How do you explain the GNP?

Mr. Wilson: I am glad the hon. member mentioned the GNP. I ask him to repeat his question in approximately three weeks' time. It will be down the next time the numbers are out, it will be down in the following quarter, and in the quarter following that.

Mr. Kelly: What about today?

Mr. Wilson: We are in a recession now.

Mr. Kelly: I am talking about today, not three weeks from now.

Mr. Wilson: The GNP is down today. The hon. member is looking at the early part of this year. I ask him to bring himself up to date. He should bring himself into the real world and not read history books. The real world today has 8.2 per cent unemployment. In the real world today, there are 900,000 people out of work. The real world today has 21 to 22 per cent interest rates. We are in a recession.

Mr. Kelly: You are all hot air.

Mr. Wilson: We will see who is all hot air. The government has weakened the economy through its proposals in Bill C-48 and its proposals on Canadianization. It is the cause of the problems today. The Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen) blamed it on the Federal Reserve Bank, President Reagan, the gnomes of Zurich, and the international monetary community. The problems today are being caused by the government. Hon. members opposite on the back benches should get after the members on the front benches. Perhaps they do not want to do it in Parliament because they would not want to be seen attacking the government. I hope they are doing this in the privacy of their caucus, because the country requires some independent thinking. We are not getting it from the Minister of Finance. There is great cost to the approach of the government on Canadianization, both through Bill C-48 and its other measures.

It makes me sick to hear the hypocrisy of the New Democratic Party. Time and again members of that party say that we must reduce interest rates. They demand that interest rates be dropped. At the same time they propose policies which will force investment money and jobs out of the country into other countries of the world and will force up interest rates. This is totally inconsistent and irresponsible.

Mr. Deans: Do not believe him, Mr. Speaker, just because he said it. It is not so.

Mr. Wilson: If the hon. member will let me, I will develop the point I made in question period the other day. To the end of June this year, there was an unidentified outflow of capital—

Mr. Deans: Who reappointed Gerald Bouey?

Mr. Wilson: A number of individuals have sent out money in amounts too small to be identified by Statistics Canada. The outflow of money has amounted to $8.4 billion, which is five times the average figure for the same item in the 1970s. This is causing interest rates to be held up. I want the hon. member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) to listen.

Mr. Deans: I am listening.

Mr. Wilson: Interest rates are being held up in an attempt to get money back into the country to replace the outflow caused by people who do not have confidence in the policies of the government, policies which are being fully supported by the NDP.

Mr. Deans: Nonsense.

Mr. Wilson: It pushes the government to increase the impact of these policies. What is happening to the relationship between Canada and the United States? This relationship is being severely damaged. The other night I commented on the fact that the relationship between Canada and the United States is at its worst level since 1812. The reason I made that statement was that many times over the past years we have been concerned because the United States has not paid too much attention to us and has ignored the fact that we are up here. The United States is taking action with regard to its problems on the worldwide basis. This has a negative impact upon us, which the Americans do not understand. The United States has been passive, but it is the first time I have even seen a United States government threatening to take active, aggressive action against Canada in retaliation for the problems created by our government.

We cannot afford to ignore our largest neighbour and trading partner when it starts thinking that way. The government is, in fact, ignoring and provoking the United States. Hon. members of the government, such as the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacGuigan) and the Minister of Justice (Mr. Chrétien), went to the United States and made provocative statements, which encouraged the retaliatory action which is being proposed down there. I wonder why the government wants to provoke the United States Congress? Does it want to create an outside enemy to deflect attention from the problems in the country? I am less concerned about the actual actions taken by the administration or the United States Congress. I am more concerned about the signals this will send out to many people in the United States who have interests in one form or another in Canada and to individuals in Canada who may decide to move money outside the country. This is what concerns me most. It happened earlier this year, and the government has shown no intention of reversing its decision.

• (1510)

As I said, this has had a very important effect on the high interest rates that resulted from protecting the outflow of capital. That is the problem we have to fight. But there is another way, a positive way of using the private sector, Mr. Speaker. It is a much more efficient way than using government. We would encourage development, we would encourage investment, and we would encourage the creation of jobs at a time when that is so important.

Which way should we be going? I ask members on the government side to tell me why the approach proposed in Motion No. 21 cannot be considered. It is a more positive approach to Canadianization than the negative approach that the government has taken.

Mr. Evans: Give us specifics.

Mr. Wilson: There is a very clear and specific provision in Motion No. 21, and I hope the hon. member opposite will speak to it. I ask hon. members opposite to tell us why they think this motion is not appropriate. I asked the minister, and he said that we have a difference of opinion on it. I have given him my reasons why I think the approach taken in Bill C-48 is not appropriate, so I think I am entitled to expect that hon. members opposite will tell me why they think Motion No. 21 is not appropriate.

Members on the government side and in the NDP have said that Norway does this. Norway is not Canada, Mr. Speaker; it is a country that consumes about 15 per cent or 20 per cent of its oil and gas reserves. We in Canada import 15 per cent or 20 per cent, while Norway exports about 80 per cent of its oil. It can afford to take a different position and to risk that the private sector will cut back its involvement in the industry. Norway can afford to turn off development and take more aggressive attitudes than we can. We cannot afford to take that position. We need the oil.

If the government were serious about the objectives of self-sufficiency in oil, it would not bring Bill C-48 forward in its present form.

That is the basis for Motion No. 21, Mr. Speaker, I hope we will receive an adequate response from hon. members opposite.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to discuss this very important motion, Motion No. 21, and to connect it with Motion No. 22. The motion is concerned with the development of our resources to the maximum, in the most efficient manner, and with the least amount of intrusion by government.

Without these amendments, the government will continue to govern in an inequitable way. One industry will be singled out for unfair treatment.

Essentially what we have to deal with is the theft, by confiscation, of 25 per cent of northern lands, irrespective of who did the initial development and exploration work. No matter what private company, Canadian or international, did the work, by writing a regulation, the government has established that it can claim 25 per cent of whatever is produced without paying any compensation. No other industry in Canada is subject to such harassment by the federal government.

I cannot help but believe that this is a reflection of the bias of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde). It shows his disdain for western Canada, a disdain which is reiterated in his speeches and his personal attacks on the regions of Canada.

An hon. Member: Sick!

Mr. Malone: An hon. member opposite says "sick". I would like to share with him something that I believe to be far worse. Just two nights ago, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources spoke in Sherbrooke, Quebec. A report of that speech reads as follows:

> Lalonde said a stronger threat to Canadian unity than Quebec nationalism could soon be posed by the growing wealth of Alberta.
>
> Canada, he said, could one day become a country with one rich province imposing its whims on the other nine if Alberta uses its billions to take control of foreign companies and the federal government does not maintain its role of enforcing the sharing of wealth between rich and poor provinces.
>
> The other nine provinces would eventually be at the mercy of Alberta's every fancy, he said, and a wave of (Alberta) nationalism of unprecedented strength could rise up if the federal government held back now from showing its teeth. "We don't pay enough attention to this threat" Lalonde said, "but it's a real one, it's there."

I submit that it is wrong to pick out one province and say that it is a threat to national unity. It suggests that that province is not willing to share. It flies in the face of everything that has been talked about with regard to the Constitution in the last 15 months. Federalism cannot work when the major player, the federal government, singles out one region and tries to draw the anger of the rest of the country against it.

The fact is that Alberta has a product that is worth world price, and it has negotiated with the federal government to sell that product at 75 per cent of its value within the next five years. To date, Alberta has contributed $30 billion to confederation by selling its product at less than world price. I submit that no other region in Canada can make such a claim.

The government claims that it will Canadianize the oil industry. This industry is located essentially in one region of Canada and that is not central Canada. When the government uses the term "Canadianize", it twists the language. It is really referring to a program of nationalization. This proposal was made in the same year that the government gave a guaranteed loan of $240 million to Chrysler Corporation and in the same year that it took Massey-Ferguson close to its breast to help it out. The unique difference between these multinational companies is that Massey-Ferguson and Chrysler are located in central Canada, while the oil industry is located away from the centre.

● (1520)

The people across this land do not mind the objective stated in the new energy program if it means a greater degree of Canadianization; but we do not have Canadianization, we have nationalization. We have nationalization of that industry which is located away from the centre. It was very much reflected in the speech which was made the day before yesterday by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources when he was speaking of the province of Alberta. He said that we do not pay enough attention to that threat, but it is a real one and it is there. It shows the mentality of those who are now governing that they believe not in federalism or in a united Canadian family, but, rather, in a situation where they have power and control. They keep hoisting up the words, "multinational oil companies, multinational oil companies, multinational oil companies", as if they wanted one to believe that those were evil words which would somehow produce the same kind of reaction as might appear on the face of a ten-year-old when he is told to clean out the bird cage. They believe the "multinational oil companies" are bad words.

The people of western Canada want to ask what it is that is so awful about our multinational oil companies that the federal government needs to come in and confiscate 25 per cent under the titles called Canada lands, and what it is that makes the government want to take over multinational oil companies and run them as it runs post offices and other institutions. However, when the multinational is Chrysler Corporation or Massey-Ferguson, the government is out there licking off the dollar bills and handing them out, hoping they can save this good company.

If we want to have a greater degree of Canadianization, so be it. Let us take a look at Canadian industries and multinational industries and set up a program. However, any time the government starts to be selective, choosing one industry which affects one region and then virtually promising in the House of Commons that it will not touch any other industry, that this program will not apply to any other industry, then its program of selectivity is one that is foul and wrong—

An hon. Member: Fouled!

Mr. Malone: —and ought to be resisted by every Canadian. I see the parliamentary secretary wincing at that. He has been wincing long enough, with many of our oil rigs leaving and having left the country, heading for Denver, for Australia, for Oklahoma, for Texas, and all of the other various oil centres in North America.

When we talk about the vast number of oil rigs which have left because of this program, those of us who represent western constituencies, believe that when we talk about a rig leaving, everyone understands it as well as we do. Throughout this past year, I became conscious of the past that when we say a rig is leaving, most people outside of the oil producing regions do not really understand what we are saying. I believe they imagine that there is a truck with a derrick on it heading out of the country, that we have lost a truck, an associate driver, and something called a derrick which is being pulled behind. The fact is that when one loses a rig, involved in the move are about 16 liner trucks loaded with batteries of equipment and tools, compressor stations, extra power plants and the rig itself. The total cost of moving a single rig is in the neighbourhood of half a million dollars, nearly $500,000. Far more than 100 of those rigs, with all the men and equipment that go with them, have been driven out of the oil-producing parts of western Canada. They are heading off to the United States to drill wells and generate jobs there. Why? It is all in the name of some government in disguise which says that it is going to produce great national security and energy.

These Liberals on the other side have no representation in western Canada, with the exception of two members from Winnipeg. Perhaps it would be fair for me to remind them that when the present Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) first came to power, there were 56 elected Liberals west of the Manitoba border. Now there are three: two in the federal government, and one in the Manitoba legislature. That is what their policies have done to their respectability as viewed in the west. The fact is that they all had this notion that somehow they would tell Canadians that they were going to Canadianize, using all of those words that the Gallup polls told them to be pleasing. The truth is that they have considerably lowered our potential to produce oil and they have greatly reduced our possibilities for self-sufficiency by 1990.

Oh, how I wish there could have been a number of those Liberals with me when I saw some of these hard-working, private, Canadian business people at the auctions this past year, selling off their equipment because they had gone bankrupt. Oh, what a message they would have received! I know the risks that some of those young fellows took, having grown up on farms, having bought trucks, drilling rigs, and compressors, working virtually 24 hours a day, day after day, through Saturdays and Sundays, finally getting little fleets of five or six trucks going. There they were, somewhere in the middle of their lives, having everything auctioned off.

With the lack of confidence in the new energy program, what did we have? We had a sale taking place where one could hardly get a bid. Relatively new oil equipment was being sold for virtually the same kind of prices at which one could buy older farm trucks. It was a crying shame. There was certainly no need for this at all.

What we have is a situation where the government has given itself the power to come in and claim 25 per cent of all discoveries of oil on lands north of 60, irrespective of who does the work and the exploration or makes the discovery. Moreover, irrespective of what company does the development, the federal government can come in and give a licence to its own chief agency, PetroCan. I submit that all of that will do nothing other than cause a tremendous depression in the development of our high north.

I know that many people hold the view that our energy future is secure because of the fact that we will always be able to find some more oil. I believe that we have the potential for security for a great length of time into the future. We have a 300-year supply of oil at least which is extracted by way of the compression of coal, forcing it by liquefaction into oil. We have a tremendous potential in our tar sands and we also have a great potential that is yet untapped. However, what is not realized, and what the Canadian people are not fully aware of is that the oil of tomorrow will not be nearly as cheap as the oil of today. Those who do not know the industry, believe that somehow the way one finds oil is to hunt around, drill a hole, and that a lake of it lies underground. They believe that once one has found that pool, put the pipe down and put the pump on, the price of oil should be the same from the day one discovers it, allowing for inflation, until the pool is dry. That is not the situation.

Oil is found underground in a tertiary formation. It is in a sandstone rock, similar to one's bathroom sponge. The newspapers or the media describe the first oil which was discovered in western Canada, the Turner Valleys or the Leducs, as blow-outs, gushers or high pressure wells from which oil shoots up several hundred feet into the air. There was oil all over the derricks, the men and the vehicles around. It was very cheap then because once the pool was discovered, the pressure of the oil forced the weight of the formations of the earth to shoot that oil up into the air. The pressure of the oil just pumped it horizontally to the refinery. That lasted for perhaps as long as ten years. Then, approximately five or six years ago, along came the rocking donkey head pumps. We then went into the period during which hot salt water known as brine was pumped down into the formations. That is the stage at which most of our oil wells are today. Those of us near the oil industry use a term all too loosely, I submit, when we say we will be out of oil in eight years' time. What we are really saying is that we will be out of the present methods of extracting the oil by that time. The truth of the matter is that when we say we will be out of oil eight years from today, there will still be 75 per cent of the original finds in the tertiary formation. It will not be in the big holes in the tertiary formation, it will be confined to little, minuscule holes, and new methods of getting the large volume of oil out will be required. This is what is generally referred to as enhanced recovery. You have to use a solvent such as Varsol, or some kind of solvent, to loosen it up and get it to flow. All of our future oil will come from enhanced recovery offshore, from the north slopes, from the tar sands or in situ. Every one of those shows a sharp upswing on the chart in terms of cost. Any of the clauses in the present legislation that discourages incentives will cause a dramatic downward pressure on our ability to develop a find, because the costs are going to rise sharply as we move rapidly out of the period during which we have enjoyed free running oil into a period when we will have developed or enhanced oil through the use of some solution, or else we will have to explore many more distant regions, which will not allow for the kind of development we would all like to see.

● (1530)

With regard to the whole question of Canadianization, the government, knowing that Canadians like the word "Canadianize" and do not really like the word "multinational", uses these words selectively, with the feeling that somehow they must obtain control of the industry. If it is a question of ownership generally across the industry, industry has already indicated the degree to which it would favour such a position. If it is to be selective ownership, we wonder what the motives of the government are.

More important, Sir, the government does not need the kind of control it speaks of. Today the government controls the industry as it did last year, the year before and five years before that, in so far as drilling is concerned, where you drill, when you drill, when you bring a well or field into production, also in so far as all the environmental controls are concerned, where the pipelines will go, who will build them, and what strengths of steel are to be used. It also controls refining, the quality and the amount to be sold on the export and on the domestic markets. This is all done through the National Energy Board and through the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. All the necessary controls are there, and if they are not, they can easily be put into place.

It is not necessary for government to own the industry and at the same time to write the rules with respect to that industry. What we have today is quite literally a case where the referee is one of the players in the game. In those lands north of 60, the federal government is fully knowledgeable about every formation and hole that has been drilled by an oil company. This information is all banked in the National Energy Board's closet, or library. It is fully aware of all that information. It owns an oil company and is able to compete. When any company, be it Ranger Oil, or whatever it might be, puts down a hole—and most often those exploration holes are drilled by wholly Canadian-owned companies—a full profile of the hole—whether it is dry or otherwise, whether there is gas or oil below, the kind of formations that are encountered—is mapped and sent to the National Energy Board, so the government has a complete map of all Canada's drillings.

The same minister who is in charge of all that information is also in charge of the energy company, namely, Petro-Canada. I submit that the way this game is played is simply not fair. One company has access to all the information, and on that basis an inequity exists. In view of the existence of that inequity, I think it is important that we accept the proposed changes in the amendment in Motion No. 21 in order to eliminate this situation of inequity, which is obvious, especially north of 60.

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, Motion No. 21 contains a very important element of Bill C-48 which we are addressing today. I want to read it just to emphasize how important the subject is. It states:

> Her Majesty in Right of Canada is hereby vested with and the Minister on her behalf shall hold a share sufficient to render the interest holder with a Canadian ownership rate of fifty per cent.

The key words in that, of course, are "a share sufficient to render the interest holder with a Canadian ownership rate of fifty per cent".

This motion really addresses what we consider a very fundamental part of Bill C-48, a very fundamental and significant element of this particular bill. The subject of Canadianization is a subject that I think intrigues all members of this House and all people in Canada. As a result, during the committee stage of this bill a great deal of time was spent discussing this particular issue, the implications of it and the possible roots of implementation.

Essentially, the question is: what does Canadianization mean? To my way of thinking, it means we have a Canadian corporation involved in the development of oil or gas, we have Canadian capital being used for that development, and we have Canadian jobs. In other words, Canadian people are the ones involved in the development of this particular product in the north, with Canadian people being given the opportunity to earn those incomes and gain their livelihood in this way. I do not believe anybody questions that or doubts the importance or relevance of it.

The concern arises from what we effectively have in Bill C-48 as it now stands. Do we really have Canadianization? My concern is that we are getting involved here in something called "double speak". We call it Canadianization, but in fact what we have is nationalization. The reason for that is very simple. When I talked about Canadianization, I was talking about Canadian companies, Canadian content, Canadian capital and Canadian jobs. That is what we are after. There is no need to make any further change. That is the goal we have and that is what we want to accomplish.

As Bill C-48 stands at the moment, the government is not content to take over 25 per cent ownership of a U.S. company out of the United States or 25 per cent of a European company. It is more concerned with what it is in fact doing, that is, taking over 25 per cent of Canadian companies. I begin to wonder right away how that could possibly be called Canadianization. Surely there is a confusion of terms. What we will actually and effectively end up with is nationalization, and nationalization is the fundamental principle we should be discussing and considering very carefully.

When I spoke on Bill C-48 in the past, I said it is a fundamental and important bill. It is the start of a whole lot of future activity in the north, and it is the start of an opportunity for many people in that part of the country who up until now have not had access to some of these jobs. Very often they are faced with high unemployment and with very few options from which to choose.

I think it is fairly commonly accepted that if you want to accomplish something that is difficult or something to which there may not be immediate acceptance in the arena of politics, the popular thing to do, something that is done very regularly, is to create what we call a straw man, an enemy. Often that enemy is not a real enemy but a figure of speech or somewhat of an illusion. I think that is what we are involved with right here, the creation of a straw man. The government's purported goal is Canadianization, but it creates a straw man by saying everything is owned by multinationals and foreigners. It is a laudable goal. Why would the government turn around and take 25 per cent of the Canadian corporations? If we look carefully, we can see that what it is really after is not Canadian content in industry, it is not Canadian content in opportunity, it is not Canadian content in capital but a real grab at control. Its justification for this is twofold. The first one is its need for a window on the industry. It has to see what is happening in the oilfields, what is happening to development in the north. The second one is to have some control in the direction of that development.

• (1540)

I think that what we are ending up with and what is the real purpose behind Bill C-48 is nothing more than control of the industry. If the government really wanted Canadianization, it would leave Canadian companies alone. It would not take 25 per cent of their interests in their lands.

What concerns me most, Mr. Speaker, is that if the government can apply this philosophy, this straw man approach to this industry, why should it not do the same to other industries in our country?

Canada is involved in many industries. Look at the forest industry, for example. Anyone who has anything to do with the federal government knows the importance of the forest industry, otherwise we would not have all these papers. Canadian people have an interest in the forest industry, so why not apply the same philosophy there? Why not take 25 per cent of that industry, if the government's argument is valid?

How about the newspaper industry? I am sure the government has quite an interest in that industry because I am sure that quite often there are comments in the newspapers about members of the government that they would rather not see. Why not apply the same philosophy there?

Why not do the same in agriculture? Surely we have an interest in food production in our country. Why not apply the same philosophy in this industry? The fact is that we are not talking about Canadianization, Mr. Speaker; we are talking about control of an industry and its direction.

If the government were really interested in Canadianization, it would accept the motion brought forward by my hon. friend, the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson) because it does address the matter. It calls for 50 per cent ownership. It calls for 50 per cent control. Therefore, that motion should be acceptable.

We can see, after discussing Bill C-48 over the last few days, the dangers incorporated in it. These dangers cause me great concern because of the effects it may have in the north for a long time to come. We have talked about ministerial discretion. We are talking about nationalization today under the guise of Canadianization. The government has demonstrated a real ignorance of what is happening in the north and has turned a deaf ear to the concerns those people have about Bill C-48. In fact, we did not even go up into the north.

An hon. Member: Where were the Tories when we needed them on the committee?

Mr. Cooper: I believe Motion No. 21 addresses the central idea of Canadianization. It would accomplish what the genuine goals of Canadianization in this bill should be, that is an increase in the Canadian content of business, capital and jobs. Self-sufficiency should be the fundamental goal against which everything else should be matched. That does not seem to be the goal of the federal government, and it certainly is not reflected in Bill C-48 as it now stands. This measure could present a tremendous opportunity for development in the north and development of jobs in the north. It is an opportunity which has been a long time coming for northerners. When we are talking about Canadianization, that is what we should be trying to accomplish. We should not be using the disguise of Canadianization to accomplish nothing more than the nationalization and control of an industry.

I am pleased to be speaking today in support of Motion No. 21 because I feel it does address the real issue of Canadianization.

Mr. John Evans (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, there are a number of points I would like to address with regard to Motion No. 21, I would also like to say a few things about the comments of the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson) and the hon. member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone).

The tax policies which the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre has described as being consistent with Motion No. 21, would presumably be some form of tax discrimination that would provide one tax for foreign-owned firms involved in oil exploration and development and another for Canadian-owned firms.

Mr. Wilson: Encouragement!

Mr. Evans: Well, incentives for Canadian companies that would not necessarily apply to foreign companies. That is the way you would encourage Canadians, as opposed to foreigners, to enter into these kinds of activities. I will discuss this matter later with the hon. member if I am mistaken, but if that is the concept he is following, I suggest we would be in very difficult times because of the GATT treaty, and the OECD. I wonder if the kind of policies he is describing as being consistent with Motion No. 21 would be received any more favourably by those individuals in the United States whom he described as being adamant about the adverse impact—

Mr. Wilson: You are misstating the whole direction.

Mr. Evans: —of the National Energy Program than the ones now under the National Energy Program.

Mr. Wilson: Twist!

Mr. Evans: We have heard about the outflow of funds from the country. The hon. member did not provide any evidence that I heard to indicate the cause of those outflows, whether they indeed resulted from the National Energy Program. I think he quoted the Governor of the Bank of Canada who said in his speech that as a result of the National Energy Program—he was talking about takeovers of foreign companies by Canadian companies—

Mr. Wilson: Read my speech in Hansard.

Mr. Evans: The Governor of the Bank of Canada had indicated that some $7 billion had flowed out of the country for takeovers. That was in exchange for ownership in companies held by foreigners. According to the hon. member, during that period of time there was an additional outflow of funds attributable to the National Energy Program. No evidence for this was provided by the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre—

Mr. Wilson: Read the speech.

Mr. Evans: —no substantial evidence to indicate that what he said is correct. We know how much flowed out of the country to buy foreign-owned companies, which is consistent with Canadianization.

Mr. Wilson: You are twisting the whole speech.

• (1550)

Mr. Evans: However, the hon. member was not able to make a connection on objective grounds which showed that any additional funds were caused to flee by a great fear of nationalization on the part of the industry as a result of the NEP, or any other government policies.

The hon. member talked about Norway and said that if the Government of Canada undertakes programs such as the National Energy Program, they will create a great fear, money will flow out of the country and other areas of development outside oil and gas will be affected. But then he turns around and says that since Norway has all that extra oil, it is all right for it to introduce such policies because that country has more oil than it needs. But what about the effect of those policies on other areas of development and on foreign investment in other areas in Norway? Should Norway not be worried about that and, if it is not—and Norway's policies are much more aggressive than anything considered under the National Energy Program—then why is it that Norway is still getting foreign investment outside the oil and gas area and, indeed, in the oil and gas area?

The hon. member for Crowfoot referred to development outside the Canada lands as well as on the Canada lands. He said Canadian companies were leaving Canada and simply were not interested in participating in oil and gas exploration and development in Canada as a result of the National Energy Program and in subsequent developments. To respond to that I would like to quote from The Financial Post of October 17. The article to which I refer is entitled "Prospect good for big 'new oil' flow" and reads in part as follows:

> "We're trying to convince investors to stop listening to the big companies that are crying in their beer and listen to the little companies that are finding the oil," says Don Jackson, president of Sienna Resources Ltd, a Calgary-based exploration company. "Under the new regime, if you can find oil, it is unbeatable. We'll drill as fast as we can get the money."

That does not sound to me as though the National Energy Program is driving small Canadian companies out of Canada. It sounds to me as if they are saying the NEP is a very good program, that it will lead to additional exploration and development, and that they can hardly wait to get their drills into the ground.

The article continues:

In a speech in Calgary last month, Premier Peter Lougheed defended the EPA in the face of industry criticism but said his government is prepared to make adjustments for any "anomalies" or "inequities" that might exist in the agreement for conventional oil production.

His conclusion was that there were no such anomalies or adjustments necessary, but that he would be willing to look at it. I think the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) has indicated the same thing, a willingness to be flexible, if what hon. members opposite say is true can be demonstrated, but we are hearing from the industry that it is very happy with the program. The article continues:

But, by all accounts, even now the pricing terms will create huge new reserves of conventional crude oil.

That is the area about which we have heard great cries of concern.

In their negotiations, experts from Ottawa and Alberta estimated that by the end of 1986—

That is when the pricing agreement ends.

—311,000 barrels per day of new-oil-reference-price oil will be on stream.

That is 311,000 barrels per day of new oil which is not found yet. It will be on stream from conventional sources, not tar sands, not heavy oil and not offshore.

Mr. Andre: How much is that of what we need?

Mr. Evans: The hon. member asks how much is that of what we need.

Mr. Andre: Fifteen per cent.

Mr. Evans: Let me go on.

Mr. Smith: Peter Lougheed likes it, Harvie.

Mr. Evans: I will quote directly from the conclusion of the article so that the hon. member cannot accuse me of misstatements. It says this:

By the end of the agreement period, oversupply isn't difficult to imagine. By 1986, according to the Alberta/Ottawa negotiated assumptions on consumption and production, Canadian consumption will have dropped to 1.58 million barrels per day from the current 1.78 million barrels per day. By that point, the planners expect Canada's production to be 1.27 million barrels per day. An additional 200,000 barrels per day from Hibernia and another 150,000 barrels per day from conventional Alberta production will have oil in search of consumers.

That is by 1986, and hon. members opposite are saying that by 1990 we will not be self-sufficient. I respect the experts in Calgary because they are the experts in the oil industry. They are the people who are drilling holes. They are not the people in the House of Commons talking to us every day. They are the people actually out there, drilling holes. They are the people to whom hon. members opposite have told us day after day we should be listening. These gentlemen are speaking to the press. They are speaking publicly and saying that the National Energy Program is not just going to work but that it will work extremely well. If it works from their point of view and creates energy self-sufficiency, then it works well from our point of view, which is the public point of view.

Let us look specifically at the role of Petro-Canada. It is said that Petro-Canada is virtually a useless agency. The United States is averse to Petro-Canada. The Americans do not like the National Energy Program. It is true that they might have some problems with parts of the National Energy Program, but I ask the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre to consider that total foreign investment in the United States is less than 5 per cent of total investment. Foreign investment in Canada in many sectors is more than 50 per cent. The Canadian people have told us clearly that they want to see that problem dealt with. They want to see their ability as shareholders and owners to participate directly in their economy enhanced.

The National Energy Program does that. It will correct a situation which has existed, and we agree with hon. members opposite that it has existed for far too long. We want to see that percentage brought down to 50 per cent and, if the private sector can expand further, we would like to see Canadian ownership even greater than 50 per cent. That is certainly my personal feeling. However, to say that another country should object strenuously to a Canadian policy which attempts to vest ownership of an industry in our own country to the point where the Canadian people own 50 per cent, and to see that strenuous objection coming from another country which is concerned about 5 per cent ownership in its own industry, is beyond my wildest imagination.

Mr. Waddell: Don't look at me, John.

Mr. Evans: It is ludicrous. Perhaps the policy is misunderstood. Perhaps hon. members of this chamber should be travelling to the United States to educate the Americans. Do they realize what their situation is? Do they realize how much foreign ownership there is in this country? There is no intention to nationalize, to seize or to take away without compensation. What we want is to participate more in our own economy and in our own future. There is nothing heinous or socialistic about that. It is just good, solid, economic common sense.

Before I stop I would like to say one more thing. The hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Cooper) talked about the 25 per cent back-in. The fact is that under the NEP, the Canadian public will pay up to 90 per cent of all exploration costs if, after exploration, oil is found. The Canadian government will say, "We have paid up to 90 per cent of all your costs so far; now we would like 25 per cent ownership." For that 25 per cent public ownership, we will pay 25 per cent of the development costs in the future, and there will be some compensation through a formula, which will have been agreed upon, for some of the additional costs which will have been incurred during exploration. That is not confiscation. The Canadian people will already have paid for 90 per cent of it.

Mr. Waddell: Why are we taking only 25 per cent then?

Mr. Evans: There are risks associated with drilling holes. One might drill 15 dry holes and pay the cost. We want to see exploration take place. Under the proposals of the New Democratic Party, exploration will not take place. Under this proposal, all the people in the oil industry, in Calgary, say, the program is going to be successful, Canadians will see exploration and development take place. We will be oil self-sufficient not by 1990, but probably before 1990. May I call it four o'clock, Mr. Speaker?

● (1600)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): It is four o'clock, but the Chair is not clear as to whether there might be a disposition among members to dispose of Motions Nos. 21 and 22.

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): It being four o'clock, the House will now proceed to the consideration of private members' business, as listed on today's Order Paper, namely public bills, notices of motions and private bills.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' PUBLIC BILLS

[English]

Items Nos. 18 to 156 inclusive on the Order Paper allowed to stand by unanimous consent.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

MEASURE TO ENCOURAGE GROWTH OF RESERVE FORCE

Mr. W. Kenneth Robinson (Etobicoke-Lakeshore) moved that Bill C-359, to encourage the growth of the reserve force of the Canadian Forces, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased indeed to have the opportunity to speak on my bill C-359, an act to encourage the growth of the reserve force of the Canadian Forces. The explanation of the bill is indicated in the explanatory note as follows:

The purpose of this bill is to encourage support for the reserve force of the Canadian Forces.

What I am suggesting is that reservists must be given the opportunity to train without prejudice to their full-time employment. They must be given this opportunity without fear of reprisal from their employers, without sacrificing their regular vacation and without sacrificing their seniority.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, reserve force training usually takes place in the evenings and on weekends during the year. However, the culmination of such training and an exercise to which all members look forward is the annual training exercise of two weeks' duration when the reserve unit is brought together at a specified military centre.

Too frequently reserve force members, in particular the younger members, are unable to participate in such exercises because their employer cannot or will not provide leave for this purpose. Many young citizen soldiers do not have enough seniority in their employment to choose their holidays at the exact time of the reserve force training exercise to which their unit is directed. I remember taking these training exercises, but I was self-employed and did not have the same problem that many of these people have with their employer. Furthermore, some members are married and have a responsibility and natural inclination to spend a holiday period with their families.

At a time when the defence of one's country is very much an issue and when we as Canadians should get as much from our defence dollar as possible, a larger and better prepared reserve force is a desirable objective.

Military experts today talk of limited warfare engagements, with the major battleground taking place in Europe or the Middle East. Gone will be the opportunity of producing fighting men for it will be a "come as you are" battle. There will not be the time, as there was in the Second World War, when men went through their training and then on to battle.

I recall my own training. At the end of the war, I was still training in the RCAF. I received my wings after the war was over. It took over a year of training before I was qualified. We certainly will not be able to wait that period of time if another war should develop. Hence, there is a need for a better prepared and equipped reserve to bolster the fighting force if a war should break out.

Canada has an unparalleled record when it comes to the willingness and the ability to fight and defend, not only its country but also those of our allies in times of war. The success of the Canadian Armed Forces has been credited to the higher degree of readiness and training that they have received.

Canada's reserve force consists of the primary reserve and the supplementary reserve. The supplementary reserve is a list of personnel, either retired or honourably released from the regular force, who have elected voluntarily to have their names remain on the list. As long as they meet age, medical requirements, and remain current in their trade or occupation, they are liable to call-out when the need arises.

When the Korean war broke out, I was called out for a period of four months to train recruits at the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps school at Camp Borden to fight in Korea. I did not get there myself, but many of those I trained were in the Korean war.

The primary reserve is made up of four components; the naval reserve, the milita or the reserve land force, the air reserve and the communication command reserve.

Let us look at the situation in 1945. Canada had a population of 12 million and a reserve of 83,264. Six years later, with a population increase of two million to 14 million, the number in the reserve had dropped by 30,000 to 53,525. Seven years later, when Canada had a population of 17 million, we had dropped slightly more but still had roughly the same number. In those seven years, our reserve force had not increased although our population had increased by three million. By 1971, with a population of 21 million, the reserve force had decreased to 21,869. Last year, in 1980, with a population of 24 million, there were 20,265 serving in our reserve, less than one tenth of 1 per cent of our total population. It can be seen from the statistics that although our population increased over the years, the numbers in our reserve force have been decreasing dramatically. In the past, the reserves have been an integral and imperative part of the Canadian Armed Forces and served as the training ground and back-up force to the regular forces.

Today the role of the reserve is twofold. First, to enhance the war deterrence of the Canadian Armed Forces and, second, to support the regular force in ongoing peacetime tasks and activities. General Richard Rohmer, a retired chief of the reserve forces, said:

> The role of the reserves force is to augment the regular force in times of peace, emergency or war.

Brigadier General Cowan, when testifying before the Senate Standing Committee on Foreign Affairs, revealed the extent of their role within the Armed Forces. He stated that it is the policy of the Department of National Defence that the regular forces and the reserve force be partners in the Canadian Armed Forces total force concept.

Historically, the reserve forces have always made a significant contribution to the total strenght of Canada's Armed Forces, and have played an important role in many military endeavours in both peace and war.

The reserves provide trained officers and men for reinforcement and they have a particularly important role in internal security contingency plans. First, the naval reserve maintains a control of shipping organizations for operation and expansion in time of emergency. Second, the militia also provides trained personnel for augmenting civil emergency operations, and third, the air reserve provides light tactical air transport.

Members of the reserve have always shown a great willingness to undergo training in peacetime to prepare themselves for active duty when called upon. Because their willingness is there, we need to provide a better arrangement for the reservists so that they may participate in training and educational activities provided by the armed services.

My bill pertains primarily to the public service and Crown corporations. As hon. members know, public servants in Canada come under the Financial Administration Act. Under military leave, section 47 reads:

> A deputy head may grant to an employee leave of absence without pay for a period not exceeding three years for service in
>
> (a) the regular forces; or
>
> (b) the active service forces.

Section 48 states that a deputy head may grant leave of absence to an employee who is a member of the reserve forces for any period during which the employee is required to take annual training, attend parades, assist in disaster relief, and so on. This kind of training can be with or without pay.

I remember the floods in Toronto in the fifties. My regiment, the Irish Regiment of Canada, was called out to do duty at that time because of a natural disaster. I recall also the Mississauga derailment disaster of not too long ago when some of the forces could have been called out. They could have carried on a very heavy role had they been required to do so.

• (1610)

The point I want to emphasize is that the deputy head may grant leave of absence. It is not demanded that he do so, but he may do so if he wishes. In effect, the government has encouraged employers, both in the private and in the public sector, to grant leave of absence to the reservists through a voluntary approach.

I believe the federal government should now implement legislation that will make it mandatory for leave of absence to be granted, both in the public sector and to employees of Crown corporations.

In 1978, the then Minister of National Defence, Mr. Barney Danson, set up the National Employers' Support Committee, called NESC. The members of this committee are prominent individuals in the business community. The committee encourages companies in the private sector to give reservists two weeks off in the summer to take their training, but it assures the employer that the employee will not lose job progression and the two weeks will not be considered as his vacation. The committee has been highly successful in the last three years. It appears that once executives in the business community are made aware of this need, most companies willingly grant the leave for reservist training.

The problems that NESC face are usually with the smaller companies. For example, if a company only has 20 employees and four of them want to go on reserve training at the same time this may create a real problem. However, this is the kind of situation that may be worked out. Certainly it may be a problem for the small-business man, but for companies such as General Motors and others, this should not be a real problem, and certainly not in the public sector or for Crown corporations.

As I said at the outset, I propose in this bill that the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Lamontagne) encourage that similar leave be granted outside the federal public sector, and to this end I suggest that he enter into arrangements with employers in both the private and provincial sector.

The issue of pay and pay supplements to reservists when on leave of absence is an issue that the NESC leaves up to the employer and employee to work out between themselves. The National Employment Support Committee does not involve itself in that issue.

In the United States, legislation does exist that gives reserves and national guardsmen leave without loss in pay or time. Section 6323 of the United States Code dealing with military leave, reserves and national guardsmen, states:

> An employee as defined by Section 2105 of this title or an individual employed by the government of the District of Columbia, permanent or temporary indefinite, is entitled to leave without loss in pay, time or performance or efficiency rating for each day, not in excess of 15 days in a calendar year in which he is on active duty or is engaged in field or coast defence training—

It also provides—and I think there is an amendment—that the number of days can be cumulative, so that if you do not use up the 15 days in one year, you may use up the days in the following year.

During the 1950s and 1960s in Canada, the reserve force was investigated at various times by a committee, a commission, a study and a departmental review. Implementation of many of the recommendations of these investigative bodies dramatically changed the role, the size and the structure of the reserve.

In May, 1953, the Chief of the General Staff established a committee under the chairmanship of Major General Howard Kennedy to examine the organization, training and administration of the reserve army and make recommendations on ways of improving its effectiveness. One of the most important recommendations made by the Kennedy committee was in response to the weakened state of the reserve force which was attributed, in the committee's opinion, to apathy on the part of the public. I certainly hope that is not the situation at the present time.

In their report, they stated:

> ... that the reserve forces are not only necessary but vital to the defence of Canada and deserve the support of all citizens.

I might point out that at that time the reserves were at a level of 53,000; whereas today they are less than 19,000.

In February of 1964, the Minister of National Defence approved the formation of the Suttie Commission, placed under the chairmanship of Brigadier General E. R. Suttie from whom it gained its name. As the Kennedy committee before it, the Suttie committee stressed the need for public support for the militia. It asked for a vigorous public relations campaign to be spearheaded by vocal government support at all levels; but this was not forthcoming.

The organizational changes resulting from the Suttie commission's recommendations were sweeping and structurally disruptive. They brought about a diminution in the strength of the reserve in terms of units and personnel and reduced its capability to recruit, train and to administer itself. Many units were "mothballed", including the regiment that I was part of at that time, the Irish Regiment of Canada.

I will conclude my comments soon, Mr. Speaker, if I may have your indulgence for a few more minutes.

In mid-1965, the establishment of an organization known as the Deputy Chief Reserves was approved by the Defence Council. From this review of the reserves evolved one of the most detailed and comprehensive tasking plan ever developed in peacetime.

Briefly, the militia was divided into three categories: First, the ready reserve which consisted of individuals trained to such a degree in their particular trade that they can fill in for the regular force; second, the regional reserve, composed of units and individuals required to reinforce other units and committed to the defence of Canada; and third, the mobile command reserve, consisting of those units that would form the training organization needed in an emergency to reinforce the regular force.

The creation of these categories led to a fundamental change in the reserve's system of training. No longer would units proceed to summer training camps as organized entities under their own commanding officers. In future, only subunits that were part of the mobile command reserve would proceed to summer camp, where they were grouped into units of battalion size for training under regular force commanders. Training for the balance of the reserve would be conducted at local unit headquarters at regular force schools and on job training with units and organizations requiring their support in the event of an emergency. In this way, it was felt that the training resources could be concentrated upon the tasks to be peformed, rather than a general and not too extensive training of all the militia for all foreseeable tasks.

The idea was efficient from a financial point of view, but it overlooked two vital areas: first, the training of senior militia officers in the handling of their own units and men; second, the development of that "esprit de corps" so necessary for holding a unit together, particularly under trying circumstances. It can only be developed through long periods of working and training together as an organized unit.

On March 24, 1981, a subcommittee of the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence was formed. The subcommittee was empowered to study the status, capability and role of the Armed Forces Reserves and report to the committee not later than December 7, 1981.

I look forward to the tendering of this report to the Committee on External Affairs and National Defence. I hope my bill will have some impact on their findings and on the report.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, it is obvious from the bill I am proposing that it is to encourage support for the reserve force of the Canadian Forces. It does not go all the way but is, I submit, a step in the right direction toward making it easier for those in the public service and Crown corporations to serve in the reserves, and to encourage the private sector and the provincial public sector to do likewise, in the interest of all Canadians.

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): I should like to congratulate the hon. member for Etobicoke-Lakeshore (Mr. Robinson), who has had a distinguished military career, on bringing this matter to the attention of the House. I wish that members on that side would not write out a 40-minute speech and try to get through them in 20 minutes. I found it very difficult to understand what the hon. member was saying. However, I promise to read his speech in Hansard and find out exactly how much sense it made.

We are pleased that at least one person on that side of the House spoke about the interest in the defence of Canada. Usually, we do not hear anyone on that side speaking about the Armed Forces, unless it is to advise us of yet more reductions that are to take place, or when they speak on their favourite subject of the unification of the three armed services.

The general intent of this bill is something that we, on this side, have no difficulty in supporting! During our brief term in office, when the Hon. Allan McKinnon was Minister of National Defence, we were setting up plans to support and expand the reserve forces. Unfortunately, we were not able to carry these out in any detail. This afternoon we have been given the information by the hon. member for Etobicoke-Lakeshore that since the government changed, there has been yet another reduction of, about 1,000 people in the Canadian reserves.

I find it difficult to understand why we are dealing with this bill this afternoon in one way, and that is because the subject matter of this bill is already before the subcommittee of the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence. This illustrates the confusion opposite when it comes to defence matters. Perhaps the hon. member did not know that that was the case.

● (1620)

I am interested in what will happen in the debate this afternoon, whether hon. members opposite will talk out their own bill or try to refer this matter to the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence for further study. The committee already has a mandate to study it. I do not know what type of disposition hon. members opposite would like to make. I will watch very carefully.

I have referred to confusion in defence matters. I should like to add to that by indicating confusion and neglect in another area. I have the report of the Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science entitled, "They Served—We Care". Recommendation No. 4 of the report reads as follows:

> We recommend that all necessary steps be taken immediately to eliminate the unacceptable delays in processing pension applications and in pension adjudications which have accumulated since 1970—

Although there are some people like the hon. member for Etobicoke-Lakeshore who would like to see the government act, this illustrates that the Minister of Veterans Affairs (Mr. Campbell) will just not act. The trouble in the administration of pensions has been brought to the attention of the House on many occasions. I hope this renewed interest will see the matter finally resolved.

There is some difficulty with the mechanism proposed by the hon. member in his bill, although we fully support the intent. If a number of employees in a particular branch of the public service all wanted to take leaves of absence at one time, it might adversely affect the operation of the department. One example which jumps to mind immediately is the post office. Another one would be the Northern Transportation Company Ltd., a Crown corporation. Its main business is done during the summer icefree season, a matter of two or three months. If at that time employees of that organization decided they wanted to take leave of absence, it would disrupt the very necessary service rendered. There might be some difficulty there. I was not sure whether the hon. member who made this proposal was thinking that leave of absence with pay should be granted in all cases. If that were to be the case, it might be very expensive for the government.

I am pleased to see the hon. member indicating that he does not think that is necessary. Many people who serve in the reserve do not do it with a pecuniary interest. They do it to serve their country. I am pleased the hon. member takes that view also. If this were extended to private industry, the disruptive effects might be even greater.

The wording of Clause No. 2(2) of the proposed bill does not make sense. It is not a matter of law. The Minister of National Defence (Mr. Lamontagne) may encourage someone to do something. He does not need legislative authority to encourage people to do things. He can do that as a matter of course. It is just an administrative matter. There is some difficulty with the way in which the bill is worded. Many of the items proposed in the bill could already be done by administrative arrangements. It is not necessary to introduce a new law into the statute books.

I am about to commit the same parliamentary error as the hon. member who spoke first. I will speak very briefly to the intent of the bill, which we have said we fully support, and then I will speak in general about the Canadian Armed Forces Reserve. This subject seldom comes before the House and I think it is worthy of some discussion.

The hon. member referred to the supplementary reserves, those who have served honourably in the regular forces and continue voluntarily to play a very valuable role. I thought the primary reserve consisted of 20,000 people, but I have been informed that it now consists of 19,000 people and is shrinking every day. As the hon. member said, it is divided into four main sections, the first one being the militia, the oldest section having beein established in 1855. In the 1870s at the time of the Fenian raids, some 40,000 men served in the Canadian militia. At the time of those troubles, or of potential troubles between British North America and the United States of America, the main defence force in Canada consisted of the militia. They kept Canada safe from becoming part of what is now the United States, if we look at it that way. Then we have the naval reserve and the air reserve. It was very interesting to see just a few days ago the last flight of the single Otter in the Canadian Air Reserve. These have been replaced by Kiowa helicopters. The single Otter has been retired after a number of years of honourable service with the Canadian Air Reserve. Also there is the communications reserve. It is a very small unit consisting of 1,500 or so people.

Mrs. Appolloni: What about the rangers?

Mr. Nickerson: They have a special place in my heart. I will speak about them in a moment.

The reserves proved their worth in the First and Second World Wars. They provided the base or platform from which large military forces could be raised in short periods of time. For instance, a military force in excess of 600,000 people was raised in World War I. Of late, military strategists have given the matter of reserve forces some study. In terms of nuclear war, the strategists thought for awhile that perhaps we no longer needed reserves, that if a war took place, it would be fought with the people who were on the spot and already trained, with the equipment on hand. The idea was that the war would not last more than a few days. Subsequently they have changed their ideas on that. Now we see that reserve forces might well play a major role in a major conflict.

Aside from their potential uses in wartime, they can be used to support the regular forces in their peacetime duties. Now it is agreed by all strategists who have thought about this, that Canada needs a reserve force. It plays a vital role and should be properly maintained and supplied. Certainly this was our view when we were in government. Our plan was to equip and supply the reserve forces adequately.

I should like to make a brief mention of the cadets. There are some 60,000 cadets in Canada—air cadets, sea cadets and those attached to the army. In particular, I congratulate the people responsible for building up a cadet force in my part of the country, in Canada's north. There are few things that young people can do to be a part of Canada. The establishment of the cadets has had a very beneficial effect. It has taught young people useful things. It has given them a sense of citizenship. They have been given the opportunity to do something useful with their lives by joining the regular forces when they graduate from school, if they so wish. Even if they do not decide on a military career, they will have done a lot of good for themselves and, what is more important, they will have done something good for Canada.

● (1630)

I should also like to see the re-establishment of the Canadian officer training corps. This has been allowed to lapse, but I think it should be established again in Canadian universities; indeed, I have never understood why it was discontinued. Many of the comments I made about cadets could be repeated with regard to the officer training corps. I understand that there is certainly a critical shortage of young, trained, junior officers in the Canadian forces. We should look to the universities to train these people and, to that end, the officer training corps should be re-established.

I should like now to deal with the Canadian rangers. In my opinion, this was a very elite part of the reserve. It is about 1,000 strong and is peculiar to northern Canada. Reserve units exist in many small northern communities, some only five or ten men strong. These people have been chosen because of their special knowledge of the local area. Should we ever have to fight in the north—and I hope that will never be the case—these people could render invaluable assistance to regular forces fighting on terrain and under conditions totally unfamiliar to them.

In peacetime, the Canadian rangers could also fulfil a vital role. All kinds of things could go wrong in the north for which their services might be required. An incident which immediately comes to mind is the crash of the Russian satellite in my constituency not too long ago.

I am pleased at the way a number of distinguished officers commanding the northern region, such as Major General Thorneycroft, General Withers, Brigadier General Beattie, and Brigadier General Baile who is there at present, have gone out of their way to build up the cadet force and the ranger force. They have travelled from one small area to the other to give scattered ranger units the encouragement they need. In particular I should like to commend the Nanook ranger series of exercises which have been conducted in the last few years.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I should like to say that although we have some slight reservation about the wording of the bill, we can certainly support the concept. We would encourage full support for a Canadian reserve force, and we hope that the subcommittee, which presently has this matter under study, will report favourably to the House.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mark Rose (Mission-Port Moody): Mr. Speaker, I should also like to offer my congratulations to the hon. member for Etobicoke-Lakeshore (Mr. Robinson) for bringing Bill C-359 to the attention of the House and calling for a reference to a subcommittee of the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence.

The hon. member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson) complained that the hon. member for Etobicoke-Lakeshore gave a 40-minute speech in 20 minutes. The usual complaint in this place is just the reverse; far too many of us make a 20-minute speech and take 40 minutes in which to do it. I congratulate the hon. member on the speediest presentation that I have heard in some time.

Even though we were not able to follow all his swiftly uttered words, I understand there is some disposition to have this matter go to the subcommittee, and therefore I shall not use up my 20 minutes. Perhaps half that time will take care of what I want to say this afternoon.

In a way, I am substituting for this party's defence critic who is a member of that committee, the hon. member for Selkirk-Interlake (Mr. Sargeant). He had to leave for Manitoba in order to deal with a little electoral unpleasantness caused by Premier Sterling Lyon. If he were here, I am sure he could deal with many of the details of the bill. Even though a number of my constituents have spoken to me of their concern about the appalling state of the reserve unit in this country, I do not think it is possible for me to deal with every aspect of this matter, so, like the hon. member for Western Arctic, I shall make some general remarks.

I should like to outline my reservation about the reference to the subcommittee. I support the reference but I do so with some real reservations. It is common knowledge around the Hill that this subcommitee has not been very productive. As a matter of fact, this information has filtered beyond the Hill, and I shall refer to this in my remarks.

The House gave a reference to the standing committee to report on the status, capabilities and role of the Armed Forces late last winter, with instructions to report by December 15 next. It was not until March 24 that the reference for a subcommittee was passed by the standing committee. On May 14, the subcommittee eventually met for the first time, and it was not until June 16 that it began to discuss how it would approach the subject. Yesterday it heard its first witness in public but, as it must report to the full committee by December 7, that will indicate to anyone with a slight knowledge of how subcommittees work, that it can only have about two and a half weeks left for hearings. There are still dozens of submissions to be heard on this very important subject. When the printing requirements, the time necessary for translation, the time necessary to get the committee to agree or disagree with subcommittee recommendations, are all taken into consideration, it is clear that the task is impossible. I am concerned about that, as are a number of other people.

I said that it is common knowledge on the Hill that the committee was not working well. This knowledge has spilled into the press, as is evidenced in the article by Douglas Fisher which appeared in today's Toronto Sun. I bring this up not to excoriate the subcommittee chairman but to point out that Parliament cannot ignore what is being broadcast in the media. I will quote that part of the article which shows that there is an urgent need to deal with the Armed Forces and the problems that relate to the reserve. The article reads in part as follows:

> Unfortunately, this urgency has not affected the work of the subcommittee, chaired by a Liberal MP, Maurice Harquail. Two months passed before the chairman called an organization meeting. Another month passed before a second meeting in mid-June. Over the period of the summer recess the committee was briefed and cosseted by the regular force military commands across Canada. (The committee did not use this opportunity to meet with the reserve troops, sailors and airmen who may be affected by their report or who could profile all that's haywire in the current reserves. Instead, the committee will receive their written submissions and hold hearings in Ottawa under the benign gaze of the defence department mandarins. This leaves the impression the report will be an inside job—

● (1640)

Fisher closes this portion with a quote:

> —whatever the Chief of Defence—

He does not say "wants". I think it is a typo that was left out; but I think that is the impression he was intending to leave. I am worried about this, and not just because of its subject matter. One of the things that we have noted here in this session of Parliament is the excellent work of task forces and subcommittees. We have had them on a lot of topics. We have had one on alternative energy of which I was a member, as was my colleague, the hon. member for Niagara Falls (Mr. MacBain), chaired by the hon. member for Pontiac-Gatineau-Labelle (Mr. Lefebvre). By all accounts, it was a thorough, capable—if not outstanding—job.

We have had the committee on the handicapped, chaired by the present parliamentary secretary to the House leader. We have had the North-South. They have all gotten down to work. They have done their homework, they have studied and they have reported. We know, from the length of time it has taken some of us and the hours we have put in on that work, how demanding a job it is, how complex it can be, and how long it takes. One cannot do it in two and a half weeks of public hearings if one is going to do a thorough job. It just cannot be done. As a matter of fact, with his interest in this subject, I do not know why the subcommittee was not headed by the hon. member for Etobicoke-Lakeshore (Mr. Robinson). Other Liberals have done thorough and favourable work as heads of these task forces and subcommittees, so I think that if he has that interest, perhaps he should have been the one.

I make reference to this because it is terribly disappointing, not just to parliamentarians, but also to the 19,000 or so Canadians who serve their country in the reserves. They do not do it for the money. They do not even get beer money out of it, really. They are doing it for a commitment; that is why they are doing it. I think they have a right to expect from Parliament much more than just a once over lightly kind of look at their problems. We will be letting them down unless we give an extension of the time permitted to the subcommittee and make some other arrangements. I see that the parliamentary secretary to the minister is here and I am pleased that she is. I know she must be concerned as well.

Dozens of other organizations and individuals have made submissions. They want to be heard. They have submitted briefs, they have indicated their willingness to appear before the committee, and they will not have a chance because the hearings are in Ottawa and there are only two and a half weeks left.

Let me turn to some of the other things more directly related to the bill. In principle, I support the bill before us. Perhaps the reservations about certain kinds of federal institutions mentioned by Northern Transportation Company Ltd. and by the hon. member for Western Arctic would have to be considered, but we are really referring the subject matter of the bill to the committee. Certainly, if one wanted, federally chartered companies could probably be added to the list of Crown corporations and other government agencies which might be included. However, the guidelines certainly have to be worked out. That is not our purpose here. Our purpose here is to deal not with the details, but with the principle of the reference.

If we are going to have a Canadian reserve, there must be proper training. The members have to get away sometime for training and vacations; maybe not two months, but two weeks at a minimum. They must have some training periods of reasonable length. More important, they ought to be able to train as units. This is now largely impossible because members of reserve forces, for the most part, can only train during their summer holidays and, of course, their vacations do not always coincide. That is another problem.

In addition, maybe we are asking too much of people who are already giving up one or two evenings a week and some weekends with their families in the service of their country; but, in addition to asking them to do two or three evenings a week or one or two evenings on weekends, we are now going to ask them to give up their summer holidays with their families, without any adequate kind of recompense at all. They probably will not receive the most effective training should some of the other conditions alluded to earlier take place.

I think this bill would overcome some of these problems and substantially contribute to the capability of the reserve forces. It would say, to each and every one of those people who are members of the reserves, that this country cares about what they are doing, and so does Parliament.

I would like to talk for a minute or two about the fact that there may be some debate about the role the reserves should play in Canada. We have reserves. There is no debate at all about the fact that they have been neglected, that their morale is down to zero, and that they suffer the inadequacies of poor equipment and inadequate training.

We are just about reaching Remembrance Day. We are not very far away from it. I guess my first memory of the reserves, then called the militia, goes back to the time when I was in elementary school. My elementary school principal was an officer in the Westminster regiment. We had cadets in the school at the time, and we had uniforms and all those things which probably would look out of place today. There were all kinds of other things and attitudes that we do not have today, too; but I will not go into those. When World War I was declared in 1939—

An hon. Member: 1939?

Mr. Rose: —who were the first ones to march off? My high school principal and the members of the reserve who trained in what was then called the Mission Rink, which has now been torn down. We later called it the armouries, and there are all kinds of names it was called. However, the fact is that there was an active group, part of the New Westminster reserve unit, the New Westminster regiment, training there at all times. They were the first to respond to the call when the call came, when trouble came.

If we let the reserves run down, as we have been doing, then who will respond the next time trouble occurs? Some people say that it will not matter, anyway, because when they start throwing those A-bombs around at one another, it will not matter whether we have reserves; we might as well have a few guys out there with pointed sticks or big shovels to dig holes. I do not know. However, maybe having reserve units can do something to at least prevent the last resort being used. Again, we could get a lot of arguments, both within and outside my party on that one. I remember the cadets; I remember the New Westminsters. I remember how they responded in World War I and in Korea.

Almost every industrialized nation, both in the East and the West Bloc, has a ratio of three in the reserves to one in the regular forces. Our ratio is exactly the reverse. We have three in the regular forces for every one in the reserves. We are out of step or something. The Senate subcommittee on this subject suggested that in wartime we probably need 108,000 reserves. We have 30,000 on paper, and obviously that is a force, even if they could all serve, which would be too small to discharge its obligations. Besides, how many could go, out of those 30,000 that are on paper? Some would be too old, some would be too young, and some would not be suitable for certain kinds of combat roles, and therefore, it is a serious problem.

The hon. member for Etobicoke-Lakeshore talked about augmentation. The reserves will be used, as a policy, to augment the regular forces; but if they are not trained as units, how can they? How can they adequately augment a regular force unit if their training is individual? For instance, an example is the Winnipeg Rifles. They do not train as a formation; they train as individuals. They would never go into action as a formation or work together as a formation. People who are much more knowledgeable than I in this particular area say that this will have some alarming consequences.

If we are going to augment the regular forces with the reserve units, why do we not arm the reserve units with the same equipment that is being used by the regular forces? There are some armoured reserve units which have scarcely seen a tank in this country, with the exception, perhaps, of a Sherman tank, but certainly not the Leopard tanks which are being used over in Europe. Naval reserves, I am told, are still using four-inch guns, probably two weapons generations behind what modern naval units are using. There are probably other examples that, if you searched, you could probably find, very easily, but I do not think I need to do so in order to make the point.

● (1650)

We need strong support by the regulars if our reserve units are to be functional. They are doing the training, they are the professionals and the ones who will be up to date. I do not want anybody to mistake what I am saying. I do not want to malign anyone. However, it has frequently been the practice that the officers from the regular forces chosen to train the reserve units are people an inch away from retirement. I am not suggesting that some of them do not do an excellent job, and I said I did not want to malign anyone. However, I think the greater number of them used to train the reserve units should be ambitious young officers whose record in reserve training would somehow help them in their advancement. I would look for that. Again I am sure there are many officers who are about to be retired who do excellent work, but I think there should be a better balance between young and older or nearly retired officers training the reserves.

I suggest the committee should take a look at these things. Just because we are different from some countries in Europe and the United States in that we do not have conscription, as some countries do, does not mean we are all wrong, but it certainly will not hurt to look at this.

I am a little concerned that, while we do support this reference and request today, we cannot have all that much confidence that the committee, if it continues to perform as it has in the last six months, will accomplish much, or that much will happen with the reference. I am sorry to say that, but I think that needs to be said.

Mrs. Ursula Appolloni (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to correct the record in at least two instances and add, with reference to the last statement by the hon. member for Mission-Port Moody (Mr. Rose), to say that in my view it is very sad indeed that the author of the article to which he referred was not even present yesterday. It is unfortunate he was not present, as I was, because he would have heard three of the best briefs I have personally heard in a long time. The committee is working.

Another reference in the same article which he quoted said that the subcommittee on reserves had not spoken to the ranks, only to officers. I can assure the hon. member and the author of that article, and I wish he would come to the meetings before he covers them in the press, that we did speak to the "other ranks", both at Gagetown and Petawawa. In fact, at Petawawa I personally had the great thrill of being able to drive in a tank, and I assure you it was not an officer who drove it.

The other point I want to correct, and I think this is important for the record, relates to the fact that the mover of this motion, echoed by our friend from across the way, the hon. member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson), misquoted some figures. They both referred to the present paid strength of the reserves as being under 21,000, and said it has fallen this last year. I am happy to report—and again, if the author of that report had been at the meeting yesterday he would have known—that the present strength of the reserves as of June of this year, far from being 19,000, is 22,898. So much for inaccurate reporting.

There were many other points I would have enjoyed making on this very important matter, but as a sign that this particular government and the minister, whom I am proud to represent in the House this afternoon, are much more anxious for action than for words, I will cut short my speech and move, seconded by the hon. member for Kent (Mr. Bossy):

That the motion be amended by deleting all the words after the word "That" and substituting the following therefor:

"Bill C-359, an act to encourage the growth of the Reserve Force of the Canadian Forces, be not now read a second time but that the order be discharged, the bill withdrawn and the subject matter thereof referred to the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence."

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. Hon. members have heard the motion proposed by the hon. parliamentary secretary, seconded by the hon. member for Kent (Mr. Bossy). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion (Mrs. Appolloni) agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Shall the motion as amended carry?

Some hon. Members: Carried.

Motion (Mr. Robinson) (Etobicoke-Lakeshore) as amended agreed to.

Order discharged and bill withdrawn.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Is it the pleasure of the House that I call it five o'clock?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The hour provided for the consideration of private members' business has now expired. It being five o'clock, this House stands adjourned until Monday next at 2 p.m., pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

At 4.56 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Monday, October 26, 1981

The House met at 2 p.m.

• (1405)

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

VIA RAIL

CANCELLATION OF SERVICES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Madam Speaker, the Government of Canada has been made well aware of the feelings of the people of Canada regarding VIA Rail cuts, and cutbacks in passenger service. A 19 per cent cutback of service in Canada means that 50 per cent of the service in western Canada is cut back, almost 50 per cent of the service in Atlantic Canada will disappear, and 1,600 VIA lay-offs will have an effect on 8,000 jobs in Canada. I move, seconded by the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski):

That this House instruct the Minister of Transport to rescind immediately the order in council cancelling one fifth of Canada's rail passenger service and call public hearings so that he may be informed of the current facts and the absolute need for this service in all regions of Canada.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

REFERRAL OF QUESTION TO STANDING COMMITTEE—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. J. R. Ellis (Prince Edward-Hastings): Madam Speaker, after VIA Rail arbitrarily removed trains Nos. 45 and 46 from Ottawa to Belleville, it announced that the Turbo would begin service between Montreal, Belleville and Toronto at the end of the month. Now VIA has delayed this service, citing problems with the LRC trains. I therefore move, seconded by the hon. member for Parry Sound-Muskoka (Mr. Darling):

That the Minister of Transport make a statement on motions giving the full details of the problems facing the LRCs, the reasons for delays in other services, and authorize the Standing Committee on Transport to deal with the whole VIA Rail system in detail.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

SUGGESTED RESCINDING OF ORDER IN COUNCIL—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 concerning the VIA cutbacks which have upset Canadians from coast to coast. In view of the September 28 decision of the Canadian Transport Commission which said that the accounting system used to estimate financial losses of passenger trains is inadequate and should be reviewed, and since this means that the decision of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) to cut VIA services is based on completely outdated and inaccurate information, a fact which was confirmed by direct information given to me recently in Moncton and Saint John, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis):

That this House urge the government to rescind the order in council abandoning passenger service, at least until the Canadian Transport Commission or the House of Commons Standing Committee on Transport holds a full public inquiry.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

CONDEMNATION OF MINISTERIAL ACTION—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette): Madam Speaker, 100 years ago the arrival of the railroads signalled the beginning of many cities and towns in Manitoba. It is ironic that the Liberal government has chosen to recognize this milestone by completely removing rail passenger service from many of these communities. I therefore move under the provisions of Standing Order 43, seconded by the hon. member for Fundy-Royal (Mr. Corbett):

That this House condemn the Minister of Transport for his now infamous dictatorial edict of July 27 which removed all rail passenger service from many of these rural communities in Manitoba, leaving several of them totally isolated.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

S.O. 43

SUGGESTED POSTPONEMENT OF CUTS IN PASSENGER SERVICE—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Bob Corbett (Fundy-Royal): Madam Speaker, the task force on passenger rail service heard more than 50 briefs opposing the termination of the Atlantic Limited and the Edmundston to Moncton run. More than 13,500 names have been collected in the maritimes and have been presented to the House of Commons opposing these cuts, and a delegation well representing Atlantic Canadians has travelled to Ottawa today in an effort to retain these routes. I therefore move, seconded by the hon. member for Carleton-Charlotte (Mr. McCain):

That the House instruct the government to postpone any cuts to passenger rail service until the democratic process embodied in the Canadian Transport Commission has been satisfied and public hearings are held to determine the fate of these lines.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

CUTS IN SERVICE BETWEEN ALBERTA AND BRITISH COLUMBIA—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Madam Speaker, I too rise on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity under the provisions of Standing Order 43. The cutbacks announced by the government in rail service between Edmonton and Vancouver and Edmonton and Prince Rupert will have very serious economic and social consequences for business and individual western Canadians, and since these indiscriminate cutbacks provide further evidence of the total disregard of the Liberal government for the growing feelings of alienation and isolation, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Cariboo-Chilcotin (Mr. Greenaway):

That the decision to eliminate VIA rail service from Jasper to Vancouver and to reduce by half the service between Edmonton and Prince Rupert be rescinded or at least postponed until public hearings have been held to determine the validity and consequences of such action.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

CALL FOR IMPROVEMENT OF SERVICE TO NOVA SCOTIA—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 to protest the latest illogical, discriminatory, counterproductive, arbitrary and destructive series of service curtailments by our supposedly national railway system, which eliminates 13 passenger routes, reduces another six, and affects the employment of 1,600 workers. I therefore move, seconded by the hon. member for Central Nova (Mr. MacKay):

That the eastern transcontinental route called "The Atlantic" from Halifax to Montreal, be retained, and that the government keep its promise of providing Nova Scotians with two light, rapid and comfortable trains by the autumn of next year.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

● (1410)

NATIONAL ENERGY PROGRAM

SUCCESSFUL OUTCOME OF FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL NEGOTIATIONS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Al MacBain (Niagara Falls): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. Since September 1 of this year the Government of Canada has reached energy pricing and taxation agreements with the provinces of Alberta and British Columbia. Today marks the signing of an energy-pricing agreement between this government and the government of Saskatchewan. I move, seconded by the hon. member for Scarborough Centre (Mr. Kelly):

That this House recognize and applaud all the parties involved in these negotiations for their efforts in carrying forward the National Energy Program which will benefit all regions of Canada.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous agreement for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

CALL FOR GLOBAL DISARMAMENT—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. In view of the widespread demonstrations last weekend protesting the build-up of nuclear arms by both the superpowers, and in view of the decision taken by the United States to construct neutron bombs which are conceived to destroy humanity while preserving property, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans):

That this House go on record calling for nuclear disarmament in Europe and throughout the world, and that there be an immediate ban on neutron weapons and an early move to East-West talks on arms control. Further, that this House and every member present have a vital and responsible role to play in bringing the world back from the brink of nuclear holocaust where we stand today.

This is a motion in support of global nuclear disarmament. Surely that is what this House and nation stand for.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous agreement for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

VIA RAIL

SUGGESTED SUSPENSION OF ORDER IN COUNCIL AUTHORIZING SERVICE CUTBACKS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Madam Speaker, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski):

That since the Canadian Transport Commission has ruled that Canada's rail passenger service is at an "irreducible minimum", this House endorses a measure to suspend the execution of Order in Council P.C. 1981-2171, in order to maintain passenger service at present levels until such time as a public body has had time and opportunity to review the minister's unilateral announcement of arbitrary cuts and cutbacks.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

SUGGESTED REVOCATION OF ORDER IN COUNCIL—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Fred McCain (Carleton-Charlotte): Madam Speaker, the Canadian Transport Commission, after public hearings in 1977, recommended to the Government of Canada that two trans-Canadian passenger trains were necessary for reasonable rail passenger service, and pointed out that this was particularly true of the maritimes in general and New Brunswick in particular. In a front page headline the Saint John Telegraph-Journal on August 27 referred to the proposed "Atlantic" and other cancellations in New Brunswick as "Ottawa cutting the heart out of New Brunswick". Since the cancellation falls hardest on areas where no affordable or convenient alternative passenger service exists, and on those who cannot afford a more expensive means of travel, I therefore move under the terms of Standing Order 43, seconded by the hon. member for Fundy-Royal (Mr. Corbett):

That the government do now immediately revoke the order in council cancelling certain VIA passenger service, renegotiate more for favourable VIA contracts with the railroads, and in general establish a VIA service which meets the needs as expressed by provincial governments, unions, chambers of commerce, mayors, university student bodies and a multitude of others.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

CALL FOR CONTINUANCE OF SERVICE BETWEEN TORONTO AND BARRIE, ONT.—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Ron Stewart (Simcoe South): Madam Speaker, the Georgian task force has predicted that the population of the city of Barrie will reach 125,000 by the year 2011. I move, seconded by the hon. member for St. Catharines (Mr. Reid):

That the Minister of Transport in concert with his provincial counterpart, the hon. James Snow, with whom I have been in contact, assure this House and the thousands of people to be affected that his department will provide for the orderly continuance and expansion of the economically viable VIA Rail service so necessary for the 500 to 600 daily passengers Toronto to Barrie.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

HOUSING

CUT IN BUDGET ALLOTTED TO CANADA MORTGAGE AND HOUSING CORPORATION—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mrs. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Madam Speaker, I also wish to move a motion under Standing Order 43, regarding CMHC cutbacks which are aggravating Canada's housing crisis. The budget of Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation has been cut from $1.8 billion to $400 million over the past five years, a period during which housing problems have escalated very seriously. Therefore I move, seconded by the hon. member for Nanaimo-Alberni (Mr. Miller):

That the CMHC allocation in this year's budget be restored to at least the 1976 level of $1.8 billion in order to stimulate much needed non-profit and rental housing and also to restore lost jobs in Canada's construction industry.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

• (1415)

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

VIA RAIL

REASONS FOR MINISTER'S ACTION IN AUTHORIZING CUTBACKS IN SERVICE

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): My question, Madam Speaker, is directed to the Minister of Transport. In the House of Commons last Thursday the Minister of Transport informed members of the House that he had a first version of a VIA Rail Act. He also confirmed earlier in that day during Question Period that he was reviewing, and would amend, the infamous costing order R63-13. Since the lack of a proper legislative mandate, and an outdated and unfair costing order are central to the difficulties which plague VIA Rail, and since the decision to cut back VIA Rail services by 20 per cent emanates from this inadequate structure, may I ask the minister why he is so insistent on forging ahead with the cutbacks before these matters are put in order, particularly, Madam Speaker, since the propriety of the minister's actions is clearly brought into question both inside and outside this chamber?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): I believe, and the government believes, for budgetary reasons and reasons of transportation policy, that the reduction of routes is essential. The discussion of the quality of costing order R63-13, and a discussion on the possibility and desirability of a bill on VIA are two other objectives which are not really related to the operation which now needs to be done, and which will give VIA the possibility of doing a good job. This necessitates the elimination of some routes. The way some members were talking you would have thought it was the reverse situation, that 80 per cent of the routes had been eliminated, as opposed to 20 per cent being eliminated and 80 per cent maintained.

There are a number of exaggerations around us this afternoon. It is regrettable and unfortunate. On the radio the other morning I heard, "Choo Choo, Choo, there won't be a train from Vancouver any more." This is not true at all. As a matter of fact, one of the transcontinentals is maintained.

NON-REFERRAL TO CANADIAN TRANSPORT COMMISSION

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Obviously the minister believes his actions are correct, but at the same time he chooses to ignore the CTC, and chooses to ignore the Parliament of Canada, and chooses to ignore the needs of Canadians. Why does the minister refuse to allow Parliament and the people of Canada to share in the formulation of a clear rail passenger policy before he arbitrarily orders the passenger service out of existence?

Is it true, Madam Speaker, that we may expect further cuts if this decision is allowed to go unchallenged? Is it true Canadians will experience further cutbacks next year? Is it true that the eastern and western arm of VIA Rail will probably be wiped out? Is it true that existing rolling stock is now being scrapped? Is it true that the LRC scheduled to go into service this week will not be going into service? Why does the minister refuse to debate this very important public policy item in Parliament so that parliamentarians and the people of Canada will have an opportunity of sharing in making the kind of policy that will meet the needs of the 1980s and on to the year 2000?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): My hon. friend who, I always thought, would have been a progressive and a dynamic Minister of Transport—

Some hon. Members: He was.

Mr. Pepin: —has been repeatedly trying to delay, first by saying it should be sent to the CTC, and then by saying it should be sent to a parliamentary committee, which I accepted at one point. He said it should be delayed until we have a VIA bill; it should be delayed until we have the extraordinary costing formula that would solve all problems for all time. This is an accumulation of delays which would lead to a situation where at one point, in the end, there might not be something to help. This is what we are trying to do. We are trying to help VIA. The management of VIA are fully in agreement with what we are doing.

● (1420)

Mr. Mazankowski: No, they are not.

Mr. Pepin: Of course they are. They wrote to my predecessor on the same subject. They gave my predecessor exactly the same recommendation as they gave me. That recommendation has been incorporated in the decision which we made on July 27. The hon. member knows that.

Mr. Mazankowski: I do not accept that.

Mr. Pepin: He could not make up his mind on the subject. That is something else.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Lawrence: How do you know what the recommendations to him were?

Mr. Pepin: Well I can read the files, can I not?

Madam Speaker: Order, please. We will not get through several questions if we do not allow the minister to answer.

Mr. Pepin: On the delay in the coming into activity of the LRCs—light, rapid and comfortable trains—my answer is very simple. The management have repeatedly expressed their satisfaction with these trains, but there have been the usual technical difficulties in matters of this kind. This is why they were located close to the manufacturer, so they could be sent back rather rapidly.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Pepin: They have had problems. It will mean a delay of about four weeks altogether. It is expected that some of the ten trains will go back into activity before the end of the four weeks.

REASONS FOR NON-REFERRAL TO COMMISSION

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the same minister. I do not know whether the minister has been asked this question in the House, but in terms of delay when was the decision made which was announced on July 27? How many days or weeks before the House adjourned? What was the reason for the delay in the minister's announcement?

Returning partly to the question of the hon. member for Vegreville, if the minister is so sure of his facts, what is wrong with having this matter referred to the CTC, the body which was structured under the National Transportation Act to hear these matters, so that one of the budgetary reasons which is being used by the minister now will not be again used under the costing formulae that no one understands? VIA Rail does not know what it is paying for its rental of the rails.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I have explained repeatedly why it was not being sent to the CTC. First of all one has to go to the law. Section 64(1) of the National Transportation Act indicates specifically that the government can act by order in council in these matters. That is legal. The reason for the law is simply that there will be occasions in the life of a railway system when what needs to be done is not a study of each route particularly, but a total rationalization exercise. This is why the law anticipated that particular necessity. This is why the law indicates that it can be done.

What would have happened is very simple. Mr. Lang tried it and failed because of circumstances which my hon. friend may have in mind. I would have had to go to the CTC and give a directive. I would have had to tell the CTC that there were limitations on the amounts of money that could be spent. Half a million bucks was about the level.

Mr. Ouellet: Half a billion.

Mr. Pepin: Half a billion, of course.

Mr. Epp: Of course! What's half a billion!

Mr. Pepin: I would have had to suggest to the CTC that it might consider maintaining one of the two transcontinental services. I would have had to tell the CTC that it would have to take into consideration the situation of isolated towns, cities and communities. I would have had to tell the CTC something it indicated on its own, that commuter services were a provincial responsibility. I would have had to say all that.

Mr. McKnight: Why didn't you?

Mr. Pepin: The same people who accuse me of being arbitrary now, would have said that I was twisting the arm of the CTC. This is why we have done it the way we have. We have done it directly.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Tear the arm right off the CTC.

Mr. Pepin: In so doing, we have saved three or four years of time. We have saved the necessary money to give to VIA to buy itself proper equipment at this time.

RAILWAYS' CONTRIBUTION TO GROWTH OF COUNTRY

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants): Madam Speaker, I understand the minister has some history with railways. His father worked in the railways. I must say that I do not think the minister is following in the same track as his father who had some identity with railways.

● (1425)

Does the minister not believe that at this particular time, when there is stress and strain in this country that the railways helped to bring together from coast to coast, when we are talking about the Charter of Rights and discussions and forums, it would have been a very positive thing if he could have laid down some abbreviated terms of reference for the CTC? If he had done that, this thing could have been discussed, argued and debated within an abbreviated time period, and the taxpayers, the mayors, and all those people who came here today, and officials from coast to coast, would know the one completely idiotic situation, that VIA Rail under the costing formula is the only railway that I know of in the world that cannot get an explanation of the bill that it is paying to CN and CP for the rental of its rails. That much at least could have been cleared up and, Madam Speaker, if it is not cleared up then the same type of costing formula will do just what the hon. member for Vegreville says it will do, and if that is so, then we might as well eliminate every passenger service.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, that is the problem I have had. My hon. friends on the other side, and some of them on all sides forget, when they think about it—

An hon. Member: Some on your side, too.

Mr. Pepin: Yes, indeed. They forget that in your lifetime and in mine we have seen three revolutions; the revolution of the automobile, of the bus, and of the plane. We are now seeing the revolution of electronics. There is no way that railways could come through these four revolutions untouched.

What we are doing now is adjusting railway passengers transportation to contemporary times. That has to be done. It is being done in every part of the world now. I know it is painful, because we are all romantic about railways. I was born with railway smoke in my nose. We are all romantic about it, but when you tell people that half a billion dollars is going toward subsidizing rail passengers now, they do not know it. I thank the opposition very much for giving me the opportunity of reminding them of that. When they are told that, people say they agree with us that there must be limitations to the amount of money which can be dedicated to this particular mode of transportation.

REQUEST FOR DELAY IN IMPLEMENTING ORDER IN COUNCIL AUTHORIZING CUTBACKS

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Madam Speaker, there is no one on this side of the House and no Canadian outside the House who is being romantic about keeping passenger trains. All of us are sick and tired of the minister's philosophizing, when he does not know a damn thing about transportation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Benjamin: Four economists in the employ of the government, of the Prime Minister and of the Minister of Transport, have said that this decision is, and I quote them, "—as uninformed and inconsistent an exercise in transportation planning as could be imagined." In light of the fact that the CTC and the government's own economists have said that VIA Rail is unjustifiably paying 60 per cent of its operating costs to Canadian Pacific and Canadian National, compared to the 25 per cent paid by Amtrak in United States, and since the order in council is based on out-of-date and misleading information, would the minister at least agree to delay the implementation of the order in council until either the CTC or the parliamentary committee on transportation have held a full public hearing on the matter?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I have said before that we will not delay implementation so I am not going to repeat it. The only thing that could convince us to delay would be a court action, which I understand is being taken today, or was taken last Friday. Of course if that comes about and if there is an injunction to prevent implementation of the order in council, we will obey the law.

All through these days I have heard from the hon. member for Regina West and from Transport 2000 that they are not opposed to some reduction of services. The hon. member said the other day in debate in the House:

> We are not trying to justify the retention of all 21 routes, but I submit that at least half of them are viable.

● (1430)

The member is quite in agreement with the principle that one has to rationalize railways, and the debate between himself and ourselves relates to how many routes should be terminated and how many routes should be reduced. That is a debate which is quite normal, but the principle is accepted by everyone. It is a matter of disagreement as to the number of cutbacks which should take place.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Benjamin: Madam Speaker, I know the minister wants to be fair. If one looks at my opening paragraph or two, I said that we wanted the government to rescind the order, but we agreed with the motion of the official opposition that, to be reasonable, we should at least ask for a delay, and the minister knows that.

OPERATION OF BUS ROUTES PURSUANT TO CANADIAN TRANSPORT COMMISSION ORDER

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): I have a second question for the minister. In the wild rush of the minister, of the President of the Treasury Board and the cabinet, thinking they were going to save $100 million by the order in council, is it correct that in the order in council ordering the cancellation of these routes, the government forgot about all the bus routes that the Canadian Transport Commission ordered VIA Rail to run, such as the routes from Fredericton to Moncton and from Prince Albert to Saskatoon? The order in council takes effect November 15. Will these buses still keep running to connect with trains that the government has already cancelled? I would like to ask the minister if he would explain that to us, and would he go back to the drawing board and check his homework?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I will obviously do that.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Pepin: The order in council varies a number of decisions the CTC has previously taken. I do not know where buses come into that, but obviously that was not the main objective.

REVENUE FIGURES FOR TORONTO-PETERBOROUGH—HAVELOCK SERVICE

Hon. Allan Lawrence (Durham-Northumberland): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport as well. I think the minister is now aware that the revenue figures presented to him to justify the cancellation of the Toronto-Peterborough-Havelock passenger service in southern Ontario are in error by over 25 per cent.

Miss MacDonald: Wow!

Mr. Lawrence: There is at least a $100,000 understatement of revenues. Would the minister have made the decision to cancel that particular intercity service if he had had the correct figures at the time the decision was made?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Yes, Madam Speaker, because the problem is not what my hon. friend indicates. The problem is that in the Toronto area there are three intercity lines to Barrie, Stouffville and Havelock. These so-called intercity trains are really mainly used as commuter services. If one takes the Havelock route, one will find that most of the passengers get on the train at Agincourt, mispronounced "Agincour". They get on there, and from then on the line becomes essentially a commuter line.

Historically and legally the Canadian government does not have to pay subsidies on commuters. Because of that we have said to the provinces, "Look. These are essentially your responsibilities. You have to work out a metropolitan system: bus, underground, train, and so on. This is your responsibility." This was recommended to the government of Ontario by the Scrivener report. The deputy minister of transportation was sitting on that committee.

Mr. Lawrence: Not the Havelock line.

Mr. Pepin: This is accepted. This is common knowledge. This is conventional widsom.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Pepin: The only difficulty is that Mr. Snow, if he is to operate these lines as commuter services, would like the Government of Canada to give them the same advantage that it has with respect to costing order 63-13. We are studying this now. I am most sympathetic to his views on that subject. It is a bit complicated, but I will be in touch with him. In the meantime I suggest that my hon. friend should not worry too much. If everthing goes according to plan, these lines will be operated as commuter lines in the future.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Lawrence: Not the Havelock line.

CANCELLATION'S EFFECTS ON TOURIST RESORTS

Mr. Thomas Siddon (Richmond-South Delta): Madam Speaker, I am sure that hon. members of this House are astonished to watch the minister attempt to evade his constitutional responsibility to operate passenger trains in this country.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Siddon: The minister knows, for example, this his decision to cancel the western Super Continental is based on a totally false economy. It will cost tourist operators in western Canada upwards of $100 million in lost business because of his decision, and $40 million in lost business from Japan alone.

Will the minister tell this House what level of financial compensation he proposes to offer to communities like Jasper, Alberta, and to businesses? Thousands of hospitality businesses and individuals will be faced with bankruptcy, unemployment, and personal financial hardship because of his illogical decision.

While he is at it, will he tell us why his officials, at this very moment, are planning to cut The Canadian train next summer from 20 cars to 13, to restrict the availability of sleeping car accommodation on that train, and to carve up and dismantle very, very fine passenger rail cars in order to advance his policy of eliminating passenger trains and getting everyone into airplanes and buses?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, if my hon. friend wants to go into further depth on this subject he will find that in western Canada and in Ontario, in particular, the Transcontinental is essentially used as an intercity service, in normal times. Occasionally a group of people—and there are some in the audience today—will decide to take the full transcontinental route, a once-in-a-lifetime trip; but basically it is operated as an intercity service.

So what did we do on July 27? For social, political, psychological and historical reasons, we maintained one of the transcontinental routes.

My hon. friend refers to the elimination of the Transcontinental. That is not true. We are maintaining one of the transcontinental routes in the west, the Canadian, while the northern transcontinental, in western Canada and Ontario, will be operated as an intercity system, in part; that is, Winnipeg to Regina to Saskatoon, Saskatoon to Edmonton, and Edmonton to Prince Rupert. The train remains there, in part, and it is operated as an intercity train. This is all in line with the basic philosophy we are upholding, which is that the future of railways is in intercity transportation of passengers over distances of 500 miles or less.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

CROSS-COUNTRY RAILWAY SERVICE CUTS

Mr. David Kilgour (Edmonton-Strathcona): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the same minister. The task force on rail passenger service of this party heard more than 320 groups and individuals in 13 cities across the country. Many of them characterized what the government is doing as being a serious abuse of power. I remind the minister that the section in the National Transportation Act to which he is referring has never before been used by a government in this way. He is now facing, I believe, two law suits on whether or not the government can abuse the National Transportation Act in this way.

[Translation]

More specifically, all members of the House are aware that a minister's decision to cut back—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The member must ask his question. I understand that he wishes to repeat it in French for French-speaking viewers but he can only ask one question which must be as brief as possible.

Mr. Kilgour: Madam Speaker, could the minister tell the House whether his decision will become effective on November 15 of this year and, if so, why he has refused to hold public hearings on these cutbacks, although he knew very well that according to the results of the Gallup poll his unilateral, arbitrary and senseless decision would affect hundreds of thousands of Canadians, and that 51 per cent—and this includes the citizens of Edmundston, Fredericton, Moncton, Sherbrooke, Montreal and the Abitibi and Lake Saint John areas—of Canadians are against those cutbacks.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I have already explained in English that the government's main reason for making the cutbacks without going through the Canadian Transport Commission, which would be the usual channel in such cases, is quite simply that the government is authorized to do so by law, and because this exercise was aimed at rationalizing the entire network and not one particular route, an area in which the Canadian Transport Commission is specialized. I also explained that if we had gone through the CTC, we would not have been able to save the several hundred million dollars we shall now be able to give to VIA Rail for the purchase of new equipment.

Regarding Section 64(1) of the Transportation Act, my hon. friend may be interested to know that other ministers, including my predecessor and his predecessor before him, also used this legislation, in connection, for instance, with the charter system in Canada.

● (1440)

[English]

CUTS IN SERVICE IN NEW BRUNSWICK

Mr. Fred McCain (Carleton-Charlotte): Madam Speaker, it is very little consolation to the hundreds and thousands, in fact millions of Canadians, who have been inconvenienced by this government, to hear remarks about rationality and philosophy, when they are so seriously deprived. In light of the government's historical social responsibility and social conscience—one wonders what has become of it—will the minister explain with rationality and philosophy how he plans to put two train loads, which on many occasions are already overloaded, into one, as they pass through New Brunswick?

Second, what accommodation does the minister plan to extend to the travelling population of Canada for emergencies or holiday excursions if he now proceeds to destroy the equipment which at least gives some kind of service? Has the minister had any representation from government members in Atlantic Canada saying, for example, "Please don't cut the heart out of New Brunswick"?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, there is no doubt that some people will be deprived. I regret that. But a great number of people in Canada—

An hon. Member: Where?

Mr. McCain: To him that hath shall be given.

Mr. Pepin: —will also be pleased to know that the government is spending their money well. This will make many people happy.

With respect to emergencies, isolated towns and what-not, we have been very careful not to restrain or cut services to isolated areas. I could name all of them where service will continue. There will be others that might be affected at different points on routes that are to be reduced. There is no doubt about that, but adjustments will be found.

Miss MacDonald: You hope.

Mr. Pepin: Buses will go where train service was traditional. The problem is that if we stop everything there will be further delay, and people will not get these adjustments that no doubt will come about.

Mr. McCain: They weren't isolated until you came along.

DELAY IN INTRODUCTION OF LRCs

Mr. J. R. Ellis (Prince Edward-Hastings): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. In the minister's answers to the hon. member for Vegreville, he dwelt for a moment on the problem of the LRCs. I suggest to the minister that we are not getting the whole story on the LRCs. In fact the LRCs are now months behind schedule, and the schedule is being further delayed. In turn, those delays are changing schedules of regular trains. Would the minister come clean on the issue? Will he tell us exactly when we will see the LRCs in service, particularly since the changes made in Belleville were made to accommodate the changes of rail crews and those changes have now been tossed aside because the turbo has had to be put back in service, and so on. I suggest to the minister that the problem is far more serious than he is letting us know about.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I don't know if there is anything else to say; I have said everything that I know.

An hon. Member: You don't know anything.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): That is your problem.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Pepin: I did my best to find out. The situation, as I indicated, is one of technical problems. The withdrawal is for a period of four weeks. I also mentioned previously that a number of the LRCs will be back in operation before that span of time has elapsed. That is all there is to say on the subject.

* * *

BANK ACT

REQUEST FOR RESTORATION OF PRE-1969 PROVISION RESPECTING HOME MORTGAGE FUNDS

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, yesterday in London a group of some 1,000 angry home owners let the minister responsible for housing know how profoundly unhappy they were over the government's ruinous mortgage policy. In particular, they asked the minister whether the government would restore to the Bank Act the principle that the banks be obligated to make mortgage money available at rates which the average family can afford. The minister said yesterday that in effect he was not authorized to answer the question.

Since the Liberal government removed that principle from the Bank Act in 1969, will the Prime Minister now give a commitment to the people of Canada that the government will restore it, namely, that mortgage money must be made available by banks at levels the ordinary family can afford?

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, I am afraid the Leader of the New Democratic Party misrepresented the response I made yesterday to that question.

I said that I would discuss the representation made by people and by the hon. member for Oshawa with the Minister of Finance. I have asked for an opportunity to do so.

INTRODUCTION OF AMENDING LEGISLATION

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, the minister well knows that I did not distort what he said. I respected the point that he made, that it was a cabinet decision to be made in the future. I repeat and acknowledge that. What I am doing is asking a question of the person who is most responsible in the country for political decision-making, namely, the Prime Minister.

The banks can certainly earn profits from many investments at whatever the market will bear, but when it comes to mortgages on homes, they ought to be segregated from other financial investments. Will the Prime Minister assure us and tell the people of Canada now that we will get legislation to restore the principle to which I referred a moment ago, to the Bank Act?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I do not know of the details of the discussion held in London. If I had been there I would have answered exactly as the minister did, that he would take that as a representation and discuss it with the Minister of Finance.

Mr. Crosbie: You are just as useless as he is.

Mr. Trudeau: That is the proper answer and one, of course, which should be followed.

The hon. member refers to the 1969 legislation. Naturally I cannot remember all aspects of it or the details of its motivation. My recollection is that this amendment was made at the time because other institutions were being facilitated in the role of providing mortgages, and that the number of mortgage lenders increased as a result of that legislation. The responsibility for mortgages was shared among a greater number of institutions than had been the case hitherto. That, I repeat, goes back a dozen years. It may be that the Minister of Finance will want to reconsider the operation of that, I do not know, but I think the minister took the proper course in answering that he would discuss the matter with the Minister of Finance.

MORTGAGE SCHEME ADVERTISED BY BANKS

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, I just want to remind the Prime Minister that in 1969, when the act was changed, not only was the ceiling removed from mortgage interest but the rollover principle for mortgages was introduced. The Liberal minister at that time when mortgage rates were 9 per cent said mortgages would go down. We have never seen 9 per cent mortgages since. As for the rollover principle, the only rolling over that has been done is that of the banks rolling over Canadian home owners. That has been the result of the 1969 change.

Mr. Evans: You don't know what you are talking about, Ed.

Mr. Broadbent: I would like to ask the Prime Minister another question concerning the banks, since the Minister of Finance said the other day in the House in reference to the Royal Bank's new mortgage deferral scheme that it was "a step in the right direction." This is its mortgage deferral scheme, and the banks now have ads in the paper, using tax-free dollars. Since under this mortgage deferral scheme a family can pay up to $6,000 a year on its mortgage and end up owing the bank more at the end of the year than when it started, if this is what the government means by the banks bleeding a little? If not, will the government denounce the scheme right now?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I do not know the details of the scheme referred to by the hon. member. I am sure the Minister of Finance will examine it, and if he does not agree with it he will bring in some other scheme. If he does agree with it, he will seek to improve it. I cannot speak on a technical subject like that of which I know no knowledge.

* * *

NORTH-SOUTH RELATIONS

FUTURE OF NEGOTIATIONS FOLLOWING CANCUN SUMMIT MEETING

Mr. Jack Burghardt (London West): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister and concerns the North-South Summit held last week in Cancun, Mexico. Keeping in mind the results of the discussions at the 22-nation meeting, would the Prime Minister inform us where he believes these global negotiations must go from here?

• (1450)

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, there was no decision made by the participants at the Cancun summit to have any further summits with the same people.

I refer the hon. member particularly to the decision on global negotiations which would be pursued in the United Nations forum. It would be expected that the many participants at Cancun would go there with greater knowledge of the position of the respective participants, and hopefully with a greater ability to make forward movement.

In regard to the various other subjects such as food and agriculture, financial institutions, energy and trade, I believe they will be translated into greater understanding in the various forums, for instance, the IMF, for the monetary institutions. And in the case of energy, the debate will continue on the question of helping the less developed nations look for and develop renewable sources of energy as well as non-renewable sources. Each subject had a conclusion in itself. It is up to the members now to pursue those conclusions at the United Nations or in their bilateral policies.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Oral Questions

VIA RAIL

SERVICE PROVIDED TO BARRIE, ONT.

Mr. Ron Stewart (Simcoe South): Madam Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister of Transport if he is aware of the Georgian task force report which has predicted that the population of the city of Barrie will reach approximately 125,000 by the year 2011. Believe me, they are not all commuters. However, the VIA Rail train now carries some 500 to 600 passengers and is totally economically viable. This is even with antiquated, what may be called World War II rolling stock. Will the Minister of Transport meet further with the hon. James Snow, with whom I have been in contact, in the hope not of reducing that line but expanding that service? It is economically viable. Do not use the cop-out of commuters.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, if the line is economically viable as was just said, I do not see why Mr. Snow should refuse to take it over.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Pepin: That is the obvious common sense answer to the question. The Government of Canada does not subsidize commuter services. This has been tradition and law. Inasmuch as Toronto and Montreal have grown, a number of routes which were intercity in the past have now become commuter lines. Logically, we are saying this is the responsibility of the provincial and metropolitan governments. This is exactly what the Scrivener report, the most recent report on transportation by rail in Canada, says.

FUTURE OF RAIL SERVICE TO WESTERN COMMUNITIES

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport. I draw his attention to the fact that this is the first time since 1979 that a minister has used the discretionary power to remove service and remove lines from the system. His predecessor used that discretion to instal lines and guarantee service.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McKnight: Would the minister tell us how the people from Rivers, Manitoba, all the way through to the Saskatchewan border, the people of Melville, Watrous, Yorkton, people in Saskatoon, the people of Biggar and Unity, all the way through to Edmonton and onwards, will get to Vancouver? The minister has left out two thirds of the western part of Canada in the service that he has brought forth, and I would like to know what the minister is going to do? If the minister gets away with this, will he use this section to abandon branch lines without hearings, abandon the statutory rate, the Crow rate in western Canada? If the minister does it now, why will he not do it the next time?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): I do not want to debate, but my hon. friend is confusing the National Transportation Act and the Railway Act. However, as I have said, there are a number of communities, particularly between Winnipeg and Saskatoon—

An hon. Member: And Vancouver.

Mr. Pepin: —which used to be served by the Transcontinental, which will be affected.

An hon. Member: What about Vancouver and Edmonton?

Mr. Pepin: I have looked into each particular case and have found that in most instances, if not all, there were buses taking people from their area to the nearest station.

EFFECT OF CUTBACKS ON EMPLOYMENT IN MANITOBA

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. The minister will know that in his province of Manitoba 50 per cent of the points served by VIA Rail are going to be eliminated as of November 15. I would ask the minister, first, if he is prepared to intercede with the Minister of Transport to delay this abandonment, because he knows there are approximately 1,600 jobs affected directly and the possibility of 8,000 jobs affected indirectly. Second, since he is a minister from Manitoba, will he intercede to ensure that half the communities now served in his province will continue to be served after November 15?

Miss MacDonald: Speak up for the west.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): As the hon. member knows from listening to the comments of the Minister of Transport, there are a number of major programs in place that will help in the adjustment and transition of workers—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: Those programs have been worked out with the co-operation of VIA Rail, the unions, and the railways. I think those programs will effectively take care of any displaced persons as a result of the change that is being made to improve the railway system across Canada.

* * *

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

GRANTS OF LAND HOLDINGS AND TIMBER RIGHTS

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport. In 1910 the Canadian Northern Railway and the government of British Columbia entered into an agreement whereby, if the railroad would provide daily first class passenger rail service between Jasper and Victoria, it would receive in return vast land holdings and timber rights. The CNR subsequently took over that responsibility and those benefits and now, through the recent VIA Rail decision, has terminated the promise to the people of British Columbia to provide that daily passenger service. Will the minister therefore give consideration to returning these vast land holdings and extensive timber rights to the people of British Columbia?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, if the railways had made arrangements with the provinces at one time in the past—

An hon. Member: By statute.

Mr. Pepin: —I would suggest it would be the right of the provinces to invoke these agreements, not the federal government.

If there are situations of this kind, as there are, it would obviously be the provinces' responsibility to defend their position. That is why, in the announcement we made on July 27, we left it open for the provinces to pay the subsidy if they thought that the particular route affected was essential from the provincial point of view. That point of view could be a legal obligation which they had assumed in the past.

Mr. Riis: Madam Speaker, the agreements and the statutes of British Columbia are very clear on this point. Perhaps this could be an issue raised in some of the subsequent court discussions.

* * *

VIA RAIL

CANCELLATION OF ATLANTIC LIMITED TRAIN

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Madam Speaker, I was informed by the people of New Brunswick, after a recent visit there, that the Atlantic Limited last year had a ridership support of over 80 per cent, which represents more than a quarter of a million people using the Halifax to Montreal run.

An hon. Member: Where is the member for Saint John?

Mr. Riis: The people whom I visited in New Brunswick asked me why the government was terminating that service. They asked their Member of Parliament, and he could not explain. Could the Minister of Transport explain?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): The 80 per cent figure is not realistic. It is more like 48 per cent. Again, that depends on the way it is calculated. If one counts the number of people at the point of arrival, of course one will get a different result.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An hon. Member: What about going in?

Mr. Pepin: Would the hon. member repeat his question?

Madam Speaker: The hon. member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine.

EFFECT OF CUTBACKS ON WESTERN ECONOMY

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. As chairman of the Western Development Committee, and as one who is supposed to be stimulating economic growth in the west, he will know that the unilateral cutbacks in the VIA Rail routes will have a devastating effect on the western economy in general and cause the Canadian tourist industry losses in the millions. Also, there will be layoffs in the rail and tourism industry.

• (1500)

I would like to ask the minister what he has done or will do about having the cabinet rescind or postpone the VIA Rail cuts in western Canada, or does he support the rail cutbacks?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, time does not permit me to answer the hon. member in terms of the number of initiatives taken by this government to stimulate economic development in western Canada. The hon. member might be aware that a major Air Canada facility has been moved to our province, which will be of substantial help to the hon. member's constituency. We are trying to promote industries in western Canada which are modern, up to date, and high technology industries, and not to support obsolescence.

EFFECT OF CUTBACKS ON NEW BRUNSWICK COMMUNITIES

Mr. Bob Corbett (Fundy-Royal): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. The minister made a statement in the House a short time ago that he will be careful not to cut service to isolated towns. I would like the minister to know that I am speaking on behalf of those people who live along the Edmundston to Moncton line and peole who live in the communities of Plaster Rock, Juniper, Napadogan, Chipman, Minto, and areas such as that. There are no buses to that region.

For the benefit of all those people the minister maintains should be thankful that he is cutting out these services, will he explain why it was that he allowed CN last year to charge VIA $400,000 for the use of that line when the cost to CN was $263,000? That is a profit of 52 per cent to the megacorporation. Will the minister explain, for the benefit of those "ungrateful" people up in Napadogan, why he allowed that?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I am not in a position to debate the figures used by my hon. friend, but on the Edmundston to Moncton route indeed there are a number of developments which, hopefully, will take place.

Miss MacDonald: "Hopefully".

Mr. Pepin: I hope they will take place. I believe they will take place, and they will have to do with the strengthening of the bus service between the two cities and different points on the line. We hope also to improve air service to Edmundston.

* * *

PETITION

MR. NYSTROM—VIA RAIL—CUTBACKS IN PASSENGER SERVICE

Madam Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the Clerk of the House has laid upon the Table the ninety-second report of the Clerk of Petitions, stating that he has examined the petition presented by the hon. member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) and finds that it meets the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

* * *

PRIVILEGE

MR. WENMAN—HOUSING—ALLEGED REFUSAL OF MINISTER'S OFFICE TO ACCEPT TELEPHONE CALLS

Mr. Robert Wenman (Fraser Valley West): Madam Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. The minister responsible for housing has indicated that he would respond to my constituents directly through telephone calls. I have constituents who have telephoned and their calls have been refused in the minister's office.

The minister also suggested in this House of Commons that if Members of Parliament were to contact him directly, again he would respond.

Madam Speaker: Order. The hon. member has a responsibility to make quite clear in his first sentences where the breach of his privilege lies, and he has not indicated to me that he has a question of privilege. The fact that someone is not answering the telephone or that a minister is not complying with a promise he has made to certain constituents certainly does not constitute a question of privilege.

Mr. Wenman: Madam Speaker—

Madam Speaker: I have ruled; there is no question of privilege.

Mr. Wenman: He is misleading the House; that is what he is doing.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[Translation]

SOCIAL SECURITY

TABLING OF AN AGREEMENT BETWEEN CANADA AND GREECE RESPECTING PENSIONS

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Madam Speaker, pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 41(2), I wish to table, in both official languages, a copy of the Agreement on Social Security, specifically on old age pensions, between the Government of Canada and the government of Greece.

* * *

[English]

ENERGY

TABLING OF PRICING AND TAXATION AGREEMENT WITH SASKATCHEWAN

Mr. Roy MacLaren (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 41(2) I wish to table, in both official languages, copies of an agreement between the Government of Canada and the government of Saskatchewan relating to energy pricing and taxation, as well as the joint statement by the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Trudeau) and the Premier of Saskatchewan.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

PETITIONS

MR. CORBETT—VIA RAIL—CUTBACKS IN PASSENGER SERVICE

Mr. Bob Corbett (Fundy-Royal): Madam Speaker, I have a petition which includes over 2,000 names of some residents of southern New Brunswick who are disgusted with the cutbacks, as proposed by the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin), of VIA Rail services from Saint John and from that region to Montreal. I would like to add these names to that list of 11,400 "ingrates" which I tabled last week who are disgusted with the same cutbacks in service.

MR. BURGHARDT—UREA FORMALDEHYDE FOAM INSULATION—REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT ASSISTANCE

Mr. Jack Burghardt (London West): Madam Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to present a petition, on behalf of those residents of London, Ontario who have urea formaldehyde foam insulation in their homes, respectfully requesting that the Government of Canada assist them in the removal of that insulation product.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

MR. DARLING—VIA RAIL—CUTBACKS IN PASSENGER SERVICE

Mr. Stan Darling (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Madam Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition containing 250 names from the Sudbury area. These people are also voicing their disapproval of cutbacks in rail transportation. This petition was co-ordinated by Helena Osborne of Sudbury.

MR. JOE REID—EFFECTS OF HIGH MORTGAGE RATES

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Madam Speaker, I too beg the permission of this House to place on the table a petition, containing the names of 1,071 home owners from the Niagara region, protesting the difficult and impossible task of maintaining a home in the light of present mortgage conditions. This petition points out that if people are to save their homes—and this continues as a nation of home owners—then some remedial action should be taken—and it should be indicated that it will be taken—in the budget which is to be presented soon respecting high mortgage rates.

Madam Speaker: Motions. The hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty). The hon. member for Etobicoke-Lakeshore (Mr. Robinson).

Some hon. Members: Stand.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Are you calling them seriatim?

Madam Speaker: Yes. The hon. member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Clarke).

Some hon. Members: Stand.

Madam Speaker: For the information of the hon. member for Yukon, I am not really calling them seriatim, but the hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe has on two occasions given notices of motions, so I call his name twice because he is at the top of the list and also at the bottom of the list. The hon. member for Vancouver Quadra has four motions, but I am only calling his name once.

I call again now the hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe.

* * *

REGULATIONS AND OTHER STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS

CONCURRENCE IN REVISED SEVENTH REPORT OF STANDING JOINT COMMITTEE

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe) moved:

That the revised seventh report of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, presented to the House on Wednesday, June 17, 1981, be concurred in.

He said: Madam Speaker, you will remember, because you were in chair on Thursday, that my colleague, the hon. member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) and I put questions relating to House business to the government House leader. At that time we sought the assurance of the government House leader that if I were to follow the instructions of my committee, the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments, and ask for concurrence of the House in our revised seventh report today, there would be a full and proper debate on that committee report, that we would have a chance to have a full discussion and that no action would be taken by the government to prevent that discussion from taking place.

You will recall, Madam Speaker, that earlier this summer when I moved concurrence in July in the fourth report of the standing committee, the government took the extraordinary measure of intervening to cut that debate short and to prevent a vote from taking place on the concurrence motion.

This procedure of cutting short debate and preventing committees of this Parliament from reporting to the House of Commons and from having concurrence motions put and fully debated is an extraordinary measure and one which constitutes an attack upon the very basis of accountability in our system of government.

Any structure that any of us has seen which tries to lay out a blueprint for accountability in our government has as its core the Parliament of Canada, and any attempt made to disrupt the relationship between the committees of Parliament and the House of Commons itself is indeed an attack upon the proper functioning of this House of Commons.

● (1510)

I want to quote from a book which was published not that long ago by a former member of Parliament, John B. Stewart, who, after his defeat in the House of Commons, served as an adviser to the government on the question of parliamentary reform. He dealt with the procedure followed by the government in that instance, a procedure which is now being threatened by the government House leader. This is what he had to say about a procedure whereby at the end of the day, after a discussion had taken place, automatically a motion to concur would revert to government orders. I quote:

Since 1965 once a debate begun under Motions has been adjourned, the order for resumption of the debate is a government order. This means that the government House leader has the right to decide if and when the debate will be resumed. Clearly, this is an odious power. It gives the government the right to sidetrack a committee's report permanently.

Again, this was written by a former Liberal member of Parliament who served as an adviser to the present government. It was in his book entitled "The House of Commons: Procedure and Reform". If on a motion to concur it is odious that that motion should be transferred to government orders where the right and responsibility is then that of the government to decide whether it ever comes forward for debate again, how much more odious it is that the government would use its majority to intervene to prevent a debate taking place whereby, after the first speaker has spoken, moving that a report be concurred in, the government would intervene, use its majority and prevent other members of the committee from speaking, even its own members on the committee. This is what was done with the committee's fourth report in July. This is what was threatened just last Thursday by the government House leader. It is a process which is indeed odious. It is an attack upon the very essence of ministerial accountability and responsible government of this country.

The government may say that Parliament has more important business or that somehow it is not proper that Members of Parliament should ask that consideration be given to committee reports made to Parliament. This is the business of Parliament. There is nothing more fundamental. The business of Parliament is that individual members, particularly representatives of parliamentary committees, ensure that studies conducted on behalf of Parliament are brought to the attention of Parliament and that Parliament have the opportunity to debate them. Indeed, to deny this, to attempt to block that sort of progress from taking place, is to destroy the vital link that is so essential in our representative institutions in Canada today.

The government may say that the process has been abused in some way in the past. That is not so. It is interesting to note that in the past 12 years since 1969 when the government brought in its rules reforms which changed the whole functioning of Parliament, 160 concurrence motions have been moved of which 147 were carried. Of those, 133 were carried without debate and 115 of those were purely routine. Twelve were carried after debate. One of these was effectively a government motion. Six were debated part of the day and not carried. Five were debated a full day and not carried. An additional two were interrupted by government motion to end the debate. One of those two actions to interrupt the concurrence motion, and there were only two in the past 12 years, came in July when the government interceded to prevent discussion of that major report, the fourth report of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments.

Of all those moved by backbenchers which took government House time, and there were 24, 15 were moved by opposition members. Since 1974, 14 motions required some debate and eight of those were from the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments. In the session of 1980-81 a government backbencher moved a motion which carried after a short debate and a motion from the committee was interrupted by a government motion.

If you look at this history and the way this procedure is being used, it is clear that what the government threatened to do last Thursday and may do today is a break with the traditions of the House of Commons. It represents an important new attack upon the ability of committees to function. It is something which members of this Parliament should not be asked to agree with.

If it is essential that any committee be able to report to the House of Commons and be able to have discussion of its report, how much more essential is it when Parliament charges the standing joint committee to serve as a watchdog, to look at government regulations to determine whether they are legal in the first place, to determine whether due process or natural justice has been interfered with, to determine whether or not the issue being dealt with in a regulation should more properly be brought back before Parliament? When you have a watchdog committee such as this, how much more important is it in this case and in normal cases that the debate should take place and the committee should have the opportunity to have its report considered by the whole House of Commons?

What the government is doing when the government House leader comes before Parliament and says that the only basis on which he will not interrupt the debate and allow the committee to do its job is at the convenience of the government—when the government sees fit, if it sees fit, in its own time—is that it is taking that watchdog committee and trying to turn it into a lapdog committee.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Beatty: He is asking that a watchdog committee check its teeth and put them in a glass by the bed. That is not acceptable in this day and age if we believe in parliamentary democracy and if we believe that we have a responsibility in this Parliament to supervise and scrutinize the activities of the government on behalf of Parliament.

In other jurisdictions there are procedures which provide in many instances that the government issue a white paper in responding to committee reports. In Australia it is mandatory that a white paper be issued within six months to respond to a committee report. A similar procedure is followed in Great Britain at the present time.

In some other jurisdictions there are provisions whereby, if individual members of Parliament have a concern about a regulation that is passed under delegated legislation, they have the ability to put down a motion of disallowance. For example, in the case of Australia, unless a debate is held, unless the House decides not to disallow a regulation within a certain period of time, the regulation will automatically be disallowed.

If we had that sort of procedure in the Canadian Parliament, perhaps it would be less important that we have some assurances that committee reports will be discussed. However, we do not have that. We recommended that in the report which was discussed in July. That has never been acted on by the government.

Let me quote from a book by Professor J. R. Mallory, "The Structure of Canadian Government", which deals with the essential nature of responsibilities of parliamentary committees and parliamentarians in keeping an eye on how the government acts with delegated legislation. I quote from page 140:

> Parliamentary criticism is of the greatest importance. The chief defect of delegated legislation is precisely that it is passed without public debate and without serious opportunity for subsequent parliamentary review. Furthermore, regulations, unlike acts of Parliament, are not always published or collected in acceptable form so that the citizen can know what the law is that governs him. There is an old maxim that ignorance of the law is no excuse as a defence for breaking it. As long as the law is readily accessible to any competent lawyer who knows his way around the law reports and the statute books, this is a wise rule. But when the law consists of a multiplicity of detailed regulations which are not always easy to find out about, the maxim becomes almost oppressive in its effect. Adequate parliamentary scrutiny and adequate publication of regulations have therefore become recognized as necessary accompaniments of the growth of delegated legislation in well-run communities.

That is a description by Professor Mallory, one of our most distinguished political scientists in this country, of the essential nature of activities that Parliament must undertake when scrutinizing actions by the government in delegated legislation. It is worth while looking back at the time in which the committee was created. At that time Tommy Douglas asked John Turner, the heir apparent, the "pretender to the throne" in Toronto, whether he felt it would be useful to have included in the statute a provision whereby reports of the committee could be acted upon and whether it would be compulsory. Mr. Turner responded by saying that he recognized it would be essential that the committee have the power to do its job, but the rules of the House of Commons already provided for that to be done and it was likely not necessary to have this written in the statute. Yet what we are finding today, Mr. Speaker, is that the promise made by Mr. Turner at the time the committee was established is being threatened with being broken because the government is threatening to intercede to prevent the committee from doing its job. That is why I call upon the government today, Mr. Speaker, to allow a full debate in this House on a matter that is of urgent concern to all Canadians.

● (1520)

I want to turn to the report itself, Mr. Speaker, which was tabled in the House of Commons on June 17, 1981. There were four points in the committee report which were considered essential and about which we felt it was important that we should make a report to the House of Commons and draw the attention of the House to the structure of VIA Rail and to some of the actions of the government.

First of all, in the setting up of VIA Rail we felt the government had acted in a way that did not provide for proper parliamentary discussion. We discovered VIA Rail was set up, using in part an Appropriation Act. Consequently, the House of Commons did not have a proper statute before it that would allow for a full and public debate on the part of Members of Parliament which would enable the government to put forward a comprehensive program for future railway passenger services in this country.

Obviously, that sort of provision would have been very valuable. Earlier this year when a question of privilege was raised by one of my colleagues, Madam Speaker found that the procedure of acting through an Appropriation Act in a way that was attempting to get legislative action was wrong. She struck down a number of attempts by the government to do that. Indeed, had Madam Speaker been in the chair at the time this was done in 1977, the likelihood was that the government could not have brought VIA Rail Canada forward in this way. The likelihood would have been the government would have had responsibility, the necessity, of coming back before Parliament and the Canadian people and fully debating its plans for the future.

Let me briefly read to you, Mr. Speaker, the actual objection raised by the committee on this particular point. It said:

> VIA Rail Canada Inc. has been established and set up in business—and in consequence almost all of the railway passenger services of the country have been brought into government ownership, control and funding—pursuant to an involved use of subordinate powers, a dollar vote in an Appropriation Act and the three slim regulations under report. At no time has Parliament had the opportunity to debate and to settle what are very significant matters.

I shall come back to this point shortly, Mr. Speaker, but let me now move on to the three substantive criticisms which the committee made in its report. The second criticism it made was this:

> The operative dollar vote, Vote 52d, Department of Transport, Appropriation Act No. 1, 1977, refers only to "selected rail passenger services", yet S.O.R./78-286, made under that vote, purports to apply not only to passenger services operated over railway lines but also to other passenger services, and not only those in substitution for rail services but also those ancillary to them.

What does this mean in plain English, Mr. Speaker? It means that when the government runs a bus service under VIA Rail or when it runs a limousine service, as it is doing in some parts of the country, and spends public funds to do so, it is acting in a way that has not been approved by Parliament. The expenditure of funds in that way may well be illegal.

Surely, Mr. Speaker, nothing could be more important to this House of Commons than the question whether Parliament is given authority to spend funds in a particular way, or whether it is spending the money that belongs to the people of Canada improperly. At the present time there are a number of bus routes in this country which are run by the government; for example, Lindsay-Peterborough-Cobourg; Jasper to Banff; Prince Albert to Saskatoon; Edmonton to Calgary. And there are numerous others. The committee does not quarrel with the authority of the government to have buses. What we do quarrel with, even under the Appropriation Act which was initially used as an excuse for setting up VIA Rail, is that we can find no justification for the expenditure of public funds on those lines. Surely the government must come back to Parliament and seek Parliament's approval.

The third complaint raised by the committee was this:

> An item critical to the funding of the services provided by VIA Rail Canada Inc., the "prescribed portion" of the employee costs of the railway companies (for severance benefits, early retirement benefits and the like) in implementing the changeover to VIA Rail control of passenger services, has never been prescribed by a regulation under Vote 52d, but is contained in an unpublished, and hence unscrutinized, statutory instrument.

The government admitted there was an order in council that provided this particular authority. Under the procedures adopted by this government, that is considered an unscrutinizable order in council by the government. It is not published in The Canada Gazette and it is not considered by the government to be properly brought forward before the standing joint committee. Consequently, this action has not been proper and on the strength of what the government says is not properly before the committee for scrutiny. Clearly this is a practice, Mr. Speaker, that the committee has complained about in the past and that must be revised.

The report, fourthly, says this:

> The prerequisites to or limitations on payment of the "prescribed portion" need not be set out in a regulation. Any terms or condition subject to which payment is to be made that are set by the governor in council by regulation must be obeyed, but if the minister sets any others, they may, without their being embodied in any regulation, be embodied in the arrangements entered into with the railway companies. Thus, the very terms of what was a vital part of the VIA Rail program were left to the minister to determine in conjuction with the railway companies.

What does that mean, Mr. Speaker? It means that not only did we find the order in council was deficient because it was not published in The Canada Gazette, but further the order in council did not provide in many instances for these other actions. It is not included in the order in council. Consequently, Mr. Speaker, we felt it was important to bring this matter to the attention of Parliament.

Let me return to the question whether or not a VIA Rail Act is necessary. What need be done? One of the areas where there has been confusion is in government policy. All of the committee's report in appended to and printed in the Votes and Proceedings of Wednesday, June 17, 1981. It would be impossible for me to review all of the report in the short time I have available to me, but I want to recommend to all members of the House that they study the report and give consideration to the points raised therein. In particular, I also want to draw to the attention of the House Appendix "A", which includes a series of correspondence between the Minister of Transport and the committee.

This has been an issue that the committee has been dealing with for over two years, Mr. Speaker. The government says, "Be patient, don't call your motion for concurrence today, sooner or later we will get around to it." The committee perhaps has been too patient already. Over the course of two years we have been dealing with this particular issue, yet we have found letters have gone unanswered or we have had responses from the Minister of Transport which are confused and contradictory.

The first letter included in the appendix is June 26, 1980, when we wrote to the Minister of Transport to ask for an indication from him as to how the policy review which he referred to before about VIA Rail was proceeding. In particular it said:

The committee is anxious to know whether and when a bill for an act to provide for VIA Rail Inc. will be introduced.

That was on June 26. Almost two months later, on August 19, the Minister of Transport wrote back to the committee and said:

With respect to the possible introduction of a bill to provide for a VIA Rail Canada act, the cabinet submission which will seek decisions in respect of rail passenger services and of VIA Rail Canada Inc. is, in particular, now in the advanced stages of interdepartmental consultation.

This is over a year ago. He said further:

I anticipate that a cabinet decision on the issues raised in that submission will be available to use by the end of September.

September came and went, Mr. Speaker. On November 6, 1980, the committee wrote back again to the Minister of Transport and said:

We were instructed to ask whether the cabinet decision to which you referred has been taken and when you will respond to the committee's position on the need for the introduction of a VIA Rail Canada bill.

That was on November 6, Mr. Speaker. It took the minister until January 12 to respond to the committee's letter. His response at that time was:

"The cabinet has not yet considered the submission to which I referred in previous correspondence. I expect the matter to be discussed early in the new year. Once a decision has been reached, I will advise the committee on the requirements for a VIA Rail Canada bill.

● (1530)

We were then put off to the beginning of this year. On March 19, well after the beginning of the year had come and gone, Mr. Speaker, we wrote again to the Minister of Transport. We said this:

The committee wishes to have some definite time frame within which it can work and we are instructed to ask once again for some definite if not precise date by which a decision whether or not to proceed with a VIA Rail Canada bill will be taken. Mindful of the fact its position in this matter has been in suspense as it were since just before the March 1979 dissolution the committee has adopted a time limit of May 6, 1981 on the decision to place a special report before both Houses.

We wrote to the minister on March 19. We said that we wanted a response so that we could make a report to both Houses by May 6, which was a month and a half later. The letter from the minister was dated May 7, 1981, the day after the date we indicated in the letter to the minister that we wanted to report to the House. What was the minister's reply? He said:

At present, there does not appear to be an immediate requirement for a VIA Rail Canada act. Once the existing legislative framework has been sufficiently tested, it should be possible to establish whether a constituent act is definitely needed.

There is no existing legislative framework because there never was a VIA Rail Canada act. The minister said flatly at that point that he had made a decision that there did not appear to be any need for a VIA Rail Canada act and that he wanted to leave it off.

The committee indicated to him before that it wanted to report to the House the day before the minister sent his reply. We were patient again and waited for the minister. On May 21, 1981, we wrote again to the minister and said:

The committee is of the view that there is an immediate requirement for a VIA Rail Canada act and that the existing legislative framework, consisting of votes in Appropriation Acts which may not even support all the regulations already made, is inadequate. Your letter appeared to the committee to avoid answering the issue it has raised. Consequently, the committee feels that a report to the Houses is needed and will be considering this matter again on May 28 and June 4. In the meantime, we shall appreciate receiving immediate clarification of your statement that "a decision on the matter is not possible". Does this mean that the committee has been told nothing is now being done to bring in a VIA Rail Canada bill?

As instructed by the committee, we are sending a copy of this letter to the government House leader so that he will be on notice of the committee's opinion that speedy action should be taken to introduce VIA Rail Canada legislation.

That date came and went without a response from the minister. Finally the committee reported, and again the minister's response came in after the committee had reported to the House of Commons, after the time had elapsed.

What we see in this history is either incredible ineptitude on the part of the minister, that he is incapable, over the course of several months in some instances, of getting his department to prepare letters for him, or we find that the minister is deliberately and consciously attempting to insult a committee of both Houses, withhold information from it, and make it impossible to continue its proceedings.

Following the presentation of the report and following the minister's response, we wrote him again in mid-summer. We have yet to receive a response to that letter. In checking with the minister's officials today we find that a response was drafted for him some months later again, on October 14, but the minister refused to sign the response and it has been sent back for redrafting. How can Canadians expect that the minister will run the transportation system in the country if he cannot run his own office, if he cannot answer his mail? Surely Parliament deserves better from the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) than it has received to date.

A further complication was added earlier this year when, in response to a question by the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), a former minister of transport, the minister responded in part to the committee's report. He indicated that as far as he was concerned he had made a conversion, he was now in favour of a VIA Rail Canada act. The House will remember that in the letter he sent to the committee, the letter upon which we acted, he indicated that he did not see any particular need, that he was quite happy to have this drag on, that it did not appear to be necessary. However, when the hon. member for Vegreville raised this matter in the House of Commons, it was made clear by the minister at that time that he had had a change of heart, that in fact he had decided that it would be useful to have such legislation. As reported on page 11454 of Hansard for July 13, 1981, the minister said:

> Madam Speaker, on the first subject, I am not in a position to comment because the decision of cabinet has not been made. On the other subject, that is the usefulness, necessity of having a VIA act, I am in full agreement with the views expressed by the hon. member and others.
>
> The problem has always been with the agenda or the timetable of the House. In 1977 when VIA was created by an item in the estimates, presumably there were too many items on the agenda of the House. Last year I gave priority to the problem of the transportation of dangerous goods. This coming year, as the hon. member knows, we have the ports policy to bring up. We also have the independent air safety board to create. Thus, time is really the problem. Everyone agrees that VIA is entitled to legislation of its own as one of the major Crown corporations. I am committed to cabinet to bring forward a memorandum on the subject which might lead to that realization, whenever the time of the House permits.

Again a reversal on the part of the minister. Initially when we wrote to him it appeared that he was sympathetic. That was over a year ago. Initially he appeared sympathetic, then he reversed himself, and in his letter in May he indicated that he was no longer sympathetic, that there was no need. Yet in July there was another reversal; there was a need but nothing would be done because he was too busy and Parliament was too busy. Nothing would be done to consider the report of the standing committee, to consider whether or not VIA Rail had been properly constituted, to consider whether the Parliament of Canada should have the opportunity to debate the government's comprehensive railway passenger program for the 1980s. Surely the minister insults hon. members of the House of Commons by saying that that matter is too trivial to be brought forward at this time. Surely we are entitled to have that act.

What does VIA feel about its position in this picture? I refer hon. members of the House to the 1979 annual report of VIA Rail Canada. In a report to shareholders, Mr. J. Frank Roberts, Chairman and President, said on page 5:

> 1979 clearly showed that the legislative and institutional framework within which VIA operates is inhibiting the corporation's ability to realize its full potential.
>
> VIA's mandate is to provide Canadians with attractive, convenient passenger train services while reducing the cost to government. This is being interpreted as "serve the public regardless of the cost" at one end of the spectrum, while at the other, it is taken to mean "reduce expenses regardless of the consequences".

We know on which end of the spectrum is the minister. He continued:

> It becomes therefore imperative that VIA's mandate and objectives be expressed clearly.

That is where the Chairman and President of VIA Rail Canada, speaking on behalf of VIA Rail, stands on this issue. Yet nothing has been done.

What did the Chairman and President say in the 1980 annual report? On page 4 of the 1980 annual report he said:

> VIA has further defined its mandate as a rail passenger corporation, but until a clear mandate is approved by government, progress will be difficult.

If the government had acted properly in the first place, if it had brought forward a VIA Rail Canada act, if it had allowed debate to take place in Parliament, if it had disclosed its plans to the people of Canada, if there had been proper discussion here and throughout the country, we would not be in the situation we are in today—with confusion reigning, with the minister acting under an extraordinary procedure to cancel VIA Rail lines, with VIA Rail itself complaining that it simply does not know its own mandate. If this had been done properly from the outset, we would be concentrating on providing a fast, efficient and economical rail passenger service to Canadians. But because it was not, we find a serious deterioration in service, we find cancellations taking place in this manner, we find serious disenchantment both within VIA and the country at large.

What justification can there be after all these years for doing the proper thing which the minister in his most recent flip-flop acknowledged is necessary and should be done? Was Parliament's concern in this issue something which was discovered only of late? The answer is no. This was debated in Parliament. There were points of order when the government attempted to act this way in 1977. The committee made two general reports on regulations; one in the second session of the Thirtieth Parliament, 1976-77 and one in this session. Both of those dealt with what we feel is a faulty procedure followed by the government in using Appropriation Acts to confer legislative authority upon itself.

• (1540)

Since we made our report on VIA Rail, Madam Speaker, in response to a point of order which was raised on this side of the House, ruled that in fact the committee's concerns were justified and that in fact the concerns expressed at the time VIA Rail was created were justified. So this is not something new, Mr. Speaker; it is not a trivial and inconsequential problem but one that goes to the heart and functioning of the rail passenger system in this country.

What will happen if the government continues to act in this way, Mr. Speaker? What will happen if it does not put a comprehensive program before Parliament? The first thing we will find is that the government will resort to the extraordinary measures it used to cancel 19 per cent of its rail passenger service. That is of concern to this House and to all Canadians today. Witnesses will appear before the committee tomorrow evening to discuss the propriety and the legality of the government's action and the Minister of Transport will appear before the committee on Thursday afternoon. We will welcome him at that time and give him an opportunity to explain why he has acted as he has.

As chairman of the committee, I do not want to prejudge the discussions that will take place. Suffice it to say that there is consternation in the country about the actions by the government; suffice it to say that there is sufficient concern that members of the committee felt it necessary that this matter should be investigated. I am sorry that the Minister of Transport has left the House and I recognize that he has other important business to attend to, but I put him on notice at this time that counsel for the committee has found serious doubts about whether the order cancelling those railways passenger services is valid. It may very well be null and void and that even using this extraordinary method the government bungled its attempt to achieve its ends. I put the minister on notice of that today. I hope that other government representatives in the House will ensure that he looks into the committee's concerns in this respect.

The committee is on record as believing in freedom of information and I would indicate to the minister as well, therefore, that the legal opinions offered to the committee are available to him and to the people of Canada.

If the government does not bring forward comprehensive legislation, then it will continue to use these extraordinary methods to create a piecework rail transport system without any over-all direction or without there ever having been a proper debate on the subject.

The next thing that will happen will be a retrenchment of railway passenger services. Through attrition the service will shrink, serving fewer Canadians, but it will continue to be paid for by the people of Canada, it will continue to suffer from very serious morale problems and it will continue to be the cause of vexation to Parliament. But most important, unless the government makes a commitment to rail passenger service for the future and spells out its plans to Parliament, VIA Rail will continue to die the death of a thousand cuts as line after line after line is abandoned and service after service withdrawn. I know that no member of the House wants to see that happen. All members want a fast, efficient, economical railway passenger service in this country. If we are to have that, it is essential that the government act now and does not allow the drift to continue.

I call on the government to allow members on all sides of the House, and in particular members of the committee, to debate this report. I call upon the government today to put on record its intention to act without further delay on the committee's concerns and to confirm that it will allow Parliament to debate a full and comprehensive VIA Rail Canada act.

I will sit down before my time has elapsed, Mr. Speaker, but I want to establish that the onus is now on the government. The power is in the government either to act in the extraordinary way in which it acted last July by cutting short debate and preventing a parliamentary committee from doing its job, or by respecting the rights of Members of Parliament and the responsibility of a parliamentary committee and allowing a full debate in this House before any further action is taken.

I call upon the government today to do the right thing. I call upon it to allow the debate to take place. I call upon it to act without further delay on the report of the committee and to bring forward a comprehensive VIA Rail Canada act which will enable the country to have a rail passenger service second to none.

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support strongly the motion for concurrence moved by the co-chairman of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments. I must say that it is with a certain amount of surprise that I rise at this time. I am pleased to see that the government has not adopted the rather shoddy tactics it adopted on July 14 last when a similar motion was presented by the hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty). Following his excellent presentation on behalf of a unanimous committee, the then parliamentary secretary to the President of the Privy Council stifled debate by moving a motion that the House proceed to orders of the day.

One can only speculate on why a similar motion has not been moved at this point. I would not want to suggest, of couse, that the reason such a motion was not put forward at this time is that the government might lose the vote; perhaps there are not enough government members in the House to carry the motion. I know that this is not necessarily accurate, or at least it is possibly not accurate.

I am pleased to be able to take part in the debate on this motion for concurrence in the revised seventh report of the committee. Before getting into the substance of that report, I should like to say that this committee does not operate in the limelight; it is a hard-working committee which virtually always operates on the basis of consensus. The only power of the committee, if it believes that the government has taken action which violates the criteria established for the committee, is to report to this House. On a number of occasions the committee has reported on matters of substance and matters of procedure. The last time a motion for concurrence in the committee's report was put forward was on the fourth report. That was not just a two or three-page report on a particular regulation or statutory instrument but was a report on the means by which the committee had been functioning, the role of the committee in making very serious recommendations for changes in the way in which regulations are promulgated and reviewed, and the opportunities that the public has for input into the process of making regulations.

That report was treated with contempt; it has disappeared from the Order Paper so that, effectively, the government has rejected the recommendations of the committee without any meaningful debate.

I emphasize that it was the unanimous recommendation of the committee—Liberal and Conservative members from both Houses agreed and, also a member of the New Democratic Party—that there should be sweeping changes in the process of reviewing all regulations in this country. The government's response was to kill the report.

Today there is before the House a motion for concurrence in the seventh report of that committee. I hope that the government will see fit to accept its recommendations in a spirit of good faith, following debate. The government may contemptuously reject all recommendations for change that the committee put forward but I hope it will recognize the work done by the committee and support the motion for concurrence in the revised seventh report.

My colleague, the hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe, has gone through the substantive elements of the report and the fact that members are deeply concerned about the way in which VIA Rail Canada was established by means of a procedural device known as a $1 vote. The effect of that procedure was to deny Members of Parliament, either in this chamber or in committee, any opportunity to debate the wisdom of creating this important corporation. That sets a very dangerous precedent for the future.

● (1550)

We are also concerned about the precedent which has been created by the establishment of this multimillion dollar corporation for future operations of the government. How many other procedural wrangles and devious devices of this nature will the government use in an attempt to bypass Parliament? We have already seen the way in which the government has chosen to ignore the views of literally hundreds of thousands of Canadians by bypassing the Canadian Transport Commission in chopping very fundamental and badly needed rail service throughout this country. Therefore, to suggest that the government may be establishing a precedent here, I would submit, is not being alarmist, but, rather, is a recognition of the trend which seems to be very much in vogue with this particular government.

It was not so very long ago that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) said that Members of Parliament, when they left this chamber, were nobodies. There seems to be a new philosophy with this government. Members of Parliament, not only outside the chamber but also inside the chamber, as far as this government is concerned are nobodies. It is that concern which was addressed by our fourth report, the report which the government killed and which has disappeared from the Order Paper. It is that concern to which the committee addressed itself in our seventh report, which is now before the House. As I stated, the establishment of VIA Rail by a $1 vote subverted any opportunity of Parliament to debate the wisdom of the creation of this important institution which is being destroyed or, at least, seriously harmed by the actions of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin).

What was the response of the government to the concern which was expressed by our committee? Our concern was that at the very least a bill should be brought before Parliament creating VIA Rail Canada, in order that Members of Parliament on all sides of the House might have an opportunity to consider the wisdom of that. The response has been "yes" and "no", and "yes" and "no". I understand that the latest answer from the minister was "yes", in response to a question by the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski). As recently as May of this year, quoting from Appendix "A" to our report, we were told by the minister:

> At present there does not appear to be an immediate requirement for a VIA Rail Canada act. Once the existing legislative framework has been sufficiently tested, it should be possible to establish whether a constituent act is definitely needed.

Of course, what this is saying is that the government, having established our committee, having accepted that this is an important committee, can pick and choose; and when we submit a report with which the government agrees, then it can graciously concur. However, when we submit a report which is in any way critical of the government, which it does not like, it can do one of two things: it can use its procedural gimmickry to kill the report, as it did with our fourth report; or it can permit a debate for a period of time, and then use its numbers to vote against the motion of concurrence.

I cannot believe that the Liberal members on this occasion would actually take that opportunity to vote against a motion of concurrence which is so vitally important to the nation and which so fundamentally affects not only VIA Rail, but also the way in which this Parliament works. Because that is the essence of this report. Indeed, the substance is important, the question of whether or not the minister can bypass Parliament, bypass elected representatives, and create this corporation. However, far more important is the way in which similar recommendations are treated by this government.

We are talking, indeed, about the role of this committee. As one member of that committee, I question the usefulness and validity of spending thousands of dollars of taxpayers' money—our counsel recently estimated something in the order of $200,000—and valuable hours of parliamentarians' time from all sides of the House in carefully considering regulations and statutory instruments if, when we decide as a serious matter that we must report to the House that the government has apparently violated certain of our criteria, the government can just sweep that report under the carpet and ignore it. What is the point of the committee? That is our only power: the power to report to this House; the power to hope that in good faith our reports will be considered on their merits by all members of the House.

In closing, I urge that the House give very serious consideration to this important motion, not only in terms of the substance of the seventh report which is before us, which is the manner in which VIA Rail was created, but, far more importantly, as an indication of genuine response to the important issues which have been raised by this committee. It would be an indication of its importance that when this committee reports we do take seriously our mandate, and that this House, or a majority on the other side, does not contemptuously choose to ignore any criticism but responds to it in a positive and constructive manner.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): We shall very shortly see whether this government is prepared to listen to the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, to listen to a unanimous report, or whether once again it is prepared to use its procedural gimmickry to sweep this report under the carpet, to kill the report and to kill a very worthwhile recommendation for the creation of a very important corporation, VIA Rail Canada.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The hon. member for Willowdale (Mr. Peterson).

Mr. Nielsen: A point of order, Mr. Speaker. If government members speak now, they will have an opportunity of moving that we move to orders of the day. I therefore move that the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) be now heard.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. The only time to move a motion such as that which the hon. member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) has just raised is when he has been recognized and given the floor. Had he been recognized and given the floor to participate in the debate, he could—

Some hon. Members: No, no!

Mr. Blenkarn: Not so!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Again, I must say that had he been recognized on a point of order, debating again whether there were two hon. members getting up to speak at the same time, and—

Mr. Blenkarn: There were several.

Mr. Lawrence: I stood up.

Mr. Mayer: I stood.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. The Speaker, in the usual fashion, had been alternating. I saw the hon. member for Willowdale (Mr. Peterson) and I have recognized him. There could have been others seeking the floor whom I did not see; but at the time I alternated, as I do in all debates. The first hon. member to speak was from the official opposition, the second was a member from the NDP, and then we go to the other side. That has been done all the time. I did not choose between any hon. members. I recognized the hon. member for Willowdale, whom I saw rising. That now being the question, I will hear the hon. member for Yukon on his point of order.

Mr. Nielsen: May I refer the Chair and his advisers to Hansard of December 11, 1975, at page 9938, where this precise question came up. After Mr. Allard had finished speaking, the then House leader for the opposition spoke. I draw Your Honour's attention to the fact that it was on a motion to concur in the report of a standing committee. Immediately after the mover had finished speaking, the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Baker) said this:

● (1600)

Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Under the Standing Orders of this House, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Medicine Hat (Mr. Hargrave):

"That the hon. member for Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe be now heard."

MR. DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Baker) has risen on a point of order under Standing Order 29, at page 24 of our Standing Orders, which reads as follows:

"When two or more members rise to speak"—

That was the situation here when the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) and the hon. member for Willowdale (Mr. Peterson) rose at the same time. Standing Order 29 continues:

—"Mr. Speaker calls upon the member who first rose in his place"—

That is what you did, Mr. Speaker. Standing Order 29 concludes:

—"but a motion may be made that any member who has risen "be now heard", or "do now speak", which motion shall be forthwith put without debate".

Then the hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. Blais), along with the hon. member for Medicine Hat (Mr. Hargrave), intervened in the debate. Mr. Deputy Speaker, who was in the chair at that time, put the motion.

I suggest to you, Sir, that that is the obligation of the Chair now unless—I want to be fair because we all want to be fair on this side of the House—we can have the assurance of government members that their participation in the debate will be had without moving any motion to proceed to orders of the day or any other motion that will impede, restrict or limit the debate today. I am sure that all hon. members on this side are prepared to accept the word of the government if the government is prepared to make that stipulation. Then there would be no question on this side. Otherwise, I suggest the Chair is obliged to put the motion I have moved, which has been seconded.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): After referring to the Standing Orders, I want to correct something I said earlier. The hon. member for Yukon had the right to rise. I recognized the hon. member whom I saw rising, namely the hon. member for Willowdale. It is very difficult for the Chair to argue. I am told other people were seeking the floor, and that could be debateable. When things such as this happen, the point made by the hon. member for Yukon is in order. The hon. member for Yukon has made a proposition. Nevertheless, I would have to put the motion before the House if anyone wants to be heard. There is a motion before the House that the hon. member for Vegreville be now heard.

Mr. Smith: Mr. Speaker, I believe the hon. member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) was seeking an assurance from this side of the House that a motion of that type would not be put. I am prepared to give that assurance to him.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): I believe the matter has been settled. Will the hon. member withdraw his motion?

Mr. Nielsen: Of course, Mr. Speaker. I seek unanimous consent to withdraw my motion on the understanding that this debate will in no way be limited until ten o'clock tonight.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The motion had not been officially put. I was just given an indication of what the situation would be should the hon. member insist on being recognized. I see the parties have now come to an understanding. Therefore, the Chair will recognize the hon. member for Vegreville.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I am delighted with the agreement that has been arrived at, but would the Chair be kind enough at some subsequent time, perhaps tomorrow or on another day, to rule on the suggestion, if nothing else, that is contained in Beauchesne's fifth edition in Citation 234, which reads:

(2) A member cannot rise on a point of order to move a motion.

Mr. Nielsen: Except this one.

Mr. Deans: With the agreement that we already have, I am concerned, quite frankly, that at some future time a minister of the Crown, or any other member, may rise on a point of order for the very purpose of cutting off debate. Would the Chair be kind enough to review that particular citation and give a ruling to the House on its appropriateness?

Mr. Nielsen: Not without argument.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. I think the hon. member's point is well taken as it pertains to the matter at hand, but a motion is not before the House. Therefore, I recognize the hon. member for Vegreville.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, at the outset I should express my appreciation to the hon. member for Willowdale (Mr. Peterson). I think it is fair to assume that after the understanding was made there was a disposition on our side to yield the floor to him. But on the other hand, the hon. member appeared to want to hear my words of wisdom first and elected to follow me.

It is with a great deal of pleasure that I rise in my place this afternoon to support the motion presented by my colleague of concurrence in the seventh report of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments. I want to pay tribute as well to the co-chairman and the membership of this important committee, who I understand have worked in a very non-partisan way to attempt to uphold some of the traditions and principles of the institution of Parliament. I think their report is an excellent one.

However, I am saddened that the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) has been so derelict in responding to it. Nonetheless, he did indicate to the House last Thursday, when I had an opportunity to debate a question in the adjournment debate, that he did have the first draft of a VIA Rail act. That is certainly some progress, Mr. Speaker, but it is something which should have been placed before this House some time ago.

At the time VIA Rail was created by a $1 vote in the estimates, we took exception to the circumvention of parliamentary authority. VIA Rail has since grown into a full-fledged Crown corporation, and as late as July 27 and since then it has been the subject of a major national debate.

It seems to me the failure of the government to move toward the formal ratification of VIA Rail through the Parliament of Canada constitutes a very dismal failure on its part. The action to reduce, if not emasculate, Canada's rail passenger service which is operated by VIA Rail is indeed a shameful act which is causing deep anger, outrage and regional discord. It is creating very severe and grave implications for hundreds of thousands of Canadians who use and rely on rail passenger service. It will have some very serious consequences on the 1,600 people directly affected by these cutbacks, plus the hundreds of thousands of others who will be indirectly affected.

What is fundamental is that this government has failed to call upon Parliament to share in the formulation of rail passenger services in Canada as a major national policy. It seems to me that it is not asking too much to call upon the Parliament of Canada, its elected representatives and the people of Canada, those who are directly and indirectly affected by rail passenger services in this country, to come forth and contribute in the formulation of an over-all rail passenger policy.

The fact that VIA Rail was established by the stroke of a pen through a $1 item has disallowed that opportunity to Canadians. It has prevented the Parliament of Canada from establishing a mandate with goals and objectives which would govern the operation of VIA Rail. It does not have the necessary bargaining power at the present time because it lacks the kind of autonomy it should have as an ongoing business concern.

● (1610)

The reason for this is its outdated and archaic costing order. Under the basis of the present terms of reference and mandate, it is not able to deal with that in a realistic way. VIA Rail has failed to address the real needs of rail passenger services in this country because it has to go cap in hand to the government. It is the victim of the railways which constitute 63 per cent or more of VIA Rail's expenditures, an exorbitant cost, and that leaves it very little room for manoeuvring. This 63 per cent expenditure is made without any control.

The R-6313 costing order is part and parcel of the failure of VIA Rail to function effectively and adequately in the discharge of rail passenger services along with its lack of a clear-cut parliamentary mandate outlining its goals and objectives and over-all global rail passenger policy for Canada. Those are the failings of VIA Rail today.

We have a situation now where a minister of the Crown can unilaterally and arbitrarily choose to reduce capriciously rail passenger services in this country by 20 per cent, inflicting very severe damage upon countless hundreds of thousands of Canadians.

I am not objecting to the principle of VIA Rail. As a matter of fact, during the course of our public hearings throughout Canada there was widespread support for the concept of VIA Rail. But the people that support VIA Rail would like to see a clearly defined mandate outlining VIA's goals and objectives. These Canadians would like to see it function as a bona fide Crown corporation which would have the mandate to deal on the basis of sound business principles.

I support the concept of VIA Rail but object to the fact that it was created in a haphazard manner. Canadians across this country are now paying for that carelessness. VIA Rail is now subject to the whims of a minister and government which, with the stroke of a pen, can reduce the service by 20 per cent.

What might we expect next year? The government may decide in its wisdom that the hon. Minister of Transport will have to reduce his budget further. The President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Johnston) and the chairman of the economic development committee, who has over-all charge, may tell the Minister of Transport to shave another $100 million off his budget. Naturally, he will pick VIA Rail because its subsidies and expenditures are clearly defined. There is no difficulty in ascertaining what the government pays toward support of rail passenger services in this country.

It is not as easy to determine such a figure with respect to air transportation, surface transportation or even marine transportation.

If the Minister of Transport and this government is allowed to proceed with this drastic kind of emasculation of a service which is needed, it establishes a very dangerous precedent.

I point out again, next year it could cut back another 20 per cent or unilaterally abandon more branch lines. The basic branch line network in western Canada is not very safe if this is allowed to continue. The minister might even suggest as a cost cutting measure a cutback in ferry services support. These issues have to be dealt with.

When the archaic R-6313 costing order is coupled with the lack of an appropriately defined VIA Rail mandate, one arrives at the central core of what constitutes the failure of VIA Rail. Those two items must be dealt with.

We must have a clearly defined VIA Rail act. We must have an upgraded and realistic costing order, similar to what Amtrak has in the United States whose cost of services provided by the railroad amount to 25 per cent of the budget. VIA Rail pays more than 63 per cent, close to two thirds of its total budget, on services that are provided by the railroads. One clearly gets the picture when one looks at the sleazy and slippery way in which these cutbacks were put into effect and the failure of the government to address costing order R-6313.

The government has shied away and continues to shy away from public debate. I cannot figure out why it refuses to hold public hearings. If the minister and his colleagues embarked on public hearings as our party chose to do during the summer, they would have been able to gauge the depth of the feeling there is for maintaining an effective and adequate rail passenger service in this country.

Maritimers especially are outraged by the fact they are going to lose their rail passenger service. They are not going to have alternative forms of service. I am sure the minister does not realize that maritimers rely more heavily on rail passenger service than does any other region of Canada. Time after time we heard witnesses testify that the railroad was part of the deal with confederation and they would not have been a member of confederation if they had not been promised adequate and effective rail passenger service.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mazankowski: As a matter of fact, they went so far as to say "Constitution be damned. Rail passenger service, yes. That is what we need." Maritimers are losing their rail passenger service and do not have an opportunity to express their views or challenge the minister.

Suspicions? There certainly are suspicions with respect to the accuracy of the figures and statistics that were given as background to the formulation of this decision. Time and again we heard the charge that revenues have been understated and expenditures overstated. We have heard people say time and again what would happen if their rail passenger service was taken away. One lady said it would be tantamount to cutting the heart out of New Brunswick.

It is the taxpayers of Canada who are paying to support VIA Rail service. Why can we not give the taxpayers of Canada the opportunity to share in the formulation of an effective rail passenger policy? We could do it under a VIA Rail act. We could have a beneficial debate in the House of Commons as well as across the country which would establish the needs in every region. We could educate Canadians to what it really costs to provide service, and then they could make up their minds whether they believe we should have a luxury type of service, a standard type of service, intercity services, regional or local services or transcontinental services.

• (1620)

The fact is that since the announcement of the minister this kind of assessment has been taking place. There are no less than four alternatives which are now on the table which could be used in exchange for the decision the minister has advanced. Transport 2000 has advanced an alternative proposal. The government of Alberta has advanced an alternative proposal. VIA Rail itself has come out with an alternative proposal on re-equipping the transcontinentals, which would provide better service, reduce costs and put rail passenger service into the current technological era.

Indeed, there are rumblings from the minister's own department that there are better ways of achieving his objectives than the one he chose. There are rumblings from his department which take issue with the way in which the minister chose, unilaterally and arbitrarily, to reduce rail passenger services in this country.

The infamous leaked document which got into the hands of the Toronto Star said this, and I quote:

> Only July 27 ... the government announced widespread changes in VIA Rail ... These changes have been approved by the governor in council, by means of an order in council varying Canadian Transport Commission orders and directives, and are to be implemented on November 15, 1981.

We have seriously questioned the propriety of a minister's invoking Section 64 of the National Transportation Act on a decision taken by the CTC more than two or three years ago. I find that really incredible because I do not believe Section 64 was ever intended to be used as a policy-making device. It seems to me that Section 64 was to give the governor in council an opportunity to deal with a timely and recent decision rendered by the CTC. If this government did not like the decision of the CTC back in 1977 or 1978, it should have invoked Section 64 at that time. It should have rescinded, amended or changed that decision in any way, shape or form it chose, but it refused to do that. It accepted that CTC decision and, two or three years later, it comes along and says, "Oh, but today we do not accept it, so we are going to amend it." That is wrong. That violates the spirit of the National Transportation Act, and it violates the intent for which Section 64 was to be used. Furthermore, it deprives the affected parties of the opportunity of natural justice.

As hon. members will recall, when considering whether to abandon or to expand rail passenger service or any mode of service in the country, the CTC used the criteria of public convenience and necessity to render its decision. It rendered a decision on the criteria of public convenience and necessity, and that is enshrined in the spirit of the National Transportation Act. Any movement away from that, in my view, is clearly challengeable. If the minister wants to change that fundamental part of the National Transportation Act, then he should bring in an amendment to the National Transportation Act, and we would debate it. However, the minister has not done that. He has chosen to hide behind the powers of Section 64, and I believe he is wrong. I believe he is violating the intent of Section 64 and the spirit of the National Transportation Act.

I am very happy that my good friend, the hon. member for Laprairie (Mr. Deniger), is in the House because I respect his views on transportation. I know he has worked with the CTC. I listened to him very carefully the other day when he said, with a great degree of clarity and assurance, that the minister was very much engaged in proper action consistent with the provisions of the National Transportation Act and Section 64 when he arbitrarily chose to cut back rail passenger service by 20 per cent. Notwithstanding the alleged legality of it, it is morally wrong, and it breaks with the democratic and traditional way of doing things in this country. I hope the hon. member will welcome the challenge in the courts respecting Section 64 because I think—and the hon. member will agree with me—that if this action by the minister goes unchallenged, it will represent a very dangerous precedent which we in this chamber will live to regret.

The document leaked from within the Department of Transport goes on to say that to accomplish this decision—> —the government has used Section 64 of the National Transportation Act in an unprecedented manner.

That is what we are saying. I do not think it has ever been used in this fashion in the 50 years of the CTC and its predecessor, the Board of Transport Commissioners. That is why it is dangerous, and that is why it is wrong.

> Instead of using the section as its drafters intended to vary the odd CTC order it did not agree with, the government is using it to restructure the whole VIA system.

The government is using Section 64 to restructure the whole VIA system. I get back to the thrust of the committee report, and that is the fact that VIA has been improperly constituted in a parliamentary sense. The matter should be brought before the House of Commons for full debate, and VIA should be fully mandated by the Parliament of Canada. So doing would give the members of this House and the people of Canada an opportunity to outline and formulate a clear-cut rail passenger policy for Canada. The government has failed to do that, and it continues to circumvent the issue and either break the law or come close to breaking the law. This government is very famous for that, and it is time it was challenged on every count.

The document goes on to state:

> This is being done without CTC public hearings and without parliamentary scrutiny. Announcement of the changes was deliberately help up until Members of Parliament had left for the summer recess.

There you have it.

> As best as can be determined, those responsible for the policy were so intent upon maintaining secrecy that only a limited number of government and VIA headquarters officials decided upon the detailed changes. The cabinet apparently then ordered further changes according to ministers' wishes, resulting in as uninformed and inconsistent an exercise in transportation planning as could be imagined. It appears that two particularly valuable sources of expertise, the CTC and VIA's own regional officers, were deliberately excluded.

It goes on to state:

> It must be acknowledge that VIA's costs generally seem to be escalating rapidly and that several of the government's proposed cuts could be made without great hardship. The premise of the present alternative proposal is that roughly the same magnitude of saving could be realized by a proper and even-handed planning exercise, rather than the one conducted hurriedly behind closed doors by a small number of officials.

The document goes on further to outline an alternative proposal to the minister's decision which would result in an estimated $2.4 million per year saving in addition to the $100 million the minister alleges he will save. That is $2.4 million more than the government's proposal and, at the same time, "The Atlantic" would be salvaged and the western transcontinental would be salvaged. However, what we are looking at here is the kind of gimmickry and illegal tactics in which this government engages. It is absolutely shameful. It is the process as much as the decision that is causing anger and outrage throughout the country.

• (1630)

The government should allow a full-fledged public debate on VIA Rail. It should bring in legislation outlining its policy parameters, refer it to the standing committee and let the committee travel across the country to hear the views of the people. Is that asking too much? The transport committee has always been one of the most prestigious committees of the House of Commons. We have a railway committee room. This is because transportation is so important to this country.

If the government brought in a VIA Rail act, it would find there is widespread support for the concept of VIA, particularly at this time with high energy costs. VIA has not been given a fair chance to prove itself. More and more people are choosing to ride the trains, 41 per cent more today than when VIA took over. The government would find that rather than cutting back on rail passenger service, the people of Canada would recommend an expansion. There needs to be an upgrading of equipment.

Let us look at the Canadian Transport Commission decision of 1977-78. In addition to the establishment of the route structure some specific orders were made having to do with improvements in rolling stock, sleeping accommodation, meal service, scheduling and marketing. Those orders have not been fulfilled notwithstanding that ridership has increased by 41 per cent.

The government will not refer this decision to the Canadian Transport Commission or a standing committee because it is afraid of the truth, afraid to hear what the people have to say. The government did not talk about cutting back VIA rail service during the last election campaign. Now it is moving unilaterally and arbitrarily because it thinks the people will forget by the time the next election campaign rolls around. The people will not forget about this. I said the other day that instead of "twin-track Trudeau" we now have "No train Pepin". That is what it amounts to.

There is massive objection across Canada to the cutbacks in rail services proposed by the minister. There is massive outrage with regard to the arbitrary manner in which this decision was made. There is a very deep concern about the future of the Canadian Transport Commission. What is its role? It has suffered an end runaround in this case. It has been circumvented and emasculated. Who will be the protector of the public interest in terms of ensuring that we have adequate transportation service for all modes, air, surface and marine?

The people of Canada who appeared at the very extensive hearings in 1976 and 1977 believed that the decision was reached after all the evidence was presented to establish a rail passenger framework which was then described as being at an irreducible minimum. Any modification of that should automatically be referred back to the CTC. In its policy directive to the CTC, the former minister of transport said among other things that the government wanted the CTC to establish a single spine transcontinental network. The CTC rejected that on the basis of public convenience and necessity. The commission found and ruled that under that criteria the service requirements could not be fulfilled with a single spine network. As I said earlier, if the government disapproved of that, it should have invoked Section 64 at that time. To do it now is wrong and in violation of the spirit of the act and the intent of Section 64.

If the government brought forth a VIA Rail act and deferred its decision to cut back, it would find through the voice of public opinion that the economic and social impact will be far more serious than it had considered. For that reason there has to be some check and balance. The government cannot unilaterally and arbitrarily, without any recourse to public input, do an end run on the people of Canada. It will find that the people of northern Ontario, particularly in those areas which will not have an alternate service, the lower income groups, the trappers, fishermen, outriggers and those in the Indian communities will be very seriously affected.

Many members on this side spoke about the impact on the tourist industry. If the government allowed the committee to go across the country, it would find that VIA Rail and rail passenger service is becoming a very major and integral part of tourist marketing in this country. The Japanese, Americans and Europeans who come here to visit the Rocky Mountains and the many attractive places in the Atlantic region use VIA Rail. There is a really blossoming tourist industry which centres around VIA Rail.

We heard during the hearings that people find it strange that on one hand the government pours hundreds of millions of dollars through DREE grants into the tourist industry in Atlantic Canada, and then another minister comes along and wipes out rail passenger service. How inconsistent and contradictory. The government would find as well that any reduction in rail service would have a very significant impact on our total tourist industry and therefore our balance of payments. It could see the discord and regional tension that would be created.

If the federal government brought forward a VIA Rail act and allowed the transport committee to go across the country to get the views of Canadians, it would find that the regions of the west and Atlantic Canada where the bulk of the cuts will take place would be most affected. Job loss will take place in those areas where there is the highest level of unemployment.

Any mention of the fact that moneys will be transferred from Atlantic Canada and western Canada to further support services in the Quebec-Windsor corridor will cause anger and tension. In that area there is now a multiple choice of transportation services.

It is interesting to note that in its submission to the transport standing committee, Voyageur Bus Lines very dramatically indicated that it was absolutely opposed to VIA Rail cutbacks, and the emphasis being diverted to the Quebec-Windsor corridor. Quite frankly, the traffic generated by Voyageur along the Quebec-Windsor corridor is an important source of revenue for supporting other routes which are not so viable. Thus, that support is required to finance the not so heavily travelled runs.

● (1640)

What is going to happen by concentrating VIA Rail's efforts on the Quebec-Windsor corridor is that you may very well be putting a viable bus industry in jeopardy, certainly putting an industry in jeopardy to the extent that it is going to be forced to cut back on its less heavily travelled runs. This should be another matter considered in any over-all rail passenger policy.

There are many things that can be said about the present level of VIA Rail transportation. Suffice it to say it is not the time to be cutting back. It is not the time to be reducing rail passenger services, for a number of reasons. I have not mentioned the energy issue. Since we now have an oil agreement that is going to see fuel prices rise to $4 and $4.50 per gallon, surely it is incumbent upon us to take another look at all modes of public transportation, and surely it is incumbent upon the legislators of Canada to study the implications. This is new evidence which I believe has not been considered but should be considered. This also could be considered if we had a VIA Rail act brought before this House.

It has been said that VIA has suffered because it has been an illegitimate offspring and has suffered four and a half years of neglect. I believe this is an accurate reflection, because VIA was charged with the job of doing almost the impossible. The contractual arrangements and the costing arrangements that were put in place should be completely overhauled and reviewed. There should be no cutbacks based upon a costing order that is archaic and out of date. The CTC found it out of date. The CTC says that it has to be overhauled and has to be changed. The contractual arrangements have to be changed. VIA lacks the kind of autonomy it requires in order to do the job it is asked to do.

What about the historical and the statutory obligations of the railways? What responsibilities do they have in terms of maintaining rail passenger services? Under Sections 260, 261 and 262 of the Railway Act there are still some very clear statutory obligations for the purpose of maintaining adequate accommodation for passenger traffic and freight traffic. Those are items that should also be brought to the attention of the government and to any House committee that would be considering a new mandate for VIA Rail.

What about the question of energy efficiency? When we are looking at VIA Rail and the future of transportation in this country, surely it is time to come up with a clear analysis so that we may determine once and for all what is and is not the most energy-efficient mode of transportation. Surely it is time once and for all to establish what forms of public transportation are subsidized more than others, to what extent the highway mode is subsidized and to what extent the air mode, the marine mode and the rail mode are subsidized. We have various conflicting figures. Everyone uses their pet set of figures to argue their specific point.

Clearly the time has come when all of these things must be put on the table and properly analysed and considered so that we can end up with the best kind of transportation system in this country. I am not simply pleading a case for rail passenger service. There is no question that we need all modes of transportation. But we must adopt intermodal concepts so that we can use the various modes in the most efficient and effective way possible. We will not do this unless we have an opportunity to debate a transportation policy and, particularly, a rail passenger policy. I believe this is the issue we are addressing ourselves to today in the substance of this particular motion.

I appreciate the opportunity to put some of my thoughts before the House, not only on the legality but some of the pitfalls, obstacles and difficulties that VIA Rail faces in terms of operating under its present structure. The fact of the matter is that VIA does not have an adequate structure to discharge the job it was asked to do.

If this motion is adopted and carried, it will compel the Minister of Transport to bring in a VIA Rail act which we can consider in depth, with the fullest of debate and in a manner where we would not be faced by a guillotine on November 15 which would emasculate and destroy the real heart and core of VIA Rail's route structure. Surely this is not asking for too much.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) has talked at great length about the fact that we have waited some 50-odd years to get a Constitution. I am sure another year of deliberate consideration of this important subject that affects the hearts and minds and welfare of Canadians from coast to coast is in order. Why the haste? Why do we not just sit back and try to do something right? At a time when other countries are expanding rail passenger services, surely now is the time Canada should join that club. We can join that club by moving this motion forward. I hope members on the other side of the House will see fit to support it.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[Translation]

QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please! It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 40, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the hon. member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie)—Industry—Location of aerospace training centre institute—Request for commitment to Winnipeg site; the hon. member for York-Sunbury (Mr. Howie)—The economy—Measures to aid maritime region—Request for assistance to home owners renewing mortgages; the hon. member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier)—The Constitution—Possible postponement of federal-provincial meeting—Government position.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

REGULATIONS AND OTHER STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS

CONCURRENCE IN REVISED SEVENTH REPORT OF STANDING JOINT COMMITTEE

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Beatty:

That the Revised Seventh Report of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, presented to the House on Wednesday, June 17, 1981, be concurred in.

Mr. Jim Peterson (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice and Minister of State for Social Development): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in this debate on a question of procedure in the House. It is a question of how Members of Parliament are going to regulate their affairs and how the House is going to conduct its business in the most efficient way with a view to having the fullest hearing on the issues.

A report of the joint standing committee has been tabled in the House. Before we proceeded to orders of the day, a motion was made for concurrence of this report. The government, through the task forces it has launched, through the various committees and reports put before Parliament, has commenced a process of involving more parliamentarians to reach out further than the executive branch ever hoped it could to listen to Canadians, to talk to Canadians and to bring their views before this House. We must not cut this important, progressive move off at a very initial state, at a very tentative stage of its youth.

We are proposing a process whereby Members of Parliament, through joint committees that will involve hon. senators with their experience and wisdom, as well as members of all parties in the House, members who have expertise along with those who want to become experts in the subjects, go out and do their job.

I want to commend the standing joint committee, of which the hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty) is a member, for the work the committee did on its fourth report on the whole process of regulatory reform. I also commend the committee for the work it has done in its subsequent report. But I am not talking about the substance of the report that is before us today. I am talking about the process which could be used to stifle the authority of these task forces and committees in the future of our parliamentary system.

• (1650)

The hon. member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) said that the government was stifling debate in wanting to get to orders of the day when we dealt with this matter previously. He said that the report had disappeared from the Order Paper and that, in effect, the government had rejected it. He asked; "What is the point of the committee?" The point of the committee was very important. The committee made its report. It was made public. It formed part of the legislative record which would act as a touchstone for legislation in the future. We have had a debate on VIA Rail in the House.

Let me turn to the specific proposals contained in the seventh report. It deals with the question that there was a $1 vote in 1977 which was the essence of our proceeding to cut VIA Rail. Let us look at this process. Nowhere in the record could I find any criticism of that measure which was taken and the possibility which was opened up in 1977. I challenge hon. members of the opposition to show us anywhere where that issue was challenged. The seventh report of the standing joint committee indicates nowhere that the procedures being adopted are illegal. Also the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) stated on a number of occasions that he intended at some future time to bring in a VIA Rail act. He has assured us that the government will be presenting this House with VIA Rail legislation for the future. As the minister explained so lucidly to the House, at the present time he is dealing with a crisis in cost.

I should like to return to the seventh report in which reference was made to the fourth report and the work of the previous committee of which the hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe was a member. I must confess that he provided a great deal of leadership in terms of the fourth report which dealt with the entire process of regulatory reform. I only wish that his hon. colleague, Senator Godfrey, could be with us in the chamber today to assist in the debate of this particular issue. His learned contribution to the entire process of regulatory reform created another touchstone for Members of Parliament as we look to the future of our various committees and the roles each individual can play.

The seventh report reads in part as follows:

Your committee's predecessor called for an end to this practice inimical to parliamentary sovereignty. It should stop and all existing subordinate laws made under votes should be the subject of review as to merits by the appropriate parliamentary standing committee.

This is a clarion call for a new system and a new approach. I recall the words of the hon. House leader when the standing joint committee presented its fourth report. The hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe moved concurrence at that time, and the response of our House leader was that we had taken under consideration the very important proposals which have been put forward. He indicated that we agreed with many of them but that other reports had been put forward as well. There was the Lambert commission, the first report of the Economic Council and the report of the parliamentary task force on regulatory reform of which I was pleased to be chairman. This task force was very ably served by hon. members from both sides of the House. Also there was the final report of the Economic Council of Canada which was published recently.

Within the last several years there have been a number of reports before the House dealing with the entire process of regulatory reform. The fact that the government created task forces and mandated various bodies to deal with the issue surely testifies to the good will on this side of the House to ensure the regulatory process goes ahead. I need only refer hon. members to the budget debate of last year in which the then minister of finance twice referred to the fact that regulatory reform was a priority of the government and that through proper regulatory reform we could indeed reduce the burden of regulation on the private sector in Canada and make regulators more accountable to Parliament and to the people of Canada.

This is why I am happy to rise on this particular issue. I felt somewhat taken aback when the hon. House leader of the official opposition quickly rose from his seat when he saw me rise to speak. I felt that he was suspicious. I do not know why he would want to be suspicious. Perhaps he felt that I was rising to try to stifle debate on this particular issue. I assure him that I was prepared at that time to defer to the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) for whom I have a high regard. He has fought for particular issues with great eloquence in the House. We on this side of the House are pleased to have an opportunity to speak on this matter.

In connection with the entire process of regulatory reform about which we are talking, I should like to indicate that we are talking about the process by which regulations and rules are made and about the process of subordinate legislation. I bring to the attention of the House—and this is the first opportunity we have had to do it—a number of proposals put forward in our report which were concurred in by the fourth report of the standing joint committee. There has been widespread feeling that the exercise of ministerial discretion should be subjected to greater control. Perhaps this view is best expressed by Dicey. I should like to quote from the "Law of the Constitution" in which this learned jurist said:

> The rule of law is contrasted with every system of government based on the exercise by persons in authority of wide, arbitrary or discretionary powers of constraint . . . Whenever there is discretion there is room for arbitrariness . . . Discretionary authority must mean insecurity for legal freedom on the part of its subjects.

This statement was made by the honourable jurist in 1885. Since that time I believe his words have held true, but the circumstances in our country and throughout the entire free world have changed dramatically. Government is much more a fact of life than it was then. Laws to protect consumers and individuals, to protect and help small businesses, to control abuses in many aspects of our lives, have become much more paramount. We in the task force found that many departments had amendments to regulations which they wanted to bring forward. They required amendments which had to be brought before the House. Some of them had been trying for four or five years to have their amendments put on the Order Paper. But we know that the House is blocked. There are so many bills on the Order Paper which deserve the urgent attention of hon. members that we know we cannot operate strictly through the House. Therefore we have developed a system of delegating legislation to ministers to operate in certain areas. The standing joint committee has a watchdog role over the exercise of discretion. Let none of us confuse the fact that while we believe in the rule of law, the government could not effectively carry out its roles and responsibilities without having recourse to subordinate legislation.

Let us consider the admonition of Mr. Justice Brandeis who put the need for control this way: "Power must always feel the check of power". Also we should consider the words of Sir Richard Cartwright, the great grandfather of Chief Justice Cartwright, who said in 1912:

● (1700)

> No man and no party can be safely entrusted with uncontrolled power.

The question before the House is not a question of the abuse of uncontrolled power. We have had members speak on this particular issue of VIA Rail and many members spoke in various ways. Some members on this side of the House have condemned certain of these closings, as have hon. members opposite.

Members have talked in the past about the need to control unnecessary expenditure. Members who have appeared before the transportation committee will realize that in many cases buses and alternate modes of transportation could serve us better than rail, so let us approach the question of transportation with an open mind.

The whole question of the process of regulatory reform is not the same here as in the United States. Hon. members opposite are getting quite excited about the process of regulatory reform. I would have thought they would be among the vanguard of those who seek to improve the accountability of the executive branch of the legislative arm. I welcome the attention of hon. members opposite given to what this House is trying to do.

I want to speak at some length about efforts that are being made by the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Johnston) to bring about regulatory control and reform. Before I go to that, however, I think it is important to mention that the process of regulatory reform in Canada is not one of so-called "deregulation"—getting the government off our backs, as we have seen take place in the United States. We have not looked upon this as a new political clout or a new way of dealing with things. What we are looking for is the creation of better regulation. We do not want to prejudge whether all regulation is good or bad; we want a better process for judging regulation.

My thesis today is that we have many ways of controlling regulation, the exercise of ministerial discretion, but that none of these controls of themselves is entirely adequate or appropriate to the present day realities in this House. I should like to examine some of the controls that are exercised over the exercise of ministerial discretion, and draw to the attention of members of the House a statement made by Mr. Justice Rand who, I believe, was Canada's foremost civil libertarian and its greatest constitutional expert. In the famous case Roncarelli v. Duplessis, the late Mr. Justice Rand said that "there is no such thing as absolute and untrammelled discretion".

Our courts have a history of attempting to wrestle with the question of when they have a right to intervene and upset the exercise of discretion by a minister acting in his executive capacity. In a number of cases it is held that orders in council are not in the category of legislative action; that they are not in the area of an exercise of rule-making that broaches on the border of being judicial. When that exercise of discretion does not have a judicial character to it, basically the courts have held that that exercise was an administrative action or a legislative action and could not be reviewed by the courts.

In this country we have a hodge-podge of cases on this subject. Suffice it to say that the jurisprudence which has arisen has admitted of no easy answers. It is very difficult to determine when a court can intervene to exercise control over the exercise of ministerial discretion.

There are four conclusions that follow from these cases. First of all, there is no law which says that minimal procedural standards, such as the right to notice of a hearing and a hearing itself, are conditions precedent to the exercise of ministerial discretion.

Second, the cases indicate that it is very difficult to decide when a judicial review is or is not open to an individual who feels aggrieved by the exercise of that discretion.

Third, I do not believe that to take every case before a court is a proper solution; rather, I believe that we have to find ways to amend our procedures for dealing with the exercise of discretion so that as legislators we can exercise the type of control that we have a responsibility to our constituents to exercise.

This type of review of our executive decision-making of regulations is going to become even more important with the introduction in the not too distant future, I hope, of a bill of rights in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. That charter will make all subordinate legislation subject to its terms and conditions to ensure that there are no discriminatory laws or regulations which impinge unfairly on Canadians.

What are the types of controls that are exercised, apart from judicial review which, as I have indicated, is not in my opinion an adequate, although proper, type of exercise of control over the exercise of ministerial discretion? There are others.

There is the work of the standing joint committee which reviews the legality of regulations. The only problem is that the committee cannot review the merits of regulations. I believe it is proper that members of the House should have an opportunity to review the merits of regulations before they become law or after they have become law, with a view to being able to comment on whether they are good for Canadians or bad for Canadians—whether they are cost effective or are the most effective regulations we could have.

Another way that our regulators are influenced—and all Members of Parliament are subject to this—is by lobbying. Each of us is subject to lobbying. I use that word not in the pejorative sense that it has acquired in many jurisdictions but in the most complete sense of lobbying, such as when a constituent comes to his or her member with a problem and says that the law should be changed. I think that is lobbying. We all know that lobbying is done on an extensive scale in Canada. People who represent institutions such as consumers' groups, farm groups, or business groups established in Ottawa, tell us that they want changes made to particular laws. I am concerned about some of the input that we receive. If we as regulators and lawmakers want to do our job effectively, then we need as much input as possible; but that input should come before we legislate and regulate.

There are some in our society who are not equipped to make their views know to us, in my opinion. It is very difficult for an individual to appear before a board that sets rates for telephones, for rail transportation or air passage. Very few consumers have the wherewithal to enable them to appear before government officials to try to convince them that prices should not increase in various areas. I therefore feel that we have to bring back together the collective public interest groups; those who do not have the funds to establish an office and a paid lobbyist in Ottawa to deal with us.

● (1710)

I believe we have on obligation to help bring together those collective grievances of small individuals who cannot otherwise deal with the issues. This would help us as legislators, on all sides of the House, more effectively to do our job as their wishes, views and alternatives would be known to us. This is why our task force on regulatory reform made a very strong and urgent plea that we introduce laws which will help, aid and abet public interest groups in their funding. The Consumers Association of Canada does an admirable job of appearing before many boards and committees; its biggest problem is not in deciding which hearings to attend, but in deciding how many hundreds every year it cannot attend because it does not have the funds at its disposal. There are similar examples of public interest groups.

Within the spirit of this motion before us dealing with the process by which regulations are enacted, I would therefore ask that hon. members from all sides of this House give greater consideration to the possibility of extended funding for public interest groups so that they can make their views known and legislators can have a balanced input to better do their job.

Another part of this process of having better, more effective regulations, of course, is access to information. We as individuals in this House know the importance of having access to information and full and complete information before we debate and decide upon an issue. This is why I urge the co-operation of hon. members opposite as the access to information bill proceeds through committee, so that we can get it before the House and get it passed. I believe it will have a significant impact in informing Canadians and helping us to inform ourselves.

Mr. Nielsen: You voted against it the other night.

Mr. Peterson: The hon. House leader has indicated that he has some hesitations, I understand, with proceeding apace with this type of legislation. The debate that we are having today relates to a report which was submitted last June and is before the House, and which we have had the benefit of reading. We have had a chance to formulate our opinions on whether we agree or disagree with it. What we are doing today is holding up the debate on another bill, Bill C-48. If every time one of these committees and task forces were to put a report before this House, we moved concurrence and then had to spend a number of days or hours of the time of this House debating it—

Mr. McDermid: That's a red herring and you know it.

Mr. Peterson: —we would not be able to present a full hearing on the issues before the House on a sequential matter.

Mr. McDermid: Nonsense.

Miss MacDonald: You don't think that VIA Rail is an urgent matter.

Mr. Peterson: The hon. member opposite has indicated that in my opinion VIA Rail is not an urgent matter.

Miss MacDonald: You said it.

Mr. Peterson: When the hon. House leader was so suspicious that we would want to cut off debate, the parliamentary secretary to the House leader assured him without hesitation, without flinching, that we were prepared to have a debate until ten o'clock tonight on this important issue. We are happy to do that, but let us not use this process, this House rule which is being followed today, as a future excuse to sidetrack debate just because there happens to be a report which has been tabled. We can swallow and choke on a process which has been started, one which is good for all sides of this House, if this type of process is abused in the future.

Mr. McDermid: Are you saying we are abusing it?

Mr. Peterson: We will not abuse it. We would hope that hon. members from the opposition would not use this process as an abuse in the future.

The major point that was made by the task force on regulatory reform was reiterated by the Economic Council, and was again reiterated by the standing joint committee in its report on regulations. I think the major issue was that governments must consult. Legislators must consult with their constituents and with effective public groups before regulations are passed. We believe that the private sector has a great role in helping us, as legislators, pass more cost-effective, responsive regulations. That type of consultation must go on, we believe, before channel vision takes place among our public servants.

The private sector, with the exception of public interest groups, has the facilities, the funds, the resources and the knowledge to enter into a collaborative effort with government to assist government in proposing and enacting better regulations. This is why we must ask ourselves, in conjunction with the private sector with which we must consult: What are the problems we are seeking to resolve? Is government intervention really necessary to resolve them? Are there alternative types of intervention which might offer better solutions? Will the costs of regulation and the costs of setting up a control mechanism outweigh the benefits that we hope to derive from it?

When we intervene with regulations, we must always ask ourselves: Who will be the winners and who will be the losers? We know that when we impose any type of burdensome regulation on one sector of society, be it business, consumers or whatever, another side will have to pay for it. To me, this is the clarion message which springs from the final report of the Economic Council. It looked at regulations in the transportation industry, and that is what we should be looking at. It looked at regulations in the agricultural industry and in a number of other industries, and it attempted to assess the costs. What were the costs of those regulations? Who was paying for them? In many cases, the council said that it was the consumer of Canada who was paying for regulation in those areas. I think that the report of the Economic Council of Canada will serve us well in the future, because we will hesitate to regulate until we have assessed the costs in advance.

When we attempt to impose controls on one group or another, we will ask: Who is the winner? Who is the loser? Are consumers really benefiting? Are individual Canadians really benefiting, or is it only one industry or one small segment? When we have answered those questions, we will then be able to regulate with much more clarity and precision.

I had the pleasure of yielding to the hon. member for Vegreville. I always benefit from listening to his views, although I do not always agree with his views. He mentioned a very important point. He said that it was never intended that Section 64 of the National Transportation Act should deal with the situation in which we find ourselves concerning VIA Rail.

As Your Honour is aware, Section 64 deals with the right of appeal from a decision of the Canadian Transport Commission to cabinet. The reason for the creation of the Transport Commission and the many boards and agencies that we have in so many areas was to take advantage of the collective expertise and wisdom which exists in a commision through which it can undertake a consultative process in measures and make those available to us. However, I profoundly believe that because a board has made a decision we, as the executive, legislative branch, are not relieved of political responsibility for that decision. That decision affects Canadians, and it is one to which I, as Member of Parliament for Willowdale, am held accountable to my electorate.

Therefore, I would not want to take away the power of cabinet, under Section 64 of the National Transportation Act to step in where it disagrees with a decision of a board or commission and to say, "You have considered this, but we have an alternative view." In the past we have done this. For example, I refer Your Honour to a case where a cabinet overruled a decision of the CRTC on a Bell rate increase. We felt, in our political judgment, that the rate was excessive; therefore, we rolled it back.

Mr. Mazankowski: A timely decision, though.

Mr. Peterson: It was a timely decision. The hon. member for Vegreville has called for timeliness in these decisions. I cannot gainsay what he said, and I hope that he and hon. members opposite will work with us to find more timely ways of having boards and commissions make their decisions. In many cases we will have to beef up their membership. We have to ensure they provide efficient service to the Canadians they are intended to serve.

● (1720)

I give another example of where an appeal to cabinet from a decision of a board was critical. Eastern Provincial Airways was seeking from CPA the right, as a regional carrier, to have the run from Halifax to Toronto. Many members on the opposite side of the House pleaded with us to recognize the right of a small regional carrier. We as a cabinet—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss MacDonald: You don't want to be in any more trouble than you are.

Mr. Peterson: I excuse myself from that remark, of course. I am merely a very proud member of the Liberal party and a member of this side of the House. What we did was step in and exercise our responsibility.

We do not want to strip the CTC of this right to have its decision appealed to cabinet. Our executive branch is prepared to assume that responsibility and be held accountable by the people of Canada. I do not hear any members on that side of the House condemning either of those two decisions about which we were speaking. We want to keep that power, and whether there are differences among members of this House, let us not in our haste, because of a particular issue, do away with a principle that has served us well in the past and has served Canadians well.

As part of this process of having a good interrelationship between the legislative branch and boards and tribunals, which we created to help us with their expertise in specialized areas, we also need a concomitant right of the cabinet to provide input and political direction on a timely basis, as the hon. member has said, so that cabinet directives can go out indicating government direction and government policy to these boards and agencies. That is not political interference. Boards and agencies will welcome that type of political direction. In the extensive hearings before our committee we were told they wanted that type of input.

One of the major issues that we addressed, apart from prior consultation about the necessity of funding public interest groups before we regulate, and one of the most important fields where we feel that regulations can be made more cost effective and beneficial to Canadians as a whole, is in the area of creating parliamentary accountability. Our task force, as well as that as that of the joint standing committee and the economic council, indicated that parliamentarians had a paramount role to play in holding regulators accountable. This is why we called for the creation of a special task force which could deal with a review of regulations on their merit as well as the whole process of implementing regulatory reform. We want to see the day when committees from this House consisting of members from all sides can work in non-partisan fashion with expert staff and thus serve their constituents better by having the capability of dealing with regulations.

We do not want to create a roadblock in this House. We do not want committees to have the opportunity of holding up further the process of this House of Commons through technical rules, such as creating a debate on a report of every committee. We would be further hamstrung and, goodness knows, the Canadian public knows that we do not have the time in this House at present to deal at length with all the issues which we feel are of a pressing and urgent nature. We feel the House itself could be relieved of many of those responsibilities by adequately staffed, adequately equipped, small committees.

We are calling for committee reform of all the standing committees so that members can devote their expertise and time to probably one committee only. By doing this, members can get into the substance of matters. Political partisanship would never disappear but it would give way to enlightened consideration of the laws that we seek to implement for the good of all Canadians.

That is the type of process we have been talking about. Abusing the rules of this House will not permit us to get on with it. What I am happy so say, however, is that not only did our task force have the opinion, the opportunity and the consideration of hon. members who formed part of the standing joint committee, but we also had the benefit of their excellent work in the area of regulatory reform. Even though we tabled the report last December 19, we have not moved concurrence in it because we have had the assurance of our hon. House leader and the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard) that the consideration of our report as well as other reports in this area were being taken into consideration and acted upon.

I am very proud to be a member of a government which, under the actions of our President of the Privy Council, has undertaken a 12-point program to implement the reforms of which we speak. We do not need to grandstand in this House to get our reforms implemented and considered, nor does the standing joint committee. Those reforms are being implemented and looked at.

I would like to refer the House to the 12 points of reform that have been implemented and are under review by the President of the Privy Council.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but I must advise him that his allotted time has expired. He may continue with unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette): Mr. Speaker, I listened with a great deal of interest to the hon. member for Willowdale (Mr. Peterson) for whom I have high regard. I almost came to believe some of the crocodile tears he was shedding about how he wants to reform the House and give all this power to individual members. That kind of stance would almost be believable if it were not for the fact that we are facing a government decision that, by his own admission, he probably supports and which will prevent the people of Canada from having a chance to appear before a regulatory body already in existence. I have never heard such nonsense in my life. If the hon. member is serious and sincere about this, I would be most interested to see how he votes, what his position is on the VIA Rail cutbacks and what kind of representation he has made to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) in this regard.

Mr. McDermid: He has a subway; he does not need VIA Rail.

Mr. Mayer: The hon. member made the point that the minister lucidly explained to the House today why these cutbacks will take place. I will leave it to members of the House and to members of the public who visited the galleries today to find out how lucid the minister was in his explanation for cutting off rail service which, in my part of the country, is being cut by half.

The hon. member went on to say that he was pleased to speak in this debate. I am pleased to speak in this debate too. That is all we are asking of the House, that members of the public who use VIA Rail and want to support it have an opportunity to speak. The appropriate place for them to speak is before the Canadian Transport Commission. If the hon. member is really sincere about everyone having an equal opportunity to speak in this country, he would be in favour of the CTC having a chance to look at this issue before the minister so violently guillotines the service. I am shocked that an hon. member would get up and sincerely make such fervent remarks about the process when what he is doing by supporting his government is doing the exact opposite.

The hon. member talked about discretionary powers, how they should be used and how the parliamentary process should not have to succumb to all the details of every decision made in Canada. That is precisely what the Canadian Transport Commission is for. Again, if the hon. member were serious he would realize that discretionary powers are there to be exercised by a regulatory body. In this case the regulatory body has sat twice on this issue and it has twice turned down the government. The government, probably because it suspected or knew that the same kind of decision would come again from the CTC, has decided not to ask. It simply proceeded on its own.

• (1730)

I find it unfortunate that the hon. member, who appears to be very sincere in his remarks, would by his actions, support the exact opposite. I suppose that is what we have come to expect of the government.

I also found interesting, but appalling, the fact that he referred to the parliamentary secretary to the government House leader as "not flinching" when our House leader got up and asked that we have some kind of assurance that this debate not be cut off. I would point out that last Thursday we had every reason to flinch on this side at what the government House leader, the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard), said. I will quote from page 12016 of Hansard. This is what the government House leader said:

> So if the hon. member wants to discuss the report—

The report we are talking about is the one under discussion today.

> So if the hon. member wants to discuss the report, even if it is at the request of his committee, we shall have no alternative, as I have already explained to him and to the predecessor of the member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen), but to introduce a motion either to adjourn the debate or to proceed with the orders of the day, so that the government can deal with its legislative program and priorities, as provided under the rules of the House.

That was a precise statement. If we were to attempt to talk about the report today, we would be cut off. It is not a case of the parliamentary secretary flinching, it is a case of the opposition flinching in the face of not having a chance to discuss it. As if that were not enough, Mr. Speaker, on the subsequent page the parliamentary secretary reported to have made two other specific references to the fact that we would not have a chance to discuss this. I would like to point that out to the member for Willowdale. It is not a question of the parliamentary secretary flinching and getting up in all innocence and telling us to go ahead and take the day to debate the report, it is a case of looking at the record and seeing what his House leader said last Thursday. That is why we governed ourselves the way we did.

Another statement made by the member for Willowdale which has to be corrected is when he made reference to the fact that there has been no discussions on VIA Rail and how it was to be set up at the time the $1 vote was put forth. That was before my time in the House but I am informed that the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), who subsequently served as a very distinguished minister of transport, moved an opposition motion questioning the kind of circumstances which led to the creation of VIA Rail.

An hon. Member: Read the quote.

Mr. Mayer: I will be happy to read the quote. It is also a pleasure to quote great Canadians.

The words of the hon. member, Mr. Speaker, are on page 4211 of the March 22, 1977 Hansard. He said:

Turning to Crown corporations, we take very grave objection to the establishment of a Crown corporation under the use of the dollar item, as in the case of VIA Rail Canada. Our concern is not with the substance, but with the method. While we may have some reservations about the principle of the establishment of VIA Rail Canada, that is not what is in issue at this time. It is the method which the government has employed to bring about the establishment of VIA Rail Canada. It authorizes the expenditures of up to $240 million—

That $240 million has gone out the window. It now is a factor several times that.

It authorizes the expenditures of up to $240 million under the provisions of both 52d, which can be found at page 120 of supplementary estimates D. This, in our view, is a major transportation policy decision and should be considered in this House in the form of a bill, rather than by back-door coercion. This action constitutes a clear contempt of Parliament which has to be of the most blatant degree. One might even question the politics of the establishment of VIA Rail Canada at this time, since the CTC is still in the process of studying the rail passenger service in this country and has not yet brought down its recommendation.

At least at that time under that government, they had the decency to let the CTC hold some hearings. That has not been the case to date, Mr. Speaker.

I do have a high regard for the hon. member for Willowdale, but I cannot let him off the hook. He quoted numerous jurists and their impact on Canadian political life and the way Canadians are governed. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that Canadians are not interested in the rhetoric of jurists. They are interested in service, Canadians pay a lot of taxes and, I suggest, that they have a right to expect service back from those taxes. They also have a right to express their views about something as basic as transportation in this country. Transportation is a very important issue to maritimers and western Canadians. We have a sparce population spread out over a great distance in those regions. I suggest that the Canadian people are shortchanged when the minister arbitrarily cuts services—the hon. member for Carleton-Charlotte (Mr. McCain) called it cutting the heart out of New Brunswick—without having the decency to let the people have any input into the question.

The hon. member for Willowdale also talked about our holding up the process. He said that we do not have the time to deal with all the issues in the House. That is precisely the point. That is why the CTC is in existence, so we can refer some of the issues of the day to these regulatory bodies. The hon. member cannot have it both ways. He cannot accuse the opposition of holding up the process, because we do not want to hold up the process. We want the matter referred to the proper regulatory body, which is the CTC.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Why did you not do that in the first place?

Mr. Mayer: The distinguished chairman of our Standing Committee on Transport is making some noises over in the corner. He talks about returning the matter to the committee. That is an extremely good point. The minister said he would like to appear in front of the committee. I think the chairman of the committee would agree that there is no point in having the minister appear in front of the committee after November 15 when VIA is shut down.

An hon. Member: He said it would not make any difference.

Mr. Mayer: Exactly. The minister said if he did appear in front of the committee, it would not make a lot of difference. If the minister appears in front of the committee after November 15, there is no point in his telling us why the service is terminated, because it will be gone already. It is like closing the barn door after the horse is gone. It is a waste of time and, I submit, an affront to the committee and the hon. member who chairs it. I would like to ask the chairman of the committee to give us some assurance that he will use whatever office and influence he has to ask the minister to appear in front of the committee before November 15. The committee would then have some kind of commitment with regard to accountability. It would have the ability to make decisions. Those of us in the opposition, and I am sure the NDP would agree, would be in favour of that.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order in response to the comments made by the member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer) with regard to the deadline for the VIA Rail cutbacks. There is not much point in the committee discussing it after November 15.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. The hon. member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer).

Mr. Mayer: I am pleased to know that the chairman of the committee agrees with the statement.

I would like to discuss some of the concerns expressed to me by my constituents as a result of the announcement of July 27. There has always been friction between my part of the country and central Canada because our population is in the minority. Several constituents have approached me and suggested that the reason for the cutbacks was that obviously there was not enough money to go around, that if anyone was to be shortchanged it would not be the central part of the country but the west or the maritimes, and that the real reason for the cutbacks was not necessarily that the government wanted to save money but that it wanted to provide better service to central Canada, Ontario and Quebec, on the Quebec City to Windsor corridor.

• (1740)

Evidence of this was pointed out to me. It is, as we know by the minister's admission, that the new light, rapid and comfortable trains which are coming onstream—they will be delayed by a month which, in some cases, is understandable—will not be used in western Canada. This was pointed out as an example of how the cutbacks would hurt my part of the country and benefit the central part. I am sure maritime members would relate it to their part of the country. To some extent I am guilty of the same kind of prejudice, but what really is the case is that all parts of the country will be affected, not only the west and the maritimes but also the central part of the country. It seems to me that that is shortchanging Canadians and pitting Canadian against Canadian unnecessarily.

If the Canadian Transport Commission had been given a mandate to hold hearings and had travelled across the country and heard Canadians' complaints, as did the task force our party set up, this would have become very much more obvious, and I think the media, including the press, would have picked up the fact that cutbacks were occurring right across the country. Canadians would have had a better chance to understand why these cuts were taking place, and they would have had less reason to blame other parts of the country for their own deprivation as far as rail passenger service is concerned. I think that is a very important point as far as national unity is concerned at this time. I do not think we need to do anything that in any way suggests that one part of the country is benefiting at the expense of another. Yet by not holding hearings, that is precisely what this government is allowing to happen.

As I said, I think to some extent I am as guilty as others. I appeared before the task force when it held its hearings in Winnipeg and made statements to that effect. I was very quickly corrected. I realize that was a bad mistake on my part, but again I say that the process by which this decision was reached lends itself to that kind of misinformation. That does not do any of us in this country a service. I think that is a very important reason, if there is no other reason, that the government should have given the Canadian Transport Commission a mandate to hold hearings and to talk about why rail passenger service had to be cut as far as some parts of the country are concerned. I put that out because I have not heard anyone else make that point. I think it is a very valid point which needs to be made, emphasized and understood by the government.

Many points have been made by my constituents, one of them being that my constituents did not think VIA Rail had been in existence long enough to develop the kind of usage it needed in order to be viable. Many people told me that they would be willing to pay considerably more—some people said two times or even three times as much as the present fare structure—if they could have a chance to have the service maintained. I suppose it is easy for people to say that if they think the service will be discontinued. I suppose it is easy to say that they would be willing to pay more because they know, at least by all intents, that the service will not be there and that their bluff with respect to paying more will not be called. However, the point is that they were not given that kind of opportunity.

I and many of my constituents would like to have seen VIA Rail management come out and say the service was losing money and needed a year or two in which to try a new marketing policy and would increase fares in order to cut some of its losses. If, after a period of new management and new ideas with respect to increasing revenues, VIA was still in the hole and thought it could save the $100 million to which the minister refers, then the cuts could be made. In that case people would have felt better. They would have known that they had had a chance to support the service. If, after a year or two, or whatever the appropriate time would be, the service was still losing money, the people would have known that they had had a chance and that there was not enough activity to support the level of passenger service which there had been in the past.

When we consider the routes which were abandoned, we really have to question why some of the decisions were made. The trip from Winnipeg to Vancouver takes one through Portage la Prairie, Brandon, Regina and Calgary. That is the main line of the CPR. It parallels the Trans-Canada highway to a large extent. On a good highway like the Trans-Canada there is obviously good bus service and good highway service. That implies that people who are close to that highway are able to travel.

An hon. Member: They have options.

Mr. Mayer: Exactly, but that was not the route that was abandoned. The government abandoned the CN route which, beyond Portage la Prairie, goes through areas which are not at all close to a good highway, and those areas are left virtually without service. The valid question posed to me is that if the government is going to abandon one of the trans-continental routes, why not the CP route? After all, CP is the company which has done everything it could in the last 15 years to discourage passenger service. At least over the past 15 years CN has tried something. CN had its "red, white and blue days." It has tried to attract people to its trains, yet the CN route is the one which will be abandoned after November 15.

Mr. McDermid: They will be black and blue days.

Mr. Mayer: My friend, the hon. member for Brampton-Georgetown (Mr. McDermid), points out that the days will not be red, white and blue any more; they will be black and blue as far as the citizens of the country are concerned. The citizens are being abused in relation to the transportation services they have been used to.

Once we get away from the proper process—I argue very strongly that doing so is detrimental in many ways—we really have to question why the decision was made the way it was. That leads me back to the process. If we had gone through the proper process which, I argue, is by way of the CTC, we would have had a chance to see some of the alternatives which perhaps might have worked. We probably would have had a chance to arrive at a better decision on providing transportation for Canadians.

The hon. member for Willowdale stood up and piously talked about all the good things he wants to see in terms of reform of the House of Commons, but at the same time he supported a blatant cut in service which he and his government have a chance to refer to the CTC. How somebody can be so sincere and yet so inconsistent just boggles the mind.

Another great concern to Canadians is that abandoning a service such as this cannot be done properly in four or five months. We had a chance to speak to the bus industry when the Transport Committee travelled to the province of Quebec in the month of September. Representatives of that industry pointed out to us that VIA Rail held absolutely no consultations with the bus industry. To a large extent, the bus industry of Canada pays its own way. Hon. members can argue about the subsidies which accrue to the bus industry through taxes to finance highways, but the industry does not receive any of the direct subsidies that VIA Rail receives.

VIA Rail has talked about the number of passengers it carries increasing but, when we consider the way people in Canada travel, it becomes obvious that the major portion of this increase in the number of passengers will be people who use buses. The bus industry has cross-subsidization. The industry makes money on some of its main routes, such as the Quebec City-Windsor route, and uses that money to operate routes to smaller towns. I understand that Ontario and Quebec are the best examples of provinces where that cross-subsidization occurs. The bus industry is saying that if we take away its main revenue generating routes by attracting passengers to the Quebec City-Windsor rail route, there will not be enough money to support some of the routes on which the bus industry is losing, those routes being to smaller centres in Ontario and Quebec.

That does not do anything in terms of providing increased transportation for Canadians. Even if the government has decided to abandon many rail passenger routes, it would make good sense to do it over a period of a year or two so that the bus industry will have a chance to gear up to take some of the additional passengers who previously travelled by rail.

The bus companies point out very correctly that they cannot go out and buy buses in the same way one goes to a corner store to buy a quart of milk. It is a major expenditure to buy a bus to provide additional service. Bus companies need time in which to do this. By acting arbitrarily and on such short notice, the government has shown that it has no sensitivity or any feeling at all with respect to the demands which will be made on the bus industry.

An hon. Member: The government does not care.

Mr. Mayer: Furthermore, I suppose the lesson in this is that the government does not care.

In my province the railways were the real reason for the coming into existence of many small communities. That happened about 100 years ago. During the summers of 1982 and 1983 there will be celebrations in many large and small communities. Brandon, a city of 40,000, will have its one hundredth anniversary very soon. Those communities came into existence because of the railroads. Without them they would not be in existence. It has been pointed out to me many times that it is ironic that this government is taking part in those celebrations by removing the rail service. Many people resent that. They resent the fact that the rail service will be gone, but they resent just as much the fact that it will be gone without any reference to the proper regulatory body, that being the Canadian Transport Commission. I fail to understand why the government is so afraid of referring this whole matter to the Canadian Transport Commission. This brings me back to the motion before us this afternoon. I think everyone agrees it would make a lot of sense to have a VIA Rail act.

• (1750)

We have a Crown corporation spending literally hundreds of millions of dollars. It is committed to spending those dollars each succeeding year over a number of years. I suppose it really amounts to billions of dollars over a period of a few years.

I cannot understand why we do not have a VIA Rail act which sets out the objectives of VIA Rail, what it hopes to accomplish, the mandate it should have, and how the government should assist it in performing that mandate or whether the government expects VIA Rail to finance itself totally from the marketplace.

We do not have that kind of act. The minister says he has a draft of the act. It is a major operation for any government department to draft an act. It is a complete waste of the time of the bureaucracy to have an act in some kind of preliminary draft and not be willing to bring the act before the House of Commons where we can properly debate and develop it.

The chairman of VIA Rail is in favour of a VIA Rail act. I would be surprised if either of the railroads was against it. We would know then where we stand in terms of passenger service for this country. VIA Rail would have a yardstick against which to measure its performance. It would know what kind of mandate it had from this government and this Parliament. However, the government is very reluctant to do that.

We talk about energy costs. We just reached an energy-pricing agreement in this country that will double gasoline and diesel fuel prices in the next three or four years. We do not know whether two or three years down the road energy prices will be so steep that people will leave their private automobiles, buses and airlines for the efficiency of a train.

The hon. member for Vegreville spoke of this earlier. I do not want to belabour it, but it is a point worth repeating. Until we have a definite idea of the efficiency of railroads in terms of energy use in moving a person one mile or 100 miles, we do not know whether or not we are getting rid of a very efficient method of moving people in this country.

In western Canada the distances are very great. Therefore, in many cases the people have become accustomed to using the railroad and have become dependent on it. I was in St. Lazare the day after the cut there was announced. It is a small community of 300 or 400 people. VIA Rail stopped there. I spoke to some of the merchants in St. Lazare. They told me that people came regularly from 100 miles away to get the train for Vancouver or eastern Canada. If the rail service there is removed, these people will have to drive another 100 miles to reach the railroad. That community will be hurt as far as attracting business is concerned.

Within the past two or three years, a station was built there which has the proprer facilities for handling passengers. If the passenger service is taken away, that facility will be of no use. It makes no sense to abandon on November 15 what the minister is proposing without hearing the complaints and concerns of the people there.

Another valid suggestion made to me was that rather than remove the whole service from the northern route, the CN route, it should be alternated, one day on the CP line through Regina and Calgary and the other day through Saskatoon and Edmonton. It will still be necessary to maintain the stations in Edmonton and Saskatoon. We are told that there will still be service between Winnipeg and Saskatoon but it will be diverted through Regina. Therefore, we must still maintain the stations. Why not have alternate service? I wonder why the government has not considered some of these matters.

In closing, I very much hope that this motion will be adopted today. We will see how sincere the pious words of the hon. member for Willowdale are when he votes on the motion, or whether the government will decide it should be talked out. I wonder whether the reason we are having this debate is that the government does not have enough members here to win the vote and therefore it is afraid of a vote. Perhaps that is why we are being given this opportunity to debate VIA Rail. For whatever reason, and maybe it is the only reason, we are pleased to have this debate. I hope the government will concur in this motion and bring forth a VIA Rail act very soon so that VIA Rail will have a proper mandate and will not only provide but increase passenger service to Canadians.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. In order to enable as many members as possible from all sides of the House to participate in the debate, I wonder if there might be a disposition, after the next hon. member has spoken, to limit the debate to 20 minutes per speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The hon. member for Argenteuil-Papineau (Mr. Gourd).

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if you would put that suggestion to the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): I saw no one responding to that suggestion. That is why I recognized the hon. member. Is the suggestion by the hon. member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) agreeable to all hon. members?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): It is agreed, and so ordered, that speeches will be limited to 20 minutes after the speech by the hon. member for Argenteuil-Papineau.

[Translation]

Mr. Robert Gourd (Argenteuil-Papineau): Mr. Speaker, this is the second time in a week that I am speaking in the House on a subject which, as you know, is very dear to me. I see that I have only a few minutes left before six o'clock, and I would like to read into the record some resolutions I received from my constituency of Argenteuil-Papineau. I am going to quote part of the minutes of the Papineau county council meeting held on September 8, 1981, Resolution No. 6476:

Regulations and other Statutory Instruments

It is moved, seconded and resolved unanimously that the Papineau county council fully support the position taken by the member for Argenteuil-Papineau regarding the abandonment by the Department of Transport of the passenger train between Ottawa to Montreal via Lachute.

This resolution was passed, certified true copy, on September 10.

Mr. Speaker, I should also like to add the municipal corporation of Lac Simon:

That the municipal council of Lac Simon request the Minister of Transport to maintain VIA Rail services between Hull, Lachute and Montreal to serve the needs of the population which suffers from a lack of transportation.

There is also a resolution from Amherst township, I am not going to read all these but I shall table them, Mr. Speaker: a resolution from the municipality of Chénéville; a resolution from the municipality of Duhamel; a resolution from Lochaber township; a resolution from the municipal corporation of Lochaber township, western section; a resolution from the municipality of Montpellier; a resolution—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order please! Since it is now 6 p.m., I do now leave the chair until eight o'clock this evening.

At 6 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 8 p.m.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order please. When the House rose at 6 p.m., the hon. member for Argenteuil-Papineau had the floor.

Mr. Gourd: Mr. Speaker, when the Chair called it six o'clock, I was giving a list of municipalities in the riding of Argenteuil-Papineau which sent me resolutions against the minister's decision to do away with services in my riding. I shall therefore continue reading this list of municipalities which on no account want the VIA Rail service on the north shore of the Ottawa River, that is, in the riding of Argenteuil-Papineau, to be abolished, and I quote:

The parish of Notre-Dame-de-la-Paix, the municipality of Notre-Dame-de-la-Paix, the village of Papineauville, the municipality of the Ripon township, the corporation of Val-des-Bois, the municipality of the united townships of Suffolk and Addington, the municipality of Vinois, the corporation of Papineau county, the Outaouais Regional Development Council, the corporation of the village of Montebello, the parish of Montebello, the corporation of the village of Saint-André-Avellin and the parish of Saint-André-Avellin, the municipality of Plaisance, the village of Saint-André-Est, the municipality of Argenteuil county, the municipal corporation of Argenteuil county, the municipality of Lac Simon, the residents of Calumet, the municipal corporation of Grenville township, the municipality of Grenville, the parish of Grenville.

So, Mr. Speaker, this is a list of municipalities representing people of my riding, and this does not include all the letters I received from constituents who cannot believe the minister would make such a decision at this time. Today, I was looking up in parliamentary records what a member of this House, the member for Chapleau, said in 1946 during the throne speech debate, on March 26, 1946. The member, Mr. Speaker, who happened to be my grandfather, said, and I quote:

In passing, I take the occasion of suggesting to the directors of the Canadian National Railways that it is high time to improve the railway line which runs through our district if they want to furnish travellers with suitable means of transportation as well as take care of the shipping demand arising from the various products I have just listed.

Strangely enough, Mr. Speaker, 35 years later, I seem to be in the same situation as my grandfather who was then member for Chapleau, and I could quote a number of speeches where he fought against exactly the same problem I am faced with today, that is, changes in the system of transportation in my riding. Last week, my colleague, the member for La Prairie (Mr. Deniger) told the House that what they were doing was cutting off deadwood to make the tree more vigorous. Well, I would like to say to my hon. colleague that what they are doing is cutting the roots, and then there will be no tree, no essential transportation service—the keyword is essential—left for the people. We have heard opposition members mainly the transport critic, and where was this same transport critic when the opposition was in power?

I am convinced that the department is now continuing a policy which was probably initiated by our opponents. With his leader, the former Minister of Transport was probably much too busy moving embassies around to be concerned with flights from Dorval to Mirabel. He probably initiated the policy that the department is now implementing. I am against this policy, Mr. Speaker, and as the various statements and resolutions that I have mentioned show, the people are not only behind me, but also with me, and support my work in this House.

Yesterday, I held a meeting of the Association in my constituency. About 100 people came to tell me that to cut back a service which is essential to an aging population—I do not want to repeat the speech that I made last week, Mr. Speaker, but I believe that this service can simply not disappear. I therefore ask the minister, through you, to please review this policy and, if possible, not to abandon completely the service in the constituency of Argenteuil-Papineau, but perhaps simply reduce it. I believe that even this will satisfy the population.

I am convinced, Mr. Speaker, that it would be to the advantage of VIA Rail to re-examine its evaluation policy. I am convinced, Mr. Speaker, that it would be to its advantage at the very least to consult the people to know what are the best times to travel in the constituency. I have received the following telegram, which is self-explanatory:

Dear Sir,

In accordance with the proposal sent to you by the Laurentian region on October 16, 1981, concerning the maintenance and improvement of the passenger services on . . . the Montreal-Lachute-Ottawa line. The Association touristique des Laurentides and the Conseil régional de développement des Laurentides ask all of you . . . to support the motion . . . introduced——by my colleague from Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). I replied of course, that if it had carried, this motion would have resulted in the fall of the government. This is why I had to support the government. Mr. Speaker, groups such as those and such as the Conseil régional de développement de l'Outaouais, and telegrams such as this one from the Canadian Railway Labour Association:

● (2010)

[English]

The Canadian Railway Labour Association on behalf of all railway workers in Canada particularly the members of the CBRT and GW urges you to support the Conservative motion concerning the proposed VIA Rail cutbacks.

[Translation]

Well, I am saying to those groups that their lobby, much like today's, that is forcing Canadians to pay for travelling expenses—I suggest that the official opposition could have used another much more effective means.

Mr. Kilgour: You are an idiot!

Mr. Gourd: I realize that my colleague opposite is using a language which is not altogether parliamentary, but since he does not have full command of Molière's language I will disregard that accusation.

As I was saying, Mr. Speaker, to my mind it is quite normal that, 35 years after another one, a member stands up in the House to fight against exactly the same thing as did my grandfather, then member for Chapleau, in the debate in reply to the Speech from the Throne on March 20, 1946. It will be impossible for me to repeat it often enough, Mr. Speaker, and I am now asking myself this question: Is it true that the more things change the more they remain the same? I see that the opposition is resorting to more or less effective means. Again I repeat that it is false to say that Liberal members on this side have been gagged. I have not been gagged and I was very severe and very hard with a minister of my government. But, Mr. Speaker, I am convinced that within the near future the minister will review his policy and then formally deny all the allegations made by the opposition. As I was saying, I fail to understand why the minister should have implemented that policy. Rather I believed that the transport critic, the former minister, was the instigator of that policy.

There is another phenomenon, Mr. Speaker, and I refer to the transfer of flights from Dorval to Mirabel. I said last week that we have waited much too long in that field. We are now letting the situation go to pot and if it is not quickly corrected everything will have been damaged beyond repair. Mr. Speaker, it is urgent that the Department of Transport make a decision about transferring flights from Dorval to Mirabel so as to prevent what is called Canada's largest airport from becoming a huge white elephant. True enough, it is now a huge white elephant, but I am convinced that with the good will of the government we will soon have the largest airport in Canada, one which was built by a Liberal government and which will be developed by a Liberal government.

Where was the former Minister of Transport? They were too concerned, during their short stay in power, as I said earlier, with moving embassies around to make decisions about the Department of Transport.

An hon. Member: And where were you?

Mr. Gourd: I think the opposition is waking up. Mr. Speaker, I challenge the former minister of transport to run against me in my riding, then we shall see who will find himself without a seat. Mr. Speaker, the opposition members can demand their rights all they want, I think Liberal members and several of my colleagues would say the same thing were they to rise in this debate.

I am sure, Mr. Speaker, that the minister will review his position and that the people of Argenteuil will have a new train service. I am sure, Mr. Speaker, in view of all the facts I put forward, of the support of municipalities—

I am certain the government will not let the people down, that it will have to do something for the only remaining railway line in the Ottawa Valley, for the only rail service on the Quebec North Shore, and therefore I ask, once again, through you, Mr. Speaker, that a review be undertaken, or that at least hearings be held so that the people can be heard.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to take part in this debate, and I can assure you that I will give the people of my riding cause to be satisfied with the work done by their Member of Parliament.

[English]

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I notice that the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) is in his seat for the first time during this debate today. If he is—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member so far is not making a point of order.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, if the Chair will be patient and listen beyond half a sentence, the point of order will become clear. If the Minister of Transport is prepared, on behalf of the government, to agree to concurrence in this motion, we on this side are prepared to terminate the debate in order that we can get on with government business.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. Matters such as these are subject to discussion through ordinary channels with the House leaders. The hon. member does not have a point of order. The hon. member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin).

● (2020)

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, it has long been the practice in the House for positions to be submitted to the government in order to give it an opportunity to accept or reject them.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) has the floor.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I see that the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) is now in the House and I know that he has had a busy day but I hope that he will take part in the debate between now and ten o'clock tonight.

I support the motion for concurrence in the seventh report of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments, which is an all-party report from both Houses. I want to deal with the major part of paragraph 4 of the report and some parts of paragraph 5. First of all, I should like to thank the regular members of the committee and the co-chairmen for the courtesy they showed in hearing me out and accepting my suggestion for an amendment to the report when it was being discussed.

In paragraph 4 of the report, the following statement appears:

> In your committee's judgment, the settling of the legal regime to govern the now publicly owned, controlled and funded railway passenger service is too important a matter to be left to the corporate policy, and virtually unlimited corporate powers, of VIA Rail Canada Inc., a corporation wholly owned by the Crown, and to skeletal regulations made under a dollar vote which in the nature of procedure in the House of Commons cannot have been subjected to significant debate. Parliament should have been, and still should be, given the opportunity to debate the future and structure of railway passenger services in Canada and the manner of their management and control—

I want to thank the committee again for accepting my representation. The paragraph continues:

> —and your committee is inclined to believe that this should include the maintenance of the jurisdiction of the Canadian Transport Commission over VIA Rail Canada.

The order in council that the minister used to wipe out these passenger routes, overrides and reverses 15 decisions of the Canadian Transport Commission, which ordered that those 15 routes be retained. In paragraph 5 of the report there appears the following:

> It may be that your committee has been too patient in seeking assurances from the Minister of Transport that a bill to regularize VIA Rail Canada Inc.'s activities and powers would be introduced. Indications of the preparation of such a bill were received but lately it has become apparent that legislative action has become a retreating vision.

I invite you, Mr. Speaker, and all hon. members to read the exchange of letters between the minister and the co-chairmen of the committee. His first two responses were to the effect, "It is coming any day". The last response was that it did not seem to be needed nor was it necessary at the moment. This report was unanimously adopted by all parties in both Houses of Parliament, so it is not to be taken lightly.

Under the program proposed by the minister and his bureaucrats, the 99.8 per cent sold-out sleeping cars of the Canadian Pacific's "Canadian" run will offer the only full service train across Canada to the west coast, and the 99.5 per cent sold-out sleeping car accommodation on the CNR Supercontinental will be chopped. This is using data issued in July, 1981. In fact, what will remain will be a partial "day at a time" coach or dayliner, with no service offered, on the most heavily patronized part of the Supercontinental route, the Edmonton-Jasper-Vancouver portion. A dayliner will be run from Winnipeg to Regina and up to Saskatoon, and it is suggested that one will be run from Saskatoon to Edmonton. That is supposed to be some kind of alternative.

Before the supper hour, the hon. member for Willowdale (Mr. Peterson) spoke about the abuse of the rules when the opposition moves concurrence of a report of a committee of the House. I do not have the exact figures here but I have talked to some colleagues and to the hon. member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) and it appears that out of 103 or 105 or 107 reports submitted to this House, the opposition has moved concurrence in three. If that is an abuse, then surely it is drawing a long bow. In fact, it could reasonably be claimed by members of the government that the opposition has been derelict in its duty in not calling for concurrence of more reports. I think there have been a number of times when we should have and did not. There is no one in this government or in previous ones, no matter which party was in power, who can claim that the opposition overuses or abuses the procedure of calling for concurrence of a committee report or calling for a debate. They cannot have it both ways, Mr. Speaker.

I want to go on now to another area which concerns respect for, regard of, consideration of and consultation with the statutes of legislatures in Canada. Where does the hon. member for London East (Mr. Turner) stand on this whole issue? Where does the hon. member for Chicoutimi (Mr. Dionne), the hon. member for Moncton (Mr. McCauley) or the hon. member who just spoke, stand on it? There are at least 21 members on the government side, and if all of them told the minister that he had to change his decision or they would not support him, then the minister would have to do that. Would they be willing to do this at their Wednesday caucus? The remedy does not lie in the hands of the opposition, Mr. Speaker.

Scores of people came here today from Atlantic Canada and western Canada to plead with the minister but he turned them down. In total, those people represent something like three million Canadians. The person who came from the city council of Edmonton had been instructed on behalf of that council, which represents over half a million people. The mayor of the town of Melville was also instructed; he represents 6,000 people. The three score or four score or five score people who came here today did not come as a mass delegation; they came as instructed delegates, representatives of over three million Canadians, to ask the Minister of Transport to reconsider, to delay, if not to rescind, this order. They ask that for a number of reasons and I want to cite some of these reasons, which I hope the minister and his legal counsel will consider. I want to ask the hon. member for Argenteuil-Papineau (Mr. Gourd) who just spoke whether he would care to check the statutes of the province of Quebec—of 1882, would you believe? That was an agreement between the government of Quebec of that day and what was then called the Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental Railway Company. When Canadian Pacific took over that route in 1882, the Quebec statute stated:

● (2030)

The said Canadian Pacific Railway hereby bind themselves to maintain the said road in good repair, and to run the same regularly and efficiently with a sufficient number of trains every day to carry the freight and passenger traffic with due regularity and despatch, running at least one passenger train every day each way.

I hope the hon. member for London East will have something to say about this statutory obligation in the Quebec statutes. It was assumed by Canadian Pacific and subsequently assumed by VIA Rail.

Let us turn to British Columbia. The British Columbia statutes of 1910 related to the Canadian Northern Railway. In return for certain acreages of land and timber rights, the Canadian Northern agreed to certain conditions required by statute in British Columbia. I quote from page 1910 of the Canadian Northern Agreement as follows:

The Northern Company agrees that the Pacific Company will, from and after the completion of the mainland line . . . cause to be maintained, a regular daily first-class passenger and freight service between a harbour at or near the city of Victoria and the system of the Northern Company lying to the east of the province of British Columbia—

What is meant is that the line which runs from Vancouver to Jasper was agreed to in 1910 and was to be maintained as a daily, first-class passenger service. Canadian Northern went bankrupt in spite of all the acreage and timber rights it had. It was taken over by Canadian National in 1919 or 1920.

The Canadian National Railways Act in no way obviates the statutes of British Columbia in 1910. In fact, Canadian National assumed the statutory obligation of Canadian Northern to run a daily passenger train between Vancouver and Jasper. Surely it follows quite logically that VIA Rail, established to bail CP and CN out of their legal liabilities for hauling people, also assumed that statutory obligation.

If the provincial statutes are not sufficient to convince the Minister of Transport and his cabinet colleagues, let us look at federal statutes. Section 12 of the federal statute of 1890 relating to the Montreal and Western Railway Company stated:

The Pacific Company—

That means CPR.

—will, during the said term, provide and run over the said railway duly equipped trains for the carriage of passengers and freight as frequently as shall be necessary for the traffic of the country—

It goes on to state:

—the Pacific Company will run during summer months at least one train carrying passengers each way on every business day; and during the rest of the year at least one such train one way on every business day;—

That is the federal statute of 1890, chapter 67, relating to the line that the Minister of Transport has ordered abandoned, running from Montreal to Hull and Ottawa.

Of course, there is a clause in the National Transportation Act that says the minister can amend, vary or rescind an order of the Canadian Transport Commission.

Mr. Blenkarn: That's right, but not the statutes.

Mr. Benjamin: That is in there for an excellent reason. When the National Transportation Act was passed in 1966-67, the tradition in those days was that the CTC, the old board of railway commissioners, only held a hearing at the request of the railroads or the government, and the public be damned. The public could not get a hearing. The Parliament of that day, and hon. members on all sides of the House said, "In a case where the CTC does not pay any attention to the public or does not even give them a chance, we want some way in which the government of the day could overrule it on behalf of the public interest." Section 64 was then put in the act. The desire of Parliament and the public was for the section to be used in that limited manner.

Subsequent to that passage of legislation, various ministers of transport have used that section to rescind, vary, modify or amend one decision of the CTC, which is only relatively recent, being six months old or a year old. However, this minister is not only taking the chicken out of the coop but has stolen the whole coop. He has rescinded 15 orders of the Canadian Transport Commission, the oldest of which goes back to 1975 or 1976.

Mr. Mazankowski: Shame!

Mr. Benjamin: I defy the minister or anyone else to try to maintain in this Parliament that that was the intent of Parliament or that it was the spirit of the legislation. Therefore, the minister has flown in the face of statutory requirements of two provinces that we have been able to dig up so far—and we are going back into some more stuff—and one statute of the federal Parliament of Canada, and has violated the spirit and the intent of the National Transportation Act, namely, Section 64, upon which he relies. Not even his predecessor, who had a lot of gall, would have had the gall to do this.

Mr. Epp: Who was he?

Mr. Benjamin: In fact, he is making the former minister of transport, Otto Lang, look good.

The minister is lecturing us today about the romantics who want to talk about keeping railway passenger trains. I want to tell the minister that there happen to be a few people around this country who know a lot more about public transportation than he will ever know. I want to tell the minister that he had better start listening to those people. If he does not want to listen to them, perhaps he can listen to people from other countries in the world who know a lot more about it than he does.

It is the wrong decision. It is wrong in terms of transportation economics, it is wrong in terms of transportation efficiency, it is wrong in terms of safety, it is wrong in terms of the environment, and it is wrong in terms of the trend all over the industrialized world, and even in some underdeveloped countries. In fact, Your Honour may have noticed an article in the paper the other day which stated that the CPR received a $54 million contract to build a railroad in Malaysia. Why do we not give it one to rebuild the railroad in Canada?

This report must be concurred in. I congratulate the committee. I hope, and I have reason to believe, that in a subsequent report the committee will come up with even better arguments than it has in this one, and the ones it has in this one are excellent. I hope the House will concur in this report. I hope the minister will have the courage to rise and agree that if it should not be rescinded, at least the decision he has made should be substantially delayed, and we will bless him for it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the hon. member but the time allotted to him has expired.

● (2040)

Mr. Fred McCain (Carleton-Charlotte): Mr. Speaker, I was very interested to listen to the hon. member for Argenteuil-Papineau (Mr. Gourd). He talked about his grandfather who had made a representation in 1946 to the Government of Canada that it was backing away from civic responsibility in the provision of rail and passenger service. Today the grandson, the hon. member for Argenteuil-Papineau, is making representations on behalf of his own constituents along the same line. I sincerely hope he will have the success he deserves because he voted for the cancellation of the present services and against the delay of that order of cabinet passed so highhandedly and without consideration of the needs of people.

The hon. member accused us of being rather partisan in our presentation. I want to tell you, Mr. Speaker, as I am sure you know, that the motion was not a motion of non-confidence when we introduced it for discussion last week. It was clearly stated by us and by the New Democratic Party that we would be happy to allow with unanimous consent, that it was not a motion of non-confidence. We have had enough drivel and lip service from Liberals. Let us level with our constituents for a change instead of trying to whip-saw both sides of the issues, one against the other.

I was pretty impressed by the speech made by hon. member for Willowdale (Mr. Peterson) this afternoon. He made a great speech on behalf of more definitive legislation and less regulation. He stated in his high-toned speech that yes, the minister was justified in exercising ministerial authority over and above traditional and historic practice and the intention of the National Transportation Act to cancel 20 per cent of VIA Rail. You cannot have it coming and going and at the same time be sincere. I ask to the hon. member, which way does he want it? Does he want regulation; does he want ministerial authority? I ask him again, which one does he want? Does he want government by legislation, regulation or ministerial authority? It cannot be both ways. I wonder how the hon. member for Willowdale will vote on Bill C-48. After the sanctimonious speech he made, he sort of backed himself into a corner by saying that he could not vote for Bill C-48 because, in effect, it is a bill of regulation and an extension of government athority to ministerial discretion. Which way is the hon. member going to go? If he called himself a liar, it would not be out of order, would it?

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. McCain: I shall retract that. In any event, if he contradicts himself in any vote on Bill C-48 which extends regulatory or ministerial discretion, then his speech of today, which was intended to be high-toned in the main, will have become of no consequence. That is the kind of debate that is taking place.

I want to come back to the subject of New Brunswick for a minute. The other night as I sat here in the House, I could not help thinking about the Mother Goose rhyme about the seven little blackbirds who sat in a tree, or seven little puppets who sat on a limb, and one fell off and then there were six. I noticed that as we voted, one had fallen off. That was the hon. member for Saint John (Mr. Landers).

Now I come to the hon. member for Madawaska-Victoria (Mr. Corbin). He abstained totally from any responsibility to his constituents, a responsibility which they expected of him. According to rumour, he did it, first, on being approached and asked to the objections to support rail cancellations and to represent his constituency so as to prevent the cancellation of the line from his home town or city, whichever the case may be, the route from Edmundston to Moncton. His response was, "The government has done it. It has to be right, and I have to support it," and, "No, I cannot make those representations". That is the rumour. I did not see that in print. I did not hear him say those words, but there was a report along those lines. That part of New Brunswick got the usual service from the Liberal Party of Canada. When he was needed and when our interests needed protection, he voted with the government of which he was a member.

We can now turn to the hon. member for Restigouche (Mr. Harquail). If hon. members look at Hansard and see the interjections there, they will find a cute little remark that, "Well, my constituency is looked after. I still have passenger service." An interruption in the House of that magnitude really must endear him to New Brunswick as a whole, and it must generate some form of disappointment, even in his own constituency of Restigouche.

Today I asked the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) how he was going to get two trainloads of people into one train travelling on a long route when both trains were already full. I want to tell the hon. member for Restigouche that when the minister finishes jamming people in like sardines so as to have one transcontinental train take the place of two, the hon. member for Restigouche will not be all that popular, especially when his constituents will not be able to get on the train in Campbellton.

I now come to the hon. member for Gloucester (Mr. Breau). Down in Gloucester the hon. member can do whatever he likes. He does not have to do anything if he does not want to, because he will be re-elected anyway. Therefore, it did not make any difference which way the hon. member for Gloucester voted, and yet he stood up and voted against the rest of New Brunswick. As far as the Liberal party is concerned, the rest of New Brunswick will remember that.

Now we are down to the third little blackbird. We come to the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne). It may be necessary to treat him with a little more distinction since he happens to be the chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport. I wonder whether the hon. member would acknowledge that on August 7 a letter was written to him stating on behalf of our caucus, that an extension of time should be given by the House to the transport committee. At that time the committee was travelling. Its job was to discuss and view the various aspects of transportation as they related to Ontario and Quebec. The request was that the committee hearings be extended a little and that the VIA Rail service be discussed. Remember, Mr. Speaker, this letter was addressed to the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi, chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport. It was a long and imploring letter. It has been neither answered nor acknowledged.

Next came the reconvening of the House. Representations were made by two parties of this House, one of which was not the government party, for a steering committee meeting. Why not have a meeting in place? Why not schedule our committee meetings to include discussion of VIA Rail and the needs of Canada as a whole? A meeting was sort of scheduled for October 20, but it was cancelled without notice. No successful effort has been made to influence the chairman of the House of Commons transport committee to call a meeting of the steering committee to determine whether or not there can or cannot be discussions in that committee with respect to VIA Rail passenger service. I do not think I need to say very much more. The hon. member did not answer the letter. He did not call a meeting. He cancelled by telephone the only meeting that had been arranged. That is the performance on behalf of New Brunswick by another Liberal member from that province. He, too, will have his constituents sitting on the laps of those passengers who got on the train first if one train has to accommodate two train loads of passengers. People will like that. All of New Brunswick was looking forward to better leadership than that coming from the chairman of the transport committee of the House of Commons of Canada.

The hon. member for Westmorland-Kent (Mr. LeBlanc) is a minister. We are excommunicated by that minister. I wonder whether he met with representatives of VIA Rail today. I do not know. It was my understanding that he was sought out but not found. However, if I am wrong, he can correct me tomorrow. He is quite capable of that.

An hon. Member: He is fishy.

Mr. McCain: The fishermen have not seen him either. He has set up a buffer zone. He stays on the inside of it and the fishermen stay on the outside of it. The fishermen could have told his people requiring passenger service what to expect, and it is my understanding they got it. They had no consultation.

We come now to the hon. member for Moncton (Mr. McCauley). He is as loyal as the other six. The hon. member for Moncton is number one. We have all those little blackbirds sitting on a limb. They have all fallen down as far as New Brunswick is concerned. The limb is now naked of interest in New Brunswick as far as Liberal members in this House sent here by the voters are concerned. I submit to you that New Brunswick deserves better than that from the chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport and the other six Liberal members sent up here by the voters of New Brunswick. It is disgraceful, Mr. Speaker.

● (2050)

How does this system work? You have been here quite a while, Mr. Speaker, and you know. Perhaps you could talk to those seven clowns over there and tell them that they should unite in a common bond for a common purpose so that the people they represent will get what is owed to them by the federal government. Those seven little blackbirds fell from their perch in their neglect of the province of New Brunswick. There was no need for it. Had they presented a solid front on behalf of New Brunwick in support of the member for Argenteuil-Papineau (Mr. Gourd) and others to whom an equal disservice is being done by this cancellation, there never would have been a cancellation.

The minister may have announced the cancellation when the House was not in session but he could have been compelled by the government to reverse that decision after the caucus met.

We are all familiar with this House and its procedure. If you want to lie down in front of a steamroller, it will squash you and your interests, as New Brunswick was squashed.

When I posed my motion this afternoon, I indicated that the Telegraph Journal said to those seven members, as it did to everybody else, that Ottawa is cutting the heart out of New Brunswick, but they do not care.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McCain: I cannot understand how the member for Moncton could reside in a university town and ignore the representations made by the student body of that university about transportation requirements. He is an educated man. He must understand that in this day and age a student has to save every nickel when he is living on loans and has no bursaries to speak of. Students coming from Restigouche-Madawaska to Moncton university need a train. It is the cheapest transportation. Over 850 students enrolled at the university of New Brunswick to take courses, such as forestry which are not available in other parts of Canada, live west of the province, some in the far west. They need that train. Has the hon. member for Moncton ever taken a ride on that train to see how many students use it when college opens or during the breaks? These people can only travel on that train because they cannot afford the new air fares. The problem is equally acute for people of limited financial resources. Did those seven little blackbirds give any thought to them while they watched the disappearance of rail passenger service on the western side of New Brunswick? Did they consider those people who can no longer afford to drive their cars? These people travel from Edmunston to Moncton by train. This train allows them to go to Moncton in the morning to go shopping or to attend business and return home in the evening. They cannot do that any more. How would the hon. gentleman from Edmunston like to jump on the bus, change buses, get to Fredericton, and then wait for the pleasure of the bus to leave from Fredericton, then go to Sussex and wait for another bus to go to Moncton? How would he like to do that?

I understand one of the constituents of the hon. member for Madawaska-Victoria is the president of the student union of the University of Moncton. Does he realize he has denied her the opportunity to travel by train? She does not own a car and can ill afford any other mode of transportation.

New Brunswick politics are hopeless. The Liberal members are little blackbirds, and they fall off the tree every time the whip waves his wand, or the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) suggests it is the right thing to do. New Brunswick can wait until some other interested individual comes along. I can assure those members that individuals who are more interested will in fact come along in the next election.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McCain: Some of those Liberals may be left, but not all of them.

The train is the only affordable passenger transportation many New Brunswickers have. For more than half of them this form of transportation will be completely out of reach, or they will have to travel 420 miles more than if they could travel on the Atlantic Ltd. to Montreal. That is ridiculous.

I noticed not much consideration was given to the exclusion of capitals by VIA Rail. The fact was not mentioned that the Transcontinental no longer passes through the city of Ottawa. I could not help but wonder what the hon. member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Evans) thought about that in view of the attack not long ago launched against that cutback by the mayor of Ottawa. We did not hear any objection from the member for Ottawa Centre on behalf of the capital city which he represents. I cannot express too strongly my objection to what has happened. Perhaps I have been a little sarcastic on occasion and a little cutting—

Some hon. Members: No, no.

An hon. Member: Never.

Mr. McCain: I want to appeal to this House on behalf of New Brunswick, on behalf of all the maritime provinces which suffer economically, on behalf of those communities which will become isolated, on behalf of those from the Annapolis Valley and Newfoundland which rely on tourism, all the way west to Vancouver Island. I want to appeal on behalf of those who rely on tourism because without rail passenger service they will not have any clientele. I want the minister to reconsider his decision. I speak on behalf of those for whom there is no convenient substitution to rail passenger service and those Canadians who have considered as their heritage the enacted law that there would be rail passenger service provided to Canadians on a transcontinental basis in perpetuity. I sincerely appeal to the government from the bottom of my heart that it reconsider its decision and I plead with members from New Brunswick that they exert their pressure on the government. We have tried the best we can.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, you have just had a good indication of the kind of argument presented when the hon. member said that Canada should have transcontinental railway services. Canada will have railway services—

An hon. Member: Had.

Mr. Pepin: Will have.

An hon. Member: Fifty per cent.

Mr. Pepin: Yes, 20 per cent fewer routes now than it had previously. But that has happened—

An hon. Member: It has never happened.

Mr. Pepin: It has happened before.

An hon. Member: When?

Mr. Pepin: It has happened between 1970 and 1978 when 28 per cent of the routes were eliminated. So this is not news.

An hon. Member: Not the Transcontinental.

Mr. Pepin: This is the normal process of adjusting the contemporary transportation system of the past to the four revolutions I talked about this afternoon.

• (2100)

I know this is not easy. The process of adjustment is always painful. My grandfather, who was a blackmith and a carriage maker, had one of the first automobiles in the eastern townships. He wanted to adjust. The first night he used the automobile, he entered the garage and went through the wall shouting, "Whoa". He accepted change, but it was not easy for him to adjust to change.

Mr. Siddon: So trains are finished, are they?

Mr. Pepin: My hon. friends opposite remind me of my grandfather.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, in its report which is the matter under consideration today, the Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments raises four objections. Firstly, it objects to a Crown Corporation, that is VIA Rail, set up in 1977 through a $1 credit, not being subjected to proper legislation. I think it would be easy to get the unanimous consent about that because we all feel the same way. As I was not a member of the House then, I was not involved, but I imagine that the government and the House of Commons at that time has some good reasons to accept that procedure. I will return to that in a few moments.

The committee also objects to the regulations on contracts for rail services going beyond the $1 vote and being used more especially to set up bus services. It seems to me that this is one of the objections of the committee. The answer is that the argument is not very sound, because the terms of reference for the creation of major services includes the provision of complementary services. Obviously a regulation or a piece of legislation cannot anticipate everything, but legislation or a regulation provides for capital services, it naturally also provides for ancillary services, at least common sense tells me so and apparently this is what the law specifically states.

The third point on which—sorry?

[English]

Mr. Beatty: Common sense but not legal.

Mr. Pepin: I thought the law made sense.

[Translation]

The third point, Mr. Speaker, is that the committee objects to the funding, and I quote:

—the prescribed portion——of the severance benefits approved at the time to help those railway workers affected by the establishment of VIA Rail being defined in a text without any formal regulatory status.

Finally, the committee is opposed to the fact that the government having set by a $1 vote the conditions of the agreements reached between the government and VIA Rail, the minister should have allowed himself to go even further in the details of those agreements. Once again I am told that the matter is debatable inasmuch as the governor in council, once again, only determines the most important conditions, the parameters, if you wish, to which the minister can add if he so wishes. In other words, if the minister were unabe to add to existing rules and regulations, to complement them, he would find himself in an impossible situation.

In turn, I have four points to bring up at this time, especially with regard to the first objection of the committee. I shall have others to make Thursday when I shall have the pleasure of appearing as a witness before the Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments.

The first point I want to make is this: nowhere in the report is it said the general procedure followed was illegal. So, on the contrary, though it does not say so, the committee considers it legal though it may object to its flavour, the scent emanating from that $1 vote; still, it does not say that it is illegal. Therefore, nothing illegal has been committed. That is something. In short, a pretty good start.

The second point is that in 1977 the $1 vote was not questioned, although others were at that time; and although $1 votes related to a matter of similar nature to this one were not. As witness to that fact, I can quote a very interesting author who in fact is co-chairman of the committee in question, Senator Godfrey, who in the Senate Debates—

[English]

—debates of October 20, 1981 stated:

—and evidently a point of order was not used by anyone in that house—

He was talking about the House of Commons.

—when the VIA Rail item appeared in an Appropriation Act.

Not bad either, is it? First, it is not illegal and, second, the co-chairman of the committee said that at the time no one brought it up. It may be that moral standards were not up to par at that time. It may be that progress has been made since but, nevertheless, placing ourselves in the spirit of the time, it was not protested at that moment. I apologize; I cannot be a personal witness to that event because I was outside the House at that particular moment.

[Translation]

One can therefore conclude—

[English]

Mr. Mazankowski: It was raised on March 22, a full-scale debate.

Mr. Pepin: I just quoted the senator, the co-chairman.

Mr. Mazankowski: It is wrong.

Mr. Pepin: I will tell him but, nevertheless—and I repeat my argument—other items at the time even on the same subject or nearly the same subject were challenged, found deficient and thrown out, so there must have been some justification for the members' accepting that $1 vote at that time.

Mr. Mazankowski: Clear recognition of impropriety.

[Translation]

Mr. Pepin: In my opinion, the main reason must have been that once again I was not there, the fact that once again the legislative agenda must have been overloaded as it is now and as it will be for centuries to come. Amen! One can therefore conclude that hon. members had their reason to accept that vote or not to argue as strongly as they used to do in other circumstances.

My third point is this: even if it is true it is good that VIA Rail has been legally established and, as I have said many times, I admit the desirability of a formal piece of legislation.

This afternoon the hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty) stated that I was contradicting myself in that respect. He quoted a letter dated May 7 where I wrote:

At present, there does not appear to be an immediate requirement for a VIA Rail Canada Act.

Well, I could play on words and point out the importance of "at present" and "urgent" and so forth, but I am prepared to say that the letter was not clear enough, I am prepared to agree to that. My basic position is that I strongly wish that legislation on VIA Rail be passed as rapidly as possible and I will come back to that topic in a few moments. The cabinet has discussed the matter since then, and examining the July 27 statement on the cutbacks they agreed with my request and asked me to report on that subject. I am now making every effort to define what might be a piece of legislation on VIA Rail. Once again, I will come back to that.

Finally, my fourth point is to say that I am quite willing to appear before the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments and before the Standing Committee on Transport as well if they so desire.

I was taken to task for not being in the House this afternoon. I think it was not very nice on the part of the hon. member who made that remark, because I was in the House in the early part of the afternoon, and then I had to greet the people from Transport 2000 who wanted to give me their views. I would suggest it was indecent to protest against my absence under such circumstances.

Just the same we ought to proceed now. The first part of the debate had to do with the report of the committee in question, with the statutory instruments, but I was told that the debate had gone far beyond the traditional limits on that subject. Well, Mr. Speaker, I too will take the liberty of straying a little bit from the main purpose of this debate since others have done that so openly.

I would like to reflect for a while on Section 64 of the National Transportation Act. Everyone refers to it but I wonder if someone has bothered to read it into the record. I will do so to show you once again that the government is right in using it to proceed with this rationalization measure. Subsection (1) of Section 64 says, and I quote:

The Governor in Council may at any time, in his descretion, either upon petition of any party, person or company interested, or of his own motion——and without any petition or application, vary or rescind any order, decision, rule or regulation of the Commission, whether such order or decision is made inter partes or otherwise, and whether such regulation is general or limited in its scope and application; and any order that the Governernor in Council may make with respect thereto is binding upon the Commission and upon all parties.

—of his own motion—

There is a lot of fancy footwork being done to try to prove that there is a difference between a cabinet decision, an order in council that amends a single decision of the CTC and one that varies several decisions. The act makes no such distinction. Section 64 of the National Transportation Act applies to both the plural and the singular. So we should read this before accusing the government of legal indecency in its use of Section 64. What we have to ask ourselves is why Section 64 was included in the National Transportation Act. It is simple. In some cases, we can refer to the CTC to find out if a line is economical, if it is viable in the public interest, whether or not it should be maintained. But in some cases, it is the entire system which is in question. In some instances, the government wonders not if such and such line should be reviewed, but whether the entire system should not be reconsidered. And the act of 1967, in particular Section 64(1), gives the government the power to change the whole system and that is precisely what we are doing now.

● (2110)

[English]

Mr. Benjamin: How far back?

Mr. Pepin: We cannot go back further than five years because the CTC has to review all its decisions every five years, and does. Therefore, the decisions are not older than five years.

[Translation]

There is one other important point, Mr. Speaker. Some responsibilities cannot simply be entrusted to the Canadian Transport Commission and one of those responsibilities is to govern, that is to decide whatever credits the government may allocate to this or that means of transportation. And that is a responsibility which the government cannot merely pass on to the Canadian Transport Commission. I will now read from a Supreme Court ruling—a popular practice these days—on that question and I quote:

[English]

—Attorney General of Canada v. Inuit Tapirisat, 115 DLR Third, page 1.

Mr. Kilgour: I know the case.

Mr. Pepin: Good. Think about it further.

Mr. Kilgour: Why don't you read it?

Mr. Pepin: Obviously I cannot read the whole decision. You would not allow me the time. "In Section 64(1), Parliament has not burdened the executive branch with any standard for guidelines in the exercise of its rate review function. Neither were procedural standards imposed or even implied . . . This conclusion is made all the more obvious by the added right in Section 64(1) that the governor in council may, on his own motion, vary or rescind any rule or order of the commission."

[Translation]

Now that is clear, and once more, the government cannot simply transfer this responsibility to others. I have said so many times and I say it again, my predecessor, Mr. Lang, tried to transfer a large part of this responsibility, in 1977, if I recall correctly, to the Canadian Transport Commission. He gave the commission a very extensive though not imperative mandate, so that the Canadian Transport Commission treated this directive from the then minister more like good advice, like a friendly recommendation. By all this I mean that if I, as the Minister of Transport, had decided to proceed by recourse to the Canadian Transport Commission, my directive would have had to be far more specific. I would have had to tell the Canadian Transport Commission: Listen, the cabinet, the entire government says that from now on, we can only spend a half billion dollars on passenger railway services in Canada. That would have been the first part of the directive.

Then I probably would have had to tell the Canadian Transport Commission: Listen, you say, and everybody says, that railways are most effective in transporting passengers on intercity routes of 500 miles or less. I would have had to add right away that Canada should have at least one transcontinental railway each way. And I would have had to point out that Canada has isolated communities where railway services must be continued. Finally, I would have had to tell the Canadian Transport Commission that, as it has said so itself in the past, commuter transportation is basically a provincial and urban responsibility. Why? Because the kind of work to be done, that is, combining subway lines, buses and railways, must be done by local authorities. Well, that is exactly what we are doing now. I would have had to tell the Canadian Transport Commission: Do what the government is doing now. And my friends in the official opposition would have said once again that not only was I an imperialist, but I was a hypocrite as well. So now, at least, I am not called a hypocrite. Thank God for small blessings.

Since the beginning of this debate, the official opposition has been saying: Listen, why don't you postpone this. It is still doing so today, since we have just taken a whole day, and the intentions of the hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe today were quite clear: simply to postpone the matter. Very well, postpone it, transfer the whole thing to the Canadian Transport Commission which would take at least five years, because remember, the commission's decisions may be appealed. So, this means at least five years if we take that course. The next day the opposition says: put this problem before the Transport committee, until June. And yesterday, for instance, the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) said, well, before deciding what to do, we should pass legislation on VIA, and we should also have an order on the prices to be paid by VIA to CN and CP.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, I am in an awkward predicament, because everybody wants to postpone the inevitable. But then, one of these days, the circumstances will no longer allow decisions to be postponed, because VIA Rail would otherwise be doomed. If the government is acting now, it is because we are faced with an emergency situation.

On several occasions since we started debating the issue we are dealing with today—I think I still have a few seconds left, Mr. Speaker—I have indicated that I was ready to discuss VIA Rail legislation. I have been authorized by the cabinet—as I said a while ago—to prepare a document to that effect. I would be willing also to appear before our Standing Committee on Transport.

This being said, it is quite clear that this subject is not an easy one. There are two possible formats for such legislation: one which would be somewhat limited and where the terms of reference of VIA Rail, its committee, its main structure and budget, its means of acquiring funds and so on would be defined. That would be fairly simple.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the hon. minister, but the time allocated to him has expired.

[English]

Mr. Siddon: Mr. Speaker—

[Translation]

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, I ask the unanimous consent of the House to continue with my remarks for approximately another thirty seconds at the most.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

● (2120)

Mr. Thomas Siddon (Richmond-South Delta): I think it is evident to all members assembled here this evening that the seventh report brought forward by the joint committee, and its larger implications for the future of VIA Rail, is something that most members of this House would like to have time to comment on this evening. The Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) has certainly used his 20 minutes well. I hope others might also have an opportunity to speak this evening, so I will try to make my remarks as brief as possible.

I am rather intrigued by the minister's style, Mr. Speaker. He was not disposed to speak in favour of the recommendations that have been brought forward in the name of the hon. member for Welllington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty). The committee in essence recommends that we get on with the business of enacting a VIA Rail act and give VIA Rail a proper mandate as debated and adopted by an action of this House. Instead, the minister keeps referring back to the history of how the $1 vote was passed and suggests that back in 1977 members of this House did not object.

I should like to remind the hon. Minister of Transport that the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) moved a motion—I believe it was on March 22, 1977—on an opposition day in this House, Mr. Speaker, in which he condemned the government for its improper use of $1 votes, particularly the improper use of the $1 vote, which was used prior to that to establish VIA Rail.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Siddon: So much for the value of allotted days, Mr. Speaker. The minister likes to draw these parallels, using terminology that is quite common these days. He says that what they are doing is not illegal. He says, "Perhaps it is somewhat controversial, or even unconventional, but it is not illegal and, therefore, we are quite justified in using a cabinet order, a cabinet decree, to make national transportation policy". But this is done without reference to the views of the people of Canada or this Parliament, which is the voice of the people of Canada.

Mr. Speaker, we know VIA Rail needs to be properly mandated under an act of this Parliament. One of the reasons is to ensure in future that the cabinet is not able to dicker and interfere in the evolution of transportation policy by changing the terms of reference and by creating a climate of uncertainty and a lack of predictability so that it would be virtually impossible to manage a corporation such as VIA Rail. Indeed that is the present situation, Mr. Speaker, as illustrated most clearly by the minister's action of July 27, 1981.

We need a VIA Rail act to establish clearly the basis on which the railways will charge VIA Rail for running rights and the use of equipment. In other words, we need a reconstitution of costing order R63-13. We also need to know where rail transportation will fit in our scale of national transportation priorities. It is not enough for the minister to stand in this House, Mr. Speaker, and wax eloquent about the days of the blacksmith and the four revolutions in the history of transportation and about the fact that his father worked on the railroad. All of that, Mr. Speaker, suggests that the Minister of Transport has a preconceived disposition to end passenger rail service in Canada. I think this is quite clear if you read between the lines of everything he says. He is saying that in the future in this country we are going to travel in airplanes or stuffed into buses over distances of four or six hundred miles, and that includes the elderly, the handicapped people and others who do not find it convenient or comfortable nor, in fact, conducive to their state of health to travel by other means than rail.

We need to know the extent to which the government and Parliament will consider the importance of our national rail passenger system to our economy, Mr. Speaker. That brings in specifically the question of tourism and the importance of tourism and of attracting people from all parts of the world, from the Pacific rim, Europe and the United States of America and elsewhere, to come and enjoy our country and partake of our beautiful scenery, and thus bring important economic benefits to thousands of businesses across Canada, whether they be hotel businesses, restaurants, car rental operations, ski package promoters or any of the large businesses and host of individuals who operate those businesses to earn a livelihood.

The VIA Rail Act must be undertaken with due regard for the importance of rail transportation to our economy. Of course, we have to embark on this initiative, given a full and thorough debate of the question of energy and the relative costs of various types of transportation. It is far too easy, Mr. Speaker, to adopt things by the back door and pretend they have the facts to back up the decisions they take when, in fact, those facts are distorted, misleading and selectively chosen to substantiate a biased case, Mr. Speaker.

I thought the minister was going to challenge that comment. But in fact he knows, Mr. Speaker, he is on very shaky grounds. In fact, in this House he has admitted he is really not much of an expert with numbers. This is a numbers game, Mr. Speaker, where the minister cannot merely resort to the inferences and selectively chosen statistics that some of his senior officials are apparently putting in front of him. We must know the means by which the VIA Rail corporation will be required to report to Parliament and to the standing committee, and what their relationship will be with the Canadian Transport Commission in terms of policies and regulations affecting the provisions of services which were originally undertaken as a commitment by those national rail systems that have provided passenger service for the most part of a century.

Those obligations have never been rescinded. It is important to know the extent to which VIA Rail will be required to continue those obligations and provide perpetual rail services, or some altered form of it, in accordance with the needs of public good, and public necessity and public convenience, which is what the Canadian Transport Commission is mandated to determine.

Before we pass this VIA Rail act, Mr. Speaker, we must know what the obligation of VIA Rail is going to be to its employees, members of the various railway brotherhoods and operating unions, some of whom became members of a new union with the expectation of a whole career with VIA Rail ahead of them. They relinquished their seniority in the unions they had belonged to earlier. They fully trusted and expected the government to guarantee them a rewarding and remunerative career with VIA Rail.

The back door, moonlighting actions the minister has taken this past summer essentially break a trust with these employees who felt they would have a career with the national railway company. But instead, the minister says, "That is all right, we will take care of them. We are going to pay them off. We are going to put them into early retirement or send them somewhere down to central Canada so they can be retrained to pass sandwiches on an LRC train running between Quebec City and Windsor". That is not good enough for people who have given their whole career to the railway and who have learned a trade in the service of the passenger rail system of our country.

We need to incorporate within the VIA Rail act a clear obligation and undertaking to those who would be employed by that corporation in the service of our people. We have to set out clearly a provision for reporting on the finances of this corporation. A clear distinction has to be drawn between the capital budgeting for new equipment so that we can actually put aside, on a year by year basis, a steady flow of capital funding instead of having these fits and bursts of capital as was the case 25 years ago when we bought a lot of new rail equipment. Then we did not buy anything again for 25 years.

A railway cannot plan and build a modern system using modern equipment if it cannot have a properly laid out system of capital budgeting and planning for the expansion of that service. It cannot watch its budget being subjected to the meat axe at every whim of the politicians to save a few dollars.

We must know what the nature of the operating budget of this corporation is going to be. We have to know to what extent the railways will be able to overcharge for fixed costs, whether or not the passenger trains are running. We have to know to what extent the railways want to charge for rail grinding and resurfacing—which is necessary—largely due to the heavy unit trains that are using our rails and to what extent VIA Rail is being expected to pay excessive charges that are incurred because of other traffic on those rails.

● (2130)

We want to know how much fuel VIA Rail is using. I have tried to do some energy calculations in order to determine that. It is very convenient for the minister that this information is not available. Presumably the railways charge VIA in bulk for all the fuel it uses. It is very difficult to determine how many energy units of fuel are actually being burned in moving passengers, as compared with the movement of the freight and bulk materials. We require a proper accounting and reporting procedure so that the officials of VIA Rail know that they will not be hosed, to put it frankly, by the national rail systems which provide the rights-of-way on which it operates.

We require a procedure of reporting on performance. For example, we must know what means we will use to decide when a particular line or a particular service is so marginal that it should be discontinued. The rules must be put up front. We should know whether we are prepared to subsidize, for example, 50 per cent of the operating costs of a line, and not one cent more, as is the case with the Amtrak system. If we believe the rail system should be serving the social needs of people in the remote and less populated areas of Canada, then we must accept the concept of subsidy, which is just another way of having taxpayers pay for the service in any event. It is not the government which is paying for these things. It is taxpayers, and the priority should be determined by taxpayers. It should be very clear in the VIA Rail act the extent to which passenger rail services will serve the national interest, not merely the dollar and cents interests of the government which wants to buy some new LRC trains so that it can conveniently cut the services which the people in the more remote and rural areas of the country clearly need. We require all of this information before Parliament can debate it in the context of evolving a VIA Rail act.

It took the minister only 30 minutes to make the decisions which he enacted on July 27. To come into the House and tell us that it will somehow take five years, is really an insult to the House. If we merely resolve to adopt as an element of our national transportation policy the philosophy that passenger rail trains will continue in Canada, given the experience in other countries and the fact that we know passenger trains are cheaper in terms of energy consumption than any other form of transportation, we should get on with creating a system which grows, works and serves the needs of all Canadians.

I should like to talk for a moment about the credibility of information. The minister justified his actions by saying that trains are inefficient, the least energy efficient of all transportation methods. Of course this is pure rubbish. It is just not true. The minister is trying to suggest that there are not enough people using these trains as a reason for not continuing them. In fact, the statistics show otherwise. It is a matter of whom he is directing his questions to. To make superficial, simple-minded statements to the effect that railways are one of the least energy efficient of all transportation modes is just absolute "sluttergush". The minister is misleading the House, perhaps unintentionally, by suggesting that he is qualified to decide on the relative merits of rail service compared with air transportation and other modes, which we know are heavily subsidized by the taxpayers by one means or another.

The statistics on national trends and cost recovery prepared by the minister's department show that in 1977 there was only a 32 per cent cost recovery for the provision of air transportation services in Canada, a 22 per cent cost recovery on marine services, and a 49 per cent cost recovery on the highway system which serves passenger cars, buses and highway transport trucks. In comparison, the railways are operating with an 82 per cent cost recovery. Granted, much of that high rate of return on the rails is because of the carriage of freight, but surely it is not too much to ask that some of the excess earnings, far in excess of the earnings in the other three modes, be redirected to guarantee convenient, comfortable rail transportation services for all Canadians.

A few weeks ago a Gallup pole was taken of some 1,052 Canadians. It showed that the majority of Canadian people strongly disapprove of the minister's arbitrary cuts to VIA Rail services down about 20 per cent, announced on July 27. Approximately 51 per cent of the people polled disapprove of these cuts, with only 27 per cent approving. The majority of those who responded said that they would even accept an increase in taxes to maintain the national rail transportation service.

These are important questions. The minister has not stopped to measure the sociological impact of these decisions. Certainly he has not been able to convince the House that he has calculated the impact on businesses and on income earning potential and employment created both directly and in spin-offs from the national rail transportation system. He has not considered situations such as this.

I hope the minister is listening somewhere. When those of us on the task force travelled across Canada, we stopped to listen to the people of Kamloops, British Columbia. A widow travelled 200 miles from Blue River in order to speak with us. She wanted to tell us how much difficulty she had been having maintaining her income since the passing of her husband and because of some ill health. This widow was not eligible for old age pension. She operates a little store along the right-of-way where the supercontinental passes twice a day. Many of the passengers detrain to buy little curios and articles in her store. This makes up some 30 per cent or more of her income. Mrs. Jane Lamont, a 63-year old widow travelled 200 miles to speak with us because the minister did not want to hear her. We learned that she derives her living from that little store along the CN tracks in Blue River, British Columbia. She will be forced out of business within three weeks after November 15, 1981, when the minister implements his decision. I would have liked to see the minister in the House to see the reaction on his face when he heard the words of Mrs. Lamont who said:

I feel very humble in asking the Minister of Transport to give me back something I need.

There are many hon. members who have travelled the country and listened to the people in ways that the minister has not. They deserve the right to stand in the House of Commons and debate this very important question before November 15. Today is the day, perhaps the only day, when these members will have a chance to bring their feelings and experiences to bear on behalf of Canadians. Therefore, in the interests of granting additional members an opportunity to be heard, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona (Mr. Kilgour):

That pursuant to Standing Order 6 the hour of adjournment this day be extended until such time as no member continues to rise to participate in the debate on the business of the House now under consideration.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those members who object will please rise.

And more than ten members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I declare the motion lost.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I think you declared the motion lost under Standing Order 6(5)(b), the relevant part of which states, "—the motion shall be deemed to have been withdrawn—", not lost, Mr. Speaker.

● (2140)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member is perfectly right, but the motion did not carry.

Motion withdrawn.

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, before the hon. member for Richmond-South Delta (Mr. Siddon) leaves his seat, I want to say that I think it is somewhat ironic that he began and ended his comments by saying that he wished that more members of the House could participate in the debate. He said he would keep his comments short, and then proceeded to talk for 20 minutes, the full time allotted, and so no other member will now be able to speak in this debate. That is an indication of the kind of paradoxical if not hypocritical attitude that members of the so-called opposition display.

Mr. Kempling: Let's hear your solution.

[Translation]

Mr. Berger: Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I take part in this debate on the motion for concurrence in the seventh report of the Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments. I fully agree with the principle contained in this report that it would have been better to establish VIA Rail and to authorize the public operation and financing of rail passenger service in Canada by an act of Parliament. As indicated by the committee, VIA Rail was created by a series of votes and orders in council which are described in detail on pages 35:4 and 35:5 of the committee report dated last June 18. The report outlines the four or five stages which led to the creation of VIA Rail on January 12, 1977, and I quote:

On January 12 1977, the Canadian National Railways incorporated a subsidiary, VIA Rail Canada Inc.—

By vote 52d, Department of Transport, Appropriation Act No. 1, 1977—VIA Rail Canada Inc., was deemed to be a railway company for the purposes of Section 11 of the Railway Act—

By Vote L56a, Department of Transport, Appropriation Act No. 3, 1977-78, the Minister of Transport was authorized to purchase "on behalf of and to hold in trust for Her Majesty in Right of Canada all of the issued common shares of VIA Rail Canada Inc. and to pay $100,000 in consideration thereof". By Order in Council, SOR/78-287, VIA Rail Canada Inc. was made a Crown corporation—The whole authority for public funding of the VIA Rail operation and its takeover of railway passenger services provided by railway companies rests in the dollar vote, Vote 52d, Department of Transport—

That vote authorized the minister to enter into a contract with VIA Rail Canada Inc. with respect to:

(a) the provision, management, or the operation of selected rail passenger services in such a manner as to improve efficiency, effectiveness and economy in rail passenger services in Canada;

(b) the reimbursement of the net cost to the corporation of operating a rail passenger service in accordance with the provisions of the contract;

(c) incentive payments for the efficient operation of the rail passenger services in accordance with the provisions of the contract;

This was the procedure used to establish VIA Rail, and I quite agree with the committee, as I said earlier, that it would have been better and more desirable to create VIA Rail by an act of Parliament. However, I do not agree with some statements in the committee report which imply that Parliament was kept completely out of the debate. I do not agree with the implications of statements such as this one, on page 35:6 of the committee report, where the committee says, and I quote:

Parliament should have been, and still should be, given the opportunity to debate the future and structure of railway passenger services in Canada and the manner of their management and control—

Meaning that Parliament did not discuss these matters. Then, further on, we find the following:

—many important matters have been effectively foreclosed from Parliament's debate and disposition by the extensive and pre-emptive executive action that has already been taken.

On the contrary, Mr. Speaker, there have been many opportunties to discuss the matter of passenger rail service in Canada, and I would like to give a few examples of this. First, it is a fact that we have an oral question period every day, and I would like to quote part of a question asked by the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) last July 13 and the reply to that question. As I said, this occurred during the oral question period. In a question to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin), the hon. member asked the following:

—is it the minister's intention to bring to the Parliament of Canada a new VIA Rail act this autumn?

What did the minister reply? Here is his answer:

On the other subject, that is the usefulness, necessity of having a VIA act, I am in full agreement with the views expressed by the hon. member and others.

He then explained why the government was prevented in the past from introducing such a bill. He then said:

The problem has always been with the agenda or the timetable of the House. In 1977 when Via was created by an item in the estimates—

—as I have just explained—

—presumably there were too many items on the agenda of the House. Last year—

It is important to note the following facts because some hon. members would have the public believe that transportation matters are never debated in this House. The hon. minister said the following:

Last year I gave priority to the problem of the transportation of dangerous goods.

It seems to me that all members remember those problems related to the transportation of dangerous goods following the derailment in Mississauga, with the resulting emergency, the debate which followed and the act passed by the House.

This coming year, as the hon. member knows, we have the ports policy to bring up. We also have the independent air safety board to create. Thus, time is really the problem. Everyone agrees that VIA is entitled to legislation of its own as one of the major Crown corporations. I am committed to cabinet to bring forward a memorandum on the subject which might lead to that realization, whenever the time of the House permits.

I repeat—

—whenever the time of the House permits.

● (2150)

[English]

Mr. Speaker, the minister noted that the problem has always been and still is with the agenda or timetable of the House. However, it seems to me, based on my short experience in this House, that it would not be too far-fetched to suggest that the conduct of the members of both the government and the opposition has led to a situation in which Parliament cannot function properly. The responsibility sometimes lies with our own members, but it very often lies with the opposition. An example which comes readily to mind is the pleading of Madam Speaker in Question Period every day for hon. members to refrain from posing questions that are too long, that have preambles which carry on endlessly—

An hon. Member: What about answers?

Mr. Berger: —or her suggestions that less heckling might permit a minister to answer questions more quickly.

As have all hon. members, I have spent a lot of time in committees in this House. A recent example that comes to my mind is that of a minister working on tight deadlines, perhaps imposed by the slowness of House operations caused by some of the factors which I have just mentioned, who tried to get a bill through committee without the necessity of holding public hearings. The minister, obviously unfamiliar with proceedings of committees, did not know that the opposition could tie him up for days in the committee, if it wished. Eventually he was obliged to consent to two or three hearings. Two or three valuable days were wasted in procedural wrangling.

I think that there is also a refusal by the opposition to recognize the prerogatives of the executive branch of government. A perfect example is this decision on VIA Rail. In its wisdom, the government has decided that it has to cut back services.

Mr. Kempling: In its stupidity.

Mr. Berger: It has to cut back money-losing services in order to devote the necessary funds for new equipment. The minister has given his justification—

Mr. Kilgour: That's just ducky!

Mr. Berger: —for his decision, both inside and outside the House.

Mr. Kilgour: Very persuasive!

Mr. Berger: He has given reasons not only for the substance of his decision but also for the procedure that was used.

Mr. Kilgour: That was just terrific!

Mr. Berger: Yes, the process. One hears a familiar cry of "totalitarian" coming across from the great defenders of democracy across the aisle.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Kempling: Make him a minister to Skalbania.

[Translation]

Mr. Berger: As my colleague just pointed out, this great champion of democracy has just refused to allow half a minute more to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) to let him conclude.

Mr. Ouellet: How rude!

[English]

Mr. Berger: The minister has explained that the government and the country cannot afford to undertake a series of lengthy hearings which would have just postponed the inevitable. The opposition, however, states that it is upset that there will be no hearings of the CTC. I would like to remind Your Honour that this is the same opposition which incessantly cries out about accountability to the elected representatives of the people. It is true that we have given certain responsibilities to the CTC. However, all hon. members have questioned on many occasions the value of these administrative, quasi judicial, bodies. They have stated on a number of occasions that it is important for government to take responsibility for its own actions and that it is important for parliamentary committees to see that the government is accountable to the elected representatives of the people.

Here we have an example of the minister offering to appear before a parliamentary committee to answer these great defenders of our democratic system.

Mr. Kempling: How condescending.

Mr. Berger: How ironic it is that they have refused to take him up on his offer! They say, "No, we are the elected representatives of the people. We do not want to hear the minister. Send him before the CTC!"

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some hon. Members: Louder!

An hon. Member: Intelligence prevails.

Mr. Berger: It is quite something, that these people who always claim to speak in the name of democracy have the opportunity to deal with this matter themselves, but they frown upon it. They turn it down. We on this side of the House are also concerned about transportation in this country.

An hon. Member: Funny way of showing it.

Mr. Berger: The hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) mentioned the concerns of the Voyageur company as expressed before the recent hearings which were held across the country, or in eastern Canada, in any event, by the Standing Committee on Transport. I took three or four hours one morning this past summer to go to Voyageur to familiarize myself with its concerns. I am also very concerned about the matter of the cross subsidization of its routes in rural Ontario and rural Quebec. This is certainly a matter which should occupy the attention of the Standing Committee on Transport. However, if hon. members of the opposition are as concerned as they say they are about transportation, I would suggest that they abandon their posturing, that they accept the fact that the executive has the right to govern this country, a fact which they refuse to accept, day in and day out, in this House.

Mr. Siddon: What about Parliament? What does it do? Dictatorship.

An hon. Member: The window of the CTC.

Mr. Berger: They should go before a parliamentary committee—

Mr. Siddon: There is no democracy left.

Mr. Berger: Rather than harping on a decision that has already been made, they should talk about the future. That is what they should do, rather than continuously burying their heads in the past, as the members of the official opposition have the habit of doing!

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Siddon: Sounds like another Trudeau.

Some hon. Members: Louder!

Mr. Berger: I would suggest that they bring witnesses in and that they subject government officials to questioning about their future plans; in other words, that they be a constructive opposition—

Mr. Siddon: He is understudying the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau).

Mr. Berger: —rather than an opposition which continually obstructs the affairs of the people of Canada.

Mr. Kempling: Oh, go home. You are out of your mind.

Mr. Siddon: Why don't you drive a few buses, David, go into business? Why don't you run the bus service down in New Brunswick?

Mr. Berger: We all want parliamentary reform in this House, but we will never get it unless we can adopt a more responsible attitude to the people who have elected us.

Mr. Siddon: Yeah, let's debate these matters, have a vote.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 40 deemed to have been moved.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie).

An hon. Member: He is not here.

● (2200)

[Translation]

THE CONSTITUTION—POSSIBLE POSTPONEMENT OF FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL MEETING—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, on October 20, 1981, in this House, I asked the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) whether he still intended to renew his invitation to the provinces after their repeated refusals to hold a federal-provincial meeting on the constitutional resolution.

It will be remembered that such an invitation had repeatedly been extended by the Prime Minister but had always been turned down by the premiers under various pretences. Finally, the provinces, after a meeting held on October 19, 1981, in Montreal, agreed to such a meeting to be held in the first week of November. Whether this was a tactical move is open to question, since the presentation of the federal budget had already been announced for November 3, 1981. Were the provinces really serious, or were they merely trying to raise a conflict of schedules that would have further postponed the meeting? Whatever that may be, the federal government was serious and despite that situation, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) scheduled a meeting for November 2 next.

In his answer to my question, the Prime Minister indicated his intention to go through with the resolution, and he referred to my personal position on the question. Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a final clarification on my position which, as will be known, is different from that held by the Liberal caucus and the government. My disagreement has to do basically with Section 133. First of all the Charter of Rights is aimed at guaranteeing minorities of both official languages the essential instruments of their survival.

Theoretially, the Charter should give them protection beyond the provincial legislatures. Such is the spirit of the Charter, which has a universal thrust.

Unfortunately the Charter is affected in actual practice by other constitutional provisions, such as Section 133 of the British North America Act and Section 23 of the Manitoba Act. Under these provisions, the provinces of Quebec and Manitoba alone have been required to grant their minorities free access to the legislative and legal institutions in their own language. All the other provinces, except New Brunswick which has granted voluntarily that protection to its minority in the resolution, were exempted.

The result is that although the Charter of Rights provides legal guarantees and enshrines freedom of movement across Canada, a French-speaking citizen will never be entitled to process of law in his own language in seven provinces out of ten. He will not be able to do business, transact or contract in his own language, and so forth. This situation stems from the non-application of Section 133 all across Canada.

I would invite you, Mr. Speaker, to go through a somewhat hallucinating experience. Read the Charter again, as if you were residing in Alberta, in Ontario, or in any of the seven provinces to which Section 133 does not apply. Let us take a few examples:

10. Everyone has the right on arrest or detention (a) to be informed promptly of the reasons therefor;

In what language, Mr. Speaker?

(b) to retain and instruct counsel without delay and to be informed of that right;

In what language, Mr. Speaker?

And I go to Section 11:

11. Any person charged with an offence has the right

(a) to be informed without unreasonable delay of the specific offence;

In what language, Mr. Speaker?

(b) to be tried within a reasonable time;

In what language, Mr. Speaker? And I could go on and on because that is the thrust of my objection. The rights granted in theory by the charter will never exist in fact, and to my mind, the resolution is incomplete in that regard.

The pan-Canadian rights of the French-speaking majority in Quebec are based on the premise that the rights of French-speaking minorities outside Quebec, to which I belong, as a Franco-Ontarian in Ontario, be recognized. If those minorities have no real rights, that means that Quebec francophones will then have rights only in their home province. In principle their language will confine them to their province or to no more than two other Canadian provinces which, once again theoretically, should grant rights of access to judicial and legislative institutions.

I therefore wonder, Mr. Speaker, who in Canada speaks for Francophones. Is it the Quebec government or the federal government? If it is really the Quebec government, then the road to independence is already paved and through this official recognition of the French fact in America, French becomes the exclusive domain of the province of Quebec in this country. If, on the contrary, and as I believe, Mr. Speaker, it is the responsibility of the federal government, then all the provinces, without exception, should adhere to national objectives, which are to build a free and officially bilingual democratic country, which recognizes equal rights to all its citizens everywhere.

Mr. Speaker, I should like to conclude on a more optimistic note. In spite of certain reserves, I am equally in favour of patriating our Constitution. I am equally in favour of the inclusion of a full charter of rights and freedoms. And I am equally in favour of adopting an amending formula. Unfortunately, I am unable to support the constitutional package as it stands now, because I feel the Charter is incomplete.

In view of the fact that the issues thus raised are, quite logically, significant for the future of Canada, some would like us to believe that the discussion on the whole question of the imposition of Clause 133 would be given top priority at the first federal-provincial conference following patriation. In spite of the stubborn opposition of Premier Bill Davis of Ontario, we will forge ahead.

Mr. Speaker, a Constitution essentially designed and written for a short period of time would not command the support of all Canadians. As a matter of fact, all legitimate authority derives from the Constitution. The people and other minority groups would not feel bound by such short-term arrangements.

If the constitutional rules, Mr. Speaker, must be constantly redrafted, how can we expect to develop a completely stable community? If the constitutional rules must be altered because we are convinced that their intent is deficient, the present scheme being a glaring example for the reasons I have just stated, why then postpone what can be quite properly done today?

Mr. Speaker, considering the importance of this matter and the short time at my disposal, I should like to say in conclusion that I hope to state in greater detail in the House my objection to that incomplete Charter and the reasons for my disagreement during that special two-day debate following which, I hope, that resolution will be forwarded abroad.

● (2205)

Mr. Jim Peterson (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice and Minister of State for Social Development): Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) for having raised this very important question.

[English]

I know the hon. member is aware of the Prime Minister's response to the question from the provinces as to when we are going to have a meeting. As the hon. member knows, since the Supreme Court decision came down the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) offered to the premiers of the provinces six alternative dates in which to discuss the Constitution.

The Prime Minister indicated in his telex to Premier Bennett that he was:

> Prepared to meet with all the premiers one last time in an effort to reach an agreement on constitutional reform.

According to the ten premiers and the Prime Minister, pursuant to this final offer, they will be sitting down next Monday for a final round of negotiations and, as the Prime Minister said, "We will negotiate even if we have to go day and night". This House is surely aware of the proposed resolution.

In the words of the hon. leader of the New Democratic Party, we have contained in our resolution what is undoubtedly and I quote, "the best bill of rights of any country in the whole world."

Last week a public opinion poll revealed that more than 80 per cent of Canadians want a charter of rights enshrined in our Constitution.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, we are obviously on the verge of giving to the Canadian people a charter of rights which will not only protect the linguistic rights of English-speaking Quebecers, but which will also, for the first time, guarantee in the Constitution that the French-speaking minority in the nine other Canadian provinces can be educated in their own language.

[English]

Mr. Speaker, we heard the Supreme Court rule on the legality of the constitutional package. We have now obtained agreement on a final date for negotiations, as the hon. member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) requested last week. Let us now, in a spirit of conciliation, co-operation and good will, meet with the premiers. We want an agreement. We want that accord. We will not sacrifice fundamental principle, but we look forward to that meeting.

THE ECONOMY—MEASURES TO AID MARITIME REGION B) REQUEST FOR ASSISTANCE TO HOME OWNERS RENEWING MORTGAGES

Hon. J. Robert Howie (York-Sunbury): Mr. Speaker, I want to speak tonight about the continuing high interest rates which plague the Atlantic provinces, as they do the rest of our country, and about the particularly severe effect they are having on the economy of the Atlantic provinces. I want to share with the House my knowledge of the situation, which I find very distressing, and I want to propose some solutions to the problem for the consideration of the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen) as he prepares his budget for presentation in a few weeks' time.

The latest Statistics Canada figures which have been released indicate that unemployment in our nation has increased from 7 per cent to 8.2 per cent. In every one of the Atlantic provinces this increase of 1.2 per cent has been exceeded, and in one of the Atlantic provinces the increase has been tripled.

• (2210)

Perhaps the most significant feature of these figures is that we have a very serious drop in employment. This means that the increase in unemployment is not because of an increase in the work force or the number of Canadians who live in the Atlantic provinces who are seeking employment. It is because we have had a cancelling out, or a drop, in the number of jobs. The Atlantic provinces are the first hit, the hardest hit and the last to recover from high interest policies and restrictive monetary policies because of the nature of their economies. Three of the Atlantic provinces have resource-based economies, and the fourth has a service-based economy.

The peculiar capital structure that is necessary for resource-based economies and service-based economies is that intense amounts of capital are required but, because of inventory and the primary nature of the products involved, very expensive working capital is required, and in the Atlantic provinces this is generally borrowed. This is where the impact of high interest policies afflicts us quite severely. The first symptoms of this affliction are the closing of our fishing plants—and they are closed—and of our lumber mills—and they are closed. The final phase is when the spin-off of these closures hits our retail merchandising establishments. Just last week two clothing stores which have been in existence for generations joined with others which have closed. This is the complexion of the problem which faces us in Atlantic Canada. I want Parliament to be aware of it, and I want the Minister of Finance to address it, particularly as he prepares his budget.

The one aspect of this problem which is perhaps most severe is the strange dichotomy of our lending institutions with record high profits and of borrowers who are losing their homes and their jobs. This is very severe, particularly for home owners, but it is also severe for tenants because some of them have seen their rents doubled and tripled as the impact has worked through our system.

The big concern I have is for Canadians in lower and middle-income groups, and I want to remind the House that in the Atlantic provinces the average income is two thirds of that in other parts of our nation. It is two thirds of the national average. People in low income groups first have to address the question of very high mortgage payments as they renew their mortgages and, next, record high heating costs, and the Atlantic provinces have the longest and most severe winters of any part of Canada. If one looks at the map, it will be seen that we are north of Montreal. First comes the payment for the mortgage, then for home heating. If anything is left over, it goes for food. In too many families in the Atlantic provinces there is nothing left over for clothing, insurance, recreation or any of the amenities of life. Too many families are losing their homes. Too many kids are suffering from malnutrition. It is that severe. That is why I want this House to address this question.

• (2215)

My constituents have suggested that we consider the use of tax-free bonds for lending institutions, as do the savings companies and municipalities in the United States and the same as the electric power companies to build their works in the United States.

A lawyer in my constituency wrote suggesting that we consider rolling over the Registered Retirement Savings Plan. That has been suggested in other places. I sent this suggestion to the Minister of Finance.

Another constituent suggested that where we have record-high profits in lending institutions and record foreclosures for borrowers we consider an excess profits tax on the lending institutions, that the yield from the tax regenerate through the tax system to lower interest rates on the home owners who are renewing their mortgages.

My party proposed—and the Liberal and New Democratic parties voted against it for reasons they thought valid—a mortgage interest deductibility program. This year it would have made a maximum of $1,125 available to home owners to pay the interest on their mortgages. Next year it would have gone to $1,500.

The government has a duty to place before Parliament a proposal better than that one. If it does, I will support it. I want the government to put forward its proposal to deal constructively with the problem, and we will implement it. This should be done immediately because every day we wait, some child in the Atlantic provinces will suffer and some family will be shattered.

Finally, the government should review the high interest rate policy which, with inflation running at 12.5 per cent, is not doing the job. That is part of the problem.

We should look at the capital gains tax abolition. That abolition could act as a magnet to keep Canadian dollars at home and bring foreign dollars here through the Foreign Investment Review Act. This would strengthen the Canadian dollar and do the job that high interest rates are not doing. When you consider the cost of recovery of that tax, it is a valid point I would like the minister to address. I see, Mr. Speaker, you are about to spring from your Chair.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

Mr. John Evans (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, of all the members on the other side who raise questions with the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen), I think the hon. member for York-Sunbury (Mr. Howie) does so in the most creative fashion. I can assure him that the suggestions he has brought forward, tonight and earlier in other questions and sessions such as this, will receive very close consideration from me and from the minister as he reaches the final phase of his budget preparation.

The hon. member implied tonight that the drop in employment in the Atlantic provinces has, in some way, been greater or that the Atlantic provinces are more adversely affected by the current economic malaise that we face than perhaps other parts of the country. I suggest that equally adverse impacts are being felt across this country. The minister is considering those very seriously in his final preparations for his budget. Of course, it would be premature at this time to indicate any of the measures the minister is considering, or which the minister has already indicated he intends to adopt. However, I can assure the hon. member that a reduction in inflation and interest rates will benefit all regions and sectors of the economy. In the short run, Mr. Speaker, the high interest rates in the United States and the need in Canada to combat these inflationary expectations and keep prudent limits on the money supply growth mean, of course, that interest rates must remain relatively high across all the country. Moreover, there is no conclusive evidence that the less prosperous regions of the country are relatively harder hit by high interest rates than are the other regions.

• (2220)

There are, however, continuing measures in place to assist the less advantaged regions of the country, such as, for example, expenditures by the Department of Regional Economic Expansion, equalization payments, and the regionally-differentiated investment tax credits, as well the small business development bonds and other measures which, in some cases, help all of Canada, but which in many cases are strictly and closely directed towards the less advantaged regions of the country.

The hon. member has suggested there has been a dramatic increase in unemployment and a drop in employment in the maritimes at this point in time specifically. I would point out to him that from 1978 to 1980 the employment growth in the maritimes was higher than in the rest of Canada. For example, it was 4.1 per cent during that period, which exceeded the average for Canada as a whole, which was only 3.4 per cent. The latter part of the 1970s was a period of high employment growth in the maritimes and high economic investment. We hope that situation will return after we have passed this brief period of difficulty that we are facing at this time.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being 10.23 p.m., this House stands adjourned unti tomorrow at 2 p.m., pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

At 10.23 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Tuesday, October 27, 1981

The House met at 2 p.m.

● (1405)

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

VIA RAIL

DRUMHELLER TO EDMONTON, ALTA. SERVICE—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, whereas after the last public hearing the CTC ordered that the railway line from Edmonton to Drumheller be retained, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Edmonton North (Mr. Paproski):

That this House implores the Minister of Transport to rescind the recent order in council that would cancel this VIA line which is the only direct connection that Drumheller has with the city of Edmonton, which many pensioners use to go to Edmonton from Drumheller and intervening points for medical and government services, and permit at least a train twice a week.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

EFFECT OF CANCELLATION OF SERVICES ON TOURIST INDUSTRY—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Thomas Siddon (Richmond-South Delta): Madam Speaker, whereas the inexcusable, irrational decision of the government to cancel the western Supercontinental will harm Canada's international reputation by denying to many thousands of visitors from Pacific rim countries and elsewhere the pleasures of a leisurely holiday by train in scenic western Canada, and given the consequent elimination of more than $100 million of tourist revenue to the western provinces, I move under the provisions of Standing Order 43, seconded by the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona (Mr. Kilgour):

That the rich Prime Minister and his friend, the wealthy Minister of Transport, be held personally liable for financial losses incurred by communities such as Jasper, Alberta, and by the thousands of Canadians in tourist businesses who will face bankruptcy, unemployment and personal financial hardship as a consequence of the irresponsible actions taken by these ministers.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

NUCLEAR ENERGY

REQUEST FOR PUBLIC HEARINGS ON RADIOACTIVE WASTE DISPOSAL—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Madam Speaker, I rise pursuant to Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. In view of continuing widespread concern about Canada's undemocratic and tragic pro-nuclear energy policy, and concern in Manitoba in particular about AECL's real intentions for the experimental underground radioactive disposal vault near Lac du Bonnet, Manitoba, and the Lyon government's casual neglect of such concerns in its leasing of Crown land to AECL, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton):

That this House instruct the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources to hold major open public hearings on the radioactive waste program and underground disposal and, failing this, to respond favourably to the latest proposal of the Committee of Concerned Citizens for Manitoba and, finally, to at last release the conclusions of the infamous internal departmental review of nuclear policy which Manitobans hope will tell us whether the government regards storage for recycling purposes as relevant or not relevant to the assurances that radioactive waste will not be stored in Manitoba.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

PETRO-CANADA

OPENING OF FIRST SERVICE STATIONS IN EASTERN CANADA—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mrs. Ursula Appolloni (York South-Weston): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. In Halifax, Montreal and Toronto this past weekend a great event with national significance took place and should be noted. I am referring to the opening of the first Petro-Canada service stations in eastern Canada.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nielsen: What a gas!

Mrs. Appolloni: With due encouragement from across the aisle, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Kent (Mr. Bossy):

That this House welcome the introduction to eastern Canada of retail outlets by the people's oil company and that we wish Petro-Canada every success.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

THE ECONOMY

SUGGESTED EXTENSION OF SMALL BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT BOND PROGRAM—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Peter Elzinga (Pembina): Madam Speaker, I too rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43. Whereas many sectors of our society are facing disastrous effects because of the Liberal government's deliberate high interest rate policy, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Athabasca (Mr. Shields):

That this House instructs the Minister of Finance to include in his forthcoming budget expansion of the Small Business Development Bond to include non-incorporated farmers and non-incorporated small businesses and to extend the life of the Small Business Development Bond provisions for at least one more year, to the end of 1982, and also to include operating expenses.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

● (1410)

HOUSING

SALE OF HOMES REPOSSESSED BY CANADA MORTGAGE AND HOUSING CORPORATION—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation borrowed $200 million from the Government of Canada to cover its shortfall as a result of repossessions and its mortgage insurance program. The minister uses this excuse to fail to give persons purchasing repossessed condominiums and townhouses realistic mortgages, and forces these people to borrow on the private market. I move, seconded by the hon. member for Fraser Valley West (Mr. Wenman):

That this House direct the minister responsible for Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation to sell repossessed homes to individuals for their own occupancy and not to speculators or investors, and to take back first mortgages not in excess of 14 per cent, and direct the Minister of Finance not to demand repayment at this time from Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation of moneys advanced, and direct the minister responsible for Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, with respect to housing stocks owned by him, to make interest rates on mortgages within the reach of the average home owner.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

GRAIN

CALL FOR STUDY OF EXTENSION OF HUDSON BAY SHIPPING SEASON—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): The Canadian Wheat Board has set a target for a 50 per cent increase in grain exports by 1985, which goal can only be attained if our transportation system is expanded. In view of the potential that exists in utilizing the Port of Churchill for the export of grain to Russia, Poland and western European countries, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Swift Current-Maple Creek (Mr. Hamilton):

That the Minister of Transport commission a study to determine the feasibility of extending the shipping season through Hudson Bay, upgrading and enlarging the port facilities and overcoming the problems of permafrost, and, in the interim, direct the Canadian Wheat Board to utilize the present facilities of the port to the maximum.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

SMALL BUSINESS

FINANCING REVIEW—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity to Canada's small business community. The small business financing review, under way for some 18 months, has now been completed. To avoid a repeat of the VIA Rail fiasco, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Spadina (Mr. Heap):

That not only the review be made public during this small business week and during these crises times, but also all of the supporting studies which served as part of the review process, and this House urge that the Minister of State for Small Businesses and Tourism conduct small business hearings throughout Canada to seek the response of the small business community to the recommendations contained in the report.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

CHILDREN FOR PEACE

PRESENTATION IN RAILWAY COMMITTEE ROOM—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Norman Kelly (Scarborough Centre): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43. Whereas this evening at five o'clock in the Railway Committee Room the Children for Peace will demonstrate for all parliamentarians the necessity for global peace, harmony, and disarmament, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston):

That all Members of Parliament be encouraged to demonstrate their support for this worth-while endeavour of our children by attending this presentation.

Madam Speaker: I hardly think this is a motion acceptable under Standing Order 43.

* * *

COMMUNICATIONS

SUGGESTED INTRODUCTION OF AMENDING LEGISLATION—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43. Madam Speaker, 10 per cent of our population, living within two thirds of the total geographic region of our country, is deprived of adequate radio and television service by reason of their dependency on space satellite technology.

Since the regulatory commission of the Department of Communications is laying criminal charges against certain individuals in the north on the strength of statutes in federal law which are no longer consistent with the government's declared policies, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Wetaskiwin (Mr. Schellenberger):

That the Minister of Communications be required to lay before the House immediately proposals for amending certain sections of statutes which underlie his jurisdiction in order to make such statutes consistent with public policy, and to impose on the regulatory commission a moratorium on any further action based on antiquated laws.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

THE BUDGET

INQUIRY RESPECTING DATE OF PRESENTATION

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): My question is directed to the Minister of Finance, who knows today should have been budget day. The Prime Minister's preoccupation with constitutional matters forced the budget to be delayed, delaying attention to our economic problems, Madam Speaker, even though in the period from 1968 to 1980 Canada's standard of living dropped from the third highest in the world to the thirteenth in the world.

● (1415)

The Minister of Finance, when last asked, could not even make up his mind on a budget date. I wonder whether the Minister of Finance could tell the House of Commons now when he will bring in a budget, whether or not it will be a final date, or whether the priorities of the Prime Minister will push the economy further into the background again.

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, it was my intention to have a budget on November 3. That date would have been respected had the premiers accepted the Prime Minister's invitation to meet on this very day.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. MacEachen: They had been asked to meet in Ottawa on this very day. I do not see them doing anything very much else this week. They could have been meeting in Ottawa. Instead, they chose next week, which made a budget date impossible.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. MacEachen: As the Prime Minister stated in the telegram to the premiers, their choice of next week necessitated a postponement of the budget for one week.

Some hon. Members: Why?

Mr. MacEachen: Because of comments which were made in the House with respect to Tuesday of that week, I have now decided that an appropriate date would be Thursday, November 12.

Miss MacDonald: What about Christmas Eve?

BASIS FOR PREPARATION OF BUDGET

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, most of us expect that the budget will be brought in on Christmas Eve, if at all.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark: Madam Speaker, it is very difficult to put questions with the Liberal party trying to howl down questioners in the House of Commons.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark: Let me ask the Minister of Finance, who is the past master in the House of Commons of people not doing anything, whether he is basing his budget on the premise that Canada is in a recession?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, it might have been better if the former Prime Minister had brought in his budget on Christmas Eve.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. MacEachen: I have no doubt that budget dates constitute a very painful memory for the Leader of the Opposition because the budget he brought down, through his minister of finance, as was stated by a distinguished journalist, destructed upon impact.

DROP IN ECONOMIC INDEXES

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, I am not sure whether the Minister of Finance heard the question. We know that he voted against the last true budget brought down in the House of Commons in December, 1979.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark: Does the Minister of Finance recognize and accept as true the facts that domestic automobile sales in the country are down as much as 80 per cent, that the demand for steel is soft and softening, that in September employment was down by 63,000 Canadian jobs on a seasonally-adjusted basis, that the forest products industry is in sharp decline, that housing starts are plummeting, that Canadians are being forced off their farms, that fish plants are being forced to close on the east coast, and that Canadians are in crises across the country? Does he accept those facts as describing the economic reality in Canada today? If so, whenever he brings in his budget, this three-times delayed budget, will it address those economic problems and face the economic crisis and the recession which are developing in the country today?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition reminded me that I voted against his budget.

Mr. Nielsen: Higher fuel prices.

Mr. MacEachen: I remind him that the Canadian people could not wait to get a chance to defeat it in an election campaign.

Some hon. Members: Try them now, Allan.

Mr. Nowlan: Try them now with your budget, and you will see that it is Friday the thirteenth.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. It looks as if we are off to a bad start.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Madam Speaker: I would appreciate not too much heckling.

• (1420)

Mr. MacEachen: I wonder who is howling down whom at the moment. Quite apart from all the erroneous premises stated by the Leader of the Opposition in his question, I should like to tell him that I intend to address the economic problems facing the country, in the budget. I was prepared to bring in the budget next week and would have been on schedule except for the premiers. I want to tell the Leader of the Opposition that I have been reading the speech that he gave in New York yesterday to the Centre for the Study of the Presidency, at Fordham University, and I do not find very much advice in it, I must say.

* * *

INCOME TAX

QUERY ON POSSIBLE INTRODUCTION OF PERSONAL TAX INCREASES

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Madam Speaker, I am tempted to ask the Minister of Finance whether there was a new tradition, or should we call it a new convention, of asking the premiers when we can have a budget in this House.

The Leader of the Opposition outlined a number of very difficult economic facts about the economy today. He has referred to the very difficult state of the economy. When there are 900,000 people unemployed, when we have 20 per cent plus interest rates which are three or four percentage points higher than in the United States, when we have had energy price increases of 50 per cent in the last year, which are purely and simply increased taxes to the federal government, does the Minister of Finance believe it is appropriate for him to bring in personal tax increases as he has been suggesting over the past few months?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I do not recollect making a suggestion that I intend to bring in personal tax increases. I do not recollect making any such statement. If the hon. member has a quotation to that effect, I would be glad to hear it. Certainly, quite apart from what might have been said in the past year with respect to a budget, I do not propose, in the very few days before such a budget, to begin to disclose the budget policies at this stage.

In the opening sentence of his question the hon. member advised me that I should not ask the premiers about a budget date. I would remind him that, when he was part of a government, it operated on the advice from premiers.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

THE ECONOMY

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MEET WITH PUBLIC GROUP ON NOVEMBER 21

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Madam Speaker, I am not asking the minister to disclose what is in his budget today, but since he has continued to delay the date of the budget, and since he did hold out in the month of June the possibility of personal tax increases, I am asking him today to ease the emotional stress on Canadians who are suffering such great hardship from the facts I outlined in my first question.

On November 21 there will be a large number of very angry Canadians in Ottawa who will want to meet with the minister to discuss the very difficult state of the economy. Will the minister commit to the House today that he will meet with this group of people, or will he slough them off to the minister in charge of housing, as he did with the convoy of anger in September, or avoid them as he did in the byelection in Spadina, when he left his friend, Jimmy Coutts, swinging in the breeze?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I have not received any such invitation to meet with a group coming to Ottawa on November 21. If I have an opportunity to present my budget before that date they will probably decide it is not necessary to come.

Mr. Clark: What do you mean "if"? Are you delaying again?

* * *

AGRICULTURE

EFFECT OF INTEREST RATES ON FARMERS—MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture. This morning's press reported Mr. Robert MacIntosh, president of The Canadian Bankers' Association, as making the incredible assertion that very few Canadian farmers are actually suffering because of high interest rates. Will the Minister of Agriculture now confirm that he has sent a document to the Minister of Finance describing the current prices in Canadian agriculture as being a direct result of high interest rates, and furthermore calling for an expansion of the farm interest subsidization scheme, in the same document? Will he first confirm that he has sent such a document; second, tell us what the response was; third, make that document available to all hon. members of the House?

● (1425)

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, consultation between myself and the Minister of Finance is so common that I would have to check all the documents and letters which are exchanged between ministers, but the hon. member knows that those are strictly confidential at this stage of the game in which we are involved. I would have to review those.

However, the hon. member makes mention of The Canadian Bankers' Association. We dispute the figures which Mr. MacIntosh has used. For instance, he said that I have only given ten cases to the association. Our records show that we have given it approximately 80 cases and have had very little response. Therefore, we go directly to the banks with which those people are dealing. I believe about 600 cases have been referred to us.

Also, if the hon. member wants to refer to an article in The Globe and Mail, a report has been put out by my department showing the forecasts and referring to bankruptcies in the agricultural community of Canada. Those are particularly farmers who have not involved themselves in some kind of a marketing organization, and are looking after themselves. Those who are in the red meat industry are the ones who are in the deepest difficulty of all.

Therefore I would say to the hon. member that I am sure he knows that I had many people in my office this morning, and my door is always open. If he wants to come in we can discuss what I think the problems are, so he can have the first hand information that is provided to me.

REQUEST FOR COMMITMENT ON BUDGET

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, the minister has taken some time to say that he flatly disagrees with the spokesperson for the banks. I want the minister to know that we, over on this side of the House, and all Canadian farmers, flatly disagree with the banks as well. But instead of just following what his colleague, the minister responsible for public housing has done in making nice admonitions about what the banks should be doing, is he now prepared to say to the House of Commons and, more particularly, to the farmers of Canada, that when that budget comes down there will be specific relief directed at the number one cause of their problems, namely, high interest rates? Will he now make that commitment in the House of Commons?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Again, the hon. leader of that party over there shows his ignorance of the farming industry by blanket covering the total farming industry. The total farming industry is not in financial difficulty. As I said—

Mr. Broadbent: I didn't say it was.

Mr. Whelan: —certain sectors are quite well off economically. They are not suffering at all. Some have some difficulties, and some have really rough difficulties. I have made my submission to the Minister of Finance. Both he and the Prime Minister have stated that those people in dire need will be looked after. I am talking about those people—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Whelan: —who really need assistance. I still say that under the Bank Act there is room for the banks to do some of the things that we are suggesting they should do and as the minister responsible for public housing has suggested. As early as April 27 I met The Canadian Bankers' Association and suggested some of those things to them. As far as Mr. MacIntosh of The Canadian Bankers' Association is concerned, I do not believe he represents the total banking industry because to the submissions that we made to him and his organization—

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Whelan: —they were not that responsive. We found more direct response from going to the banks concerned.

MINISTER'S REPORTED STATEMENT ON FUTURE COURSE OF ACTION

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, the minister knows, and the farmers who are directly affected know, that he has been responsible for raising the Farm Credit Corporation loan rate recently by some 3 per cent, and that has not helped farmers who are in difficulty one little bit.

I am well aware that some sectors of the farming community are not in difficulty, but the minister has been saying for weeks that, overwhelmingly, those who are in difficulty are there because of high interest rates. Because the minister has promised, not once but several times, and as recently as October 8, that he would resign unless something were done about bringing down high interest rates which affect farmers, will he now say in the House of Commons that, if we do not get effective programs on high interest rates as they affect farmers, he will give us his resignation?

• (1430)

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, the tape of that statement was made in a great little town that I am sure the hon. member knows.

An hon. Member: "Dire Straits."

Mr. Whelan: He pretends he is a labour leader. Their headquarters are near Port Elgin where many farmers are located. The tape clearly says something different from what he says I said.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Whelan: It depends on how one interprets things. I said that I would have to reconsider my position as Minister of Agriculture and staying on as Minister of Agriculture—that is clear as a bell on the tape—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Whelan: —if something was not done about bettering the marketing conditions of the farmers. That tape didn't say a word about interest rates.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

* * *

HAZARDOUS SUBSTANCES

UREA FORMALDEHYDE—REQUEST FOR RELIEF FOR HOME OWNERS

Mr. Geoff Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Madam Speaker, since July, 1980, both in committee and in this House, my colleague, the hon. member for Simcoe North, and I have been trying to get answers from the government on what it intends to do about the urea formaldehyde foam insulation mess. Now 100,000 home owners across Canada want answers. People who installed UFFI are today launching a write-in campaign to the Prime Minister and four cabinet ministers. I want to ask one of those ministers, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, what will be his response to a form of immediate relief for these people?

[Translation]

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, the hon. member knows very well that several months ago, the government announced a five-point program to help people who are facing this problem. Tests are being carried out throughout Canada, and as soon as the results are known, the owners of the homes tested will be informed of the UFFI content. Also, a review board is now holding public hearings in various Canadian cities. The board is acting under the Hazardous Products Act, according to which a company may appeal a decision by the government to ban this product, and a review board must be established to hear the case and to decide whether or not the product is hazardous. I have already informed the House that as soon as the board's work is completed, I shall publish the report, at which time decisions will be made based on the board's recommendations and findings.

[English]

COST OF REMOVAL FROM HOMES

Mr. Geoff Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Madam Speaker, I have a supplementary question. The minister knows as well as I do that whenever the review board makes its recommendations to the government and whenever the testing is finished, it will be some time well into next year. In the meantime hundreds of thousands of people are worried about what to do with the material, whether they should have it removed or whether they should reinsulate their homes. They cannot wait around.

Since the Quebec government tomorrow will officially approve an aid program through the Quebec consumer protection office, will the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs tell this House whether the federal government—because it was his government which got these people into the mess in the first place—will give immediate and favourable consideration to paying the cost of removing UFFI and restoring homes to their original condition?

[Translation]

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, I think that the hon. member, like many other Canadians, is mistaken when he says it is the Canadian government's fault that this product was used by home owners in the first place. What actually happened, as the hon. member should know, is that the product was approved by a body consisting of representatives from the public and private sectors. A group of 28 representatives approved the product, while setting certain specific conditions for its use. Now, if some contractors, who are licensed by the provinces, failed to instal this product properly, with unpleasant consequences for home owners, the blame lies first of all with the manufacturers of the product, second, with the contractors who did not instal it properly; and finally, much of the blame lies with the provinces which failed to set very specific standards when large numbers of contractors started getting into the home insulation business. If the Quebec government is indeed intending to set up a program to help home owners, I must say I am very pleased, and I hope other provinces will do the same, because at the last conference of consumer affairs ministers, I asked the provinces, through their ministers, to shoulder their responsibilities in this respect.

* * *

[English]

THE DISABLED AND THE HANDICAPPED

IMPLEMENTATION OF COMMITTEE'S RECOMMENDATIONS

Mr. Bruce Halliday (Oxford): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. The insert, entitled "Only a Beginning", which was included with the last mailing of family allowance and old age security cheques, dealt with government initiatives pursuant to the recommendations contained in the report entitled "Obstacles", which was the report of the Special Committee on the Disabled and the Handicapped. The insert reads:

> To date some 56 of the recommendations have been put into effect.

Will the minister table this up to now secret list?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Madam Speaker, there is no need for me to say that the member is being dramatic about the situation, something which is unwarranted. In the insert there is a reference to the fact that action has already started on 56 of the recommendations in the very good report called "Obstacles", of the House of Commons Special Committee on the Disabled and the Handicapped. I have just heard that there seems to be no official record of specifically which ones.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss Bégin: However, I could probably table them tomorrow. I will make sure it is only a short space of time before this is done. For example, of the 56 recommendations, recommendation number 19 speaks of the affirmative action program for the employment of the handicapped, which I believe my colleague passed last January or February, and so on, with respect to public access to federal government buildings. I will table this as soon as possible.

POLICY ON DISCLOSURE OF CABINET DECISIONS

Mr. Bruce Halliday (Oxford): Madam Speaker, is it the policy of the minister, in view of the fact that members have already been asked what these 56 initiatives are, to distribute at taxpayers' expense decisions which have not yet been approved by cabinet or given to members of the House of Commons?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Madam Speaker, the hon. member is making a drama of something that is not. May I repeat to the hon. member that the report entitled "Obstacles" has been, as usual, processed through what is called an interdepartmental committee because all federal departments and agencies are concerned with its implementation. For the sake of practical purposes, I was asked to co-ordinate that. This has gone through our usual government process. As I said, the list will be tabled as soon as possible.

DATES FOR IMPLEMENTATION OF DECISIONS

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Madam Speaker, my question is also for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. The pamphlet to which the hon. member for Oxford referred does not mention the minister or the cabinet contemplating the introduction of those recommendations. What the document refers to is the cabinet having put into effect 56 of the recommendations found in the report entitled "Obstacles". Will the minister tell the House now whether those decisions have been approved by cabinet, and will she tell us when they will take effect, rather than giving us the speculation she gave in her previous answer?

[Translation]

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Madam Speaker, I shall repeat what I just said. I assume the member was getting ready to ask his question and then felt he could not remain seated, because it seems to me my answer was quite clear. The insert with the October family allowance cheques, which was received today or will be within the next few days, mentions the report's 56 recommendations that are about to be implemented. Obviously, it is due to some lack of communication that the list was not tabled in the House. I was informed of this before entering the House, and I told the hon. member that I would table the list tomorrow, if possible.

● (1440)

[English]

CABINET APPROVAL

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the minister. Will the minister simply advise the House whether those 56 recommendations have been approved by cabinet, yes or no?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): No, I will not answer that, Madam Speaker.

* * *

IMMIGRATION

ADMISSION OF POLISH REFUGEES—RESULTS OF MINISTER'S CONSULTATIONS

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parkdale-High Park): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. This past weekend the Polish Alliance of Canada at its thirtieth biannual convention in Toronto raised the question of what the federal government is doing to help Canadians bring over relatives and non-relatives from Poland to Canada. Over a week ago the minister promised to report to this House the results of his consultations with the Canadian Polish Congress and other community groups regarding additional measures to respond to the increasingly serious situation affecting the Polish people. Is the minister prepared to report on the results of his consultations, and to make a statement on this important issue?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, to begin with I would like to thank the hon. member for Parkdale-High Park, as well as other members of this House who, through the special parliamentary committee on the situation in Poland, have been very helpful to me in organizing discussions with members of the Polish community. Those discussions pointed out that the major concern of Polish Canadians was the fact that many of their relatives, faced with very serious uncertainty in Poland, have only the recourse of coming out as visitors or under the self-exile refugee class. Taking this into account, Madam Speaker, we are prepared to initiate a series of special measures designed to help the relatives and families of those in Poland. To begin with, we would be encouraging the people coming out of Poland who have families here prepared to sponsor them, to apply as landed immigrants rather than as visitors, and we are going to ask our officials to relax the criteria for that selection.

Second, for those who are already here as visitors from Poland, we will land them immediately in Canada. For those who do not have families here we will grant them minister's permits for a year, and review the situation and the situation in Poland. I believe these measures respond effectively to the concerns that were raised and they are very much in the tradition of this parliament and this government in responding to special circumstances, particularly as they relate to families.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

FISHERIES

EFFECT OF HADDOCK QUOTAS ON INSHORE FISHERMEN IN NOVA SCOTIA

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Madam Speaker, I wish to direct my question to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. The mayor and council of Lockeport and Shelburne, Nova Scotia, have indicated their concern, by telegram to me on behalf of the fishermen of Shelburne County who do not understand and who are not adequately informed by the department about government fisheries conservation policies and how they work. I therefore wish to ask the minister, in view of the impact which the new restrictive quotas on haddock will have on the inshore fishermen and the unemployed in Nova Scotia, will he immediately postpone any further action on this issue until discussions can be held with Nova Scotia's fisheries associations to clarify the matter?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, the consultations before such decisions are made are usually exhaustive. It may be in this area of the fisheries that there are fragmented groups and it is rather difficult to get full consensus, but certainly my policy has been very clear. There are exhaustive consultations before decisions are made.

REQUEST FOR REVIEW OF QUOTAS

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. There is a genuine fear and concern, as the minister well knows, among Nova Scotia fishermen that haddock quota restrictions are based on inadequate scientific research. I would, therefore, ask the minister, since the over-all fishery could be improved, if the government considered a review of the size limit, gear restrictions as they apply to mesh sizes, and closed areas for spawning purposes on Georges Bank, hopefully with consultation with the Americans, so that this plan would be effective, and will he consider a haddock by catch allowance and, if not, what species in his directed fishery will be made available in order to allow the large inshore fishery, which represents something like 90 per cent of the fleet in the area, to continue its operations?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, I will study the hon. member's representations very carefully.

VIA RAIL

COURT ACTIONS SEEKING INJUNCTION TO HALT CANCELLATION OF SERVICES

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport who yesterday stated he would delay the imposition of his cutbacks in VIA Rail if a court decided an injunction was in order. As the minister now knows, an action has been filed by a group in Saskatchewan; a group in Alberta is contemplating action with respect to VIA Rail, and another group in Ontario is likely to file its proceedings sometime later this month, as will possibly a group in New Brunswick. Having acknowledged that he will obey the law if an injunction is issued by one of these courts, will the minister at least facilitate the court actions by having a proper reference to the appropriate court in order to have this matter settled once and for all; that is, does he have the legal right to do what he intends to do on November 15?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I do not know exactly what the hon. member has in mind. I consulted with my lawyers this morning and they were trying to find more information about the way the legal action was taking place. I am going to wait until I have received their report, maybe a little later this afternoon, to see what I can do.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER GIVE FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE TO GROUPS TAKING COURT ACTION

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, I have the statement of claim that was filed with respect to the Saskatchewan action and it very clearly claims that the order in council the minister is relying on is invalid and a nullity, and the fact that it has not been registered as is required by the Statutory Instruments Act makes it of no force and effect.

Would the minister indicate, if he is not willing to facilitate the concern and the court actions to which I have already referred, that he will at least meet half way the groups that are concerned, by undertaking to give them some financing to further their actions, and second, delay until the courts have a decent time to adjudicate this matter of the final imposition of his VIA cutback as he contemplates it?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I think my friend is sufficiently aware of how these things are done to know that very, very careful reading of the law and opinions of the Justice Department are asked for before action is taken. Last night during the debate I specifically put on the record Section 64 of the National Transportation Act, for those who had not read it yet. A reading of the law itself and of all the interpretations I have seen, and I have checked even on decisions of the Supreme Court, which is usually useful in these matters, indicates that there is no limitation to the action the government can take in this matter. There is no way I can infer, imply or intimate that I am not sure of the grounds we have used. It seems to me it is the responsibility of those who have taken the action to justify it. I was reading an interview with one of them this morning and he just said he thought he had a good case. I have never heard a lawyer who did not say that.

RATIONALE BEHIND GOVERNMENT'S POLICY

Hon. George Hees (Northumberland): Madam Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Prime Minister. Will he outline to the House the rationale behind his government's policy of being willing to spend a very great deal of the taxpayers' money in upgrading fast passenger rail service between the four cities of Quebec, Montreal, Toronto and Windsor, all of which already have a great deal of fast airline service to serve those who wish to travel quickly between those important centres, while at the same time denying to a great many centres in western Canada, Atlantic Canada and Ontario, passenger rail service which they rely on very heavily throughout their daily lives?

● (1450)

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the rationale is that there is a limit to the absolute number of dollars a government can expend to take up the deficit. We now know from the Minister of Transport that the deficit is approximately half a billion dollars. As the minister pointed out, that is a lot of money. We are trying to reduce that kind of spending.

The hon. member made the point that a lot of people rely on these services. I think he has given the answer to the question. When many people do rely on and use the services, for example, between the cities he mentioned, it becomes economically possible to have that kind of service. In cases where people do not use the service in great number—

An hon. Member: They do.

Mr. Trudeau: —it becomes economically difficult to subsidize it forever.

An hon. Member: What about Mirabel?

Mr. Trudeau: I was looking at the figures—

An hon. Member: How about Mirabel?

Mr. Trudeau: —on transcontinental travel. It appears that for every ticket of $50 paid to move from the Atlantic coast to central Canada—

An hon. Member: It is $100 at Mirabel.

Mr. Trudeau: —the taxpayer has to pay $150. In other words, the taxpayer subsidizes each ticket by paying three times as much as the traveller does.

An hon. Member: Mirabel is $100.

Mr. Trudeau: If you examine the figures for the service from the west coast, it is almost as great. For every dollar paid by the traveller, the taxpayer pays $2.

An hon. Member: How about Mirabel?

Mr. Trudeau: That is the rationale, Madam Speaker. People are not using the railways—

An hon. Member: It is the same as the airlines.

Mr. Trudeau: —as they did 100, 50 or 25 years ago. That was the statement made so ably by the Minister of Transport yesterday.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

QUERY RESPECTING GOVERNMENT POLICY

Hon. George Hees (Northumberland): The procedure followed recently by the former Board of Transport Commissioners was to meet and allow a hearing before affected passengers in any part of the country where there was a threatened or proposed discontinuation of passenger rail service. The Board listened to the people concerned and, if they put forth suggestions which the Board considered reasonable, the railways were required to put those suggestions into effect to see if that would bring the revenue up to the required amount. That has all been done away with now.

I therefore ask the Prime Minister if his government's policy in this regard could not best be described as one which says that "if you are a large city with a large preponderance of Liberal members within your borders, nothing is too great, too much to ask for, or receive? If you are not, just forget it. Go to hell."

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, it seems to me the hon. member has spoiled the seriousness of his question by the ending he put to it. He asked me for a rationale, and I gave him one. If he disagrees with that rationale, I wish he would state it. I think he would be the first to realize that there is a limit to the amount of deficit spending a government can envisage on a service which is losing more and more money every year.

An hon. Member: What about Mirabel?

Mr. Trudeau: Surely there has to be in government—

An hon. Member: What about Mirabel?

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker, if they want to ask questions about Mirabel I take it you will recognize supplementary questions. I am dealing with one question at a time as is my wont, Madam Speaker.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An hon. Member: Testy!

FISHERIES

REQUEST FOR REVIEW OF REGULATIONS GOVERNING BRITISH COLUMBIA SALMON CATCHES

Mr. Ted Miller (Nanaimo-Alberni): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. A review of the 1981 fisheries season in British Columbia indicated a marked improvement in the net-caught species while the troll-caught species, chinook and cohoe salmon, were below average.

In view of the fact that the troll fleet has come under very severe regulations which reduced its season, with catches below average, would the minister now have his department assess those regulations after the season, and also review the complaints of many people in the sports fishing industry and troll fishing industry that the same fleet in particular is catching a lot of juvenile stocks and is depleting the juvenile stocks which are in particular difficulty in British Columbia? Would the minister review the regulations and the approach to the same fishery for juvenile chinook?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, I thank the hon. member for recognizing that this has been a reasonably good season. In fact it was quite good in some areas. Conservation measures we took for chinook and cohoe were fully justified. We may quibble over whether or not the share that some particular group took was reasonable. That will be reviewed before the next season.

I certainly thank the hon. member for the support which was contained in his opening statement.

SALMON ENHANCEMENT PROGRAM

Mr. Ted Miller (Nanaimo-Alberni): Madam Speaker, this indicates there is some danger in giving credit to any minister for improvement which may generally be an improvement of the year's catch. I think we can safely say we are pleased for the net fishermen that they did have a good season considering the difficulty they had last year.

In view of the importance of the sports fishing industry and the troll industry in British Columbia, the importance of chinook and cohoes to those two industries, and realizing there is some real danger in the stock depletion of both those species, would the minister consider beefing up the salmon enhancement program and budget, to direct a lot more attention to the chinook and cohoe to protect the sports and troll fishing industries in British Columbia?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, I think the hon. member's suggestion is a very good one. As he knows, the salmon enhancement program is not directed on a day to day basis by the minister or by the department, but by a board which has representatives from all segments of the industry. They set the priorities. I do not take issue with that procedure, and I will make sure the hon. member's representations are transmitted to the board.

THE ENVIRONMENT

INCREASED GRANTS FOR CONSTRUCTION OF MUNICIPAL SEWAGE TREATMENT SYSTEMS

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of the Environment. In view of the minister's announcement today of increased assistance to municipalities in Ontario for sewage treatment systems under the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement, for which I commend him, and in view of the high interest charges which will be incurred by municipalities in financing these projects during the course of construction, will the minister consider paying these grants to the communities, during the course of construction, rather than at the end of construction, thus avoiding very high interest charges?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of the Environment and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Madam Speaker, I thank the hon. member for his commendation. I know there are many members in the House who are interested in the increased grants which we announced this morning of another $65 million, which brings the expenditure by the federal government—

An hon. Member: It replaces the ones you cancelled.

Mr. Roberts: —in assisting in cleaning up municipal pollution to well over $600 million in the past decade. The final stages of this agreement are still being negotiated with the province of Ontario. We made the announcement this morning to give concerned municipalities sufficient time to take advantage of these benefits. I would be anxious, in whatever final arrangements we make, to assist municipalities that are hard-pressed, to meet their costs as efficaciously as possible. I will take the hon. member's suggestion and discuss it with my provincial colleague.

* * *

VIA RAIL

LEGALITY OF ORDER IN COUNCIL CANCELLING PASSENGER SERVICES

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, my question is supplemental to the one asked by my colleague from York-Peel. Is the Minister of Transport aware of the decision rendered by Mr. G. C. Eglington, counsel to the Standing Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments, to the effect that the order in council eliminating 19 per cent of passenger rail service in this country, and I quote Mr. Eglington:

> —has never been registered at all, as a regulation, and certainly not within seven days of its making pursuant to Section 5 of that act. Never having been registered, it has not come into force and is, therefore, of no effect.

Is the minister aware of that ruling by a recognized legal expert, the counsel to a distinguished committee of the House of Commons and the other place? In light of the apparent fact that his order in council is illegal will he not now agree to do two things; one, delay the effective date of abandonment of passenger rail service in this country and, two, make a reference to the appropriate court?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1500)

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I am not aware, and I will attend to the matter immediately.

* * *

PETITIONS

TABLING OF REPORT OF CLERK OF PETITIONS

Madam Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the Clerk of the House has laid upon the Table the report of the Clerk of Petitions stating that he has examined the petitions presented by hon. members on Monday, October 26, 1981, and finds that they meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

* * *

PRIVILEGE

MR. YOUNG—DISTRIBUTION OF PAMPHLET ON DISABLED AND HANDICAPPED

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Madam Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. It arises from answers I received to my questions to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Miss Bégin) during question period concerning the pamphlet "Only a Beginning" and the information contained therein. Because of the information that is contained in this pamphlet, my phone has been ringing off the hook, as have those of other members of the Special Committee on the Disabled and the Handicapped, people asking us to provide them with information on the 56 recommendations which the minister's department has claimed to have placed into effect.

I feel that my privileges as a member of this House and as a member of the Special Committee on the Disabled and the Handicapped have been violated by those actions of the minister, who has with deception misled two million disabled Canadians and their families by raising high expectations about what the government—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I have to call the hon. member to order. He might have a grievance. He might feel he would have been better off if he had been informed prior to the minister sending this information through the mail to some of his constituents. The fact that constituents are telephoning him and asking him for supplementary information, which information I gather he may obtain in one way or another—and if he does experience difficulties in this respect I can sympathize with him—I am afraid does not constitute a question of privilege.

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): On the same question of privilege, Madam Speaker, with respect, I am not sure that the point was clearly understood. It was not a request for information. The minister got to her feet today and acknowledged that cabinet has not approved what she said was the case.

Madam Speaker: Order. That is a matter for debate. The ruling I just made will stand.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

PETITIONS

MISS MacDONALD—EFFECTS OF HIGH INTEREST RATES ON HOME OWNERS

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): Madam Speaker, in addition to the 768 names of residents of Kingston and the Islands, home owners who are suffering from the high mortgage interest rate policy of the government, I would like to present a petition of an additional 87 names of residents of Kingston and the Islands who are seeking relief from the government's high interest rate policy and who are facing foreclosures and loss of their homes.

MR. HOWIE—VIA RAIL—CUTBACKS IN PASSENGER SERVICE

Hon. J. Robert Howie (York-Sunbury): Madam Speaker, I ask leave to present a petition signed by 850 people from Plaster Rock, New Brunswick, requesting the government to retain VIA Rail passenger train service and the CN station at Plaster Rock. The petition assumes an added urgency with only 19 days left before the government's cruel termination decision takes effect.

MR. CORBETT—EFFECTS OF HIGH INTEREST RATES ON HOME OWNERS

Mr. Bob Corbett (Fundy-Royal): Madam Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition signed by 1,000 home owners in the Kennebecasis Valley region of my constituency of Fundy-Royal who are thunderstruck at the indifference that is expressed by this government to the fact that these people may be in the position of losing their homes.

MR. LEWIS—EFFECTS OF HIGH INTEREST RATES ON HOME OWNERS

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, I ask leave to present a petition from home owners in Orillia, Ontario, in the riding of Simcoe North who believe that the current high mortgage interest rates are unjust and that no Canadian family should be forced out of their home. This petition contains some 3,354 names of people calling on the government to ease the burden being placed upon Canadian home owners by the present Liberal government.

MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER S.O. 26

[English]

VIA RAIL

DECISION TO CURTAIL USE OF PASSENGER CARS

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Madam Speaker, I gave notice, I believe in the appropriate time, requesting that you accept a motion, seconded by the hon. member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis), to move the adjournment of the House pursuant to Standing Order 26 for the purpose of debating a specific and important matter requiring urgent and immediate consideration, namely, the decision of VIA Rail with regard to the scrapping of railway passenger cars which would make it impossible to restore passenger rail service under order in council P.C. 1981-2171 should it be found to be illegal as a result of legal action started in Winnipeg, October 23, all of which makes it urgent that we have an immediate debate on the matter.

Madam Speaker: The hon. member is aware that on October 14 last I rejected a request for an emergency debate on a related subject to the one the hon. member is now proposing to discuss. I suggested to the House that other avenues could be sought to raise this subject matter. May I remind the hon. member that Standing Order 26(5) provides that, in determining whether a matter should have urgent consideration, the Speaker shall have regard to the probability of the matter being brought before the House within reasonable time by other means.

Need I remind the hon. member that on Tuesday last the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) moved a motion under our supply procedures on the subject matter of VIA Rail, that the House discussed that motion and a decision was taken at the end of the sitting. Only yesterday the question of VIA Rail was again discussed in the House under a motion to concur in a committee report.

For all of these reasons, I regret that I cannot accept the hon. member's application.

Mr. Thomas Siddon (Richmond-South Delta): Madam Speaker, on a point of order. I know it is not appropriate to contest your ruling on this matter, but this is not a general question regarding VIA Rail. As the hon. member suggested, it has to do with the scrapping of cars.

Madam Speaker: Order.

Mr. Siddon: This cannot be rescinded later on.

Madam Speaker: That aspect was considered in the ruling I just made.

* * *

[Translation]

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 2,399, 2,410, 2,433, 2,459, 2,658, 2,661, 2,696, 2,750 and 2,753.

[Text]

POSTAL SERVICE IN MANITOBA

Question No. 2,399—Mr. Lewycky:

What is the (a) number and rank of postal positions (b) type of postal service in (i) Boggy Creek (ii) Cowan (iii) Dropmore (iv) Eddystone (v) Kinosota (vi) Renwer (vii) Shellmouth (viii) Silver Ridge (ix) Waterhen in the province of Manitoba?

Mr. Gary F. McCauley (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs):

(a) All the post offices listed hereunder are group offices and are classified according to the workload and vary in group from one to 12. The Postmaster is the only post office employee.

(i)	Group 1
(ii)	Group 3
(iii)	Group 2
(iv)	Group 1
(v)	Group 1
(vi)	Group 2
(vii)	Group 1
(viii)	Group 2
(ix)	Group 3

(b) All of the above offices offer a counter service which is a general term describing all services provided to the public at post office counters. In addition, some of these offer a lock box service.

AGRICULTURE CANADA

Question No. 2,410—Mr. Malone:

1. How many persons who held the position of deputy minister, assistant deputy minister or branch head in the Department of Agriculture were (a) born in (b) lived for a period exceeding five years in one of the four western provinces?

2. (a) What is the number of persons at the executive level in the department (b) what are the names of employees at the top three levels in the department's administration who were born or lived for a period of time exceeding five years in western Canada?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Agriculture Canada's mandate and programs concern agriculture in all parts of Canada and personnel are recruited on the basis of professional background and competence, not geographical origin. The number of persons at the executive level in the department is 14. Provision by the government of the personal details concerning these individuals requested in this question would be contrary to the spirit of the Canadian Human Rights Act.

RADIATION LEVELS

Question No. 2,433—Mr. Blaikie:

Did the Department of National Health and Welfare conduct studies on the effects of radiation and, if so (a) what were the names and who were the authors of the studies (b) did the studies show that amounts of radiation similar to the amounts that will be produced by the Uranium Trioxide Refinery at Blind River actually will increase the number of cancer deaths in the area and, if so, how many studies showed this?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare):

(a) Yes. The department has conducted one study on the health effects of ionizing radiation on populations exposed to low levels. This was a study by E. G. Létourneau and D. T. Wigle entitled "Mortality and Indoor Radon Daughter Concentrations in 13 Canadian Cities", and was presented to a specialist meeting in March, 1980, in Rome, Italy. With the Ontario ministry of health, the department is sponsoring a "Study of the Health Effects (particularly in respect to cancer) of Low-level Exposure to Environmental Radiation Contamination in Port Hope, Ontario". This research will be conducted by the health research unit, department of community health and epidemiology, Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario.

(b) No. The study by Wigle and Létourneau showed no evidence of any substantial association between general or lung cancer mortality rates and indoor radon daughter concentrations.

The second study is not yet complete.

Studies of the effects of high background radiation on populations have repeatedly shown no deleterious effects. For example, Denver, Colorado has approximately double the background radiation (164 Mrem/y) than many places in the U.S. and yet the total cancer rate is lower than the 15 compared U.S. cities. (Health Physics Vol. 40 (May) p. 628, 1981).

Genetic studies in areas of high natural radioactivity in Brazil (Health Physics, Vol. 34 (January) p. 61-65, 1978) demonstrated no significant association between the level of radiation and the number of stillbirths, live births, congenital abnormalities and other parameters. This paper also illustrates the difficulty of performing acceptable epidemiological studies, as other factors may have a much greater influence on the data and hide the effects of radiation.

A study of radiation workers by Mancuso, Stewart and Kneale (Health Physics Vol. 33 (November) p. 369, 1977) purported to show a significant increase in deaths attributed to radiation-induced cancers. This work has been severely criticized for statistical shortcomings by many competent experts, and cannot be accepted at face value. (Health Physics Vol. 37) (August) p. 207-220, 1979). It should be remembered that the doses considered in occupational exposure are many times greater than the background at any site in Canada.

The United States Committee on the Biological Effects of Ionizing Radiations (BEIR III) has published a large volume entitled "The Effects on Populations of Exposure to Low Levels of Ionizing Radiations". On p. 34 the authors state: "We lack adequate information on the effects of low radiation doses in human populations, and in this regard we still depend on concepts that have been developed on the basis of experimental studies". In 1977, the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation (UNSCEAR) published its equally large volume entitled "Sources and Effects of Ionizing Radiation". On p. 4 (para. 11) the authors state: "Both for somatic and for genetic effects, it is important to estimate the likely frequency with which harmful effects may follow the low doses of radiation to which people may be exposed from fallout from nuclear explosions, from radioactive consumer products, from many medical uses of radiation and from the environmental or occupational exposures involved in power production from nuclear sources, as well as from natural sources and from human activities resulting in enhanced exposures to natural sources, as discussed below. In most cases, however, the available evidence as to the frequency with which harmful effects are induced by radiation is only obtained following exposure to substantially higher radiation doses".

In summary, it can be said that there is no evidence in the world literature that the minuscule increments in dose predicted at Blind River will have any deleterious effect on the health of the populations.

POSTAL SERVICE IN MANITOBA

Question No. 2,459—Mr. Lewycky:

What is the (a) number and rank of postal positions (b) type of postal service in (i) Alonsa (ii) Amaranth (iii) Arden (iv) Ashville (v) Barrows (vi) Benito (vii) Birch River (viii) Bowsman (ix) Camperville (x) Cayer (xi) Crane River (xii) Duck Bay (xiii) Durban (xiv) Ebb and Flow (xv) Ethelbert (xvi) Fork River (xvii) Garland (xviii) Gilbert Plains (xix) Glenella (xx) Grandview (xxi) Inglis (xxii) Kenville (xxiii) Lakeland (xxiv) Langruth (xxv) Laurier (xxvi) Lenswood (xxvii) Mafeking (xxviii) Makinak (xxix) Marius (xxx) McCreary (xxxi) Meadow Portage (xxxii) Minitonas (xxxiii) National Mills (xxxiv) Oak Brae (xxxv) Ochre River (xxxvi) Ogilvie (xxxvii) Pelican Rapids (xxxviii) Pine River (xxxix) Plumas (xl) Roblin (xli) Rorketon (xlii) San Clara (xliii) Shortdale (xliv) Sifton (xlv) Skownan (xlvi) Ste. Rose du Lac (xlvii) Swan River (xlviii) Toutes Aides (xlix) Valley River (l) Waldersee (li) Westgate (lii) Winnipegosis in the province of Manitoba?

Mr. Gary F. McCauley (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs):

(a) With the exception of Swan River, all the offices listed hereunder are group and grade offices and are classified according to the workload and vary in group from one to twelve and grade from one to six. Swan River is a staff post office and staff post offices are classified according to the workload and other standards, and vary in grade from seven to thirteen. But even if Swan River is classified as a grade seven post office, it is the only office in the following list where employees are classified differently.

	Number		Rank
(i)	1		Postmaster	Group 4
(ii)	2		Postmaster	Grade 1
			Part time assistant
(iii)	1		Postmaster	Group 4
(iv)	1		Postmaster	Group 5*
(v)	1		Postmaster	Group 3
(vi)	3		Postmaster	Grade 4*
		(2)	Part time assistants
(vii)	2		Postmaster	Grade 3
			Part time assistant
(viii)	3		Postmaster	Grade 3*
		(2)	Part time assistants
(ix)	1		Postmaster	Group 4
(x)	1		Postmaster	Group 1
(xi)	1		Postmaster	Group 3
(xii)	1		Postmaster	Group 4
(xiii)	1		Postmaster	Group 4*
(xiv)	1		Postmaster	Group 2
(xv)	3		Postmaster	Grade 3*
		(2)	Part time assistants
(xvi)	1		Postmaster	Group 5
(xvii)	1		Postmaster	Group 3
(xviii)	3		Postmaster	Grade 4*
			Assistant
			Part time assistant
(xix)	2		Postmaster	Grade 1*
			Part time assistant
(xx)	3		Postmaster	Grade 5*
			Assistant
			Part time assistant
(xxi)	2		Postmaster	Grade 1*
			Part time assistant
(xxii)	1		Postmaster	Group 4*
(xxiii)	1		Postmaster	Group 1
(xxiv)	1		Postmaster	Group 5
(xxv)	1		Postmaster	Group 4
(xxvi)	1		Postmaster	Group 2
(xxvii)	1		Postmaster	Group 4
(xxviii)	1		Postmaster	Group 3*
(xxix)	1		Postmaster	Group 3
(xxx)	3		Postmaster	Grade 4
		(2)	Part time assistants
(xxxi)	1		Postmaster	Group 1
(xxxii)	2		Postmaster	Grade 4
			Assistant
(xxxiii)	1		Postmaster	Group 1
(xxxiv)	1		Postmaster	Group 1
(xxxv)	1		Postmaster	Group 4*
(xxxvi)	1		Postmaster	Group 1
(xxxvii)	1		Postmaster	Group 2
(xxxviii)	2		Postmaster	Grade 2
			Part time assistant
(xxxix)	2		Postmaster	Grade 2
			Part time assistant
(xl)	5		Postmaster	Grade 6*
		(2)	Assistants
		(2)	Part time assistants
(xli)	2		Postmaster	Grade 2
			Part time assistant
(xlii)	1		Postmaster	Group 2
(xliii)	1		Postmaster	Group 2*
(xliv)	2		Postmaster	Grade 1*
			Part time assistant
(xlv)	1		Postmaster	Group 2
(xlvi)	4		Postmaster	Grade 5*
		(1)	Assistant
		(2)	Part time assistants
(xlvii)	6		Postmaster (PL 1)	Grade 7*
		(4)	Full time postal clerks (PO 4)
		(1)	Part time postal clerk (PO 4)

(xlviii)	1		Postmaster	Group 2
(xlix)	1		Postmaster	Group 2
(l)	1		Postmaster	Group 3*
(li)	1		Postmaster	Group 1
(lii)	3		Postmaster	Grade 4*
		(2)	Part time assistants

(b) All of the above offices offer a counter service which is a general term describing all services provided to the public at post office counters. In addition, some of these offer a lock box service. Where indicated by an asterisk in part (a) above, there is also rural route service.

AUTOMATION OF LIGHTHOUSES

Question No. 2,658—Mr. de Jong:

1. From January 1, 1965 to January 1, 1980, by year, what was the total capital cost of automating lighthouse functions on the (a) west coast (b) east coast?

2. For the same period, which lighthouses were replaced by automated equipment and on what date for the (a) west coast (b) east coast?

3. For the same period, by year, on how many days were the automated facilities not operating on the (a) west coast (b) east coast?

4. For the same period, by year, how many Sperry-Rand videograph fog detection systems were (a) installed at (b) purchased for the (i) west coast (ii) east coast?

5. For the same period, by year, what was the total capital cost of the Sperry-Rand videograph for the (a) west coast (b) east coast?

6. For the same period, by year, what was the manpower complement for the actual operation of the manual lighthouse on the (a) west coast (b) east coast?

7. For the same period, by year, what was the increase in the number of man-years for servicing the manual lighthouse and the automated lighthouse for the (a) west coast (b) east coast?

Mr. Robert Bockstael (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): 1 to 7, see below. The information prior to fiscal year 1970-71 is not available.

1 and 5.

(amounts in thousands of dollars)

		70-71	71-72	72-73	73-74	74-75	75-76	76-77	77-78	78-79	79-80
1. (a)	West coast	$ 902	310	796	238	111	438	649	101
(b)	East coast	$3,624	930	1,622	459	1,181	451	131
3. (a)	West coast		0	0.5	0	0	.25	0	.75	0
(b)	East coast		4.3	10.71	3.25	22.5	2.42	6.88	5.54	0.54
4. (a)	Installed
	West coast	2	1	9	7	4	2	3	5	2
	East coast	10	52	43	33	16	6	9	3	1	1
(b)	Purchased
	West coast	48				1
	East coast	175				22
5. (a)	West coast	$228				5
	East coast	$831				99
6. (a)	West coast	105	105	101	101	93	93	93	93	93	89
(b)	East coast	480	448	397	397	411*	411	409	399	389	349
7. (a)	West coast							2	4	0	3
(b)	East coast						3	6	7	3	7

*Increase due to LI collective agreement

2. (a) West coast

None.

(b) East coast

(i) In Maritimes region

Georges Island	1972
Eddy Point	1977
Sydney South Bar	1978
Carters Island	1979
Jerseyman Island	1979
Sandy Point	1980
Chebucto Head	1980
Point Lepreau	1980

(ii) In Laurentian region

Cap de Gaspé	1971
Cap de Rabast	1971
Pointe ouest	1971
Les Iles aux Perroquets	1971
Ile Plate	1971
Récif de l'Ile Blanche	1972
Pointe Heath	1972

GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT

Question No. 2,661—Mr. Gilchrist:

1. For each year 1970 to 1980, what percentage of the gross national product was spent on research and development?

2. For the years 1970 to 1980, what was the trend as a percentage of the GNP?

3. In each year 1970 to 1980, what was the rate of inflation?

4. In each year 1970 to 1980, what was the value of the Canadian dollar against the currency of the United States, Great Britain, West Germany, Japan, Sweden, Italy and Switzerland?

5. In each year 1970 to 1980, what was the rate of unemployment?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Minister of Supply and Services): For the years 1970 to 1980: 1. The percentage of the gross national product spent on research and development is shown in Table I.

2. The trends in research and development expenditures as a percentage of the GNP is also shown in Table I.

3. The rate of inflation, as measured by the consumer price index is shown in Table II.

Order Paper Questions

4. The value of the Canadian dollar against the currencies of the United States, Great Britain, West Germany, Japan, Sweden, Italy and Switzerland is shown in Table III.

5. The rate of unemployment is shown in Table IV.

Table I

Total R&D and trend as a percentage of GNP

	Total R&D Expenditures	GNP ($millions)	R&D Expenditures as a per cent of GNP
1970	1,061	85,685	1.24
1971	1,157	94,450	1.22
1972	1,184	105,234	1.13
1973	1,266	123,560	1.02
1974	1,485	147,528	1.01
1975	1,663	165,343	1.01
1976	1,798	191,031	0.94
1977	2,009	208,868	0.96
1978	2,328	230,353	1.01
1979	2,500	261,961	0.95
1980	2,737	289,859	0.94

Table II

Rate of inflation as measured by the consumer price index per cent change in the CPI

1970	3.29
1971	2.88
1972	4.80
1973	7.54
1974	10.91
1975	10.80
1976	7.51
1977	7.99
1978	8.96
1979	9.13
1980	10.15

Table III

Value of Canadian dollar against other currencies

	U.S. Dollar	British Pound	German Mark	Swiss Franc	Japanese Yen	Swedish Krona	Italian Lire
	Canadian dollars per unit-Average of noon spot rates
1970	1.0440	2.5016	0.2863	0.2422	0.002916	0.2014	0.001665
1971	1.0098	2.4687	0.2900	0.2456	0.002912	0.1979	0.001634
1972	0.9905	2.4797	0.3108	0.2594	0.003270	0.2083	0.001698
1973	1.0001	2.4533	0.3782	0.3175	0.003696	0.2301	0.001720
1974	0.9780	2.2884	0.3785	0.3295	0.003354	0.2206	0.001504
1975	1.0173	2.2594	0.4144	0.3942	0.003430	0.2456	0.001560
1976	0.9861	1.7811	0.3920	0.3947	0.003327	0.2265	0.001190
1977	1.0635	1.8571	0.4586	0.4444	0.003980	0.2378	0.001205
1978	1.1402	2.1890	0.5691	0.6432	0.005480	0.2527	0.001345
1979	1.1715	2.4855	0.6394	0.7046	0.005375	0.2743	0.001410
1980	1.1690	2.7196	0.6444	0.6986	0.005183	0.2765	0.001368

Table IV

Annual Unemployment Rate

	Unemployment Rate
1970	5.7
1971	6.2
1972	6.2
1973	5.5
1974	5.3
1975	6.9
1976	7.1
1977	8.1
1978	8.4
1979	7.5
1980	7.5

MIRABEL AIRPORT

Question No. 2,696—Mr. Robinson (Etobicoke-Lakeshore):

What amount does the government spend each year to maintain Mirabel Airport and for how many years has it been contributing?

Mr. Robert Bockstael (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mirabel Airport has been operating since October, 1975, and operation and maintenance expenditures are as follows:

	Operations & maintenance ($millions)	Less revenue ($millions)	Less depreciation ($ millions)	Less loan+ interest ($millions)	Net cost to government ($millions)
1975/76	24.0	5.6	6.0	8.1	4.3
1976/77	74.8	25.0	16.1	29.1	4.6
1977/78	74.3	22.7	18.9	32.4	0.3
1978/79	78.2	25.8	18.1	35.8	(1.5)*
1979/80	47.0	26.6	17.9	–	2.5
1980/81	45.9	25.8	17.7	–	2.4
1981/82 estimated	50.0	21.5	18.4	–	10.1

* indicate surplus.

\+ includes loan interest which was applicable for years 1975-76 to 1978-79.

MR. CLAUDE BRUNEAU

Question No. 2,750—Mr. Beatty:

1. Was Mr. Claude Bruneau appointed to the board of the Canadian Film Development Corporation and, if so, on what date?

2. What is Mr. Bruneau's full-time job and with which company is he employed?

3. (a) Did the Minister of Communications state that Mr. Bruneau had a "very strong background in the film business" and, if so, what is the background (b) did Mr. Bruneau supply a curriculum vitae to the minister and, if so (i) did it include a reference to a background in the film business (ii) how many pages was it?

Mr. Jack Masters (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communications): In so far as the Department of Communications is concerned, the reply to the above question is as follows:

1. Yes, Mr. Claude Bruneau was appointed to the board of the Canadian Film Development Corporation on June 18, 1981, for a period of five years.

2. Mr. Bruneau is vice-president of Power Corporation.

3. (a) When announcing Mr. Bruneau's appointment, the minister stated, "Claude Bruneau's background and experience in law and business administration will be a considerable asset to the Canadian Film Development Corporation."

(b) Yes.

(i) The curriculum vitae was provided to the government on a confidential basis and the minister is not at liberty to release its contents.

(ii) Two.

PUBLIC DEBT

Question No. 2,753—Mr. Cossitt:

For each year since Confederation, what was the cost of interest on the public debt and what were the public debt charges?

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of State (Finance)): The federal government cost of interest on the public debt and public debt charges are shown in the table below for each year since Confederation.

Federal Government: Public Debt Charges

	Interest on Public Debt	All Public Debt Charges (incl. interest on the public debt)
	($ Millions)
1867-68	4	4
1868-69	5	5
1869-70	5	5
1870-71	5	5
1871-72	5	5
1872-73	5	5
1873-74	6	6
1874-75	7	7
1875-76	6	6
1876-77	7	7
1877-78	7	7
1878-79	7	7
1879-80	8	8
1880-81	8	8
1881-82	8	8
1882-83	8	8
1883-84	8	8
1884-85	9	9
1885-86	10	10
1886-87	10	10
1887-88	10	10
1888-89	10	10
1889-90	10	10
1890-91	10	10
1891-92	10	10
1892-93	10	10
1893-94	10	10
1894-95	11	11
1895-96	11	11
1896-97	11	11
1897-98	11	11
1898-99	11	11
1899-1900	11	11
1900-01	11	11
1901-02	11	11
1902-03	11	11
1903-04	11	11
1904-05	11	11
1905-06	11	11
1906-07	7	7
1907-08	11	11
1908-09	12	12
1909-10	13	13
1910-11	13	13
1911-12	12	12
1912-13	13	13
1913-14	13	13
1914-15	16	16
1915-16	21	21
1916-17	36	36
1917-18	48	48
1918-19	77	77
1919-20	125	125
1920-21	140	140
1921-22	135	135
1922-23	138	138
1923-24	136	136
1924-25	135	135
1925-26	131	131
1926-27	130	130
1927-28	129	129
1928-29	125	125
1929-30	122	122
1930-31	121	121
1931-32	121	121
1932-33	135	135
1933-34	140	140
1934-35	139	139
1035-36	135	138
1936-37	137	141
1937-38	132	141
1938-39	128	133
1939-40	129	135
1940-41	139	146
1941-42	155	172
1942-43	189	203
1943-44	243	262
1944-45	319	340
1945-46	409	438
1946-47	464	477
1947-48	455	467
1948-49	465	475
1949-50	440	451
1950-51	425	439
1951-52	520	531
1952-53	451	465
1953-54	476	496
1954-55	478	502
1955-56	493	514
1956-57	520	534
1957-58	539	567
1958-59	607	648
1959-60	736	784
1960-61	757	798
1961-62	803	839
1962-63	882	918
1963-64	955	994
1964-65	1,012	1,051
1965-66	1,077	1,111
1966-67	1,156	1,191
1967-68	1,270	1,301
1968-69	1,443	1,480
1969-70	1,676	1,717
1970-71	1,877	1,920
1971-72	2,091	2,137
1972-73	2,274	2,301
1973-74	2,548	2,566
1974-75	3,164	3,239
1975-76	3,909	3,972
1976-77	4,662	4,721
1977-78	5,473	5,550
1978-79	6,857	7,058
1979-80	8,339	8,524
1980-81(Preliminary)	10,500	10,687

Order Paper Questions

Note: Figures for 1972-73 to 1980-81 are in line with the accounting changes incorporated on a revised accounting basis in section I of the 1979-80 public accounts. For the years 1867-68 to 1971-72 inclusive, the figures are consistent with each other but are not strictly comparable with 1972-73 and subsequent years. An indication of the non-comparability of the two series is as follows: if 1972-73 had been calculated on the same basis as for 1867-68 to 1971-72 then the 1972-73 interest on the public debt would have been the same at $2,274 million, but the 1972-73 public debt charges would have been $2,321 million instead of $2,301 million. For 1905-06 and earlier years, figures relate to the 12-month fiscal year ended June 30. For 1906-07 figures relate to the 9-month period commencing July 1, 1906, and ending March 31, 1907. For 1907-08 on, figures relate to the 12-month period ending March 31.

* * *

[Translation]

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDERS FOR RETURNS

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, if questions Nos. 2,104 and 2,148 could be made orders for returns, the returns would be tabled immediately.

Madam Speaker: The questions enumerated by the parliamentary secretary have been answered. Shall questions Nos. 2,104 and 2,148 be deemed to be passed as orders for returns?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

[Text]

HERD MAINTENANCE PROGRAM

Question No. 2,104—Mr. McKnight:

1. For each rural municipality in Saskatchewan, what was the number of applications (a) received (b) approved (c) rejected under the Herd Maintenance Program?

2. For each rural municipality, what was the total dollar amount and percentage received from the Program?

Return tabled.

Question No. 2,148—Mr. Korchinski:

1. For each municipality or county in the three prairie provinces, how many applications were (a) received (b) approved under the Herd Maintenance Program?

2. (a) In each municipality or county, how many rejections were made as a result of the amount of precipitation in each region (b) how many rejections in each case were there as a result of crop yields?

3. (a) How many applications were received from cattlemen who are not involved in grain farming (b) how many in each municipality in Saskatchewan (c) how many rejections were there in each case?

4. What is the relationship between the crop yield and hay yield?

5. (a) On what date was there a general rain recorded in each of the three Provinces (b) what amount of rain was recorded in each of the municipalities or counties?

6. (a) To be of any appreciable value, when does the Department of Agriculture recommend that hay be cut (b) what amount of rain was received in each of the areas until the recommended date for cuttery (c) would rain that was received in August be of benefit for such hay crop?

Return tabled.

[Translation]

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I ask, Madam Speaker, that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Madam Speaker: Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

● (1510)

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADA OIL AND GAS ACT

MEASURE RESPECTING OIL AND GAS INTERESTS

The House resumed, from Friday, October 23, consideration of Bill C-48, to regulate oil and gas interests in Canada lands and to amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on National Resources and Public Works, and Motions Nos. 21 (Mr. Wilson) and 22 (Mr. Waddell).

Mr. Vince Dantzer (Okanagan North): Mr. Speaker, I am very eager to speak on Bill C-48, and have been since last July.

Mr. Benjamin: I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member for Regina West on a point of order.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, in order to give the government an opportunity to reconsider what is being done by VIA Rail on the scrapping of railway cars and abandonment of VIA Rail passenger routes, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis):

That this House do now adjourn.

An hon. Member: The Chair has already ruled on that.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am not prepared to accept such a motion on a point of order. The hon. member sought the floor on a point of order. This motion cannot be accepted under these circumstances.

Mr. Dantzer: Mr. Speaker, as I earlier indicated, I have been eager to speak on Bill C-48 since last July. I did not like the bill in July. The long, hot summer months have not changed my opinion of this bill.

Unfortunately, even though I do not like the legislation, it is an important piece of legislation, and I think can only compare with the Constitution reference in the effects it will have on this country. I was fortunate to be one of the members to sit on both the constitution and natural resources committees. The country showed great interest in appearing before both committees. It has been said before that some 135 hours was spent studying Bill C-48 in the committee. There were about 140 witnesses. It is interesting to note that of all those witnesses that appeared before the committee in regard to Bill C-48, I do not believe one of them agreed with the general contents or the details of this bill. There was a great deal of opposition to the bill. Most of the people who appeared before the committee sensed what was happening and how important this legislation was.

Perhaps the importance of this legislation has been overlooked by the press and the country. We should know and be aware that it has not been overlooked by the government. Mr. Speaker, I should like to quote what the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) said when he introduced this program. He said:

> This new program will impinge on almost every sphere of Canadian activity, on the fortunes of every Canadian, and on the economic and social structure of the nation for years to come.

The minister has at least been honest in telling the Canadian people what he is trying to do. I think we ignore him at our peril, just as we in his country and other countries ignored Adolf Hitler when he tried to warn us what he was about to do. I think we should pay clear attention to what the minister intends to do, because he said that this legislation will impinge on the fortunes of every Canadian. Surely those are true and accurate words.

The opposition parties on the committee put forth many amendments during the committee stage. This is proof that the bill was far from perfect when it was first presented. It is an indication of the government's railroading of this bill and others that they did not accept one single amendment at the committee stage. No one can convince me that all those amendments were bad and were not pertinent to the problems that were brought out at the committee stage. We are now debating a large number of those amendments. We should debate them slowly and carefully, so that the people of this country are fully aware of what drastic changes this legislation will bring.

Motion No. 21 reads as follows:

> (2) Her Majesty in right of Canada is hereby vested with and the minister on her behalf shall hold a share sufficient to render the interest holder with a Canadian ownership rate of 50 per cent.

This motion directs itself to ownership and to Canadianization. Canadianization, like motherhood, is something we all agree with. It is a word often used, and I suggest maligned, by the government in support of this particular measure.

The Conservative party, of course, is in favour of Canadianization. I am sure even the NDP is in favour of Canadianization, as is everyone in Canada, but not the kind of Canadianization practised by this government. We are in favour of Canadianization. We are not in favour of socialization and we are not in favour of nationalization, and this is what Bill C-48 is all about.

The debate on Bill C-48 at the committee level and in this House, and the debate on the Constitution at the committee level and in this House, really stems and flows from an essential difference in philosophy between this side of the House, the Conservative party, and the governing party. The government has indicated quite clearly, through its legislation, both proposed and in progress, that they favour a centralized, unitary form of government, central control, control of resources by the government. In fact, they have indicated they are prepared to go quite a long way down the road to socialism in order to achieve their goal.

The Conservative party has consistently defended the federal nature of this country; the free enterprise, economic nature that we have been adopting so successfully throughout our history. We indicated, and we still feel, that the government perhaps should play the role of umpire, but they should not be a player. That is what Bill C-48 is attempting to make them in the oil industry.

Over the past year and a half to two years, we have had what one might consider a one-two punch. The first punch was the attempt at legislative control by the Constitution; the second punch is by this legislation. Both of them are leading toward socialization. If the House thinks I am wrong in that respect, let me ask the question, why is not the right to own private property in the constitutional reference? The answer to that question clearly shows what the government intends.

The provinces have fought the Constitution and they are now fighting the effects of the national energy policy. The provinces recognize that this oil policy is an attempt to grab their resources, and in fact it does do that. As the hon. member for Prince George-Peace River (Mr. Oberle) said, what next? Will it be the forest industry in B.C., the mining industry, or the fishing industry? Anything and everything is subject to their claims and to their capacity to legislate control if it is not stopped here.

You may wonder Mr. Speaker why we on this side of the House are so opposed to government control. Let me tell you why. In the past 15 years the government has bungled everything rather badly. I want to read into Hansard a summary of that bungling which says it better than I can say it. It is an article by Douglas Fisher in The Toronto Sun of October 26, 1981. He is speaking about Mirabel airport. He says:

> They who gave us Mirabel airport also managed the post office into its disastrous inefficiency.
>
> A week ago a House committee dominated by Liberal MPs sketched 15 years of mismanagement and null achievement in manpower training.
>
> This week the Dubin inquiry revealed an air administration that is ineffective and supervising unsafe practices galore.
>
> The VIA Rail fiasco has quickly become legendary.

And he goes on. Mr. Speaker, that is why I am very much opposed to the legislation before the House. Certainly it will do to the oil industry exactly what the government has done to every other thing it has put its hands on.

The government has said that this is a sharing policy, that all they are trying to do is to share the assets of Canada among the people of Canada. We in the west know what that is all about. We share a two-price wheat system and we share a two-price oil system. We in western Canada share the capacity, the ability and the burden of supporting an inefficient auto industry in eastern Canada which almost doubles the price of our automobiles. Also we share the burden of supporting an inefficient textile industry. A recent study indicated that we would be better off to pay every worker to stay home, that we would save $100 per family, rather than support an inefficient system.

● (1520)

Also we share by our support the equalization system. Roughly $3 billion is equalized in the country from one province to another—$1 billion from British Columbia, $2 billion from Alberta, and approximately $200,000 from Ontario. We in the west understand that that is the philosophy of the government on sharing. Its philosophy is really: What is yours is mine; what is mine is my own. This is the type of sharing the government would like us to accept.

We have fought Bill C-48 because we recognize that it will eventually ruin the oil industry. What will it do specifically? There are massive incentives for the government to take money from the pockets of the western oil industry and to encourage people to work on Canada lands to the detriment of provincial lands. This legislation will also cause a massive transfer of wealth and decision making from the western provinces to Ottawa; $50 billion in five years. This is what is called sharing the Liberal way.

In addition, the bill will undoubtedly go a long way toward nationalizing and socializing the oil industry. Before the national energy policy was put into effect, there was a sophisticated and capable oil industry in western Canada. It was as effective and capable as any in the world. The government's massive intrusion and bureaucratic bumbling changed all that. Last spring when this matter was debated, the government insisted that drilling activity was not down and quoted figures to that effect. Let me put on record the real calculations in that regard.

The national energy policy in Canada has resulted in a decrease of 40 per cent in the May to August period this year compared with the same months in 1980. A total of 441 rigs chalked up 6,756 operating days in the four-month period this year compared with the 12,325 operating days for 525 rigs a year ago. This is a drop of 73 per cent. The biggest decline was in my province of British Columbia. There was a reduction of some 70 per cent and the utilization rate for 36 rigs in that province was only 34 per cent. In Saskatchewan it was down 47 per cent and in Alberta it was down 40 per cent.

The Canada lands on which the government is trying to encourage drilling fared little better. There were only 23 operating days in the Northwest Territories and Yukon compared with the 265 of last year. There were only 165 days in the Arctic Islands, down from 204 days in 1980. I do not believe that that is working toward oil self-sufficiency. The National Energy Program should be termed the national energy disaster. It has turned our oil industry from a competitive, aggressive industry comprised of many small firms to a government-controlled industry with a few large ones, including the government-controlled Petro-Canada.

People ask me what is wrong with that as long as we get our oil. Let me say that it was perfectly apparent from the hearings on this bill that all experts in the oil industry thought it was very bad. Why is this? It is because the finding of oil is still an art. It takes many operators in the field who have innovative ideas and approaches to ensure that oil is found. The bill drastically reduces the number of operators. It follows that the bill drastically reduces the chances of finding new oil either on provincial lands or on Canada lands. This means it drastically reduces our chances of becoming oil self-sufficient in this century.

Hon. members opposite at various times have argued in favour of the bill. One argument was that the government is better equipped through this legislation to deal with the many multinationals. In response to that argument I direct the attention of the House to the mess the government made in the Mexican deal. Canada was committed to a certain amount of oil without any commitment as to quality or price. We received heavy, sulphur-laden oil which could not be used in our refineries. Effectively it closed down the heavy oil plants in Lloydminster.

The government should look to the experience in Russia. It has the greatest reserves in the world at this point, but it is now clear from the experts that Russia will soon be on the open market looking for oil. It cannot get the oil out of the ground because of a bureaucratic mess. We should pay a great deal of attention to this example because it could happen here.

We support Canadianization, but the government has moved to achieve this goal in a clumsy and inefficient manner. First, it has offended our trading partners. Our relationship with the United States has never been worse. We cannot afford to have bad relations with a country upon which we depend so heavily for our mutual trade. Also there is some evidence that the requirements under this bill offend the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. Certainly this will have to be changed before the act is passed. The double-dipping provision and the retroactive provisions contained in the bill should be removed. They make a mockery of planning and business. This breaks faith with all people who have spent hundreds of millions of dollars in the oil industry.

It is interesting to note what the government asked Norwegian experts who appeared before the committee. They clearly set forth that the one thing the industry needed was certainty. They would accept almost any proposal if they could make money on it, but they required certainty. This legislation with its ministerial discretion and retroactive legislation ensures that the industry cannot have certainty. Therefore, I suggest we will not receive the response we should so that we will be self-sufficient in oil by 1990, which is the goal of the government. The experts indicated that our situation was different from that of Norway. Therefore, to give the minister so much discretion would make it difficult to find oil in a country where it is dangerous to find it, in the sense that most of our new oil is under the sea. The resource is not proven, as is the case in the North Sea. Therefore this legislation is ineffective.

Motion No. 21 goes some distance toward solving many of the problems. At least it would give operators certainty as to what eventual interest they would have in the Canada lands, and the government would not back in to the extent it intends. Under these circumstances I urge hon. members to support the amendment.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, certainly it is a pleasure to rise this afternoon to talk for a few moments to the particular motion put forward by the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) relating to the Canadianization of the oil and gas industry in Canada. We on this side of the House certainly have strong feelings about this, and while they do not differ in intensity they certainly differ in substance in more ways than one from those of my friends to my right.

• (1530)

As the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway indicated earlier this week, Canadianization, as written in Bill C-48, is nothing but a sham. There is an assumption that Canadians will assume some type of ownership and control as the result of these policies, but Bill C-48 merely shifts the nationality of some of the players and decision makers and does little toward actual Canadianization of the oil and gas industry.

We recognize that when we talk about Canadianization of an industry we would have different reactions to Canadianizing the television manufacturing industry, the recreation vehicle industry, the sand and gravel industry or sectors of the manufacturing industry. When it comes to oil and gas, however, the most strategic natural resource that we have, we are talking about the very basis of Canadian society and culture. Canadian society, Canadian culture and the Canadian economy depend totally on oil and gas. Surely this sets it far beyond the usual consideration that we give to economic and/or resource issues.

Motion No. 22, which stands in the name of the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway, seeks to increase the Crown's share or the public ownership of our interest in Canada lands, those lands that exist on the frontiers of Canada or offshore, from 25 per cent to 50 per cent. This should not be confused with the existing provisions in the bill for a Canadian ownership rate of 50 per cent for production licences. The COR, as it is known, of 50 per cent can be 50 per cent private Canadian ownership or a mixture of public and private ownership.

We must ask what the Liberal record on Canadianization is. In 1980 foreign ownership of oil and gas revenue in Canada amounted to 74 per cent; foreign control of oil and gas revenue was 82 per cent. In 1981 foreign ownership of oil and gas production had decreased by about 3.5 per cent, but in spite of new acquisitions, Canadian ownership is still only 34 per cent, leaving 65 per cent essentially foreign controlled and owned.

We hear that the Liberal goal is 50 per cent Canadian ownership by 1990, not Canadian control by 1990. Herein lies a very critical difference—the difference between Canadian ownership and Canadian control of this strategic resource. It is reasonable to ask why foreign control of this strategic resource is such a problem. My friends in the Conservative party suggest that foreign control is not a problem; it is no concern of theirs but it certainly is of ours, for these reasons.

Contrary to the free enterprise argument that Canada benefits from foreign capital, the multinational oil companies remain net capital exporters; they take more money out than they put into Canada. Between 1975 and 1980, the petroleum industry was a net capital exporter to the tune of $4.1 billion. What do the Tories say to that in light of their arguments that the multinational oil companies bring revenue into Canada? This is a reasonably objective statement from the Petroleum Monitoring Agency, that $4.1 billion were exported from Canada over a five-year period. The petroleum industry's assets have risen 359 per cent, from $14.6 billion in 1973 to $52.4 billion in 1980. This capital gain is controlled mainly by foreign shareholders at the expense of Canadian consumers and taxpayers.

We in this corner of the House do not feel that decisions regarding Canada's most strategic resources should be made in Dallas, Houston, New York, London, Zurich and such places. Those decisions should be made by Canadian citizens and preferably in the capitals of Canadian provinces and in our country.

In 1980 oil industry profits alone represented almost 30 per cent of all profits earned by the non-financial sector of the economy, giving foreigners a commanding position in the nation's economy. What other country in the world brags of that particular accomplishment, that foreigners make most of the decisions relating to the economy and the development of the economy? When this power and economic wealth is controlled by foreigners, they can pressure Canadian policy makers. In other words, they can use blackmail techniques; they can use capital strikes, as we have seen with Syncrude and Cold Lake, to bring the Canadian government or provincial governments around to their way of thinking. We have recently seen and are perhaps still seeing a strike by the oil companies in Canada, aided and abetted by their Tory friends in the province of Alberta and in this House.

The Liberals have brought in some half measures in response to some of these concerns. They now admit that foreign control is a problem in Canada but through Bill C-48 they are prepared to take only the weakest of measures to begin to correct it. They argue that if we are too tough, the multinational oil companies will pull out and leave us freezing in the dark, ignoring the fact that the multinationals already operate in countries that have far more onerous ownership and tax regimes than we have in Canada.

Let us consider a few countries that act quite differently from the way we act in Canada. One of our friends, Mexico, has an interesting policy in regard to its oil industry, which has been nationalized totally since 1938. It seems to me that the petroleum industry in Mexico is doing quite well, as is indicated by our Mexican imports and the fact that just a year ago we were proud to be able to make agreements with Mexico because they could guarantee the flow of their resource while we in Canada cannot. The reason for this is that the Mexicans have control and ownership of their resource while we in Canada do not.

Let us look at a country which is closer to us in many respects than Mexico—Great Britain. The British National Oil Corporation has first claim on 51 per cent of all oil production and its purchase is negotiated at market price. The BNOC may offer participation to joint venture partners including foreign-owned firms, but it retains control of all the projects it enters into as a co-partner.

My own home country of Norway with Statoil, the government oil company, can take up to a 70 per cent interest in any block of land that it does not presently own. Since the announcement of finds of natural gas off the north coast of Norway the other day, oil companies are flocking to that part of the country under these provisions. But as weak-kneed and milquetoast Canadians, we are hesitant to begin to implement policies like those in Norway or Great Britain.

Even Australia, which is recognized for its relatively weak position compared to that of many other countries, has a policy where foreign companies are allowed to explore but only Australian and naturalized foreign investors can produce energy resources. To qualify as a naturalized company, a foreign company must have 25 per cent equity owned by Australians, a majority of Australians on its board of directors and a public commitment to increase Australian equity by 51 per cent within a certain period of time. This is a much stronger statement than is found in Canada's policy, by a long shot.

When it comes to Canadian half measures as a result of the Liberal government's program, the Liberal goal is 50 per cent Canadian—meaning mainly private—ownership by the end of the decade. As one energy observer speaking recently in the United States has noted:

● (1540)

> Do you suppose that a party proposing to reduce foreign control . . . to 50 per cent within ten years would be regarded as anything but cautious to a fault? I doubt that Americans would tolerate anything like 50 per cent foreign ownership in any major industry—let alone a vital, basic industry like oil and gas. And to tolerate it at a time when that industry is claiming an enormous and ever-rising share of the national wealth is simply unthinkable.

Do you know who the author of that quote was, Mr. Speaker? It was the infamous Marc Lalonde in his New York speech a few months ago, indicating again, very clearly, that this was about the smallest, most inconsequential step that a government could take, and was almost apologetic for the cautiousness of this particular bill, Bill C-48.

What about the difference between ownership and control of such a strategic resource? The Liberals' goal of 50 per cent Canadian ownership, if ever achieved, would still mean that the powerful petroleum industry, overwhelmingly foreign dominated, would remain under foreign control. Foreign control would still remain. Because of the way stockholdings can be manipulated, foreigners could still control a company or an energy project even though, technically, it would be Canadian owned. Fifty per cent Canadian ownership does not necessarily mean 50 per cent Canadian control. Even under the government's own provisions in Bill C-48, a joint venture with the multinational Imperial Oil Company controlling 70 per cent of the project, and Petro-Canada controlling only 30 per cent, would be classified as 51 percent Canadian owned. However, it would obviously leave the foreign-controlled Imperial controlling the venture in total.

An hon. Member: Sham!

Mr. Riis: Let me be more specific, because this is a very crucial concept. Again, I think we have the impression from the rhetoric surrounding Bill C-48 and from reading the various clauses that, in fact, Canadian control and ownership will be occurring in Canada's frontier lands and offshore developments. However, it works this way: Imperial is 70 per cent foreign owned. Therefore, 70 per cent of 70 shares equals 49 shares foreign owned. Thirty per cent Canadian owned of Imperial's 70 shares equals 21 shares. Petro-Canada, which is in the project for 30 per cent, is 100 per cent Canadian-owned, as we all know; therefore, its 30 shares are Canadian owned. Therefore, Imperial's 21 shares plus Petro-Canada's 30 means a 51 per cent Canadian-owned project. However, the original partnership still gives Imperial not 51 per cent control but 70 per cent control. Certainly control is where the action is as opposed to the simple ownership.

It is interesting to note that 14 out of the 25 largest oil and gas producing companies are still foreign controlled in Canada. They dominate the industry's sales and cash flows. Unless we obtain control of the largest companies which dominate the market, surely "50 per cent Canadian" has virtually no meaning at all.

We in the New Democratic Party want majority control as well as majority ownership. When we look at countries in situations similar to Canada, virtually every country we can examine has developed a strong policy which would equal Canadianizing as we know it in this country. One might point out that the Americans do not have such a policy, and indeed they do not. But certainly the incentive is not there either; for when one looks at the American petroleum industry, which companies obviously own and control that industry? American companies own and control it. Therefore, there is not the incentive that we find in a country such as Canada which has sold out such a crucial and strategic resource to foreign corporations.

I want to talk for a moment or two about public ownership versus privatization. The Liberal plan of Canadianization really means replacing private foreign ownership with private Canadian ownership. What guarantees do we have that privately owned Canadian oil companies will act much differently from foreign oil companies?

An hon. Member: None whatsoever.

Mr. Riis: Does anyone believe that a good part of the $12 billion price rip-off of consumers by the multinationals, documented in the Bertrand report, would not have occurred if Husky, Dome, Norcin and Home Oil had replaced Imperial, Gulf, Texaco and Shell? Would Canadian corporate heads be acting and responding differently from American or Dutch corporation heads?

Privately owned oil companies, whether foreign or Canadian controlled, have as a goal the maximization of profits, to be achieved by one of a number of ways or combinations: higher prices, more exports, or more tax concessions. Canadian consumers and taxpayers lose under this scenario, as is so plainly evident.

While believing in some private ownership in this sector, the NDP wants majority public ownership and control. This is what we see as being true Canadianization. This is why we advocate making Petro-Canada a leader, by advocating a takeover of Imperial Oil, Canada's largest and most powerful oil company. The Liberal plan is to endorse and encourage private Canadian ownership at the taxpayers' expense, rather than public ownership to provide obvious taxpayers' benefits.

I want to emphasize one very critical point. Canadians, whether consumers or people involved in the oil and natural gas industry, are now concerned about exploration in the frontier lands of Canada and in the offshore opportunities. Under the National Energy Program, the taxpayers of Canada will fund a Canadian, privately-owned company to the maximum of 93 cents on every dollar spent on exploration on Canada lands. Ninety three cents out of every dollar will be supported by Canadian taxpayers, after tax, after a grand cost to the company of only seven cents on the dollar.

I suspect that a great number of industries in Canada would love to have the Canadian taxpayers paying 93 per cent of their development and exploration costs. I can certainly identify a number of small businesses in our country which would love to have that kind of government support. Of course, the companies which would be supported by the taxpayers are the same companies which take out full page ads in almost every major newspaper and publication in Canada, decrying the hard times they are facing and how much need there is for the Canadian taxpayer to be coming up front with 93 per cent of their exploration costs.

What kind of equity would the taxpayers get in return? Under Clause 27 of Bill C-48 they would only get a 25 per cent Crown share in federal lands. In this amendment, we say that the minimum public ownership on federal lands should be 50 per cent through the people's Crown agency, PetroCan.

Between 1977 and 1980, the federal Liberals gave income tax breaks to the foreign-controlled resource sector worth a total of over $13 billion without getting any equity or ownership in return. Over the same period, income tax collected from the petroleum industry was only $5 billion. We in the NDP say that it is time the consumers and taxpayers of Canada, who have funded the growth and profits of this industry, get some ownership in return. If we are paying the piper, it is time we called the tune. We can do that only through majority public ownership and control.

Mr. John Thomson (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, as far as I am concerned, the sad thing about the legislation we have before us this afternoon is that the people who wrote it did not have the faintest idea what they were doing. It looks as though some recent graduate in economics has sat down and said, "Look, finding oil is not all that difficult. All one has to do is punch a hole in the ground and up jumps some oil or gas. That is not very difficult, and if these oil companies do not want to do it, the government will do it."

The National Energy Program which has come forth from the Liberal government is playing Russian roulette with the welfare of the people of Canada and their future. I know that hon. members on the opposite side of the House do not believe that. I think they do not believe it because they do not understand the oil and gas industry. I do not think they really understand what they are trying to accomplish in this legislation. What this legislation is trying to say is that if we can destroy foreign investment in this country, and if we can destroy the oil and gas industry in some way, that will lead us to energy self-sufficiency or, more particularly, to oil self-sufficiency. Surely the critical factor in this legislation and in the whole National Energy Program should be energy self-sufficiency, more particularly oil self-sufficiency.

● (1550)

There are two aspects I want to address this afternoon. One concerns our relationship with the rest of the world, our trading partners, the foreign investors on which Canada must rely for its industrial and economic growth and with our friends. The other aspect is oil self-sufficiency. I want to tell hon. members categorically that we do not have a chance in blazes of achieving oil self-sufficiency by 1990. I do not care what the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) says, we will not achieve oil self-sufficiency by 1990. I will relate the reasons why that will not happen.

First, I want to try to put the question of oil self-sufficiency into perspective as simply as I can. Every day in Canada 1.8 million barrels of oil are consumed, of which we import 400,000 barrels a day. We have 1.4 million barrels of oil production within our country. Of that production, 200,000 barrels come from synthetic sources and 1.2 million barrels come from what we refer to as conventional oil production. We use 1.8 million barrels of oil per day. We produce 1.4 million barrels a day and 400,000 barrels of oil a day are purchased from OPEC.

In the 1981 report put out by the National Energy Board the consumption and demand supply relationship over the next ten years was looked at. The board reported that consumption will not increase very much over the next ten years. Therefore, we are looking at 1.8 million barrels of oil a day in the year 1990. That figure was predicated on two assumptions; first, that we would replace the 350,000 barrels of oil we are presently consuming by two methods. The first method would be by conservation and the second method by oil substitution. If we do not conserve and if we are unable to substitute, Canadians will be consuming about 2.2 million barrels of oil a day by 1990.

Let us accept the National Energy Board figures. Let us assume that we do conserve and that we do substitute to the tune of 350,000 barrels of oil per day. We will still need about 1.8 million barrels of oil a day. The National Energy Board tells us that in Canada by the year 1990 we will not be able to produce 1.4 million barrels of oil per day. In fact, our conventional oil production, which at present is 1.2 million barrels a day, will decline to 500,000 barrels of oil a day by 1990. That is what the National Energy Board tells us; that is not what I say. By the year 1990, 500,000 barrels of oil a day will be produced, and together with the 200,000 barrels of oil a day that we produce synthetically we will have a total of 700,000 barrels of oil a day.

The National Energy Board tells us that we will consume 1.8 million barrels of oil a day in 1990. We are told that we will be able to produce 700,000 barrels a day from existing conventional reserves and from synthetic production. If my arithmetic is correct, that is a difference of 1.1 million barrels of oil a day, meaning that somewhere in Canada we must find 1.1 million barrels of oil a day. If we do not find it, we will have to buy it. It is that simple. It is either find oil or buy oil from OPEC.

I wonder whether hon. members realize the magnitude of finding one million barrels of oil a day. Do hon. members know what that represents? Does anyone understand the enormity of finding one million barrels of oil production a day? This is not just a question of dollars, this is a question of people, technology and expertise. It is a huge undertaking. I do not know how to express it. It is not sufficient to say that it is a couple of hundred billion dollars.

We must bear in mind that since 1947 when the Leduc field was discovered we have developed about 1.8 million barrels of oil production. Over a period of 30 years, from 1947 to 1981 we have found about 1.8 million barrels of oil a day. But in the next ten years we have to find 1.1 million barrels of oil a day or, alternatively, buy it from OPEC.

Where will we find this oil? This is at the heart of the matter. We will not achieve energy self-sufficiency. I am sure of this because there are only three sources from which oil can come. Oil can come from the conventional oil fields in western Canada, the frontier areas, or it can come from the oil sands. There is no other place.

We may be able to produce oil from coal but I think the technology required is more than ten years away. Therefore, oil has to come from our frontier areas, from the conventional areas of western Canada or from the oil sands.

Let us deal with the oil sands first. I will not get into a long harangue about why the oil sands have not gone ahead. I think the Canadian people understand that. Perhaps hon. members opposite do not understand, but the Canadian people understand that it is because of the foolishness of the National Energy Program and the greediness of this government and other levels of government in terms of the tax regime and the pricing strategy for oil sands plants. If the Alsands and Cold Lake projects went ahead tomorrow morning, they would not produce a barrel of oil until after 1990. That is even if those projects were started tomorrow morning. Let us forget about the oil sands because we know that we will not get a drop of oil from them until after 1990, assuming that they do go ahead at some time.

Let us come to conventional oil production. I read an article the other day. I think the hon. member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Evans) mentioned it as well. In any event, it was reported that by 1986 we will produce an additional 311,000 barrels of conventional oil in western Canada. Is that correct?

Mr. Evans: Extra.

Mr. Thomson: That is 311,000 barrels of oil a day over what we are presently producing. I was in the oil business for a little while, but that statement is a joke. No major discoveries in western Canada of that magnitude, or anything like it have been made since 1957 when the Swan Hills find was discovered. Since 1957 we have not found an oil field that can produce more than 100,000 barrels of oil a day in western Canada. In the last 15 years, apart from a few ups and downs, the oil industry has been making an all-out effort to find oil and gas, except during 1974 when there was another federal-provincial conflict.

• (1600)

Coming back to the potential for finding more conventional reserves in western Canada, I want to point out that a year ago, before this great and wonderful national oil program that will produce all this great oil self-sufficiency for Canada came into effect, we had 600 rigs in western Canada, perhaps not all of them working but available for work. Do you know what has happened in the year since the national energy policy? Some 209 of those drilling rigs have gone across the border to the United States. Today we have 236 rigs working in western Canada with 189 rigs down compared to 455 rigs working last year. We have an industry which a year or 18 months ago was making an all-out effort to find oil and gas in conventional fields in western Canada, yet we have not come up with any major discoveries of oil in the last 15 years. Yet what the government would like us to believe is that we are going to reduce drilling by two thirds and come up with 311,000 barrels per day of conventional production by 1986. Anyone who wants to believe that will believe anything. With the National Energy Program we will be very fortunate if we are able to find 100,000 barrels a day of new oil production by 1985. I would think we would be extremely fortunate if we find 200,000 barrels a day by 1990.

I can tell the House one thing for certain. Under the rules of the energy pricing agreement signed between the province of Alberta and the federal government in September, there is not a chance of that in the world. I am not the only one who would not invest a nickel in the oil and gas industry in this country today. There are hundreds of thousands of people who would not invest one cent, because there is no incentive. Understand me, there is no incentive; and that is why I say there is very little chance we are going to make any significant contribution to oil self-sufficiency from conventional fields under this government.

This brings me to the heart of this legislation before us. As I said before, we have three chances of finding one million barrels of oil a day, and that is in the oil sands, through conventional oil discoveries, and in the frontiers. What have we got in the frontier areas today? We have the discovery 200 miles off the east coast of Newfoundland in 250 feet of water, and that is in one of the most hostile environments in the world. We think we have another discovery in the Beaufort Sea. The operator of that property has not said categorically that we do have a discovery. They think it is promising but we do not know the potential. Let us assume that it is promising. Hibernia certainly looks very promising, but I ask hon. members to think about this. Do they know how long it took from the original discovery in the North Sea to put North Sea production onstream? It took over ten years to get that oil to market from the initial discovery in the North Sea. While the North Sea is a very hostile environment, it cannot be compared with the environment at Hibernia. We do not have the technology today to get that oil to market.

The unfortunate part of the discovery is that it lies in 250 feet of water which is scoured by icebergs the better part of the year. We do not know how to stop those icebergs from tearing up whatever we put down there to produce the oil. You have to put a valve on the well casing, and somehow or other you have to protect that valve from all these icebergs. We do not know how to do that, but I am confident they will come up with an answer.

The point I want to get across to members of this House today is that it is very unlikely we will see any production from Hibernia until well past 1990. It will be a miracle if we see production from Hibernia before 1990. We should consider ourselves very fortunate that we found the oil. Please do not misunderstand me.

I do not know how many members have ever been in the Arctic or in the Arctic Islands. I happen to have been there and I can say that it is again a very formidable and hostile climate. If you have to go through 20 feet of pack ice with a tanker to get that oil out, I am just not altogether sure you can do it. Perhaps hon. members will remember the Manhattan and Esso's experiment in taking the Manhattan through the Northwest Passage. It had to turn back. There are icebreakers that probably could get through, but we do not have them today. We do not even know what we have today in the Beaufort Sea, but if we did know we would have to develop it, and that means we would have to go out and delineate the reserves. We would have to figure out technologically how to raise the oil to the surface and put valves in place above the ice. We would have to figure out a way to protect those valves so that when the pack ice moves it does not wipe out the wellheads. After we have done all that we have to figure out how to get the tankers in, load them up and take them through the Northwest Passage to market.

If anybody believes we are going to have that oil to market before 1990, they are living in a dream world. I sincerely hope we can get some oil from Hibernia and out of the Beaufort Sea before the end of the century. If we can do so we must consider ourselves very fortunate.

Am I coming to the end of my time, Mr. Speaker?

An hon. Member: Carry on.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member may continue with the consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Thomson: What I am saying is that we will not get any oil out of the frontier areas before 1990. We are not going to have very much in the way of new conventional production and the oil sands will not be in production. What is the alternative? We are going to be importing a million barrels of oil a day in 1990. That is how I see it. Are we going to put ourselves in the hands of OPEC, the Arab sheiks, and in the hands of other OPEC countries who may not be quite so friendly? Is that where we want to take our country? Do we want to make our country dependent upon OPEC when we have the reserves to do the job?

This legislation before us in Bill C-48 is not legislation that will encourage production in our frontier areas. The National Energy Program certainly is not going to encourage production from the oil sands or from conventional producing areas. What this legislation before us this afternoon, Bill C-48, does and what the whole National Energy Program does is what I referred to when I said we were playing Russian roulette with the life and economic future of our country. Members opposite do not understand that, and that is why I say I do not think they know what they are doing. Wake up before it is too late.

● (1610)

I had quite a number of other comments to make, Mr. Speaker, but I would like to finish with this. Let us put aside the question of foreign investment in the Canadian oil industry and let us put aside economic nationalism for the moment. Do we want to be known by our friends abroad as a government that steals? Do we want to be known as cheats and thieves? This legislation will put Canada at the top of the list of thieves and robbers. The government is taking property away retroactively. It is confiscating that property with virtually no compensation.

The government says this is not confiscation but compensation for earlier incentives given. If that is so, why were the rules of the game not spelled out when the incentives were given? I do not accept that statement and I do not think our friends abroad accept that statement. Nothing in the original exploration conditions indicated that the government would take 25 per cent of any successes. When the government gave permits to search for oil in Hibernia, the Beaufort Sea and Arctic Islands, it never said that in ten years it would come back and expropriate 25 per cent of the winners. The government does not want any part of the losers, but it will take 25 per cent from the winners.

The compensation does not reflect the value of the reserves stolen. All the government intends to pay for is the small portion of successful companies and nothing for the companies which end up with dry wells. Compensation is totally unfair with regard to the reserves found. If the government were honest with itself it would, at the very least, pay the fair market value for the reserves taken.

The compensation is to be made on an ex gratia basis without acknowledging any obligation whatsoever. The government has, in effect, admitted that this compensation is nothing more than political expediency in response to the criticism of the legislation originally planned which was going to give no compensation for the land expropriated.

Canada cannot live as an island unto itself. We must trade for our livelihood. We require large sums of foreign investment capital to develop our industry and resources. Above all, Canada needs some friends. I do not call anybody who steals from me a friend. I do not think the Canadian people want a government which steals from others.

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills): Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak in favour of Motion No. 21 in the name of the member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson). This motion clearly sets out a major difference between the main parties in the House. It clearly combines the Liberals and the New Democrats as a party who hold themselves out to the Canadian people as being in favour of state ownership and control. They are saying to the Canadian people that we can have a bureaucracy in Ottawa and a state-controlled company which can find oil, produce it and sell it to us at presumably competitive prices, if not cheaper. Canadians should understand that I am talking about two parties that believe the means of production in Canada should be owned by the state. That is their philosophy.

In contrast, the Conservative party believes those assets should be owned directly by Canadians. That is what we want for this country, for every Canadian to have a direct share in ownership.

When our ancestors came to this country and they owned a quarter section of land, they felt they owned the country directly. Now, with over 90 per cent of Canadians living in cities, the only way they can own anything directly is to buy shares.

Mr. Waddell: How many people own shares?

Mr. Thacker: Canadians cannot even afford to buy houses any more as a result of this government's economic policies. They cannot keep the homes they already have. Our party believes Canadians should own shares directly. That is the real choice Canadians now have to make.

Clause 27 of Bill C-48 provides for the government to confiscate 25 per cent of any oil and gas found from both non-Canadian companies and Canadian companies. That 25 per cent will be vested in our state oil company, that paragon of virtue, Petro-Canada.

I would like to give a quick history of Petro-Canada for the benefit of members of the House. This may allow them to come to a better conclusion as to whether or not we should put our confidence into state-owned companies—whether it be Petro-Canada or some other Crown corporation—controlled by bureaucrats. Let us examine Petro-Canada to see whether it justifies our trust and confidence.

Petro-Canada was formed in 1976 as a Crown corporation. In a Crown corporation, all shares are owned by the Government of Canada rather than by individual Canadians. It is a company owned by our Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), who is advised by his cabinet and the bureaucracy. They make the decisions. When Petro-Canada was originally set up, the government, already in a deficit position, decided on behalf of Canadians to borrow $210 million at the going interest rate and buy Petro-Canada shares. It received preferred shares and we should understand what preferred shares are. They do not only represent ownership, they also pay a dividend, assuming they are that type of preference share. The shares that the government takes are non-cumulative dividends. At the end of the year, if Petro-Canada does not pay a dividend, it is lost forever. Canadians therefore will get no return on that money.

We have a company, Petro-Canada, with a 15 per cent interest in Syncrude and a 45 per cent interest in Panarctic Oils. It has a president and staff. What did this company do? Did it start to search for oil and develop the technology to find the oil under the land? No. It went out and bought an existing company. It took the money we paid for our shares and bought Atlantic Richfield. It paid $342.4 million and renamed the company Petro-Canada Exploration. It took over a staff of 300. It obtained existing leases and property. That did not add one barrel of oil to the Canadian market. All it meant was that money left the country.

At the end of 1977 it had net earnings of $3.3 million from an investment of $383 million. That represents a rate of return of about 1 per cent. It did not pay a dividend so Canadians did not receive one cent. This continued through 1977. Petro-Canada presumably went out to explore and drill but it was unable to make a find and was getting into trouble. So the government gave it another $154.5 million—more preferred shares, non-cumulative dividends. It still needed help. Therefore on December 7, 1977, the government passed the Canada Oil and Gas Act. That act gave Petro-Canada preferential treatment in obtaining leases.

When leases were being granted in this country, which company got first choice? Petro-Canada. Why would that be? It would have to be because when we set up a government corporation, we cannot have it fail. If it fails, that reflects on the government. Therefore, it was given preference shares, non-cumulative dividends, priority to get land as compared to the private companies, of which there are over 700 in this country competing and trying to find gas and oil.

● (1620)

Petro-Canada had to have a further advantage. If any private company found oil anywhere in Canada, Petro-Canada could buy it. This was the famous back-in clause. Many of us opposed that. We felt that one should not get something for nothing. We felt the company should not get the right to buy a 25 per cent share unless it found the oil. That was government wisdom, and I will come back to that.

At the end of 1977 we have the company earning some $9.5 million on a government investment of about $540 million, a return of about one half of 1 per cent. No money is actually paid because it is running into more trouble. In 1978, away it goes again. It is out on the frontier, but not finding any new oil. The government has to buy more shares. Petro-Canada thought it had to have more help. Because it could not find any more oil, the government kicked in $239.4 million.

Was Petro-Canada developing any research and development? Not one bit. Was it developing a new seismic method to find oil where the old test could not? There was not one bit of technology. Was it developing better distributing systems? No, it was not doing any of that. The multinational corporations of which substantial shares are owned by Canadians were doing that, but not our own Petro-Canada.

What did it do in 1978? It did not find anything new so it went out and bought Pacific Petroleums. Remember, Pacific Petroleums was trading on the market at $65 a share. The total price was $1.4 billion. Petro-Canada had no money, so what did it do? It used the tax act. Very neat. It borrowed the money from Canadian banks that are operating overseas. Those banks took preference shares, exactly the same type of general share which the government had. However, the bank shares have cumulative dividends as compared to the government preference shares that are non-cumulative. At the end of the year, even if a dividend is not declared, the fixed rate accumulates so that the amount of money owing by Petro-Canada to the banks goes up and up.

In order to sweeten the deal even further so the banks would lend this $1.4 billion to Petro-Canada, they were told that under the tax act, if they lent the money they would not have to pay income tax on the interest. The banks lent the $1.4 billion. It is a good deal for them. They get cumulative preference shares, a guarantee of payment and they do not have to pay income tax on the interest.

That deal closed on November 10, 1978, and the income tax loophole was closed on November 17. Do you know what that meant? It meant that the other 700 oil and gas companies could not take advantage of that provision, just the national Crown corporation. You wonder how they could have got in under the deadline. You find that a director on the national state oil company is also in the finance department. The most recent example of a member of Petro-Canada being on the staff of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) was just a reincarnation of past wrongs. We know that a staff member of Petro-Canada actually wrote the budget that gave Petro-Canada all of these incredible advantages over the other 600 and some companies trying to find oil for Canadians.

Another aspect of that deal with Pacific Petroleums that was very sour was the situation where the government was able to use the Canada Business Corporations Act to force the sale of $430 million worth of shares owned by Canadians to Petro-Canada. That is why we in this party want to have in our Constitution the entrenched right to own property. If we had that right, the government could not force people to sell shares to it; it would have to buy them on the open market. That is why our friends on the left and the Liberals oppose that right to own property. They do not want Canadian citizens to own those assets and to have a direct benefit for themselves and their children. That is the secret behind that.

We now get to the end of 1978. By this time the company has taken over two existing companies, both of which operated in Canada, both of which had some Canadian shareholders. These companies were trying to find oil and gas for us and our descendants. They are now all part of one company. Incidentally, those companies were paying income tax. One paid something like $77 million. Petro-Canada does not pay income tax. When you take the interest we have lost on money we have invested and the lost income tax, it far exceeds the amount of money those companies would have paid to their foreign shareholders by way of dividends.

I have been told by the hon. member for Calgary Centre (Mr. Andre) that historically the amount of those dividends in the oil industry amounts to something like 2 to 3 per cent. We have now borrowed $1.5 billion, put it into Petro-Canada and got back non-cumulative preference shares. The interest cost on that $1.5 billion at 19.38 per cent, which is the last Canada Savings Bonds interest, far exceeds any dividends that used to leave this country.

By the end of 1978 there were net earnings of about $13.7 million and a government investment of $778 million, a return on paper of about 1.5 per cent. Most of that income came from companies that were existing because Petro-Canada had not by the end of 1978 found oil on its own.

In 1979 and 1980 when the Conservative government was in power we put no money into Petro-Canada. We felt it ought to be able to get along on its own. Canadians had already invested over a billion dollars in it. In fact, we wanted to give share ownership to individual Canadians so that at the end of the year the directors and officers of Petro-Canada would have to stand up and give a daily or yearly accounting to their shareholders, the men and women in this country who would have had 15 or 20 shares, the widows who count on their dividends. These people would have been able to look the president in the eye and say, "Where are my dividends? What have you been doing with my money? You are in a trust situation."

That did not occur. The Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen) does not go to the officials of Petro-Canada on behalf of the main shareholder and ask what is being done for the citizens of Canada. Why would he do that? His reputation is at stake. He has to make the corporation go. After the Liberals came back into power, they put in more money. Another $440 million was put into Petro-Canada, all money to be paid for by the taxpayers of Canada, and all of it had to be borrowed.

The last takeover was Petrofina, another successful public company paying dividends to its Canadian shareholders and foreign shareholders. It is interesting to note that during the forties when the west was trying to develop its oil industry, it went to Bay Street in Toronto to borrow money to develop. Was money made available by Canadians then? Not one cent. They would not give money to develop the oil industry at any rate of return. They would not take any equity. The people of The Netherlands did through Shell; the people of Great Britain did through BP and Gulf; and the Americans did through Imperial Oil. They developed this country and let us have oil when our own citizens would not do it. Before this whole deal arose, the shares of Petrofina were trading at about $60 each. As inevitably happens, the minute there was talk of a possible sale to the government, the price of the shares went up. The people of Canada ultimately bought those shares at $120 per share, more than twice their worth.

It might be said that we got 1,100 used service stations. It is true we did. It is also true that we got some leases. However, did we get the heart and core of Petrofina, the future of Petrofina, its petro-chemical plant? No. That was pulled out of the deal. We paid $120 per share for shares that six weeks before were worth only $60, and we did not even get all the assets. They kept the petro-chemical plant and it is that plant which is the future of this country. We have many old, used service stations. They are not even on the prime corners. It is a crime.

● (1630)

How did the government finance the purchase, Mr. Speaker? There is about $440 million authorized in the blue book, bringing to a total of $1.5 billion the amount which we have put into Petrofina. We have also given Petro-Canada 25 per cent carried interest, which is the expropriation, the confiscation program. The government is going to confiscate 25 per cent of the successful production not only of the multinational corporations, but from our own citizens who have created their small Canadian companies, who went out and created new technology and who found oil and gas where they could. The government will now take it away from them.

To my mind the final humiliation, the final indignity, in order to make this company successful, after having given it $1.5 billion, the preference to get leases, the right for a 25 per cent purchase and an absolute expropriation of 25 per cent, this is still not enough; we have to tax the citizens of Canada. Every time a Canadian drives up to a service station to fill the gas tank, a portion of that money goes directly to pay for the purchase of Petrofina. All of that money is going out of the country.

Here is the ultimate kicker. We are buying an industry that really is on the tail end. It started in the 1940s, it is peaking now, and by the year 2020 it will be gone. By then we will be into solar, wind and hydrogen power.

Why are we spending our taxpayers' money to buy an industry that is at the end? What are these companies doing? What did Petrofina do with its $1.5 billion? What did Pacific Petroleums do with its $1.5 billion? They are getting in on the next wave of technology, which is the computer industry, the high technology industries, and solar and hydrogen energy. When the petroleum is gone, where will we get our energy? We will get our energy from the multinational corporations that are in on the next wave. It is absolute insanity.

I plead with the members opposite to use some common sense before they get into this nationalization game. Mr. Speaker, think of what $1.5 billion would do today in the computer industry. If we are going to turn to our citizens, I would have no trouble at all in going back to my citizens in Lethbridge-Foothills and saying, "Folks, I want to borrow $1 billion so that we can put it into high technology, so that it will do something for our children and our grandchildren." But I do have trouble going back to my constituents and saying that we are going to buy the tail end of an industry, where the money will go to a multinational corporation to invest in hydrogen technology. We will then have to buy from them in the future. It is absolutely insane.

The last point I should like to make is in reference to my hon. friend from Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis), who talked about $12 billion being ripped off by the oil companies. His implication was that the private companies, even if owned by Canadians, would not be any better. I say to him that it would be far worse with Petro-Canada. Look at the experience of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited. Does that Crown corporation act in the best interests of Canadians? There is hard-core proof that it entered into an international conspiracy that was equally oppressive to our citizens than what the oil companies might have done.

The hon. member says taxes will increase. I suppose that is true, they might. But corporate taxes just end up flowing through to the people. If you tax my corporation, I will just increase the price of my product. That passes on to the poor citizen at the end of the whip. The long and short of it is that the individual citizen at the end of the shovel is the man who pays the full cost in the end.

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I should like to speak in support of the amendment of my colleague, the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) to increase the level of Canadian public ownership of the oil industry to 50 per cent on new projects on Canada lands. In this and in other amendments that my party has proposed we are calling for an affirmative action program for the Canadian people in the oil industry. We want to see the Canadian people receive a guaranteed part of the action.

My colleagues from Vancouver-Kingsway and the hon. member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) have clearly shown that present proposals in the bill calling for 50 per cent Canadian ownership are nothing more than a farce. The loopholes are big enough to accommodate a supertanker. A consortium can meet the requirements for 50 per cent Canadian ownership and still be controlled effectively by a foreign-based multinational. Different patterns of ownership and control mean that Canadians could easily have 50 per cent or more ownership; but Canadians would not necessarily have control. This is illustrated very clearly, Mr. Speaker, by the fact that at the end of 1980 foreign ownership stood at 74 per cent, but effective foreign control was still at 82 per cent in the oil industry.

Canadian ownership and Canadian control must go hand in hand and they should be increased to 75 per cent by 1986, as earlier amendments have stated. Amendment No. 22 states that the rate of Canadian public ownership of new projects should go to 50 per cent.

The Tory energy critic opposed the New Democratic Party proposals because he says that these will mean more regulations for the oil industry. As I listened to his speech last Friday, he sounded more and more like a member of the Reagan cabinet in the United States. He appears to support the oil industry in some so-called right to do exactly as it pleases, regardless of the economic consequences for Canada and of our national priorities.

The great hue and cry which he echoes against regulations is really a plea to let the naked self-interest of giant corporations rule in the marketplace. This kind of thinking sees environmental regulations, health regulations, or regulations directed toward any other social goal as a false interference of politics into the sovereign realm of free enterprise.

To listen to the Tories, Mr. Speaker, you would think that the oil industry should operate in some kind of value-free environment, completely beyond the scope of politics. This does not accord very well with the fact that in 1979 the oil companies gave the Liberal and Tory parties some $721,000 in political donations. To me this does not seem to be a hands off policy.

The Tory energy critic objected to our reference to a capital strike by the oil industry. Last Friday he said, to quote him, that "the New Democratic Party calls it a capital strike." Well, if an employee does not like the conditions in a company and he quits to go to work for another company, he has not gone on strike; he has simply quit. He is exercising his individual freedom. A strike is something else again. As a result of the new energy program, the oil industry is exercising its freedom.

That comparison is ludicrous. Equating the economic power of a huge corporation like Imperial Oil withdrawing its funding for Cold Lake with the power of an individual working person quitting his job is nothing short of ludicrous. But it reflects some of the thinking that we find on the benches to our right.

The Bertrand report makes it very clear that Canada's oil industry has shown a remarkable degree of solidarity in the way it has worked together to gouge the Canadian public. The withdrawal of capital from projects in western Canada over this past year and a half shows a similar tendency. The oil industry is acting in concert and not as a series of isolated and individual companies. Indeed, there has been very clearly a strike of capital.

If we look at the two amendments before us, Mr. Speaker, we see the differences among the three parties. The former energy critic in whose name Motion No. 21 stands, the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson), says, in effect, yes, we favour 50 per cent Canadianization. But the only role he sees for public ownership is to pick up the pieces that the private sector does not want.

Last Friday he called this "picking up the pieces" philosophy the traditional Canadian way. The traditional Canadian way, as seen by the Tory party, involves public corporations taking all the unprofitable operations and private corporations creaming the profits. If there was to be joint ownership of a cow, the Tories would want the private sector to have the part that gave the milk, while the public sector could have the part that did all the eating and required all the attention.

● (1640)

Far from supporting our party's call for 50 per cent public ownership, the present Tory finance critic objected to the back-in provisions by which the Crown could obtain 25 per cent of new development on Canada lands. Several times he complained bitterly that some of these provisions were at no cost to the government or to Crown corporations. But in his speech he completely ignored past concessions. He said nothing about the overly generous grant system by which Canadian taxpayers put up $4 for every $1 which is spent by a 65 per cent Canadian-owned company in frontier exploration. Taxpayers through the government put up over 80 per cent of the money for exploration in these circumstances but get only 25 per cent ownership, while the private company puts up 20 per cent of the money and gets 75 per cent ownership. It sounds like a pretty good deal for the private company as far as I can see, but it is not good enough for the Tory party.

In addition to these grants, tax concessions give even more of a break to private companies, so that taxpayers put in 93 cents on the exploration dollar and private companies put in 7 cents. On that basis I cannot see where they can complain about having a 25 per cent back-in provision. In fact, it is too inadequate and we should be supporting Motion No. 22 which calls for 50 per cent.

With that kind of deal the Tories still object to the public's opportunity to acquire a 25 per cent interest, when in many cases it will have already paid over 90 per cent of the exploration costs. Also taxpayers will have to pay compensation for any of the 25 per cent options they pick up, but as far as the Tories are concerned it is too good a deal for the public.

On the other hand we have the Liberals. Their approach is best understood by reading excerpts from a speech given by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) last March in Toronto, as reported in the June-July issue of "The Canadian Forum". The minister said when talking about the Liberal party:

> We saw that since 1974 the oil and gas industry has been a net capital exporter. In spite of all the rhetoric about how much we needed the multinationals and about how they were doing such great things for Canada, all the money that they were spending in this country had been raised inside Canada, out of the Canadian taxpayers and the Canadian consumers, and that since 1974 the industry had been a net exporter to the tune of about $3.7 billion . . . We also saw that the decisions affecting the future of the oil and gas industry and therefore the well-being of all Canadians were being made by foreigners in the corporate boardrooms of the foreign parents—
>
> And my experience in the last year as a minister has demonstrated beyond any doubt that when it comes to the issues that count, those decisions are made where the control is, and that is outside of Canada . . . I suppose you can blame us for not having seen it before, and indeed I still knock my head on the wall every once in a while and say why didn't we do it ten years ago? . . . but that's no reason to abandon the task that's ahead of us.

It is touching to imagine the minister knocking his head on the wall, bewailing his failure to act and the failure of the government to act in past years. This is something which he shares with millions of Canadians who have been gouged by the oil companies, those who have suffered from past decisions of the government. As they face the consequences of the government's policies over the last ten years, they too want to bang their heads against the wall.

But the minister is not being completely candid when he pretends that he has only seen the light of nationalization in the last couple of years. The 1974 Liberal election platform promised a 50 per cent to 60 per cent Canadian ownership for all new energy projects. But of course, being part of the Liberal election platform does not guarantee very much. I remember reading a story about the late Right Hon. Arthur Meighen who at one point defended a policy which he thought was important. Someone shouted from across the floor, "That is in the Liberal platform." Mr. Meighen said:

> Mr. Speaker, I am sorry to hear it. Had I a wish dearer to my heart than all others, the worst fate I could fear for it would be that some day it would get into a Liberal platform.

We feel that way about some of our programs. We see the Liberals adopting the rhetoric of them but not including any of the substance. The Liberals are the great accommodators. They pick up a few progressive ideas from members of the New Democratic Party, a large measure of reaction from the Tories and bring them both together into a bureaucratic stew, and no one knows what it is.

The minister laments the failure of past policy decisions by the government. He admits that these decisions have not served the needs of the Canadian people. But ten years ago New Democrats were urging the government to obtain control of the oil industry for the Canadian people. Today we are showing the inadequacy of the present legislation. We would like to see some movement which will provide for a larger measure of public ownership, stiffer regulations to identify Canadian ownership with Canadian control, an increase in the percentage of that ownership before companies can obtain maximum benefits, guarantees for Canadian content in spin-off industries, and explicit protection for aboriginal rights and for the environment. Also we would like to see more emphasis on renewable energy and conservation.

We want to see some movement on these things in this bill. Otherwise, ten years down the road Canadians will be paying for these mistakes just as they are paying for past ones today and Liberals, if there are any left, will be saying, "It was an honest mistake". It will not be an honest mistake; it will be a stupid mistake. I urge support for Motion No. 22 to increase the Crown share from 25 per cent to 50 per cent so as to give the Canadian public some protection from profit seeking and to ensure that some of the benefits of the oil industry stay with Canadians.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 40, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the hon. member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker)—Government of Canada—Decentralization program. (b) Justification for program; the hon. member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie)—Industry—Location of Aerospace Training Centre Institute. (b) Request for commitment to Winnipeg site; the hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton)—Wildlife—Export of falcons to Middle East.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADA OIL AND GAS ACT

MEASURE RESPECTING OIL AND GAS INTERESTS

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-48, to regulate oil and gas interests in Canada lands and to amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on National Resources and Public Works, and Motions Nos. 21 (Mr. Wilson) and 22 (Mr. Waddell).

Mr. Roy MacLaren (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, under the motions now before the House we have heard considerable discussion both at an earlier sitting and today about the Canadianization of our petroleum industry. I want to take this occasion before we move to the vote on the motions now before us to clarify some of the major concerns which have been raised and to review the intent of government policy in several areas.

First, it is necessary to define clearly what we on this side of the House mean by Canadianization. We mean Canadianization as being conducted both by the private sector and by the public sector. We look for one half of the oil and gas industry to be controlled by Canadians by 1990. As I have indicated in this House before, for us Canadianization means giving Canadian oil and gas companies, Canadian investors and indeed all Canadians, an opportunity to participate in their own petroleum industry, and an opportunity for Canadian companies to grow more quickly than in the past. Canadianization is not intended to force out foreign companies or make their operations in Canada unprofitable. For example, under the National Energy Program, the net cost to foreign-controlled firms exploring in Canada will remain lower than comparable costs in the United States.

● (1650)

Before the announcement of the National Energy Program a year ago tomorrow, an unforeseen ramification of one government policy was increased foreign ownership in the petroleum industry. I refer to our resource taxation policy. Companies already in the industry and with the largest production received large windfall profits due to skyrocketing oil and gas prices as the result of the OPEC increases. Most of these companies were foreign controlled. They were the main beneficiaries of the earned depletion allowance since that deduction from taxable resource income was available only to firms whose principal business was resources and who had existing resource income. Under the old policy, there was a built-in guarantee that foreign-owned firms would become larger. That dilemma was not faced by any other country and clearly was not one that would be tolerated by any other country. Things had to change, Mr. Speaker.

By 1980 the massively foreign-owned and controlled Canadian oil and gas industry accounted for almost one third of the non-financial sector profits in Canada. The government came to the logical conclusion that too much power was destined to reside in the hands of non-Canadians. Unlike the policies of many other countries seeking to redress a similar situation, this government offered profitable inducements to Canadianization, not expropriation, measures. The operations of foreign firms in Canada are very profitable. To the extent that they increase the opportunities for Canadians to participate with them, they can be even more so under the National Energy Program.

Unquestionably, some of the guidelines for companies in the oil and gas sector have changed but the changes are both fair and equitable. The program gives foreign companies an incentive to seek Canadian shareholders and partners. To the extent that they do, they can benefit from the same higher exploration grants that companies which are Canadian controlled already enjoy. Many foreign-controlled companies, recognizing the real concern of Canadians with respect to their own energy future, have begun to rearrange their affairs to take advantage of the benefits of the program. In doing so they are prospering under its conditions.

Canadianization is working. Since the National Energy Program was announced, foreign ownership of the petroleum industry has declined by about six percentage points and foreign control by about ten percentage points, to 67 per cent. Endorsement of Canadianization by the government of Alberta, the government of British Columbia and most recently by the government of Saskatchewan illustrates the strong support which the national government's position has gained in this regard.

In the agreement reached with Saskatchewan and announced on Monday of this week, the Premier of Saskatchewan and the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) noted that energy developments in Saskatchewan should proceed rapidly. They went on to say:

> The two governments, working in co-operation, will ensure that Saskatchewan will play a significant role in contributing to the attainment of Canadian energy security and further Canadian ownership of the oil and gas industry in this decade.

Such a development is to be warmly welcomed, as is the imaginative and leading role that Petro-Canada has been playing in the Canadianization of our petroleum industry.

Last Saturday I had the pleasure of opening the first Petro-Canada gas station in Ontario in the splendid riding of Etobicoke North, an area of Toronto noted for its progressive thinking! I did so partly in honour of the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell), who claims to be from Vancouver but in fact is from Etobicoke!

By mid-October this year some $6.7 billion had been spent on acquisitions of foreign companies in the over $100 million price range. Besides those acquisitions, however, there have been farm-ins by Canadian companies on foreign-leased land and the formation of new exploration companies with foreign and Canadian participation combined. Those types of activity are expected to increase once the Petroleum Incentive Program has been adopted, but I want to make it clear that the majority of Canadianization will be done by the private sector.

I should like to turn now to a point that has been raised in the course of discussion this afternoon. I refer to the question of the 25 per cent Crown share which is to apply to all oil and gas rights except those where commercial production has already been attained.

One must place the 25 per cent Crown share in its proper context. The provision is but one part of a broad and comprehensive new oil and gas regime in the Canada lands. As such, the Crown's share cannot be viewed in isolation from the larger package.

Individual portions of the new oil and gas regime do not replace particular aspects of the previous anachronistic system; rather, the present legislation extinguishes the present system in most of its aspects. In place of the old system, Bill C-48 makes available to current lease and permit holders, as well as to new players, an entirely new package which includes as one element, a 25 per cent Crown share. The new system, including the Crown share, is an instrument designed to ensure that exploration and development of the resources in the Canada lands go forward rapidly.

Novelty has apparently resulted in some confusion. As illustrated in the program, there will be a 25 per cent federal cash incentive grant available to all explorers to offset the 25 per cent Crown share. This grant means that the government will be paying, and ultimately the taxpayer will be paying, its own way. Quite simply, the Crown share will not be a free ride. There is also no discrimination of foreign companies; the 25 per cent cash incentive is available equally to all.

Moreover, if the designated Crown operation converts to a working interest during the exploration stage, the government, in effect, pays almost twice for its interest during the balance of that stage. The private interest holder will continue to receive the minimum 25 per cent exploration grant in respect of his 75 per cent interest, while the Crown corporation will pay for 100 per cent of its working 25 per cent interest.

● (1700)

Between these two sources of funds, nearly 44 per cent of exploration costs will be met by or on behalf of the federal government. In this light, it is easily seen that the federal government is providing generous encouragement to firms with interests in the Canada lands. Not only is the government prepared to pay to all the minimum of 25 per cent in direct grants to cover exploration costs, but it is also prepared to pay up to 80 per cent in such grants, depending on the level of Canadian ownership.

Those who would criticize these measures should also consider that income tax rules continue to provide substantial indirect subsidies for many companies. The after tax, after grant costs of frontier exploration is greatly reduced as a result of the provisions of the National Energy Program. For example, Canadian companies will have net exploration costs as low as seven cents on the dollar. For others, the cash costs of a dollar expended on Canada lands exploration will be no more than 28 cents.

Against that background, let us consider the "back-in" share. Concerning application of the 25 per cent Crown share to oil and gas rights issued before the passage of the new act, there is a significant difference between the current Canada lands regime and the proposed package in Bill C-48. Under the current regime, holders of exploration rights are required to return to the Crown at least one half of their acreage, which could in certain cases involve up to 30 per cent of their discoveries, prior to obtaining production rights.

It is difficult to understand the argument of those who contend that the current regime's provision for return of acreage does not pose burdens to those exploring. If this were indeed the case, then why have explorers, in several cases, opted for special renewal permits on their entire acreage, thereby accepting a 25 per cent Petro-Canada back-in? They could have chosen to move directly to lease, thereby yielding up one half of their acreage, but avoiding a Petro-Canada back-in. They could have chosen to move directly to lease, thereby yield up one half of their acreage, but avoiding a Petro-Canada back-in.

Under the legislation before us, holders of exploration rights will not face this situation. They will be allowed to retain production rights to the entire area of an oil or gas field.

The Canadian taxpayer has long been assisting petroleum companies in meeting their expenditures in the frontier regions. Through taxpayers' dollars, Canadians have been funding much more than one quarter of frontier exploration and development costs. It has been common for more than 90 cents of an exploration dollar to be covered by the contributions of the Canadian taxpayer. It is an understatement to say that federal tax incentives have been generous.

There is no doubt that Canadians own 100 per cent of the Canada lands and the oil and gas resources beneath. Private companies are allowed to explore and develop these resources, but on the clear understanding that, as landlord, the federal government can set a regime which is appropriate to the circumstances. Of course, this situation is not unique to the Canada lands. It is the common prerogative of all governments having the responsibility of managing a nation's resource heritage.

There is no basis for charges of confiscation without compensation. The new system, including the 25 per cent Crown share, supersedes the existing regime in every respect. The only exception is in the case of fields which are already in production, for which, as I have said, existing terms will remain in force even after the passage of this bill. The government is satisfied that the proposed regime is equitable in every way. Nevertheless, to dispel any contrary concerns remaining on the part of those who have been critical of the 25 per cent Crown interest provision, we have proposed reimbursement of actual exploration costs already incurred. In that spirit of compromise, we introduced amendments to provide payments in respect of 25 per cent of expenditures made up to the end of 1980 in respect of any petroleum discovery which results from a well prior to that date and which qualifies to be declared a significant discovery prior to the end of 1982. Qualifying expenditures will be determined on the same basis as those eligible for inclusion in the calculations set out for the progressive incremental royalty elsewhere in the bill.

These payments will be made from the Crown share of production. To reflect the value in time of qualifying expenditures, they will be escalated at the rate of 15 per cent annually up to the end of 1980. We shall then pay 250 per cent of this escalated value of eligible expenditures as a first claim on the commercial production attributable to the Crown share. This factor of 250 per cent will ensure that these payments will retain a real dollar value in relation to the past expenditures covered, even if commercial production does not arise until the latter part of this decade.

The provisions for exploration and development on the Canada lands are fair to all interests; but as I mentioned earlier, one emphasis of our program is to reduce foreign holdings in our oil and gas industry to 50 per cent by 1990. This would still leave half of our country's most important resource under foreign control, much more than would be tolerated in other industrialized countries.

It has been asserted that the recent takeovers by Canadians of foreign-controlled subsidiary companies have somehow been at fire sale prices caused by the National Energy Program. In fact, the biggest single takeover since the program was announced, the purchase of Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas from Conoco, was at a price that Conoco itself regarded as "fair and reasonable".

The bill, and the National Energy Program in general, have been developed to take into account the concerns of foreign investors as well as Canadians; but surely our friends must understand our resolve to attain one half share in our own oil and gas resources. We have heard voices in the United States which have apparently not been fully aware of the provisions of the National Energy Program and Bill C-48, and the legitimate concerns in the Canadian gas and oil sector. However, there have also been people in the United States who have grasped the essential element in our Canadianization program. For example, a Congressman from Florida recently noted in the House of Representatives that:

> Attention on our (American) side is centred on Canada's new national energy policy . . . Moves by Canadian companies to take over American ones in this country have also caused a reaction here. I suggest that if we understand our own reaction to a handful of Canadian takeover efforts in the United States, we can also understand Canadian concerns when almost three quarters of Canada's energy industry is in foreign hands. In fact some 80 per cent of that foreign participation is American.

I want to note the fact that we have heard voices coming from the United States Congress which do grasp the essence of the Canadianization challenge in Canada. However, I want to conclude by quoting a Canadian. The president of the Trans-Canada PipeLines Company recently stated this in New York:

> Americans think Canada's political motivation is hostility to the United States. No matter how much evidence there may appear to be to the contrary, this is a gross misreading of the country.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the parliamentary secretary but his time has expired. He may continue only with the unanimous consent of the House.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. MacLaren: I thank the House for its indulgence, Mr. Speaker. The president of the TransCanada PipeLines went on to say:

> Canada's economic policies are not anti-American, they are pro-Canadian. When the motivations are understood, they are eminently reasonable.

In conclusion, it seems clear to me and to all those who are on this side of the House that the Canadianization of the industry as outlined in the National Energy Program and Bill C-48 is both fair and reasonable for all concerned.

● (1710)

Mr. Harvie Andre (Calgary Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise in this debate to deal with a few points raised by other hon. members, in particular the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. MacLaren), the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Evans) who spoke last Friday and those who spoke for the New Democratic Party.

First, I want to deal with this question of the 25 per cent confiscation of privately owned assets, which is part of Bill C-48 and part of the National Energy Program. The lead off spokesman for our party on this motion was the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson). He outlined our position fairly thoroughly, and if anyone wants an accurate view of where we stand, he could read his speech. However, I do want to comment on some points made by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. For example, he mentioned that this 25 per cent confiscation provision is justified because tax incentives were in place when the privately held companies initiated and continued their exploration programs. The assets acquired in Canada lands through the exploration funds spent in that area were supposedly in part paid for by the taxpayers of Canada. Therefore, the Crown was justified in coming along and taking 25 per cent without remuneration.

I cannot think of a more serious precedent for this country to establish than this. Specifically, if tax incentives are in place, this justifies future governments being able to seize part of the assets acquired as part of that tax incentive.

If that principle is accepted, then clearly anyone's registered retirement savings plan falls into that category. If you have a registered retirement savings plan, it was put in place as a result of a tax incentive. In other words, there was an incentive in the system for you to save money in the RRSP. If you invested that money and it is now worth something, based on the principle outlined by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy the government is perfectly justified in taking half of that asset. According to his principle, the taxpayers paid for half of it. That is the principle the parliamentary secretary outlined. It is an absolutely absurd notion. It is intolerable.

I have examined the situation in other parts of the world to see if there were a precedent anywhere in the democratic world where a democratically elected government had seized privately-owned assets, and I could not find an example anywhere. However, what I was able to find is something called "Political Risk Services", a consulting report prepared by Frost and Sullivan, Inc. in New York City. Frost and Sullivan assess the political risk of various countries around the world for the benefit of clients. It is a rather interesting list, alphabetically arranged. It assesses things such as the probability of a regime change, the probability of political turmoil, the probability of expropriation and the probability of repatriation restrictions. There is also a political risk summary.

The expropriation column is most interesting. For example, we find the probability for expropriation expressed in percentage figures is as follows: Algeria, 24 per cent; Argentina, which is not a democratic country, 15 per cent; Australia, 14 per cent; Austria, 10 per cent; Belgium, 10 per cent; Bolivia 18 per cent; Brazil, 20 per cent and Canada, 24 per cent. The probability of expropriation in Canada is exactly the same as that for Algeria. The list continues: Chile, 10 per cent; China, 23 per cent; Columbia, 10 per cent.

Then we find a country with a higher expropriation probability than Canada, namely, the Dominican Republic, which has a 34 per cent expropriation probability. Next comes Ecuador with an expropriation probability of 24 per cent, exactly the same as that of Canada; Egypt also has a 24 per cent risk. The probability of expropriation in El Salvador is higher than Canada. It is shown as 58 per cent. Then we find Finland has a 10 per cent risk and France a 22 per cent risk of expropriation. That is interesting. France has just elected a socialist government which is expropriating all of its banks. Canada, which supposedly has a democratic, free enterprise government—at least that is what is claimed—has a risk factor of 24 per cent. India has a 19 per cent risk and Indonesia a 22 per cent risk. Canada is considered a higher political risk in terms of expropriation than Indonesia and all these other countries.

I could go on and on. Without exception, if you look at democratic countries as opposed to totalitarian countries on the right or the left, Canada leads the list. I have talked to people associated with Frost and Sullivan but they were not able to give me an example from anywhere in the democratic world where a democratic government had expropriated privately held assets without remuneration.

The parliamentary secretary did say that as a result of representations the government had made some changes and provided for some compensation for expropriated assets. The compensation would be 250 per cent of the current investment, but paid for out of future earnings. Let me repeat that, paid for out of future earnings. That is a cute trick. Members of the New Democratic Party would say that 250 per cent is outrageous and that was an overpayment.

Mr. Waddell: Right on.

Mr. Andre: But to anyone who looks at those numbers, the present worth of that payment is, according to one estimate I read, 5 per cent to 7 per cent. That is 5 per cent to 7 per cent of the real value. Another estimate by a company reckons that it would be closer to 1 per cent or 2 per cent. No one says it is worth more than 6 per cent or 7 per cent. They say that at the very outside the present worth of that future payment is perhaps 6 per cent or 7 per cent. Therefore, they are no longer confiscating totally. They will give the holders of the assets a maximum of 7 per cent of what it is worth in today's dollars. That is theft. As I say, no other democratic country has engaged in that kind of activity, which is outright theft, without remuneration. I think it is disgusting. Perhaps more than anything else that is responsible for the outflow of capital from Canada.

A government that would confiscate privately-owned assets without payment obviously would not think twice about things like currency control or putting up the equivalent of Berlin walls to try to keep capital in Canada. Obviously the same mentality that can justify confiscation of privately-owned assets can justify a whole lot of activity. People who are concerned about that are taking the opportunity to move their money out of the country. They have been doing it this year to the extent of $10 billion. If the minister of housing were really interested in people having to renew mortgages at such high rates, he would be clamouring with the minister of energy to stop this stupidity. After all, the minister of housing is carrying the political cost. Interest rates are 3 per cent or 4 per cent higher than they should be. People are having to pay that rate on their mortgages. The minister of housing is having to attend meetings in London and elsewhere, taking the abuse for that, abuse that more rightly belongs to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde), who put in place the policy that has caused these high interest rates. There cannot be any justification for that kind of confiscation.

The parliamentary secretary said that the Crown interest is not a free ride. The act says that they carry interest. Carried interest is jargon for free ride. That is legalese for free ride, and that is exactly what it means. It is a carried interest. In other words, you have an interest and you are carried by your partners. It is only when production starts that the government gets a working interest. PetroCan goes into a working interest. At that point in time anybody could take on the obligations and pay his share. At that point in time you have revenue coming in. At that point in time Harvie Andre with next to no assets could walk into the bank and borrow the hundreds of millions of dollars necessary to finance his share, because we would have guaranteed cash flow and would be going into production. The money is going to be there to service the debt and pay off the loan. For the parliamentary secretary to say that that represents the government paying its fair share, or PetroCan paying its fair share, is again an absurdity. It is not doing so, Mr. Speaker.

● (1720)

I also want to deal for a moment with the remarks of the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance, when he denied in the House last Friday statements of fact by spokesmen of this party that money, equipment, personnel, rigs and everything else were leaving the country. He asked us to provide proof. Let me quote from his remarks. He quoted from an article in The Financial Post and then he said:

> That does not sound to me as though the National Energy Program is driving small Canadian companies out of Canada. It sounds to me as if they are saying the NEP is a very good program, that it will lead to additional exploration and development, and that they can hardly wait to get their drills into the ground.

The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance should know better than that, and I am sure he does. I am sure he must have blushed a little bit when he made those remarks. I should like to read to him a Canadian Press story of today's date by Steve Mertl, Denver, Colorado. He said in his article, which incidentally is part of a parcel of news clippings collected by the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources, so it is not something I made up:

> About 50 U.S. subsidiaries of Canadian-based firms now have offices in Denver. They are here to exploit renewed interest in the potentially-rich Rocky Mountain formations and looking to prospects across the U.S.

In the same article in another paragraph he goes on to state:

Oil executives estimate that even under the new price regime the net return after taxes on conventional oil is four times higher in the U.S. than in Canada. And despite the high price accorded new oil from Canadian frontier reserves and enhanced recovery, the producer will receive less than in the U.S. because much of the increase in Canada goes to taxes and royalties.

Then the clipping quotes one Canadian who is now down there. It states:

"I find psychologically I've written off Canada" says Stan Jones, former director of the Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors and now Vice-President of Trio Petro Inc. "I'm no longer angry."

That is sad; this Canadian who worked here says he has just written off Canada. He is no longer angry but he just left. He was tired of fighting and he just left. Let me bring a more illuminating fact to the attention of those opposite. This clipping goes on to state:

Perhaps the most ironic illustration of this lack of confidence is Lochiel Exploration Ltd., owned by Alberta Liberal Party Leader Nick Taylor.

Peter Kneeland, Lochiel's Secretary-Treasurer, and Sheldon Crewson, its Vice-President of Exploration, sat in on the conference. Crewson said the company is expanding its projected $10 million U.S. exploration budget, highlighting its Kansan drilling program. Lochiel, which has been here for more than a year, already has some production in Colorado.

Kneeland said Lochiel has been forced to cut back on its Canadian drilling. Not because it wants to, but because needed capital is nowhere to be found. It has fled to other investments or is waiting on the sidelines for better times.

Kneeland betrayed discomfort recalling his boss's initial support for the National Energy Program, but was quick to point out Taylor has attacked the Sept. 1 pricing agreement as a sellout of the industry and consumers.

Lochiel's presence in the U.S. is not hard to understand, says Jones.

When the NEP came out a year ago one of the few people in Canada who said it was a good thing was Nick Taylor, leader of Alberta's Liberal party. He was showing that he was more of a Liberal than he was honest. We now see that he said, for the benefit of his hopes or aspirations to join the Senate or some other body, "Yes, you are doing a good job"; but when it comes to his own oil company he says, "Fellows, you better go to Kansas or Colorado and drill there because there is no future for us in Canada". So he says one thing and does another.

We hear members opposite standing up and asking what we are talking about when we say oil companies are leaving. If they do not believe us I suggest they phone Nick Taylor. He is of their own stripe, the Alberta Liberal party leader. Phone Nick Taylor and ask him why Canadians are leaving to go to the U.S.

The final point I want to talk about is this matter of Canadianization and what it means. We have been accused, particularly by members of the NDP but also by members of the Liberal party, of somehow being against Canadian ownership, or of somehow not favouring Canadians having a larger position in the Canadian oil and gas industry. That is an absolute absurdity. In fact, I will personally put my record in this regard up against that of any member of this House of anybody who has spoken.

I was a charter member of the Calgary section of the Committee for an Independent Canada, now defunct. I joined, as a matter of fact, in indignation and outrage over what was then the law in Canada. The law in Canada in 1970 was that an American could drill a well in Canada on pre-tax dollars but Canadians could not. That was the law of this country and it had been the law for decades. It was an absurd law.

In 1947, which really was the birth of the current oil industry in Canada, the majority of the industry was Canadian owned. Through that period of activity during the 1940s and the early 1950s, particularly during the Korean war period, Americans were coming to Canada in great numbers to invest in the oil and gas industry. There was a particularly attractive tax regime in existence which was not available to Canadians. Canadians could not afford to compete with Americans for investments in Canada. That is what it amounted to.

James Gray, a well known Alberta-based author, talks about coming to Ottawa in the early 1950s and talking to the deputy minister of finance who was a personal friend. He asked what was happening with all these foreign-owned companies coming in and buying up all this development when Canadians could not compete. He said the deputy minister of finance said, "We don't give a damn who owns the industry as long as we can tax them". That is what happened as a result of that stupid policy, and that is all you can call it, and by 1975 the industry was foreign owned to the extent of more than 90 per cent.

After I was first elected in 1972, for the next four years this was a project I had in mind and I never lost an opportunity to speak in the House or to lobby ministers about this law. I see the hon. member for Sarnia (Mr. Cullen) sitting opposite. He will recall my lobbying when he was minister of national revenue. I remember lobbying the Hon. Donald Macdonald when he was minister of energy, mines and resources. I remember him saying in exasperation one day, "I agree with you but I am not the minister of finance and I cannot do anything about it". To his credit, when he became the minister of finance he changed the law in his first budget. He removed the principal business test.

What happened in the next five years was that the industry changed from over 90 per cent foreign owned to 70 per cent foreign owned with increased Canadianization. There was a huge increase in Canadian content in that period of time. This was not the result of the establishment of Petro-Canada and not the result of government intervention, but the result of adopting a set of laws which said that Canadians could compete on par. That is what is so phony about this current program. The government claims it invented Canadianization. That is absurd and the record is there. Give Canadians a fair shake to compete at par and they will in fact take up their rightful position as the movers, shakers and doers of this industry.

This is what they were doing until the NEP came along, and now they have all gone south, all in the name of this new discovery or invention "Canadianization". This is an absolutely phony and false declaration of what this government's policy really is. Its policy is to take more control for the bureaucrats, for government, rather than having individual Canadians being the owners, participants, actors and drivers in this industry.

• (1730)

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, when I hear the hon. member for Calgary Centre (Mr. Andre), I think of the generals who are preparing to fight their last war. I cannot understand why he gave another 20-minute speech against the National Energy Program when the Premier of Alberta, Mr. Lougheed, has accepted the program in his deal with Ottawa.

Let us deal with reality and with this bill. I am glad to learn the hon. member was a member of the Committee for an Independent Canada, like many of us in this House. But I thought he was a pimp for the oil industry when I listened to some of his speeches.

I should say to the hon. member for Etobicoke North (Mr. MacLaren), whom I see laughing over there, that when he referred to Etobicoke, that great municipality in the west end of Toronto, he reminded me of the time I lived there as a boy. Etobicoke for many years had a reeve named Ozzie Waffle. When I listened to the hon. member for Etobicoke North, he reminded me of the nickname we had for Ozzie Waffle. We used to call him "Woozie Awful". I thank the hon. member for bringing back those memories.

Mr. Regan: It is a sign of old age to reminisce.

Mr. Waddell: The hon. minister of whatever he was demoted to over there says it is a sign of old age. He should know.

The Chair ruled that Motions Nos. 21 and 22 were to be debated together, which is a good idea. The Chair also ruled that when Motion No. 21 is disposed of, this would dispose of Motion No. 22. I would ask the Chair to look at that ruling further. The motions are quite different. Motion No. 21 in the name of the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson) deals with the Canadian ownership rate and with bringing more private enterprise into the measure. My motion, Motion No. 22, would have the opposite effect. It deals with giving Petro-Canada 50 per cent backing. In this bill, the government has suggested a 25 per cent interest for Petro-Canada. it is quite clear there are three points of view on this issue. Perhaps the Chair would consider this further. I submit that the votes on Motions Nos. 21 and 22 should be separated. I ask that the Chair reserve judgment on that.

I now wish to speak to Motion No. 22. I saw the hon. member for Athabasca (Mr. Shields) in the House earlier. I met him this summer in Fairmont Hot Springs, a beautiful spot. The beauty has not changed in the last 30 or 50 years. I said to him, "Isn't this a wonderful place?" He agreed with me and asked, "Could you ever develop it?"

Let us look at what we are doing in development. I do not understand the reasoning of other hon. members who have spoken on this motion, including the hon. member for Athabasca. When more than 90 per cent of every exploration dollar has been covered by the taxpayer, how can they say a 25 per cent Crown share is expropriation without compensation? We have to remember who the original owners of this oil and gas are. The hon. member for Calgary Centre asked for a list of countries which had taken over property. As far as Canada is concerned, surely that property was ours in the first place. It is not theft or confiscation. We own 100 per cent of that oil and gas. I will prove later on that through amendments the government has brought in, the companies are going to be more than adequately compensated.

I heard the argument that we were changing the rules in the middle of the game. When the government introduced the superdepletion allowance, where were my friends to the right? Did they get up and accuse the government of changing the rules in the middle of the game? Not likely. When the budget comes down next week and changes the taxation of some of our constituents, are my friends to my right going to get up and say this is changing the rules in the middle of the game? It is an absurd argument because it is our game and our oil and gas. Perhaps that is Tory logic.

The government has already backed down in dealing with Section 27 of the act. I draw your attention to the remarks of the minister in committee on January 20, 1981. He made all the arguments I have just made. He said in that committee, as reported at page 16-7:

> What, then, could anybody mean by terming this a "free ride"? Obviously the Canadian taxpayer is simply getting value for his tax money being used to finance and support oil and gas activities in the frontier regions.

He goes on to talk about the money Canadian taxpayers are contributing to exploration and development. He goes on to talk about the absurd argument about changing the rules in the middle of the game. Yet the minister, in response to the howling of the oil industry and their friends to my right, made changes in the act.

I quote from an article in The Globe and Mail dated May 15, 1981, an article by Jennifer Lewington. It states:

> Energy Minister Marc Lalonde has announced a number of limited modifications to the federal government's proposed oil and gas legislation, including compensation for past exploration costs associated with the Crown's retroactive 25 per cent stake in oil and gas rights held by companies. The concession means that the government will make payments in respect of 25 per cent of qualified exploration expenses on an oil and gas discovery resulting from a well started before December 31, 1980, and which is declared a significant discovery before December 31, 1982.
>
> Previously the government offered only to pay its share of costs once the 25 per cent Crown 'carried interest' was converted to a 'working interest', prior to a production licence being issued to industry.
>
> The compensation, based on a formula, will be paid out of the Crown's share of future production.
>
> The formula allows for those expenses incurred up to December 31, 1980 to be escalated at a rate of 15 per cent a year. The government then pays 250 per cent of the escalated value of the eligible expenditures as first claim on the commercial production coming from the 25 per cent Crown share.

Well, Mr. Speaker, the government already knuckled under on this matter. I do not know what my friends to the right are screaming about. What has happened is that in the past we paid 90-cent dollars to finance this exploration, and in the future we will pay 250 per cent. The hon. member for Calgary Centre said I would no doubt raise that point. Well, I am raising that point. It is quite clear that the government is going back and compensating the industry, and so we have to pay twice.

Before I sit down I wish to say something about the dangers of cutting back and the pattern emerging from this bill and its amendments. The government is slowly going back and gutting this bill. The whole intent of this bill can be gutted by changing the Canadian ownership rate. The crux of the bill is that 50 per cent Canadian ownership must be there before there is production in Canada lands. Canadian ownership is not defined in the bill. In the definition section of the bill it is merely stated that a definition is to come in this act or any future act. But it will be defined in the energy security act, an omnibus bill awaiting debate.

● (1740)

We are seeing pressure being exerted by the U.S. and by the Conservative party, as well as by the oil industry, to change the bill. The government is slowly backing down. I predict that it will back down on the Canadian ownership rate. The other day I demonstrated that Canadian ownership does not mean much without Canadian control. I predict that when they define the Canadian ownership rate, the government will bow down to pressure from the U.S. and from the industry. That has been the pattern.

Here are some of the concessions:

Extension of the life of an exploration agreement to eight years from five—

Extension of the exploration agreement, if drilling is under way on one or more of the wells required to fulfil the pact; a recognition that difficult conditions may prevent drilling of a well in the year it is started.

Allowing for exploration agreements, even where drilling moratoriums exist, with the permit holder not allowed to be active until the ban ends.

Sourcing of Canadian goods, services and labour was changed. Here is another back-down:

The cut-off date for "pioneer production," covering production not affected by this bill, is moved to December 31, 1980, from January 1, 1976—

We will speak about this on the next motion. Here is another back-down:

Deduction of the 8 per cent petroleum and gas revenue tax—

It is now 12 per cent.

—from the profit-sensitive progressive incremental royalty in recognition that the tax is a legitimate expense.

In other words, more tax deductions. Another back-down:

Widening the scope of three-year holiday from progressive incremental royalty to include fields where the discovery of oil or gas is the result of a well started before December 31, 1980, and qualifies as a significant discovery prior to December 31, 1982.

There are more motions to be debated here. There are a number of back-downs in this bill. What we are advocating in Motion No. 22 is that we go up, that we look at the regimes in the rest of the world. The hon. member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) set this out in great detail. Australia has a tougher regime than Canada, as does Norway, Great Britain and Mexico.

We say that if you are going to give the company 93 cents on every dollar, you should not get a 25 per cent Petro-Canada back-in that is qualified. You should get a 50 per cent Petro-Canada back-in right away. Is that too much to ask if you are going to put in that much equity? Ask my good friend who will speak next, the good capitalist, whether he would want a 25 per cent return, if he put in 93 cents on a dollar I do not think so. He would want more.

The Government of Canada is entitled to get more from this if it puts in a 93-cent tax dollar. This is the biggest rip-off you can think of, the biggest giveaway in concessions.

Talk about welfare and welfare grants. Look at the welfare we give Dome Petroleum, which has not produced a barrel of oil. The leader of our party in Manitoba, Howard Pawley, who will be the next premier of Manitoba, suggested that $20 million be put into a Manitoba oil company. Lyon and the boys yelled that this would be enough only to drill dry holes. However, when Bill Davis buys 25 per cent of Suncor, something we suggested all along, it is great.

Mr. Blenkarn: What's good about it?

Mr. Waddell: Let the hon. member address that when he speaks. He can tell me how bad that is. Canadians are not stupid. They realize that if they are going to put in 93 cents on a dollar for drilling they should get a fair return. Canadians know that the government is going to spend $4 billion in these PIP, Petroleum Incentive Program, grants. Talk about welfare, $4 billion in grants going to the richest industry in the country!

My friends moan, groan, bleed and suffer for these poor oil companies, the richest group in the country. They make money hand-over-fist. It is the U.S. oil companies that are pressing President Reagan to have bad relations with Canada. When the Americans realize that, the tune will change.

My friend need not look smug, because he is way behind the Canadian public. He should have thought about that when they put up the Petro-Canada sign. Canadians want a few more Petro-Canada signs. The people in this country are way ahead of the politicians. They want Canadianization to mean, basically and fundamentally, public ownership. The way to do that is not by backing out and giving 25 per cent to Petro-Canada. I ask members opposite, where are your guts? Why not support this amendment and allow Petro-Canada to have a 50 per cent back-in? We could then have a regime right up there with Norway, Great Britain and some of the other industrialized countries.

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) really indicates to this House and the people of Canada how out to lunch he is. He points out the validity of national oil companies, points out the wonders of Norway, and I suppose he could point out the wonders of the Soviet Union. He can also point out the wonders of Mexico with its national oil company, big oil spills and inefficient operation. That company could not even deliver the 50,000 barrels a day it promised a year ago because it is so inefficient. That is what he would have us become; owned, controlled and run by the state.

Mr. Waddell: For the state.

Mr. Blenkarn: He says for the state. I say it is for the bureaucrats in Ottawa to run, the socialists to run and control.

That is what is wrong with this bill and the attitude of this government. That is the problem we have throughout the economy of Canada.

The hon. member talked about Dome Petroleum and said they were making piles of money. Their stocks only dropped from $25 to $15. An article in the paper this week indicated that, unless they were lucky enough to make a worth-while find in the Beaufort Sea, perhaps their stocks will fall totally out of bed and they will have a serious financial problem on their funded debt.

What we get from the New Democratic Party is the usual drivel. I thought the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway took his responsibilities as energy critic for that party seriously. He clearly wants to emphasize their socialist, neo-Communist perhaps, approach to things.

Mr. Waddell: No, no.

Mr. Blenkarn: He says it is not neo-Communist. State ownership controls production and distribution, the hell with individual controls. He says, "Don't let individual Canadians own it; make sure that ownership is in the hands of the bureaucrats." That is what he talks about. That is their policy. That is why the people in Vancouver will tell them what they think in the next go-around. The NDP motion is ridiculous. It is the major reason for our high interest policy, for our unemployment problems, for the flight of capital from this country, for the economic conditions that make things hard on people in Canada. It is this attitude, expressed by the government, egged on by the New Democratic Party, that is a cause of most of the economic problems we face here.

● (1750)

Let us deal with this bill. My friend related the arrangement in connection with Alberta lands; between Alberta and the Government of Canada, and said that Premier Lougheed endorsed this bill. If Premier Lougheed endorsed the bill, I suppose what he was really saying was, "By golly, you'll frighten everybody out of frontier exploration. At least whatever exploration there might be will take place on Alberta Crown lands, not on federal Crown lands".

This bill is dangerous in many ways. What it says is that should someone who has tendered and purchased drilling rights on Government of Canada Crown lands at auction, find something, they will lose a quarter. Sure, they get the money they put into it, the 250 per cent on capital investment as explained by the hon. member for Calgary Centre (Mr. Andre), but in effect they lose the deal. For example, they explore in a frontier area. They use their money. They buy their rights, and they agree to pay royalties. Then, all of a sudden, the government takes away a quarter of the deal. It takes it away without providing any compensation.

A suggestion was made by hon. members in the New Democratic Party that oil companies develop with the people's money. They ask, "What about all these grants we are giving them? What about all these tax allowances we are giving them?" First of all, I have not heard anyone from the oil industry say that the grants were a wonderful idea; it is the idea of the socialists. More important, they do not realize the enormous risk of frontier exploration. When they talk about the enormous profits of Dome, they do not realize that that company has yet to pump a drop of oil from the Beaufort Sea. Dome has used all its earnings from its interests, from this production in Alberta, all the money it can borrow and all the money it can get in one tax arrangement or another from investors, to pump into the north, and it has not yet been able to get a drop of oil out.

An hon. Member: How to get rich without producing anything.

Mr. Blenkarn: The hon. member says, "How to get rich—" I say to him, if it were such a good buy, then the hon. member from the New Democratic Party would surely have bought some Dome stock with that marvellous increase in salary members have received. Had he done so, he would have suffered the same financial losses that Dome stock investors have suffered.

An hon. Member: Too bad.

Mr. Blenkarn: He said, "too bad". That is their attitude toward Canada. He says, "Too bad about Canada, too bad about investment. We, like the bureaucrats, want to control things. We want to run things. We are the people who can make it go." The record speaks for itself. People cannot get food in Poland and we have to ship boatload after boatload of grain to Soviet Russia. The record speaks for itself. Their attitude is that Big Brother knows best. Maybe these little boyfriends of Big Brother will wake up one of these days.

Let us see what has happened. This bill, which allows the government to back in for 25 per cent of the action, basically for free, has caused us serious problems in the international field, in the money markets of the world. Six nations with OECD, namely, West Germany, The Netherlands, the United States, Belgium, France, and Great Britain, have all protested our handling of their foreign national companies which were invited to Canada to work. Those companies thought they knew the rules of our energy policy. It is the uncertainty of the present policy that creates difficulties. They believe that at one time they could trust Canada but that now they cannot trust us because their assets may be expropriated, seized, without compensation. This concerns them about Canada as a place to invest.

Whether or not that fear is justified, it is there. That is why this year alone over $10 billion in capital has fled Canada. I emphasize the words, "fled Canada". That is why our dollar has shrunk, and that is why we have to have an interest rate factor 4 per cent higher than the prevailing one in the United States to try to protect runs on our currency. People who look at the attitude of the government, such as that expressed by the parliamentary secretary, the hon. member for Etobicoke North (Mr. MacLaren), take their money out of Canada and place it elsewhere, where they perceive there is less risk.

It is that very business attitude that we are really talking about in Motion No. 21. We do not object to Canadianization and we think that Canada lands should be developed by companies that are 50 per cent Canadian owned or controlled. But there should be no back-in arrangements, there should be no change in the deal, and there should be no expropriation without compensation. We must not confuse the concept of Canadian ownership with outright nationalization. We half own Canada. This clause of the bill proposes to nationalize in an improper fashion. It seizes, it expropriates without compensation, an asset built up by an explorer. Oil companies are used to paying royalties and are used to paying corporate tax. That is the proper role of government. Pay the necessary requirements of operating a state by taxation. But this is not taxation; this is seizure of assets without compensation. That is not the way it should be done. Seizing someone's asset to pay for whatever it is, is the wrong way to go about it.

May I call it six o'clock, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being six o'clock, I do now leave the chair until eight o'clock this evening.

At 6 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 8 p.m.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. When the House rose at six o'clock the hon. member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn) had the floor.

Mr. Blenkarn: Mr. Speaker, when we rose for dinner I was speaking about the effect of the national energy policy on this particular clause and the amendments before us. At this point I want to make it absolutely clear that my party believes fervently in Canadian ownership of the resources and of the businesses of Canada. We are prepared to work with any sensible program which will achieve that end. But the program which is the subject of Motion No. 21, particularly that which refers to Clause 27 of the bill, is a proposal not for Canadian ownership but for nationalization. This particular program has cost my constituents—and I do not know about the constituents of Mr. Speaker—a great deal of money, hardship and fear. The program has resulted in a devaluation of the Canadian dollar and in runs on the Canadian dollar. It has resulted in the high interest rate policy of the government. It is part and parcel of the fact that home owners must pay 20 per cent on their mortgages. It is part of the problem which every farmer in the country faces when he wants to borrow money to buy some cattle. It is part of the problem faced by every small-business man. Many hon. members of the House were small-business men before they were elected to Parliament. They know, as I know, that there are very few businesses which are able to show on their balance sheets earnings of 20 per cent or better year after year. The high interest rate policy caused by such provisions such as Clause 27 of the bill has resulted in fear and a flood of capital leaving Canada. This is what small-business men are paying for. What are they receiving for this?

Is there exploration activity under the terms of the bill, when conceivably the government can back into a 25-per cent interest in an oil or gas development? One can only back into something if there is something to back into. The effect of this legislation is to discourage and to impair development. It has already resulted in the flight of capital from Canada, not capital flowing into Canada to explore, create and develop in the north. This flight of capital is shown in the unwillingness or inability of Imperial Oil to complete the Cold Lake project and in the unwillingness or inability of Alsands to put together its tar sands project in Alberta, despite the energy agreement with that province.

There has been a flight of capital from Canada because capital will not be invested in a country where there is a possibility—and indeed under this bill the certainty exists—that the government will take 25 per cent of any find, virtually without compensation. That is exactly what is stupid about it. I say to the parliamentary secretry that the 25 per cent Crown right is only worth something if there is something there to make it worth it. As Canadians, we now own 100 per cent of all the oil and gas under the ground, under the sea, in the Canada lands, or wherever. What will we do about it? It is not doing us any good in terms of the gas pumps, the petrochemical industries or exports, because it is not available to be pumped, burned, used, consumed or sold. A 25 per cent interest in that is equally useless unless it is developed.

In a sense, this clause of the bill goes to the heart of the National Energy Program. It discourages development, initiative and exploration because it seizes from those who would explore and develop a quarter of what they create. What we have today is worth nothing. It is under the tundra. It is only worth something if people will go in there and drill in the snowbanks and marshlands, or build islands in the Beaufort Sea. Unless that is done, what may be under the soil is worthless.

• (2010)

No other government in the world says that it will seize 25 per cent of what people create. Other governments operate in a sensible fashion by taking a royalty, or maybe a percentage of profit royalty, and there is nothing wrong with that. They may want acreage payments for the right to drill, create or explore on that land. That is their approach. They have a corporate tax. The approach of this government is to seize the asset itself, take away the incentive to create, and then expect creation to take place.

The socialist approach will not work, Mr. Speaker. The approach of this government is not working. The danger and the problem with this approach is evidenced by the number of oil drilling rigs that have already left the country. It is evident in the state of our dollar, in interest rates. While there has been a great deal of Canadianization over the year, that has been accomplished by buying out properties owned by foreigners, not by the creation of new wealth.

In the years leading up to the introduction of the National Energy Program, we Canadianized the oil industry and we reduced foreign ownership from 90 per cent to 70 per cent by creating new business and new wealth in Canada, owned by Canadians. The Canadianization that has been taking place as the result of the national energy policy has been to buy up foreigners. Instead of using Canadian money to do what we were doing—and very successfully—in the decade prior to the national energy policy, by creating new energy resources in Canada owned by Canadians, we have driven out the foreign money; and so caused a problem with respect to interest rates for all of Canada; an exchange rates problem, a balance of payments problem, and we have caused trouble with our OECD partners in terms of trust in Canada as a place in which to invest. The NEP has not caused the creation of one drop of new oil. That is really the problem.

This national energy policy is not helping to build Canada. It is not helping to create opportunities for individual Canadians, whether it is to own their own home or have their own business or have a private stake in this land of opportunity. What we have done is to squash them down with an attitude that the state knows best, that Big Brother is superior and Big Brother has the right to take away part of what they create, without giving them compensation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stan Schellenberger (Wetaskiwin): Mr. Speaker, I have listened to the debate on Bill C-48 for some time, both in the House and in committee, and have heard various groups and associations discuss the broad principles of the bill which will take us forward in the Canada lands. I am certain that all members of the House recognize the importance of the bill and the long-lasting effects it will have. As I listened to the debate on the motion before us, it seemed to me that many of us may have forgotten that our basic goals are the same. That discovery may take us by surprise but if we look at what we all want, we will find that it is the same thing—more Canadian control of the oil and gas industry, more efficient development of those resources, resulting in self-sufficiency by 1990, or maybe before or after. We want a healthy oil and gas industry with the benefits it will bring to the Canadian economy and we want to reduce inflation and to see more employment. All of these spin-offs can come from a vibrant oil and gas industry.

I do not think any of these objectives are controversial or any of those priorities different. Perhaps the basic problem is that our philosophies are fundamentally different. I do not think we should lose sight of two things of very grave importance in this legislation, the fact that our goals are compatible and could be more compatible if the government had accepted more of the amendments put forward by all sides.

In Bill C-48 the government has presented its blueprint for resource development in Canada lands. We in the Conservative Party are saying, "Wait a moment." With this motion we are saying there is another way of accomplishing Canadianization than that proposed in the bill. That is our philosophy, if you will; we believe it will work better in the long run than the approach outlined in Bill C-48.

We believe that the private sector can do a better job of resource and development than the government can. In good faith, I ask members of all parties to consider that Motion No. 21 could accomplish, far more quickly than anything else in this bill, self-sufficiency and the resource development we need in northern Canada.

Let us step back from the specifics of the motion for a moment. I spoke about goals and said that our goals are compatible but that the means of achieving them were different. I asked members to consider how they set their own goals and their own priorities; how they go about reaching those goals.

I believe that when the individual is motivated from within himself to do something that will fulfil him personally, he is far more likely to drive for excellence than if he is told by someone else how to reach his goals, how he must act if he is to do it for someone else. When a person sets his own goals and develops his own strategy for attaining them, then he has all the motivation he needs to do a fine job. If someone else seeks to define his goals and tells him how to achieve them, he will soon find his initiative sapped, and his drive greatly reduced. I think that is one way to define personal fulfilment, that it is the end result of goal setting and goal achievement.

• (2020)

If one takes away an individual's ability to decide upon and to work toward his own goals, one robs him of that end fulfilment. By denying a person his drive, I believe that one encourages mediocrity. I always remember that when I was in school I hated to get involved in group projects. The reason was that no matter how hard one worked by oneself, when the project was completed, everyone received the same grade. It did not matter how much one was motivated or how hard one worked, when the end result came in, it was the same for everyone. I noticed this throughout my school years.

What happened as a result? Soon group projects were not done very well. The people in the lower grades who were initially motivated and who worked hard soon found that there was no benefit coming to them in participating in group projects, and as a result they slacked off. They stopped working as hard and soon lost that motivation which was so necessary to achieve good grades and a good education in school. I had often hoped that teachers would not organize group projects as often as they did, unless it was a type project that was fun rather than one that was meant to teach students, such as a math project.

If goal achievement is what spurs people on, it does not make any sense to say that society would be better off or better served by having government tell us how to attain our goals or how to reach achievement for this country. It saps initiative, promotes mediocrity, weakens drive, and eventually lowers us all to the same common low denominator. That is why I rejected the socialist philosophy at a very young age.

The well motivated individual will strive for excellence and perfection. He will use the resources within himself and his intelligence to move ahead. I have always believed that if the government adopted the same principle in this country and put some belief in the intelligence and initiative of the individual, we would move ahead and achieve our goals much faster, than if government decided what these goals will be and forced them upon our people.

A wise man said, and I believe it to be true, that an individual who does not care who gets the credit cannot accomplish anything. It is for these reasons that I and my colleagues on this side of the House feel so strongly about the value of the individual and his initiative being manifest in the private sector, and that is why we maintain that the goal of Canadianization can be achieved through the private sector, which would be much better for this country, rather than through the public sector, the way we seem to be moving now.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Schellenberger: Motion No. 21 says, "Yes, We want Canadian ownership." As does every hon. member of this House, we believe that Canadianization will be most effectively and efficiently achieved by promoting individual initiative in the private sector, and not by stifling it through the public sector.

There is a popular misconception that by increasing government ownership, somehow we become more Canadian than if we increased that ownership through the private sector, through private ownership. I say that this is absolutely false, and some of my colleagues demonstrated that by reducing foreign ownership from 90 per cent to 70 per cent in a very few years, before the National Energy Program was brought in.

In my opinion, Canadianization must be done through private individuals. We should be moving toward Canadianization by encouraging people to buy shares and be part of the company. Why do we not understand that principle? I myself did not understand it when I was going through school. We are not taught economics and the principles of the free enterprise system unless we go to university specifically for that purpose. Most people do not understand how the free enterprise system works, how companies work; what profits are. They do not understand how they can accomplish goals that we set in this country; what shares are all about, how one goes about buying them, what they can do for us in our work, and how they can lead toward a decision-making process in a company. They do not understand an individual, by owning a sufficient part of that company—and one does not need to own 51 per cent of it—can lead a company in the direction he wants it to go. Most Canadians do not understand that.

That is why I supported so strongly the transfer of Petro-Canada shares into the hands of millions of Canadian individuals. I fully believe that an individual who received that share would take greater interest in the energy production of this country. He would take some interest in that company, he would feel part of it, and he would encourage it to go forward and achieve its goals.

We have many examples of people who made that work. Surprisingly, most of them are in Alberta. I remember very well the time when the Social Credit government offered shares in the Alberta Gas Trunk Line, which is now the Nova Corporation, first to individual citizens of the province, and after the people of the province had taken all the shares they wanted, other people in Canada could participate.

The morning that that share issue was offered, people were lined up outside the treasury branches to pick off the shares. I know that the hon. member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) remembers that much better than I do, because he was a part of that company. Recently, the Alberta Energy Corporation offered shares in that company to Canadians. Many members of my family, who had never before bought a share in their lives, went out and bought shares in that company.

Carl Becker said, and I cannot say it any better:

> The primary aim of all government regulation of economic life of the community should be, not to support the system of private economic enterprise, but to make it work.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Schellenberger: What we seem to have forgotten in this nation in the last decade is how to set the rules which will make the private enterprise system work.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Schellenberger: This is the basic philosophy for which this party stands. It was manifested in two measures which we attempted to introduce in the budget when we were the government. It was the first budget that was long on private initiative and incentives to private individuals. Farmers who sold their farms could invest $100,000 in RRSPs and use the RRSPs to invest in Canadian corporations so that the money would be productive and would not be put in the government treasuries to be frittered away, as it now seems to be so often. The second measure was an incentive to individuals to buy Canadian shares. If they did that and kept the shares for a certain number of years, they would have capital gains forgiveness. That was another incentive to encourage Canadians to take their money out of their socks, or wherever it was, and invest it in Canadian enterprise, and get the feel for it. Once having done that, individuals were surprised at how encouraged they felt to be actively participating in something. Many people in this nation have never had that feeling. As I said before, the second initiative related to getting shares of a large oil company which Canadians owned into the hands of individuals so that, again, they could learn more about the enterprise system.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Schellenberger: During the last few minutes I have, I would like to speak about another part of Motion No. 21 which I believe is so important; that is, the back-in provision. But I will be less proud of it when this bill is passed than I was before. Canada was held in high esteem by the world as a safe country in which to invest, a safe place in which to put your capital for interest and investment. However, when a provision such as this is placed in a bill whereby one can retroactively back into an oil play, I believe that we will no longer be able to claim the esteem that we had before. Even if a certain amount, under the back-in provision, is paid back as described in the bill, the government has forgotten that there is much more to it than a basic payment under that back-in provision. I liken it to the situation when somebody expropriates your land in order to build a highway. You have a house on this land, but the land is expropriated. You are not paid anything for the trees that you have planted, the lawn that you have cultivated, or the many improvements you have made to the house before expropriation. Somehow there is a belief that everything goes along with the land. This same principle is placed in this bill. That is why the retroactivity, no matter how it is put together, is basically a confiscation and not the kind of legislation that will retain trust in this nation. I cannot say it any better than have some of my colleagues when they talked about the devastating effect this program was having on our economy. It is counterproductive. On the one hand we have high interest rates in order to attract capital into the country to assist our Canadian dollar. On the other hand, we have a policy which discourages and chases capital out of Canada. We also have a government that is using billions of dollars of taxpayers' money and encouraging Canadian companies to buy foreign controlled companies. That sort of thing does not bring us any more oil. It only chases capital out of the country.

● (2030)

Those are some of the reasons why I feel so strongly about this amendment. It is an option that should be seriously considered by members of this House. It is an option of basic philosophy about the way we forge ahead and govern this country in the future. I am surprised, not at the New Democratic Party because I can understand them, but at the fact that the Liberal Party would accept this kind of clause in a bill without amendment as a blueprint for the future of our country and the way to establish our goals for the enterprise that will go on in the future.

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Mr. Speaker, I take pleasure in having the opportunity to say a few words on the amendment contained in Motion No. 21 in the name of the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson). It is not something new to our party to find ourselves defending rights and freedoms time and time again. This time we find ourselves defending the principle of fairness that I thought all Canadians believed in, whether they are Liberals or whether they are New Democrats. Canadians are known throughout the world as being fair-minded, tough, strong and energetic people. But when we see a government expressing less than fairness in its motions and bills, it is incumbent upon all Canadians to object, not just Canadians on this side of the House, but also those who sit on the government benches whom I know to be fair-minded men and women. They represent Canadians in constituencies across Canada who are fair-minded and have elected fair-minded people.

The hon. member for Etobicoke Centre moved that Clause 27 be amended by striking out lines 36 to 42 at page 15 and lines 1 and 2 on page 16 in Bill C-48 and that the following be substituted:

"(2) Her Majesty in right of Canada is hereby vested with and the minister on her behalf shall hold a share sufficient to render the interest holder with a Canadian ownership rate of fifty percent".

We have absolutely no disagreement that Canadians should own 50 per cent of their energy resources. I would have no disagreement if a statement were made by the government that Canadians should own 100 per cent of their resources. But I do not think any Canadian would say that he or she wanted to confiscate from someone in good faith and in good conscience that which they have developed.

We can look at the ability of our people who have worked and sweated for the last 114 years, using their initiative because they had the will, the strength and the belief that this country is one of the best countries in the world. I do not think anyone in this House would dispute that. Fifty per cent ownership is a great goal. One hundred per cent ownership is a better goal. But confiscation and allowing the government to back in to lands that have been developed, surveyed and seismographed, and lands in which hundreds of millions of dollars have been invested searching for oil that ended up being dry holes is not fair-minded. These companies that have invested money in dry holes are companies owned by Canadians. Many Canadians have shares in American-owned companies. Therefore, why penalize Canadians who are trying to Canadianize the oil industry? I ask the government, why does it want people who have invested their savings in an American company to suffer because the government says it is the right of this government to have 25 per cent of it?

I want to comment briefly about Petro-Canada. I understand that a PetroCan station opened up over the weekend. There was a service station in the same location before. The sign may have changed now. Although there was a Petrofina station there, people were selling gas and making a livelihood out of operating the station. It was not Petro-Canada who gave them that right. They had their livelihood before. What the government did was to buy an existing gas station. Petro-Canada, since its inception, has not found any more oil than some of the very junior oil companies in Saskatchewan. All that it has done is to use taxpayers' funds to purchase something that already exists. We find that with this amendment the government will not even have to use taxpayers' funds to make a purchase. It will back-in and confiscate something that did not belong to it. The government did not pay for it in the first place.

An hon. Member: Why are you buying time?

Mr. McKnight: I hear some noise from the left rump of the party over there.

An hon. Member: The little red rump.

Mr. McKnight: I have some comments that many members of the NDP understand. I am referring to the co-op movement.

I come from the province of Saskatchewan. I am proud of the co-op movement in my province. But what is wrong with the co-op movement is that people have decided it is associated with the New Democratic Party. That is what is wrong with it. It is not right. I see one of my colleagues from Ontario on the other side. In Ontario the co-op is a strong movement, but it is not associated with the New Democratic Party there.

Mr. Waddell: Yes, it is.

Mr. McKnight: We had the ability to form a Canadian co-op, as was proposed in the budget presented by the hon. member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie). He offered to the people of Canada the opportunity to buy shares in Petro-Canada. We said that we would help people buy shares in a company, that it would be a co-op and the people of Canada would own it. However, members of the New Democratic Party voted against that.

● (2040)

The only thing that is different between a co-op and a company such as we have now is that you and I as shareholders cannot sit on the board of directors and we cannot control the minister who is responsible for Petro-Canada, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) in this House. We cannot control an administration that says it is going to provide a window for the world on our oil industry, and administration that states that it is going to create rules and instil faith in our country so the people will invest, and be the referee as well. The government says it is going to be fair. Mind you, it is going to steal 25 per cent of what the companies already have, but on top of that, the government has an adviser to the referee, namely, the minister, a player from PetroCan. Anyone who is familiar with any kind of refereeing or sports knows you cannot play and referee at the same time. That is what this government is doing with Mr. Phelps.

Having regard to the 25 per cent back-in, this may have been as a result of advice given by the PetroCan employee who advises the minister. It is no wonder that corporations involved in the energy field become just a little reluctant to share information with the government. PetroCan, now one of their largest competitors, has an employee sitting beside the minister who is making up the rules for playing the game. This is incredible.

The minister was asked in the House about the agreement with Mr. Phelps which provided for his being hired on June 16, 1980, by Petro-Canada, to be seconded to the political staff of the minister on the same day. That was a long term of employment by PetroCan. He has not worked for PetroCan yet, but the company is paying him a salary to supplement the $35,000 he gets as a government employee so he can have a little bit over and above the average. The company provided him with two interest-free mortgages to the tune of $35,000 to purchase his home in Ottawa. Talking about conflict of interest, the minister was asked in the House about the appointment of Mr. Phelps as his executive assistant. He said there was nothing strange about this, it is something that is done all the time.

An hon. Member: They do it all the time.

Mr. McKnight: My colleague, the hon. member for Esquimalt-Saanich (Mr. Munro) says they do it all the time. They may do it, but this is one of the few times we have found out about it. The minister says it is common with the executive exchange program. The Phelps arrangement had nothing to do with the program which allows executives to exchange jobs temporarily with the public service. He is not a public servant, and the exchange program, quite properly, does not apply to executive assistants who are members of a minister's political staff.

The 25 per cent back-in provision is bad enough. The government has presented a policy which will probably take millions of dollars from companies which have invested in this country in good faith. I would like to suggest that no one in his right mind could say we could have developed our energy resources or any part of this country to the state of sophistication we now enjoy had we not had outside foreign investment. There is nothing wrong with foreign investment, just as there is nothing wrong with Canadian investment in our own country. However, if you are going to change the rules, you should not change them in the middle of the game.

An hon. Member: Oh?

Mr. McKnight: As an accepted practice, governments should not change the rules in the middle of the game. In the province of Saskatchewan where I come from it is done quite commonly. This has also shown up in Saskatchewan in the exploration holes drilled in that province and also in the finds of natural gas, but that is another matter.

Let me use the example of Hibernia developed by the Chevron people. PetroCan has by legislation already acquired a 25 per cent interest in this field. Through this bill, the Crown reserves to itself a 10 per cent royalty, plus a 40 per cent progressive increment. The royalties, together with a federal 8 per cent petroleum revenue tax, should surely provide the government with more than a fair return on the people's investment in Hibernia. That is a fair share of those revenues. Other revenues would also be derived from production from this discovery, without the outright theft by this government, at a cost to the company, of an additional 25 per cent interest. It is more than difficult, it is impossible to continue to explore for oil and gas in frontier areas with this kind of set-up.

This company originally had no idea it would make a discovery and be able to pay a return to those investors who had confidence in the directorship of the company. This government says that on behalf of the people of Canada it needs a return on investment. I suggest companies also need a return on their investment. Let me say to my friends in the NDP, so do co-ops need a return on investment. Some co-ops pay out shares all the time. My colleague, the hon. member for Wetaskiwin (Mr. Schellenberger) when he attended the University of Calgary, established a precedent, with the assistance of a gentleman by the name of Grant Devine. Because of the monopoly established by a grocery chain in the city of Calgary, he worked with an existing co-operative movement. That co-op has continued to pay dividends on individual shares. It is probably one of the few co-operative movements that has returned an equity share on investment on a consistent basis. This is done in that big, bad free enterprise province of Alberta.

The retroactive part of the 25 per cent confiscation provision is probably the most repugnant part. What happens as a result of it is something that we as Canadians will have to suffer over the next 25 years. We will continue to feel the effects of a lack of confidence on the part of foreign investors in this country. There is no industrialized country in the world that has been able to build without foreign investment. Probably the most industrialized and enterprising country we can point to is that neighbour to the south which was built on foreign investment. The American people were not born with large corporations or with the standard of living they now enjoy. They worked for it, strived for it and invested in it. They now should be able to enjoy the benefits. We in Canada should also be able to enjoy the benefits of investment, if investment had been encouraged. I cannot understand why a government has to confiscate or nationalize when it has the right of taxation and the right to set rules and guidelines. If it is not receiving enough revenue, it should raise the tax. It should not steal something that does not belong to it, something someone has worked for and invested in. The government cannot take it over just because it wants to change the rules of the game, because what it thought was proper ten years ago, now is improper and bad for Canadians.

● (2050)

If we look at the National Energy Program as a whole—

An hon. Member: You have that right.

Mr. McKnight: My colleague from Calgary says that I have that right. Unfortunately, it will put us all in the same hole. It is the government's intention to purchase the assets or shares of several of the large foreign-owned companies at a fair price. I find it difficult to understand why we have to spend the dollars of the Canadian people to buy a company that is already drilling for oil and has found oil and to have that company take our money right out of Canada and not find one more barrel of oil for that investment. This is what happened with Petrofina.

I see some members on the government side who are familiar with practical business. They happen to be farmers. They know very well that when one starts a project and works toward its completion, one does not welcome a neighbour coming in to take 25 per cent of it for the good of all. It is the same thing here.

The New Democratic Party, and quite often the Liberal Party, to my amazement, seem to feel that companies are not people. They seem to think that they all have two-storey suites for offices but that they do not represent people, that they are big, bad businesses. Well, they are people. They own and they have invested in those businesses.

Mr. Riis: We are talking about Exxon.

Mr. McKnight: If they do not invest in those business they will not continue and neither will you see any benefit or growth.

We hear ripples from the rump over there, the NDP members who, I am sure, have vast business knowledge, who have invested their own time, sweat and labour into creating jobs and have gone to a bank to borrow money to meet that payroll. To turn around and have the government come in and take 25 per cent of that is not socialism; it is stupidity.

Mr. Nielsen: Tommy Douglas and Gulf.

Mr. McKnight: Someone said Tommy Douglas and Gulf. It is Tommy Douglas and Husky.

An hon. Member: That is not a big company. It is a little one.

Mr. McKnight: It is a nice company. It is Canadian. I see nothing wrong with Tommy Douglas sitting on the board of Husky Oil.

Mr. Nielsen: He was the leader of the NDP.

Mr. McKnight: If the one-time leader of the New Democratic Party decides he would like to sit in a corporate boardroom up there on high and look down at the small people he purported to protect in my province of Saskatchewan for some 20 years, that does not bother me. I will not criticize Tommy Douglas for doing that. I would not even criticize the present leader of the NDP if he joined the board of General Motors. Although I would be concerned about his business sense if he went on the board of Chrysler.

I cannot understand why governments and parties with political philosophies—especially the NDP party which says it understands co-ops—cannot understand the principle of companies with shareholders to whom they report.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I wish to say, as an individual member and a Canadian who is fair-minded, that I will be voting for this amendment and that I will be voting against the bill if this amendment is not included.

Mr. Deans: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I would like to draw to the attention of the House that the "P" in "NDP" stands for party. It is therefore redundant to say "NDP party".

Mr. McKnight: On the same point of order, Mr. Speaker. We realize that the "P" does not stand for party. We also realize that it does not stand for "principles".

An hon. Member: What a wit!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The hon. member for Athabasca on a point of order.

Mr. Shields: I think we all realize at this time, Mr. Speaker, that there is a lot of pee in the NDP. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The hon. member for Western Arctic, not on the same point of order.

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): I think we have exhausted that particular point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the intervenors for the information they gave us, but I would like to continue with the discussion of Bill C-48.

The question before us tonight is Canadian ownership. I do not think there is a single member of this House who does not favour an increase in Canadian ownership in the Canadian oil and gas industry. It is pointless to have members on this side getting mad at members over there, saying they are trying to sell out to the Americans, or to have members on that side saying we are trying to sell out.

An hon. Member: No, you give it away.

Mr. Nickerson: The argument is on the process of Canadianization and how it should be implemented. My friends to the left, of course, want to nationalize everything in sight. The way members opposite want to do it is to use Petro-Canada, the chosen instrument of policy. The way we on this side would like to do it is through Canadian private investment. We do not want the government to own the oil and gas, the refineries and the distribution network in Canada. These industries should be owned by private individual Canadians.

An hon. Member: What party is Bill Davis in?

An hon. Member: Good old Suncor.

Mr. Nickerson: The difference in approach, Mr. Speaker, in how we are going to accomplish this—

An hon. Member: Nationalize the airlines.

An hon. Member: Do you want me to beat the tan off him?

Mr. Nickerson: Let's have a little bit of hush. This is a serious speech! If I might continue, Mr. Speaker. The difference in approach between the members over there and the good guys on this side is the same as the difference between the carrot and the stick approach. Over there, they want to use the big stick approach, use the big Liberal stick on the mean American oil companies. They want to use the big Liberal stick on Canadian companies also. They want to use that stick to take away 25 per cent of everything they find on Canada lands. They want to use that big Liberal club to beat the Canadian taxpayer. Just look at the Petrofina fiasco, the amount of money that cost Canadians and the Petro-Canada tax they must pay every time they buy a gallon of gasoline. That is the difference in approach between this side and that.

• (2100)

When I first read Motion No. 21, I was amazed at the moderation shown by the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson). I got to thinking about it. I could see the reason why he presented this motion. It was because there could be no way the Liberal Party could not accept it. It was so reasonable and rational that any right-thinking person would jump at the opportunity to vote in favour of it. It does not purport to get rid of the concept of Crown ownership, or to put Petro-Canada out of business, but to use the concept of the Crown share when it becomes necessary.

We like the Canadian ownership rate of 50 per cent. It is a nice round figure. We would not argue whether it should be 50 per cent or 60 per cent. Over a period of time, we might even adopt the approach of the NDP of 50 per cent one year and maybe 55 per cent a few years later. However, the Crown share should only be used when necessary. When the Canadian ownership rate is less than 50 per cent, the Crown should pick up the balance to bring the Canadian ownership rate to 50 per cent. What could be more reasonable than that?

The proposal of the government would take away 25 per cent from anybody and everybody. It does not matter what the nationality of the particular operator is. The government will take the 25 per cent Crown share, whether it is necessary or not, for the purpose of pursuing a policy of Canadianization. They want to get the bureaucratic tentacles into every acre of oil and gas lands in Canada lands. That is what they are up to. Their intent is plain to see. They want a government say-so. They want somebody from the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources to say what can be done with each little parcel in Canada lands. It will not be very long before that principle is extended to the provinces of Canada, if the government gets its way.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): That is why they took property rights out of the Constitution.

Mr. Nickerson: That is correct. That is the basis behind that omission.

On a slightly different tack, I want to deal with what happens when the government has a share in an oilfield and the oil and gas rights to a particular parcel of land. This is not new. It exists in the north. It is in existence at the Norman Wells oilfield, approximately two thirds of which is owned by Imperial Oil and one third by our friendly federal government.

How does it operate? What advantages are there to the people who live in the area or, in fact, the rest of Canada in having one third federal ownership in that oilfield? I can think of no advantage. If you look at the efficiency with which that oilfield is operated, you find that it is less efficient because of federal government ownership. There is a disincentive to encouraging efficiency when certain costs can be allocated here and certain costs there so that items do not show up as profit on the government side. There is an inefficiency built into the system when the government takes over a sizeable proportion in that way.

Is it of any advantage to local people who would like to work in the oilfield or refinery? I do not think it makes one bit of difference. The same opportunities exist, regardless of whether or not the federal government has a part ownership. I believe it makes no difference whatsoever.

What is most important, as far as the people in the area are concerned, is the price they pay for a gallon of heating oil or gasoline. I can tell hon. members that the price of those commodities right outside the refinery gate is about 20 cents a gallon more than in Ottawa. Therefore, what advantage is there to the people who live there and must rely on the oil and gas production of that refinery? What is the advantage of the one third federal government ownership? I suggest there is no advantage.

What about the people who live there who are involved in exploration, the gamblers? They are willing to risk money to find oil. If they get one break, they come out of the deal financially healthy.

I know quite a few people who were involved in the exploration business in the territories ten and 15 years ago. Because of successive years of Liberal administration and the way the northern oil patch had to be operated, they moved to Alberta. That was the place to make money. Alberta had a sensible government. If you invested your money in Alberta, were lucky and hit oil, you could sell that oil at a reasonable price and make money.

These people who for 15 years have lived on the same street as myself, up to about five years ago, are now leaving Alberta because of policies imposed by the Liberal party. Now they are taking their money and expertise to the United States. Federal policies have chased those people over two borders, the border at the 60th parallel and now the border at the 49th parallel. That is where they are going because that is where the money is.

I want to refer briefly to a matter brought to the attention of this House a couple of days ago by the hon. member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone). He quoted a speech that had been made in Sherbrooke, Quebec by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde). The minister was speaking there in French to some of his Sherbrooke cronies. He seemed to open up a little more than he does in this House. He was quite frank about the policy of the government. The policy, he said, is to prevent money being made in the hinterlands of Canada. The minister wants to get his hands on the money and funnel it into Quebec, Ontario and other places where there are still a few Liberals around. He was quite frank about stating that policy. There was no argument whatever.

I cannot agree with that policy. In the future, there is going to be a great need for new capital investments in the west, in the maritimes with the Hibernia field, and in the north. The best way to accumulate that capital is to use moneys that have been generated in the oil and gas business in those areas. If that money is siphoned off, brought to central Canada and used to construct airports like Mirabel, or bail out corporations such as Chrysler and Massey-Ferguson, we will not reach our goal of self-sufficiency. There will not be sufficient money to invest in those areas of Canada where investments can pay off and the energy resources can be found.

• (2110)

My final point, Mr. Speaker, is that sometimes I find it difficult to understand why the people on the other side of the House, when it comes to Canadianization, will single out particular industries in particular areas of the country and neglect others. When they talk of Canadianization, the oil and gas industry immediately springs to mind. Why? It is because that industry is removed from their sphere of influence around here. The oil and gas industry, by and large, operates in areas of the country where the government has very little support. Therefore, it does not have to bother about the feelings and the wishes of the people in that industry.

When it comes to other industries where there is a considerable foreign presence, the food or manufacturing industries of this part of Canada, for example—and when I say this part of Canada I mean Canada within a several hundred mile radius of Ottawa—when it comes to those industries, do we hear the same arguments? No, I do not think we do. There is silence on those issues from that side of the House. It seems to me they are singling out industrial areas where they will not really be affected, but it can sure cause a lot of harm to people who live in the regions.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I say we on this side are just as determined to achieve Canadianization as anyone else. But what we want to do is to use a reasonable and rational approach. We do not want to go around banging people on the head with big Liberal sticks.

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): The debate before us today is one of the most critical on the National Energy Program or on Bill C-48. For a brief moment I should like to go back 17 years, particularly as today we are talking in the House about the tar sands, about heavy oil, and the massive amount of crude oil and synthetic crude that is available in these areas. Seventeen years ago in northern Alberta, just north of Fort McMurray, we welcomed with open arms the Sun Oil Co. and encouraged that company to invest millions of dollars in the first tar sands plant ever to be built so it could try to tap the abundant resource that exists in the Athabasca tar sands.

I shall never forget the opening of the plant. The people of the town of Fort McMurray were invited to the plant site, where the premier of the day, at that time Mr. E. C. Manning, said, with considerable pride, "This plant is here in Alberta today, and not one nickel of public funds has been invested in it". The Sun Oil Co., headed by its founder, Mr. Pugh, looked at the potential of the company and foresaw the impending oil shortage in the world. He took an entrepreneurial chance and said, "We are going to build the plant because some day, I think, we can develop the technology".

At least three times during the course of the past 17 years Sun Oil nearly closed the plant. They were not asking for any handouts or for any subsidies, but they were not making money. They were losing millions of dollars every year. But they persevered. They developed the technology. Because they became viable, another plant was built. The price of oil escalated. The OPEC countries which had control of virtually all the major oil supplies in the western world started to put the noose around their necks. Today we are still at the mercy of the OPEC countries. My God, it staggers the imagination when we sit here and think about how much money has to be invested in the oil industry in Canada for us to even reach energy self-sufficiency or oil self-sufficiency by the turn of the century.

The people who are continually attacking the United States oil companies, the parent companies in the United States, are the same people who turn around and say, "Please come back and invest in our megaprojects. Come and invest in Imperial Oil at Cold Lake, but get out of the conventional areas. We do not want you there any more. You do not serve any purpose there any more." They say, "Come in, Shell Oil, because we need you up in the Alsands Project in Fort McMurray, but get out of that western basin. We do not want you there. Canadianize or you will not have the chance to participate in the oil play in Canada."

The government is moving to Canadianize the oil industry. For the past 20 years we have heard talk about Canadianizing the oil industry, Canadianizing our manufacturing industry, Canadianizing our auto industry, and Canadianizing all our industry. Let us buy Canada back.

I say to you, Mr. Speaker, and to fellow members, you cannot buy Canada back until you have the money to buy it back, if this is what you are talking about. You sure do not do this by using the taxpayers' money to buy Petrofina or to establish a government Crown corporation for show.

What kind of future is there? We have the oil and we have the resources in Canada. Alberta's Energy Resources Conservation Board held hearings last summer. Here are some of the findings that came out of those hearings: there are close to 6 billion barrels of oil in the deep basin area around the province's western boundary, enough to supply the country at current consumption rates for eight years. Whether it is recoverable depends on the price. Of course it depends on the price. What entrepreneur is going to invest in a hole in the ground unless he knows he has a chance to receive a decent return on his investment? I am not just talking about the foreign oil companies; I am talking about the Canadian oil companies.

● (2120)

The Alberta report indicated:

> It will take 30,000 more wells to gain maximum recovery from oil reserves now in place. This represents about half the discovered oil in the province.

It is indicated that 30,000 more wells must be drilled in the western basin to recover what they know is there. I urge hon. members to do a bit of arithmetic. Approximately 250 rigs are presently drilling in the western basin. They take anywhere from six months to eighteen months to complete a hole. How long will it take to drill 30,000 holes? The rigs are not staying in Canada. They are pulling out. They are leaving because the incentive is gone. There is no incentive to drill in Canada any more. They are moving out of the western basin. They are moving out of a business climate which was fair, equitable and stable to go to the United States and to Australia. We have lost the expertise, the rigs and the people. They will not return because an agreement was signed with Alberta. The government became greedy, took too much, and has not left enough for the industry. In turn they have said that that was it. The report states further:

> Alberta wells are now pumping five times as much water for the same volume of crude as they pumped in 1970.

This was eleven years ago. It continues:

> Enhanced recovery methods have the capability of producing slightly more than half the oil which Alberta is now pumping.

Before the industry will go into enhanced recovery, it needs the incentive and the dollars to invest in enhancement recovery schemes. It continues:

> Though discoveries in the last two years have improved Alberta's supply of conventional crude beyond what was expected in 1978, these improvements have been offset by the fact that existing pools are declining faster than expected.

From 1978 until the national energy policy was brought forward by the government a year ago this month, things looked pretty good, but the amount of oil was declining much more rapidly in existing pools. It continues to read:

> The largest pools existing in Alberta have already been discovered and "future discoveries will generally be relatively small and scattered."

This is true except of course for the deep basin. It has not yet been explored but it is there. It continues:

> By 1990 production of conventional crude oil from existing pools in the province will have declined to 32 per cent of present production and by 2000 to 10 per cent.

The declining known resources which they are pumping today in the western basin will decline to approximately 10 per cent by the year 2000. Where is that oil coming from? By the year 2000 there may be something from the Beaufort Sea and Hibernia. It will not be from the western basin because the incentive has gone. The industry has been chased out of the country. The report continues:

> —The Financial Post predicted that by the mid-1980s Canada would face an oil supply crisis—

This oil supply crisis will be of severe magnitude. They asked what would cause it. It was the shrinking of supplies from Alberta, coupled with the uncertainty of supplies from overseas. Canada was already importing 18 per cent to 20 per cent of its crude oil supplies. At the ERCB hearings, they talked about how they could get Canadian industry more involved, how they could get them working and searching for oil which is much needed by the economy. The report continued:

> "The Petro-Canada forecast of reserve additions and production reflects essentially a continuation of the existing pricing and fiscal regime."

Already they sound like bureaucrats. It continues:

> While it is not possible to put great precision on the relationship of additional supply to price increases, there is considerable evidence that the increased netbacks realized by producers of natural gas over the past five years have resulted in a greatly improved supply situation.

Petro-Canada is now adopting this bureaucratic language. What it means in plain, unbureaucratic language is that there was an incentive for people to go out to find natural gas. They knew if they found it, they could sell it. They knew if they sold it, they could sell it at a profit. That is all that was said in this statement. They found plenty. They found all kinds of natural gas in the Elmsworth field and other fields of like magnitude. Petro-Canada went on to indicate in its report:

> If the existing pricing and fiscal regime for crude oil were changed such that producer netbacks were significantly increased, it is very possible that greater reserve addition and production levels could be achieved.

In other words, Petro-Canada indicated that if there were an increase in the netback to producers on the oil discovered in the western basin, they would find more. It is pretty simple.

Now I should like to touch upon the amount of money which will be required to put Canada on the road to energy self-sufficiency in this century by the year 2000. The year 1995 has gone by the wind. There is absolutely no way, despite the promises of the great energy czar, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, and his underling, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), that we will reach energy self-sufficiency by 1990. We will not do it. It is becoming clearer and clearer every day that we will not reach oil self-sufficiency by 1990. To reach oil self-sufficiency by the year 2000 will require a direct capital investment of at least $260 billion in 1980 dollars in oil-related fields alone. I am talking about drilling in the Beaufort Sea, in Hibernia and in the western basin. Also I am talking about the megaprojects which must come onstream from the Athabasca tar sands, from Imperial Oil at Cold Lake, from Alsands at Fort McMurray, and from at least five more projects. All energy sources and all knowledgeable sources have indicated very clearly that there must be massive capital investment of at least $260 billion in today's dollars. Where will that money come from? We are saying that we are going to Canadianize the oil industry—and I agree with that, but not in the way that the government is going about it. What sense does it make to spend millions upon millions of dollars to buy an existing oil company that is already doing the work we want it to do? If Petro-Canada wants to get into the oil business, let it, but not at the expense of other producers. Let it get out and find oil.

● (2130)

If we want to Canadianize the industry, we could use a taxing structure. Surely there are knowledgeable people on the government benches who could work out a taxing structure that would give an incentive to investors who now invest in foreign oil companies.

We have the technology and we have the resources. That technology was primarily given to us by our good friends south of the border, and I say that in all sincerity. The technology that was developed in the United States by the big, bad multinational oil companies is accessible to us and has been used in Canada.

An hon. Member: Free?

Mr. Shields: I hear now from the little red rump down there. All they want to do is tax the blazes out of the people and buy everything. We do not have enough money to buy everything, and that is what I am trying to point out to them.

The technology that was available to Canada is not available in the U.S.S.R. We can drill a hole in three months. To drill a similar hole in the Soviet Union would take approximately two years because they do not have the technology. We have the technology, we have the resources and we must invite capital into the country to develop those resources. We must do this immediately or we will all be freezing in the dark.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to participate in the debate on Bill C-48 and the amendment introduced by my colleague, the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson), Motion No. 21 which is before us tonight.

Without any catcalls from left, centre, right or front, let alone from the back, I want to say that I was not going to participate in the debate tonight until I listened to the speech by the hon. member for Westaskiwin (Mr. Schellenberger). As I sat behind the curtain doing what I sometimes do, puffing on a cigar, I was very much taken by his philosophical stance and perception of this very fundamental amendment. This bill has taken many days of the time of the House, but frankly, Mr. Speaker, at this time in Canadian history, I do not know what bill would have more business to be before the House than Bill C-48.

My friends from the left are interjecting, Mr. Speaker, but I am not going to go looking for rabbit tracks. When you are after elephants, you do not follow rabbit tracks; you do not go down a dead-end street that leads you to a rabbit warren that is sterile.

As I sat there—and I admit that I was puffing on a cigar that was not Canadian made but was given to me by a Canadian, but regardless of that—I thought that, in a philosophic sense, this bill does many things and this amendment does many things. We are talking about Canadianization, and this is an interesting time in Canadian history. Next week the premiers and the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) are supposed to get together—and I suppose they will—to try to resolve some of the fundamental problems that have affected the country for some time. In the House today we heard that the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen) has got another Hamlet, a second coming type of thing—now it is the third coming—and we may or may not have a budget, depending upon all these things.

As we are talking about Canadianization, it really hit me tonight that if there was ever a time to demarcate those people on the right of the Speaker and those people on the left—at least those people in the official opposition because there is no opposition to the left of the left ever since the constitutional motion came to the floor of the House—in terms of the House of Commons there has only been one official opposition according to the Speaker and that is absolutely true, and in terms of the constitutional debate there is not only the official opposition, there is absolutely zilch opposition to the left of the official opposition.

An hon. Member: Repeat that.

Mr. Nowlan: I will come now to the topic of Canadianization. I know that you read history, Mr. Speaker. You used to be a radio broadcaster long before you graced the chair. You will have heard the words of Hugh MacLennan, the Canadian novelist who wrote "Two Solitudes". It used to be that a member could not stand in his place in this House and mention two solitudes, without people immediately thinking of English and French or French and English. MacLennan wrote that book, a book which is still very applicable today but, Mr. Speaker, there are other solitudes. Never have those solitudes been more clear than in this debate on Bill C-48 tonight. Without getting into linguistics or even peoples, we get into the philosophy of people. That is what is missing, Mr. Speaker, and it is one of the problems with this country today—the philosophy of where the country is going.

Stimulated by the speech by the hon. member for Wetaskiwin, it hit me, as some things hit if one listens with an open mind, that tonight we are talking about those who are producers and those who are parasites; we are talking about those who believe in the profit motive and those who believe in penalty; we are talking about bureaucracy versus business; about initiative and incentive versus the chloroform of controls and regulation ad nauseam. Fundamentally, that is what we are talking about. I think there are some members opposite who share my philosophic view but I am sad to say that, unfortunately, what we are talking about on this bill tonight is the separation of Grits and Tories.

It is a sad irony, a sad paradox, that as the premiers and the Prime Minister sit down around the federal-provincial table at the beginning of next week to try to resolve the problems of the country, it has never been more clear in the House that the problems of the country are right here in this House, because we, the representatives of the people, have been separated by fundamental solitudes.

You have been in this House and I have been in this House as other members have tonight, Mr. Speaker. We have also heard some of the debate that has taken place over the last year or several months. What are we talking about? Canadianization.

• (2140)

Mr. Deans: That's a very good question.

Mr. Nowlan: Hon. members on the left can indulge in catcalls all they like and pretend they believe in the low income earner and the person who has nothing. I suggest that the persons who are watching the debate tonight in the House of Commons are not that excited or uptight on the matter of Canadianization and further extensions of Petro-Canada. They would like to know and have the security that they could Canadianize their homes—

Mr. Deans: At a price they can afford.

Mr. Nowlan: —and that the price of the interest rates will allow them to keep their homes. They would like to understand when the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) or the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) says, as he did today, "There is a time and a place when governments have to cut and chop because there is no time for government to spend money forever. That is why we cannot spend on trains." There is more than the odd Canadian who would like to believe that if the government can spend $1.5 billion for Petrofina and $650 million for Pacific Pete, surely it can find $100 million to help subsidize the trains until we can sort out a cost formula. VIA Rail cannot understand that, and CN and CP would never have the nerve to confess how they are raking off VIA Rail, which is supposedly the people's railway.

What else is fundamental to the people of Canada? There is nothing more fundamental to the people of Canada than something called—I do not want to get catcalls—it does not relate to languages but to weights and measures. It is an irony and a fundamental paradox that weights and measures, that is the metric system, and the essence of the metric system, have never been debated in the House of Commons. Does Your Honour know why people outside the House are a little alienated? They are alienated because these things that they think are fundamental are ignored by the House of Commons. What else is there that is fundamental and sacrosanct, without getting too political? It is something called the post office and the lack of service. That is something fundamental, and one can talk all one wants about Canadianization. Many hon. members on this side of the House have talked about Canadianization.

I am from a part of a country which believes that government must help those who cannot help themselves. I am proud to be a member of a party which has done things for this country in the short period of time that we were in office which have helped those who cannot help themselves, be it CBC, the CNR, the BBG, the Board of Broadcast Governors, you name it. In the short period of time we were in power, we added quality to public life, in spite of the narrow perspective of the period of time that we have been in public life, because we have not been in government long enough.

Frankly, I hope this debate continues for days until we really know what the premiers and the Prime Minister have to say about some fundamentals. However, those fundamentals are important for the long term. I am not denigrating the constitutional debate, but I am saying to Your Honour that never have the two solitudes—not meant the way MacLennan meant it, but in terms of a House of Commons—debated in this chamber for hours, ad nauseam, until the people of Canada outside wonder what the devil is going on.

We have had this debate for days. I am saying to Your Honour, with respect, that this House of Commons must start to come to grips with some of the fundamental problems wich affect the people, the philosophy behind this bill. We can have all the federal-provincial conferences we want in the world, but we must define our philosophy. I admit reluctantly that although some of my friends to the left have a philosophy, I do not subscribe to it. That philosophy is not what developed this country into the type of country it is today. That philosophy is not the type which gives so many of those friends of mine in the NDP a chance to come into this House and espouse their theoritical principles and their theoretical philosophy, because that philosophy forgets one basic ethic. One does not get anything in this world unless one is prepared to work for it. There is no free lunch, as we heard it said around here earlier.

What many of us have been trying to say in Bill C-48 is that one can have all the ministers of energy, mines and resources in the world trying to Canadianize the energy situation in Canada with Houdini's wand, but unless the basic philosophy of producer versus parasite is maintained, the mainstream that we in this House have been given will not continue.

I have been in this House for a few years. There are hon. members who are younger than I am. I will not become overly romantic or sentimental tonight about the heritage we have been given; but a heritage has been given to this country. The two solitudes exist because of the political framework and the make-up of this House of Commons. We would not have this debate in the House of Commons had there been, in the old days of Mackenzie King and St. Laurent, some strong spokesmen in this House from the varied regions of Canada. The government cannot nominate to the upper chamber these political eunuchs who are supposed to be the spokesmen of the main regions of this country. It needs the Stewart Garsons and the Jimmy Gardiners who were Liberals in the classical sense. It needs to balance those voices against those in the time of John Diefenbaker, strong voices from all parts of this country. This press of ours is so mesmerized by television that it does not take the time to really study some of the underlying philosophical and political currents which are affecting this country. It will never get the handle on the federal-provincial conferences coming up.

An hon. Member: Tommy Douglas.

Mr. Nowlan: I have the fullest respect for Tommy Douglas. The parliamentary secretary—or undersecretary, because he is so far under the secretary of energy, mines and resources, yet he is a fine man in the publishing world—is supposed to do something about Canadian history. However, unless there are people of his ilk who have consciences and some appreciation of history, I am saying in all seriousness tonight that this country, regardless of what happens on Monday or Tuesday, will not be here in my children's time. That is how serious I feel the situation to be.

I implore hon. members on the opposite side and members of the NDP, who come from a pretty homogeneous group to understand that it takes government members who have serious questions about either the Constitution or Bill C-48 to get a proper perspective, not the smug perspective that radiated tonight from the face of the secretary for energy, mines and resources. Unless hon. members of this House of Commons can get a wider perspective than the narrow constituency one, unfortunately, as this House is divided, I am not optimistic about what will happen to this country. I am an Irish Canadian, a Nova Scotian who has been conditioned to be optimistic about anything, because I have had to be.

Mr. Waddell: You must have kissed the Blarney stone, too, eh, Pat?

Mr. Nowlan: However, I am not going to go down those rabbit trails of public advocates who have yet to earn their hard dollar in the world of law. After one gets three years of Tommy Berger on that commission in the north, one can come into the House of Commons as knowledgeable in energy as is the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell). Regardless of that, I am not talking about individuals; I am talking about a national scene and, frankly, a national sickness. Unless we can start to reflect on the reasons we are here, that it is free enterprise, that it is producer versus parasite, that it is not just profit or penalty, not just bureaucracy and no lack of respect for the business, we will have continuing difficulty here. The fundamental of Canadianization, as much as we want to philosophize in this House, is the right of a Canadian to have his home, to have his family and to have his job. Unless we start to think in that sort of simplistic, general, but fundamental way, we will be debating Bill C-48 and the problems of Canada until the cows come home.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (2150)

Mr. Peter Elzinga (Pembina): Mr. Speaker, in the short period of time left to me prior to the calling of ten o'clock, I will not endeavour to get into the specifics of this legislation as have so many of my colleagues before me. I will leave the energy field to them because they are more knowledgeable than I. However, in speaking to Motion No. 21 before us pertaining to clause 27 in Bill C-48, I would like to philosophize somewhat on the implications of what we stand for in our motion as compared to what the other two parties stand for.

I have found in the seven years that I have served in this House of Commons that the members on the government benches opposite have been so preoccupied with the redistribution of wealth that they have given no concern to the generation of wealth. Unless we have generation of wealth here in Canada, Canadians will suffer. I can think of no better example to share with the House than the budget that we introduced and on which we were defeated in December, 1979.

There are many philosophical undertones to that budget. We have a deep belief in the Canadian individual who built this country. Individuals built this country, not governments. Governments simply take from the people. In our budget of December, 1979, it is interesting to note that we were reducing the government budgetary deficit and government spending. The social policy planning board of Canada indicated that it was the most socially progressive budget that had been introduced in Canada in the ten years prior.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Elzinga: I hear some heckling from my friends to the left. As our House leader indicated, they are social parasites. I appreciate the comments made by the hon. member for Athabasca (Mr. Shields) who calls a number of them a red wart on the red rump.

This motion points out clearly the philosophical difference between us in the Conservative party and the Liberal and New Democratic Party coalition, as did the constitutional discussion in the House.

Mr. Deans: What has this got to do with the bill?

Mr. Elzinga: We believe in the individual worth of Canadians. We believe in the free enterprise philosophy. It is quite obvious the other two parties do not. All we have to do is take a look at their actions. They speak for themselves.

As our spokesman has indicated, basically we support the 50 per cent Canadianization content and ownership. We would encourage Canadian ownership. We would encourage it in a totally different way from what this present administration is doing. There is no finer example to illustrate how we would encourage this than that of Petro-Canada, and what we were going to do with the petroleum company of Canada. We were going to allow individual Canadians an opportunity to participate in the development of their resources by participating directly in the development and in the profits of the company. But our friends opposite and our friends to the left would not allow Canadians that opportunity. They feel they are that much wiser than the individual Canadian.

Mr. Deans: They went to the polls and turfed you out.

Mr. Elzinga: They feel they should control it rather than individual Canadians.

I have never in my life seen a party more hypocritical than the New Democratic Party.

Mr. Deans: Take a look around you.

Mr. Elzinga: I wish to share with you some specific examples of hypocrisy.

Mr. Deans: You epitomize hypocrisy.

Mr. Elzinga: The budget on which we were defeated in 1979—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I recognize that you have endeavoured at great length to offer as broad a latitude as possible to all members of the House in this debate, but the level of slop that is coming from the right at the moment is irrelevant to the taxpayers of this nation. It is particularly irrelevant and hypocritical when we are discussing a bill that is extremely serious. It is improper for members to come into this chamber completely unprepared and to speak in only vaguely relevant terms on the bill. I would request, as a member of this House, that you give some direction to those speakers who are not even vaguely aware of what Bill C-48 is all about.

Mr. Elzinga: Mr. Speaker, what we have heard from the hon. member is typical of that party. They are not happy only dictating to the Canadian people. Now they want to dictate to the supreme being in this House, namely, our Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. I have been offered the opportunity to be the supreme being. I have no choice but to seek recognition. I did not take up the point made by the hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton). I think he was arguing on a point of order that there ought to be some greater degree of relevance.

Mr. Andre: The point of order should be more relevant.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The difficulty is not a new one to either hon. members or to the Chair. As I have done on previous occasions, I would suggest to the hon. member for Pembina (Mr. Elzinga) that he, as well as other members, may wish to consider the suggestion made by the hon. member for Skeena. That is the best that I can do, other than to make an outright ruling that something is not relevant.

Possibly some of the heated language could be moderated. That would perhaps get us through to ten o'clock, which is not far away.

Mr. Elzinga: Mr. Speaker, I should tell hon. members in this chamber that I am dealing with the Canadianization clause and the back-in provisions of 25 per cent ownership, but I have some introductory remarks to lead up to that.

Mr. Deans: Not at the report stage, you don't.

Mr. Elzinga: As I was saying, I want to deal with the hypocrisy of the party to my left. I could deal with that very quickly by mentioning two items that we had in our budget, namely the energy tax credit and the mortgage deductibility program. We advocated the energy tax credit. Hon. members over there voted against it but now they are shouting to have it included. That illustrates one example of the hypocrisy of my friends opposite.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Elzinga: We would like nothing better than to have an election now.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Elzinga: The second example is the mortgage tax credit program. Our friends were shouting that we should do something for the home owners. They had great concern for them. But when they defeated us in this chamber, interest rates were only 14 per cent. These people have contributed to the rise of interest rates by some 6 per cent to 7 per cent. They are directly responsible, as are hon. members opposite. But now they come out with their deep concern for social causes, such as the need to help the home owner. We advocated that help over a year ago. Where was the New Democratic Party at that time? They defeated us simply for political expediency.

May I call it ten o'clock, Mr. Speaker?

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 40 deemed to have been moved.

GOVERNMENT OF CANADA—DECENTRALIZATION PROGRAM. (B) JUSTIFICATION FOR PROGRAM

Hon. Walter Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, on October 16 last I asked a question of the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Johnston) with respect to the infamous decentralization program of the government. I indicated at that time that the program seemed to have some life in it again, marked by the move of the philatelic mail order section of the post office to the riding of the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen), together with the announcement at a management meeting that the citizenship records branch of the Department of the Secretary of State was being transferred. The minister's answer with respect to this is very important. He did not deny the two organizational moves that I mentioned. He went on to say that "the government has never backed off the policy" of decentralization, and that ministers would be making announcements from time to time. I assume these announcements will be timed to suit the political patronage convenience of the respective ministers. That is some program, Mr. Speaker. The old policy has been dusted off and we can now expect its revitalization.

• (2200)

I have to tell the House again tonight that there is yet another proposal before the Treasury Board which has to do with the land engineering test establishment of the Department of National Defence at Orleans, Ontario. The people who realize the importance of the presence of that government high technology establishment in the capital of Canada are saying, "build a building here so we can get on with our work". There are others who are giving active consideration to moving it somewhere away from the centre of high technology in Canada. This is another waste, and I think the government should be condemned for it.

I characterize this return to the policy of decentralization as a return to the most wasteful, cost ineffective, demoralized and patronage ridden program this Liberal government has ever foisted upon the public service, the national capital and the public of Canada.

The Clark government reviewed all decentralization programs of the former Liberal government in the summer of 1979 in the context of expanded priority to restrain government spending as well as to eliminate the negative effect on the delivery of government services. The decision not to proceed at that time in 19 cases effected a savings of at least $200 million, with extended costs of $250 million at that time, and the revitalization of this program means now a cost to the treasury in excess of $300 million, if this proceeds.

This is the extent of the program the minister has indicated is being revitalized: the Farm Credit Corporation headquarters to Camrose; the Department of National Health and Welfare, Bureau of Dangerous Drugs, to North Bay; the Department of National Health and Welfare, a lab to Kamloops, British Columbia; the Department of National Health and Welfare, medical services, Ontario Regional Office, to Thunder Bay, and Statistics Canada, Ontario Regional Office, to North Bay. The list continues: the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources, a subdivision, to Thunder Bay; Canada Employment and Immigration Commission, employer registration division —wage loss insurance—, to Bathurst, New Brunswick; the Department of National Health and Welfare and Department of Supply and Services, income security offices and support services from Halifax, to Sydney, and from Toronto to Peterboro, Chatham and Timmins; the Post Office, philatelic services, we already know about; External Affairs, passport mail service, to Sydney; Revenue Canada Taxation Centre for Career Development, to Rigaud, Quebec; Revenue Canada Taxation Data Centre, to Jonquière; the Department of Energy, Mines and Services, Survey, mapping branch, to Sherbrooke, Quebec; the Department of Communications, telecommunications regulatory service, to Quebec City; the Canada Pension Plan, claims and benefits, Ontario Region, to Toronto; and the Department of Environment, Hydrology Research Institute, to Saskatoon, Saskatchewan. That is the extent of the program being revitalized and to be announced from time to time as it suits the political convenience of the ministers.

Some 3,200 employees in the national capital region will be affected by the piecemeal revitalization of those plans. This was unaffordable and unwise in 1979, and it is even more unaffordable and unwise to proceed, or even to contemplate proceeding in this way at this time. Aside from the resources I have mentioned, the waste in human terms, the upset in terms of the public servants and their families in regard to this matter is something that is beyond measure.

Certainly if there is to be decentralization, the criterion must be the effective delivery of the services of the Government of Canada. None of those that have been announced and none of those contained in a revitalized decentralization program meet this criterion, and that is the sad case. Of course, with respect to this government, efficiency and effective delivery of service is not the criterion. The criterion is good, old-fashioned patronage; a building here, an extended runway there, and the public interest be damned. That characterized the program at the beginning, and that will characterize the program as it now proceeds.

• (2205)

Frankly, I want the minister to cancel this stupidity and put the money and the effort that will be wasted on this program where it will help certain people in the economy; home owners, small business people and farmers, who are the victims of this kind of extravagance and the high interest rate policy of the government.

I see the parliamentary secretary in the House tonight. I ask him to deny that any of those matters are going forward and I ask him to state categorically, on behalf of the government, that once and for all that decentralization program is ended.

Mr. Norman Kelly (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, the subject of organizational decentralization has received much attention in recent days, so I think it is appropriate at this time to review the government's position on this matter. As you know, decentralization has been part of this government's administrative approach for several years. It began in 1975 when the task force on decentralization was established, led by the Treasury Board secretariat. Its purpose was to develop a relocation program within the following framework. First, the location of any government unit must be consistent with an acceptable level of efficiency and effectiveness. Second, within the flexibility afforded by this principle, locations should be determined in terms of such objectives as regional development, urban development, controlled growth in the National Capital Region, and of considerations related to national unity.

As a result of this study, part of a relocation program was developed between May, 1975, and October, 1977. It consisted of nine projects, including the move of the headquarters of the Department of Veterans Affairs to Charlottetown, which is still in progress.

A second announcement in October, 1977, included 15 projects involving 12 departments and agencies, plus an important decentralization of the income security program offices of Health and Welfare Canada in nine provinces. The stated objectives then were: first, to move the administration of federal government programs closer to the people directly affected by them; second, to assist areas of slow economic development and high unemployment; third, to increase the presence of the federal government in communities where it had been low and where activities of a national character could contribute to national unity; and fourth, to lessen the proportion of federal employees in the National Capital Region vis-a-vis the rest of Canada.

It was then understood, Mr. Speaker, that if, in due course, there were to be other worthwhile decentralization projects, they would emerge from the normal annual planning process of the departments and agencies of the federal government. In effect, the responsibility for meeting the thrust of the policy has now been placed on departments and agencies, with emphasis placed on new programs which would have no impact on the National Capital Region. In other words, departments are required to review their geographic distribution at least annually. When changes of any kind are identified or when new units must be established, various alternative locations must be examined in relation to the efficiency and effectiveness of program delivery and protection of employee rights in areas such as official languages.

This examination of location options will permit the government to bring appropriate considerations to bear on the location of government units. These considerations will obviously include regional economic factors and other matters on which the choice of location can have beneficial results.

Regarding existing decentralization commitments, the government has had to consider how they can be met. Mr. Speaker, we have recognized that the substantial benefits to be obtained are not free but entail additional costs, for removal expenses and new buildings, for example, plus some disruption of programs and, most important, of the people involved.

Mr. Speaker, this government has been very much aware—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. I now have to recognize the hon. member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): That is hardly an answer.

INDUSTRY—LOCATION OF AEROSPACE TRAINING CENTRE INSTITUTE

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Mr. Speaker, on October 16 of this year I directed a question to the Minister of Employment and Immigration with regard to the establishment of an aerospace training centre in Winnipeg. Earlier this year the minister had appointed a 12-member advisory group under retired General A. MacKenzie. This group recommended that the aerospace training centre be established in Winnipeg. I did not receive a satisfactory answer from the minister when I directed my question to him. He just gave me some evasive answer that there was lots of work for everyone. I asked him to give a commitment that the aerospace training centre would be located in Winnipeg. I find it very strange that the minister is not here tonight to answer this question because of the importance it has for Winnipeg and western Canada.

• (2210)

We were disturbed to hear recently that the Quebec caucus of the Liberal party and its chairman have stated that the aerospace training centre will either be in Montreal or will not be built at all. Apparently this was also a Liberal caucus resolution. They have completely overruled the minister's recommendation that the aerospace training centre be located in Winnipeg. I understand that all 74 members of the Quebec caucus and 14 cabinet ministers have stated that the centre will be in Quebec. I find this very strange as the cabinet is to make the final decision. However, the decision has apparently been made at a Liberal caucus meeting that the aerospace training centre will be in Quebec, and the advisory group's recommendation that it go to Winnipeg will be completely ignored.

If the Quebec caucus has given the minister an ultimatum that they are going to ignore him, he has no alternative but to put his resignation on the desk of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau). He should state that if it is not to be built in Winnipeg, he will resign. I hope he is man enough to do that. Otherwise he is nothing but a mere figurehead in the Liberal cabinet.

The advisory group made some excellent recommendations as to why the aerospace training centre should go to Winnipeg. They stated that, by virtue of its location in Winnipeg, the institute could undertake basic training courses to address the needs of the aerospace industry. They further stated that Manitoba is the location of the third largest segment of the Canadian aerospace industry and has a diversity of activity which would benefit from manufacturing-related training courses within the institute. The minister has stated that Winnipeg is the cradle of aviation. He should back up his words with actions.

Winnipeg was chosen because no aerospace centre exists in Manitoba or Saskatchewan. Winnipeg is still most unhappy with the Liberal's removal in 1969 of the Air Canada over-all facility. To deprive that city further of a modest share of air space growth will be more fuel for western alienation.

Winnipeg deserves the training centre since Quebec already has 50 per cent of the aerospace industry in Canada. It has a 48 per cent commitment of the NFA fighter aircraft spin-off. The province of Quebec has received millions upon millions in defence contracts.

Canadair and other industries have untold millions poured into their business in the province of Quebec. This is nothing but 100 per cent pure greed on the part of the Liberal caucus which is never satisfied with what it receives. They are still fighting to have the NFA contracts opened up again so that they can get more than 48 per cent.

The advisory group recommended that the startup phase of the centre commence immediately. I was hoping the minister would be here this evening to give a firm commitment to Winnipeg and the west that this aerospace training centre will be built in Winnipeg. I hope he will be man enough to lay his cabinet post on the line if he is overruled by the Liberal caucus and cabinet.

The Winnipeg chamber of commerce has shown a great interest in having this aerospace centre established in Winnipeg. They are distressed about the public disagreement over the Canadian Institute of Aerospace Training and Technology. In a letter to the Prime Minister they stated:

> We are sorry to hear that your cabinet minister, the hon. Lloyd Axworthy, and your Quebec MPs choose to disagree over the location of the institute.

● (2215)

They also stated: "Quebec has aerospace training schools and Winnipeg has not". We read regularly in the newspapers that new federal government projects are starting up in Quebec. It now appears that when any project is not located in Quebec, there is a hue and cry that an injustice has been done. Canada should not be a funnel to locate almost all federal projects in Quebec.

The chamber went on to say:

> I request that you and the cabinet impartially review the objectives and recommendations of the report, and come to the logical conclusion of the committee which studied the problem in great detail.

In closing, they said:

> I have taken the liberty of sending copies of this letter to some concerned Members of Parliament, as well as to the media.

I hope I was wrong when I said tonight that the decision has already been made that the institute is moving to Montreal and not to Winnipeg. I hope the parliamentary secretary can state tonight that a final decision has not been made and there is still a chance that this institute can be located in Winnipeg, as was advised by the minister's own advisory group.

[Translation]

Mr. Rémi Bujold (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, as pointed out by the hon. member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie)—I believe he has clearly demonstrated his interest in advanced technology in the aerospace industry—and in the House as well, we have found that many members are interested in this new technology and in the training aspect which is also very important to Canada. Mr. Speaker, I should like to elaborate on the minister's reply in the House last week. I wish to point out that it is a matter of concern to the minister that all expanding industrial sectors in the country should have an adequate supply of skilled workers commensurate with their needs, and that the minister is examining a number of proposals aimed at increasing the number of skilled Canadian workers in all industrial and developing sectors throughout the country.

Regarding the aerospace industry in particular, a subject that my hon. colleague has just addressed, an advisory group consisting of employer and union representatives has recommended establishing a national aerospace institute whose responsibilities would include:

(1) providing leadership to the Canadian aerospace industry by keeping it abreast of advanced technology, offering training programs and proceeding with a manpower planning program;

(2) to co-ordinate present efforts being made by public authorities, the private sector and community colleges;

(3) to provide information commensurate with the needs of regional industry.

The institute's intended role with respect to manpower co-ordination and planning will be of considerable help to the aerospace industry in planning and co-ordinating the industry's training activities aimed at acquiring sufficient numbers of skilled Canadian workers.

A few months ago, the minister and the Canadian Association of Aerospace Industries concluded an agreement on human resources with a view to finding a solution to the projected manpower shortages in the industry's manufacturing sector. Under the agreement, the commission and the association will co-operate on various manpower aspects such as planning, training and affirmative action and also on carrying out programs.

The projected institute is only one of many recommendations made by the industry with a view to relieving manpower shortages, and the minister is expected to submit recommendations to the cabinet in this regard.

[English]

WILDLIFE—EXPORT OF FALCONS TO MIDDLE EAST

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): My question tonight arises from a question I put to the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) on October 20. It is reported at page 11,968 of Hansard. My first questions was:

Has the Prime Minister at any time asked his staff to arrange for the export of either peregrines or gyrfalcons to the Middle East?

The answer, Mr. Speaker, is clearly yes, although you will note that the Prime Minister said, as reported on that page of Hansard, "no". I am hopeful that tonight I will receive some clarification, because I am confident that the Prime Minister would not want to mislead the House on that point.

● (2220)

When I named Mr. Jim MacDonald, who was a member of the staff of the Prime Minister, I made it very clear that he was "recently of his personal staff". The Prime Minister came back with the following very quick comment:

It seems to me that the hon. member is making at least two mistakes. First, Jim MacDonald is not in my office.

I never intended the Prime Minister to understand that he was. Anyone who checks Hansard will see that that is not what I said. It is at least a strange coincidence that of 24-odd million Canadians the Prime Minister's previous head of communications is involved in what I have described as the "gyrfalcon wildlife scandal."

An interesting thing occurred approximately ten days ago. I had a conversation with Mr. MacDonald, and approximately two days later he came up with a completely different story. At the same time I had conversations with a number of reporters. Certainly he demonstrated how well-heeled he is in the art of media manipulation and of shading the truth. I said in my question that it was a wildlife scandal. Of course it is. There is absolutely no baseline population information available on gyrfalcons in the north.

I should like to quote from two well-known Canadian sources. First, the co-ordinator of wildlife research for Canada with Environment Canada, Mr. Nick Novakowski, who said:

it was a political decision made by the territories. We're not happy about it, but the gyr is not yet on the endangered species list and thus does not have federal protection.

He went on to say:

The problem is, however, that we do not know how many there are in the north.

Another person who should know a great deal about this subject is Mr. Ron Gaf, a wildlife service officer with the Northwest Territories government. It is reported:

Ron Gaf, a territories biologist who accompanied the Inuit, said little is known about the gyr population.

Mr. Gaf went on to say:

The only numbers we have are sightings by wildlife service officers monitoring peregrines.

As if that was not serious enough, let me return to Mr. MacDonald for a moment. Obviously he was a key player in this affair. I should like to demonstrate how the media has been manipulated in this situation. As reported in The Globe and Mail on October 21 in an article by Charlotte Montgomery entitled, "Former PM Aide Denies Role in Gyrfalcon Affair," Mr. MacDonald said that he assisted the Inuit organization with an export proposal which resulted in 50 trapping and 50 export permits being issued to the Inuit by the territorial government. The article continued:

He said he then helped to pre-sell 50 birds to Middle East buyers.

It went on to include a direct quote of Mr. MacDonald:

I really just put together the project.

From where did the headline come? The entire article is about his involvement, that he set up the project, that he made the sales to the Middle East, and he admits putting the whole thing together. But the headline indicated that he was not involved. I find this kind of reporting to be a very serious concern. It is a completely erroneous headline for a newspaper to carry about a very serious environmental issue.

This is where we really get to know something about this fellow, Jim MacDonald. As reported in the same article, he said:

—gyrfalcons are a very common bird—

I have given quotations of Mr. Novakowski, the co-ordinator of wildlife research for Environment Canada, and of a biologist in the Northwest Territories, but here we have a guy who was in communications in the office of the Prime Minister saying that it was a very common bird. In my view it demonstrates the kind of unscientific and really dishonest attitude which has seriously tainted the issue.

Mr. MacDonald went on to indicate that the birds were worth from $5,000 to $12,000 apiece. This has been disputed by every legitimate falconer with whom I have spoken, and many other sources. In fact, Hugh Monaghan, a Northwest Territories wildlife services officer said that for each bird taken under those permits, $5,000 would go to the government of the Northwest Territories. Mr. MacDonald is saying that some of these birds are caught in the Arctic and are brought down for sale, and that all the money is going to the Northwest Territories government. What about the Inuit? Are they to get nothing? As a matter of fact, the vice-president of the Canadian Wildlife Federation indicated publicly that perhaps those birds are worth $50,000 or more each.

● (2225)

It goes on and on. Not only have reporters and the Northwest Territories wildlife service director Kuwaitis implied that there are no Kuwaitis in Canada, they have not taken the time, as I have, to check into this. Perhaps these reporters who have run so quickly with their pens to write things about this story should contact David Miller of the Toronto Star who, on October 11, pointed out that Nick Novakowski of the Canadian wildlife service said that Kuwaitis have been in the Northwest Territories for a month working with the Inuit, ever since the territorial government issued 50 permits to trap falcons.

That is not just one source, Mr. Speaker. I refer those same reporters to the Montreal Gazette of Tuesday, October 13, which confirmed precisely the same information.

If members on the government side do not believe that Kuwaitis are involved in this hunt, perhaps Mr. MacDonald or the Inuit association should get in touch with the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Roberts). Mr. Novakowski is an employee of the federal government. He is on the public record as indicating that Kuwaitis are involved. I would encourage members opposite to ask the Minister of the Environment to rise in this House and say that Mr. Novakowski's statement is not correct.

It seems clear, Mr. Speaker, that there is, first, a totally inadequate population information base on the gyrfalcon, not only in the Northwest Territories but in Canada as a whole, and the export of birds at this time is scientifically unsound and is a biological travesty for Canada and, second, connections between the gyr export and Prime Minister's office needs some very serious clarification. The Prime Minister's answer to my question on October 20 was really quite unrevealing and perhaps was misleading. I am sure he would not want that left on the record. The Prime Minister indicated that he would inquire into this whole situation, that is, the involvement of Mr. MacDonald in the permit and export of these gyrfalcon. This is an important question and I hope the response that I receive tonight will be something that I can give to all the organizations that have been in touch with me and to the reporters who have raised questions about the information I used.

Mr. Norman Kelly (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Skeena has indicated that he is not satisfied with the response to his questions in the House the other day.

In helping him understand the issue he has raised, perhaps a little history would be useful. The Government of Canada is a signatory to the 1973 Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species. By that convention, certain species, which are declared by countries to be endangered, are listed in Appendix I and may not be traded in international commerce.

For a number of years, all falcons were listed in Appendix I. However, last March, at the general meeting of the parties in New Delhi, India, the parties agreed that the North American populations of the gyrfalcon would be downgraded to Appendix II, which permits their movement in commerce under the appropriate permits, of course, and provided the birds were banded in an approved fashion. Changes in the regulations of the Import and Export Permits Act have now been developed which will allow the commercial export from Canada of gyrfalcons taken legally from the wild or bred in captivity.

Now, moving closer to the heart of the matter, an Inuit Association headquartered in Cambridge Bay, approached the government of the Northwest Territories with a plan to trap gyrfalcons in the central Arctic. The executive committee of the NWT approved the capture of a maximum of 50 gyrfalcons in what was to have been an experimental harvest.

The idea behind the trapping and export of gyrfalcons was to generate revenue for both the Inuit Association and for the government of the Northwest Territories to permit further study of gyrfalcon populations in the Northwest Territories. I am sure the hon. member opposite would agree that that is a reasonable and desirable goal. The executive committee of the Northwest Territories, in a responsible way, imposed the following conditions on the harvest: first, there had to be a confirmed order for each of the falcons taken; second, only young-of-the-year birds were to be trapped; third, falconers retained by the Inuit association to assist in the harvest were to be approved by the chief of the Northwest Territories wildlife service and the trapping operation was to be monitored by the Northwest Territories wildlife service officers; fourth, all birds trapped were to be banded in an approved fashion and held individually in a temporary housing facility until their movement from the Northwest Territories was arranged; fifth, four Inuit men were to be trained in the trapping and handling of falcons and four Inuit women were to be hired to care for the birds at the temporary housing facility; sixth, the Inuit association would be charged an export permit fee of $5,000 per bird captured; and seventh, export from Canada would not be permitted until the appropriate regulations under the Import and Export Permits Act were properly in place.

The trapping was to have taken place during the first ten days of October. Participating in the trapping operations were Inuit from the Inuit association—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please.

Mr. Kelly: —and two professional falconers from British Columbia supervised officials of the Northwest Territories wildlife service.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please.

Mr. Kelly: No falconers from Kuwait were present—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. It is regrettable that the Chair has to cut off the hon. member in this fashion but that is the way the Standing Orders read and that is the way they have to be applied at this hour of the night. Perhaps I can indicate for the record that departments that go to the trouble of preparing answers should realize that if the hon. parliamentary secretary does not have enough time to make the answer then it is Canadians who suffer. It is someone's responsibility to see that the information is put into three minutes.

Adjournment Debate

The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at two o'clock p.m.

At 10.31 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Wednesday, October 28, 1981

The House met at 2 p.m.

• (1405)

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

AGRICULTURE

CALL FOR MORATORIUM ON FARM FORECLOSURES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Madam Speaker, Canadian farming is dependent upon credit, but government policies of high interest rates, combined with its refusal to increase the budget of the Farm Credit Corporation and to extend the small business development bond to unincorporated farmers, have contributed to a 147 per cent increase in farm bankruptcies since 1979. I move, seconded by the hon. member for Bruce-Grey (Mr. Gurbin):

That this House instruct the Minister of Finance to declare a national moratorium on all farm bankruptcies, foreclosures and forced sales pending the budget, to add at least $500 million to the Farm Credit Corporation to refinance existing loans, and to extend the small business development bond to unincorporated farmers in the upcoming budget.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

COMPILATION OF STATISTICS ON CATTLE EXPORTS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Lorne Greenaway (Cariboo-Chilcotin): Madam Speaker, a good proportion of live cattle exported to the United States from southwestern Alberta clear the border at Kingsgate, British Columbia. In compiling statistics Agriculture Canada considers the border point of exit as the province of origin of these cattle, thus counting these Alberta cattle as coming from British Columbia. Therefore I move, seconded by the hon. member for Medicine Hat (Mr. Hargrave):

That the Minister of Agriculture instruct his officials to correct this situation in order that the beef industry can have accurate statistics.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

DEMAND FOR ACTION TO ASSIST CATTLE PRODUCERS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Madam Speaker, we are in real danger of losing our vitally important beef industry due to high interest rates and high production costs. The cries of cattle producers for real assistance from the government have so far gone unheeded. Therefore I move, seconded by the hon. member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight):

That the Minister of Agriculture immediately address himself to the problems facing our cattlemen with something more than the tired old words we are sick of hearing.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GUATEMALA—INTER-AMERICAN BANK LOAN—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Bob Ogle (Saskatoon East): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. The Inter-American Development Bank will soon be considering and voting on a $20 million loan to Guatemala. As a member of the bank Canada is able to vote on the loan. In Guatemala in recent months there has been a serious increase in terror affecting the Guatemalan population, as well as Canadian church and embassy people. In view of this fact I move, seconded by the hon. member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans):

That the Minister of Finance instruct our representatives at the Inter-American Development Bank to vote against the granting of the proposed $20 million loan to Guatemala.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

S.O. 43

NATIONAL ENERGY PROGRAM

OPPORTUNITIES FOR CANADIANS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Jim Schroder (Guelph): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. In light of the fact that today is the first birthday of Canada's National Energy Program and therefore an appropriate occasion to acknowledge the many new opportunities for Canadians to participate in the vital and expanding energy sector, I move, seconded by the hon. member for London West (Mr. Burghardt):

That this House applaudes the foresight of aggressive Canadian entrepreneurs and the efforts of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, which have reduced foreign ownership of Canada's petroleum industry by 10 per cent in the last year alone.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

CANADIAN ARMED FORCES

EXPRESSION OF GRATITUDE—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Ron Stewart (Simcoe South): Madam Speaker, I speak as a member of the subcommittee studying the Armed Forces reserves. In view of their distinction in protecting Canadians in two world wars and in the Korean conflict, and as Remembrance Day approaches, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. Bradley):

That the Prime Minister and his government extend, on behalf of all members of the House, an expression of gratitude and assurances of increased moral and tangible support to the Canadian Armed Forces, regular and reserves, in their ongoing role in defence of the Canadian way of life.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

GARRISON DIVERSION

PROTEST AGAINST AMERICAN ACTION—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): Madam Speaker, last Thursday the powerful Senate Appropriations Committee in Washington approved another $4 million for the controversial Garrison Dam project in North Dakota and voted to remove the court injunction against the project filed by the American Audubon Society. Officials at the Canadian embassy have stated that "assurances that these changes will not affect Canada are meaningless." The premier and the minister of natural resources of the Manitoba government have sent strong messages of protest to Washington in response to this action. In light of these developments I move, seconded by the hon. member for Lisgar (Mr. Murta):

• (1410)

That the Prime Minister and the Minister of the Environment, along with the Secretary of State for External Affairs, particularly in view of the statement from the Canadian embassy that assurances that Canadian waters will not be polluted are meaningless, join with the Manitoba government leaders in personally protesting the action before it comes before the full Senate.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

POST OFFICE

PROPOSED INCREASE IN POSTAL RATES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Otto Jelinek (Halton): Madam Speaker, because a near 100 per cent postal rate increase proposed for January 1 will not only contribute to our growing inflation rate but will also adversely affect the small business sector, jeopardize the viability of direct mail service, and cause hardship to the many Canadians who are already overtaxed, as this petition I hold will verify, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. Bradley):

That this House instruct the minister responsible for the Canada Post Corporation to take immediate steps to have the unacceptable and inflationary proposed rate increase reduced to a realistic level and, at the same time, take all necessary action to correct inefficient postal operations which have resulted in regular, record, deficits within the Post Office.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

NUCLEAR ENERGY

HEAVY WATER SPILL IN PORT ELGIN, ONT.—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Mark Rose (Mission-Port Moody): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43. The 600-gallon heavy water spill at the Bruce nuclear plant in Port Elgin from August 29 to September 5 contained almost three times as much radioactive poison as the U.S. Atomic Regulator Commission tried to dump into the Susquahanna River following the Three Mile Island accident. The dangers to the public have been downplayed by the Atomic Energy Control Board of Canada. The excuse is that the spill has been within so-called legal limits.

Because this radioactive spill contained large amounts of tritium, a substance so toxic that some scientists believe it can cause birth defects, and because it is a substance for which there are no proven safety levels for emissions, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton):

That the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources immediately instruct the Atomic Energy Control Board to conduct a complete review of all their general radiation emission standards to protect the health of this and future generations of Canadians.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

THE ECONOMY

REDUCTION IN GOVERNMENT DEFICIT—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Ralph Ferguson (Lambton-Middlesex): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. Figures released yesterday by the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen) indicate that the government's operating deficit is down nearly $1 billion. I move, seconded by the hon. member for Scarborough Centre (Mr. Kelly):

That this House recognize and applaud the minister for his efforts in putting Canada on a firm economic base.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

NATIONAL ENERGY PROGRAM

EFFECT ON PETROLEUM PRODUCERS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Madam Speaker, today celebrates the anniversary of the ill-conceived National Energy Program. Since the price of gas and fuel oil has risen by 30 per cent in one year on account of federal and provincial sales taxes and increases at the wellhead, the majority of which goes to federal and provincial governments, and as the National Energy Program has forced Canadian petroleum producers physically and financially to leave Canada, resulting in a failure to ensure oil self-sufficiency for Canadians, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Calgary Centre (Mr. Andre) that:

The Minister of Finance provide in his upcoming budget for an energy tax credit and return to the drawing board to rewrite the National Energy Program in order to encourage Canadian petroleum producers to return to Canada.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

THE CONSTITUTION

SURVEY CONDUCTED BY CANADA WEST FOUNDATION—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Madam Speaker, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Pembina (Mr. Elzinga):

That the Minister of Justice be severely castigated for abusing the truth and thereby misleading Canadians when he stated that a survey taken by Canada West Foundation supported the government position on the Constitution when, in actual fact, 90 per cent of those surveyed were in opposition to having Canada's Constitution amended in the U.K. by the British Parliament.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

VIA RAIL

QUERY RESPECTING LEGALITY OF ORDER IN COUNCIL CANCELLING PASSENGER SERVICES

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. Yesterday the minister undertook to attend immediately to the question of the illegality of the government's order in council which proposes to eliminate one fifth of Canada's rail passenger service. This arose out of an opinion expressed by Mr. J. C. Eglington, the counsel for the Joint Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments.

The minister also undertook to respond to the suggestion advanced by the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition to the effect that he recommended that the implementation date of November 15 be deferred until such time as this matter be referred to the appropriate court for thorough clarification.

• (1415)

Can the minister now advise the House of the results of his action, and can he also advise the House what he proposes to do?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Yes, Madam Speaker. In this instance the Leader of the Opposition, the Minister of Transport, and the hon. member for Vegreville are just reflecting the views of distinguished legal minds on the subject. There is a debate among lawyers regarding not only the particular recent order in council on VIA, but all orders in council passed under Section 64 of the National Transportation Act. Some of them say that these must be registered, and others say they do not. There is a debate on the subject. My lawyers, and I have a number of them—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Crosbie: You'll need them!

Mr. Pepin: —say that these orders in council do not need to be registered. They quote a number of precedents to that effect. However, they are looking into this very interesting discussion in greater depth.

Should there be a doubt about the matter, and this is the important part of my answer, we will pass a new order in council and will have it registered. The important thing is that such a decision, such a move on our part, would not change the substance or the date of implementation of the decision made in the order in council.

Mr. Clark: Shame!

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Shame!

* * *

RAILWAYS

OBLIGATION TO PROVIDE PASSENGER SERVICE

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): That is a most contemptuous and arrogant response, because there is clearly doubt in the minds of the vast majority of Canadians about the minister's action, and I think that that should be taken into account, as well.

I would like to ask the minister whether he is aware of the fact that under existing CTC order R26-520 and R-6751, and pursuant to Sections 260, 261 and 262 of the Railway Act, the railways, namely, the CN and CP, have a continuing obligation to provide rail passenger service, notwithstanding the creation of VIA Rail and notwithstanding its withdrawal of the service as contemplated by the minister in his order. Is he further aware of the fact that the Canadian Railway Labour Association will be making an application to the CTC to order the CN and the CP to restore passenger service on those lines which VIA will vacate should the minister's decision go through?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, because I suspected that the question would be raised, I asked my lawyers to look into precedents. I may soon be in a position to demonstrate that my hon. friend made a decision similar to the one we are talking about now. We will know more about that later on today. The only thing I know, and I will presumably be talking about that tomorrow in front of the committee on regulations, is that Section 64(1) of the National Transportation Act is very clear. It has been interpreted by the courts on a number of occasions. The courts have said repeatedly—and I will quote that, chapter and verse, tomorrow—that there is no restriction on the rights of the government to vary or rescind orders passed by the Canadian Transportation Commission.

I did not have all morning to talk about the debate with my lawyers but, as I understood it, the debate concerns what the major consideration should be. In other words, is it the document being amended, or rescinded which conditions the registration, or is it the instrument that commands the change?

Mr. Nielsen: That's like Gilles Lamontagne—up and down, up and down.

Mr. Pepin: Some of the hon. members on the other side have degrees in law; so do I.

• (1420)

The changes that were made were made to orders of the CTC, and consequently they were not changes to regulations of the CTC. Because they were changes to orders they do not have to be registered.

APPLICATION TO COMMISSION TO RESTORE SERVICES

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Madam Speaker, the minister, either accidentally or deliberately, chose to ignore the question I asked, which had to do with the ongoing statutory responsibilities of the railroads, namely, CN and CP. Notwithstanding the minister's actions under Section 64, there are overriding CTC orders, namely R26-520 and R-6751, and pursuant to Sections 260, 261 and 262 of the Railway Act the railways are compelled to provide a passenger service. Is the minister aware of that? Is he also aware that an application will be made to the CTC to force the CN and CP to restore services on those lines which VIA will vacate?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I can only answer the question the way I did, which was to state emphatically that under Section 64(1) of the National Transportation Act the Canadian government, by order in council, can rescind or vary any order that the Canadian Transportation Commission has passed. That is what the debate is all about.

Mr. Mazankowski: You didn't rescind the other orders. Those two orders are still in existance.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Resign.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

TRANSPORT

CONVENING OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants): Madam Speaker, my question is for the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi, who is the chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport. I am directing my question to him, which I can under the rules, to try to circumvent the executive atmosphere we have and the arbitrary order in council that puts us in this quandary whereby hon. members do not have an opportunity to discuss and debate, and to try to find out the reason and the explanation for the costing order.

Can the Chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport inform The House on the status of convening the transport committee as of tomorrow and all next week, even in view of this November 15 deadline, so that all members on all sides of the House can examine the presidents of the two railways and the president of VIA Rail, and so that competent officials from the CTC can attend to explain the costing order and how it compares with the Amtrak order and the costing order of European Rail, which has 11 different railways feeding into it—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I would like to have a question, and I would like it to be as brief as possible.

Mr. Nowlan: Madam Speaker, can the chairman inform this House on the status of earlier discussions to convene the committee? Does the hon. member not think it would be a positive step to widen the terms of reference of the committee to include the Atlantic coast and British Columbia, rather than having only Ontario and Quebec?

[Translation]

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, members have already had an opportunity to discuss the matter at least twice. The first time was on an opposition day, when the first motion was introduced by the opposition; the last or second time was last Monday, during the debate on a motion for concurrence in a committee report. Members opposite have four opposition days left to discuss the matter again, if they wish. In addition, the Minister of Transport has announced that he was available to appear before another committee in order to provide clarification.

So there have been and there will be plenty of opportunities to discuss this matter, thanks to the flexible attitude of the Minister of Transport and the government. The hon. member's request is therefore unnecessary.

[English]

PARTICIPATION BY MEMBERS IN CONSIDERATION OF DECISION

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants): Madam Speaker, my question was directed to the Chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport. It did not involve the government House leader, who undoubtedly has torpedoed the recommendation that the Chair—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The President of the Privy Council is authorized to answer questions if he so chooses on questions of that nature.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Andre: Nonsense.

Mr. Nowlan: Could either the Chairman of the Standing Committee or the President of the Privy Council please explain to this House, under this red herring of four more allotted days, that unless the standing committee meets tomorrow and all of next week, the four allotted days, cannot be used until after November 15 thereby eliminating any participation by members on all sides on this very arbitrary decision?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, in fact it was my intention to designate next Monday as an opposition day and I wanted to discuss this with my fellow House leaders later this afternoon.

In the circumstances, before November 15 there will be at least one more opportunity for debate. In all probability, next Monday will be an opposition day.

* * *

● (1425)

[English]

THE ECONOMY

SPEECH MADE BY DEPUTY GOVERNOR OF BANK OF CANADA

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Finance. Yesterday the Conference Board pointed out that consumer confidence in the Canadian economy is at a 20-year low directly attributable to a high interest rate policy. Yesterday the Minister of Agriculture complained about the banks' high interest rates, yet yesterday in London a deputy governor of the Bank of Canada said high interest rates are going to remain in Canada. My question to the minister is straightforward. Will he now guarantee us a low interest rate policy, and will he tell us who is running Canada, the Government of Canada or the Bank of Canada?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the hon. member realizes as well as I do that the way to get interest rates down in this country is to get the rate of inflation down. The hon. member and I could have a number of debates about the variation in interest rates between Canada and the United States, or on how much savers ought to receive for their savings in the form of interest payments, presumably some amount above the rate of inflation. We can have our debate on that and we can have differences of opinion, but I hope my hon. friend and I agree that the surest and most fundamental way of getting interest rates down is to take every possible step to get the rate of inflation down, a rate which is high and rising, and which can only be the way of providing the guarantee that the hon. member sincerely asks for today. That is my answer to his request for a guarantee.

REQUEST THAT BANKS BE DIRECTED TO REDUCE INTEREST RATES

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, it is clear every day that the only way to get interest rates down in Canada is to change the Government of Canada.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

An hon. Member: Where were you when we were voting?

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Madam Speaker: Order, order.

Mr. Broadbent: Madam Speaker, we don't want the Tories, who increased interest rates five times when they were in office.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: Madam Speaker, at least the deputy governor of the Bank of Canada acknowledged in the same speech that the continuation of high interest rates would mean that Canadians would continue to suffer, more homes would be lost, more businesses would go out of business, and farmers would suffer. If those are the results of high interest rates, and they are indeed the results, why does the government not assume its responsibility and direct the banks to bring down the interest rates?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the hon. member knows perfectly well, and surely he has not been the first to think about a simple solution like that, as if everybody is going around groping for a way to battle inflation, that there is a very easy way, and that is just to direct the governor of the bank to reduce interest rates.

Mr. Crosbie: That's what you told us.

Mr. MacEachen: That is the simplistic solution proposed by the hon. member. He knows perfectly well that the net effect of that proposal, whatever its effects in the short term, would be increased inflation and subsequently even higher interest rates. That is the result of his policy. He says the only way to get interest rates down is to change the government. I know one way to get interest rates even higher than they are today, and that would be to follow the economic advice of the hon. member.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: Madam Speaker, even the minister should know that that is nonsense. I will come to my last question.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PLEA FOR BUDGETARY TAX CUTS

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, I see the minister smiling and I am sure he is smiling about the benefits that are accruing to some people because of high interest rates. He knows full well that not everyone is suffering from high interest rates. Indeed, wealthy investors are doing quite well.

• (1430)

Considering that the standard of living in the average home in Canada has gone down for three years in a row, will the minister at least offer a tax cut in the coming budget for the ordinary Canadian, and make those 160 Canadians who earn more than $200,000 a year without paying one penny in income tax, pay at least their fair share of taxes?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the hon. member knows it is not possible for me to tell him what will be in the budget. Having said that, I wonder, if I said yes to the hon. member's question, would he then support the budget I introduced.

An hon. Member: We will see the budget first.

* * *

TRANSPORT

COMMITTEE CONSIDERATION OF DECISION AFFECTING VIA RAIL

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, my question was for the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi who just left the House. I see one of his colleagues has gone to get him. I would welcome his return to the House so he can speak for himself rather than be gagged by the government House leader.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: The hon. member for St. John's West.

Some hon. Members: Here he is! He's come back! Hooray!

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I can see we are off to another wonderful Wednesday.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Clark: I thank the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi for returning to his responsibility.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark: I direct my question to him as chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport. Will the chairman of that committee tell us whether he has asked for a reference of the VIA Rail question to the standing committee, and whether he has asked for authority to call officials of the railways, VIA Rail or of the Canadian Transport Commission, or any other group who might be able to help the House of Commons come to the truth about the VIA Rail decision? Has he sought that reference?

And Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi) and Mr. Pinard having risen:

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some hon. Members: Sit down, Pinard.

Madam Speaker: Order.

An hon. Member: Now we know who runs the committees.

An hon. Member: Show some courage. You can let the man speak.

[Translation]

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, as I said earlier, this question has already been asked. We made it quite clear that although the suggestion seemed to have some merit, we had to consider the fact that this matter had already been debated at least twice. Members will recall that starting with the first designated day, it was the subject of a motion introduced by the opposition, which even led to a vote of non-confidence in the government. The matter was debated all day, followed by a vote in the House, and subsequently we had a surprise motion for concurrence in a committee report on the subject. This matter was debated for a whole day, on Monday this week, on government time, and now, as I said before, there are still four opposition days before December 10, so that if the opposition wants to discuss the question again, we shall have no choice but to reopen the debate.

However, Madam Speaker, the question asked by the opposition leader could not be answered otherwise, because even if the committee did have the reference order, in the final instance this can lead to debate in the House and could therefore upset the government's priorities.

[English]

POSITION OF COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, there is a very real question affecting the basic rules of this House of Commons and the propriety of conduct here as to whether a minister of the Crown can force an elected chairman of a standing committee of this House of Commons to sink to his knees and seek safety in his seat.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark: We will pursue that affront to democracy later.

I would like to ask the member for Northumberland-Miramichi, in his capacity as chairman, does he intend to sit quietly in his seat and be gagged by the President of the Privy Council, or will he accept his responsibility and stand up and tell this House whether he has sought the reference and sought the authority I asked him about?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Madam Speaker—

Mr. Pinard: Madame le Président—

Some hon. Members: Come on, let him speak.

An hon. Member: What kind of a democracy is this?

[Translation]

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, I am sure that the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi is now able to answer the Leader of the Opposition and tell him that he does not need his lessons in democracy.

[English]

Mr. Maurice A. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Madam Speaker, first of all I do not sink to my knees for anyone except my God.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nielsen: He is not here today. He will be back tomorrow.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): The answer to the right hon. gentleman's question is yes.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REASONS FOR MINISTER'S ACTIONS

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is for the Minister of Transport. We have an indication that this minister, who went around the rules of the CTC—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An hon. Member: Withdraw!

Mr. Clark: —to deny the Canadian Transport Commission the right to hold its hearings on the VIA Rail procedures, has now apparently used his authority to deny a request by the elected chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport to have this House of Commons—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I would appreciate it if the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition would ask his question.

Mr. Clark: My question to the Minister of Transport, who has gagged the Canadian public and is now gagging this Parliament, is this: why did the Minister of Transport refuse that reference, and what is the Minister of Transport afraid of in letting the people of Canada examine in public hearings, either under the CTC or this House of Commons, the facts on which he purports to base the disruption of 19 per cent of rail passenger service in this country?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, obviously I cannot accept the premise which was used by the Leader of the Opposition. I did not go around the law. He must realize that the law says that the government is entitled to do what it is doing.

An hon. Member: It has never been done before.

Mr. Pepin: I caught the Leader of the Opposition flat-footed the other day because he was saying that the government was violating the law. The law is there. Did you read Section 64?

Mr. Clark: Yes.

Mr. Pepin: I did not go around the law. That is clear.

An hon. Member: How about answering the question?

Mr. Pepin: With respect to those facts pertaining to VIA, they have been debated at least since 1976.

An hon. Member: Not true.

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Lang had a reference to the CTC at that time. All these routes we are talking about now have been thoroughly investigated throughout the last three or four years. The subject is very well known. What is needed is a decision. The opposition is using every trick of the trade to prevent a decision. That is what I object to.

With respect to the reference to the Standing Committee on Transport, I have said repeatedly here in the House that I was willing to go to the committee to provide all possible information. It should be obvious to everyone here that what the opposition is trying to do is obtain a reference so that a report can be written and so that they will have another kick at the can. It is the seventh trick they are using now in order to delay.

• (1440)

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Madam Speaker: Order. I can see that the only thing that will happen today is that there will be fewer questioners. I urge hon. members on both sides to be brief.

The hon. member for St. John's West, for a good start.

FISHERIES

CLOSURE OF FISH PLANTS IN NEWFOUNDLAND

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): Madam Speaker, they have been kneecapped over there.

My question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. The minister will know that the Newfoundland fishing industry is in a crisis, that seven of the major fish plants in Grand Bank, Fortune, Gaultois, Ramea, Burgeo and my own district of St. John's have been closed now since the end of August and that the Lake Group, the second largest Newfoundland company, is in the hands of its bankers. Thousands of fishermen have been unemployed for some time, as have thousands of plant workers and half the trawler fleet.

The minister has said repeatedly that he has constitutional jurisdiction over the fishery. I agree that he has. In these circumstances I want to ask the minister what steps he is taking to get these fish plants reopened. What steps is he taking to get these trawlers back to sea? Has he met, or will he be meeting, with the Newfoundland minister of fisheries to develop some joint plan to resuscitate the fishing industry, which is now in dire straits, if any industry in this country is in dire straits?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, I do not have jurisdiction over licensing fish plants. There are many days I wish I had because, in the last three or four years, there has been one constant repetition in many of my speeches, and that is that we must not load onto the fishery the solution to all economic problems. In its authority the province of Newfoundland chose to increase the capacity of fish processing plants by some 230 per cent. Community stages became feeder plants, feeder plants became full-fledged freezing plants. In fact, the very problem about which the hon. member complains is very much the types of mortgages which were put on the old existing plants by the expansion of the industry which occurred in Newfoundland. I regret that very much. I take no pleasure in having been shown that my warnings were right.

I deplore the fact that the hon. member is not still the minister of fisheries for Newfoundland because we worked well together to solve some problems. I have not received representations from the government of Newfoundland focusing on this issue.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER TAKE ACTION

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the same minister. The seven major plants I mentioned are all offshore trawler-fed plants. This has nothing to do with the licensing referred to by the minister. The minister is attempting to pass the buck. He is the minister of fisheries for all of Canada. Is he developing a plan which will lead to a remedy of this situation? Is he meeting with the Newfoundland minister who, he says, has jurisdiction in certain instances? Will he provide inventory assistance, for example? The minister knows interest rates are a major problem to the industry. Is he urging the Minister of Finance to do something about that?

After seven years of the minister's claiming credit for all the good things, the industry is now in dire straits. When will the minister meet his responsibilities? What does he plan to do in his jurisdiction to help in the situation? These are major plants, and most of them are in the district of Burin-St. George's.

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, the division between the offshore and the inshore fisheries has been the subject of considerable debate over the years. The hon. member may not remember, but the government which multiplied the fish processing plants—and I am not trying to pass the buck; I am simply establishing some facts—also advocated a division between the offshore and the inshore of the order of 15 per cent for the offshore and 85 per cent for the inshore. I resisted that advice of the Newfoundland government. We have tried to help the offshore, and large fishing vessels have obtained very major increases in their landings. However, the major companies, faced with rather high inventories because of United States resistence to the accumulation of fish in their warehouses, are having some difficulties. This is a matter which was addressed by the Fisheries Prices Support Board. Recommendations have been made, and I hope to take to the cabinet in a matter of days the recommendations of the Fisheries Prices Support Board.

* * *

THE ECONOMY

DROP IN INCOMES

Mr. Bob Rae (Broadview-Greenwood): Madam Speaker, the Americans have the neutron bomb, which destroys people and leaves property intact, and we have a Minister of Finance and high interest rates which amount to the same thing.

I would like to address a question to the Minister of Finance respecting farm incomes, farm indebtedness, and the question of bank profits. It has been revealed by Statistics Canada that farm incomes all over Canada in 1980 were down 16 per cent. In Manitoba they were down 75 per cent, and in Ontario 30 per cent. Indebtedness, however, has increased to the point where the total indebtedness in Ontario of $600 million is equal to total farm income for 1980. Bank profits have risen to $1.2 billion.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. Hon. members are exaggerating. Their preambles are so long that I do know how much time I can allow for answers to questions of such length, because obviously sometimes the answers might be a bit longer than the questions. Would hon. members please be brief in their questions?

Mr. Rae: Madam Speaker, I will put my question quite simply. In view of this pattern of indebtedness and bank profits, how is it possible that the minister was quoted last week as saying that the banks were "bleeding a little", when all the evidence is that it is the farmers, home owners and small business people of Canada who are bleeding, and not the banks?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, even though you invited the hon. member to ask a question, I did not hear it. He is before the wrong audience if he wants to make that kind of speech.

ROYAL BANK MORTGAGE SCHEME

Mr. Bob Rae (Broadview-Greenwood): Madam Speaker, I would like to ask the minister how it is possible for him to have said in this House last week that he regards a proposal which would increase the indebtedness of home owners as a progressive proposal from the Royal Bank. He said it was a move in the right direction. It would cost the Royal Bank two fifths of 1 per cent of its profit. How can the minister possibly stand in his place and say that that kind of proposal, which increases the indebtedness of home owners to the tune of $2,000, $3,000, $4,000 and $5,000, is conceivably a step in the right direction?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I will attempt to explain to the hon. member that there are certain home owners in current circumstances who have cash flow problems and accumulated equity in their homes. A particular option, subject to the decision of the home owner, is available to minimize or mitigate the cash flow problem by taking a particular interest deferral.

Mr. Rae: Do you call that a choice?

Mr. MacEachen: The hon. member disapproves of that proposal. I believe he ought to permit the home owners of Canada to have that option and to decide for themselves whether it is appropriate for them in the circumstances. The hon. member says that is not a choice, but he is quite wrong because quite a number of home owners, given a choice, prefer to carry on with their mortgage payments at an increased level rather than have them reduced. That is their decision, but I believe this particular option can be useful to home owners with short term or temporary cash flow problems, and that is what it is intended to be.

* * *

[Translation]

SMALL BUSINESS

REQUEST FOR EXTENSION OF SMALL BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT BOND PROGRAM

Mr. Jean-Guy Dubois (Lotbinière): Madam Speaker, my question to the Minister of State responsible for small businesses deals with the Small Business Development Bond program. Could the minister tell me how many small businesses in Canada and, if possible, in Quebec have availed themselves of this program, whether the minister will recommend the possible extension of this program, and whether he has discussed with the Minister of Finance the possible extension of this program which concerns small businesses?

Hon. Charles Lapointe (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Madam Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. member for providing me with this opportunity to tell the House how much money the Small Business Development Bond program has managed to inject into our economy in order to prop up this important economic sector. According to our projections, some $1.5 billion will have been paid out since this development bond program started 18 months ago to help develop small businesses in financial difficulties. As far as utilization is concerned, we believe that over 6,000 small businesses have availed themselves of this program and, according to the preliminary data that we have received, it seems that these small businesses are located mostly in Alberta, British Columbia and Ontario. In the province of Quebec, very few businesses outside the Montreal area have taken advantage of this program.

* * *

● (1450)

[English]

FORESTRY

BRITISH COLUMBIA LUMBER INDUSTRY

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. I assume the minister is aware of the seriously depressed state of the lumber and wood converting industries. I assume he and his colleagues are aware of the serious consequences, particularly to the hundreds of small communities throughout our country, with respect to unemployment, knowing one out of ten Canadians who work in that particular sector is wholly dependent on a single industry. What is the government doing in the short term, at least, to help the industry over this crisis and to help those throughout our country directly or indirectly affected by the serious difficulty that is experienced in that sector?

Hon. Herb Gray (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Madam Speaker, we have one major program in place that is of particular importance to the British Columbia industry, and that is the Program for Co-operative Overseas Market Development that we run jointly with the British Columbia Council of Forest Industries and the British Columbia government.

Not long ago we signed a new agreement extending this program for a further period of years. The federal government is increasing its funding in support of this program by one third. The previous operation of the program has brought about an increase in exports of British Columbia forest products from some $200 million to $1 billion in markets, quite apart from those in the United States. I think this is a major effort in helping to counteract the tendencies to which my hon. friend has referred. I am happy to work and support other initiatives in this same direction.

EXPORT EARNINGS

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Has the minister received a request from the Council of Forest Industries of British Columbia not to send any further trade missions at the present time, particularly to the United States, because of the serious effects some other government programs have on our ability to market our lumber in the United States. Sixty per cent of the lumber is shipped there. Is he aware, and is the Minister of Finance aware, that this is one industry that generates more export dollars and makes a greater contribution to our balance of trade than all other industries combined? Is he aware of the serious situation in the industry? Will the government do anything about it?

Hon. Herb Gray (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Madam Speaker, we are certainly aware of the importance of the forest products industry across Canada to our entire economy. We have a range of programs to support the development of the industry and to support its domestic and overseas marketing. We will continue to add to and intensify these efforts, including efforts to increase the opportunities for the industry in the United States, in spite of the weakened economic conditions there, conditions that have been confirmed as being weak just recently by the president of that country. On both sides of this House we share a commitment to the strengthening and development of the forest industry across Canada. I am sure we will continue working together in that direction.

* * *

PUBLIC SERVICE

POLICY ON RIGHT TO STRIKE

Hon. David Crombie (Rosedale): My question is directed to the President of the Treasury Board. I am sure the minister is aware of the landmark decision of the Federal Court of Appeal handed down last week, which clearly established the federal government's power, in a strike situation, to determine the number of public servants who may or may not go on strike. The minister will recall the case dealt with air traffic controllers in particular. I would like to ask the minister whether he is considering any policy whatsoever which would result in a decrease in the number of public servants, generally, who may or may not go on strike.

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (President of the Treasury Board): Madam Speaker, of course I am aware of the decision. I took the appeal to the Federal Court, because we felt that the original intention of the law, as adopted by Parliament in 1967, entitled the government, through the Public Service

Staff Relations Board, to designate those public servants who are essential to the interest, safety and security of the public. The Federal Court of Appeal simply confirmed the interpretation which we have given to that provision of the law, and which we have applied in many other instances. For example, I refer to the correctional officers in prisons, to nurses and other such groups. That is what the decision means, Madam Speaker. I understand the union, in fact, is seeking leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. It may be some time before our interpretation is definitively confirmed. There is no intention on the part of the government, Madam Speaker, to apply the law in any other way than was intended when adopted in 1967.

POSITION OF MINISTER OF LABOUR

Hon. David Crombie (Rosedale): My supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Labour. Given the minister's earlier statements questioning the continued usefulness of the right to strike, and also given the recent Gallup Poll outlining Canadian concerns about the right to strike, I should like to ask the minister if he is giving any consideration to any action which would result in a restriction of the right to strike in those areas where the public is concerned generally, such as airlines, railroads, telephones or postal services.

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Minister of Labour): Madam Speaker, the answer to the hon. member is no. We believe, from tradition and experience so far, that by and large Canadians prefer to solve industrial disputes by resolving them first through mediation and arbitration, and letting the interested parties come to a peaceful solution without interference, wherever it is possible.

* * *

[Translation]

HAZARDOUS SUBSTANCES

UREA FORMALDEHYDE FOAM INSULATION—INQUIRY WHETHER COMPENSATORY MEASURES WILL BE ADOPTED

Hon. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Madam Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs I shall direct my question to the minister responsible for housing. Yesterday, my colleague from Hamilton-Wentworth raised the issue of the famous urea formaldehyde foam. Since the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs has declined offhandedly any government responsibility in this matter and in view of the fact that in 1976, the Departments of Energy, Mines and Resources and Consumer and Corporate Affairs had recommended that no federal department use this product and that in 1977 the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation not only approved this product, but also agreed to subsidize it under its CHIP program, can the minister responsible for housing tell us today whether he feels at least some degree of moral and social responsibility in this matter and whether he will try to propose some compensation for these 100,000 home owners who not only have problems with their mortgages, but are being forced out of their homes because of a product for which the government has a certain responsibility?

[English]

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, I am sure the hon. member is aware that the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, who is not here, is the chairman responsible in government to deal with this issue. I hasten to add that I am a member of the committee where the situation is being studied. The representations made by the hon. member are high on the list for consideration by that committee.

[Translation]

INQUIRY WHETHER SPECIAL GRANT WILL BE RECOMMENDED FOR OWNERS FORCED OUT OF HOMES

Hon. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Madam Speaker, the reply of the minister will certainly not reassure those who have major problems. I ask my question of the minister responsible for housing since the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs has declined all responsibility. An inquiry will result in recommendations which I suppose will be relevant several months hence.

Could the minister assure these people that he will recommend the provision of a special grant in the next budget so that they will have somewhere to live next winter? I ask the minister to show some compassion for thousands of those people, both adults and children, who will not be able to live in their homes during the coming winter if the government does not take specific action.

[English]

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, at the outset I would reject the premise of the statement made by the hon. member that the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs has rejected his responsibility. The opposite is true. He has been designated by the cabinet as the minister responsible to study the very issues that the member raises. If the hon. member pursues it and says that this is an issue of such moment that so many members are concerned about, I ask him what action did his government take about the same problem while they were in office?

* * *

HOUSING

REQUEST FOR ACTION ON MORTGAGE INTEREST RATES

Mrs. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Madam Speaker, my question is to the minister responsible for housing. The minister has had petitions, he has had briefs, protests, and CMHC reports. All of them are directed to immediate action on interest rates to solve Canada's housing problem. Yet all he does is ask for another survey of Members of Parliament. When will the minister get busy and ignore Scrooge, the Minister of Finance, who wants to commit people to a lifetime of debt? When will he take action with the rest of us in the House and do something about bringing down mortgage interest rates?

• (1500)

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, in response to a question by one of the colleagues of the hon. member this afternoon, the Minister of Finance indicated that some financial institutions have already taken steps to assist Canadians faced with these kinds of problems.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Cosgrove: I have taken steps. I have personally responded to questions, incidents, and examples raised by colleagues of the hon. member. We are looking at individual cases where there is imminent danger of steps being taken which puts them in a position that is irretrievable. We have taken steps, and we are continuing to do so.

* * *

PETITION

TABLING OF REPORTS OF CLERK OF PETITIONS

Madam Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the Clerk of the House has laid upon the Table reports of the Clerk of Petitions, stating that he has examined the petitions presented by hon. members on Tuesday, October 27, 1981, and finds that they meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

* * *

POINT OF ORDER

MR. BEATTY—QUESTIONS ADDRESSED TO COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN DURING QUESTION PERIOD

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Madam Speaker, there was an incident during question period today which led to the point of order I want to raise now. As Madam Speaker is aware, the Chair does not ordinarily entertain points of order during question period. The first opportunity Members of Parliament have to raise points of order arising out of question period comes at three o'clock.

I refer Madam Speaker's attention to Citation 366 of Beauchesne's fifth edition which deals with the entire issue of private members having questions addressed to them during question period. It reads as follows:

> Questions may be asked of private members only under strict limitations. Virtually the only question possible would refer to a committee of which the member is the chairman. A question asking, for example, if a member intended to introduce certain legislation, is out of order.

This is the only reference I could find in Beauchesne's respecting the addressing of questions to private members. Obviously it leaves considerable discretion in the hands of Madam Speaker.

What happened this afternoon during question period is that questions were directed to a committee chairman acting in his capacity as chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport. They were not inquiries of the ministry. This was done on some three separate occasions. The chairman of the committee rose three times from his seat to seek to respond to the question, and at the same time the government House leader rose to try to wrest the floor away from him and to be recognized first.

The implications of a decision that a member of the ministry would have priority in responding to a question relating strictly to the responsibilities of a committee chairman, acting in his capacity as chairman of the committee, are very serious indeed for the functioning of all standing committees of the House of Commons. First of all I point out that committee chairmen are private members. They are not members of the ministry. They are not elected by the ministry. They are elected by the members of the committees themselves. Their responsibilities are owed not to the ministry. They are not accountable to the ministry or the party, but rather to hon. members of the House of Commons, in particular members of the committees.

If the right of an individual committee chairman to respond to questions addressed to him concerning his responsibilities as committee chairman is allowed to be pre-empted by a minister of the Crown seeking the floor at the same time, we are doing serious damage to the independence of committees of Parliament and are putting them in a position where the only way they can report to Parliament during question period is with the consent and agreement of the government.

When Beauchesne provided for questions to be put to private members who are committee chairmen respecting the discharge of their responsibilities and the activities of committees, surely it was not intended that the chairmen should have to funnel their responses to committee members and to parliamentarians through the government House leader.

The reason this is of particular concern to me is that I am Commons chairman of one of the two committees of Parliament which is chaired, by convention, by an opposition chairman. Madam Speaker will be aware of the fact that my colleague, the hon. member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Clarke), is chairman of the Standing Committee on Public Accounts and that I am chairman of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments. The convention was established over the years that those two chairmanships should reside on the opposition side, precisely to stress the independence of committee chairmen and the independence of the committees themselves from the ministry. The responsibilities of those two committees are to hold the government to account and to hold its activities in check. Their responsibilities are very clearly to members of the committees and to members of the House of Commons, not at all to the ministry.

In this particular instance, when Your Honour recognized the government House leader as opposed to the chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport, obviously you recognized the government House leader as opposed to a member of his own party. Of course, the chairmen of committees do not function as representatives of Parliament. They function as representatives of the committees themselves, and their responsibilities are to the committees. It would have been an absurd situation, for example, if the hon. member for Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan), instead of posing a question to the chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport, posed a similar question to me relating to the discussions which the standing joint committee is currently undertaking on the entire question of VIA Rail and the government's cutbacks and it would have been possible for the government House leader to intercede and prevent me from responding to a question related to my activities as chairman and to the activities of the committee.

Consequently, I wanted to raise this question at the earliest opportunity because the implications for the entire functioning of the committee system, the implications for my responsibility as chairman of the standing joint committee, and the implications for all Parliament, are very profound indeed if the government House leader or other members of the ministry are able to wrest the floor away on issues not relating to their conduct but to the conduct of a standing committee.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants): Madam Speaker, I will be very brief because many points have been covered by my colleague, the hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty). But, with respect, I should like to expand upon a point he barely touched upon. What happened today was certainly unusual, to say the least, and frankly has implications which strike at the very integrity of the committee system. The point my hon. friend mentioned about cabinet members versus members of committees, I will not repeat ad nauseam, but we see from day to day ministers deferring to the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and the Prime Minister deferring to a minister in answering questions, because of cabinet responsibility. This is a very well-accepted practice.

What happened today was not cabinet responsibility. A minister of the Crown, the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard), in effect deferred or tried to control a duly-elected chairman of a committee of the House of Commons, which is an entirely different matter. This is why I think it is important to review, as we are doing right now, what happened today in order to establish the correct procedure forever in a day so that it will never happen again.

It is my submission that chairmen of committees may, as ministers, answer or not answer questions. I give the member full credit for finally answering the question in the very frank and direct way in which I knew he had to answer. He did not have to answer the question, but having answered it, that is fine. The only person who could replace the duly-elected chairman in effect is the vice-chairman, not a minister of the Crown.

I would hope you, Madam Speaker, would look at and review what happened today so that we will never again be faced with this fundamental embarrassment to hard-working members of the Standing Committee on Transport who wanted to have a chance to participate in substance, albeit within a very short period of time.

I am almost prepared to conclude my remarks, but we all know—and I know as well as any member because I have been in the House as a member of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization for almost 15 years—that there are many members who feel that committees are a complete charade. From time to time chairmen and vice-chairmen, on substantive matters such as transport, try to do a good job with their standing committees because the issues are important. What happened today destroys integrity and puts the chairman in an almost incredible position, making it difficult for him to maintain his authority in the standing committee whenever, if ever, it meets again.

• (1510)

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, everyone in the House knows that our parliamentary practice comes from Westminster. The hon. member would have us believe that we are not respecting that parliamentary practice because of our attitude during question period. May I refer you, Madam Speaker, and, with respect, my learned hon. colleague, to Erskine May, nineteenth edition at page 327 where questions to the Speaker, questions to ministers and questions to unofficial members are discussed. The relevant passage reads as follows:

> On 17 March 1944, Mr. Speaker ruled privately that a member may not seek by means of a question to the chairman to interfere in the proceedings of a select committee by suggesting a particular subject for inquiry (although such subject fell within its order of reference).

[Translation]

It seems to me, Madam Speaker, that this reference clearly disposes of the substantive question. Subsidiarily, I should like to make three comments: first of all, the questions put to the chairman of the Transport Committee were directly related to the order of business in the House, because if such a reference or the reference suggested by my colleagues opposite had been made to the committee, the committee would have had to report within a given time, and the report would have been the subject of a motion of concurrence, and thus might have been a subject for debate in the House.

However, as I have indicated in my replies, we had no intention of gagging the opposition, and I certainly do not feel guilty, because at least twice, up to now, the opposition has been able to deal with the matter on an opposition day, once with a vote of non-confidence in the government and on Monday of this week, when a motion for concurrence of a committee report dealing with the matter was introduced. I also indicated that the opposition still has four days until December 10, and that it will be perfectly free to select one or several of these days to reopen the debate on the matter.

But the problem arising as a result of the questions put to the chairman of the committee is that if the reference had been made to the committee, this might have prevented the government from controlling and disposing of the business of the House in accordance with Standing Order 18(2). In this respect, first of all, as government House leader I believe I was quite justified in giving the government's point of view in reply to the question put to the chairman of the committee.

The second point I wish to clarify, still subsidiarily, since the reference from Erskine May disposes of the question substantively, is that the member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty) quoted Beauchesne, fifth edition, Citation 366.

But if he had read more slowly in the first place, he would have noticed the last part of Citation 363(1), which says, and I quote:

—A member may put a question but has no right to insist upon an answer.

So he has absolutely no grounds for complaining that he received no answer from the chairman of the committee. And subsidiarily, as my third point, in the final instance, after everything was placed in its proper context and after I had an opportunity to explain why a reference to a committee has some effect on the order of business in the House, it was obvious that in fact, the hon. member had ample time to answer in a manner that was both clear, brief, precise, exemplary and unambiguous, the question put by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark), which summarized all previous questions directed to the committee chairman. In the circumstances, Madam Speaker, it is abundantly clear that the members opposite have absolutely no reason, either under the rules or according to parliamentary practice, to raise a point of order.

Finally, I would like to add that if these members are sincere in their desire to know the facts about the order in council and the government's decision to cut back VIA Rail services, in that case, they should be satisfied with the offer made by the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) to appear before the appropriate committees in order to explain his policy and to give the government's point of view. It seems to me that if they were solely interested in obtaining the facts, they would be satisfied with this generous offer by the Minister of Transport, and in the best interests of the Canadian people, they would refrain from using the rules of the House to indulge in petty politicking and disrupt the government's order of priorities.

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, ordinarily I would not rise on this matter because the hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty) put the case on this very important question in a most articulate and able manner. After hearing the intervention by the government House leader on behalf of the government, however, I feel compelled to respond.

During the question period this hon. gentleman ran interference for a very embarrassed chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport not once, not twice, but three times, thus gagging a proper procedure aimed at getting a response from that chairman on the business of the committee.

On the fourth occasion that he rose, it was not any longer for the purpose of keeping the muzzle on, because it was becoming embarrassing and the heat was too intense, but in order to say that the chairman of that committee could now respond to the question being put to him. Having done that, presumably in the guise of it being legitimate parliamentary procedure, he then cited May's Parliamentary Practice to say that it cannot be done.

What could be more ridiculous, Madam Speaker? He was the very one who did precisely what he said could not be done, basing his action on the theory that we in this place are governed by the rules of Westminster. That is not so, Madam Speaker. There are legions of differences between the practices of this House and the practices of Westminster. One only has to point to Standing Order 43 as one of the more apparent differences. The citation from May's which the hon. member used has no application here in view of Citation 366 of Beauchesne.

There is another difference to which I can draw the attention of the Chair with respect to the way in which we treat substantive motions and non-substantive motions. At page 365 of May's nineteenth edition, a motion to concur in a committee report is classified as a non-substantive motion, yet it is clear from our practices that it is so regarded. There are legions of such differences.

I would invite the Table officers to advise Your Honour on the matter that has been raised since its importance commands your consideration, and then perhaps we could have a ruling tomorrow.

What has happened is that apparently we are not going to have a reference to a committee for whatever reasons the government has, and I do not know what they might be. It seems that the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) does not want to appear before the transport committee because it might make a report. Of course, that is the whole thrust of the reasonable request to have this question examined, in order to ascertain the truth of the facts that go into the government's decision. But the minister has said he does not want to appear and be examined by the committee because he is afraid—and I was astonished at his frankness—that the committee might report. Of course it might report. It might report and make the finding that I am sure the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne) and other New Brunswick and Atlantic provinces members would like to see, namely, that the decision to cut those services was illegal. That could quite likely be the report from the committee.

I invite you, Madam Speaker, to consider this question very carefully. It seems to me that the whole difficulty might have been avoided had you followed your usual practice. When a question from this side is addressed to a member of the ministry, you usually see that minister. In this case, on three separate occasions questions were addressed to the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi as chairman. In his capacity as chairman, he rose three times. I would have thought that the natural inclination would have been to see the chairman and permit him to respond to the question.

• (1520)

Therefore, I suggest that future difficulties might be avoided if Your Honour followed that ordinary and customary practice of recognizing the individual on the other side to whom the question is addressed.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, I will be brief. As I said the other day, I never quite understand how we get into these discussions. However, in reading Beauchesne I draw certain conclusions. First of all I want to point out that Citation 366 of Beauchesne states that:

> Questions may be asked of private members only under strict limitations. Virtually the only question possible would refer to a committee of which the member is the chairman.

I assume from reading that, that since the question is allowed to be asked, the answer is allowed to be given. I begin from the premise that if it is legal within the laws of the House of Commons to ask the question, then surely it must be reasonable and equally legal for the hon. member who is being asked to be able to answer.

The second point I submit for Your Honour's consideration is that the reference made by the hon. House leader for the government is in my judgment and, I hope, in the judgment of the Chair, an innapropriate reference. As previously indicated by the House leader for the government, as reported in Hansard of March 17, 1944, at page 327, Mr. Speaker ruled privately that a member may not seek, by means of a question to the chairman, to interfere in the proceedings of a select committee by suggesting a particular subject for inquiry. That, of course, was not before the House today. As I listened to the debate, there was no intention at any time to seek, by way of a question to a select committee—or, for that matter, any other committee, assuming that a standing committee is a select committee—to alter the terms of reference or to suggest that a matter not legitimately before the committee should be placed before the committee.

Therefore, I submit to Your Honour, if I may, that that reference is quite inappropriate, does not apply to the situation before you, and therefore is of no value in this debate.

Mr. Nielsen: That does not apply in Canada.

Mr. Deans: Therefore, I simply ask Your Honour to consider the proposition that if, within the Standing Orders of the House of Commons and the precedents established in the House of Commons, it is deemed appropriate that an hon. member on either side can pose a question to a committee chairman under certain circumstances, and if those circumstances are not in any way deviated from, then it should be equally understood that the chairman of the committee should be given the option to answer; that the only person who could determine whether the chairman ought or ought not to answer should be the chairman of the committee at that point of time; and that if the chairman wishes to relinquish the right to answer to the President of the Privy Council or to the government House leader, then that may well be the prerogative of that chairman at that time.

However, under the circumstances, I would suggest that the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard) and House leader for the government, did in fact interfere with the orderly conduct of the business by repeatedly rising to answer a question not directed to him, when the hon. member to whom the question was directed was obviously willing and able to answer it himself.

Madam Speaker: Regarding the question first posed by the hon. member for Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan) at the beginning of this discussion, as to whether or not the chairman should have answered that question, it is true, as stated in Beauchesne, that a chairman of a committee may answer a question in the House about the activities of that committee. That citation, of course, is quite acceptable; but there are other citations which could have been quoted which state that a minister or, for that matter, a chairman of a committee, is not obliged to answer.

Mr. Nielsen: But he was trying to answer.

Madam Speaker: The Chair has no authority, whatsoever to force a minister or, for that matter, a chairman of a committee—

Mr. Siddon: But he stood up.

Madam Speaker: —to answer a question in the House. I have no authority whatsoever to force anyone to answer any question put to him in the House.

Mr. Lawrence: Good grief!

Madam Speaker: The issue in the minds of some is that the chairman of that committee was gagged by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard), who chose to answer the question instead of the chairman of the committee.

Mr. Lawrence: No, no. He was recognized by Your Honour to answer.

Madam Speaker: If the President of the Privy Council wants to interpret a question as being related to the business of the House, it is not for the Chair to say that it is not related to the business of the House. In my mind, since the President of the Privy Council did rise to answer that question, he was perfectly justified in answering it.

Two people rose to answer that question. I recognized neither, and I want to make that quite clear. I never recognize one minister or another in order that he may answer a question which comes from the opposition benches. Hon. members will notice that I never, never announce the name of a minister during question period, except following an interruption when I have to call members to order and I give the minister the floor for the second time. However, I do not choose the ministers who will be answering the questions which are put to the government.

Therefore, if the President of the Privy Council chooses to answer a question and to interpret it as being related to the business of the House, the Chair may not interfere. The only time the Chair interferes is when it is quite obvious that a question which is not within a minister's responsibilities is directed to him. Then, of course, I will not allow a minister to answer that question.

I want to make it quite clear that I cannot start the new practice of recognizing this minister or the other. That practice never existed. The Chair does not recognize any particular minister in order that he may respond to a question coming from the opposition benches.

Mr. Lawrence: Quite right, when it is a question to the ministry; but this wasn't.

Madam Speaker: It is hard for me to see where the problem lies. The opposition members did get an answer from the President of the Privy Council, and an answer was also given by the chairman of the committee. Therefore, in a sense, the questioners were satisfied in both instances. It is not for me to choose whether the President of the Privy Council or the chairman of the committee should have answered that question.

It is the first time that I have had to deal with this particular matter of the responsibility or otherwise of committees to answer questions. I fail to see that anyone has been gagged in these particular circumstances in view of the fact that two people rose, and I did not choose between them. I thought one deferred to the other. As a matter of fact, on the first question the chairman deferred to the President of the Privy Council and on the second or third question, the President of the Privy Council deferred to the chairman of the committee. That is a question with which I do not want to interfere.

However, I will check the precedents and perhaps clarify the rule regarding the circumstances in which chairmen of committees may answer questions put to them. I insist on the word "may", because they may refuse to answer the question, and that is their privilege.

The hon. member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin).

Mr. Benjamin: Madam Speaker, I rise—

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker!

Some hon. Members: Sit down.

Mr. Clark: Madam Speaker—

Some hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Nielsen: Where are the traditions and the customs in this place?

Madam Speaker: Just a minute. I had already recognized the hon. member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) who rose before I dealt with this problem. Does the hon. member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) want to comment further on this particular point of order? I thought that I had closed the debate by saying that I would consult the precedents and try to clarify the rules as to the circumstances in which chairmen of committees may answer questions. Is the hon. member now rising on another matter, or does he want to comment further on what I have just said? I repeat that I have not yet ruled, and he may comment, I suppose. However, I want to know what is going on. The hon. member for Regina West had already risen before the hon. member for Yukon asked for the floor.

Mr. Nielsen: I am rising on a question of privilege, Madam Speaker. Naturally I would not question the ruling of the Chair.

Mr. Lawrence: She has made no ruling.

Mr. Nielsen: I do not question the comments of the Chair. However, I too want to review very carefully the record of today's exchange, together with the just completed summation of the Chair, with a view to referring this very important matter raised by the hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty), this whole question of government intervention and the responsibilities of committee chairmen to reply to questions, to the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections. That may be of assistance to the Chair as well. All I am doing is to flag the possibility that tomorrow I may file a notice to raise that question of privilege and follow it with a substantive motion.

• (1530)

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 25 and in light of what happened in the standing committee yesterday, and I move, seconded by the hon. member for Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan):

That this House do now adjourn.

Madam Speaker: Can I have that in writing?

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: All those in favour will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Madam Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Madam Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

Madam Speaker: Call in the members.

Mr. Peterson: What a waste of time!

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Benjamin) which was negatived on the following division:

● (1540)

(Division No. 89)

YEAS

Messrs.

Althouse	Gamble	Mitchell (Mrs.)
Andre	Gilchrist	Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich)
Anguish	Greenaway	Neil
Baker (Nepean-Carleton)	Gurbin	Nickerson
Beatty	Halliday	Nielsen
Benjamin	Hamilton (Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain)	Nowlan
Blaikie	Hargrave	Oberle
Bosley	Heap	Ogle
Bradley	Howie	Paproski
Broadbent	Huntington	Parker
Cardiff	Jarvis	Patterson
Carney (Miss)	Jelinek	Robinson (Burnaby)
Clark (Yellowhead)	Kempling	Rose
Clarke (Vancouver Quadra)	Korchinski	Sargeant
Coates	Kristiansen	Schellenberger
Cook	Kushner	Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth)
Cooper	Lambert	Scott (Victoria-Haliburton)
Crosbie (St. John's West)	La Salle	Shields
Crouse	Lawrence	Siddon
Dantzer	Lewis	Skelly
Darling	MacDonald (Miss)	Stewart
Deans	Manly	Taylor
Dinsdale	Mazankowski	Thomson
Ellis	McCain	Towers
Elzinga	McCuish	Vankoughnet
Epp	McDermid	Waddell
Fennell	McGrath	Wilson
Fraser	McKenzie	Wright
Fretz	McKinnon	Young—90.
Fulton	McKnight
	McMillan

NAYS

Messrs.

Allmand	Demers	Isabelle
Appolloni (Mrs.)	Deniger	Johnston
Axworthy	Desmarais	Joyal
Bachand	Dingwall	Kaplan
Baker (Gander-Twillingate)	Dion	Killens (Mrs.)
Beauchamp-Niquet (Mrs.)	Dionne (Chicoutimi)	Lachance
Berger	Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi)	Lajoie
Blais	Dubois	Lalonde
Blaker	Duclos	Lamontagne
Bloomfield	Dupont	Landers
Bockstael	Dupras	Lang
Bossy	Ethier	Laniel
Breau	Evans	Lapointe (Charlevoix)
Burghardt	Ferguson	Lapointe (Beauce)
Bussières	Fleming	LeBlanc
Caccia	Foster	Lefebvre
Campbell (Miss) (South West Nova)	Fox	Lonsdale
Campbell (LaSalle)	Francis	Lumley
Campbell (Cardigan)	Frith	MacBain
Chénier	Garant	MacEachen
Chrétien	Gauthier	MacGuigan
Comtois	Gendron	Mackasey
Corbin	Gimaïel	MacLaren
Corriveau	Gingras	MacLellan
Côté (Mrs.)	Gourd (Argenteuil-Papineau)	Malépart
Cousineau	Gourde (Lévis)	Maltais
Cullen	Guilbault	Marceau
Cyr	Harquail	Massé
Daudlin	Henderson	Masters
Dawson	Herbert	McCauley
De Bané	Hervieux-Payette (Mrs.)	McRae
de Corneille	Hopkins	Munro (Hamilton East)
	Irwin	Olivier
		Ostiguy
		Parent
		Pelletier
		Penner
		Pepin
		Peterson
		Pinard
		Portelance
		Prud'homme
		Regan
		Roberts
		Rompkey
		Rossi
		Roy Savard
		Schroder
		Simmons
		Smith
		Tardif
		Tessier
		Tobin
		Tousignant
		Turner
		Veillette
		Yanakis—123.

● (1750)

Madam Speaker: I declare the motion lost.

Shall we call it six o'clock?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

PETITION

MR. LAWRENCE—REQUEST FOR LEGISLATION RESPECTING PUBLIC SERVANTS' RIGHT TO STRIKE

Hon. Allan Lawrence (Durham-Northumberland): Madam Speaker, I ask leave of the House to lay upon the Table a petition, prepared by Mrs. Ruby Burnside of Orono, Ontario, and signed by 934 residents of the town of Newcastle and other places in Durham-Northumberland constituency, concerning the very serious consequences of the recent strike by certain employees of the Post Office. These petitioners are asking that legislation be enacted making it illegal for public servants working in essential services to strike.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

Mr. Ron Irwin (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 2,317 and 2,474.

[Text]

RCMP "E" DIVISION HEADQUARTERS

Question No. 2,317—Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich):

1. With respect to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police "E" Division headquarters located at 2881 Nanaimo Street in Victoria (a) what was the (i) completion date (ii) cost of construction, including furnishings, office equipment and landscaping (b) on what date was the building opened and occupied by the RCMP?

2. Was a decision made to open a new headquarters in Victoria and, if so, on what basis?

3. Was a decision made to move the headquarters to Vancouver and, if so (a) on what basis (b) on what date will the move occur and what is the itemized cost, including acquisition and preparation of a new building?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General): 1. (a) (i) and (ii) Land and adjacent buildings for Division and S-Division headquarters were purchased 78-06-08 for $4,600,000.

Division HQ	$2,550,000
S-Division HQ	915,000
Land	1,135,000
	$4,600,000

Furnishings and office equipment, $74,100
Landscaping, $30,000.

(b) Sub-Division building was initially occupied 77-11-25 under lease. Division headquarters building was occupied 78-04-28 following purchase approval 78-03-31 which was finalized on 78-06-08.

2. The RCMP "E" Division headquarters was accommodated in the Montreal Trust Building at 1061 Fort Street, Victoria, B.C. from 1963 to 1978. In 1976, due to normal expansion plus a reorganization of the administration of the force in British Columbia, it became evident that this building would not meet the force's long-range requirements. It was therefore necessary to arrange a short-term lease renewal pending provision of alternative accommodation or expansion of the Fort Street building.

Due partly to the landlord's insistence that a minimum renewal term of three years be negotiated and the projected increase in space requirements by the RCMP, together with cost estimates for enlarging, upgrading and alterations to the existing premises, the RCMP, with the approval of Treasury Board, authorized Public Works Canada to proceed with a public tender call for 50,000 rentable square feet of space for a ten-year term.

Foreman Enterprises Ltd., Vancouver, British Columbia, was the successful tenderer and subsequently constructed both a Division and Sub-Division headquarters on one side of Topaz Avenue and Nanaimo Street in Victoria under a lease purchase agreement.

3. The recommendation by senior management of the force and the decision of the Solicitor General to relocate the headquarters in Vancouver was made only after an in-depth review of the present organization structure. The basis for the relocation of the headquarters is that Vancouver is clearly recognized as the hub of British Columbia and the centre of action in terms of police activity as well as being the centre of trade and commerce. Additionally, a large percentage of the force's personnel in British Columbia is located in Vancouver and surrounding municipalities and placing the headquarters in closer proximity thereto is likely to result in greater cost effectiveness.

Further, there is no logical rationale from an operational point of view to maintain the Division headquarters at Victoria since the provincial justice ministry has offices and conducts a great deal of its work out of Vancouver. Similarily, provincial Crown counsels have been decentralized to Vancouver and elsewhere, increasing their accessibility.

The review which was directed at the administrative costs and over-all efficiency and effectiveness, identified several deficiencies with the present concept of a secretariat and two districts:

(a) the secretariat concept is not cost effective;

(b) duplication in virtually all facets of management at the secretariat and district headquarters levels, resulting in costly administration delays;

(c) an unhealthy competitiveness between districts, and districts and secretariat;

(d) a lack of clear terms of reference for members of the secretariat, resulting in confusion and frustration of its employees and a limited contribution to division management and operations.

Based on the foregoing concerns, the decision was made to return to a one division concept which would eliminate the extra layer of management and provide for a more viable operation.

It is not planned to move our British Columbia headquarters to Vancouver immediately. Such a move will take place over a three-year period, with completion being in the latter part of 1983.

The costs and savings are projected to be as follows:

Action Plan: Total amalgamation of all RCMP HQ operational and administrative functions at Victoria and Vancouver to Fairmont, Vancouver.

Estimated costs:

(a)	Relocation of manpower and equipment, renovations, and new construction	$22,500,000
* (b)	Purchase of WCB Clinic	6,500,000
(c)	Fit-up of WCB Clinic	2,500,000
(d)	Relocation of Victoria furnishings and equipment	80,000
(e)	Relocation of Victoria employees (100)	1,000,000
	Total cost	$30,330,000

* Cost is only an estimate since purchase is still under negotiation which should be completed by end of June, 1981.

Estimated Savings: (a) 1. Sale of ED-1 HQ Victoria building. (Assumption: city of Victoria grants severance and Victoria S-D building will meet the force's needs). Sale proceeds: 50,000 sq. ft. at $70 per sq. ft. or $3,500,000.

2. Rental of ED-1 HQ Victoria building. (Assumption: city of Victoria will not grant severance), total rentable area 50,000 sq. ft. at $15 per sq. ft., yearly rental of $750,000. Escalated at 10 per cent per year (inflation factor) discounted at 15 per cent (time horizon of proposal), $5,791,500.

3. Sale of Victoria S-D building. (Assumption: city of Victoria will grant severance and the larger ED-1 HQ building will be required to meet the force's projected space needs of 40,000 sq. ft. Sale proceeds: 15,000 sq. ft. at $70 per sq. ft., $1,050,000. Rental of excess space 10,000 sq. ft. at $15 per sq. ft. yearly rental of $150,000 escalated at 10 per cent per year (inflation factor), discounted at 15 per cent for 10 years (time horizon of proposal), $1,158,300. Total $2,208,300.

4. Rental of Victoria S-D building. (Assumption: city of Victoria will not grant severance). Total rentable area 25,000 sq. ft. at $15 per sq. ft., yearly rental of $375,000 escalated at 10 per cent per year (inflation factor) discounted at 15 per cent for 10 years (time horizon of proposal), $2,895,750.

(b) Salaries contributing to the manpower reduction of 30 employees at $25,000 a year (average salary), an annual savings of $750,000 per year escalated at 10 per cent per year, discounted at 15 per cent for 10 years, (time horizon of proposal), $5,791,500.

(c) Rental savings, Vancouver, B.C., $347,540 per year, escalated at 10 per cent per year (inflation factor) discounted at 15 per cent for 10 years (time horizon of proposal), $2,683,703.

(d) The purchase of WCB Clinic provides 100,000 sq. ft. of required space that, if not purchased, would have to be replaced by (1) new construction at $100 per sq. ft. or $10,000,000 or (2) rental at $15 per sq. ft. yearly rental of $1,500,000 escalated at 10 per cent per year (inflation factor), discounted at 15 per cent for 10 years (time horizon or proposal), $11,583,000.

Net cost over 10 years; $6,771,797.

STUDENT LOAN PROGRAM BUDGET

Question No. 2,474—Mr. Herbert:

1. In each of the past five years, what amount was included in the budget for the student loan program and what amount was allocated to each province?

2. What amount was contributed to the province of Quebec in lieu of participation in the program?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Secretary of State): 1. (a) Amount included in budget for last five fiscal years:

1976/77	1977/78	1978/79	1979/80	1980/81
$	$	$	$	$
68,400,000	94,700,000	97,796,000	97,796,000	110,940,000

(b) It is not possible to separate these budgetary allocations by province because, with the exception of alternative payments to the province of Quebec, the amounts are paid to lending institutions or collection agencies and not to provincial governments. As well, in some cases, loans are not authorized by the provincial authority in which the lending institution or agency making the loan is located.

The following table shows the value of loans authorized annually by each province for the past five loan years (loan year ends June 30):

Province	75/76	76/77	77/78	78/79	79/80
			($ million)
B.C.	16.9	20.3	19.9	20.4	21.1
Alta.	20.2	19.9	18.7	19.2	20.3
Sask.	5.6	5.5	7.5	7.9	7.0
Man.	7.6	12.6	9.1	7.8	7.0
Ont.	76.4	90.7	59.1	77.2	69.5
N.B.	10.2	8.6	8.4	8.8	8.9
N.S.	13.7	13.2	11.3	11.1	11.7
P.E.I.	2.0	2.3	1.7	1.7	1.6
Nfld.	4.6	5.0	4.8	5.0	5.1
Yukon	0.1	0.1	0.2	0.1	0.2
N.W.T.	0.1	0.1	0.1	0.1	0.1
Total	157.4	178.3	140.8	159.3	152.5

Motions for Papers

2. Alternative payments to Quebec in each of the last five fiscal years:

1976/77	13,027,488
1977/78	12,102,573
1978/79	15,875,306
1979/80	21,670,352
1980/81	17,452,507

[English]

Mr. Irwin: I ask, Madam Speaker, that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Madam Speaker: The questions enumerated by the parliamentary secretary have been answered. Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

* * *

MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

Mr. Ron Irwin (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, I have the pleasure of tabling a revised return to motion for the production of papers No. 51, which was put forward in the name of the hon. member for Victoria (Mr. McKinnon).

Madam Speaker: Shall the hon. parliamentary secretary have leave to table the revised return?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

COPIES OF LETTERS, PAPERS AND STUDIES CONCERNING MOVE OF RCMP HEADQUARTERS "E" DIVISION FROM VICTORIA TO VANCOUVER

[Text]

Motion No. 51 (revised)—Mr. McKinnon:

That an order of the House do issue for copies of all letters, papers and studies concerning the move of RCMP Headquarters "E" Division fom Victoria to Vancouver, British Columbia.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Hal Herbert (Vaudreuil): Madam Speaker, I have a half dozen motions on the Order Paper at the present time which date back to last December. I should like to draw the attention of the parliamentary secretary to Motion No. 56 in particular. It calls for the production of a copy of the latest signed agreement between the government and the province of Ontario under the Canada Assistance Plan. Because it is my understanding that the government is prepared to table this document but that the government of the province of Ontario is refusing its consent, I think the matter should be clarified. I therefore ask the parliamentary secretary if, after the call for motions for the production of papers next Wednesday, he could clarify this point. It is relevant, obviously, to the discussion this fall on the renewal of the fiscal transfer payments with the provinces. The importance of this item is self-evident.

Mr. Ron Irwin (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, I thank the hon.

member for his comments and I will bring them to the attention of the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Smith).

I ask, Madam Speaker, that all other notices of motions for the production of papers be allowed to stand.

Madam Speaker: Shall the other notices of motions be allowed to stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADA OIL AND GAS ACT

MEASURE RESPECTING OIL AND GAS INTERESTS

The House resumed, from Tuesday, October 27, consideration of Bill C-48, to regulate oil and gas interests in Canada lands and to amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on National Resources and Public Works, and Motions Nos. 21 (Mr. Wilson) and 22 (Mr. Waddell).

Mr. Peter Elzinga (Pembina): Madam Speaker, this is the first time that I am participating in a 20 minute debate spread over a period of three days. It is all because the Liberals reneged on yet another all-party agreement dealing with VIA Rail.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Elzinga: In this chamber we are aware of the fact that the government's word is no good, and I think it is finally sinking through to the Canadian people.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. Given the fact that there is so little time to go, perhaps the hon. member might like to address himself to Bill C-48.

Mr. Elzinga: In dealing with Motion No. 21, let me say that I have listened with great interest to the debate on Bill C-48. On those occasions when I have not been in the chamber I have made myself aware of what was said through reading Hansard. It is obvious that all parties in the House agree on many aspects of the legislation and on its importance. I am sure the basic goals of all parties are very similar; we all wish to achieve energy self sufficiency.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. Lest there be any confusion, the Chair will be pleased to recognize the hon. member for Pembina (Mr. Elzinga) when the House sits again, assuming, of course, that he wishes to speak and is present.

It being six o'clock, pursuant to Standing Order 2(1) I do now leave the chair until two o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

At six o'clock the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Thursday, October 29, 1981

The House met at 2 p.m.

● (1405)

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

POST OFFICE

PROPOSED INCREASE IN POSTAL RATES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Girve Fretz (Erie): Madam Speaker, individual Canadians as well as local governments are outraged by the proposed 75 per cent increase in the cost of mailing a first-class letter. Given that such an increase could be viewed as a reward for postal waste and inefficiencies, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. Bradley):

That this House strongly urges that the proposed increase in postal rates be rejected, and a more reasonable increase be implemented.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

INDIAN AFFAIRS

REFERRAL OF REPRESENTATIONS TO STANDING COMMITTEE—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Stan Schellenberger (Wetaskiwin): Madam Speaker, because many urgent issues presently face Canada's native community, including the very real concerns over the constitutional proposal, land claims, and Indian political and economic development, and because numerous individual bands and native organizations have been trying for months to voice their concerns before the Standing Committee on Indian Affairs and Northern Development, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Cariboo-Chilcotin (Mr. Greenaway):

That the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development immediately make a special reference to the Standing Committee on Indian Affairs and Northern Development so that it might begin hearing these representations from Indian people as soon as possible.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

SOCIAL SECURITY

SUGGESTED PROVISION OF GRANT TO ELDERLY TO HEAT HOMES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43. Since the federal government has now completed energy agreements with the producing provinces and will get a great deal of additional cash as a result; since the price of home heating fuels this winter will rise faster than the pensions of our old people; and in view of the fact that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) said last night that scarce tax dollars must be spent first on those who need help most, and that those who are stronger must carry more of the load, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans):

That this House urge that Canada's seniors, unlike the oil companies which are now getting a generous guaranteed income, be given a specific grant in the forthcoming budget in addition to the guaranteed income supplement so that they can afford to heat their homes this winter.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

THE ECONOMY

PRIME MINISTER'S SPEECH IN TORONTO—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. David Kilgour (Edmonton-Strathcona): Madam Speaker, inflation is now running at about 13 per cent on a yearly basis and is reducing the living standard of virtually every Canadian within the government's reach. In the past 12 months the largest contributors to increases in our consumer prices have been Ottawa-set interest rates which are up by fully 50 per cent, and Ottawa-set energy prices which are up by fully 33 per cent even before the new energy agreement begins to operate. I therefore move, seconded by the hon. member for Oxford (Mr. Halliday):

That any of the Torontonians attending last night's dinner who believed a single word the Prime Minister said about fighting inflation should be required to spend a weekend at 24 Sussex Drive reading Niccolo Machiavelli's "The Prince".

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

NATIONAL ENERGY PROGRAM

PURCHASE OF OIL COMPANY BY ONTARIO GOVERNMENT—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Ray Chénier (Timmins-Chapleau): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. In view of the recent $625 million purchase of Suncor Corporation shares by the government of Ontario, making it the largest shareholder, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Etobicoke North (Mr. MacLaren):

That this House applaud the Ontario Conservative government's effort to further the Canadianization goals of the National Energy Program.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

TRADE

RELATIONS WITH UNITED STATES OF AMERICA—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Vince Dantzer (Okanagan North): Madam Speaker, the economy of British Columbia is on the brink of recession. Our major industry, the forest industry, faces a potentially disastrous economic situation as hundreds of workers are being laid off every day. A further threat to that industry is now apparent since, in retaliation for this government's discriminatory policies toward the U.S. in the National Energy Program, Washington is considering restricting the import of B.C. lumber. Therefore I move, seconded by the hon. member for Prince George-Bulkley Valley (Mr. McCuish):

● (1410)

That this House urge the government to stop butchering our trade relations with the U.S. and immediately implement policies which reflect the fact that the U.S. is our major and dominant trading partner and can easily cause irreparable damage to our nation's economy.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

UNITED NATIONS

ELECTION OF A SECRETARY GENERAL—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. John McDermid (Brampton-Georgetown): Madam Speaker, the United Nations is having a problem electing a Secretary-General. The choice of Kurt Waldheim, running for an unprecedented third term, is being vetoed, and this impasse must be rectified. Canada has the answer. Now, Madam Speaker, it was a tough decision to make. What should I put first when proposing this motion, the world or Canada? I decided Canada must come first. Therefore I move, seconded by the hon. member for Hamilton-Wentworth (Mr. Scott):

That the Right Honourable the Prime Minister of Canada, Pierre Elliott Trudeau, place his name in nomination for the position of Secretary-General of the United Nations—

Some hon. Members: Hooray!

Mr. McDermid:

—resign as the Prime Minister of Canada—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McDermid:

—so that this great country will have a fighting chance to survive economically, socially, and united from coast to coast.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

[Translation]

REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION

CONSTRUCTION OF INDUSTRIAL RESEARCH CENTRE FOR PRATT & WHITNEY AIRCRAFT OF CANADA LTD., AT LONGUEUIL, P.Q.—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Jean-Guy Dubois (Lotbinière): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity.

Considering that yesterday the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion (Mr. De Bané) announced that a $4 million subsidy would be given for the construction of a $20 million industrial research centre to Pratt & Whitney Aircraft of Canada Ltd., and considering that every dollar invested in this kind of industrial research pumps $60 back into the economy, which will be a considerable advantage to Quebec's economic situation, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart):

That the House congratulate the Department of Regional Economic Expansion and its minister for having given the province of Quebec this substantial financial assistance.

Madam Speaker: This motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

[English]

HEALTH

DANGERS OF DIOXIN CONTAMINATED FISH—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Madam Speaker, I, too, rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43. In view of levels of dioxin contamination in Lake Ontario and the environmental problems and health issues that must be addressed; and in view of the recent studies of Dr. James Allen on the effects of dioxin on animals, which confirm that as little as one microgram of dioxin per kilogram of body weight gives evidence of contamination, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Beaches (Mr. Young):

That in view of the dangerous contradictions between the Minister of National Health and Welfare, the Minister of the Environment and the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans—first, Health and Welfare allowing the Canadian public to dine on fish twice as contaminated as allowed in the United States; second, Fisheries and Oceans allowing the export for consumption in Europe of fish prohibited in Canada due to contamination; third, the Minister of the Environment saying that no dioxin is allowed in food in Canada, the Liberals should come clean on this vital health issue and inform Canadians why no dioxin is allowed in food, but that one can eat fish polluted with 20 parts per trillion, and that anything more contaminated can be exported to poison others.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

POST OFFICE

HANDLING OF REGISTERED MAIL AND OF LETTER SENT BY MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Tom Cossitt (Leeds-Grenville): Madam Speaker, I rise in regard to the receipt of two anonymous brown envelopes containing first-class mail addressed to persons in Ottawa which Canada Post failed to deliver to their destinations, the circumstances of which illustrate the shocking postal inefficiency for which the government disgracefully wants Canadians to pay almost 100 per cent more. I move, seconded by the hon. member for Prince George-Peace River (Mr. Oberle):

That the Canada Post and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police be requested to investigate, first, the handling of a registered letter bearing registration number 606, mailed by a high official of the Yugoslav Embassy at Ottawa substation 3 to a recipient in Ottawa who never received nor signed for it, and to which is still attached the acknowledgement of receipt card requested by the Yugoslav Embassy; second, a letter written by a prominent member of this Parliament to an Ottawa recipient, which was also never received; and finally, that an immediate apology be extended to both persons involved, namely, to the member of this House and to the Yugoslavian ambassador for these outrageous examples of improper handling of first-class mail and registered mail.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

● (1415)

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

VIA RAIL

COURT ACTION RESPECTING ORDER IN COUNCIL CANCELLING PASSENGER SERVICES

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport. Yesterday in the House of Commons the minister said that if there was any doubt about the legality of the order in council which has been proposed to eliminate one fifth of Canada's rail passenger service he would merely pass a new order in council and have it registered.

Has the minister consulted with his legal officials on this matter since the government order does nothing to amend the existing CTC order, namely R26-520, which prescribes an ongoing statutory responsibility on CN and CP to provide rail passenger service, and since this argument is part of the argument which is being advanced by a group seeking a legal injunction in the federal court of the province of Saskatchewan? In order to facilitate the court action would the minister not now undertake to have this matter referred to the proper court with a proper reference, so that it can be cleared up, or does the minister simply intend merely to issue another order in council to get around this other legal requirement?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I am sure that what we have done is legal, and consequently there is no reason to do what my hon. friend suggests. There are two aspects to this matter. One has to do with CTC order R-6751 and CTC order R26-520, being orders under which the railways would have to continue operating routes. What I am pleased to tell my hon. friend is that CTC order R-6751 was revoked by CTC order R31-300 on August 14, 1980. I am pleased to tell him that CTC order R26-520 has been varied by the order in council on August 6, 1981. Item 3 of schedule XV refers to the final plans for western transcontinental passenger train service as implemented by CTC order R26-520. Therefore, there is no problem at all.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Pepin: On the subject of the registration, I am still in the same position that I was in yesterday when I reported that we are studying that aspect in depth now. If there is a doubt, we will act accordingly and make the necessary adjustments to the order in council of August 6. That will be quite legal, and things will not be changed from what they are now.

REFERRAL TO SENATE COMMITTEE ON TRANSPORT

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Madam Speaker, one will have to study that answer very closely. If, as the minister suggests, the first order in council may be illegal, does that mean all of the instructions issued under the first order in council are also invalid, including the lay-off notices of which the minister is required to provide some 90 days' prior notice, which will probably require clarification, or will it mean that another lay-off notice will have to be made based upon the legitimate order in council? Could the minister respond to that?

Since the Senate has unanimously referred the matter of VIA Rail to the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications, and since that committee has unanimously asked the minister to defer the date of implementation to at least March 31, 1982, could the minister advise us whether he is aware of that? Can he tell us whether he has received that communication and what will his response be to that unanimous approach made by the distinguished members in the other place?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, as usual there are three questions in every one asked by the hon. member for Vegreville. On the subject of going before committees, I have said it before and I will repeat it again that I am willing to go before committees to explain what we have done, but I am not willing to play the game which the opposition wants to play—

Mr. Clark: Which is called democracy.

Mr. Pepin: —that of buying another day on the floor of the House of Commons. The government House leader explained that extremely well yesterday. This afternoon I am appearing before the Standing Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments. I will do my very best to give them all of the material that I have in my hands now.

With respect to the subject itself, I think I have answered quite well today, if I may say so.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. MacEachen: Superbly.

Mr. Pepin: Superbly, says the Minister of Finance. That is a compliment which anyone should cherish.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

• (1420)

Mr. Pepin: I think I have answered well on those orders of the CTC which, in the mind of my hon. friends yesterday, had not been dealt with properly. Now with respect to the procedural registration of these orders in council, I will go further on that this afternoon. There is a very learned debate now and all of us here are being but mouthpieces of much more profound legal minds on this subject. But there is a debate on the subject. I stand on the position I have taken up to now. I very graciously said that, if there is a shadow of doubt, if there is a modicum of doubt, we will move to accommodate that doubt. I do not see what else I can do.

POSITION TAKEN BY SENATORS

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Madam Speaker, am I to take it then that the minister is ignoring absolutely the unanimous position taken by the distinguished members of the other place?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I am not aware of being called to a committee of the Senate on the subject. I will look into it immediately. I was not made aware of it this morning. I will see what I can do to accommodate the other place.

REQUEST THAT PASSENGER SERVICE BE CONTINUED

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question is also for the Minister of Transport who has just informed the House that, if there is a shadow of doubt touching on what he is proposing to do with regard to VIA Rail, they will move as a government to remove that doubt. Will the minister explain to the House just why he chose to move retroactively to attempt to rectify a mistake he obviously made, as opposed to moving the other way by simply giving a break to the passengers who want to continue using those sections of VIA Rail he intends to discontinue, by carrying on the service?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I am sure everybody here and everybody outside sees the reasoning of the hon. member. He is taking what I have said about a shadow of doubt on the procedural matter and aggrandizing it to the whole of the policy we announced on July 27. That is so obviously a deformation of the words and of the mind, I do not have to pay further attention to that. What I did say was—

Mr. Clark: Arrogance.

Mr. Pepin: You should know about it.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Pepin: What I was saying was that there is a debate or discussion about the need to register certain types of orders in council under Section 64(1) of the National Transportation Act. I do not want to go into the details of it. I will do that this afternoon. There is a discussion on that, and I say that if there is a shadow of a doubt as to the need to register the orders in council we passed on August 6, we will do so according to the interpretation of this necessity or obligation. Is that clear?

SUGGESTED SAVINGS ON AIRPORT PROJECTS

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question is again directed to the Minister of Transport. He is speaking about a shadow of doubt. There is a great shadow of doubt as to why the minister has chosen this particular expenditure cut. Will the minister indicate to the House why he chose this priority as opposed to eliminating the sum of $50 million which will be spent on Mirabel this year alone to keep that airport open to service some one million passengers or, in the case of Pickering, has he given any consideration to selling out the $110 million investment he has there, which is simply raw land being used for no airport or rail travel whatsoever? Why concentrate on VIA Rail as his point of saving as opposed to eliminating Mirabel or Pickering?

• (1425)

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, the association of Mirabel and Pickering with the announcement of our rationalization of VIA is again a very far-fetched one.

An hon. Member: Do you not weigh your priorities?

Mr. Pepin: Assuming that mistakes were made in the past in Canada, which is debatable—and you can bring the Bonaventure into this if you wish—assuming mistakes have been made, does that imply that more mistakes should be made? I cannot understand the mentality behind a question of this kind.

I have explained repeatedly why we have made this decision on the rationalization of VIA. I have explained, ad nauseam, that there were some budgetary reasons for doing that. It seemed to the government that an expenditure of $535 million on railway transportation, at a time when some of these routes have become extremely infrequently used by the people to whom they are offered, has become indefensible.

The second reason for our decision is one of transportation policy. My friends are embracing VIA at this time. They are strangling VIA at this time. We think that the process we have adopted is one that will strengthen VIA in the very best interests of the corporation itself and in the very best interests of the people it serves. We are very strongly of that view.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Oral Questions

INCOME TAX

REQUEST THAT TAX LOOPHOLES FOR RICH BE CLOSED

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. In 1968 the Prime Minister promised Canadians a just society. Since that period the rich in Canada, in terms of their share of the national income, have got relatively richer and the poor have become relatively poorer. Last night, at a $175-a-plate Liberal dinner in Toronto, the Prime Minister promised to reverse this trend. After more than a decade of economic hypocrisy, why should Canadians believe him?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

An hon. Member: Get up and answer.

Mr. Broadbent: The Prime Minister is obviously a little sensitive on the point. I will put the question more precisely in terms of factual information, and perhaps he will respond, as opposed to hypocritical attitudes, I say to his colleagues. Considering that just two years ago there were in Canada more than 3,000 Canadians earning over $50,000 a year and almost 200 Canadians who earned over $200,000 a year who did not pay one penny in income tax—many of them were no doubt at the dinner last night in Toronto—will the Prime Minister in the coming budget at least put an end to the tax loopholes which make this possible?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I understand the hon. member is repeating a suggestion for consideration in the preparation of the budget, a consideration which we will look at. I know the hon. member always has some interesting figures.

If we take that into account, I wonder if the hon. member and his party will vote for the budget when it is brought down.

TAX TREATMENT OF LAND SPECULATORS

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, it would be nice for a change if we could get from the Prime Minister or his smiling colleague, the Minister of Finance, some specific commitment, as opposed to the vague promises about fairness and caring and sharing, touching words which were used by the Prime Minister in his speech yesterday. "The Liberal Party is a party that cares and shares."

I will try another angle to demonstrate the hypocrisy of his claim about caring and sharing. Right now in Canada while 100,000 home owners are in serious jeopardy with respect to maintaining their homes, we have a tax system which permits people who speculate in land, thus contributing to the housing problem, to have only half the income so gained, taxed. Will the Prime Minister at least make these people pay taxes at the full rate just as the ordinary worker in Canada does?

• (1430)

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, to use the hon. member's own words, he is asking for specific commitments on this and the previous point. He does not want to hear about Liberal principles of caring and sharing. He wants specific commitments. He is somewhat experienced in these matters, and he knows that this type of specific commitment would be brought down in a budget, a budget which would have been read to the House today if we had followed our original plan.

Mr. Deans: Why isn't it?

Mr. Trudeau: I am asked why it is not. I think hon. members know the answer.

Mr. Deans: We are here. Why isn't it?

Mr. Trudeau: It isn't, because I had asked the premiers to meet me last week and the week before. The week before, when they said they could not meet me, I suggested we meet this week, and I postponed the budget to next week. After I had announced the postponement of the budget, they said they would not meet me this week but that they would meet me next week, which they are now doing. So we will have the budget in the week after.

An hon. Member: Why don't we have the budget this week?

Mr. Trudeau: An hon. member asks why we do not have the budget this week. I just gave the answer to that. If the hon. member reads the "blues", he will see it.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I am not quite sure which question is being answered just now. There were several coming from the floor. The matter is being prolonged.

* * *

NATIONAL SECURITY

DEFECTION OF POLISH CONSULAR CLERK—INTERROGATION BY U.S. CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

Hon. Allan Lawrence (Durham-Northumberland): Madam Speaker, I have given notice to the Solicitor General, and I know he has now been briefed on reports from Toronto which indicate that on October 8 a clerk from the Polish consulate there, a Mr. Marek Ostaszewicz, defected to Canadian authorities with security documentation. The next day he and his wife were delivered by the RCMP, with the assistance of the Department of External Affairs, to the Central Intelligence Agency in the United States. This gentleman has been kept incommunicado ever since then while being interrogated by the CIA at Langley, near Washington, D.C.

Why would the RCMP deliver this man, who defected in Canada, to American security people, instead of interrogating him here themselves?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General): Madam Speaker, there are many inaccuracies in the statements of the hon. member—

An hon. Member: As usual.

Mr. Kaplan: —and I would be pleased to discuss the matter with him outside the House in his role as a Privy Councillor.

However, I know the hon. member would agree that it would not be in the public interest to give many details of the defection. I merely want to assure the House that Canadian interests have been fully respected in this matter.

DEFECTOR'S WISH TO OBTAIN POLITICAL ASYLUM IN UNITED STATES

Hon. Allan Lawrence (Durham-Northumberland): Madam Speaker, my further information is that this gentleman particularly indicated that he would not and was not seeking political asylum in Canada. He did not want to speak to Canadian authorities. He wanted political asylum only in the United States, from the Americans. That has some very serious implications which should be discussed and debated publicly, not privately. I therefore ask the Solicitor General if he can tell us if these reports are true and, if so, if he knows of the reason why there was a very definite declaration that political asylum in Canada was not wanted?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General): Madam Speaker, I know the full story in this matter and have known it for several months. I think a discussion with my friend might be useful outside the House, but if he feels that that is not a proper way to proceed in the matter, I would be glad to keep the confidence myself.

* * *

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL FISCAL ARRANGEMENTS

FUNDING FOR EDUCATION

Mr. Gordon Gilchrist (Scarborough East): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State and I hope the Minister of Finance will listen as well. It has to do with the—and I say this as a compliment—with the increased funding of the natural sciences, medical research, and, to a much smaller degree, the social sciences in Canada, which is an indication of the aim of the government to increase its spending to 1.5 per cent of the gross national product on research, job creation, and innovation in Canada. That is the kind of investing in Canada's future which we can all support.

Recognizing that the only real resource Canada or any country has is its mind power, the brain power of its people, will the minister now put to rest the fears of students and academics that there will be large scale cutbacks in established programs financing, which would lead to a disastrous decline in the education and training of young Canadians, and a further decline in Canada's already shameful productivity, and increase funding instead of decreasing it?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, the hon. member is in the unfortunate position of being a victim of the propaganda of the Conservative Party. The Conservative Party has distributed, to the campuses of the universities and to some of the community colleges of this nation, propaganda outlining that the government intended to cut $1.5 billion from post-secondary educational assistance. This, of course, is totally inaccurate, and is an effort by the Conservative Party to try to get a tiny piece of the support of the students, which it has never been able to achieve in the past.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Regan: I want to say to the hon. member that this party and this government have traditionally been the strongest supporters of post-secondary education and students, and that we intend to continue to be so.

REQUEST FOR INCREASED FUNDING

Mr. Gordon Gilchrist (Scarborough East): Madam Speaker, I think we can take a great deal of comfort from the fact that this is pure rumour and speculation, regardless of the source, which I suspect is not the Conservative Party but, rather, is information received from the academics.

Is the government, then, prepared to increase funding respecting this vital educational matter so that not just the annual wage increases of the academics but also the actual plants—the universities, campuses—can be upgraded, and the equipment needed can be bought, so that students can become well schooled and well able to handle the urgent needs of a future vital Canada, which the minister espouses?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, I am heartened at this expression of support for post-secondary education by the hon. member, and I hope he will try to influence those around him.

In relation to his question I suggest that he, as a member from the province of Ontario, might well direct his remarks to Queen's Park, because during the years since 1974-75 the federal government has done exactly what he has called for. We have increased the federal share of the total cost of post-secondary education from about 45 per cent to 59 per cent; whereas in the same period, according to statistics I take to be accurate, the share of the provincial Conservative government has been diminished from 34 per cent to 21.8 per cent.

Some hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Regan: If there is any danger in relation to the post-secondary educational system in this country, particularly in the hon. member's province, but in many of the others also, it is a result of a diminution of effort by the provincial governments. I hope the hon. member will direct his remarks to them so that they might reverse that trend.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

PENITENTIARIES

INQUIRY RESPECTING CONSTRUCTION OF DETENTION CENTRE AT DONNACONA, P.Q.

Mr. Rolland Dion (Portneuf): Madam Speaker, my question is for the hon. Solicitor General of Canada. The minister announced officially on April 4 last that the cabinet had chosen the city of Donnacona, in the Portneuf riding, as the site of a new maximum security institution for the Canadian correctional service. Can the minister tell us what progress is being made and when the Department of Public Works will start building this institution?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General): Madam Speaker, I can assure the House that everything is on schedule regarding the detention centre to be built in Donnacona, and that preliminary work will start in the fall of 1982.

* * *

• (1440)

[English]

NATIVE RIGHTS

CLAIMS SUBMITTED BY BRITISH COLUMBIA INDIANS

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. On October 16, 1980, the Nuu Chah Nulth Tribal Council on the west coast of Vancouver Island submitted a comprehensive aboriginal claim to the minister. Over a year has passed and to date the Nuu Chah Nulth people have not received word as to whether or not their claim has been accepted. On November 16, 1980, the Haida people of the Queen Charlotte Islands submitted a claim. They have not received word as to whether their claim has been accepted. A leaked memo, over the minister's signature, says that priority lands claims settlement should be given to areas where the government urgently requires a settlement, in other words, areas slated for massive economic development and where people have to negotiate—

Madam Speaker: Order. Every minute I expect the question to come, but it is a new sentence in the preamble. Will the hon. member put the question?

Mr. Manly: Will the minister inform the House whether this policy is the reason that he has not informed the Nuu Chah Nulth people and the Haida people as to whether their claims have been accepted for negotiation?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): No, Madam Speaker.

Mr. Manly: Madam Speaker, after a year the people would really appreciate an answer.

Oral Questions

NEGOTIATION OF YUKON LAND CLAIMS

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Madam Speaker, I have a question on a related issue. The Council of Yukon Indians reports that there has been some progress in negotiations with the government regarding their land claims. Unfortunately, as these negotiations reach a crucial stage, the Indian people will not have enough money to continue. Is the minister still committed to these negotiations? Has he submitted a request to Treasury Board for more funds? Since the moneys used are advances on settlement moneys, will he assure the House that the necessary funds will be provided so that the Yukon Indians can successfully conclude these negotiations?

Mr. Nielsen: And will he keep Jack Austin out?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Madam Speaker, I would inform the hon. member that the Yukon Indians met with me yesterday. I think they are relatively satisfied with the result of the meeting. Out of this fiscal year they have $800,000 to draw on to assist them in their research for the negotiation of their particular claim. I indicated to them that, since they had already intruded on that to the extent of $300,000 that was coming to them, we would try to push up, if possible, the remaining $500,000 to enable them to conduct the negotiations that are to recommence next week. I also indicated that I would talk to some of my colleagues to assess the need for additional moneys and see what could be done. Yesterday I could make no commitment in that regard. The hon. member is quite right. That claim is proceeding very well, as are most of the comprehensive claims north of 60.

* * *

[Translation]

AIR TRANSPORT

INQUIRY WHETHER GOVERNMENT IS COMMITTED TO SELLING NORDAIR

Hon. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport and deals with a matter raised previously that he must remember. Because two years have gone by, I believe, since his predecessor made the commitment to privatize Nordair, can the minister tell us today whether he still feels bound by the commitment made by his predecessor, and if so, when this company will be turned over to the private sector?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, everyone knows how much I was in favour of a merger between Nordair and Quebecair, and I worked actively to promote this merger for several months. At some time last summer, a few months ago, when my hon. friend was very busy, I imagine, we came very close to achieving this merger. At that time the Quebec government intervened for some reason and decided to make the project abort by injecting $15 million into Quebecair. This resulted in a legal problem since the authorization of the Canadian Transport Commission is required for the approval of such changes of ownership among the shareholders of an air transport company. This decision is now in the hands of the Canadian Transport Commission.

Mr. La Salle: Madam Speaker, I should like the minister to tell us first whether he still feels bound by the commitment of his predecessor, whether the government still intends to privatize that company? Second, does the fact that the Quebec government has invested a few dollars mean that the intention of the government, as expressed by the minister, is now a thing of the past because the Quebec government has become involved in the matter?

Mr. Pepin: Madam Speaker, personally my intentions have not changed but, of course, if other parties change the rules of the game, naturally I have to take into account what they want. So, as far as I am concerned, I am still of the same mind. I remain convinced that merging those two groups would be an important step in rationalizing the Canadian air industry. I am still very much convinced of that, but I must also wait for the decision of the Canadian Transport Commission to see whether or not the transactions that have taken place comply with the regulations.

* * *

[English]

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

REVIEW OF MANDATORY SUPERVISION POLICY

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Central Nova): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Solicitor General. What is the minister doing to review or change the concept of mandatory supervision for convicts in view of two very serious current matters? The first is the brutal murder of a little girl in Nova Scotia by Joseph Odo while this man, whose homicidal tendencies were well known, was on mandatory supervision. Second is the apparent failure to suspend the mandatory supervision of Clifford Olson who subsequently was charged with several murders in British Columbia. Is the minister taking any review action in view of incidents like these?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General): Madam Speaker, I indicated shortly after becoming Solicitor General that I was dissatisfied with the mandatory supervision policy which is really the result of an existing statute which cannot be directly changed outside this House. I asked for an interdepartmental study to be conducted. That study was conducted. It has recommended some far-reaching changes to mandatory supervision.

When I got the study in July, I circulated it through the criminal justice constituency across the country. I indicated that I would wait until the end of October for their comments on these recommendations. I expect to close the book on receiving comments from these groups shortly. I hope that within a few months I will be able to go to cabinet with proposals for change and for improving the mandatory supervision system.

When the hon. member talks about those two particular cases, I have to remind him that, no matter what system we have, there is an element of unpredictability about human nature and behaviour. Whatever system we have of conditional release will always be subject to the possibility of being unable to predict the behaviour of certain dangerous individuals.

OPERATION OF SYSTEM

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Central Nova): Madam Speaker, it is all very well for the minister to point out these truisms or cliches, and what he says may be true. However, it is also true that the system, flawed as it is, if allowed to work properly is still offering some safeguards to the public. My concern is that the community assessment report with respect to Olson was not followed. Subsequently the crimes for which he was charged were committed. If the system were allowed to work it is possible that, during the relevant times, there would be a lot of changes. On whose conscience is this going to rest? Is the minister just going to hide behind the system, or does he feel an obligation to look into what happened in these cases?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General): Madam Speaker, I am not aware that the system was not followed in either of those two cases. I will look into them. I would be happy to hear more about them from the hon. member.

* * *

HUMAN RIGHTS

REPORTED PLAN TO ESTABLISH CIVILIAN INTERNMENT CAMPS

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Madam Speaker, my question is for the same minister. For the past year we have been treated to the repentance of the government for the treatment of the Japanese during World War II who were put in internment camps. At the same time that the Prime Minister and the Minister of Justice were justifying the charter of rights so that we would not have a repeat performance of that, they were passing an order in council to empower the Solicitor General "to establish, administer and operate civilian internment camps". I would like to ask the Solicitor General, who will be the customers next time?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General): Madam Speaker, there are no such orders in council. What the hon. member is referring to is the design of a plan for dealing with national emergencies in Canada. Under that plan if we were dealing with a situation of invasion of the country, or some other extreme emergency, I think it would be appropriate, and the government would be criticized for failing, to have plans to operate in situations such as that.

• (1450)

TERMS OF STANDING ORDER PUBLISHED IN "THE CANADA GAZETTE"

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): I shall refer the minister to The Canada Gazette dated June 10. Order in Council SR 1 TR 81-76 established the clear difference between an emergency situation and war. No wonder the member from Ottawa-Vanier calls reading the Charter "a hallucinating experience". Does the minister now want to institutionalize the War Measures Act? The same order in council empowers the minister to empty the prisons and make room for civilians. Does the minister intend to free the people convicted of a criminal charge and to make room for people who have fallen into disfavour?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General): If this country were invaded by foreign powers and the government and the security service of Canada were aware of the presence of illegals or foreign agents of that foreign power in Canada, does the hon. member suggest that nothing should be done about it? Should they be allowed to remain at liberty in positions in the country?

* * *

[Translation]

ENERGY

INCREASE IN ELECTRICITY RATES IN QUEBEC—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Alexandre Cyr (Gaspé): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the hon. Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Not long ago the minister published a brochure under the title "Do your heating bills make you shiver?" Well, with the indirect tax the social democratic government of Quebec has put on electricity, a lot of Quebecers are going to shiver this winter, especially those with electric heating, and the poor will suffer a lot more than the rich. During negotiations with Quebec on his $800 grant program for single-family dwellings, was the minister informed by his Quebec counterpart that there was going to be a rate increase of 20 per cent in 1982, and could the minister tell the House whether he accepts part of the responsibility for this increase or this indirect tax on electricity in Quebec?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, the rates charged by Hydro-Quebec are quite obviously the exclusive responsibility of the government of Quebec. As the hon. member pointed out, several weeks ago the Quebec government decided to raise these rates very substantially. Obviously, the Government of Canada was not consulted, and I have had no word from my counterpart on the matter. The decision is the exclusive responsibility of the Quebec Department of Energy and the Parti Québécois government responsible for that department. As far as we are concerned, we shall continue to give grants of up to $800 for conversion from oil to natural gas or to electricity wherever this is feasible.

* * *

[English]

IMMIGRATION

VISA REQUIREMENT FOR INDIAN NATIONALS VISITING CANADA

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Would the minister tell the House why, having failed to supply adequate immigration services in India and in Canadian ports of entry, thus causing an extraordinary backlog of Indian nationals waiting to visit or seek refugee status in Canada, he chose to resolve the problem he created by a measure which discriminates against the largest member of the Commonwealth, requiring visas for all Indian nationals wishing to visit Canada? Would the minister tell us why?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): If the hon. member were to look at the decision we took a week ago relating to the problem faced at ports of entry in Canada, with large numbers of people coming from India claiming refugee status, he would realize the only recourse we have, after consultations with the Indian community and with the Indian government, would be to provide some review of their status before arriving in Canada to save them from being victimized by very unscrupulous agents in India who were giving them false information about what they could expect when they arrived in Canada.

The purpose is not to discriminate; far from that. It is to make sure that people would be treated equally and fairly under the immigration system, and that the refugee system itself would be protected against that kind of abuse. That was the reason for the decision. I believe it would be wrong for the hon. member to make false charges of discrimination when, in fact, what we are trying to do is to protect a system of immigration which is the fairest in the world.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

LOCATION OF CANADIAN IMMIGRATION SERVICES IN INDIA

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): As a supplementary I would ask the minister, in light of the fact that he does not seem prepared to rescind his decision, will be consider relocating some of the immigration consular staff within India, making our service more geographically available to all parts of India, and will he take the necessary steps to ensure that all bona fide visitors to Canada can obtain visas upon arrival at Canadian ports of entry?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I should like to correct some of the so-called facts that the hon. member mentioned. First, one receives a visa in India, not when one arrives in Canada. Second, we have already allocated through the offices of the Secretary of State for External Affairs additional officers to go to India, and we have improved the facilities of the High Commission Office there. That was done in consultation with the High Commission Office and the Indian government, who indicated their concern about the problem of a number of people arriving in Canada claiming false status and, therefore, giving credence to a separatist movement in India.

* * *

AUDITOR GENERAL

OPINION ON GOVERNMENT'S DEFICIT POSITION

Hon. Walter Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Madam Speaker, I direct my question to the Minister of Supply and Services in his capacity as Receiver General of Canada. Did the minister read, prior to transmitting it to the Minister of Finance, the report of the Auditor General that contains the first qualified opinion in the history of Canada on the propriety of the government accounts, indicating there has been an understatement of the government's deficit position by a total in excess of $8 billion, an 8 per cent increase in the cumulative deficit of the government? Did he read that in the report? And when he transmitted the report to the Minister of Finance did he make any recommendations to him?

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (President of the Treasury Board): The points raised by the Auditor General are the same that have been made in the past, as the hon. member for Nepean-Carleton knows. What is significant is that the Auditor General has stated that the accounts have been prepared in accordance with the stated principles which have always governed the preparation of the accounts. While it is true that the finger is pointed at certain accounting practices which persisted for many years, I would also point out there are many other areas which have to be addressed.

We have a study under way through the office of the Comptroller General to examine different ways whereby the accounts of Canada should be properly presented. I would point out that, for example, while the hon. member for Nepean-Carleton is concentrating on liabilities which he is often wont to do, he neglects to point out that many assets of the Government of Canada—accounts receivable, gold, land—are not in fact recorded either. Look at the Accounts of Canada in perspective and let us not try to exaggerate the situation, which is one that has already been noted in the past.

REQUEST THAT ACTION BE TAKEN IN BUDGET

Hon. Walter Baker (Nepean-Carleton): I am not the one looking at the report; it is the Auditor General of Canada who has looked at the statement of accounts. The Auditor General indicated the government accounting is not valid and is not in accordance with normal accounting practices. There are reservations. My question to the Receiver General is clearly on whether or not that will be corrected.

I want to direct a question now to the Minister of Finance. With respect to his upcoming budget, can the House be assured now that the Minister of Finance is aware of that opinion, that in terms of the proper statement of the Accounts of Canada for the purposes of the budget, that that change that has been pointed out by the Auditor General, apparently now for the second year in a row, will be accounted for in the budget that will be presented in this House on November 12?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, as the President of the Treasury Board stated, the comments of the Auditor General were made last year. There were explanations provided as well, so that no member of the public can be misled by the way the accounts are presented.

* * *

[Translation]

HUMAN RIGHTS

CHARTER PROVISIONS RESPECTING PROVINCIAL LEGISLATIVE POWERS—INQUIRY WHETHER GOVERNMENT WILL RETURN TO 1978 PROPOSALS

Mr. Louis Duclos (Montmorency-Orléans): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. He would probably recall that Bill C-60 on Constitutional Reform, which he tabled in Parliament in the summer of 1978, provided that provisions of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms that affected the legislative authority of a province would not become effective before the charter was adopted by the province in question. Could the Prime Minister tell the House whether he would be willing at next week's meeting on the Constitution to go back to the proposal he made in 1978 and offer the provinces, as a compromise solution, what is called "an opting in clause" regarding the provisions of the Charter that affect their legislative authority? If the answer is no, could he tell the House why what he found acceptable three years ago is no longer acceptable today?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, Bill C-60 was entirely prepared by the Liberal government at the time, with the help of the caucus, and we were tabling it, at that time, as legislation initiated solely by the government.

The bill now being considered in the House is the result of several months of discussions, with the participation of the provinces represented by their attorneys general, and the Attorney General of Canada, so that the bill now before the House, whose passage we are seeking, is the result of several months of joint activity by the federal government and the provinces, and has also been substantially amended and improved thanks to additions by the Progressive Conservative Party and the New Democratic Party. It is therefore a mistake to compare the two bills. In one case we have a bill that was strictly unilateral, to which we were asking the other parties to give their approval, and in this case, we have a bill that is the result of months of discussion between the provinces, the federal government, and opposition and government members.

* * *

• (1500)

[English]

PETITION

MR. LAWRENCE—REQUEST FOR LEGISLATION RESPECTING PUBLIC SERVANTS' RIGHT TO STRIKE

Madam Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the Clerk of the House has laid upon the Table the one hundred and first report of the Clerk of Petitions stating that he has examined the petition presented by the hon. member for Durham-Northumberland (Mr. Lawrence) and finds that it meets the requirements of the Standing Order as to form.

* * *

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, may I direct the usual Thursday question to the government House leader and ask him what the business of the House will be for tomorrow and as far as he can go into next week? I understand that Monday will be an opposition day, as he stated yesterday. I suggest to him that we would be prepared to utilize tomorrow for cleaning up some small housekeeping measures if that is his desire.

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, as far as today is concerned, we will deal with Bill C-48. We had a useful House leaders' meeting this morning and discussed a few bills. I understand that one of them will not be discussed tomorrow because it is impossible for the hon. member's party to deal with it. Therefore, I think we will wait until another Friday to dispose of uncontroversial business and tomorrow go on with Bill C-48, which is a major bill and which will be approved, we hope, very soon, if not tomorrow.

[Translation]

Next week we will continue to deal with Bill C-48 aimed at Canadianizing our petroleum and gas industry. Monday will indeed be an opposition day and after that, as I have just said, we will go on with Bill C-48, if necessary.

Now then, if we were to complete the study of that bill this week, tomorrow, next Tuesday or at any time before Thursday next week, the next bill will be Bill C-78 to amend the Canada Labour Code, which is very urgent and very important. All that of course is subject to notice to the contrary should the government decide that it is imperative that the debate on the Constitution be concluded. In that case, we would see to it that the opposition parties are given proper notice.

[English]

Mr. Deans: Madam Speaker, I have a point I should like to put to the government House leader. For two Fridays in a row we have been making an effort to clean up some so-called non-controversial bills. As a result of Thursday meetings, in both instances I have made arrangements for members to be present to deal with them. I would ask that we make our minds up one way or another: Are we going to deal with them on a Friday, and which Friday? Then I can ask my members to be here and not have to ask them to change their plans every week.

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, I think the concern of my hon. colleague is legitimate. For two weeks we have tried to deal with some uncontroversial business; he has agreed to some of it and the Conservative Party has agreed to some items. It was difficult, however, to get the agreement of the three parties on the three pieces of legislation concerned. Since only one of the three bills we have discussed could be proceeded with tomorrow, I thought it was preferable, as I had a commitment from the Tory House leader, to deal with the other one on the following Friday and tomorrow not go on wasting our time but try to terminate debate on report stage of Bill C-48, on which we have already spent a lot of time. Subject to circumstances the following Friday we could try to agree on at least three bills that we could approve, using one speaker per party.

I appreciate the concern expressed by my colleague which is valid, but he must understand that in our caucus, after a House leaders' meeting, I have to have consultations and it is only on Thursday at three o'clock that according to practice I am in a position to confirm if we can go along with the discussion that we had in the previous House leaders' meeting.

Mr. Deans: Madam Speaker, is it not possible for us to decide today that a week Friday, subject only to matters which may arise in the interval, we will deal with certain pieces of legislation, rather than wait until the day before the Friday that we are supposed to be dealing with it?

Mr. Pinard: I think this is a constructive suggestion, Madam Speaker; nevertheless, it is always difficult for a government to agree one week in advance, not knowing how debate will evolve in the House. We have spent many, many days on report stage of Bill C-48. If debate were to continue to next Thursday and not terminate, it will be difficult for the government to agree to switch to other legislation, when it would become more and more urgent. It is impossible one week in advance to make a commitment. On the other hand, it is surely possible to plan and try to come to some agreement. I will take note of the suggestion made by the hon. member.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, as the government House leader knows, we have offered to deal with Bill C-45, the pest control legislation, tomorrow and let it go with one speaker. We have also agreed to deal with Bill C-25, the radiation emission legislation, with one speaker. Those are bills that he could have. I do not think that there would be any difficulty for the NDP in dealing with those matters tomorrow.

I have suggested that if we were to change the date of our House leaders' meeting to Tuesday, followed by caucus, we could have decisions for him which I am sure would streamline and make the government's conduct of the business of the House more efficient. By Thursday he would have full knowledge of any agreement that could be reached and legislation that could be dealt with.

Mr. Pinard: First of all, Madam Speaker, my hon. colleague mentioned Bill C-45 and Bill C-25. We discussed dealing with those two bills tomorrow in our discussion this morning. We also mentioned Bill C-84, to amend the Small Business Loans Act. This bill is urgent, for technical reasons, as it will increase the amount of loans to small business in this country. He knows very well that this party is not in a position this afternoon to confirm that we could get Bill C-84 tomorrow. When he mentions Bill C-25, it is the NDP that cannot guarantee that we will get that bill tomorrow because they have more than one speaker and they have asked us to deal with it as the third item. Therefore, I end up, with just Bill C-45. This is not sufficient.

• (1510)

The reason I think it would be more useful not to deal with those three bills is that I do not have agreement to deal with the three of them. We end up with only one bill. I prefer to use tomorrow to deal with Bill C-48 for the reasons I have mentioned.

The hon. member talks about House leaders' meetings. This is very useful sometimes, but it has also demonstrated that it is not always necessary when we do not end debate on major pieces of legislation. In the past, it was not necessary to meet on a Tuesday to determine the business of a Friday. Since I have been House leader, we have always had our meetings on Thursdays, and so far we have been successful in approving 65 bills in this House in this session. Therefore, I think if we have good will on both sides, we can still meet on Thursday and get some legislation passed by this House.

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, I have a point of order on House business. Last week at this time I asked a question of the President of the Privy Council concerning a bill which Canadian women, in particular, have been awaiting a long time, Bill C-53, the sexual offences legislation. At that time, the President of the Privy Council informed me that he was prepared to bring this bill forward on Friday of this week, namely, tomorrow. If he could reach an agreement with the two opposition House leaders, and that following one speech each by the opposition parties this bill would be referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

I want to say that we have agreed in the past, and we will certainly continue to agree, that this bill should be referred to the justice committee quickly. We are prepared to put up one further speaker on the bill and see it go forward, as not only have many individual Canadian women demanded, but also all of the major national women's organizations. It is long overdue that this bill, which would redefine rape as a crime of violence and not as a crime of passion, is brought into the statute books of this country.

I want to ask the President of the Privy Council why, in his discussion of bills which might have been brought forward tomorrow, he was silent on the question of Bill C-53, the sexual offences legislation. Since he seems unprepared to bring the bill forward tomorrow, will he not give us an assurance that next Friday the government will bring forward Bill C-53 for the conclusion of second reading debate in order that it can be referred quickly to the justice committee, where we can make the needed amendments and where Canadian women will finally have decent rape laws?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Pinard: The hon. member mentions Bill C-53, and I welcome his offer to deal with it expeditiously. On the other hand, he says that I never mentioned it. He should know that what is discussed in House leaders' meetings is to stay in House leaders' meetings, so I wonder how he can conclude that I did not mention it.

In any case, I welcome his offer and I will take that into consideration; but I am also a practical man and know very well that in the justice committee there are bills which are under consideration at this time. Even if we were to refer Bill C-53 to the justice committee on this Friday or next Friday, it is most unlikely that it could be dealt with during the next few weeks.

We may come to an agreement at a House leaders' meeting to deal with this bill or other bills quickly, but I can assure the hon. member that I have no reason to delay the study and consideration of Bill C-53 by this House. However, if he is a practical man too, he will realize that he would be welcome to help accelerate the debate in the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, of which he is a member and where some legislation is pending.

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, I am well aware of the legislative timetable in the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs. That is no excuse for not concluding debate in the House. In view of the offer of the government House leader, I wonder whether we might hear from the House leader of the Conservative Party concerning the attitude of his party. Are they prepared to listen to the concerns of Canadian women and expedite debate on this bill at the earliest possible opportunity?

Mr. Lawrence: We think it is urgent. We think it should be debated.

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): Say "yes".

Mr. Nielsen: We think it is important and urgent as well, Madam Speaker. I am always ready, willing and able, as are all hon. members on this side of the House, to listen to the concerns of the Canadian women. I might say something, too, about them.

Mr. Waddell: Madam Speaker, I would like to ask the President of the Privy Council a question. In view of the findings of the Supreme Court of British Columbia in the case that I am taking against the government and the cabinet, including the minister, is the minister now prepared to bring to the House amendments to the Northern Pipeline Act to make legal the orders in council which were put through by the government instead of legislation? I am aware that the court has not completely ruled on the case; but to avoid further litigation and further appeal—it is now in the court of appeal and, no doubt, appeals will go to the Supreme Court of Canada—I wonder if the President of the Privy Council could indicate whether the government has considered the possibility of bringing in legislation to deal with the order in council and make an amendment to the Northern Pipeline Act—

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Waddell: —in view of the developments in the United States, as well.

Madam Speaker: I am afraid that I should not have allowed the hon. member to continue. He was not asking a question about government business, but a question about what the government might bring forward as government business in the future. That question was not altogether in order.

The hon. member for Yukon on a question of privilege.

* * *

PRIVILEGE

MR. NIELSEN—RIGHT OF COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN TO ANSWER QUESTIONS IN HOUSE

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, I will be very brief. I served Your Honour with the required notice under the Standing Orders that I intended to raise this question of privilege today arising out of yesterday's exchange between the hon. member for Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan), the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark), the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne), who I regret is not in his seat, and the government House leader.

An hon. Member: He just came in now.

Mr. Nielsen: The exchange is to be found, including the comments of the Chair, on pages 12267 through to 12278 of yesterday's Hansard. I see that the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi is now back in his seat.

I do not intend to submit any lengthy argument to Your Honour because that argument was very ably, logically and articulately made yesterday by the hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty). However, I do wish to highlight one or two points which I submit should be taken into consideration before Your Honour comes to your ruling, both on the question itself and the substantive motion which I intend to move in support of this question should Your Honour find it to be a prima facie case of privilege.

The first point I wish to draw to Your Honour's attention is that the question dealt solely with the right of a chairman of a standing committee of this House to answer questions. It did not deal at all with the discretion that he is allowed under our rules to reply or not to reply. That was not the question at all. We all know that questions directed to ministers or chairmen need not be replied to at all. We cannot question the answer. That was not the problem yesterday. A review of those pages of Hansard to which I referred the Chair will clearly show that the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi, in his capacity as chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport of this House, attempted to rise in order to respond to the questions put to him, but he was usurped by the government House leader.

In that respect, I would specifically like to draw the attention of the Chair to page 12269 of Hansard where, immediately following a question by the Leader of the Opposition, an editorial note in italics appears as follows:

And Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi) and Mr. Pinard having risen:

There can be no doubt, quite apart from the very manifest observation on this side of the House, that the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi was trying to respond to the questions; at least, he was trying to gain the floor. As we subsequently learned, he did so in his capacity as chairman of the standing committee to discharge his responsibilities to his committee members who elected him to that office in the first place.

Therefore, I would like to emphasize that it is not a question of insisting on an answer. We know we do not have that right. However, I submit to Your Honour that the chairman of any standing committee of this House has a right to answer in his capacity as chairman of that standing committee.

• (1520)

I do not think it need be gainsaid that it has long been our practice—it was the practice of your immediate predecessor, the Hon. James Jerome, as it was the practice of his predecessor, the Hon. Lucien Lamoureux—to recognize on repeated occasions the right of chairmen of standing committees to respond to questions being put to them, from whatever side of the House they were put. I do not think that right can be questioned.

In this instance, the chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport, the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne), as Hansard will show, rose three times. He was trying to discharge his responsibility as chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport to answer the questions put to him. He was making a really genuine effort. His right to respond is the matter in question here. It is not his right to refuse to respond.

The other points covered by my colleague, the hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe, I would especially commend for your favourable consideration. The point has been made that if we were to get into the practice of allowing ministers of the Crown to cut off at the pass chairmen of standing committees who want to discharge their responsibilities, who want to inform members of this House as to activities of committees, whether it be the government House leader or any other minister of the Crown, it would place in serious jeopardy the integrity of the whole standing committee system of this House.

I remind you, Madam Speaker, that committee chairmen are elected officials of committees. They are not appointed by the government. The government has no control, except a reference, over the conduct of members of that committee. It is the chairmen who exercise that control, authorized by their committee members. It is not authorized by the government and it is not controlled by the government. I make that very strong submission to you.

The issue here is the independence of the committee system and the independence of committees from control by this House. Even more importantly, it is the independence of the chairmen of those standing committees, elected by members of those committees, to report on behalf of all committee members to the House and to answer questions in the House. Just to sum up, it is a question of the independence of committee chairmen to respond to questions. Whether or not they choose to answer those questions is within their discretion.

Because of the very able and strong argument made by the hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe yesterday, to which the hon. member for Annapolis Valley-Hants contributed, I believe the matter is of sufficient importance, since it affects the privileges of all members of the House, and because of the dangers it presents to the continuation of that independence and integrity of the standing committee system, to be referred to the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, for a complete examination of the subject matter of the exchange that took place yesterday.

Therefore, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Victoria (Mr. McKinnon):

That the matter of the questions addressed on Wednesday, October 28, to the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi, the Chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport, and the actions of the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard) in taking the floor instead of the hon. member, be referred to the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, to enable the committee to determine whether it is derogatory to the privileges of this House to allow the President of the Privy Council, or any other minister, to claim the right to speak to the House on behalf of the chairmen of standing committees, and reply to questions about the in camera deliberations of committees, if ministers choose to do so.

[Editor's Note: Mr. Dionne rose in his place.]

Mr. Pinard: Madame le Président—

Some hon. Members: He rose first.

[Translation]

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, I had an opportunity yesterday to give you an explanation. I know that Canadians are anxious to hear that Bill C-48 has been adopted. I would suggest that the question is unfounded and that we should not waste any more of the time of the House.

[English]

Mr. Maurice A. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Madam Speaker, since this question of privilege has been brought before the House today, I have two or three brief comments to make but I will not pursue them further. However, I would ask, if it is to be pursued further, that we have a fuller explanation of the comment made by you, as reported on page 12267 of Hansard, which reads:

> Order, please. The President of the Privy Council is authorized to answer questions if he so chooses on questions of that nature.

I want to make it clear, Madam Speaker, that I did in fact rise in my place. I was prepared to answer the question. I was able to do so, I think, in the first instance rather than in the last instance.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, this is a matter of considerable importance, and whether it is referred to the committee or not, I think it must be dealt with.

The question whether or not a member who is chairman of a committee is entitled to answer directly and without interference is of vital importance to the operations of the House. I think it is understood by everyone in this House that there is a difference between a question put to a member of the Privy Council or to a member of the cabinet, the right of a more senior cabinet minister to rise and answer a question and a question put to a private member who, in his or her responsibility as chairman of a committee, is asked to comment on a matter that is legitimately before a committee.

In looking over the precedents that I can find, I do not believe there is anything to justify interference by any member of the cabinet in the right of a private member who has been asked a question and who is legitimately entitled to answer it. Nowhere in our precedents can I find where a cabinet member, a minister, the President of the Privy Council or anyone else is entitled to pre-empt an individual private member.

I hope the Chair will rule that way. I hope that you, Madam Speaker, will simply rule that it is appropriate to ask, it is appropriate to answer; that it is inappropriate for any member of the House of Commons to attempt to gain the floor to answer a question addressed to someone other than someone within the cabinet. If the Chair can rule in that way, I will be delighted. If, however, you feel that the matter is necessary to be reviewed outside of the House and then referred back, I would support the motion of my colleague, the House leader for the official opposition.

Madam Speaker: Has the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne) completed his intervention? He asked me to clarify something I said yesterday. I can tell the hon. member that I will clarify what I said when I make my ruling, but if he has some arguments to offer, I would be glad to hear him. I have to tell the hon. member that I shall not explain myself until I make a ruling, as I do not want to rule today but will reserve my decision on this matter, if he has a few arguments to advance which he has not yet had a chance to do, I will hear him now.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): No, Madam Speaker. However, I do want to make it clear that I was not in any way casting any reflection on what you said, because I know that in the heat of question period, and with much noise in the House, it is sometimes difficult to hear anything. I simply made that statement following what the House leader of the official opposition had to say on his question of privilege. I think he has made the arguments I would have made so I will not go into it in any further detail.

● (1530)

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Madam Speaker, on this particular question I think it comes down to the point that when an hon. member asks a question and there are two members getting up, as was the case yesterday involving the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne) and the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard), who had not been addressed but volunteered to stand, it is up to the Chair to make a choice. There is no way that the Chair should decide that other than that the member who was asked the question should answer. There is no impediment whatsoever in the way of a chairman of a committee replying to questions relevant to procedures of that committee. It is an established rule of this House that a chairman of a committee may be asked questions relevant to the procedures of the committee.

I think on serious reflection that the President of the Privy Council is not the man to determine what is happening in a committee and that the person who was being asked was being asked in his proper capacity. If he says he will not answer, as a minister can do, that is the end of it. Beyond that there is no cabinet minister, not even the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), who can, shall we say, usurp the function or position of a committee chairman.

Madam Speaker: May I ask the hon. member if he will help the Chair by answering this query I have in my mind. If the hon. member will read the questions as they were phrased yesterday by the hon. member for Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan) and the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark), he will find that there might be a double interpretation. Two members having risen in order to answer the question, in order for the Chair to decide who is to answer the question the Chair would have to interpret the question. Would the hon. member feel that the Chair has to go so far as to interpret the question?

Mr. Lambert: Madam Speaker, I speak subject to correction, but if memory serves me correctly the chairman of the committee was asked whether he had sought permission from the Minister of Transport (Mr Pepin) for the expansion of a question which had been proposed. The President of the Privy Council sought to, and did, intervene. Ultimately the answer was given "yes", the chairman had asked the minister that particular question. As a matter of fact, if the chairman of the committee does not understand the question he has the same right as a minister to ask the hon. member questioning for clarification. I do not think it is up to the Chair to interpret the question.

Madam Speaker: Is the hon. member for Yukon rising to speak twice on the same question of privilege?

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, in order to assist the Chair, since it was I who raised the question in the first place, I should like the opportunity to respond very briefly to the question you just put to the distinguished former occupant of your high office, the hon. member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert).

My immediate answer in respect of the interpretation of questions would be that in my opinion, no, it is not the Chair's job to interpret questions. But may I suggest, with the greatest respect, it is the Chair's job to note to whom the question is directed, and it is the Chair's job, in my respectful submission, to recognize the established precedent in this place, that it is proper and within our practice for chairmen of standing committees to respond to questions concerning the affairs of those committees. That is not the jurisdiction of the House. All the House does is make references to committees. That is the information we on this side were seeking yesterday during the question period process, whether such a reference had been sought.

The President of the Privy Council and government House leader, in replying on three separate occasions, refused to answer the specific question but gave us a story about the difficulties of conducting House business. He pointed out to us, for instance, that we had already had two days' debate on the matter and there was going to be another opposition day on Monday, none of which had anything at all to do with the question.

The danger I am attempting to impress upon the Chair with respect to the independence and integrity of standing committees arises from the sequence of events as they occurred yesterday. Your Honour will recall that on three separate occasions the chairman of that standing committee rose in an obvious attempt to answer the question, and on three separate occasions he was prevented from doing so by the President of the Privy Council. Finally, as recorded at page 12269 we find the President of the Privy Council saying, when he rose the fourth time—and the chairman of the standing committee had also risen.

> Madam Speaker, I am sure that the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi is now able to answer the Leader of the Opposition—

The use of that word "now" is very significant. What he was saying in effect is, now that he has had his opportunity to tell the House why there is not going to be a reference—not saying it directly, but by referring to all sorts of other business—and the government position having been established, the chairman would be allowed to answer the question, but not before.

There are very serious implications to be drawn from that sequence of events yesterday having nothing to do at all with interpreting the question. The question was quite clear: has a request for a reference been made? In my respectful submission, the chairman was denied the opportunity of telling us whether a reference had been sought until he was allowed to do so by the President of the Privy Council. Therein lies the danger, and that is the danger which, in my submission, is best cleared up by the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Madam Speaker: I will reserve on the question and study the arguments that have been presented.

MR. BENJAMIN—REFERENCE TO SENATE COMMITTEE OF RAIL PASSENGER SERVICE POLICY

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): I rise on a question of privilege.

Madam Speaker: I did not get notice of the hon. member's question of privilege.

Mr. Benjamin: I give it now, Madam Speaker, because it is related to the previous question.

Madam Speaker: Very well, I will recognize the hon. member for Regina West.

Mr. Benjamin: Madam Speaker, this is related to the previous question of privilege in the sense that it affects the chairman of the House of Commons Standing Committee on Transport. At page 12269 the Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Clark) is recorded as asking the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) about a request of the subcommittee of the Standing Committee on Transport for an order of reference, and the Minister of Transport said, as reported at page 12270:

> It should be obvious to everyone here that what the opposition is trying to do is obtain a reference—

By the way, this was a request made by all-party agreement. He went on to state:

> —so that a report can be written and they will have another kick at the can.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member seems to be referring to the deliberations of yesterday, in which case I have to remind him that I require written notice of his question of privilege. If it involved the deliberations of today I could accept his question of privilege, but he is quoting from yesterday's Hansard and, therefore, I am afraid I cannot hear the hon. member at this time.

Mr. Benjamin: Madam Speaker, I guess that makes it a point of order. This document in my hand indicates that the government refused an order of reference to inquire into VIA Rail and submit a report.

However, I find as a result of what has just arrived in my hand that the government House leader of the other place has taken action. The other place has authorized their transport committee to inquire into and report upon the national rail passenger service, exactly what the chairman of our committee asked for and was refused, and in fact double-crossed, yesterday. Now we find today that the same authorization has been provided in the Senate. Surely that raises some kind of privilege on the part of the chairman of our committee and all members of this place.

• (1540)

Madam Speaker: With respect, the hon. member is still discussing matters which happened yesterday and even matters which took place in the Senate. This cannot be entertained under a question of privilege.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

PETITIONS

MR. LAWRENCE—EFFECTS OF HIGH MORTGAGE INTEREST RATES

Hon. Allan Lawrence (Durham-Northumberland): Madam Speaker, I ask leave of the House to lay upon the Table a petition prepared of their own volition and signed by 160 people who principally are residents of Port Perry, Ontario, in my constituency. Like most Canadians, they are gravely concerned about the extremely high mortgage interest rates and they urge Parliament to take action to establish a realistic interest rate to provide security for those who have homes which are mortgaged.

MR. KILGOUR—GROUP MAIL BOXES

Mr. David Kilgour (Edmonton-Strathcona): Madam Speaker, I ask leave of the House to lay upon the Table a petition signed by approximately 350 of the 650 householders in the Ridgewood area of Millwoods, Edmonton. This petition was prepared by Mrs. Fran Walker and asks for nothing more than group mail boxes. I think you would be amazed, Madam Speaker, if you knew the hours in which mail service was available to these people. They are simply asking for a right which every other Canadian appears to have.

* * *

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: 2,559 and 2,691.

Order Paper Questions

[Text]

J.W.E. MINGO, Q.C.

Question No. 2,559—Mr. Crosby:

1. Did the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources or any official of his department or the president or any official of Petro-Canada have conversations or discussions with Mr. J.W.E. Mingo, Q.C., of Halifax or with a member of the board of directors of Petrofina Canada Limited prior to or after the first attempt by Petro-Canada to acquire control of Petrofina?

2. Was Mr. Mingo paid a fee as a director of the Bank of Canada or as an agent of the government or Petro-Canada with respect to the attempt by Petro-Canada to acquire controlling interest in Petrofina?

3. Did Mr. Mingo play a role in the acquisition of a controlling interest in Petrofina by Petro-Canada and, if so, does the government consider that role conflicted with his interest as a director of the Bank of Canada and other government agencies including the Halifax Port Authority?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): The Ministry of Energy, Mines and Resources reports as follows: 1.—3. No.

CHANGING OF RAILWAY ROLLING STOCK TO METRIC UNITS

Question No. 2,691—Mr. Domm:

1. Does the Minister of Transport have contingency plans for changing the printed dimensions and specifications on the outside surfaces of various railway rolling stock to metric units and, if so, what is the anticipated cost of changing the stencilled specifications?

2. What form of specification measurements will the minister require to appear on rolling stock originating in the United States?

3. Will Canada's railway gauges be specified in Canadian or international units in future and on what date will any change take place?

4. Did Canada receive an order to supply some 1,200 items of rolling stock to the Federal Republic of Nigeria and, if so, will the items be manufactured to Canadian or international specification?

5. Are end-product items of the Tilby-Miller sugarcane separation technology to be manufactured under license by Intercane Systems Inc. and Hawker Siddeley Canada Inc. and, if so, will they be made according to Canadian or international specifications?

6. Were 90 subway cars purchased recently by Mexico City Metro from Bombardier Inc. for $50 million and, if so, will they be manufactured in Canadian or international units of measure?

7. (a) Are the industrial off-shoot benefits accruing to domestic firms as a result of the purchase by Canada of the CF-18 fighter aircraft expected to amount to approximately $2.5 billion and to continue to approximately 1995 and has the Metric Commission scheduled the changeover of the Canadian aerospace industry from Canadian units of measure to international in 1987 (b) does the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce envisage regulatory exceptions to permit Canadian industry to legally continue to supply parts built to Canadian units of measurement beyond the scheduled changeover date and, if so, what will be the exceptions?

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Transport as follows: 1. No. However, plans for changing dimensions and specifications to metric units were proposed by the rail transport industry and the rolling stock manufacturers and approved by the Railway Association of Canada. These plans are compatible with the standards set by the Association of American Railroads. The cost to convert the rolling stock is approximately $20 per car at manufacture and $50 per car at refit of existing equipment.

Order Paper Questions

2. The Minister of Transport does not establish the form of specification measurements that appear on rolling stock. See also answer to 1 above.

3. Railway track gauges will not change but will eventually be expressed in metric units. The current industry target for this is 1988.

4. No.

5. The equipment resulting from the Tilby-Miller sugar cane separation technology will be manufactured by both Intercane Systems Inc., and Hawker-Siddeley Canada Inc., and will be made according to the specifications required in the country where it is being used.

6. No.

7. (a) Yes. The appropriate industry sector committee (aircraft and aircraft parts manufacturers) has scheduled conversion to metric units within its industry in the period 1988/89. Sector committees are made up largely of industry representatives and act in the interest of the industry concerned.

(b) The Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce has no intention of introducing regulations requiring manufacturers to use metric units. Industries are free to provide their goods and services in the units of measure their customers desire.

[English]

STARRED QUESTIONS

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, would you be so kind as to call starred question No. 2,784?

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Ostiguy (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, I have here the answer to question 2,784. I could read it but it is rather lengthy so, with unanimous consent, perhaps I could table it.

Madam Speaker: Is there agreement for the tabling of this answer?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

[Editor's Note: The answer referred to is as follows:]

[Text]

*EXECUTIVE ASSISTANT TO MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE

Question No. 2,784—Mr. McMillan:

With reference to the answer to Question No. 2,308 concerning trips between Ottawa and Prince Edward Island taken at government expense by Mr. James Fay, Executive Assistant to the Minister of Agriculture (a) with what individuals or groups did he meet (b) what was the (i) date (ii) location (iii) duration (iv) purpose of each meeting?

Mr. Marcel Ostiguy (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture):

Individuals or groups met	(b)(i) Date	(ii) Location	(iii) Duration	(iv) Purpose of each meeting
Trip number 1
Island Growers	September 2, 1980	Charlottetown	all-day session	To obtain information on the intent of the Island Growers re the proposed Potato Agency for Eastern Canada
Trip number 2
Prince Edward Island Potato Producers Association	October 16, 1980	Charlottetown	three and one-half hours	To discuss updated data on proposed Eastern Canada Potato Agency Plan
Trip number 3
Prince Edward Island Potato Producers Association	December 19, 1980	Charlottetown	two and one-half hours	To discus draft plans for Eastern Canada Potato Agency as a result of the September 2, 1980 hearings in Charlottetown
Trip number 3
John MacDonald, Member P.E.I. Potato Producers Association	December 20, 1980	Souris, P.E.I.	2 hours	To discuss possible Potato Stabilization for the 1979 crop year for Maritimes

Canada Oil and Gas Act

Individuals or groups met	(b)(i) Date	(ii) Location	(iii) Duration	(iv) Purpose of each meeting
Trip number 4
P.E.I. Potato Producers Association P.E.I. Potato Marketing Board	January 19, 1981	Charlottetown	2 hours	To discuss new seed regulations as they may affect P.E.I. elite seed program
Trip number 5
P.E.I. Potato Marketing Board	February 9, 1981	Charlottetown	two and one-half hours	EEC regulations as they relate to seed exports of Maritime Potatoes
P.E.I. Potato Producers Association	February 9, 1981	Souris	3 hours	To discuss Status of 1979 Potato Stabilization — Possible funding and update on the Eastern Canada Potato Agency Plan
Trip number 6
P.E.I. Potato Producers Association	February 15, 1981	Charlottetown	three and one-half hours	Preparatory talks for future Eastern Canada Potato Agency meetings in Ottawa
Trip number 7
Premier of P.E.I. (with Minister of Agriculture)	March 4, 1981	Charlottetown	2 hours	To discuss proposed Atlantic Veterinary College
Trip number 8
P.E.I. Potato Marketing Board Members P.E.I. Potato Producers Association Member P.E.I. Potato Dealer Association Member	March 13, 1981	Souris, Charlottetown	seven and one-half hours	To discuss seed potato phytosanitary regulations, and how it relates to EEC'S and Canadian Seed Potato and the proposed EEC Potato Agency Plan

[English]

Mr. Smith: Madam Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Madam Speaker: Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Madam Speaker, I would like to draw to the attention of the parliamentary secretary some matters arising out of the answers given yesterday at pages 12279 and 12280 of Hansard in answer to my question No. 2,317 respecting the RCMP 'E' Division headquarters in Victoria. There are three points I would like to draw to the hon. member's attention.

The first and most important one concerns the answer to the question in the second column of page 12280. There is an asterisk beside it and if one makes reference to the explanation of the asterisk one sees that the cost is only an estimate since "purchase is still under negotiation, which should be completed by the end of June, 1981."

I draw your attention, Mr. Speaker, to the fact that this answer was tendered and appeared in Hansard on October 28, 1981. The answer was obviously prepared before June, 1981, and has been sitting somewhere. Perhaps that portion has been awaiting the accumulation of the other information. I would therefore ask the parliamentary secretary if he could update that aspect of the question.

My second point relates to line 6 of the first column of page 12280, where it refers to office equipment and furnishings. The cost is $74,100. Then the second column, under (d), relates to the relocation of furnishings and equipment for $80,000. It seems to me that it is inconsistent to purchase office equipment and furnishings for $74,100 and pay $80,000 to move them.

My third point is a small one. It is related to the name "Fairmont, Vancouver", just above the italicized reply in column No. 2. I do not know whether that is Fairmont Street or Fairmont District. I think it should be clarified for the record.

Mr. Smith: I will look into those matters, Madam Speaker, and see if they can be clarified.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADA OIL AND GAS ACT

MEASURE RESPECTING OIL AND GAS INTERESTS

The House resumed, from Wednesday, October 28, consideration of Bill C-48, to regulate oil and gas interests in Canada Lands and to amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on National Resources and Public Works, and Motions Nos. 21 (Mr. Wilson) and 22 (Mr. Waddell).

Mr. Peter Elzinga (Pembina): Mr. Speaker, since we have had so many interruptions in the debate perhaps you could tell me how much time I have left in my participation.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am informed that the hon. member has 17 minutes.

Mr. Elzinga: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As I started to indicate yesterday, I am sure all parties basically agree on the importance of our nation reaching energy self-sufficiency. We all agree that it is important that we have more efficient development of our resources. I think we also agree that it is essential that we have a healthy oil and gas industry in Canada if we are to reach oil and gas self-sufficiency. It is important that we have a healthy oil and gas industry to cure some of the serious ills we are facing in our economy, such as inflation, which is running rampant. The fact that so many individuals are employed in our energy sector also makes it important that we have a healthy oil and gas industry in Canada.

The main difference lies in our philosophical approach as to how we achieve energy self-sufficiency. I dealt with that aspect somewhat when I spoke on this measure last Tuesday evening, illustrating the total difference in our philosophical belief as to how we can achieve a healthy industry in comparison with both the Liberal and New Democratic parties.

We do fully support Canadianization but we have grave reservations about nationalization. I think Canadians were disturbed when they saw our minister of energy sitting back and eating cake in celebration of the first year of the National Energy Program. The Canadian people are the ones who are paying for this cake, but they do not have any of that cake to eat. In fact, they are having less to eat because of the disastrous policies of this government.

The Liberal administration wishes the Canadian people to think that it is a bunch of American fat cats, American capitalists, who are running our oil industry. You would be surprised, Mr. Speaker, at the amount of investment by the so-called small investor in Canada. I am talking about our senior citizens. Many widows rely on their dividend payments from their investment in these different corporations to make their livelihood.

● (1550)

Our Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) gives a few dollars to increase old age pensions with one hand but then takes them back fourfold by allowing the value of oil stocks traded on the stock exchanges to decrease. Do hon. members opposite care about individuals who have invested small amounts in the oil industry so that they might benefit from the development of our resources? It seems that they do not. Far too often we find that they deal in the abstract; they do not deal with individual hardship cases. I refer to people who have put a great deal of sweat and blood into the development of our resources but now find that this government, through the back-in provision of claiming 25 per cent ownership on Canada lands, is simply walking in and stealing portions of what they have worked so hard to obtain. They have worked for years and invested for years, but our hon. friends opposite are literally stealing 25 per cent of something people have worked hard to develop. That is a totally different philosophical approach from that which we take, and we have given many illustrations respecting our approach.

I referred briefly to the budget we introduced in 1979 and made some comparisons with what is taking place now. The governments of Canada did not build this country. This country was built by individuals who were willing to stake their livelihoods. They built something we of the younger generation can enjoy, and we owe them a debt of gratitude. However, this government is not expressing any gratitude to them at all; it is penalizing them for their hard work.

As I mentioned earlier, we in this party support the concept of 50 per cent Canadianization. We encourage direct support by Canadians in the development of our resources. Petro-Canada is a fine example of the approach of this Liberal government. The individual who heads Petro-Canada has much to say about the development of our resources, but I understand that at one time he came close to being fired from a second rate job at Imperail Oil, a company which produces oil. Now he is running a government organization responsible for billions of dollars.

We are dealing here with the energy industry. I find it totally unacceptable when I hear my friends to the left in the New Democratic Party indicate their support for an energy tax credit for those individuals who cannot absorb increased energy costs. Members of the New Democratic Party voted against that measure when we introduced it in our budget in 1979. They voted against the progressive steps we wanted to take to help those individuals who are burdened with additional energy costs. Yet today they ask the government to implement exactly what they voted against. The hypocrisy of that party never ceases to amaze me.

A number of individuals participating in this debate have stated that it is important that Canada reach energy self-sufficiency. I refer specifically to the hon. member for Calgary South (Mr. Thomson), who illustrated how that will not be possible under the present administration. If the present policies advocated by the Liberal government continue, we can never hope to achieve energy self-sufficiency.

I was happy to see on television last night that the province of Alberta has reduced its royalty structure so that more development will take place in the province of Alberta. I would like to see some encouraging actions on the part of the federal government as well so that the industry can be restored to the health it enjoyed prior to the introduction of the National Energy Program.

I do not wish to belabour what we attempted to do in our budget and in a number of the proposals we advocated during the short nine months we were in government, but I think the underlying factor in everything we advocated in this House and throughout Canada was our deep belief in the individual Canadian citizen. I deeply believe that the average individual in my constituency of Pembina can prosper in Canada, but the average constituent should be offered initiatives by his federal government so that he can own his own home and participate directly in the development of our resources. I hope hon. members opposite will realize the wisdom of that attitude and of offering initiatives rather than always relying on government intervention.

Quite frankly, I am glad an agreement was reached between the federal government and the province of Alberta because at least the uncertainty that existed was removed. However, I find it frustrating that the party opposite was the party which campaigned on cheap oil. Hon. members opposite told the Canadian people they would keep energy costs down. As a result of the agreement reached Canadians in reality are paying and will in the future pay more for oil products than what we advocated in our budget. For example, we agreed to the gradual increase in the price of our oil to 75 per cent of the world price. That was included in the agreement signed by the province of Alberta and the federal government, but that is only in effect with respect to old oil. The cost of new oil or oil found after January of 1981 will be allowed to rise to 100 per cent of the world price under the present agreement. That oil will cost the consumer much more. I find it very disheartening that simply for political expediency hon. members opposite made promises and built up the hopes and expectations of the Canadian people and then, after an election is over, they forget about their promises and renege on them totally.

Let me conclude by referring to what I said in my opening comments. I hope our friends opposite will realize the wisdom of offering not only small Canadian oil companies but all individuals throughout Canada opportunities for self-fulfilment and the opportunity to produce for themselves rather than always taking the government interventionist approach.

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to speak about this legislation. I wish we did not have to do so. I wish the legislation was not before us, but it is part of the schedule and part of the menu the government has put before us, so we must address ourselves to it.

It has been a year since the National Energy Program was introduced. It is probably an indication of the popularity of this measure that a year after the program was introduced we are still debating one of its major features. It is probably time to sit back and take a look at what is happening in the legislative process of this program. As I consider the debate, it seems to me that pretty well everyone in this House has staked out his position. In some cases it appears that this is a dialogue of the deaf. We have all determined what we want to see, what we want to support and what we want to reject, and there is not very much listening going on any more in this debate.

• (1600)

That is true for the Liberal Party as well as for the Conservatives and NDP. All of us have solidified our position so much that we are not really hearing what other people are saying. It probably does not pay any more to listen because we know what they are going to say. We have such a staked-out ideological position that we can anticipate what the other party will say. There are no surprises.

That is not healthy for a good legislative debate. I wonder whether it is not time to take a look at the premise which ought to underlie legislation if it is to be good legislation. What is the premise? From the premise flows the principle which ought to undergird all of the provisions of legislation. The premise is that we want good legislation, good law. We have to decide whether the law that we are debating is good. For example, for a number of years I have promoted a private member's bill on parental kidnapping. The government has now adopted that legislation in Bill C-53.

Something that encouraged me to go ahead with that legislation was an experience I had in Toronto some years ago. A young lawyer was using the kidnapping provisions of the Criminal Code to counsel his clients on how to kidnap their own children and do so successfully under the Criminal Code. That provision in the Criminal Code is supposed to protect children. However, it was being used by counsel in order to abduct them. That is bad law and the sooner we get rid of it, the better.

The underlying premise of all legislation is that it ought to be good. Maybe we ought to look at a couple of principles which ought to be qualities of good legislation. Good legislation should first of all have the principle of universality in it. Good law should be able to endure and enjoy universal application. You cannot have good law if it is very specific and particular. It should apply as much as possible to any situation within the purview of that legislation.

Second, it should not be written to give selective attention to any one person or group of people. I am sure the civil libertarians in this House will agree with that. Law which is designed to give attention to one group is probably not good law.

It should not be written to punish or reward any one person or group of people. Nor should it endanger any one person or group. It ought to benefit the public as a whole. For example, when I first came to this chamber we were still dealing with legislation related to a specific divorce action, a person who wanted a divorce and the provincial legislation did not accommodate that divorce action taking place. I am sure, Mr. Speaker, you remember cases like that. That is not good law. I am glad we have changed the legislation in such a way that we do not have to deal with that any more. We should not be dealing with specific cases in that way. We ought to have universal legislation.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I have been listening attentively to the hon. member. This is report stage of the bill and two amendments have been grouped for debate. It appears to the Chair that the hon. member is straying from the principle of speaking specifically to the amendments before us.

Mr. Friesen: Mr. Speaker, you will note what I am driving at. In about two minutes I will come to the application and you will see why I am dwelling on the point that law, if it is good law, must have universal application.

The second principle is that if it is to be good law, it should not be passed on the basis of an individual liking or disliking a person or group of people. That is why we have debated and talked about a charter of rights, to protect people from that kind of prejudice. If we allow that to happen, we get into the danger of an ever-escalating vendetta against one person or group of people. For example, if we were to pick on any one race in our society and adopt property provisions relating to that race, we would quickly agree that that is racism and rule it out as bad law.

Does the clause in Bill C-48 that we are now dealing with pass these two tests of good legislation? Does it enjoy universality of application? Could we take the principle in this piece of legislation and adapt it to other areas of our lives as Canadians and appreciate the legislation? Second, does it look at one person or group of people with special attention? That is really the underlying question.

We are dealing with Clause 27 of the bill. It is called in our jargon the back-in clause. This provision allows the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) through the Crown corporation to expropriate retroactively property that has been developed by any corporate citizen. Whether it is an individual person or a corporate citizen is immaterial to the principle we are now discussing.

Should the government be able retroactively to back in and expropriate property belonging to a person, whether it be an individual or corporate citizen? Does it enjoy the test of universality? Could we apply this principle to all ownership in Canada? I ask the backbench members on the government side whether they would appreciate having this principle of retroactive expropriation applied to their homes, farms or businesses. Should we accept retroactive expropriation?

I enjoyed attending, and I say this with some level of seriousness, the NDP convention last July. It was good theatre, although not much more. I recall looking at their energy resolution which was passed by their executive, although not promulgated originally by the memberships as a whole. I quote clause six of that energy resolution:

> Fiscal Incentives for Equity—Any expenditures of public funds, including incentives (both grants and tax write-offs) in support of privately-owned ventures must earn equity in those ventures in proportion to the funds provided.

Having approved that principle, I wonder whether the members of the NDP would like to apply that principle universally?

Mr. Waddell: It was an energy resolution.

Mr. Friesen: Part of the energy resolution in this country is the CHIP program which is designed to spare our energy resources. It is a grant program specifically mentioned in their resolution. They would endorse the application by home owners to take advantage of those grants, which then become an investment in the home. Their resolution says that those kinds of grants "in support of privately-owned ventures must earn equity".

Mr. Waddell: That's absurd.

● (1610)

Mr. Friesen: Do they support the fact that the government should have equity in those homes or those businesses that make use of that particular grant? Let us look at universality in the application of a law. Should we accept the present legislation, Bill C-48 and its Clause 27, that allows the government retroactively to expropriate an investment that a private citizen or corporate citizen has made?

Mr. Lalonde: You are ridiculous.

Mr. Friesen: Let us turn that around. Maybe it is ridiculous to apply that kind of legislation to a corporate citizen.

I welcome the intervention on the part of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Does he want that principle applied universally across Canada? What investor across Canada would feel secure if we were to adopt this legislation and accept the principle that it should be universally applied across Canada?

Mr. Lalonde: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I recognize the hon. Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources on a point of order.

Mr. Lalonde: Is the hon. member asking me a question? If he is, I will be happy to answer it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member for Surrey-White Rock-North Delta has the floor. If the minister is asking the hon. member who is speaking a question, I think that is in accordance with the custom of the House. I am not aware the procedure would permit any reverse questions at this stage.

Mr. Friesen: If the minister could answer a question without making it look like a pretzel, I would not mind having him answer it; but I have never heard the minister yet give a straight answer in the House.

To what extent is the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources willing to drive home this principle that he is applying in this legislation to other areas of our life? That is the answer we are looking for in the long term. If I had more than 20 minutes given to me now, I would allow the minister to answer that question, because when he first introduced this legislation and this policy, he said in this House that this policy would change the social structure of our country. That is the thing that worries us. If this has universal application, the minister certainly has a funny way of expressing himself.

This is an energy bill that basically has western and maritime application. I recall the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and the minister talking about the fairness of sharing our resources. The sharing principle is only in terms of energy and in terms of the wealth of the west. It has nothing to do with the hydroelectricity of Ontario or Quebec. It has nothing to do with the mineral resources of Ontario and Quebec. The principle applies only to the energy resources of the west and of the maritimes. Mr. Speaker, that seems to me to be bad legislation. If we cannot accept universality, then it is bad law. It also ought to enjoy the test of whether or not it gives special attention to something based on likes or dislikes.

The fact that the government has been engaging in a spree of expropriation, of buying or wanting to appropriate energy companies, already focuses special attention on those companies. The legislation we are talking about deals with foreign investors in a special way. I suggest that if this legislation is designed to isolate certain people or certain groups of people for special attention, then it is bad law. I suggest to the government that in this case it is dealing with foreign investors, and most of them are American investors—though not all—in the energy field.

The special attention given to foreign companies dealt with in social programs is what we call racism. Since it has to do with economics and since it has to do with wealthy oil companies, my friends to the left, who are very solicitous about not prejudicing any group of people or any nationality, forget about the fact that special attention is given in a prejudicial way to foreigners in this legislation. It is a kind of racism. It is a kind of economic racism that we are involved with.

I take interest in the resolution passed by the New Democratic Party last July dealing with Canada-U.S. relations. It reads:

A New Democratic Party government will pursue a comprehensive and mature state to state relationship—

I think that is a contradiction of terms. I do not know if it is possible for them to have mature state to state relationship, but that is what they say. It continues:

—mature state to state relationship with the United States based on the principle of equality of nation states. To accomplish this, Canada must cease to deal with United States on a special issue-by-issue or deal-by-deal basis.

That is what their resolution says in terms of Canada-U.S. relations. When it comes to energy, they say:

This involvement—

That is, public sector involvement.

—should include the expansion of Petro-Canada by the purchase of Imperial Oil.

On the one hand they are saying, "We don't want to deal with a matter on a special issue-by-issue or deal-by-deal basis"; on the other hand they say, "let's buy Imperial Oil". We may want to accuse the New Democratic Party of a lot of things, but there is one thing we should never accuse them of and that is consistency of policy or of the application of policy. Forever and a day they have been calling in the House for that kind of resolution.

If we are to have good legislation and if we are to have good law, Mr. Speaker, then we must be able to apply that law universally across the country within the sphere of application of that particular legislation. I suggest the legislation before us, Mr. Speaker, does not enjoy that kind of welcome across the country. You cannot universally apply this legislation without prejudicing the property rights of people all across Canada. Because one group of people in Canada happens to be foreigners and happens to be big in numbers, we find their position is prejudiced by the special attention given to them by this legislation. The civil libertarians in the New Democratic Party would not want that to happen in any other area. They only want that to happen in economics. In that sense they are no different from the socialists in the Liberal Party who are promoting this kind of legislation.

I think we need to vote against this provision, Mr. Speaker, and promote the motion before us in the name of the member from Calgary which would balance off that provision.

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I spoke previously with regard to a former motion on Bill C-48. I am pleased to participate not only in the debate on Bill C-48 but in the debate on a particular section of the bill that goes to the heart of the whole energy program that the government announced a year ago.

Let me look at the objectives of the energy program and the objectives of Bill C-48. First of all, it tries to achieve a higher Canadian ownership content in a very important sector of our economy, namely the energy sector. It tries to achieve greater benefit for Canadians in terms of economic rent and profits made by this particular sector of the economy.

• (1620)

The other major component of the bill is the concept of achieving energy self-sufficiency as early as possible, with the goal of 1990. In other words, through this bill and this energy program we are trying to achieve an accelerated development of our energy resources, including those located in unconventional areas of our country and particularly in the north.

In its wisdom the government has decided that it must achieve these goals through ownership and direct government involvement. It aims for ownership and complete control of the energy sector. It must have a means to compete with industry already in the field and it must have a window into the energy sector in order to pursue these stated objectives. It is saying that the regulatory instruments we now have are not sufficient to keep the industry honest and to achieve sufficient benefits for Canadians in the areas of energy development and marketing.

Let us look at some of the regulatory instruments normally used to ensure corporate responsibility, specifically in the energy sector. The multinational oil companies do not drill anywhere on federal or provincial lands unless they are told to. Normally leases are made available to them in areas where we think exploration and development should take place. The leases are put on the market for competitive bids and the oil companies bid on them. In other words, they have been told where the development shall take place.

We could use the same regulatory instruments to tell the oil companies how quickly development should take place. They could have a licence with the condition that certain improvements had to be made within a prescribed period of time, otherwise they would have to vacate and the licence would be given to someone else.

We could go further and, indeed, we have gone further. We could tell them that when they make a find we will set the rate of production, where the product will be marketed and at what price it will be sold. Then, as is done with most other industries, by adjusting the economic rent and royalties associated with such endeavours we could tell the industry how much profit it can make.

I make a comparison with the lumber industry. Royalties on lumber are adjusted to compensate for cost of production and world price. The companies are really operating on an incentive rate of return which is usually 15 per cent to 25 per cent. Such adjustments can readily be made because we know what the world price for oil is and we know the basic cost of production. The economic rent could be adjusted to make sure that the companies had a rate of return sufficient to permit them to raise the capital required to undertake the ventures that need to be undertaken. At the same time we would make sure that there would not be any windfall profits. If we want to accelerate these projects, we could build the procedure into these regulatory arrangements.

Instead, the government has chosen to go the route which is more consistent with the new type of Liberal philosophy. I am confident that I will not convince my hon. friends opposite that there is a new type of Liberal philosophy; but we all know that there are millions of people outside this House who sometimes view what we are doing by means of television, so those people know.

I should like to discuss this Liberal philosophy with respect to economic nationalism and behaviour. It is a kind of new collective economic philosophy and, at least in the area of energy, it is an attempt at a planned market economy instead of a free market economy.

The government has now decided to teach individual Canadians what their priorities are. We are now all shareholders in the great energy industry. Regardless whether our priorities are consistent with that, we are shareholders in a high-risk and sometimes low-yield industry. Canadians have never shown much interest in investing in energy, Mr. Speaker. We would be an energy poor country if the initial exploration and development in conventional areas had had to be financed with Canadian money. On the whole, Canadians are very lazy and it took the multinational companies who had more faith in our energy prospects than we have to build up the industry. We are great savers, we put money in the bank and like to buy Canada Savings Bonds, but we are not great risk takers. The government has now decided that we are going to be risk takers. Because the government wants us all to be equal, it wants us to share all the profits from these great ventures. In fairness, like the New Democratic Party the government holds that if you share in the profits then you have to share the risk. Now we are all shareholders in this new and important sector of our economy.

I cannot understand why the NDP are so upset about what the government is doing. They complain that the wages of the average worker in this country have declined in relation to inflation. The reason for that, Mr. Speaker, is that the worker is no longer just a wage earner but a shareholder. The government has taken a bite out of his pay cheque and put it into the energy sector. It spent $1.4 billion to buy Pacific Pete in western Canada. Just recently a Liberal member celebrated the opening of the first Petro-Canada gas station in eastern Canada. The minister was there too in his hard hat, full of joy, gasing up the first car and giving away a tank of gasoline.

There have been Petro-Canada gas stations in my constituency for the last three years, Mr. Speaker. If you fill your tank at the Petro-Canada station at Fort St. John, you find that the price is three cents per litre more than at other stations. In my riding, Petro-Canada has assumed the role of price leader, formerly the role of Esso. The price is about 12 cents per gallon more than at other gas stations.

An hon. Member: Shame.

Mr. Oberle: When the president of Imperial Oil appeared before the committee, he said: "We cannot wait until Petro-Canada takes from our shoulders this horrendous burden of being the price leader. Our shareholders are rubbing their hands with glee, waiting for Petro-Canada to become the price leader, because our profits will go up."

Wages have gone down because the government spent $1.5 billion to buy Petrofina. It did not buy new oil; it did not advance the prospect of energy self-sufficiency by 1990 because it bought a bunch of broken down service stations in eastern Canada. If you wanted to paint the country red, you would begin with the service stations because there is one on every corner. We now have all kinds of Petro-Canada service stations. If hon. members in this House worry about the telephone calls they receive from people complaining about the Post Office, about some of the other programs and the other direct involvements of government, they should just wait. I already have the experience. The Petro-Canada service station is in the neighbourhood. I am now receiving phone calls from my constituents. They are asking, "Why is it that Petro-Canada's price is three cents a litre more than Esso's price? Why did I not get any warranty when I had my generator fixed in the government's service station?" Now, fellows, prepare yourselves for it! That is the next problem you will be facing, because you cannot have one without the other.

• (1630)

The government is taking these bites out of everyone's pay cheques. It should be little wonder to all of us that we are no longer keeping pace with the rate of inflation, because the government is now investing our money in the energy sector. How is it doing this?

Let me then turn to the provision in the bill which is known as the 25 per cent back-in. The government has made a regulation, reflected in this bill, which states that any company operating on federal lands—federal lands being the Northwest Territories, the Yukon or the offshore—will have to have a Canadian ownership content of at least 50 per cent. There is a built-in encouragement for companies to go much further than that. In fact, the ideal ownership content is 75 per cent. Basically, there is a formula being followed to give companies the incentive to improve their Canadian ownership content, and it works something like this. If a company is 75 per cent Canadian owned, it will be reimbursed 85 per cent of its development costs, in cash, by the federal government, or from you and me, Mr. Speaker, because of that bite in our pay cheques. If the company is only 50 per cent Canadian owned, it will be reimbursed only 35 per cent of its development costs. So the obvious goal is not a 50 per cent Canadian ownership content; if one wants to be in competition in the north and on federal lands, one must really have 75 per cent Canadian ownership.

I hope that the provincial premiers are aware that the government is also stating that if a company is drilling in conventional lands, meaning the provinces, if it is a 75 per cent Canadian company it will be reimbursed only 35 per cent of its development costs. Of course, that is designed to lure away those companies which have not already packed up and left our country for the United States. It is trying to lure them away from the conventional areas, from the provinces, to drill in the north.

It has gone further and said that of that 50 per cent Canadian ownership, 25 per cent must belong to the bureaucrats, to government itself. The measures which are contained in this bill will provide that in cases where the company had less than 50 per cent Canadian ownership after the back-in, the agent of the minister would just simply confiscate the rest or the difference. In other words, Chevron Canada Limited is, I believe, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Standard Oil of New Jersey. The minister would back in with his 25 per cent, and it would still be 75 per cent foreign owned. If it could not find a Canadian partner, the minister would just simply confiscate 50 per cent.

Companies can now apply for leases in the north. If one understands the oil business, one knows that particularly in the high risk areas where the technology is not yet known—for instance, the technology required to bring oil under the icepack of the Arctic Ocean to shore and to deliver it to some other places—companies have a tendency to take in many partners and to sort of spread the risk involved with these kinds of new ventures. Because of that, the 25 per cent Canadian or government ownership content will, in almost all cases, mean a majority content. Therefore, the government will not only have the ownership and the window into the industry, but it will be on the hook for the whole scheme. That is all right when it comes to divvying up the profits, but what about when it comes to assuming the risks associated?

What concerns me most about the energy program, and even some of the more stubborn socialists to the left agree, is that Canada will always have to share some of its resources with other countries. I happen to think that because we will always be in a position where we will have to share some of the resources with other countries, the risks associated with developing new sources of energy and new technology to bring oil from the tar sands and from underneath the icepack should also be shared. It is good that Japan has made a deal with Dome to share the risk of bringing oil out of the Beaufort Sea.

We should invite other highly industrialized countries which are desperately in need of our resources to share in the risks and the high costs associated with developing these new sources of energy. The Canadian taxpayers are not in a position, as the bite out of their pay cheques is not that big, to come up with the $300 billion to $500 billion required to gain energy self-sufficiency by 1990. I do not believe that Canadian taxpayers have that kind of resource available, as their pay cheques are not that big. I do not even think that Canadians have that kind of credit in other parts of the world. Instead, we should be recruiting new investment, inviting others to help us share in these incredible risks. Of course, they will not do that unless we also let them in on some of the profits. Some industrialized countries do not measure profits in dollars but, rather, in a share of the resources which will eventually flow.

We are experiencing a very crucial and difficult time. We have to bridge some sort of a gap of about 40 or 50 years, after which time all of us throughout the world will be able to develop much more exotic sources of energy, such as solar power, wind power, thermal power. However, we must find enough oil and gas in the meantime to bridge this gap.

I am glad the minister is in the House. I hope I have been able to demonstrate to some of my friends that it is not all gravy. Any business into which one enters has certain associated risks. We should all be aware of what we are doing and understand that not only will we increase the benefits by having Canadians sharing the development of new energy and its sale and marketing, but we as taxpayers will also share in the risks.

Dome Petroleum will report to us in a very few days concerning the resources that it has discovered in the Beaufort Sea. If, as we all suspect now, all the optimism associated with this billion dollar scheme was not warranted and that, in fact, there is not the amount of oil that everyone expected, then we will have a demonstration of what it means to share in the risks. Although we have hundreds of millions of taxpayers' dollars invested in the scheme, there are many private people who have had faith in Dome and in the Beaufort Sea who will be losing their shirts.

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Mr. Speaker, I would like to begin by saying how pleased I am to have the opportunity to participate in the debate on Bill C-48. It is a customary opening phrase, I know, but in my case it is a very heartfelt one. It may seem strange that I, as the representative of Vancouver Centre, should take such a keen interest in this debate. Discussions about royalties, Petro-Canada, the government's back-in clause and the Canada lands sound very distant from the concerns of residents in the heart of Vancouver, whose concerns I normally devote my time toward; but they are not at all remote to me.

● (1640)

Before I became a Member of Parliament, I had the opportunity to spend a lot of time in the north. During the 1970s I lived in the Northwest Territories where I worked for several years. In fact, I was in Whitehorse reviewing the right of way for the Foothills pipeline on the day that I received a call from the riding association in Vancouver asking me to run in Vancouver Centre. During that time I developed a deep appreciation for the people of the north and its traditions. I travelled extensively throughout the Northwest Territories.

I have been most impressed by members of my own party who have worked so hard to promote changes to the original act. They have displayed extensive knowledge of the oil and gas industry. Just as important, they have manifested a real sensitivity to the needs of the north.

Nowhere is that attitude more evident than in Motion No. 21, the motion we are debating today. It seeks to limit the right of the Crown to back-in to a production field. If passed, and I sincerely hope it will be, it would allow the Crown to become a Canadian owner of last resort only.

I object in the strongest terms to the powers which the federal government wishes to give itself through the back-in clause. I am opposed to the federal government's attempt to appropriate a piece of the action, as it were, to itself. The Liberals wish to give the federal government a 25 per cent share, no matter what is the extent of Canadian ownership of the project. My party is not opposed to Canadian ownership. Our amendment would permit the government to acquire a share where ownership was less than 50 per cent Canadian. We would permit the federal government to acquire sufficient interest to bring the project up to 50 per cent Canadian ownership.

I am opposed to the assumption that underlies the federal government's attempt to take a straight 25 per cent ownership of projects. It is typical of the attitude that the federal government has always adopted when dealing with the north. Federal governments have rarely demonstrated any real sensitivity to the needs of the north. Federal governments have always, throughout the history of the north, taken the major revenues for themselves and prevented northerners from attaining any degree of control over their own future.

For more than 100 years, political and economic developments in the territorial north have been linked. The nature and establishment of political structure reflected the interest in the north's economic potential for the rest of Canada. When demand for the north's economic resources rose, federal administrative activity and the development of local government increased. When the economic base flagged, the political structures withered and the north, to all intents and purposes, was abandoned by southern Canada. Throughout the period, the essential conflict has been the demand by northerners for a greater measure of self-government and the federal government's reluctance to relinquish ownership and control over the natural resources which would provide the financial base for self-government. Bill C-48 fits into this tradition. It is consistent with the pattern that any time national interest begins to focus on the north, the federal government jumps right in. The only difference this time is that the federal government is being particularly heavy-handed. Bill C-48 will retard the political development that has been so hard won in the north. That is a tragedy.

If you will permit a short review of the history of the north, Mr. Speaker, I will explain why. The Northwest Territories has been defined entirely by the needs of southern Canada. The original territory was composed of the area which now represents present day Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, northern Ontario, northern Quebec and the present Northwest and Yukon Territories. The Northwest Territories, as we now know them, represent land left over when the more economically productive regions that became Alberta and Saskatchewan were carved off in 1905. Its area was further reduced in 1912 when boundary changes extended the northern limits of Ontario, Manitoba and Quebec. The 60th degree of north latitude was established as the northern boundary of the provinces, apparently on the false assumption that it marked the limits of a viable agricultural economy.

In 1898 political and economic factors led to the creation of the Yukon as a separate territory. Thus the Northwest Territories, as now constituted, emerged as a residual area with little apparent economic potential beyond fur trading activity, centred largely around the Mackenzie drainage basin.

If we examine the political evolution of the Northwest Territories, we can identify two distinct phases. The first is characterized by a colonial form of government, permitting little involvement by residents. The second is characterized by limited local participation through the establishment of local territorial councils, composed of appointed or elected members, or both, and allowed some legislative responsibility if Ottawa so chose. The latest development is the settlement of land claims which would enable native northerners to control their own lands and resources as well as their economic and social priorities.

Over the last 100 years, the territories were viewed as unproductive and little attention was paid to them by the government in Ottawa. In the period following confederaiton, the economic activities of the north centred around the fur trade and, to a lesser extent, whaling. Its government was first vested in the federally-appointed lieutenant governor. Gradually, a form of responsible government evolved as the first legislative assembly of the Northwest Territories was created. In time, more and more legislative rights were granted to the assembly until its powers resembled those of the provinces.

In 1905, however, the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan were created from the territories of the northwest. With their departure went the fledgling responsible government. The remaining region reverted to colonial status, fully controlled by an appointed commissioner. There was no provision for elected representation. This totally colonial situation remained until 1951, which is only 30 years ago.

The attitude of the federal government during the period can be politely described as that of benign neglect. The provision of most services historically lagged behind demand.

This cannot be surprising since there were some years when the territorial council did not meet at all. By default, the administration of the area rested in the hands of the RCMP. Church missions supplied education, health and welfare services. Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent described this phase of southern Canada's attitude toward the north in 1953. He said, "Apparently we have administered these vast territories of the north in an almost continuing state of absence of mind".

Changes came only with the Second World War, when the north became of strategic importance to the federal government. Suddenly roads were built and the level of federal government activity increased. In the face of this new attention, residents of the territories demanded to be allowed to participate in the process of change which they could see taking place. They won their first battle when, in 1947, the Northwest Territories was permitted to send its first representatives to Parliament. A second milestone was reached in 1951 when three members of council were elected rather than appointed. At last, a hint of responsible government returned to the Northwest Territories, just 84 years behind the rest of the country. In fact, if my memory serves me correctly, Canadian voters in the eastern Arctic did not have an opportunity to vote until 1961.

Little more was accomplished until the decade of the sixties. In quick succession the rules were changed permitting more and more members of council to be elected. The direct influence of Ottawa diminished accordingly. By 1970 local government was permitted to take responsibility for such services as education, welfare and municipal affairs. This was a period when southern Canada's interest in the north was almost entirely absent.

Although there seemed to be momentum for the development of local government, there was at that time, however, another factor that came into play. Oil and gas were discovered in the high Arctic. Energy reserves in the north became a subject of national interest. The federal government was forced to alter its time-honoured approach to the north. Benign neglect would no longer do. Active control, and in the case of Bill C-48 outright confiscation, rules the day.

By the middle of the 1970s, ten government departments were well and truly entrenched in the north. Understandably, the territorial government viewed their activities with distrust. Such a strong federal presence trampled the efforts to develop a local system of government and the residents objected strenuously. In the face of such opposition, the federal government was forced to pass legislation to strengthen the territorial council. In 1974, it finally became a fully elected body.

It is clear from this history that all federal initiatives have been related to demand for northern resources. I should point out that the network of roads in the Yukon, the construction of the railway north to Pine Point, and the construction of the Mackenzie and Dempster Highways, were all linked to actual or impending resource development.

• (1650)

Today, Mr. Speaker, local government in the north has become fairly sophisticated. Its legislative powers are similar to those of the provinces, with some major exceptions. The most important one is that the territories have no ability to exert any fiscal authority, the power to decide how revenues can be spent. In addition all natural resources, with the exception of game, remain the exclusive responsibility of the federal government. Those resources, of course, include land, and in the Yukon it is impossible or very difficult for Yukoners to buy a piece of land even to build their homes.

While residents are proud of the political status they have achieved, their ability to govern themselves is still severely limited by these unfair constraints. Because they have no control over, and receive no royalties from, the development of their natural resources, they lack an adequate revenue base to sustain their local government and the goal of eventual provincial status.

As I wrote in a report on the social and economic impacts of the proposed Foothills pipeline in 1974, the NWT's major sources of revenue came from private sector licence fees in a region where government is the biggest business; a fuel tax in a region where gasoline can cost twice as much as in the south; a liquor tax in a region where alcohol abuse is rampant; and a general sales tax in a region where a major sector of the population exists below the poverty level.

Today, northerners still lack the right to set their fiscal priorities or decide how their tax dollars are spent, and they still lack the resource revenues to sustain any hope of self-government. The Arctic of Canada remains a colonial Arctic. At the same time it has a growing population, with rising expectations resulting from resource development which is creating an unprecedented level of demand for services, services which the territories do not have the fiscal power to provide for themselves. This is the situation which now faces the north. This is the situation that Bill C-48 is only going to make worse.

My party supports the objective of achieving provincial status for the Yukon. We support a strong system of local government for the Northwest Territories. But self-government will remain an impossible dream for the north as long as the federal government continues to regard the region as a colony ripe for exploitation. The north will be a colony until the federal government allows it to have a more equitable share of resource revenues and grants Canadians in the north the same rights and privileges as southern Canadians enjoy.

It is not too late for the federal government to change. It is my hope that the federal government will learn from the lessons of history and pass legislation that will be sensitive to the needs of the north, more specifically, legislation that will not retard the political development of the north.

I do not believe this is too much to ask for. It is not too much to expect that the government will live up to the priorities that it set for itself in 1972 when the current Minister of Justice (Mr. Chrétien) was Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. In outlining his objectives at the time, the minister stated that he considered the needs of the people his top priority, taking precedence over everything else, including resource development. That was nine years ago and I think now is a very appropriate time to remind this government of that philosophy, because that philosophy of the people is not reflected in Bill C-48.

In concluding, I would urge the government to give favourable consideration to Motion No. 21. I would also urge the government to rethink its attitude to the north and to consider the implication of its policies. The federal government made the error of withholding the resource revenues from Alberta and Saskatchewan until 1930, 25 years after they became provinces. This was clearly unjust. I ask it now to promote and encourage the development of self-government in the north, rather than impede it, as Bill C-48 is bound to do.

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, in rising to speak on this motion I would like to impress upon members opposite the fundamental significance of this bill and of the debate which is taking place at this time in the House of Commons. I cast my mind back some 23 or 24 years when the government of the Right Hon. John Diefenbaker had a vision of the north and developed the theme "Roads to Resources". It is amazing how that caught on with the Canadian public. He and that government had a vision. Fortunately for us we still have members in this House who were a part of that government, and I am sure they could speak more eloquently of what the right hon. gentleman had in mind at that time.

One of the idiosyncracies of it all is that the present Liberal government also has a vision of the north, but it is entirely different. It is not a vision to allow that part of our country to develop and grow on its own strength, but rather to use that northern part of our country as it has been trying to use western Canada—to establish its own strength.

I believe the reflection of gold in the eyes of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) obstructs his view. He does not have an adequate understanding of what the potential is in that part of the country. Otherwise, he would not be stripping it, as he is trying to strip western Canada, of its strength.

We would have had an energy agreement long ago had we not had that election, because the Clark government had an agreement with the province of Alberta. Because the present minister had different ideas from those of the Conservative government of that day, the agreement was 18 months late and this country has suffered severely for those 18 months. I honestly believe we would not have an agreement yet had it not been for the fact that a budget had to be presented by the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen). I am sure the minister would rather have waited until after the constitutional matter had been settled. He would then have moved entirely into the western Canada domain.

May I call it five o'clock?

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[Translation]

QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order please. It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 40, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the hon. member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson)—Pipelines—Alaska Gas Pipeline—Query respecting completion of project—Exports of gas to United States; the hon. member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor)—Housing—Registered Home Ownership Program—Request that maximum permissible level of savings be raised; the hon. member for York-Peel (Mr. Stevens)—VIA Rail—Court actions seeking injunction to halt cancellation of services—Request that minister give financial assistance to groups taking court action.

It being five o'clock, the House will now proceed to the consideration of private members' business as listed on today's Order Paper, namely, notices of motions and public bills.

The hon. member for Vaudreuil on a point of order.

* * *

[English]

POINT OF ORDER

MR. HERBERT—PROCEDURE FOR CALLING PRIVATE MEMBERS' BILLS

Mr. Hal Herbert (Vaudreuil): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. This is the first opportunity I have had to raise this matter since private members' proceedings last Friday afternoon. It deals with the Order Paper itself and what I think is now incorrect information on the Order Paper, as well as the procedure last Friday during private members' hour which has caused me some personal embarrassment.

On Friday at four o'clock the Acting Speaker said:

It being four o'clock, the House will now proceed to the consideration of private members' business as listed on today's order paper—

That is what you have just said. Following that, Hansard reads, without explanation:

● (1700)

Items Nos. 18 to 156 inclusive on the order paper allowed to stand by unanimous consent.

The House proceeded at that point with item No. 159 on the Order Paper. The procedure we have always followed in private members' hour is that the business would proceed strictly as listed and the Chair would call the appropriate items in the order they are listed.

As you are aware, Mr. Speaker, at the start of every session we have a draw which determines the order of listing on the Order Paper. On Friday, by passing to item No. 159 under private members' bills, 56 bills were passed over. In fact, 59 bills in total were passed over, and of those 59 bills, four were standing in my name. One of those 59 bills was in the name of a senator and two of them were in the name of a cabinet minister. On this point, Your Honour might perhaps consider whether we can leave these listings on the Order Paper because it would imply that either a senator or members of cabinet have the right to proceed in private members' business.

To return to the bills standing in my name, in the view of my constituents these bills were sufficiently important for me to proceed with them. The first one dealt with the Bank Act, a subject of current interest because of high interest rates and large bank profits. The second bill deals with the Criminal Code as it relates to abortion control. The third bill deals with Crown corporations and their responsibility to Parliament and the public. The fourth bill deals with the cost of publishing public reports.

Needless to say, I have many other bills on the Order Paper dealing with a variety of subjects, but it is these four bills which were passed over last Friday which has given the public the impression that I was not serious about these bills or I was not ready to proceed.

Mr. Deans: What is your point of order?

Mr. Herbert: I am coming to it, if you will be patient. No one called me, Mr. Speaker, to ask if I wanted to move second reading of one of my bills, and after a check with one of my colleagues who also had bills passed over, he was not called to ask if he wanted to proceed with his bills either.

Let me clarify precisely what I believe the procedure should have been on Friday, Mr. Speaker, which would have clearly indicated to the public what transpired.

Mr. Deans: Surely this is not a point of order.

Mr. Nielsen: It is an abuse of the time of the House.

Mr. Herbert: The fourth item of business on Friday was in the name of the hon. member who eventually proceeded, and that item of business had to do with the Post Office. He did not want to proceed on that matter at that time. I have no objection whatsoever to the member in question proceeding with another bill. I am not dealing with what was debated on Friday; I am dealing with the Order Paper procedure. I suggest that what we should have done on Friday was, instead of just writing into the record on page 12143 of Hansard that items 18 to 156 on the Order Paper—

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. The hon. gentleman is using up the time of the House. He knows that the time limitation placed on debate by the rules expires at five minutes to six. He is deliberately attempting to go over that time in order to avoid being embarrassed again as he was—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. The hon. member for York East.

Point of Order—Mr. Herbert

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, I have not finished my question of privilege.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The hon. member for Yukon.

Mr. Nielsen: My question of privilege affects the rights of every private member in this House. The private members' hour is a rare privilege. We get only two hours a week for this purpose. That hon. gentleman is abusing the rules of the House by deliberately running out the time here. The Chair should step in and protect the rights of private members.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. The hon. member for York East.

Mr. Collenette: I did not want to rise, Mr. Speaker, but the hon. member for Yukon has made a statement which cannot be allowed to stand in the record of this House. He has imputed motives to my hon. friend for Vaudreuil, one of the most diligent members of this House who uses private members' hour regularly for the purpose for which it was intended. I ask him to withdraw his statement. He imputed motives; he said that the member for Vaudreuil is deliberately wasting time. To make an accusation of that kind about any member is bad.

Mr. Deans: You are doing it now.

Mr. Collenette: The hon. member for Vaudreuil is acknowledged on all sides of the House as being someone who is sincere in his use of private members' hour. I take great umbrage to the House leader for the opposition using that phrase and I ask him to withdraw it. Because we cannot proceed.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, I not only refuse to withdraw it, I will expand it by saying that the hon. member for Vaudreuil is misusing private members' hour; and the hon. member who has just resumed his seat has similarly abused the time of the House.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nielsen: He has succeeded by going over the time now.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please.

[Translation]

Mr. Gérald Laniel (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) has spoken somewhat hastily as far as the Standing Orders of the House are concerned. I know we all have a vested interest in the private members' hour but it should be remembered that if consideration of the motion now before the House is not completed by the end of the sitting it will remain on the Order Paper and debate may continue some other day. So there is no question of abuse. In any case, the Standing Orders provide that when debate on such motions exceeds the private members' hour, they are allowed to stand. This is the second time we are debating the motion. Furthermore, if the hon. member for Vaudreuil (Mr. Herbert), whose argument and interpretation of what happened last Friday I cannot quite accept, is rising on a question of privilege today, it is certainly not the first time. He has done so on several occasions, and I could mention here a decision by the Chair, one of your distinguished predecessors, the Acting Speaker, handed down on December 5, 1977, concerning the business of the House during private members' hour, and if the then Acting Speaker took the trouble to hand down a three-page decision to clarify the proceedings for the guidance of hon. members and to reach a conclusion which may be somewhat different from that of the hon. member for Vaudreuil—I refer the hon. members for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) and Hamilton-Mountain (Mr. Deans) to that decision concerning private members' business.

However, I do not want to go on about this decision, it is there for all members to read and can only help to improve proceedings during private member's hour. Meanwhile, may I remind the hon. member that absolutely nothing is taken away. Questions of privilege and points of order are being raised constantly in this House, and if there is any abuse of the democratic process, it is coming from the opposite side.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. The House was listening to the hon. member for Vaudreuil on a point of order. It has been brought to my attention by the Clerk of the House—and perhaps I could direct the attention of the hon. member to this—that all orders preceding No. 159 were allowed to stand by unanimous consent of the House. From what the hon. member was saying earlier, I gathered he was not satisfied with the manner in which the House proceeded with calling the bills. However, since this was done by unanimous consent I do not think it can be challenged by the hon. member. Therefore, the point of order cannot be pursued.

• (1710)

Mr. Collenette: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. With all due respect, you did not deal with the question of privilege which was at hand, and I submit it should be dealt with immediately. The hon. member for Yukon made a terrible accusation of an hon. member in this House, and it must be dealt with before any other matter.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): I do not have the blues, but the charge which was alleged to have been made and which has been requested to be withdrawn was to the effect of obstructing the work of the House, if I understand correctly.

Beauchesne's fourth edition, Citation 154(5) at page 130 is as follows:

> It is not unparliamentary to say that a statement is untrue, but it is unparliamentary to say that it was untrue to the knowledge of the member addressing the House.

I am sorry, I have quoted the wrong paragraph. According to paragraph (4):

> It is not out of order to say that a member has obstructed the business of the House, or that a speech is an abuse of the rules of the House.

I do not assume there is a question of privilege but, after referring to the blues, if tomorrow the hon. member feels that he was accused wrongly, he can bring the matter up with Madam Speaker at the proper time. I find that there is no question of privilege.

Mr. Herbert: Mr. Speaker, I agree 100 per cent with what you have said but, because of the interruption, I did not come to my point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): I suggest that be done forthwith.

Mr. Herbert: It certainly will. I suggest we did not follow on Friday a former procedure we have used in this House by which we substitute—this is on the record, and I can refer Your Honour to the page—one motion for another motion or one bill for another bill, dropping a member's bill down to a position where he has his second bill, thus making it clear to everyone that we have changed the position of two bills. This is the procedure we have followed in the past. I suggest this is the procedure we should have followed on Friday.

Furthermore, three of the first four bills which were referred to on Friday are marked "text received" by Your Honour's own ruling. By the ruling of the Chair bills which were not printed were to be dropped from the Order Paper but, in all fairness to the members who were submitting bills, some time was to be allowed so that where they had submitted texts, these texts could be studied and eventually the bills could be printed. If three of the first four bills in this particular grouping are still marked "text received", that means they have not been printed. Therefore, the rest of us have no knowledge of their contents. I suggest it is now time that where they were marked in that fashion, they should be dropped from the Order Paper in the same fashion that bills where no texts have been submitted are dropped from the Order Paper.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The hon. member may have a personal grievance about the manner in which it was done, but I must remind him that this could have been raised on Friday before unanimous consent was given. Again I remind the hon. member that I cannot entertain this point of order. I think it is a grievance. Perhaps it is a very legitimate personal grievance, but it certainly is not a point of order at this time.

Mr. Herbert: I must reserve my right to rise on a question of privilege on Monday.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): That will be taken under advisement.

MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

[English]

Item No. 22 allowed to stand by unanimous consent.

ORDERS IN COUNCIL MADE PURSUANT TO CANADA-UNITED STATES AUTOMOTIVE AGREEMENT

The House resumed, from Thursday, October 9, 1980, consideration of the motion of Mr. Herbert:

That an humble address be presented to His Excellency praying that he will cause to be laid before this House copies of all Orders in Council since 1965 relative to the remission of duties under the Automotive Agreement.

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Mr. Speaker, I am surprised that the hon. member for Vaudreuil (Mr. Herbert) would delay the bringing on of this matter because it is very important to the House. The motion refers to all orders in council since 1965 relative to the remission of duties—taxes—under the automotive agreement, which is the auto pact.

I enjoyed working with the hon. member for Vaudreuil on the task force on fiscal federalism. He and I worked very closely together during the period from April to July 24. One of the reasons that task force was successful was that the hon. member for Vaudreuil was able, through a number of Order Paper questions, motions for the production of documents and so forth, to supply to the committee, as a result of his own personal research, information about transfers from the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, about language training program costs, educational and medical expense matters and a great deal of other valuable information. It is in that context that I think we must support the hon. member for Vaudreuil to make sure this vital information with respect to taxes, the payment of duties under the auto pact and the remission of those duties is brought to the attention of the public.

We all know there are four companies—and that is all—which can benefit under the auto pact arrangements. Those companies are General Motors, Chrysler, Ford and American Motors. Those companies are able to bring into Canada auto parts and new automobiles duty free on the basis that they manufacture in Canada to a certain criteria under the auto pact. They therefore can import duty free and for their own benefit. Occasionally they cannot keep to the terms of the auto pact and therefore somewhere along the line a duty remission order—a special order in council—is passed for their benefit.

These automobile companies are not entirely charitable institutions. They charge the people of Canada a pretty good price for their product. Yet they are manufacturers in Canada and should pay the same taxes as anyone else. The auto pact gives them a great advantage over manufacturers in other fields, and people wonder why the auto pact was not complied with. My constituents and, I am sure, the constituents of other hon. members wonder about that.

Duty remission orders are given to these automobile companies to protect them from violations of the auto pact. It is only fitting and proper that the Parliament of Canada should know about that remission of tax because when a taxpayer gets a special deal, we as Members of Parliament who are responsible to our constituents want to be able to say that that special deal was justified. We want to hear the government say it was justified. The government is responsible to this House of Commons for taxes and moneys raised.

If we do not have a sense of fairness with respect to taxes in our society, then there will be people who will say that some taxpayers are treated better than others. I am sure the government would not want that to be the feeling. The government should be happy to comply with the requirement of making information with respect to duty remission orders public.

Mr. Laniel: They are public.

Mr. Blenkarn: If they are public, why are we having this debate? They should have been released. Why have they not been released? That is the reason for this debate. They are not public.

Mr. Laniel: We have never refused.

Mr. Blenkarn: Obviously there must have been a refusal, or the matter would not be on the Order Paper for debate. That is why we are debating this matter, and that is why the information had better be produced. If they are public documents, and I am glad to hear they are, perhaps they should have been supplied. This motion is a result of the refusal to supply. I am sure the hon. member for Vaudreuil would not make a useless motion in this House. I have worked with him on a task force and I know he would not do that.

• (1720)

The hon. member for Vaudreuil should have an apology. He certainly would not come to this House after 45 minutes' debate previously and allow the motion to come on again in order to waste the time of the House if the material was already available. It is not available to me, and I want to see it.

I came to this private member's hour to find out about that material. I want to be sure, when one taxpayer is getting a benefit and another taxpayer is not, that we know the reason. I also want to know what benefits that taxpayer is getting over other taxpayers. That is what a duty remission is all about. That material must be made public.

Before I finish on this matter, I wish to move, seconded by the hon. member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen):

That pursuant to Standing Order 6 this House continue to sit through the dinner hour this day for the purpose of considering the business now before the House.

I say that in view of the time that has been spent and to get over the 45 minutes under this motion, because if the matter is completed today at least we will get something completed on the Order Paper and have this matter attended to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The hon. member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans).

An hon. Member: What about the motion?

Mr. Laniel: Mr. Speaker, to implement this motion—

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Laniel: Mr. Speaker, I request that the Chair read the Standing Order so that everyone here knows how the rule applies.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The Chair will have to be guided as to who is in favour of defending this motion. All those who propose the motion will please say yea. All those who oppose the motion will please stand.

All those who support the motion will please rise.

The motion has been defeated. The motion has been withdrawn.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, that certainly was an exercise to behold. I cannot for the life of me understand what happened to the yeas and nays and all those other little things. I was told when I took on this responsibility that it was a learning experience and it certainly is. No wonder the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) has taken ill!

In any event, I want to speak to the motion before us. I ask the hon. member who is promoting and sponsoring the motion why the motion is before the House. It certainly is a puzzle to me. I read the motion. It tells me that the member wants to have produced to the House all of the orders in council since 1965 relative to the remission of duties under the automotive agreement.

I know that hon. member follows the proceedings of this House diligently. I point out to him that on July 17, 1980 I put on the notice paper question No. 1,457 which reads:

What are the details of each motor vehicle general remissions order granted to the automotive industry between 1965 and June 1980?

The second part of my question read:

Since the inception of the auto pact in 1965, what were the details of each order in council issued regarding the performance requirements of the automotive agreement?

Subsequent to that I asked another question, No. 1,460 of July 17, 1980:

1. From 1965 to June 1980 how many orders in council were issued affecting Chrysler and its subsidiaries operating in Canada and what was the actual wording of each order in council?

2. What amount of customs duty was remitted for each order submitted concerning Chrysler and its subsidiaries?

3. What were the commitments from Chrysler and its subsidiaries in exchange for remitting each customs duty?

4. Did Chrysler and its subsidiaries meet each commitment?

On July 17, 1980 I asked question No. 1,461:

1. From 1965 to June 1980, how many orders in council were issued affecting American Motors and its subsidiaries operating in Canada and what was the actual wording of each order in council?

2. What amount of customs duty was remitted for each order submitted concerning American Motors and its subsidiaries?

3. What were the commitments from American Motors and its subsidiaries in exchange for remitting each customs duty?

4. Did American Motors and its subsidiaries meet each commitment?

I suggest to the hon. member who has asked that this matter be proceeded with today that there is a remarkable similarity between the matter we are debating and the questions that I placed on the Order Paper.

Frankly, I feel compelled to support the hon. member in his quest because it strikes me as passing strange that a member of the government backbench, who stands and supports the government at every turn, even to the extent of embarrassing himself by voting against motions that he himself has promoted, a member who I know is committed to the government and has done everything he possibly can to support the government, cannot get answers to his questions.

It is odd indeed if a member like myself can ask the same questions and be given the answers while this fine, upstanding Liberal backbencher is refused. It is disturbing that I can be asking the questions and receiving the answers, the very answers that the hon. member is seeking, and he cannot.

When you stop to think about it, Mr. Speaker, there is one of two things happening here today. Either that member is being denied access to information which is available to all other hon. members, or else he is wasting the time of private members' hour. It is one or the other.

I ask hon. members to consider what they would prefer to think was happening. Would they prefer the public of Canada to believe that this member was not being given acess to information readily available to all other hon. members? Would they like the public to think that this member was being ostracized by the cabinet and government of this country? He is not being given access to information which is vital while all other members of the House have access to that information.

Or would they prefer the public to think that this member was simply wasting the time of the House? I know he would not waste the time of the House. I just know that would not be the reason for this debate taking place. Therefore I assume, and I hope rightly, that his reason for continuing this debate today is because he, an upstanding member of the Liberal party, having asked for this information, has been denied the very information that was made available to me. Therefore, it is an obligation on the part of each and every member to stand in his or her place and vote in favour of providing that member with the information. I think that is important. In fact, we should have that vote now so the member can get this information, rather than taking any longer on this. I know it is available.

● (1730)

An hon. Member: Let us vote.

Mr. Deans: Quite frankly, I would be prepared to share the information with the member and let him read my copy. However, I know he would like to have a copy of his own. I do not know what he is going to do with it, but I know he would want it.

I say to the members of the House that they have to stop closing this member out. They have to let him into the inner circles of the government. They have to give him access to information. They have that obligation. They heckle me at a time like this when their own member is in despair and unable to gain access to documents.

I see a genuine concern on the part of every member on this side of the House and a desire to support the hon. member for Vaudreuil (Mr. Herbert). I say to him, "We support you. We want you to have this. If you move the motion and get on with the vote, we would be delighted with this or some other appropriate measure being taken to have this vote taken so that this nasty government, which refuses to give him information, will be forced to do so". It is a shame. It also speaks directly, I might say, to the principle of freedom of information. This fine, outstanding member who desperately needs this information, to the point of taking up the time of the House for yet another hour, is being denied by the ministry rightful access to information. I say to you it is mind-boggling.

In any event, Mr. Speaker, I urge you to allow this matter to come to a vote quickly in order that the hon. member not be denied access to information any longer.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): None of us will speak until we have the vote.

Mr. Deans: If there is one member of the House who is denied access to information that is available to all other members, that is a very serious matter. In fact, I am surprised that the hon. member, in whose name this motion stands, has not risen on a point of privilege to demand that he be given the exact same rights and privileges as the rest of us.

When he rose at the beginning of the private members' hour, I felt confident that he was rising simply to demand that rights and privileges given generously to everyone else be accorded to him as a member. Mr. Speaker, if you would permit a vote to take place now, I would yield my spot to allow it to take place. I say to the member, "No wonder you are disaffected, no wonder you are disenchanted, no wonder you are angry with this government and no wonder you are thinking of quitting". If I were a Liberal backbencher and were denied what others had, I would feel the same way.

Mr. Ralph Ferguson (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, when this motion was previously discussed, frequent reference was made to the automotive agreement and to the various studies and reports which had been made on the industry in the last few years.

It was pointed out that the automotive industry is in a period of very rapid technological change, and the suggestion was made that the automotive agreement was obsolete and inadequate. I would like to suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that the research done by the two members who spoke previously is obsolete and inadequate or perhaps inexistent. On page 2231 of Hansard the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce said:

> Madam Speaker, the documents requested by the hon. member for Vaudreuil (Mr. Herbert) are very voluminous and would require a lot of time and a lot of public funds to prepare. So I would ask the hon. member for Vaudreuil (Mr. Herbert) to withdraw his motion.

At page 3550 of Hansard, the hon. member for Vaudreuil is reported as saying:

> As a result of the calling of this motion today, I have had meetings with the officials of the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and have reviewed with them the 115 orders in council which have been passed in the intervening 15 years. They made interesting reading. I have several copies with me. Of those 115 orders in council, 67 were passed to take care of companies that were not in existence in 1965 and, therefore, could not benefit from the agreement. Of those 67, 35 companies are still operational.

I submit, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. member has seen these papers. They are available for inspection by individual members, and therefore they are public.

An hon. Member: You are the one wasting the public's money.

Mr. Ferguson: Before coming to a discussion of the orders in council which are called for in the motion, it is probably appropriate to spend a few minutes considering not only the automotive agreement itself, but also the suitability of that agreement in terms of the automotive industry as it is emerging in Canada and in the world today.

Prior to the implementation of the automotive agreement, the Canadian automotive industry had experienced the problems of manufacturing for the limited Canadian market.

Canadian vehicle manufacturers were producing a wide variety of models, with a total production volume of only 600,000 vehicles annually. It resulted in higher costs in both assembly and manufacturing operations than those experienced by their parent companies.

As a consequence of these higher sales, the motor vehicle industry in Canada came to rely on imported components. Faced with a declining market in Canada, Canadian parts manufacturers and producers found it increasingly difficult to meet the United States competition. Canadian content in motor vehicles production in Canada was not growing, and imports of vehicles and parts were increasing rapidly. By 1964, Canada had a trade deficit of over $500 million in automotive products with the United States. The Canadian government, in an effort to encourage specialization and exports to the United States, introduced in the fall of 1963 a duty remission scheme for imports based on export performance. Exports to the United States under this program could have been subject to countervailing duties.

Discussions were therefore held with the United States. The outcome of these discussions was the Canada-United States automotive agreement, signed by Prime Minister Pearson, a Liberal Prime Minister, and President Johnson, on January 16, 1965. The agreement sets forth three broad objectives.

First, the creation of a broad market for automotive parts where the full benefits of specialization and large-scale production can be achieved. Second, the liberalization of United States and Canadian automotive trade in respect of tariff barriers and other factors tending to impede it, with a view to enabling the industries of both countries to participate on a fair and equitable basis in the expanding total market of the two countries. Third, the development of conditions in which market forces may operate effectively to attain the most economic pattern of investment of production and trade.

It is recognized that it would be necessary to take into account the institutional barriers to trade, arising out of the corporate structure of the industries, as well as formal governmental barriers, if Canadian industry were to be able to participate effectively in the United States market. In recognition of the differences in size, strength and degree of development of the automotive industry in Canada and United States, conditions were established for Canadian manufacturers to ensure that Canada would derive real and reciprocal benefits on a fair and equitable basis. The conditions are as follows: first, for each class of vehicle, for example, cars, pickups or buses, the ratio of Canadian vehicle production to vehicle sales in Canada achieved by a manufacturer during each model year, expressed in net sales value, must be at least 75 per cent or the percentage achieved in the 1964 model year, whichever was the highest. Second, the Canadian content, with value added that is, in vehicles produced in Canada by a manufacturer—with each vehicle type again taken individually—must be no less than the absolute dollar amount achieved in the 1964 model year.

● (1740)

In addition to these conditions within the agreement, two additional commitments to the Canadian government were incorporated within separate letters of undertaking. These two commitments are, first, to increase value added in Canada in each model year by an amount equal to 60 per cent of the growth in the value of car sales in Canada, and 50 per cent in the case of commercial vehicles: and second, over and above the value added floor stipulated in the intergovernmental agreement and the value added growth arising from increased vehicle sales in Canada covered by the letters of undertaking, there should be a supplementary increase in the Canadian value added of $260 million, or U.S. $241 million, by the manufacturers, in the aggregate, by the end of the 1968 model year.

The United States limited the duty-free entry of automotive imports to Canada, putting the United States in breach of its most favoured nation undertaking in GATT. The United States accordingly sought and obtained a waiver from its GATT partners. The agreement is thus bilateral on the United States side, but on the Canadian side, qualified Canadian manufacturers can import automotive products duty free from any country whose exports are entitled to most favoured nation tariff treatment.

The integration and rationalization of the Canadian and United States automotive industries resulting from the implementation of the agreement has been to the mutual advantage of both countries. In Canada, efficiency gains were realized from economics of scale that were made possible from the reductions in the number of model lines. The degree to which the Canadian industry has become competitive with its U.S. counterpart is evident from the production trend. Output increased from 671,000 units in 1964 to a peak of 1.82 million in 1978, an increase of 171 per cent. Employment in the same period increased by about 711 per cent from 69,000 to 118,-000. It is estimated employment increased by some 30,000 in the related services and supplies industries.

Total automotive trade between Canada and the United States was $22.6 billion in 1980 compared to $796 million in 1964. Over the same period, Canadian exports of automotive products increased from about $100 million to $10 billion. The Canadian trade position changed from a $711 million deficit in 1965 to a surplus of $198 million in 1971 and has since then reversed, with a deficit of $2.0 billion in 1980.

The industry in North America is in the throes of a major readjustment. The factors which have led to this readjustment are many but the most obvious are rising gasoline prices and actual gasoline shortages in the U.S. Consumers are now demanding the smaller, lighter weight, more fuel-efficient vehicles. The industry was unable to revamp its entire manufacturing operations in step with consumer demand. As a result, offshore producers, principally the Japanese, were able to establish a very substantial foothold in the market.

I would not wish to leave the impression that these are the only significant events. Price competition, perceived differences in quality and performance, have all contributed to the situation, as well as major technological change involving emission control, improved engine performance and weight reduction. The cost to the North American industry to introduce these new technologies and convert existing facilities to the new generation of vehicles has been estimated to be in excess of $80 billion. This, coming at a time of high inflation and with high interest rates, has added to the burdens faced by the industry. What now appears to be emerging is an industry that is in the process of modernization, that is becoming more efficient and producing competitive vehicles.

This tremendous upheaval in the industry has upset existing sourcing patterns; not all of the established suppliers have been able to adjust to the change and some have gone out of business, but new suppliers are emerging.

I have outlined this background because without it it is difficult to understand why Canada has not adopted a different posture with respect to the automotive agreement. This government initiated consultation with the Americans under the agreement in April, 1980. The new U.S. administration is committed to continuing consultation on automotive matters.

There has been a primary concern within these consultations relating to the need for a return to health of the North American industry as a whole, and of course there were consultations on a broad range of specific issues including Japanese imports, the arrangements we made with Ford and, more recently, the remission program for Volkswagen.

Thus, even though our preoccupations have been the Canadian industry and how it performs, the government recognizes that the Canadian industry is a part of the world automotive industry and we cannot consider our problems in isolation from what is happening in the industry worldwide.

The automotive agreement has, I believe, provided an excellent framework which we must now build around to accommodate the emerging new industry. The Volkswagen arrangement encompasses much of what the government sees as being the way of the future.

Orders in council to bring about adjustment to the automotive agreement where it involved Canada's implementation of that agreement are therefore a necessary part of the administrative process. There has been no attempt to conceal the decisions which have been taken, and in fact it occurs to me that many of the automotive issues have been aired quite frequently, not only in this House but also in the press and other media, including the Hansard record to which I already referred.

[Translation]

Mr. Gérald Laniel (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, so many untruths have been told in the House this afternoon that I cannot allow this debate to end without pointing them out. I could follow in the footsteps of my distinguished colleague who has just given us some more details on the background and objectives of the automotive agreement, but I would rather explore another avenue, which may help our hon. colleagues to understand what the automotive agreement is about, and why the government must act by order in council to make sure that the automotive industry is most beneficial to the Canadian economy.

I think a few examples would illustrate what I mean. The automotive agreement must be implemented so as to respect the interests of Canada. Although all the provisions of the agreement are clearly indicated in the 1965 Auto Pact, no provision could be made at that time to ensure some flexibility in its implementation and that is why the government is proceeding by order in council. I would invite my hon. colleagues to consider the situation of various companies who have sought orders in council from the government. Chrysler, Ford and Volkswagen came to Canada to make investments or a commitment to become more involved in the development of our country, with a degree of flexibility guaranteed by an order in council within the framework of the auto pact.

Mr. Speaker, if we refer to the order in council concerning Chrysler mentioned earlier in this debate, we can see that it was not penalized for not achieving its production-sales ratio. That charge was levelled at Chrysler regarding its production of commercial vehicles during the seventies. Instead, the government asked Chrysler to compensate for its shortfall by investing in a new truck plant in Windsor. The long-term economic impact of this investment in terms of employment, income and taxes has been far greater than the short-term effects would have been if we had asked Chrysler to pay back the remission of duty it had been allowed. This specific situation required an order in council. However, the order did not provide for further benefits for Chrysler and did not change the requirements concerning its participation in the auto pact.

There have always been some consumers who prefer to buy imports. To help Canada benefit from the sales of these cars, the government has tried through a customs duty remission program to urge foreign automobile manufacturers to purchase some of the parts for their cars in Canada. The initial program required that parts bought in Canada return to Canada in assembled cars. The program was then extended so that the remission would apply on the basis of parts purchased in Canada and used for vehicle manufacturing whether the vehicles come back to Canada or not.

Since some believe that the government is making changes to the automobile agreement without full knowledge of the facts, the government has insisted on justifying its decisions and revealing as many facts as possible. I am referring to the announcement made by the hon. Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Gray) on January 5 concerning the conditional amendments to the ratio applicable to the Ford company. On that occasion, the minister gave full details about the advantages which would result from the agreement and he clearly indicated the conditions Ford had to meet if it wanted to continue to participate in the automobile agreement.

Mr. Nielsen: Six o'clock!

Mr. Laniel: I should—but the hon. member does not want explanations, he does not want to understand the problem, he is not interested in the automobile industry as far as I can see. Mr. Speaker, the requirements have been clearly outlined, and they may not have satisfied the hon. member for Hamilton-Mountain (Mr. Deans), but it still remains that the government has not been afraid—

• (1750)

[English]

Mr. Deans: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I wish to draw Your Honour's attention and ask you to review the content of the hon. member's participation this afternoon. At the beginning of his speech, he made the point that many untruths were uttered here this afternoon. Since I was one of only three members who had spoken prior to his speaking, I wish to make it clear that I reserve my right to challenge that statement tomorrow at an appropriate time, once I have had an opportunity to review the blues, or I ask the hon. member to withdraw that statement now rather than have the matter raised again tomorrow.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please.

Mr. Laniel: On a point of order—

[Translation]

On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I think this will be an easy one for you. It has been said that there is nothing worse than people who do not want to understand, but indeed there is worse still—people who do not want to listen. If only the hon. member for Hamilton Mountain had been listening earlier when my colleague behind me had the floor. My colleague gave clear and unequivocal answers to the questions raised by the hon. member. Before seeking the floor in the House, the hon. member had not even gone to the trouble of examining the file and reading the first hour of debate when even the hon. member for Vaudreuil admitted that he had had access to the 115 orders in council of the government. The hon. member is here to confirm that and it is,—

[English]

Mr. Speaker, I wish to quote, as I hope the hon. member wants to know the truth—

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I know that you are fully aware of the fact—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. I thought the hon. parliamentary secretary had the floor on precisely that question of privilege.

Mr. Deans: Well, he was not dealing with it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Therefore, I have to hear the hon. member out.

Mr. Laniel: Mr. Speaker, to reply to the hon. member concerning one of his assertions accusing me of imputing motives, or of implying that hon. members did not tell the truth, I say that he did not tell the truth as it is. In answer, let me point out to the hon. member that on October 9, 1980, as reported on page 3550 of Hansard, the hon. member for Vaudreuil (Mr. Herbert) stated:

> As a result of the calling of this motion today, I have had meetings with the officials of the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and have reviewed with them the 115 orders in council which have been passed in the intervening 15 years. They made interesting reading. I have several copies with me. Of those 115 orders in council, 67 were passed to take care of companies that were not in existence in 1965 and, therefore, could not benefit from the agreement. Of those 67, 35 companies are still operational.

When the hon. member stated today, with tears in his eyes, that we were—

Mr. Nielsen: Filibustering.

Mr. Laniel: —preventing the hon. member for Vaudreuil (Mr. Herbert), from having access to information and documents, he was not telling the truth, because he did not take the trouble to read the speech of the hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Why are you wasting our time, then?

Mr. Deans: I now ask that the hon. member be directed to withdraw that allegation. At no time did I tell anything that was untrue. In fact, if Your Honour recalls, I said that there was only one of two interpretations which could be placed on this motion which was brought before the House. One was that the hon. member had not been given access to the information, and the other was that he was unnecessarily taking up the time of the House. I chose not to believe the latter, since I trusted that the hon. member was honest.

I ask that that unparliamentary remark which was attributed to me be withdrawn now.

Mr. Taylor: Stop wasting our time.

Mr. Laniel: Mr. Speaker, I know the hon. member—

Some hon. Members: Order, order!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The hon. member for Vaudreuil (Mr. Herbert).

Mr. Herbert: Mr. Speaker, let me just clarify a point for the hon. member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans). He talks of two alternatives, but he has forgotten the third alternative. Whatever may be available to me is not necessarily available to the public, and is therefore not in the public domain. He left out that third alternative.

Mr. Deans: Quite possibly, but that does not give him the right to say what he said.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The hon. member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans), in his question of privilege asked that the hon. member withdraw his remarks forthwith. I think that in the context of the debate this afternoon, we hear these charges regularly—

Mr. Deans: No, no.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): —that the hon. member who spoke previously was not stating the facts or that his facts were not true. But I heard no specific charge. If the hon. member feels, after referring to the "blues" and to Hansard tomorrow, that he has been personally accused and he thinks he has a logical question of privilege, he might raise it before Madam Speaker at the proper time.

Some hon. Members: Six o'clock.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. The hour provided for the consideration of private members' business having expired, I do now leave the chair until eight o'clock this evening.

At 6 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 8 p.m.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADA OIL AND GAS ACT

MEASURE RESPECTING OIL AND GAS INTERESTS

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-48, to regulate oil and gas interests in Canada lands and to amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on National Resources and Public Works, and Motions Nos. 21 (Mr. Wilson) and 22 (Mr. Waddell).

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): When the debate was interrupted at five o'clock this afternoon, the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers) had the floor.

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, when I spoke earlier this afternoon I said that part of the problem, not only in this bill but in the over-all oil industry in Canada, is the fact that the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) has had his vision flecked with gold. The government is in such a poor position that the minister thought it was yellow gold, but I am talking about black gold which is pumped out of the ground.

The minister is not seeing the present situation in a realistic manner when he uses confiscation methods. The oil and gas industry has relied primarily on private enterprise to get it to its present point.

Approximately 40 years ago the Premier of Alberta came to eastern Canada to finance the development of the industry in the west. At that time there did not seem to be much interest in it, so the premier approached private developers in the United States. That is one reason why the United States has had such a great interest in the oil and gas industry. But now all of that is changing. As I have said, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources has had his vision smudged with oil, which is unfortunate because, as a consequence, we will all suffer. The idea of having oil self-sufficiency by 1990 is just a myth. It will be pie in the sky if the government continues its present direction.

Massive amounts of money have moved out of the country, both within and outside the oil industry. A reputable firm has estimated that approximately $17 billion a year leaves Canada. A great part of the blame for this can be laid at the door of an unhealthy oil industry. Some oil companies are leaving the country because of the present government's policy, which is resulting in an unhealthy economic community. One cannot have a healthy economic community if the government continues to confiscate by its so-called Canadianization policy.

In actual fact it is nationalizing the industry. This destroys faith in the industry. I would be very close to the right figure if I suggested that the Government of Canada has put about $2 billion of Canadian taxpayers' money into Petro-Canada. This is probably debt money which eventually will have to be paid by the taxpayers. On top of that, $1.5 billion has gone into Petrofina. There is no return on this investment to the Canadian taxpayer or to the Canadian government. However, if private industry had made the investment, there would be a return because that is how private industry operates.

This is the sound basis upon which the industry has been built, but the government sees fit to destroy all of that. It is a shame because Canada's oil and gas industry has come a long way. Canada was on the road to oil self-sufficiency, but the present minister of energy, whose vision is impaired by oil, is destroying all of that. Eventually we will all suffer because of what the government is doing. In fact, we are already suffering.

Not too many years ago when the great Canadian oil sands project was starting to be developed, I had the privilege of meeting with the then president of GCOS. He told me that we did not have the technical knowledge and ability to develop the project the way we should. But we were on the road to accomplishing that in northern Alberta. In order to become energy self-sufficient, that is the direction we have to move. But what is happening today? Not only are we losing oil equipment and the enthusiasm of companies to get projects going, we are losing the technical people who are needed to attain energy self-sufficiency. Anyone in the industry will tell you that it takes two to three years to train someone for these specialized jobs. These things are not being done. Jack Masters, the president of Canadian Hunter Exploration Ltd., and U.S. immigration officials will confirm that there is a stampede of Canada's best oil brains going to the United States. Obviously they are going because it is the closest community where they can find jobs. No doubt they are going because the United States has a vision of self-sufficiency in the not too distant future. In Canada this vision is fading. People are leaving Canada because of the national energy policy which is forcing small independent oil firms to cut costs by laying off their technical staff.

• (2010)

This is wrong, Mr. Speaker. The government is leading us into the position of having one or two mammoth national oil companies in the future. This means there will be no room for these small Canadian companies. Many people do not really understand the oil industry. They think everybody who is associated with the industry is a millionaire, and they relate the industry to multinationals. There are hundreds of small Canadian companies which must be involved in any move toward self-sufficiency in oil or energy in Canada. If we lose them, self-sufficiency will not be attainable by the year 1990.

A reported 25 to 35 Canadian energy companies have opened offices in the nine-state Rocky Mountain region over the past 21 months. This involves people we require in Canada. Mr. Masters went on to say it is, "a panic flood of the best technical people in the Canadian oil industry. They're trying to save their skins, their income and their lifestyle by getting down into the United States." Mr. Masters and other knowledgeable people in the industry fear there may be wholesale lay-offs around the corner.

It will probably take that to bring the present government to the realization that what is happening in the west and northwest is having ripple effects. We lose jobs, equipment and projects, and this means there will be massive lay-offs in eastern Canada. The oil industry is not made up entirely of multinationals; it is not the "Seven Sisters". It is not all made up of service stations and millionaires. The oil industry is made up of men and women with families and small businesses; it is made up of hundreds of small Canadian entrepreneurs. Let me impress upon you, Mr. Speaker, that those entrepreneurs are losing their interest in the industry today. They are just trying to hang on by the skin of their teeth.

Under Bill C-48 we are losing the ability to provide what is required by Canadians. The motion as presented by my colleague, our critic, would provide investment by Canadians in the industry so that they could make the decisions as to the direction and best management of whatever operation is involved. Surely we in Canada have come to the stage in life when we can see the benefits accruing to countries which rely on private enterprise.

I was reading an article the other day which said private industry is just about finished in Sweden. The government bureaucracy is going to take over. Let me assure you that when that happens in any country, its future is beset with problems.

The National Energy Program will result in a loss of jobs in manufacturing plants in central Canada. Jobs will be lost in steel mills and foundries, in plants manufacturing pipes, boilers and pressure vessels, valves, turbines, construction equipment, pumps, compressors and electrical and transportation equipment. Just think of all the trucks manufactured in eastern Canada which will never be sold because of what this government and this minister is doing to the industry in western Canada and the north.

These are just some of the companies for which there is no longer room in the scheme of things the government has embarked upon. Colonial Oil and Gas Ltd. has a 1981 exploration and development budget of $20 million, of which $10 million is earmarked for the United States. Ocelot Industries Ltd. plans to spend half of its $84 million 1981 exploration and development budget in the United States. Bighart Oil and Gas Limited is investing 100 per cent of its 1981 $5 million exploration and development budget in the United States. That company has also opened an office in Texas. Canada Northwest Land Limited will spend 75 per cent of its $7 million or $8 million exploration and development budget in the United States. Canadian Hunter Exploration Ltd. has offices in Houston, Denver and Salt Lake City where it is spending 90 per cent of its 1981 exploration and development budget. Lochiel Exploration Ltd. will spend a third of its $15 million exploration and development budget in the United States. Omega Hydrocarbons Ltd. expects to spend a million in the United States this year. Ram Petroleums Ltd. will spend 90 per cent of its $6 million 1981 exploration and development budget in the United States this year. Rupertsland Resources Ltd. will spend 75 per cent of its $40 million 1981 budget in the United States. PreCambrian Shield Resources will direct 40 per cent of its budget from a Houston, Texas, office. Scepter Resources Ltd. has an office in Colorado, and intends to spend $38 million of a total of $70 million corporate and drilling fund exploration and development budget in the United States. Another $8 million will go toward international plays, and only $24 million will remain in Canada. Prairie Pacific Energy Corporation's $2 million exploration budget goes to the United States.

The list goes on and on and is as long as the list of companies in Canada. They are not looking for oil, and this is what is happening. These are all Canadian companies. What do we have to do to impress upon this minister and the government that we must involve private individuals in Canada in the process, as they were in the past and as they will continue to be in the future? That will not be the case if the government continues to lead us on this course.

Pundits and oil experts ask what sort of conditions will have to be created in this country to patriate the money and the invaluable technical expertise. A Calgary writer states:

> However, with returns in the U.S. for oil so vastly greater than in Canada, and with the gap widening, it would appear these investment dollars have found a permanent home.

Why not? Why would they not stay there as a result of the way they have been treated in Canada? The loss to Canada is an incalculable blow to the objective of energy self-sufficiency. We shall never attain that if we follow the direction in which this government is leading us.

The stated aim of the energy program, as I said earlier, is, supposedly, Canadianization of the oil industry. What this government has done, and there is adequate proof, is to Americanize the industry at a tremendous cost to our people; lost jobs, lost drilling rigs, loss of our accumulated expertise, and the loss of our energy self-sufficiency goal. They, and by that I mean the people living south of the 49th, will attain energy self-sufficiency long before we will, simply because of the programs they have embarked upon, and because they rely on private enterprise to do the job for them.

The current casualty report shows that over 131 drilling rigs will leave the country this year, leaving only 471 behind. Drilling days will decline from 140,000 in 1979-80 to 92,000 in 1981-82.

● (2020)

Perhaps the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen) does not realize that next year and the year after, these people who have lost their jobs will not be paying income tax. In fact, they will be writing in for refunds. Just think of what that will do to the national treasury.

I noted, as a result of a question in the House yesterday, that it is costing Canadians 25 cents out of every dollar the government spends to finance the national debt. The government is only adding to the national debt by this policy.

We are embarking upon a disastrous course. If the members opposite continue to follow the minister in this disastrous—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but his time has expired.

Hon. Ron Huntington (Capilano): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity to make a few comments on the serious and damaging aspects that Clause 27 of the Canadian Oil and Gas Act carries for the future of this country. I would also like to take the opportunity to express some of the deep concerns that we in the west have about this type of legislation.

An hon. Member: We are on Motion No. 21.

Mr. Huntington: I wish the member knew what he was talking about. We are on Clause 27 and are speaking to Motions Nos. 21 and 22.

It is obvious I will have another night of interruptions, but I think I will be able to handle them. My colleague, the hon. member for Calgary South (Mr. Thomson), as reported at page 12227 of Hansard, has once again given the House and the country a most thoroughly researched and ominous warning of the difficulties we are facing in Clause 27. This so-called Canadianization clause is, in truth, a nationalization clause. The hon. member for Calgary South pointed out in his warning that under this clause of the act we are likely to experience a daily shortfall of oil in the order of 1.1 million barrels per day by 1990. This clause will not provide Canadians with energy self-sufficiency by 1990, but it will give us the potential of that kind of an import need. He also pointed out, as did my colleague from Red Deer (Mr. Towers), the disastrous attrition that has taken place within our exploration abilities since the combination of Clause 27 of the Canada Oil and Gas Act and the constitutional package were delivered to this country.

Today we have two great freedom bells ringing. We have the charter of rights, and we have the Canadianization of our oil and gas industry as called for under Clause 27 of this bill.

This freedom clarion has the depth, morality and sincerity of the big red L and the big red maple leaf ink stain. It is a red blot that is smothering the history and evolution of Canadian morality. Canadianization, as it is meant in this clause of the bill, is in effect confiscation. It is theft and it is piracy. I do not see any other definition for it.

I never thought I would live to see this kind of act passed on the North American continent. Canadianization, as it is meant by the Liberal government, is nationalism. The bill as it stands now allows the government to take 25 per cent ownership of only the winners, without cost. I repeat, only the winners. There is no obligation for the government or for the Crown corporation to share in the cost of the dry holes or the tremendous front-end exploration costs that precede all drilling activities. This bill allows the Crown corporation access to all the intellectual property that the private sector has so dearly paid for over the years.

The New Democratic Party is not satisfied with the devastation of the 25 per cent back-in clause which the government has proposed. It wants to create absolute havoc by increasing this to 50 per cent in their Motion No. 22. If Motion No. 22 were accepted, it would bring all activity in the frontier to a halt.

In the mid-1970s this country had an opportunity to achieve full employment and oil self-sufficiency by the 1990s. We have lost that opportunity. A generation of young people who came out of our school system, anxious to carve a spot for themselves in Canadian life, have been denied this opportunity because of the deliberate interference of the government in the marketplace.

I have had to ask myself many times why we have had this succession of policies which have interfered with the opportunity for full employment which this country was blessed with. I believe the answer is in this bill. It is in the Canadianization aspect of this clause. It is also in the New Democratic Party Motion No. 22 in which they want to lift the back-in threshold to 50 per cent.

My colleague, the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson) moved motion No. 21 which merely states:

"(2) Her Majesty in right of Canada is hereby vested with and the minister on her behalf shall hold a share sufficient to render the interest holder with a Canadian ownership rate of 50 per cent",

Never has this party done other than agree with the objectives as presented by the government in the Canada Oil and Gas Act. The first objective rings beautifully: energy self-sufficiency. Why, then, does it do everything it can to prevent participation by Canadians? What a misleading twist that is. We are talking about state ownership, not participation by Canadians.

The other stated objectives of this bill are fair pricing and revenue sharing, but that is not what is being delivered. What is being delivered is a policy that has caused many of us in this country great and deep anguish.

Socialism cannot be imposed from the top down. It has to be a grass roots movement from the bottom up. It is not possible to create the social unrest necessary to bring about a socialist state if people are working and the economy is healthy.

Of all the countries in the world, Mr. Speaker, Canada is the one which could make a major donation to the Third World by stopping our reliance on non-renewable energy sources from abroad. Since 1976 we could have been fully employed by moving from the Syncrude plant all that engineering and labour and skill capacity over into another Alsands plant. We could have been building the Mackenzie Valley pipeline, which would have sent that energy locked in the north down to our neighbour in the south who pays the military bill which gives us our cloak of freedom. We could have been phasing in one megaproject after another. Cold Lake, which was going to be in place and on which great sums of money had been spent—and individual people like you and I, Mr. Speaker, had moved in to invest in that growth opportunity—is dead. It lies dead and cold. We could have built pipelines for gas to the maritimes and Quebec as an oil substitute. Why were these things not started in the mid 1970s? We could have moved to replace oil with gas. We did not. We could have been energy self-sufficient by 1990. We could have stopped the drain on world resources. We could have introduced fiscal policies which would have added further value to our resource products. We could have introduced fiscal policies which would have replaced the incentive to work as well as the incentive to save back into our economy.

• (2030)

But under the regime that is radicalizing Canada, these entitlements have been denied the Canadian people and the people of western Canada. Instead we have received a plethora of regulations and legislation which is increasing the frustration and anxiety levels of the people. We have policies which aggravate and irritate, policies which heighten the frustration levels of our people, policies which deliberately create tensions, and policies which create heavy and unnecessary regulatory and paper burdens on us. We have policies which deliver more power and control to committees, tribunals, commissions and bureaucrats. We have policies which collectivize, drown and smother the individual and the private sector. Why? The answer is that it must be deliberate. They are the policies of socialists who are now in control. They are the policies of people who have infiltrated the Liberal Party of Canada, the once defender of the individual and of individualism in this country.

Mr. Nielsen: It no longer exists.

Mr. Huntington: We have radical policies which go beyond the wildest dreams of the left wing of the New Democratic Party. We have policies which deliver frustration, bitterness, division and the regional antagonism which is so intense and growing at such a frightening rate in this country.

Socialism can only be created from unrest and crisis amongst the masses, and Clause 27 of this bill is right at the heart of that. A socialist state cannot be created when people are at work, when they are achieving goals and when they are able to pay for their homes and their private property. That has been denied the people by the government, and that is what we are debating in Motions Nos. 21 and 22, which would amend Clause 27 of the proposed Canada Oil and Gas Act.

A terrible shame lies on those Canadians whose political perception is no deeper than the thickness of a paper label. Canadianization in the sense of Canadian people owning 50 per cent of their oil and gas resource industries—yes. That would allow us to provide the pension plans necessary to relieve the burden on a reducing population in our work force, but nationalization and confiscation—no.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Huntington: Britain's professor Flores said this:

> The private sector can be defined as the part of the economy that the government controls.
>
> The public sector is the part that nobody controls.

That is what Bill C-48 is delivering us into. Just look at the terrible national tragedies of the nationalization of the major industries in Britain. They are national tragedies, bringing that once great country to its knees, because there is no incentive and there is no magic left for the people in the work force and the people coming out of the universities. That is the issue.

An hon. Member: What about Maggie?

Mr. Huntington: Just look at the economic disasters of Leyland and the British Steel Corporation. The tragedy is that the British have a massive North Sea resource, and they are mismanaging their state-owned economy so badly that they will dissipate that resource before they can come out of it and protect the welfare state which is so dear to them. That is the tragedy.

I wonder why that great NDP haven and example of the perfect life for the masses—I am speaking of Sweden—has backed away from increasing state ownership, to the point now where the state owns less than 5 per cent of the economy. I wonder why. And here we are nationalizing one of the most important aspects we have in Canada. What we are dealing with in Clause 27 and Motion No. 21 is fundamental to our future and to the protection of our sense of individualism in this great land. What we are dealing with, as a bottom line, is our freedom. If we allow ourselves to become organized and structured by the state, we lose that human magic. Organization interferes with the incentive to create and be efficient, and that magic is being smothered by this clause and by this bill.

In countries which lose their economic freedom there can be no political freedom. That is the issue in this motion tonight. I say to hon. gentlemen opposite that it is too late now for the Canadian electorate to wake up, but I ask those hon. members opposite with minds and concerns—and I know there are some—please, wake up and realize what a serious issue we are dealing with. Organization of this kind denies us the magic that is in the human soul, and it is that magic which built this country and delivered us into the sense—perhaps the false sense—of wellbeing we have today.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Fred McCain (Carleton-Charlotte): Mr. Speaker, I do not think it needs to be said, but let us get one thing very clear: I am not a socialist. I am a free enterprise person. As was pointed out by the previous speaker, I believe we have seen examples of the folly of trying to direct the economic operation of the private sector by government, by ministers, by bureaucrats and by boards. It has not worked.

An hon. Member: What about Suncor?

Mr. McCain: Yet the clause we are now considering is one which takes one of the biggest steps ever taken in any legislation of the House of Commons toward further regulation, expropriation and management of our affairs in a very important part of our economy. It is all being done with a careless lack of concern and a total lack of consideration on the part of the back benches of the government. I suppose one could say that it is in fact the government—the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and the cabinet—which is doing this, but that is not the case. Some of us have been in this House long enough to know that a thoughtful presentation by backbench members of the governing party whether it be on VIA Rail or Bill C-48, can redirect the energies of the government and its legislation. As a matter of fact, at this moment that is the only force available to save this country—and it needs saving.

● (2040)

Many suggestions have been made about how these things should be done. Let us look at one of them. We had a situation during the seventies when the Government of Canada was very concerned about whether we would have sufficient supplies of petroleum products for our economy to function. In those days we established an economy and a tax structure which would permit older companies and younger companies to go into the business in a fashion which promised us self-sufficiency by 1985 at the latest.

That has now been wiped out. Those tax incentives at no tax dollar expense were wiped out, first, by the national energy policy, second, by the agreement between the federal government and the provinces and now, to confirm and aggravate the whole situation, by Bill C-48. We cannot have self-sufficiency earlier than in 1990. There will be a minimum of five years' delay. If, as we on this side anticipate, the industry is negatively affected by this legislation, we may be looking at 1995 as the earliest possible date of self-sufficiency.

The first step taken was to delay the two heavy oil plants, the oil sands and in situ. They have been delayed for a minimum of two years. Even if we were to decide tomorrow to build those plants, it would be at least another six months before they could be reactivated, reorganized and the proper skills put in place. This means a minimum of two and a half years and 250,000 barrels of oil which could have been on flow earlier than in 1985.

By 1985, it is estimated that the price of oil in Canada will be a minimum of $50 a barrel. We are looking at $75 million a day which is going to be shipped out of this country. It is estimated that the cost of the delay of exploration and development in the oil industry as brought about, first, by the policy, later by the agreement and now by the legislation, will be an additional $50 billion of Canadian money which will have to flow out of Canada and which should be flowing in our own systems.

That is in the short term. What will it be in the long term? In the meantime, let us consider the cost of inflation and the 20 or 25 per cent money which will have to be used. That would not have been necessary had we provided the incentives. Now it is necessary to borrow that money at those prices and probably double the size of the sum.

The industry is being wound down. This act, this section and this clause, contribute to the literal hemorrhage of Canadian currency outside this country. It is promised that the hemorrhage will continue for many unnecessary years.

An hon. Member: It's deliberate.

Mr. McCain: I agree. It is absolutely deliberate. It is pre-planned. If those seated to the right of the Speaker do not see it today, they will rue the day tomorrow. Some of them should listen. We are in dangerous times, not so much because, as the former Speaker said, we may have social problems on our hands because of unemployment, the cost of living, interest on money, the cost of oil and gas and all those other things that are so necessary, but because the government will be blamed for feeding the problem, nursing the economic ills facing us. Are they not concerned? Have they not given this serious consideration?

There is a propaganda machine at work in this land the like of which Goebbels never understood, expert that he was. The propaganda machine is the slickest, smoothest, most devastating and frightening machine I have seen in any of the history I have read, modern or ancient.

The people of Canada have been convinced that profit is a bad thing and that they should not contribute to it. The government refuses to illustrate to Canadians the fact that the old system would have made us self-sufficient in oil, our dollar would not have dropped in value and interest rates would not be so high. We would not have to borrow so much to buy so much abroad. It is an insidious thing. I do not know how to extend the concern that we should have to the public of Canada.

I wonder whether any of the Liberal backbenchers have given any thought to where we are going to get the trillion dollars it is estimated will be necessary by the year 2,000 to supply this country with oil. Where will it come from when we are going to have to spend tens of billions of dollars for the importation of a product which we do not want and would not have needed had we continued with the policies of the seventies? It would have been here. This is going to come out of the pay cheques of the workers and into the tills of their living expenses.

I learned something today which is very depressing. I know that our provinces, municipalities and perhaps our federal treasury have had to go abroad to borrow. They found that the New York market was not convinced that Canada was as sound as they used to think it was.

The American financiers do not particularly want Canadian securities, whether they come from any of the three levels of government or from the corporations of Canada. If you examine the financial situation today, you find that companies are no longer going to New York for money because there is no longer confidence in our economic structure. They are going to jurisdictions such as Japan, Switzerland, the United Kingdom, any country which may have money and is prepared to risk it in Canada. It is a serious situation.

It used to be that our economy and the fiscal monetary policy in this country were so sound that we could get money at preferred rates in New York. Now we have to go where money is running out their ears before we can get it. It is not available in New York at attractive rates. Part of the reason is this act.

When a lender looks at an economic jurisdiction in which there is retroactive expropriation without compensation, it does not look like a very good place in which to invest your money, and that is what it is. Every aspect of our oil industry has been delayed by the quarrel between the provinces and the federal government because of the declaration of ownership by the Government of Canada over the rights of the provinces in the offshore lands under regulations which the federal government established in spite of the fact that the provinces were already making regulations. As a result, they became overlapping and conflicting.

That is what happened when we were short of oil. It has come to the point where a corporation that puts its money into a Canada lands situation does not have any idea whether its lease will be secure after the five-year period. Even worse, the powers allocated to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) are such that if he should so desire, he may tell a company that next year it must drill three wells in a particular property. That is his authority, the threat being that if they do not drill those wells, the property will not be theirs at the end of the year.

● (2050)

There are two dangers that will frighten any investor. First, is the equipment available to drill that many wells on the property in which I have already invested my money? Second, will the cost of the wells destroy me financially? That is the problem, Mr. Speaker. Why would anyone be interested in investing on a piece of land which he may have? Did it ever occur to you that Canada lands include these offshore waters? Did it ever occur to you that it may cost $150 million to drill a single well? Let us suppose that a Canadian corporation has done its preliminary work, applies for an exploratory permit and is allocated the land, and the minister says, "Yes, but you must drill three wells offshore in the next year." It is impossible. The equipment is not there and it is not available. It may also be impossible because of the massive expenditures expected over a short period of time. When that is coupled with the fact that the minister may not renew the lease after five years, and then can tell the guy at what price he is going to sell, what volume he will move out, and where he is going to sell, the poor fellow cannot call his soul his own. Only the minister knows your fate. What an uncertain environment in which to invest your money!

We heard a great deal from those on our left as to the massive interest kept in the hands of the United Kingdom, the Norwegians, and on and on. Mr. Speaker, the one thing they are overlooking is that both those jurisdictions established a very attractive exploratory environment for the people who invested in exploration. For instance, if one owned a drilling rig and wanted to use it in the North Sea, the United Kingdom extended a tax write-off privilege in which that rig could be written off against operations revenue in one year. If you did not like that, then you could undertake to lease the rig. You could then write if off on a five-year basis, pay the lessor $1 and you owned the rig in five years.

If this act contained the recovery opportunity that existed in the British North Sea lands, that would be a different kettle of fish. However, let us not simply refer to ownership of the lands by the United Kingdom or by the Norwegians. Let us take a look at what is left. The only thing that is left here is uncertainty and regulation. The developer is assured of nothing else.

What is happening? Not only are the land-based rigs leaving western Canada—and it is estimated that 175 may leave—what is even worse is that the corporations are laying off the human capabilities, the expertise. Both the labour force and the scientific expertise are being dispersed, laid off, fired and lost to this nation. That we cannot afford. We cannot assess that visually or physically at this moment, as we can the $50 billion that we will spend because we are two and a half, three or maybe four years late, with the tar sands and the in situ plants, and maybe we will never develop them.

What are the possibilities? In the Hibernia field alone the possibilities are massive. What a beautiful thing it could be if we would only give to those explorers and developers an opportunity to recover their money so that they would have the incentive to go in there. It is simple to say, "Look, we are not going to have international corporations collect our money". What you are overlooking, Mr. Speaker, when you oversimplify that statement as part of the propaganda machine, is that the small Canadian companies, which have explored and developed resources they cannot market under this regulation, have lost more of their cash flow than have the multinationals. That is something that has not reached home to the back bench members, and certainly not to the public of Canada.

The ongoing operators will have some recovery in their depletion allowances. It is the new operator, with the resource still in the ground, with no markets and no connections with which to market, who is suffering. It is the new guy who has lost more of his cash flow than has the multinational. That is a deception of the vilest, most mischievous kind that could be extended to the citizenry of this nation, Mr. Speaker. Nobody will publish it and nobody will put it as a headline in The Globe and Mail, or The Telegraph-Journal or the Toronto Star. That is the unquestioned situation.

Canadian corporations have lost more of their cash flow than have the multinationals. No one over there gives a damn. We have a potential. When we started to dibble, dabble and drabble in the mix of economy for the oil industry, we knew for sure we had something approaching a billion barrels explored and found as reserves in Hibernia. We now know, Mr. Speaker, we have 1.8 billion barrels of proven, recoverable reserves in that area, and we now know that probably there is at least ten times that much oil in that field. In the name of all that is good and holy, why are we not giving every possible incentive to the necessary expertise, capital, corporate, whatever it may be, to get at that oil? Stop the hemorrhage, cauterize the bleeding economy of this Canada of ours, and get that oil on flow in the fastest possible means to save our nation. Why do we not put those people who are needed to work? Why do we persist in putting on socialist blindfolds as we survey the necessities of this nation? The very survival of this nation is at stake.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. gentleman, but his allotted time has expired.

Mr. Thomas Siddon (Richmond-South Delta): If there is anything my hon. friend, the hon. member for Carleton-Charlotte (Mr. McCain) did not cover in his speech, perhaps I can pick it up for him.

We are talking about the extremely unhealthy state of our economy and how that relates to the basic philosophy on which Bill C-48 is predicated and, in particular, the confiscatory aspect of that bill as reflected in Clause 27. We are debating in particular Motions Nos. 21 and 22 which would amend Clause 27 in two entirely different ways.

In a moment I will give my interpretation of the very negative impact that Clause 27 will have on Canada and on our economy over all. Before doing that, however, I want to quote from a speech that the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Trudeau) made last night in Toronto which underscores the gravity and seriousness of the economic problems that face our nation. The Prime Minister said this:

If the September interest rate is indicative of a new trend, it would be a cause of grave concern.

He noted that "high interest rates are symptoms of inflation but that trying to cure these symptoms by higher government deficits will only make the disease worse". He went on to say:

All sectors of the economy must show restraints in their demands, and that includes restraint by government spending.

The Prime Minister went on to state:

I am asking the nation itself to come to its senses.

We are too, I might interject.

—and to act collectively to fight the enemy which is wounding us all—

I think we all know who that enemy is. The Prime Minister essentially called for collective support for collective restraint.

● (2100)

How does Bill C-48, and in particular Clause 27, advance the cause of restraint, improve the health of our economy, bring down interest rates, increase investment and expand opportunities for our young people? The initiatives reflected in Clause 27 take this country further toward economic ruin. The Prime Minister has pinpointed the problem but he has also shown that he is the main part of the problem and that as long as he and the policies of this government prevail, this country will continue to have a rough ride.

As has been pointed out by many of my colleagues, this party is not opposed to the notion that Canadians should control their own destiny. We can start from the basic premise that we do own our own natural resources. Whether they are owned by the federal or provincial government in law is not in dispute; the point is that we own the resources and we have control over what we would do with them. It does not at all enhance the ability of the government to control those resources, to undertake a 25 per cent Crown interest in every bit of drilling, exploration and oil and gas production in the Canada lands that might be contemplated.

Mr. Huntington: Only the winners.

Mr. Siddon: The hon. member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington) says, "Only the winners". If we examine the structure of the bill, we may be able to anticipate that certain friends of people in high places could well end up the winners, to the disadvantage of the average Canadian.

We are discussing the necessity of having the government operate with a 25 percent share in all oil and gas exploration initiatives and subsequent production. There is an interesting aspect to Bill C-48, Mr. Speaker. If one reads Clause 32(1) it will be seen that if the government does not choose to assign a production interest to a Crown corporation, be it Petro-Canada or some other, once the discovery has been made the government can, at its discretion, liquidate that 25 per cent interest and dispose of it in any way it sees fit through some form of public tendering. We might begin to wonder into whose hands the 25 per cent interest will fall. What will we protect with this 25 per cent interest if, after the resources are discovered, they go to the highest bidder? That might well not be a Canadian-owned company, Mr. Speaker.

The government is perpetrating a charade on the people of Canada by suggesting that somehow they will have a bigger share in deciding the destiny of their own resources through having a 25 per cent operating share in the exploration and production of those resources.

We have to ask if it is not enough for the government to be able to collect royalties, including the basic royalty of 10 per cent provided through this act, plus the progressive incremental royalty, which would add another 40 per cent tax on any net return to the interest operator of that venture, plus various other production taxes and, ultimately, profit and income taxes assessed against these corporations. What in God's green earth is the government doing by also taking a 25 per cent interest?

It is repugnant enough to us that the government would expropriate a 25 per cent Crown share in oil and gas discovered at least since the end of December 1980. In fact, in the original bill it was going to expropriate all the private interest that was necessary to get its hands on that 25 per cent.

In Clause 27 of the bill, there is provision that the government may acquire more than a 25 per cent interest. In fact, it can acquire any amount that is required to bring Canadian ownership up to 50 per cent. One has to ask why the government insists upon having the right to take a total 50 per cent equity in its own name, if it wishes. As well, on any amount over the first 25 per cent, the government refuses to put in any of the costs of exploration. If the company that owns that next 25 per cent should happen to be foreign owned, the government will just take that portion. It will not pay any compensation after January 1, 1981, for the equity and risk that was taken, not a nickel, Mr. Speaker, and that amounts to outright theft. I for one am getting darned tired of hearing the Prime Minister talk about the Liberal concept of sharing which, to my way of thinking, amounts to legalized theft.

I should like to discuss what is happening in our country, today, Mr. Speaker. We have investment capital flooding out of the country. We have created a very ugly situation with our good neighbours to the south when we know that without their support Canada would be nothing more than a wilderness in the north.

An article in today's Ottawa Citizen reads in part as follows:

Harvey Bale, assistant U.S. trade representative for investment policy, said the United States has recently placed before GATT a detailed list of objectionable "performance requirements" placed on foreign investors by some countries, including Canada.

The article, which was reporting on a meeting of U.S. trade officials in Washington, went on:

All the participants testified that the Reagan administration finds disturbing the different economic philosophies practised by the Trudeau government and by the United States.

The article concluded by reporting that Mr. Bale said:

—the Canadian government practises "economic nationalism" by actively intervening in the economy with policies detrimental to trade and investment flows in the world economy.

We in this party believe that Canada should move at a measured pace to take more control of our destiny and financial enterprises, but we do not believe in moving immediately in an arbitrary manner to confiscate and steal an asset that belongs to some third party. In that we differ from my good friends in the New Democratic Party. We do not believe in confiscating and stealing an asset that belongs to a third party.

Many people, including the Governor of the Bank of Canada, have pointed out that high interest rates today are a direct consequence of the implications of the National Energy Program. Virtually every other knowledgeable economist in this country has said that the NEP is, in large measure, responsible for the high interest rates which Canadian home owners, farmers, fishermen and businessmen are struggling with today.

After months of public hearings, the National Energy Board said quite clearly that, after months of careful analysis of all the data and information at its disposal, it concluded that Canada will not reach self-sufficiency by 1990 and may not reach self-sufficiency in oil by the year 2000 under the existing regime. This evidence does not come from some weirdo Conservative thinker out in western Canada; it comes from the National Energy Board, a government agency.

Another spokesman who drew a direct link between interest rates and the National Energy Program is the Governor of the Bank of Canada. And presumably we can put some confidence in people like the president of the Royal Bank of Canada who says that extremism on either side of the border is counterproductive. He said that what the Government of Canada is doing under the National Energy Program is abrupt extremism, and that it is creating a tremendous aggravation to the financial institutions, both within and outside Canada, that make our economy work. He pointed out that these irritants are most visible in a flow of investment capital out of the country and a drying up of opportunities and security for the future of our young people.

If we want to reduce foreign ownership in Canada, Mr. Speaker, we should be providing incentives for Canadians instead of asking them to buy Canada Savings Bonds at 19.5 per cent interest in order to help bale the government out and provide it with another few years of security from the eventual and horrendous consequences of an overwhelming national debt. We should stop enticing people with 19.5 per cent interest on Canada Savings Bonds. Hon. members opposite should start paying their own bloody bills in this country—excuse the expletive—instead of burdening the people of Canada with high interest rates. These are nothing more than hidden taxation levied on Canadians because of the government's spendthrift policies over the past 12 years. Hon. members opposite should have to pay the bills. They could start with the most wealthy man in this House, the Prime Minister, who talks about charity and shows none in his own lifestyle.

It is high time we started to consider the damage we are doing to our country and the fact that we are not leaving much of a legacy for our children. Why must the government borrow money now to buy out its 25 per cent interest? After much persuasion from many of the witnesses appearing before the committee, the government was finally convinced that discoveries prior to January 1, 1981, ought to be properly compensated. As I read the bill, the government has now undertaken to provide retroactive compensation for the eligible costs incurred to that date to the extent of 2.5 times a quantity called by some fancy name. Therefore, the government is willing to give the investors whom it is displacing two and a half times the relevant cost. The government has arbitrarily decided what those leases are worth, after the oil and gas has been discovered, of course.

• (2110)

I have to ask why the government does not leave those investors alone? Why is it not enough for the government to operate perhaps 25 per cent of the oil and gas exploration on the Canada lands, without having to take a specific, active interest in every lease, every production licence and every exploration permit that is granted? It makes no sense to me.

The thrust of this amendment which the Progressive Conservative Party is putting forward under motion No. 21 is that, yes, we would be happy to see stress placed on 50 per cent Canadian ownership in any offshore exploration initiatives and in the areas north of 60. We would be happy to see 50 per cent; but we would prefer to see that whole 50 per cent plus coming from Canadian citizens, instead of having them trot down to the bank, sucked in by the ads the government and the banks place in the newspapers to buy Canada Savings Bonds. Why do we not provide a tax incentive program of the form we put forward in our budget of two years ago, a program which would have allowed Canadians a tax shelter on up to $100,000 of investment in Canadian oil and gas and other risk ventures? Why do we not get the Canadian people involved in the sense that they could feel some freedom of choice and some opportunity to advance at whatever pace of investment they prefer?

Why do we not find ways to encourage more than 25 per cent private participation by Canadians? That is the next point I want to raise. If the Crown reserves for itself the first 25 per cent, it only requires another 25 per cent from Canadians. Then the 50 per cent can come from anyone outside the country. Where is the incentive for Canadians to take more than the 25 per cent participation rate? There is very little, unless, of course, they want to go on bended knee to some of their friends in the cabinet and try to get one of those cushy government grants that they will offer to some of their friends—

An hon. Member: Only their friends.

Mr. Siddon: —who happen to be able to pick up some of this expropriated interest later on that the government will sell off after it has grabbed it and put it under its control.

We have an illustration here. If we follow the provisions set out in clause 27 and thereafter, certain interests in Canada can end up becoming a part of a company which has less than 50 per cent Canadian ownership and continues to operate and explore with the sanction of the government. For example, let us consider a production licence granted on the basis of 25 per cent Crown ownership, 25 per cent private participation by Canadians, and 50 per cent foreign ownership from the U.S. or elsewhere. There could be a corporate change of ownership or change of hands. This happens all the time through transactions on the stock market, or what have you. If there is a change of hands and suddenly we find that that 25 per cent Canadian ownership ends up with some country like Brazil, or who knows—

An hon. Member: Cuba.

Mr. Siddon: —then we only have a 25 per cent Crown share. The government will move in and take one quarter of the equity away from those foreign investors, whoever they are, and will claim it for itself. Subsequently, Clause 23(6) of Bill C-48 allows the government to resell that confiscated 25 per cent to any company which has at lest 75 per cent Canadian ownership, such as perhaps one of the big distilleries, or one of the major, powerful corporations in our country which are perhaps connected with our friends opposite. As long as this company is 75 per cent Canadian owned, with the benefit of U.S. or foreign capital it can end up buying the expropriated asset that was taken away from some other company. Then, with only 75 per cent of the 25 per cent, this company can then end up being a partner in an oil and gas exploration undertaking where the total rate of participation is only 41.25 per cent. In other words, the government says that a Canadian company can have the 25 per cent it has taken away from a foreign investor if it has three quarters of its equity from Canadian sources.

Therefore, some people can end up operating in the Canada lands with only 41.25 per cent Canadian ownership rate, if they know the minister and they can play the game by his rules. However, those who play by the straight rules would, of course, have to have a 50 per cent Canadian ownership rate, of which the government already possesses one half through the 25 per cent Crown share. It just does not make sense. We can see from all of this that this bill is delaying the date when Canada will achieve energy self-sufficiency. It is driving up our energy costs and our interest rates by driving capital out of Canada and, as a consequence, weakening our dollar.

I just cannot understand the comments of the Prime Minister in Toronto last night. If he knows so much about our economy, why has he made such a God-awful mess of it over the past 12 years, and why does he not bring in a budget now? Why does he give us this phony excuse that he gave to the premiers a week or so ago? He wrote a letter to Premier Bennett of British Columbia, stating:

> I assume this postponement does not concern you—

He was speaking in a very cynical voice here.

> —since you knew that a budget delay would be the inevitable result of your refusal to meet next week and of your suggestion that—notwithstanding that the budget had been announced for November 3—we meet on the Constitution during the first week of November.

The Prime Minister knows that is absolute poppycock, yet he has the gall to write that. He thinks the Canadian people are so stupid that they can accept that kind of phony excuse. It is high time he started listening to the people of Canada and their hue and cry that this country cannot take very much more of this cynical, devious man who is forever distorting, oversimplifying and twisting the facts to suit no one's convenience but his own. It is high time that some of his friends in the front benches who agree to these phony, socialistic, economic policies awakened and realized what destruction they are wreaking on our country.

I know that other hon. members have been listening very quietly. I hope they have been listening, because these are serious times for our country. If there are not some changes in direction and philosophy soon, then I fear for my children and their wellbeing.

Mr. Waddell: I wonder if the hon. member who last spoke would permit a question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. This requires the unanimous consent of the House.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Siddon: I would be happy to answer.

Mr. Waddell: It is sort of a double-barrelled question. I wonder if the hon. member could tell us where it leaves his position in view of the fact that the premiers of Alberta, British Columbia and Saskatchewan have, in fact, accepted the National Energy Program by signing those recent agreements with Ottawa. Second, why is nationalization of public ownership so bad in the light of the fact that Premier Davis just bought 25 per cent of Suncor for Ontario?

Mr. Siddon: Mr. Speaker, I am glad that I have a little time to answer. In the first instance, I do not see that there is any connection between the agreements which were signed by the provinces of Alberta, British Columbia and, I might add, Saskatchewan on the National Energy Program. There is no direct connection. Those premiers have spoken out as forcefully as all others in demanding that the Prime Minister hold a first ministers meeting on the economy. They have made their analysis of our economic dilemma quite clear. They have certainly spoken out to the extent that they would speak out on a matter which is not within their own jurisdiction; that is to say, the Canada lands. Second, in so far as the province of Ontario is concerned, I guess it is their business if they want to engage themselves in competition with the private sector.

I have never said that there is no place for Crown corporations in Canada. Many of the Crown corporations which are of the greatest value to this country were initiated by the Progressive Conservative Party. I am talking about the CNR and the CBC. What we are saying is that the government has no right to be involved in every oil and gas initiative on the Canada lands.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (2120)

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, I see some members of this House are awake. I am glad they are. I hope they are listening as well as giggling. I find it deplorable, when we are discussing a matter as important as this bill, Clause 27 of it and this particular amendment, that not one single member of the press is in the Press Gallery. I hope at least some of them are watching the debate on television.

Mr. Taylor: There is not one minister here either.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): As the hon. member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) has just said, there is not one minister here either.

Mr. Breau: What about the minister sitting there?

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Yes, I apologize. I see the Minister of State (Mr. Joyal) sitting in his seat, but there is not one minister concerned with this bill in the House.

How can one man grab the attention of the Canadian people on a matter as serious as this? There has been a number of excellent speeches made tonight. Many excellent speeches have been made during past days. But the amount of attention that this important matter is grabbing in the press, on television or on the radio is deplorably small. I do not know whether streaking through the House would get any attention, I think it would if certain members did, but tonight, we are discussing what I call the great oil slick trick, the con job of the century, and the government's move-in on the oil fields. The "teapot dome" scandal in the United States has nothing on the scandal of the great northern oil grab. It is surprising that this debate is commanding so little attention from the press. Few letters have been written to editors of newspapers. It is not commanding much attention among members on the far side of the House who like to joke when a serious matter is under consideration.

Have those members who considered this bill when it was in committee discussed it at such monotonous length that they have dulled the edge of their attack? Has the purpose of the legislation been smothered under a heap of verbiage? I hope not. But if that should be the case, I shall delve into the substance of this particular clause and try, through an illustration or two, to explain exactly and in fairly simple terms what this legislation is setting out to do.

As I have said, I have called it the con job of the century, the great oil slick trick, and the great northern oil grab. Those are three ways of describing the intent of this particular clause.

The bill as written provides the means whereby the Canadian government can confiscate 25 per cent of all operations north of 60 and out to the edge of the continental shelf. That does not seem to stir anyone. But just wait until it happens.

We are looking at the back-in provisions as they have come to be called. I want to be sure we know what that term means. This provision enables the government to back in, retroactively, to the tune of 25 per cent of the interest on land on which leases were originally granted, on the understanding that the interest would be whole, transferable and saleable. The government is cheating the developers. This is a low down, sneaky trick, and that is all it is.

How did this come about? In order to get exploration under way in the north in the areas described as Canada lands, a number of tax inducements were offered to entrepreneurs in the oil exploration business. Leases were auctioned off or sold. The fortunate person who got the lease undertook to develop the land and to plow into that land so much in development funds. It might have been millions of dollars, but the understanding was that the 100 per cent of the interest in any discoveries would be disposable in the normal way, subject always to a royalty and taxation. No one quibbles with a royalty. No one quibbles with the taxation arrangements which might be imposed. But no one reckoned on confiscation.

Money for exploration is frequently raised through dividing up the 100 per cent interest of a particular group by selling shares to others in a similar enterprise and sharing the proceeds of discovery. As I said, any production that might occur down the line would be subject to a royalty, and the proceeds of its sale would be subject to tax.

I must emphasize that a favourable tax regime was put in place deliberately to induce entrepreneurs to come to the rude climate north of 60 in order to get oil and gas out of the ground. Inducements, such as being able to write off expenses at more than 100 per cent were offered, to get oil men looking for oil and gas in those areas. Many responded. The inducements were high, and the risks were high. The promise was good. Some of the entrepreneurs were successful and some were not so successful. But it was understood they would be able to retain 100 per cent of the proceeds of their endeavour.

Having encouraged that form of activity and having welcomed Canadian and offshore investment in the acquisition of leases, the government has now decided at this late date to back in on all these activities in Canada lands and claim 25 per cent of the interest in each of them. There is no other word for it but trickery.

Let us assume that a Canadian company had offered to spend a million dollars for a lease giving it the right to explore a certain parcel of land in the north country, and that it was given that parcel of land on the understanding that the million dollars would be devoted to exploration. Whoever obtained the lease decided that in order to raise the amount, he would have to share out the interest he had acquired. Let us say he did this with ten partners who each put in $100,000, making up the $1 million. They drill, they write off a large portion of their expenses, and they find a viable deposit of oil. At this point they can go into production and sell their oil. There is a royalty as the oil comes out of the ground. That is fair enough. There is a tax imposed on the sale of the oil or gas. That is fair enough. But now another element enters into the picture, namely, this bill. The government says, "Whoa, let me in for 25 per cent of the interest which the ten partners have so graciously provided." This is expropriation, and there is no other word for it. I submit further that it is a breach of contract.

I wonder how a government that prides itself on the legality of operations, particularly as they affect constitutional matters, can reconcile in its mind, its twisted curved mind, this sort of illegality. It is expropriation and breach of contract. I suggest also that it is probably easy to understand this government carrying out such a land baron robbery, when one recalls that it is the same government that refused to include the right to enjoyment of private property in its famous bill of rights. This government refused that. Maybe the government had all of this in mind and that is why it refused. At least the government is consistent on that score. Let us recognize the government's consistency in one area at least. On one hand they did not want to acknowledge in the charter of rights, the right to private property and on the other they were planning to deny it in this legislation.

• (2130)

What has my party done to try to remodel this amendment and to make it a little more acceptable? The amendment as proposed by the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson) is aimed, first of all, at safeguarding Canadian development enterprise in the north from this conscienceless brigandry through legislation. As the legislation now stands, this back-in and the claim of 25 per cent applies to Canadian enterprise or any other kind of enterprise, all in the name of Canadianization. They are breaking contract with their own people. It is one thing perhaps to try to do that with non-Canadian investment, but to do it to Canadians, I think, is absolutely deplorable.

The manner in which we have managed to safeguard that is in the motion which reads:

> Her Majesty in right of Canada is hereby vested with and the Minister on Her behalf shall hold a share sufficient to render the interest holder with a Canadian Ownership Rate of 50 per cent.

That says that if the enterprise is 100 per cent Canadian owned now, there is no need whatsoever for the Canadian government to back in. Yet these people sit mutely by and are prepared to see their Canadian colleagues conned out of 25 per cent of their enterprise. I suggest the government is guilty of hypocrisy in this aspect of its operation.

Let us look at amendment No.2 standing in the name of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde). That really is quite an interesting piece of reading because we see there in advance a declaration of principles. Let me just cite it because it is relevant to the amendment I am talking about, although we have not as yet dealt with this particular one. The declaration of principles states that it is recognized that it is "in the national interest to advance national economic and social interests through control by Canadians of their own energy future," and that "Canadians must be offered an opportunity to participate in the development of their energy future and to share in the benefits of that development."

Those are laudable principles, but how you can reconcile that statement of principles by backing in on a 100 per cent Canadian enterprise, claiming you are doing it in the interest of Canadianization, I just do not understand. And I bet you my bottom dollar there is not one person over there who can explain it either, not one. They have no concept of the outrageousness that is before us.

Combining these two highflown phrases, with the powers in this bill to confiscate retroactively 25 per cent of a 100 per cent Canadian enterprise is, to my way of thinking, the epitome of 1984 double talk, not to mention unmitigated hypocrisy and doubledealing. It might be understandable to some, in light of that pious enunciation of principles, to see the government confiscate 25 per cent of non-Canadian enterprise—that might be understandable—but those who can stomach such confiscation and such piracy from their own kind must, at this time, be prepared to see business contracts violated and the government's word broken, because these enterprises were enticed into developing productive resources by generous tax credits and the forgiveness of some of their expenses. They were never told that, in addition, they were going to be liable to seizure by the state once they had found proven reserves.

To pass this legislation in its present form would be to legalize piracy, and my party cannot stand for such a blatant repudiation of an original trust.

I hope my colleagues on the other side of the House are aware of what the government is asking them to do, because, in the briefest terms, this amounts to legitimizing larceny. For those who do not understand what larceny is I would like to quote from the Concise Oxford Dictionary. It is:

> —felonious taking away of another's personal goods with intent to convert them to one's own use.

If I have a few moments left, I think it is now worth examining the consequences of this form of larceny. The hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers) listed some of them this evening when he was speaking, including the flight of enterprise from this country to the United States, the transfer of development funds by Canadian firms from Canada to the United States, with all that means in terms of decreased activity in this country; the making of vehicles, the making of steel, and the shortfall in taxes payable.

There is another consequence whose full dramatic significance has been described in a recent article in Barron's weekly. It is Barron's of October 26, so it is fairly recent. It is an article which appears on page 39, and it is a quote from a study prepared by Michael Walker of the Fraser Institute in Vancouver. He says:

> In the next 12 months, some 80,000 wells will be drilled in the United States, five times the total in the rest of the world combined.

An hon. Member: The Fraser Institute is a most reactionary group.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Facts are very difficult to be reactionary about, and these are facts. He states that some 80,000 wells will be drilled in the United States, some five times the total in the rest of the world combined. He goes on to state:

> About 10,000 of them will be financed by refugee Canadians—twice the number that will be drilled—

He says they will be financed by refugee Canadians and with Canadian funds.

I think with that history of the degradation of enterprise in this country by the inept, abusive and larcenous policies of this government introduced a year ago this week, members opposite should be ashamed. I saw them wearing blood on their lapels earlier this week, and rightly so. The rest of us should be wearing arm bands. It is red blood they are bleeding from Canadians and sending across the border. I hear there is some talk about the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen) making the banks bleed a little more. I suggest he was thinking about the Red Cross blood bank campaign of that week when he came out with that statement.

• (2140)

We should be wearing black arm bands this week and until we have demolished this bill. The bill before us will be the destruction of free enterprise in this country, as was said so ably by my hon. friend, the hon. member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington).

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the hon. member would permit a question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is that agreed to by the hon. member?

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Agreed.

Mr. Nielsen: We have to spend our time educating you.

Mr. Waddell: The hon. member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) says they have to spend their time educating me. Why is the hon. member and his colleagues who have spoken before him digging in on this particular section of the bill which essentially protects oil companies? Why are they being the spokesmen of the oil companies and not concentrating on environmental matters, native matters, matters that concern the little people? Why are they more concerned with this 25 per cent back-in? They are really concerned about the large oil companies.

Mr. Nielsen: Wait until you hear my speech.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, I distinctly recall making a contribution to the debate on environmental matters. I am not defending the oil companies in this debate. I am defending Canadians and Canadian enterprise. Members around this House should be prepared, as I am, to invest every single penny of their savings into the development of this country through free enterprise even with disastrous results sometimes, especially over the last three or four months, and not through a paternal government which claims to know better about how to invest our money than we do.

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, during the last few days we have been talking a lot about Canadianism. From listening to the government members talking about Canadianism, one can only deduce that they seem to think they have some kind of monopoly on Canadianism. I want to make it very clear that no party has a monopoly on patriotism or Canadianism. When the Liberal Party tries to give the impression that it is the only one which represents Canadians or favours Canadian ownership, it misleads the people entirely.

Our party has worked toward Canadianism for many years, even before the Liberals thought about it.

An hon. Member: We started the country.

Mr. Taylor: Yes. If hon. members opposite think they are the only Canadians, they should take a look at our history.

With regard to the last question which was directed to my colleague, I repeat that we are not speaking for the oil companies. I have never been an advocate of the oil companies, but I want to tell him that if it were not for the oil companies, we would be importing 90 per cent of our oil from OPEC. Put that in your pipe and smoke it. All you have to do is to look at our history. We had practically no oil in this country in 1935. So what happened?

An hon. Member: The Socreds found it.

Mr. Taylor: Back in 1937 and 1939, the Alberta government came to Ottawa, a Liberal government at that time, and tried to receive assistance to look for oil. But Alberta got nothing. The government would not invest a dime in Alberta. In fact, it took 30 years for it to give us our resources.

Why would they want us to develop them? It wanted us to stay poor and be one of the have-not provinces, which we were at that time. We were paying to the bond holders 52 cents of every dollar collected in Alberta.

We wanted to develop our resources in Alberta and make a contribution to this country. Canada would not help us. The Bank of Canada would not help us even though the late Mackenzie King promised he would during the election campaign. Finally, our minister of mines went to England and France, but he could not get financing there either. He then had to go to the United States to get the capital to develop our oil resources in Alberta.

For the information of the members of the NDP, the multinationals came in, but on our terms.

An hon. Member: They took everything.

Mr. Taylor: They did not take everything. You are just showing your ignorance. We had a definite plan to encourage investment. If they made a discovery, then the government—

An hon. Member: They took it.

Mr. Taylor: Only part of that would belong to the companies.

An hon. Member: Only part of it?

Mr. Taylor: The Liberal members are so ignorant they will not listen to the facts. Absolute ignoramuses. The record will tell the story. These multinationals came in and searched for a number of years, spending several million dollars without finding oil. When they finally made a find, did Alberta say it would take it over and confiscate it? No. Alberta said that part of the find would belong to the company and it would be divided up so the company would get every other segment and the rest would be sold to the highest bidder. The company would pay the royalties and lease rents because the resource belongs to the people of Alberta.

If we had waited for the federal government to develop it, it never would have been developed. The Liberals who are laughing on the other side, would be willing to pay 100 per cent today for all the oil that comes into Canada. They do not appreciate the fact that one province did develop its oil resource, not through state ownership but through free enterprise.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Taylor: An hon. member got up and talked about Ontario buying into Suncor. Let me tell him that under the free enterprise system the state does not have to stay out of industry, it can be in partnership with free enterprise. If this government were going into partnership with free enterprise to help provide jobs and develop the country, it would get some support. For some reason, it thinks it has to confiscate. How can it encourage Canadians to invest their life savings when they are afraid the government is going to confiscate them? I never thought I would see this day in Canada. This bill is the biggest land grab in the country.

Mr. Nielsen: Carpetbaggers.

Mr. Taylor: Money grabbers, too. If this government had been in power in the early part of this century, when Alberta was created as a province along with Saskatchewan, it would have said, "Sure, we will make you into provinces but we will not give you any resources. We will not give you the wherewithal to look after your people." Even the first Liberal government of Alberta fought the Liberals in Ottawa for that, but it did not get very far. Oh, no, the Liberals in Ottawa talked the Liberal government of Alberta out of it. The people of Alberta got fed up and elected the United Farmers of Alberta, a people's party. The United Farmers of Alberta fought tooth and nail, not for something special but only for equality with the other provinces. We wanted our resources just as the other provinces did. When the British North America Act was passed, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Ontario and Quebec entered confederation on the premise that they retained ownership of their natural resources. They insisted on that going into the BNA Act, but the Liberal government at Ottawa would not give that to Alberta and Saskatchewan until it was forced to do so. It was 1930-1931 before we got our resources.

• (2150)

The present federal government was elected, at least partly, as a free enterprise government, but now the provinces have a threat hanging over their heads: "You do what we say or we will take the resources back". We used to have a word for that when we were kids. We would have called them Indian givers, and that is no reflection on our Indian people. The federal government now wants to take back resources which were properly given to us, even though we were 25 years late in getting them.

We went to the United States and invited oil companies to come in, spend their money and find oil. They did that. They spent several million dollars.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An hon. Member: Order, you idiots.

Mr. Taylor: They are ignoramuses. They do not bother me a bit. They are so ignorant they do not even want to know the facts. If it had not been for the finds of the 1940s and 1950s we would not have the oil we have today, and hon. members opposite know it. They would be spending millions—oh, but happily; they do not mind spending $50 a barrel for Mexican oil or Iranian oil, but it hurts them terribly to buy oil from other Canadians at $25 a barrel.

Mr. Cousineau: I have heard that before.

Mr. Taylor: It hurts hon. members, it shows on their faces. They talk about building a united country when they are continuously dividing and conquering. They are dividing the country. The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) made some remarks in Quebec the other day. The hon. member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone) has outlined those remarks for us. It is shameful that a minister of the Crown should set one part of the country against another. This government has stayed in power for so many years by favouring one part of Canada over another. Several years ago, during a campaign Mr. Trudeau promised the people of Edmonton—

[Translation]

Mr. Cousineau: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. The member who has the floor should observe the custom of the House and refrain from referring to a member by his name.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): I think the member for Gatineau (Mr. Cousineau) is right. Hon. members should always refer to their colleagues by the name of the constituency they represent, as the member for such and such a riding, but not by name.

The hon. member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor).

[English]

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I was speaking in English. It would have been a courtesy if the preceding conversation had been in English too.

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Rossi: Joe Clark doesn't like that.

Mr. Huntington: Can't you control the House?

Mr. Deans: Let's pretend it's ten o'clock.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The Chair did not mean to refer to languages spoken. It is simply a rule of the House that when we refer to hon. members, we refer to their constituencies and not their names.

Mr. Taylor: I appreciate that, Mr. Speaker, and I bow to your ruling. That is a rule of the House, and I will endeavour to obey it. I might say that I have no objection to the French language or any other language. I think they are all fine, but when an address is going on and the speaker does not have his earphones on, I think it would be courteous to raise points of order in English so that we know what is going on. I would say the same thing if a member were speaking in French.

Mr. Cousineau: Mr. Speaker, if you will permit me to repeat what I said, I can show the hon. member that I can speak the two languages.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please.

Mr. Taylor: I am very proud that the hon. member can. I wish I could handle French as well as he handles English. Some day I might be able to do so.

I want to return to the point with which I was dealing. We have a wealth of oil and gas in this country because we enticed people to come in and invest. They came in and invested because they could make a dollar. They could make a profit. At the same time, they worked under the rules set out by the government of Alberta. They knew the rules were that if they found oil, as they found it at Leduc and several other places in Alberta, they would have a fair share because they spent a lot of money finding it. However, they knew they would not have it all, that the balance would be sold and that that would be the money which would come to the coffers of Alberta. That is what raised our status from that of a have-not province to that of a have province. It was done by free enterprise, not by taking over, not by nationalization and not by confiscation. I want to emphasize that. Under this bill, the Government of Canada should offer an incentive to companies to go and explore and then tell them they will get a fair share of that. But no, this government plays favourites. It gives 25 per cent of anything found to Petro-Canada, the national oil company. I do not mind Canada having a national oil company, but it should not have favourite treatment. It should work hand in hand with other oil companies and under the same rules. If it does not, we are playing favourites. The government says it is all right to play favourites because the money goes into the pockets of the people. Well, the money does not go into the pockets of the people. The money goes into the coffers of the government, and that is not the pockets of the people.

I believe in Canadianization absolutely, but I believe in the people of Canada owning our industries. The higher the percentage of Canadian people owning our industries, the better I will like it, and we should provide incentives. The greatest incentive any country in the world has found is free enterprise. We should provide the chance to make a dollar. That is not to say anyone should hog, but they should be able to make a dollar, and that is the greatest incentive.

Hon. members here who have great wealth obtained it through free enterprise, not through nationalization and not through government confiscation. This government would be wise to change its policies right away and provide incentive. We need big oil companies. We also need small oil companies, and we should treat them all fairly. We should let them make a dollar, but they should also play fairly with the people of this country so that the people will get their fair share.

I would like to see our industries owned by Canadians. The more the better, but I would like to see some of the profits from our discoveries and from our work going into the pockets of the people so that they can better educate their boys and girls, so that they can have a better standard of living and so that they can buy homes and pay the high interest rates they have to pay now. However, they cannot do that on the ordinary wages of workers today. This government has an opportunity to provide an incentive to millions of Canadians, if it would follow the policy the Clark government was going to follow.

• (2200)

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 40 deemed to have been moved.

ALASKA GAS PIPELINE—QUERY RESPECTING COMPLETION OF PROJECT. (B) EXPORTS OF GAS TO UNITED STATES

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, the question we have to debate during the next ten minutes is the matter of the Alaska gas pipeline and the responses given by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) on October 22 to a question put to him by myself. The minister is not here this evening, but his partner in crime is, so we can proceed.

I will preface my remarks with a quotation from Hansard of December 6, 1979, page 2101. At that time the gentleman who is now Minister of Energy, Mines and Resouces is quoted as saying the following with respect to the Alaska gas pipeline. He is referring to a statement by the then minister of energy, mines and resources, the hon. member for Saskatoon West (Mr. Hnatyshyn). I quote:

> There is no word in this statement regarding swaps, and nothing about the eastern Canadian situation, the building of the Quebec and Maritime pipeline, and the possibility of exports to the northeastern states. In our view, exports of natural gas to the United States should be authorized only on the basis of, first of all, an ironclad commitment regarding the building of the whole Alaska gas pipeline. Everything has to be signed, sealed and delivered, particularly the financing plan and the financing guarantees, before we start exporting one cubic foot of gas out of this country to the United States.

We have to contrast this with what he has done since being in government. The question of the Q&M tie-in was forgotten straight away. With regard to the question of gas swaps, what happens after we have exported our gas to the United States? Can we get some back from the Prudhoe Bay project? That was forgotten straight away.

Let us look at the ironclad guarantees. In my opinion, they are not guarantees. All the minister has is a best-efforts promise on the part of the United States administration and Congress. A guarantee is a guarantee because it is enforceable. There is nothing in the promises the minister has received that is enforceable in any tribunal.

The complaint I have is that on October 22 when the minister was asked a very simple and straightforward question about the difficulties that had been experienced in getting the waiver package through Congress, his reply was along the following lines. He told us on this side not to worry about it, that they have everything under control and that everything in the garden is rosy. That was his approach. He said "trust us". Can you imagine trusting the bunch on that side? That was the sum total of the minister's response.

Everything in the garden is not rosy. There are a lot of problems with the Alaska gas pipeline. A lot of delays have already been experienced. At one time the final completion date was to be in 1983. Now it is going to be 1986, or the beginning of 1987 at the very earliest, and there is the possibility of yet more delays.

The costs have escalated fantastically. We are now talking about $45 billion to construct the pipeline. With the high interest rates that have come about in the meantime and the higher prices for all commodities, these prices have doubled in the last few years.

Adjournment Debate

With regard to the waiver package before the United Stages Congress, I would like to read something from the Ottawa Citizen, a journal that is usually fairly sympathetic toward the Liberal causes. I quote from an article in the October 22 edition headlined "Alaska Gas Pipeline in Trouble" as follows:

> —the White House isn't eager to battle senior Republican politicians who oppose the waivers.

There is a lot of opposition there to the waivers.

> These include Rep. Clarence (Bud) Brown of Ohio and Rep. James T. Broyhill of North Carolina, both of whom have told the U.S. President they are "unalterably and unequivocally" opposed to any waivers that would transfer to gas users the risk that the pipeline wouldn't be finished.

That is the so-called tracking provision. How serious is the United States administration about this? It goes on to read:

> William A. Niskanen, who belongs to Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers, has acknowledged the administration's lack of enthusiasm for the waiver package.

There are a great many difficulties in getting this provision through the U.S. legislature. There are many things to be concerned about. We want from the minister honest and forthright answers as to what his plans are and how he is going to deal with these matters. Is he going to go to Washington and speak to his American counterparts? Let him admit the difficulties, tell us if he has any plans and then go to Washington. Most of all, we would like him to be honest with Parliament.

● (2205)

Mr. Roy MacLaren (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the Alaska highway natural gas pipeline has played a part in Canada-United States relations since the Transit Pipeline Treaty of the early 1970s. The treaty was followed by the Canada-U.S. agreement on the Alaska pipeline in 1977 wherein both countries formally undertook to support the project on a priority basis. In the spring of 1980, Canada approved the pre-build segments, based on assurances provided by President Carter that the line would be financed, and that his 1977 decision approving the project would be amended to permit pre-commencement billing for the Canadian segments. Further assurances were provided by the joint resolution approved unanimously by the Senate and House of Representatives and by the commitment of the industry sponsors to participate in the financing of the project.

With the election of President Reagan, there was some questioning regarding the scheduling of the pipeline. However, during his Canadian visit last March, President Reagan clearly stated his strong support for the project.

On October 7, 1981, Senator Olson announced that President Reagan had informed the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) that he was forwarding to Congress the waiver package requested by the sponsors of the pipeline project. This waiver package is a series of amendments to the U.S. enabling legislation for the pipeline.

I would like to quote from a letter from the U.S. President that was sent to the Prime Minister just prior to the submission of this waiver package to Congress. In that letter the President wrote:

> In view of the importance which you attach to this question, I wanted to advise you in advance of our public announcement that I have decided to submit for Congressional approval the full package of waivers requested by the sponsors of the Alaska natural gas transmission system. My recommendation to the House and Senate will be submitted later today. It is the view of the project sponsors that this package of waivers will facilitate the completion of the Alaska natural gas transmission system under private financing. As I made clear during our previous discussions of this matter, my administration supports the completion of this project through private financing, and it is our hope that this action will clear the way to moving ahead with it. I believe that this project is important not only in terms of its contribution to the energy security of North America, but it is also a symbol of U.S.-Canadian ability to work together co-operatively in the energy area for the benefit of both countries.

The President has also reiterated these points in his message to Congress putting forward the waiver package.

The waiver package is now being studied by the Senate energy and natural resources committee where it is supported by the Republican and Democratic leaders. It is also before the House energy and commerce committee. Both committees are expected to deal with the bill expeditiously, after which Congress has up to 30 days to make a finding.

The importance of the project is indicated by the fact that Prudhoe Bay contains about 10 per cent of U.S. reserves of natural gas. The pipeline offers the most economic means of access to this large resource.

HOUSING—REGISTERED HOUSE OWNERSHIP PROGRAM (B) REQUEST THAT MAXIMUM PERMISSIBLE LEVEL OF SAVINGS BE RAISED

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Last Friday I asked the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Cosgrove), the minister responsible for housing, two questions on the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan. I was not happy or satisfied with the answers I received.

● (2210)

The Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan, known better as RHOSP, is an excellent program. In the first place, there is a limitation on who can use it. Those who do not own a home or who have never owned a home may place money in this plan. It is a savings plan for the first home. If the money is left in the plan for ten years and used as a down payment on a house, or used for the purpose of buying furniture for the first time for a house, there is no tax to be paid. That is the incentive that is provided. If it is taken out within a ten-year period and used for other things, then it is taxable just as it would have been, although perhaps at a higher rate than when it was placed in the RHOSP.

My first question to the Minister of Public Works on Friday, October 23 was: "Has he made any representations to the Minister of Finance to increase the maximum ceiling in this plan?"

The minister did not answer this question and so I have to assume that he made no such representations or recommendations to the said minister.

Rather than answering the question, the minister appeared to argue that the present plan, which provides a maximum of $10,000, is sufficient for a down payment on a home. He mentioned the price of homes now for sale in London, Ontario, as being $30,000 or $40,000.

My question was on behalf of young people in particular who live in all parts of Canada, including cities like Vancouver, Toronto, Calgary, Ottawa, Halifax, etc. Certainly in these cities $10,000 would not be enough for a down payment on a modern home.

My supplementary question to the Minister of Public Works was: "Will he urge the Minister of Finance at least to double the present maximums?" That is, an over-all maximum in ten years of $10,000 to $20,000 and an over-all maximum per year from $1,000 to $2,000.

Again, the minister avoided the question, stating that he could not go into specifics. He then went off on an angle about difficulties in answering questions and mentioned that we have to attempt "to provide equity, not only in the housing sector, but also equity as between people facing problems with housing and those who are facing difficulties with employment." While these difficulties may be real, they have nothing to do with this particular plan or this particular problem. Such an answer to this question is not only ridiculous; it does not even start to answer the question that was asked.

The RHOSP was created for the purpose of providing an opportunity for young people to build up a fund for their first home; it provides for a maximum limit of $10,000, with a maximum contribution per year of $1,000. It is not a big thing, so doubling it would not be a big thing either, but it would at least give the down payment for a home in ten years.

The maximum of $10,000 may have been satisfactory when the program was initiated, but it is certainly not satisfactory now. I doubt if it is even satisfactory in London. This is another example of how the government is living in the past and refusing to face reality.

Even by doubling the maximum to $2,000 a year, with a $20,000 limit, this would still be low enough—but it would provide a down payment. All young people would not be able to put in $2,000, but if they could, it is a good savings plan and it would help fight inflation. Apparently the minister responsible for housing has not even discussed this problem with the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen). This will deny a lot of young people the opportunity to eventually own a home.

The RHOSP is also an effective weapon with which to fight inflation as once a contribution is put into the fund, it is locked there for the purpose of buying a home at the end of the ten-year period. If it is taken out at any time prior to the purchase of a new home, it becomes taxable. As I said before, it is limited to those who have never owned a home.

If the object of the government is to help young people to own homes of their own, then it should at least double these maximums. If it is the object of the government to effectively fight inflation, then this is a good weapon. On the other hand, if the government does not want our people to own their own homes—and the government refused to put property rights in the charter—then I can understand why the Minister of Public Works responsible for housing avoided answering my questions. A lot of young people want to invest in this savings plan but they want it to be effective so that at the end of ten years they will at least have enough for a down payment on a home.

I urge the Minister of Public Works to make strong representation to the Minister of Finance to embody this in the budget to come down on November 12.

• (2215)

Mr. Norman Kelly (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I will be brief. The hon. gentleman makes two points. The first is that the minister has refused to tell him whether he has made representations to the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen) on this particular issue. It surprises me, because the hon. gentleman opposite has been in politics long enough to know that at budget time the ministers are precluded from giving any sort of hints about the budget.

Mr. Nickerson: Just like Trudeau last night in Toronto.

Mr. Kelly: I think, in obedience to the conventions of this House and our system, the minister is acting very wisely, indeed.

The second contentious point is that the level of savings is too low and that it should, in effect, be doubled. I would like to point out to the hon. gentleman opposite that at current interest rates, savings rates in the banks, a young couple who put in $1,000 a year will, after ten years, have in excess of $25,000 saved for their home purchase. That is more than the amount the hon. member is projecting in his second question.

Therefore, I think that the present economic system already addresses his concerns, which are legitimate. Second, I think that he will have to wait for the presentation of the budget to see exactly what advice the minister gave to the Minister of Finance.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order please. The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m.

At 10.19 p.m., the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Friday, October 30, 1981

The House met at 11 a.m.

• (1105)

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

HOUSING

SUGGESTED FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE FOR HOME OWNERS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Stan Darling (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Madam Speaker, I rise on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity under the provisions of Standing Order 43. The minister responsible for housing offered to intervene personally to assist Canadians faced with losing their homes due to excessively high interest rates. I have received, and I am still receiving, calls and letters asking for help from constituents in just such a predicament. Details of each case are being forwarded to the minister for prompt action by him. In light of the fact that these pleas for assistance are urgent and real in nature and they undoubtedly represent only a small percentage of home owners in serious trouble, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Prince Edward-Hastings (Mr. Ellis):

That the minister, hearing through Members of Parliament from Canadians in dire straits, now acknowledge the gravity and magnitude of the situation and pressure his government to stop passing the buck to the banks, accept its responsibility, and prepare an immediate plan of financial assistance for home owners.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

HAZARDOUS SUBSTANCES

UREA FORMALDEHYDE—GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBILITY TO HOME OWNERS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Walter McLean (Waterloo): Madam Speaker, I rise to move a motion under the provisions of Standing Order 43. There continues to be widespread anxiety regarding the government's acceptance of responsibility to thousands of Canadians who were lured by government incentives into insulating their homes with urea formaldehyde foam. The Minister of State, when parliamentary secretary to the President of the Treasury Board, stated as follows:

—the government anticipates that its provisions will be made known in late November—

Last week nearly 300 residents of the Kitchener-Waterloo area met to discuss the effects of UFFI on their families' health, on the costs of removing foam from their homes, and on the inability to sell their contaminated dwellings. On their behalf I move, seconded by the hon. member for Simcoe North (Mr. Lewis):

That this House urge the government to announce the date in November when it will make good on its moral responsibility for the victims of urea formaldehyde foam insulation.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

THE DISABLED AND THE HANDICAPPED

MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Madam Speaker, I rise to move a motion under the provisions of Standing Order 43. On Tuesday last the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Miss Bégin) promised she would table in this House a list of recommendations from the report entitled "Obstacles" which the government had publicly claimed to have implemented, and since the minister has not yet carried out her promise, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Spadina (Mr. Heap):

That this House instruct the Minister of National Health and Welfare to table in this House, forthwith, the list of 56 recommendations from the report of the Special Committee on the Disabled and the Handicapped which the government claims have been put into effect but which no one knows very much about.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

S.O. 43

VIA RAIL

CALL FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF SPECIAL PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Madam Speaker, I wish to move a motion under the provisions of Standing Order 43. I rise on behalf of the hundreds of thousands of Canadians who have expressed their absolute opposition and dismay to the elimination of one fifth of Canada's rail passenger service, and to the callous way the government moved unilaterally to dismantle VIA Rail's transportation service. In view of the government's refusal to grant the people of Canada the right to be heard on this most important matter, and given the lack of clear and definitive policy on rail passenger service, I move, seconded by the right hon. member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark):

That this House instruct the minister to rescind the order in council, and that a special select parliamentary committee be struck to hold full public hearings and to establish thoroughly a clear rail passenger policy and a clear VIA mandate so it can function on a sound financial and legal basis.

In support of this motion, I hereby submit for immediate consideration to the Prime Minister and to the Minister of Transport, the findings of a special Progressive Conservative task force on rail passenger service, entitled "The Last Straw", which hopefully all members will agree to have appended to Hansard of this date.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

THE DISABLED AND THE HANDICAPPED

PROVISION OF FACILITIES ON AIR CANADA FLIGHTS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, I rise on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity under the provisions of Standing Order 43. Whereas, even though this is the year of the disabled, the Trudeau government—

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Taylor: —is building its transportation policies on the backs of the disabled, particularly wheelchair Canadians—for example, it plans to remove one fifth of the rail lines in Canada, a mode of travel used widely by the disabled—and by not even providing a "Washington Chair" as required equipment on Air Canada flights, which would enable the severely disabled at least to get to the washroom, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. Bradley):

That this House urges the government to continue the rail services and to provide a "Washington Chair" on all Air Canada trips lasting two hours or more.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

• (1110)

THE ECONOMY

GUIDING PRINCIPLES TO REDUCE INFLATION—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parkdale-High Park): Madam Speaker, I rise seeking the attention of all hon. members of this House on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity, under the terms of Standing Order 43. On Wednesday, October 28, in Toronto, the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) outlined three guiding principles for this country to follow in order to combat our number one economic enemy, inflation. I move, seconded by the hon. member for Dollard (Mr. Desmarais):

That collective restraint, equity for all, and growth be the guiding principles of this Parliament and of all three parties in this House to reduce inflation in Canada.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

INDIAN AFFAIRS

PROPOSED ESTABLISHMENT OF LINGUISTIC INSTITUTE IN BRITISH COLUMBIA—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Madam Speaker, while half of all Canadian native languages are in British Columbia, three of these are presently extinct and the remaining 27 are also in danger of extinction unless something is done to protect them.

My colleague in the B.C. legislature representing Victoria, Mr. Gordon Hanson, who is in the House today, has been fighting for the establishment of a native language institute for British Columbia and has received widespread support from Indian bands, churches, unions, and university departments.

I move, seconded by the hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton):

That members of this House recognize the vital importance of language to culture and social wellbeing, and that we endorse the proposal for a native language institute for the province of British Columbia, with a commitment to work with the British Columbia government toward its early establishment.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

THE MINISTRY

APPOINTMENT OF EXECUTIVE ASSISTANTS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Madam Speaker, I too rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43. In view of the executive interchange program adopted by the energy minister, whose executive assistant is also on the payroll of the government-owned oil company, Petro-Canada, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Don Valley West (Mr. Bosley):

That this novel program be extended to the private sector so that executive assistants could be supplied to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce by Chrysler Canada Ltd.; to the Minister of Communications by Rogers Cablesystems Ltd.; to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans by B.C. Packers Ltd.; to the Minister of Finance by the Royal Bank of Canada; and to the newly appointed Minister of State in the other place by those companies participating in the uranium cartel, so that these ministers can also avail themselves of unbiased and informed advice in the national interest.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

VIA RAIL

SUGGESTED RECONSIDERATION OF CUTBACKS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Lorne Greenaway (Cariboo-Chilcotin): Madam Speaker, whereas the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) was, in a previous incarnation, the co-chairman of the Unity Task Force; and whereas the railroads of Canada, which he now wishes to begin to dismantle without consultation, played such a vital role in unifying our nation, and in particular British Columbia, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Prince George-Peace River (Mr. Oberle):

That the Minister of Transport and the cabinet reconsider their action on VIA Rail cutbacks and take the advice of those learned members of the other place.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

S.O. 43

ARTS

IMPACT OF FEDERAL TAXES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Vancouver Centre (Miss Carney):

That the Minister of Finance be instructed by this House to include in his upcoming budget at least the majority of the recommendations contained in the 1977 Disney Report entitled "Federal Tax Issues of Concern to the Arts Community in Canada" so that that community will at long last be able to begin to believe that their government cares about the survival of the arts in Canada.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

[Translation]

INDUSTRY

REQUEST THAT JOBS BE GUARANTEED AT GULF CANADA, SHAWINIGAN, P.Q.—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 and request the unanimous consent of the House to introduce a motion.

In 1977, when the hon. member for Shawinigan was Minister of Trade and Commerce, his department gave a $1.5 million grant to the multinational corporation Gulf Canada for the purpose of refitting its Shawinigan plant in the hon. member's riding. Considering the fact that the agreement is to terminate this year and that Gulf Canada is threatening to sell its plant without any guarantees for its 350 workers, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin):

That immediate action be taken by the federal government to protect these jobs and that in future, the federal government obtain better guarantees for these special grants.

Madam Speaker: This motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

• (1115)

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

HOUSING

FIGURES RELATING TO STARTS

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, I wish to direct my question to the minister responsible for housing. Yesterday Statistics Canada reported a 28.3 per cent decline in building permits issued for the month of August which, of course, will reflect a sharp decline in housing starts. At that trend, we are heading toward approximately 135,000 starts for the year, which represents a shortfall of 85,000. I might add that this confirms the predictions of the secret document which the minister has tried to disown. What advice does the minister have for Canadians who are now facing this critical housing shortage, which he finally recognizes as a housing crisis?

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, this is my first opportunity to respond to a question from the hon. member for St. John's East since the House reconvened. I would like to take the opportunity to congratulate him on his new post as housing critic.

At the outset, I would like to say to him that I have been aware of changes and trends in the industry. I would indicate to him that on my last visit to his city, for example, I had the privilege of participating with the minister of housing for Newfoundland in the start of some social housing. That is one of the things the government has been able to do, to assist not only the supply of housing but also in the question of affordability. In both those cases I think we have demonstrated that we are of assistance.

FORECAST SHORTAGE OF ACCOMMODATION

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, I wish I could be gracious and return the compliment and congratulate the minister on his performance. Obviously I cannot do that because we are in a serious situation, largely as a result of the inability of the minister to respond to this crisis in the housing industry.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McGrath: I wish to reflect the concern of many people in this country. The figures released by Statistics Canada yesterday indicate that there is a crisis. We are facing a zero vacancy rate by 1983 in the major markets of this country. Indeed, we have almost arrived at that point now.

According to his own document, this shortage will create a black market situation in which families will be forced to double up. It will bring on a Soviet Union kind of housing situation in this country.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. McGrath: That is what we are facing. Non sequiturs of the minister in this House will not serve to address this situation.

Some hon. Members: Order.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. Was that the question, or does the hon. member now want to pose his question?

Mr. McGrath: Madam Speaker, with your indulgence I will now ask my question.

Given the fact we are facing zero vacancy in the major markets of this country—metropolitan Toronto is down to .4—I ask the minister, since he has met recently with the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, what advice he received from them, and more important, what advice has he offered his colleague, the Minister of Finance?

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, perhaps I could assist the hon. gentleman if he is indeed looking for some opportunity to congratulate me for work in this ministry since I came into office. I would like to point out, for example, that the statistics he referred to are out of date. The starts across this country, not only for the month of August but September as well, are higher than the figures to which the hon. member has referred. As a matter of fact the average is somewhere in the region of 180,000. They are not the figures which he selectively used in one sector.

If the hon. member is looking for some good news, he should bear in mind that starts since last year have increased from a low seasonally adjusted average rate of approximately 150,000 to the latest reported figures for the month of September, which show approximately 180,000.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1120)

Mr. McGrath: Madam Speaker, I am not surprised. In this House the minister tried to discredit a document he himself signed and submitted to the cabinet, so it is not surprising that he would now try to discredit a report released yesterday by Statistics Canada.

EFFECT OF HIGH INTEREST RATES ON INFLATION IN INDUSTRY

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, perhaps the minister can enlighten the House. Since the Minister of Finance has indicated that high interest rates are the only means of bringing down the rate of inflation in this country, can the minister tell the House how this policy of high interest rates can reduce the rate of inflation in the housing industry?

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, in my first response I indicated that in starting this new term the government did a number of things to address the industry, which we recognized was facing difficulty and would face trend difficulties. For example, in his budget last year the minister reintroduced capital cost provisions to assist on the supply side of housing through the MURB provision. That step taken by the government, which was abandoned by the government of which the hon. member was part, increased housing starts this year by an additional 20,000 units. In addition to that we have addressed the needs side or the affordability side by increasing co-op and non-profit social starts, to which I referred, and I talked about one project in the hon. member's city. We do appreciate that there are difficulties for the industry, and we have taken steps.

Returning to the comments of the Prime Minister earlier this week in metropolitan Toronto, the objectives are, on the one hand, to introduce growth in the economy while, at the same time, being sensitive and sensible with our steps.

HOME OWNERS FACING SHARP INCREASES IN MORTGAGE PAYMENTS

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is also directed to the minister responsible for housing. It is supplementary to those of my colleague. I want to put to the minister a question which is on the minds of many Canadians today. Both he and the Prime Minister have stated that the budget will address the problems only of those people who are "in dire straits". Is the minister saying to those people who are not in dire straits, those who are facing sharp increases in mortgage payments over the next few years, that they will simply have to adjust their personal budgets to these very significant increases because of circumstances which are totally beyond their control?

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, it is difficult to respond to members of the official opposition when they raise questions pertaining to housing. For example, on September 20 on the CBC the hon. member for St. John's East indicated that, in response to what we all understand to be difficult times for the industry, he was promoting massive government intervention. I take it that is not the position of the hon. gentleman who has just raised this question. As a matter of fact, in debate with me last weekend his point was that we had to show restraint and that there had to be a tailor-made response to an individual problem. I must admit I find it difficult to answer members of the opposition because I do not think they have their act together.

Mr. Wilson: Madam Speaker, perhaps the minister will get it straight; I am not asking the question for myself; I am asking it for those people who are faced with this problem and see the very fabric of our society changing because of the problems created by the government of which this minister is part. These are problems respecting interest rates and mortgage rollovers. The minister should not be answering me but answering those people who are watching.

MINISTER'S POSITION ON POLICY

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Madam Speaker, the minister responsible for housing is the minister who has taken the full brunt of the problem of very substantial mortgage payment increases these home owners face. Will the minister explain to this House how he can continue to be part of a government headed by a Prime Minister who displays the height of cynicism by asking these very same people to tighten their belts while we still have government spending increasing at runaway rates?

● (1125)

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, I can best answer that by contrasting what this government has done with what the previous government did while the hon. member's party was in office and had responsibility for the same kind of problems. I urge that this government continue, for example, to address supply. We have reintroduced the capital cost allowance which the previous government dropped. This government will continue to address affordability and those people who are impacted the most because of these problems. We have increased social starts through co-ops and MURB. Those are two very good examples of how to tailor a sensitive and sensible response to the situation.

* * *

VIA RAIL

REPORTED SLOWDOWN IN RUNNING TIME SCHEDULES—EFFECT ON PASSENGERS

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Madam Speaker, I would like to address some questions to the Minister of Transport. Yesterday the minister said he will cut more trains unless more people use them. Will the minister tell us how he expects more people to use the trains after November 15 when he is slowing down schedules so that it will take 14 hours longer to go from Edmonton to Vancouver, including an overnight stay in a hotel, and with an average speed between Sydney and Saint John of 19 miles per hour? Will he explain to the House how that will encourage more people to ride the trains?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, this morning the CBC really made news of that matter. Yesterday I was asked what was going to happen in terms of the future of railway transportation. I said it would all depend on the use that people make of trains. I felt I was reciting a banality equal only to the comment of someone who has lost an election, such as I did in 1972, and, when asked why he lost, says it was because he had fewer votes than this opponent. I thought I was saying something extremely conventional.

This morning it became almost an announcement that there would be future cuts in the system. I want to emphasize very strongly that this is not so. In fact the 20 per cent reduction that we are making is to prevent that, and to strengthen the 80 per cent that remains. What my friend will see in the future is much more concentration on giving good service in order to attract clientele. That is what will happen.

ACCOUNTING SYSTEM

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Madam Speaker, the minister still has not explained how more people are going to use trains which travel at a horse-and-buggy speed. I raised this with the minister yesterday. Has he, or will he consider as an option or alternative to abandoning these passenger routes using the Amtrak system of accounting for VIA Rail instead of the costing order of the CTC, thereby saving $164 million based on 1980 costs?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I always hesitate to tackle in debate my hon. friend who is obviously an expert, internationally recognized as such. I am only a minister. When he says that about Amtrak, it does not take anything away from the fact that the same phenomenon of route reduction is also occurring in the United States. Therefore there must be some fundamental reasons for the phenomena we are now witnessing.

On the subject of costing order 6313, the financial relationship between VIA and the railways, CN and CP, I have said before that there is a task force on the subject and that the president of VIA has views on the subject. There is a debate on this subject at the moment. I was quite willing to bring this to the transport committee in order to get the enlightenment of the members of that committee. However, that debate on the costing relationship between VIA and the railways is not of such magnitude, of such economic proportions, that it changes fundamentally, if we are going to give VIA the proper equipment, the necessity of transferring money from the deficit of operations to the capital budget of VIA. That is the fundamental need.

● (1130)

The choice cabinet had was to have five years of uncertainty, five years of agony, and five years of debate on the subject. We assumed our responsibility and we said let us have the confrontation, let us have the debate, let us have the flack now because in the very best interest—

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

* * *

TRANSPORT

PRIORITIES FOR FUTURE STRATEGY

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Madam Speaker, the minister conveniently forgets, in his protestations about wanting to appear before the transport committee, that it was his government that refused an order of reference to the transport committee the other day. Since the minister knows of the details of the strategy that were spelled out in a secret cabinet document prepared by the Minister of Economic Development, a document entitled "Priorities for Federal Government Economic Development Policies and Expenditures to the mid-1980s", I should like to ask the minister if he will confirm that the first priority for the new transportation strategy contained in that document includes termination of the Crow rate, recommendations for reduction of CN Marine subsidies, reassessment of the Maritime Freight Rates Act, greater cost recovery for federal services like dredging, navigation and icebreaking, and that there be more cost recovery to the user-pay principle?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): The reasoning of the cabinet is very basic. The demand for transportation facilities in Canada, transportation equipment, railway equipment, better airports and so on, is so great that even if my colleagues in cabinet were to give me substantial amounts of money, which they have, we still need to make the best possible use of what I would refer to as the old money. This is what we are now trying to do. I will indeed get some new money for transportation, but at the same time, my marching orders—and I am a consenting adult—are to get the best use of the money immediately available. That is what I will try to do to the best of my ability. I have already discussed with the ministers of the maritime provinces a new approach to federal transportation support—

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

* * *

ENERGY

PROGRESS OF NEGOTIATIONS ON MEGAPROJECTS IN ALBERTA

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. It has been two months since an energy agreement was signed with Alberta. As the minister knows, there is still a delay in the Alsands project north of Fort McMurray and the Imperial Oil project at Cold Lake. Is the minister or officials of his department carrying on negotiations with representatives of these two projects? Does the minister still support the construction of the two megaprojects? If negotiations are being carried on, could the minister inform the House when he will advise the House on these negotiations?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, officials of the government of Alberta and the Government of Canada have been meeting with officials of the concerned companies. Those discussions are proceeding well. However, I cannot state any particular timetable for the conclusions of those discussions. Both governments are trying to expedite those discussions. Obviously, in some instances, the companies themselves have to do further work and further examination of their forecasts.

STATUS OF COLD LAKE PROJECT

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): I have a supplementary for the same minister, Madam Speaker. The government has a $40 million stake in the Imperial Oil project at Cold Lake, a project scheduled to proceed within a year of the energy agreement being signed,—actually a year since last June. Is the minister carrying on negotiations with Imperial Oil? Does he see the $40 million that the government has invested in this project at stake at this time? Or will the project proceed?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, we are very keen on getting both the Alsands project at Fort McMurray and the Cold Lake project proceeding. The negotiations are being pursued by the officials. I have had an opportunity to discuss both projects with the heads of the corporations at various times in the last few months. We certainly hope we will reach satisfactory conclusions soon with regard to those two projects.

* * *

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

ELIMINATION OF PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND PUBLIC SERVICE POSITIONS

Mr. Tom McMillan (Hillsborough): My question is directed to the President of the Treasury Board who has just returned from Prince Edward Island. With the recent signing of the third and final phase of the P.E.I. Comprehensive Development Plan, the federal government appears to have served notice that it intends to take over some programs on the Island previously cost shared between the two levels of government but administered by the province of Prince Edward Island.

This new approach has forced the government of Prince Edward Island to eliminate some 160 public service positions. Will the federal government try to lessen the blow to provincial public servants who have been laid off by making a real effort to hire those same public servants when the federal government assumes control over programs previously administered by the province?

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (President of the Treasury Board): Madam Speaker, the Minister responsible for DREE is not here today, and I believe the Minister of Veterans Affairs is also not here today. However, I have certain knowledge of the subject, and I would be pleased to make the information available to the hon. member. First of all, the action of the federal government taking over the direction of certain aspects of spending in the province has not accounted for lay-offs of the kind that the government of Prince Edward Island is trying to justify.

Last week in Prince Edward Island the Minister of Veterans Affairs pointed out that the total number of employees that might be affected by the direct involvement of the federal government would be somewhere in the neighbourhood of 35, 45 or 50 of these employees. It is because the government of the island has not made sufficient provision for placing employees whom it knew would be laid off in any event as the program winds down toward the end of a 15-year period which expires in 1984.

In reply to the second part of the hon. member's question, there may indeed be opportunities for some employment in other sectors by reason of the federal government's involvement. However, I have no specific knowledge in that regard. I expect the minister for DREE will be addressing that question, together with his counterparts in other ministries, who have responsibility for certain aspects of the over-all program in Phase Three.

ADMINISTRATION OF FEDERALLY FUNDED PROGRAMS

Mr. Tom McMillan (Hillsborough): Madam Speaker, the President of the Treasury Board obviously does not have the facts. Since the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion is not present in the House today, and he has not been in the House for question period since Parliament reconvened, I will direct my question to the Acting Minister of DREE. The federal government seems hell bent on obtaining as much political and partisan credit as it can get from expenditures of the federal government in areas of provincial or overlapping jurisdiction, by controlling more programs itself rather than having those programs administered by the provinces.

Following the recent signing of the P.E.I. Comprehensive Development Plan, has the federal government identified the specific programs in the DREE area that it intends to take over from the province? Has it looked into this matter? Has it addressed the problems? Has it identified the programs it plans to take over and, if so, what are those programs?

Hon. W. Bennett Campbell (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Madam Speaker, for the benefit of the hon. member opposite I might shed a little light on the question that he asked. The number of positions that were terminated by the government of Prince Edward Island was 161. I indicated publicly, as have my colleagues in the various line departments, that for the number of programs directly affected where direct delivery of programs will imply a reduction in employees, that reduction amounts to between 38 and 51 positions. Unfortunately the government of Prince Edward Island has chosen to lay off individuals who, from the beginning of the plan, were never cost shared and were clearly in areas of provincial jurisdiction. It is a question that it must answer.

* * *

THE CONSTITUTION

DISCUSSIONS WITH NATIVE COUNCIL OF CANADA

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister, the Prime Minister has given his word to the Native Council of Canada that he will meet with them to discuss matters that he will be discussing with the first ministers next week. Will the Prime Minister indicate whether he intends to keep his word, or is that another promise to be added to the already long list of broken promises?

● (1140)

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, in this particular case the fact that I have not met with native leaders yet is due to causes which the hon. member knows well, such as the fact that we have suffered several weeks of delay in getting on with the final stage of the constitutional debate. I always indicated to them that I intended meeting with them this fall. That will still be the case, but I find it more useful to meet with them after we have settled this constitutional matter in a way that they will know what role they will be able to play in the next stages. The hon. member will recall that in the resolution before the House provision is made for meetings over a period of two years with the native leaders. I am waiting for that resolution to be accepted to give effect to that undertaking.

TIMING OF MEETING

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, the Native Council of Canada clearly understood that the Prime Minister's word related to a meeting with the Native Council prior to his meeting with the premiers next week. They will now know that his word is like the snow—it goes away in the spring.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, that is hardly a question. That is a comment which is very far from the truth.

Mr. Paproski: Then why are you answering it?

Mr. Trudeau: How can the hon. member say that the native people know that? They did not know when I would be meeting with the premiers any more than the hon. member. The agreement was that we would meet sometime this fall, and I say that I will keep that agreement. Whether it was to be before or after the premiers' meeting was never discussed with the native leaders. The hon. member knows that. He is just making up things, as he often does.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

POST OFFICE

MONARCH'S PORTRAIT ON POSTAGE STAMPS

Mr. D. M. Collenette (York East): Madam Speaker, my question is addressed to the Prime Minister. Can the Prime Minister tell the House whether press reports are true that Her Majesty's portrait will not be included in a new series of postage stamps to be issued next year?

Some hon. Members: Sit down!

Mr. Collenette: If this is true, can the Prime Minister assure the House that such a change does not reflect government policy heralding the diminution of the role of the monarchy in Canada?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I realize the monarchy is not a subject which interests hon. members opposite, but I know that on this side—

Mr. Andre: At least blush!

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Trudeau: You hear the groaning, Madam Speaker. We are not groaning on this side. They are goaning over there.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): You are whining.

Mr. Trudeau: People on this side were concerned by an article which was shown to me, appearing in this morning's papers, that indicated the 1982 stamp program has not been given final approval. That is true, and that is why the Post Office will have to publish its first stamp in January without an absolute figure on that stamp as to the amount of cents that the stamp composes. But as to the final decision on whether the Queen will appear on any stamp in 1982—

Mr. Stevens: A fill-in stamp.

Mr. Trudeau: —the article says that this decision will be made later this year. I can tell the House that that decision has been made, that there will be a Queen on the stamp in 1982.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mrs. Mitchell: Now, how about the economy?

* * *

HOUSING

EFFECT OF STRIKE ON PEOPLE RENTING ACCOMMODATION IN THOMPSON, MANITOBA

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Madam Speaker, I have a question which is more important to some people in Thompson. My question is directed to the minister responsible for CMHC. It may not be important to Liberal backbenchers, but it is important to the people of my riding. Last week CMHC sent out eviction notices to a number of people who are on strike against INCO Metals. These people are willing to pay partial payments of their rents. This practice is acceptable to private landlords in Thompson. I hope it is acceptable to the minister responsible for CMHC.

In light of the fact that CMHC has over 50 per cent of the rental accommodations in the city of Thompson, will the minister assure the people of Thompson that there will be no evictions as long as there are reasonable partial payments of rents? Will he assure us that in Future CMHC will not send out eviction notices only five days before eviction takes place, in the winter climate?

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, this is the first notice I have had of the points raised by the hon. member. Quite frankly I am surprised that any eviction notices went out, because in mid-September I instructed the president of the corporation, attending present discussions on housing and the representations which were made by the public generally, that no notices should go out. I am happy to take the representations to heart. I will bring them to the attention of the corporation immediately.

STAY OF EVICTIONS SOUGHT

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Madam Speaker, I have a letter from the CMHC office in Thompson, Manitoba, dated October 21, 1981. It demands payment or eviction by October 26. It is a form letter; just the date and the amount are filled in, so obviously it is not something new. Could the minister assure us that if these people make partial payments, which is reasonable under the circumstances, they will not be evicted? It is a matter of immediate concern to those people.

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, I indicated the immediate response I would take, that is, to have the president of the corporation contact the local branch and that any notice of eviction would be stayed for the time being. I will take the representations and convey them to the corporation to take a look at the situation, if indeed it is as alarming as the hon. member pointed out.

* * *

ENERGY

EAST COAST OFFSHORE EXPLORATION PERMITS

Mr. Maurice Harquail (Restigouche): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. The minister recently concluded his third agreement on oil pricing and taxation with a producing province. He is presently attempting to reach similar agreements on offshore oil with the governments of Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and British Columbia. Could the minister indicate to the House, in light of these talks, what is happening on the deadline for submitting proposals relating to the new east coast offshore exploration lands in Atlantic Canada?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, certain exploration permits were being considered for issuance by November 10 on significant blocks of land on the east coast. However, the government of Newfoundland requested that we extend the delay for issuing those permits until the conclusion of our discussions in February. In the spirit of compromise and good faith, and in order to advance the discussions and the negotiations, I have decided to extend the delay for consideration of those permits until February 28 and thus fully answer the request made by members of the government of Newfoundland in order to accommodate them in our discussions.

Mr. Clark: That would be a good date for VIA Rail.

AGRICULTURE

QUERY RESPECTING STABILIZATION PAYMENTS TO APPLE GROWERS

Mr. J. R. Ellis (Prince Edward-Hastings): Madam Speaker, I have a couple of questions for the Minister of Agriculture which I will try to compile into one. The minister will be aware that the apple crop in 1980 was overly large and that stabilization payments should have been made then. Also he will be aware that in the winter of 1980-81 there was a tremendous amount of winter kill on the trees. First, when will the stabilization be paid for the 1980 crop of apples? Second, will he put any program into place to assist orchard growers who lost up to 40 and 50 per cent of their trees in the winter kill of 1980-81?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, I am sure the hon. member is aware that we make no payment for losses which can be covered by crop insurance. If I understand correctly, there may be reason to pay in one of the provinces where such coverage was not available to farmers.

Yes, we have submitted figures for the stabilization payment for the crop production year of 1980. I think our submission is around $20 million. Yes, it will be considered very soon. I met with the Canadian Horticultural Council this morning to discuss that figure.

* * *

● (1150)

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

PROSTITUTION IN VANCOUVER

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the acting minister of justice because the Minister of Justice is not in the House today. I know the hon. member is aware of serious problems which are experienced by residents of the west end of Vancouver because of the presence of prostitutes and pimps on their streets. He knows that the residents have organized themselves into a group called "Concerned Residents of the West End," to protect themselves. We are talking here about passion in the parking lots and clients in the churches of the residential neighbourhood. The hon. member is also aware that the people in our area feel that the prostitutes have turned the neighbourhood into a sexual marketplace, as the residents constantly write me.

In light of the need for stronger federal legislation to deal with this problem, why is it not on the agenda for the federal-provincial justice ministers' meeting which will be held next week?

Mr. Jim Peterson (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice and Minister of State for Social Development): Madam Speaker, I am very pleased to respond to the question of the hon. member. I have had the opportunity to enter into discussions with some of the concerned citizens from the west end of Vancouver on this very important matter. As the hon. member points out so correctly to this House, they have indicated that their neighbourhood is in the process of being destroyed and that action must be taken to stop this intent.

I understand that representations have been made to the provincial government of British Columbia, which is concerned with the law enforcement provisions. Our department has this matter under very active consideration at this time. It is a matter of very grave concern to our government.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

CRIMINAL CODE PROVISIONS

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is also addressed to the acting minister who, of course, as the justice minister, has failed to bring forward any answers. This is not an issue of provincial jurisdiction or municipal jurisdiction; it is strictly federal, and it should be on next week's agenda.

In the past the justice minister has said that the opposition to changes in the Criminal Code comes from women's groups. Would he please tell the House which women's groups have indicated that they oppose measures which would deliver the residential neighbourhood of the west end back to the people who live there and away from the prostitutes and pimps who now control it?

Mr. Jim Peterson (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice and Minister of State for Social Development): The question, Madam Speaker, refers to the statements previously made by the minister. I am not aware of those statements, and because he is not in the House I therefore cannot respond to them. However, I do wish to reiterate the fact that our government and the minister are concerned about this situation, and will be taking measures.

* * *

COMMUNICATIONS

RECEPTION OF TELEVISION SIGNALS VIA FOREIGN SATELLITES

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Communications who will know that yesterday the government just lost its second case relating to the unauthorized reception of foreign signals from foreign satellites, with the result that the government's communications policy is left in tatters in that area. What is he going to do next?

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, I would like to point out, first of all, that this is a prosecution which was not launched by the government, as such, but by the CRTC.

Obviously, it is a question of importance. While I am most sympathetic to the desires of the residents of Newfoundland to receive PBS, as are many hundreds of thousands of Canadians, and I think we must find some way of seeing that they do receive this type of signal, the decision itself will undoubtedly be appealed, once we have had the opportunity of examining it because, if the initial reports that have come to me are correct, it has far-reaching implications.

The implication would be that any cable undertaking in this country could simply bring in whatever signals it wanted from American satellites and rebroadcast them over the Canadian system. That, in itself, may not be an unfortunate result, when one is looking at the PBS system, but there are a number of other signals on the American satellites, and the proliferation of such signals would endanger the continued existence of the Canadian broadcasting system as we know it. There are a number of other signals which are perhaps not as desirable as the PBS signals. I could mention the three pornographic channels that exist at the moment on American satellites.

POSSIBILITY OF DISCUSSIONS WITH UNITED STATES

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Madam Speaker, the minister will be aware that the FCC in the United States is deregulating and is prepared to liberalize its policy with regard to international reception of signals. Second, he will be aware that provincial governments have called upon him to begin negotiations with the United States to allow for the reciprocal reception of signals off each other's satellites. Third, he will be aware of the fact that the Therrien Committee, chaired by a member of the federal government's CRTC, recommended exactly that.

Is he now prepared to open discussions with the United States to allow for reciprocal reception of at least a limited number of each country's satellite programs?

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, our interest, of course, is in seeing to it that all Canadians receive access to approximately the same number of signals no matter where they live in the country. The major initiative in that regard was taken last year when the CRTC authorized the CanCom organization, which is headquartered in Whitehorse, which is in the riding of the hon. member's House leader. That system itself is making available on satellite four television signals right across Canada—one from a Vancouver station, one from an Edmonton station, one from a Hamilton station, and another one which is basically a French language station—plus eight radio signals. Therefore, vast progress has been made in a very short period of time, making a larger number of signals available to Canadians in every part of the country.

On the question of extending what is commonly known as the three plus one rule, which is really the only subject of discussion at this moment, I do not believe that anyone in this House would want to argue that we should have a completely open sky policy in this country and that we should allow all Canadian cable companies, for instance, to rebroadcast every signal that is available off air or coming in from the United States satellites. On the question of three plus one, we have already approached the American authorities and we have had discussions at the very preliminary state, and we will be continuing those discussions.

* * *

THE ENVIRONMENT

CHEMICAL POISONING OF LAKE ONTARIO

Mr. Peter Lang (Kitchener): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the minister responsible for the environment. Can the minister confirm reports of dangerous levels of dioxin being found in Lake Ontario fish; would be comment on any hazard there is to drinking water now or in the future; and could he inform the House what steps the government is taking to impress upon the United States President and Congress that they cannot continue to allow their chemical companies to poison Canadian fish, Canadian lakes, Canadian drinking water, and Canadian people?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of the Environment and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Madam Speaker, there are, indeed, recent indications of detection of higher levels of dioxin in the Great Lakes. It is not entirely clear whether these represent increased levels, or whether it is simply that the sophistication of our detection procedure is now such that we can detect quantities which we were not able to detect in the past. It is a matter of great concern to us.

I met earlier this week with public action groups which are concerned about this issue. We have jointly agreed that it is very important to come together with the province of Ontario to co-ordinate our strategy for responding to this problem. I will be meeting with the officials and the minister, my colleague in the provincial government, within a very few days. We believe that it is possible to continue the very strong representation we have been making toward the United States in relation to this problem. The problem is not, we believe, that there are any new sources of entry of dioxin into the Great Lakes system.

Some hon. Members: Enough!

Mr. Crosbie: A lot of acid gas, is all it is.

Mr. Roberts: Hon. members across the aisle may not be concerned about the situation of the Niagara River and the content of dioxin in the lakes, but I can assure them that it is of very great concern to very many hon. members in the House—unfortunately, not so many on that side of the House.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Stop talking about it and answer the question.

Mr. Roberts: The point, Madam Speaker, is not that there is not so many new sources of entry of dioxin, but more probably that there is leaching to the water system from the old sites of dioxin disposal, particularly in relation to the Hooker chemical plant. On that point we have been making continuing representation to the Americans, and we have assisted in the legal process in the United States to try to ensure that those problems are corrected. We will continue with that kind of effort.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

THE ADMINISTRATION

ROLE OF FORMER DEPUTY MINISTER IN FORMATION OF URANIUM CARTEL

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, my question, directed to the Prime Minister, relates to a matter with which he will be familiar. In the interview given by his new Minister of State, Senator Jack Austin, to The Vancouver Sun on October 15, 1981, the new Minister of State indicated that he, personally, in his then capacity as deputy minister of energy, mines and resources, initiated those international discussions which led to charges being laid in Canada in relation to the uranium cartel.

Mr. Crosbie: When is he going to be charged?

Mr. Clark: He said that he could not elaborate on his role because of the government's gag order.

I have two questions for the Prime Minister. One, would he agree to suspend that gag order as it relates to a member of his ministry; second, would he make a reference that would allow his new minister to testify before an appropriate committee of Parliament so that we can determine his exact role in the establishment of the uranium cartel and, consequently, his fitness to serve in the ministry of Canada, and the reasons as to why he was not named among the unindicted co-conspirators?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I must remind the hon. Leader of the Opposition that what he calls a gag rule is a rule which was brought down to prevent United States law from having—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Trudeau: —extraterritorial effects; in other words, to prevent United States law from acting with compelling force in Canada. That is the gag rule of which the hon. member disapproves. We believe then, and we believe now, that it is important to protect Canadians from being summoned by a writ of the United States government to do things in this country which are legal. We believe that is the proper position to approve.

● (1200)

With respect to why Senator Austin was not named, surely the question should not be addressed to me. It should be addressed to those who conducted an investigation over a period of several months, with independent counsel, and who brought out a report which indicated that certain actions should be taken and certain procedures should be followed, but they did not involve Senator Austin. It was an inquiry carried out by an independent tribunal, and I do not believe that it is up to the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition or myself to second guess that work.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST FOR REFERRAL TO STANDING COMMITTEE

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, I am sure the Right Hon. Prime Minister would not want to have among his ministers someone over whom a cloud of suspicion hangs, as it does in the case of Senator Austin.

An hon. Member: There are a dozen of them.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark: Perhaps some of the hon. members on the government side do want to have that sort of suspicion hang over the ministry, but members of this House of Commons do not want that to occur.

Mr. Crosbie: It is a chain gang.

Mr. Clark: My question is quite specific to the Prime Minister. It relates to our ability as a Parliament to judge the fitness to serve in the ministry of Canada of a new minister of the Crown, and to look into the question of the role of that individual, then in the Public Service of Canada, in the uranium cartel. Would the Prime Minister authorize his minister, Senator Austin, to speak with absolute freedom about all aspects of his personal involvement in the uranium cartel?

Would the Prime Minister then make an appropriate reference so that a committee of this House of Commons, which is concerned about the propriety of actions of ministers, could examine Senator Austin, could learn all of the facts of his involvement, and could answer the question as to why people who were inferior to him in the Public Service of Canada are listed as unindicted co-conspirators, but Senator Austin is not?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I can answer unequivocally that in so far as I know there is no cloud of suspicion over Senator Austin.

Mr. Crosbie: That's what you think.

Mr. Trudeau: If hon. members want to make some form of accusation, they can do so. But we know that the commission of inquiry into the whole of uranium matter and the matter of the cartel came up without any indication that Senator Austin had acted reprehensibly in any way. So in so far as any sincere member of this House is concerned, that should indicate there is no cloud of suspicion. If the hon. member opposite wants to invent a cloud of suspicion and then justify that suspicion by saying that we will then go fishing into people's past lives, I suggest that is not a very democratic way to proceed. An objective inquiry took place. The inquiry found no cloud of suspicion. If the hon. member still sees a cloud of suspicion, let him make an accusation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

STATEMENT MADE BY MINISTER

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, Senator Austin has made an admission. He has also indicated that he is not free to speak fully because of the gag order. That was his testimony. Will the Prime Minister of Canada make arrangements to allow his minister to speak freely and tell the whole truth to a committee of this House of Commons?

Mr. Crosbie: Remove the gag.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition said that Senator Austin made an admission. Yes, he made an admission that he was deputy minister at a certain time in history. That is known. The commission of inquiry looked at the actions of the government and of its officials at that time and found no cloud of suspicion.

What does the Hon. Leader of the Opposition mean when he says that Senator Austin made an admission? The Leader of the Opposition could make an admission that he was Prime Minister for a short time. But what does that mean? Does he mean that he was guilty of something, apart from not knowing how to count?

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

IMPORTATION OF URANIUM MINED IN NAMIBIA

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Madam Speaker, my question is addressed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. It concerns the importation of uranium mined in Namibia by a federal Crown corporation, Eldorado Nuclear Limited. In September the Secretary of State for External Affairs expressed concern that the importation of uranium from Namibia, whether or not it was legal, would legitimize the South African presence in Namibia. In light of that, and if the minister goes along with that, could he tell the House why he allowed Eldorado Nuclear to import uranium mined in Namibia?

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, there is no infraction of any national or international law, nor any policy of the government that has been established with respect to the action to which the hon. gentleman refers. Therefore, when the hon. member asks me why I do not stop the importation of uranium from Namibia, I cannot because I have no authority to stop it.

As I indicated in the interview to which the hon. gentleman refers, we are concerned about such a situation. But at the same time the hon. member has to take into account that settlement attempt by the contact group of five is proceeding very well. This is a much better way to deal with Namibia's problems than concentrating on this one incident.

LEGISLATION SOUGHT TO BAN IMPORTS FROM NAMIBIA

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Madam Speaker, the minister is quoted as saying in a CBC television interview that, whether or not it is a question of law, he is still very concerned about the morality of the issue. In light of the United Nations resolutions of 1970 and 1971 concerning Namibia and South Africa's presence in Namibia, and in order not to violate the spirit of those resolutions, is the Secretary of State for External Affairs now prepared to introduce legislation into this House that would prohibit the importation of any goods from Namibia?

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Secretary of State for External Affairs): No, Madam Speaker, that is not policy at the present time. As the hon. gentleman has correctly indicated, I am concerned about the morality of the situation. The law does not always immediately adjust to morality, and we are in a situation now where there is a reasonable chance of proceeding to a settlement of the Namibian problem in a very short time.

* * *

PETITIONS

TABLING OF REPORTS OF CLERK OF PETITIONS

Madam Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the Clerk of the House has laid upon the Table the reports of the Clerk of Petitions stating that he has examined the petitions presented by hon. members on Thursday, October 29, 1981, and finds that they meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

* * *

REMEMBRANCE DAY

OPPORTUNITY FOR MEMBERS TO LAY WREATHS AT CENOTAPHS

Hon. Steven E. Paproski (Edmonton North): Madam Speaker, I have a point of order. It was may understanding that the Minister of Veterans Affairs (Mr. Campbell) would announce some time this week that Members of Parliament from this party and from other parties would have the opportunity to lay wreaths at different cenotaphs on behalf of the federal government.

Madam Speaker: The hon. member does not have a point of order. He has a question which he might want to raise during question period, but it is not a point of order.

COMBINES

REQUEST FOR TABLING OF COMMISSION REPORT ON URANIUM CARTEL

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I am sorry to see that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) has already left the House but perhaps someone could answer on his behalf. In replying to a question posed by my leader with respect to the uranium cartel, you will recall the Prime Minister said that the combines investigation report threw no shadow of doubt nor any other suggestion of wrongdoing concerning Senator Austin. As all hon. members know, we have not seen that report.

My point of order is to ask the Prime Minister to table that report so that all members of Parliament, based on the evidence, could judge for themselves whether any reference to the senator of a questionable nature is made in that report. In short, as the report has now been referred to in debate, I suggest that under the rules the requirement is that it be tabled.

Madam Speaker: The rule that applies in the House is that if someone quotes from a report, then he or she is obligated to table it. However, I am sure the Prime Minister will take note of the hon. member's request, and it is up to the Prime Minister to decide whether to comply with it.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

DISABLED AND THE HANDICAPPED

TABLING OF INITIAL GOVERNMENT RESPONSE TO "OBSTACLES" REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE

Hon. W. Bennett Campbell (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Madam Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 41(2), I have the pleasure to table on behalf of the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Miss Bégin), in both official languages, the initial response of the federal government to the "Obstacles" Report of the Special Committee on the Disabled and the Handicapped.

* * *

● (1210)

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 1,506, 2,722, 2,752, 3,029 and 3,227.

Order Paper Questions

[Text]

ANGLICAN CHURCH RESOLUTIONS

Question No. 1,506—Mr. Cossitt:

Is the government aware that the General Synod of the Anglican Church of Canada at its June session passed certain matters related to government on the subject of pensions, abortion, a bill of rights, human rights, industrial development and native land claims and (a) if so, what is the government's policy on the subjects (b) if not, will it contact the Anglican Church of Canada for copies of such resolutions to consider the policies written therein?

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of National Health and Welfare, Justice, Regional Economic Expansion and Indian Affairs and Northern Development as follows:

In so far as the Department of National Health and Welfare is concerned:

(a) On the subject of pensions, the Synod recommended that its national executive explores whether or not government pension and welfare payments discriminate against married couples, and it requested its officers to take action, if appropriate. It is the view of the Department of National Health and Welfare that the pension programs it administers do not discriminate against married couples. The guaranteed income supplement is paid at a higher level to a single pensioner than to married pensioners, but this is considered to be a legitimate reflection of their relative cost of living.

(b) Not applicable.

In so far as the Department of Justice is concerned: No. (a) Not applicable. (b) Not applicable. We would, of course, be pleased to receive copies of the resolutions relevant to the department's mandate and would give them consideration.

In so far as the Department of Regional Economical Expansion is concerned: (a) and (b) The Department is aware of the resolutions of the General Synod of the Anglican Church. The text of the resolutions however is not available since it has not yet been published.

In so far as the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development is concerned: (a) and (b) No. The department would, however, be pleased to receive a copy of the pertinent resolution(s) for comment.

NUMBER OF ABORTIONS SINCE 1975

Question No. 2,722—Mr. Beatty:

For each year since 1975, by province, how many fetuses were aborted at (a) 21 weeks or over (b) 13 weeks or over?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Minister of Supply and Services): The tables below give the number of therapeutic abortions authorized under the current abortion legislation and performed in hospitals with therapeutic abortion committees. These tables are tabulated by province since 1975.

The gestation period referred to in tables I and II is the interval between the onset of the last menstrual period and the expulsion or removal of the fetus. The area refers to the residence of the women who obtained the therapeutic abortions.

The data for 1980 are not yet available.

Table I

Number of fetuses therapeutically aborted with gestations 21 weeks and over

Area	1975	1976	1977	1978	1979
Newfoundland	1	—	2	—	1
Prince Edward Island	—	—	1	—	—
Nova Scotia	10	16	5	10	11
New Brunswick	2	3	1	2	2
Quebec	19	22	54	42	33
Ontario	31	19	37	31	23
Manitoba	2	2	6	4	—
Saskatchewan	12	2	1	4	6
Alberta	11	14	26	12	13
British Columbia	20	14	17	17	25
Yukon	1	1	—	—	—
Northwest Territories	—	—	—	—	—
Canada	109	93	150	122	114

Table II

Number of fetuses therapeutically aborted with gestations 13 weeks and over

Area	1975	1976	1977	1978	1979
Newfoundland	64	138	168	174	166
Prince Edward Island	13	8	11	7	10
Nova Scotia	290	382	367	400	314
New Brunswick	95	99	82	95	84
Quebec	963	1,060	1,004	1,028	1,054
Ontario	4,409	4,109	3,882	3,910	3,873
Manitoba	394	367	421	500	277
Saskatchewan	290	165	126	146	205
Alberta	948	1,064	1,226	1,317	1,363
British Columbia	1,681	1,724	1,704	1,888	1,752
Yukon	23	11	19	14	14
Northwest Territories	9	26	23	31	17
Canada	9,179	9,153	9,033	9,510	9,129

Note: 21 weeks and over included.

NATIONAL ACCOUNT SINCE 1926

Question No. 2,752—Mr. Cossitt:

For each year since Confederation, on a national accounts basis, what was the (a) spending (b) revenue (c) surplus or deficit of the government?

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of State (Finance)): The federal government revenue, expenditure and surplus (or deficit) on a national accounts basis from 1926 to 1980-81 are shown in the list below. Figures were not compiled for the years prior to 1926.

Federal government: National accounts basis

	Revenue	Expenditure ($ Millions)	Surplus or Deficit (–)
1926	389	–321	68
1927	404	–336	68
1928	449	–344	105

	Revenue	Expenditure ($ Millions)	Surplus or Deficit (−)
1929	418	−362	56
1930	293	−389	−96
1931	249	−409	−160
1932	233	−387	−154
1933	266	−380	−114
1934	316	−409	−93
1935	332	−453	−121
1936	422	−459	−37
1937	485	−476	9
1938	437	−524	−87
1939	481	−483	−2
1940	884	−1,024	−140
1941	1,523	−1,550	−27
1942	2,042	−3,765	−1,723
1943	2,469	−4,412	−1,943
1944	2,611	−5,320	−2,709
1945	2,466	−4,298	−1,832
1946	2,632	−2,877	−245
1947	2,776	−2,089	687
1948	2,717	−1,952	765
1949	2,699	−2,215	484
1950-51	3,340	−2,470	870
1951-52	4,237	−3,715	522
1952-53	4,790	−4,575	215
1953-54	4,753	−4,599	154
1954-55	4,643	−4,735	−92
1955-56	5,164	−4,794	370
1956-57	5,849	−5,196	653
1957-58	5,504	−5,606	−102
1958-59	5,486	−6,263	−777
1959-60	6,307	−6,560	−253
1960-61	6,500	−6,815	−315
1961-62	6,858	−7,355	−497
1962-63	7,062	−7,466	−404
1963-64	7,541	−7,728	−187
1964-65	8,549	−8,153	396
1965-66	9,312	−8,719	593
1966-67	10,260	−10,024	236
1967-68	11,189	−11,336	−147
1968-69	12,696	−12,621	75
1969-70	14,815	−13,837	978
1970-71	15,734	−15,823	−89
1971-72	17,820	−18,075	−255
1972-73	20,614	−20,812	−198
1973-74	23,987	−23,801	186
1974-75	30,763	−30,810	−47
1975-76	32,642	−36,560	−3,918
1976-77	36,095	−40,323	−4,228
1977-78	36,148	−45,541	−9,393
1978-79	39,744	−49,369	−9,625
1979-80	45,157	−54,472	−9,315
1980-81	52,847	−62,711	−9,864

Note: Figures for 1926 to 1949 relate to calendar years while figures from 1950-51 on are on a fiscal year basis. As an indication of comparability, the 1950 revenue, expenditure and surplus were $3,020 million, $2,370 million and $650 million respectively compared to corresponding 1950-51 figures of $3,340 million, $2,470 million and $870 million.

MR. ED WEBSTER

Question No. 3,029—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Is the government aware that Mr. Ed Webster of the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce in Toronto was telephoned on August 20, 1981 by a member of the staff of the office of the Hon. member for Leeds-Grenville as a result of an inquiry from a constituent and, with reference to the constituent, did Mr. Webster state "Mr. . . . can drop dead" and, if so (a) is it government policy to permit public servants to refer to citizens in such terms (b) is it government policy to permit public servants to make such remarks to members of Parliament or members of their staff when they are requesting information?

2. Did Mr. Webster also state that he resented "political pressure" being placed upon him and is it government policy to consider an inquiry to a government department by a constituent as something a member of Parliament should not follow up on to obtain legitimate information and does the government construe this as "political pressure"?

3. Did Mr. Webster receive a telephone call following the incident on the same day from the Hon. member for Leeds-Grenville and, in the course of this conversation, did he (a) admit that he said the constituent could drop dead (b) say that he resented the constituent contacting the member's office on the grounds that he had no business to do so because the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce had been working on the matter for some time (c) allege that the "political pressure" was being sought by the constituent and did he condemn the constituent for calling his member of Parliament?

4. (a) Is the government aware that the member for Leeds-Grenville pointed out to Mr. Webster that every Canadian had the right to call his member of Parliament at any time (b) was it also pointed out to Mr. Webster that he was a public servant who should serve the public rather than make abusive statements about them?

5. (a) What is a complete record of Mr. Webster's history in the Public Service (b) has Mr. Webster ever been given a course in public relations and (i) if so, on what date (ii) if not, will the government provide such a course for Mr. Webster to prevent further incidents of this kind?

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): If the hon. member has a complaint about a public servant he would be better advised to communicate directly with the minister concerned rather than attack publicly an individual who has no equivalent vehicle by which he may defend himself. For this reason the government will not answer this question or any question similar to it.

COST OF CABINET MEETING

Question No. 3,227—Mr. Cossitt:

1. What was the total cost of the cabinet meeting held at Mount Orford, Quebec in the fall of 1981, including transportation to and from, accommodation, food, beverages and the cost for the staff of cabinet ministers and of the Prime Minister and any others in attendance?

2. For what reason was the meeting not held in Ottawa and would it not have been at a considerably less cost to the taxpayer?

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1. There has not been a cabinet meeting held at Mount Orford, Quebec, in the fall of 1981.

2. Not applicable.

[English]

Madam Speaker: The questions enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary have been answered.

* * *

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDERS FOR RETURNS

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, if questions Nos. 1,667 and 2,692 could be made orders for returns, these returns would be tabled immediately.

Madam Speaker: Order Paper questions Nos. 1,667 and 2,692 will be deemed to have been made orders for return. Is that agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Madam Speaker: Returns tabled forthwith.

[Text]

APPLICATIONS FOR DIP GRANTS

Question No. 1,667—Mr. McKenzie:

1. What is the total number of applications currently before the Defence Industry Productivity Programme (DIP) and what are the names of the companies?

2. What are the names of the companies currently being considered for rebates under the Programme and what is the dollar value of each rebate?

3. What is the length of time each company has been waiting and on what date will they receive an answer?

4. What was the total amount of rebates considered by DIP in the (a) 1978 (b) 1979 fiscal year, and what are the names of the companies who received a rebate?

5. What is the total amount of rebates awarded so far in the 1980 fiscal year, and what are the names of the companies who received a rebate?

Return tabled.

APPLICATIONS TO TRAVEL BY SOVIET DIPLOMATS

Question No. 2,692—Mr. Jelinek:

1. What number of Soviet diplomats, restricted to the confines of the National Capital Region, asked for special permits to travel in other parts of Canada in the past (a) six months (b) year (c) two years (d) three years (e) five years?

2. In each case (a) what was his/her name and position (b) how many times did he/she apply (c) was the application (i) approved (ii) rejected?

Return tabled.

[English]

Mr. Smith: Madam Speaker, I would ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Madam Speaker: Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADA OIL AND GAS ACT

MEASURE RESPECTING OIL AND GAS INTERESTS

The House resumed, from Thrusday, October 29, consideration of Bill C-48, to regulate oil and gas interests in Canada lands and to amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on National Resources and Public Works, and Motions Nos. 21 (Mr. Wilson) and 22 (Mr. Waddell).

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, the government under the Right Hon. Joe Clark would have enabled thousands of Canadians to become involved with Petro-Canada today in a meaningful way. The people would have got a share of the profits in their own pockets to spend as they chose. The developers and producers would have had an incentive to go out and search for oil and gas knowing their findings and successes would not be expropriated by the government and given to one of their competitors, as will be done under Bill C-48. They would not have been denied a fair profit. The Crown would also have got a fair share. The companies, the people and the workers have confidence in the Right Hon. Joe Clark. They have no confidence—

Some hon. Members: Order.

An hon. Member: That is not parliamentary language.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. Last evening the Chair asked the hon. member to refer to members by their constituencies and not by their names. I again invite him to do so.

Mr. Taylor: The companies, the people and the workers have confidence in the right hon. member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark).

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Taylor: They have no confidence in the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) or in the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde). Without confidence there is little or no investment, and we see that occurring in Canada with our money going out of the country. When there is little or no investment there are few or no findings of new oil and gas. This also means few or no jobs, and that is why we have almost one million people unemployed.

The right hon. member for Yellowhead believes in and practises free enterprise. The present Prime Minister does not believe in free enterprise. He believes in socialism, collectivism and government monopoly, and has no intention of letting free enterprise work or function. Under a Tory government Canadianism would be more meaningful with more ownership of industry by rank and file Canadians—not only the rich, the everyday worker. There would be more investment in Canada and less Canadian money going out of our country with more jobs for Canadians. This would all be done under a free enterprise system.

Free enterprise built this country and free enterprise today is being slowed down by the barnacles of socialism being tacked on to it by the present government. The Tory government would have built up this country before, but the next time we have a Tory government we will have a free enterprise system. Free enterprise is being discouraged in Canada today. Even the Prime Minister gets on the radio and tells us free enterprise has failed. Free enterprise has not failed. If there has been any failure it has been because there has been too much socialism and collectivism attached. These barnacles slow down free enterprise. There is no better incentive in the world than enabling someone to make a profit through hard work, but this government is—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. gentleman but his allotted time has expired.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Mr. Speaker, in joining in this debate I think it would be wise to remind hon. members of what, in effect, Motions Nos. 21 and 22 would do if carried by the House as a suitable amendment to Bill C-48. The reason I say this is that I think often in debate in this House we get away from actually dealing with the motion before us.

If I may take a few minutes I would like to refer hon. members to Clause 27 of Bill C-48. This clause actually deals with what is called the Crown's share as anticipated by the government in what it calls the Canada lands. As the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) has pointed out, Canada lands occupy approximately 40 per cent of the entire territory generally known as Canada, including offshore east coast, offshore west coast, the lands in the territories, the waters in areas such as the Hudson Bay and, of course, the Arctic and Beaufort Sea. It is a huge area. As we know, it is an area that is, in terms of the world's potential for oil and gas, if you like, one of the most attractive. There may be literally billions of barrels of oil and the equivalent of gas to be found in this area. The debate taking place today, especially as it relates to the Crown's share in those lands, is extremely important.

It is for this reason that I would first of all like to remind hon. members of the tremendous contrast between the effect of Motion No. 21, which is the motion of my colleague the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson), and the bill itself. That hon. member, in effect, is saying that rather than have the federal government or the bureaucracy stepping in and arbitrarily taking 25 per cent of the Canada lands interests which a Canadian company—and I emphasize that—or a partly Canadian-owned company and partly foreign-owned company, or for that matter a foreign company, owns in these Canada lands, it would be better to change the measure to ensure that the only time the Crown can come in with a grab is when 50 per cent of the entire oil or gas play is not owned by Canadians.

In short, let me put three propositions. The first proposition would be when you had an entirely Canadian-owned company with not a share being owned by a foreigner. Let us assume, for example, that one of our pension funds owns the shares of the company. As the Crown proposes this clause, the clause which my colleague for Etobicoke Centre would like to amend, the Crown wants to grab a 25 per cent interest away from those Canadians. The Crown is, in effect, saying that, irrespective of the fact that the company is already 100 per cent Canadian owned, the bureaucracy, the federal treasury, wants to lift that 25 per cent interest out of the pockets of those pensioners whose funds hold the shares of that Canadian company. That is the one extreme.

The second proposition is when you have a company, let us say, such as Imperial Oil. Imperial Oil at the present time is approximately 70 per cent owned by its parent in the United States and almost 30 per cent Canadian owned. In that case, the government is saying that if Imperial Oil or Esso have certain interests in the Beaufort Sea or off the east coast, or on any of these Canada lands, it feels entitled to grab 25 per cent of what these companies have.

• (1220)

What my colleague from Etobicoke Centre is saying is that it is unfair. It is a retroactive grab. It is a grab that is not only unfair to the Canadian companies, as I hope members will agree, it is also unfair to companies such as Exxon which came to this country in good faith and developed those reserves, showed the potential that is there, only to find that 25 per cent of its interest is taken away without compensation. What my colleague is suggesting in Motion No. 21 is that it would be preferable for the Crown to simply say, in that case which I have cited, that it will take up to a 20 per cent interest, say, in what Imperial owns on the assumption that it is not willing to give up part of that 70 per cent block in Imperial Oil that it presently owns.

I suggest that if hon. members review what I am saying they will agree that is a fairer approach; it is more positive. In effect, it says to those who are now foreign concerns that we acknowledge they have brought these reserves into reality. They have demonstrated the potential of these reserves. These reserves are their assets but we are not going to steal those assets from them unless they fail to Canadianize to the extent of 51 per cent or more. If a company fails to make itself 50 per cent Canadian owned, we feel the Crown should be able to take over an interest which would be equal to whatever its deficiency is.

For example, in the case which I have cited, it would be a matter of saying to Imperial Oil that if it wants to retain that 70 per cent ownership, the Crown would be entitled to take up to 20 per cent of what it has. In turn, that will ensure that at least 50 per cent of the play is in Canada.

The other extreme, of course, is 100 per cent foreign ownership. If this company is 100 per cent foreign owned, it should be given the option to make itself 51 per cent Canadian owned, or if it does not wish to do that, it may be subject to a 25 per cent, or in our example even a 50 per cent, interest by the Crown itself. That is our party's position and I think it is a reasonable one. It is a position that is understandable and it is pro-Canadian as opposed to being anti-foreign. I believe this is a system which international investors would acknowledge as being not only equitable but fair. It is fair in the sense that these companies are not being confiscated without being given any option.

Mr. Waddell: No grants, then?

Mr. Stevens: Let me turn now to the other extreme, which is Motion No. 22. In this motion you have the other end of the socialist alliance that is now governing this country. The party that pretends to be the Liberal Party is really the governing party in the name of socialism in Canada. The party which is led by the vice-president of Socialist International, the New Democratic Party—

Mr. Waddell: It is a great organization.

Mr. Stevens: —is not only the rump, but as my colleague across the aisle from me often says, it is the red rump to the Trudeau government. It is the wing of the alliance that breaks the ground for the socialistic government it supports so ardently. I suggest Motion No. 22 is an example of breaking new ground. The 25 per cent heist, if you like, that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources and the government is proposing is not enough for the NDP. They would like to see the government grab 50 per cent. Why should it stop at 25 per cent? Is that not typical of the socialists?

I suggest socialism is nothing less than the most selfish creed that has ever been brought into the public domain in history.

Mr. Waddell: It is for the good of the people.

Mr. Stevens: The energy critic for the New Democratic Party, which is led by the vice-president of Socialist International, has said they do it for the people. What they do not clarify, Mr. Speaker, is that that may be the way they try to sell socialism to the unsuspecting public. But the truth is it is their own selfish interests that they are selling. Of course, that interest is raw, naked power in the name of the people. In fact, it is the socialist dream to have more intervention and more bureaucratic friends obtaining juicy jobs from the blood, sweat and tears of Canadians.

Mr. Waddell: Do you want a loan for your bank?

Mr. Stevens: I believe we have before us in this bill a situation in which the government is proposing to steal property retroactively. It is nothing more than stealing. It is stealing property that has been won under the rules and regulations which the government saw fit to set for those who wished to participate in our oil and gas exploration and development. It is property that is owned by these concerns and is now proposed to be stolen retroactively by the government.

Some members of the government say they are now willing to give compensation for what it steals. I would refer the hon. members to the proceedings of the Standing Committee on National Resources and Public Works, issue No. 49 for Thursday, May 14, 1981, wherein the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources said with respect to this question of compensation:

> The government then is fully satisfied that, as a balanced whole, the regime proposed in Bill C-48 is in every sense equitable.

Once a socialist says something like this, we know in his heart he realizes that it is not equitable. That is exactly what the minister goes on to explain. Having said it is equitable, he then says:

> Nevertheless, to dispel any contrary concerns and arguments which may remain on the part of those who have been critical of the 25 per cent Crown interest provision, we intend to provide reimbursement of actual exploration costs already incurred.
>
> In this spirit of compromise then, we shall introduce amendments to provide for ex gratia payments in respect of 25 per cent of the geological, geophysical and drilling expenditures made up to December 31, 1980, in respect of any oil or gas discovery that results from a well spudded prior to that date and which qualifies to be declared a significant discovery prior to December 31, 1982. The qualifying expenditures will be determined on the same basis as those eligible for inclusion in the calculation set out for the progressive incremental royalty in Bill C-48.
>
> These payments will be made out of the Crown share of production.

● (1230)

I notice that startles you, Mr. Speaker, because that is the ringer. The government is not going to pay the money upon seizure. It is going to say that if, as and when it gets something out of what it has taken, it will then give some of it back. The government says these payments will be made out of the Crown's share of production, that to reflect the value in time of qualifying expenditures, they will be escalated at the rate of 15 per cent a year up to December 31, 1980, and the government shall then pay 250 per cent of this escalated value of eligible expenditures as a first claim on the commercial production attributable to the 25 per cent Crown share. In short, what we have here is a partial payment being offered to those who will lose, say, 25 per cent of what they now own on Canada lands.

I emphasize once again that this may be conjured up by the government in the public sense as something that affects only foreign concerns. That is not true. Let us consider my example of a pension fund which has chosen—and some of them have—to invest in the oil and gas potential on our Canada lands. They will lose 25 per cent of workers' money invested to try to identify and bring resources into production, hopefully in some later year.

It is like some government official taking 25 per cent of the Canada Savings Bond a person has just bought. Let us say a person bought a $1,000 bond. What the government is doing is taking $250 of that. The person involved might say, "That is theft; I just bought it; how can you take it from me?" The government would say that the Parliament of Canada empowered it to do so. Then, feeling its neck a little the government would say, "Well, maybe we should give you something back". What does it do? It says that to the extent there are coupons payable to the government on the $250 it stole, the government will clip those coupons and give the person perhaps 5 per cent of what the government had already taken, without any compensation whatsoever. That is what the government is proposing.

Our socialist New Democratic Party friends support the Trudeau socialist version of their creed in this House, but they get all warmed up and say, "Let's even take 50 per cent of that bond; let's take $500 and not just $250 of the poor soul's bond". I would like them to explain to some of their union friends how the workers in various companies whose pension funds are at stake in what I am referring to would feel if they were properly told by the socialists of this House that the stealing proposed would also include the very pension funds many of those workers are counting on in years to come for their retirement. That is what these fellows are up to.

I am a little surprised that he did it, but I suppose our Prime Minister is always full of surprises; he went to Toronto, of all places, the other day and at a fund raising dinner told some of the faithful who were able to show their faces at that meeting that basically their creed was to take from the rich and give to the poor, a Robin Hood type of approach. However, what he did not explain is that, in true socialistic fashion, it is not just taking from the rich and giving to the poor; it is always less 10 per cent for our bureaucratic friends. That is what is going on here. It is stealing from one section of society, in many cases producers—they are the ones producing wealth, identifying reserves and bringing oil and gas into production—and saying, "We want to pass it through our bureaucracy so that some of our fat cats can get a little fatter living off what we have stolen from other people".

I think we should not lose sight of what is the bottom line of what the government is doing. At one time we had one of the healthiest oil and gas industries in the world. Oddly enough, that was one of the few sectors of our economy that was healthy. Through retroactive grabs such as the one we are now dealing with in these two motions, this government has so startled not just foreign investors—because that is the way the government tries to sell this—but also our own oil and gas investors that we find today 10,000 wells being drilled in the United States in which Canadians are participating, compared with 5,000 wells being drilled in this country. In other words, our activity and our know-how is being devoted twice as much to bringing oil and gas into production in the United States as in Canada.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. gentleman but the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The other day I raised on a point of order a request that the Chair consider dividing Motions Nos. 21 and 22. That is recorded in the Hansard of a few days ago. The Speaker has ruled that Motions Nos. 21 and 22 can be debated together, which obviously is happening and quite properly. It is quite a proper ruling. The Chair also ruled that if Motion No. 21 were voted upon and it failed, that would cause Motion No. 22 to fail as well. I submit it is quite obvious, after the speech of the hon. member for York-Peel (Mr. Stevens), that there is quite a difference between Motions Nos. 21 and 22. Whatever can be said of the speech of the hon. member—a very moderate speech—he certainly outlined the difference between the two motions. It is there to see.

What I am asking is not so much that Your Honour make a ruling right now, unless you are prepared to do that, but that the Chair at some point consider my submissions and make a ruling as to whether it is prepared to accept a change in the voting so that Motions Nos. 21 and 22 can be voted upon separately. I venture to suggest that there probably would be agreement on all sides of the House.

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, I rise on my colleague's point of order. I can well understand his embarrassment. He does not like to see these two motions brought together so that we can debate and contrast the thrust of what he is proposing with the pro-Canadian motion we are proposing. I think the hon. member has now realized the stark reality as to how absolutely naked he stands before this House in what he is suggesting. He now suggests that he would prefer to have our motion dealt with separately so that people can speak only about the nature of what we are proposing and at a later date hon. members can speak about his Motion No. 22 and vote separately on them. It is patently obvious that the hon. member is embarrassed about the grab he is proposing.

Mr. Waddell: No. Mr. Speaker, on the point of order, may I reply to that?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Perhaps the interpretation of the Chair might clarify the point. The hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) has raised a point of order concerning voting procedure. I stated on October 21 that Motions Nos. 21 and 22 would be grouped for debate, with a vote on Motion No. 21 disposing of Motion No. 22. As a result of the hon. member's presentation I am now convinced that the House should vote on Motions Nos. 21 and 22 separately, with the question being put first on Motion No. 21. Motion No. 21 would amend several lines of Clause 27, and Motion No. 22 would amend one of the later lines of the same clause.

● (1240)

For the benefit of hon. members, I refer to Citation 772(2) of Beauschesne's fifth edition which reads as follows:

> Amendments should be proposed in the order of the lines of a clause. If the latter part of a clause is amended, it is not competent for a member to move to amend an earlier or antecedent part of the same clause. If an amendment to the latter part of a clause is negatived or withdrawn, it is competent to propose one to an earlier part.

Therefore, an affirmative vote on Motion No. 21 will dispose of Motion No. 22. A negative vote on Motion No. 21 will necessitate the question being put on Motion No. 22.

Mr. Rose: On that same point of order—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. It is usual after the Speaker has made a ruling for an hon. member to ask only for clarification.

Mr. Rose: Mr. Speaker, I wish to clarify the fact that my colleague for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) was attempting to have the votes on Nos. 21 and 22 separated. In no way was he urging that the separation occur for the debate, as was suggested by my colleague, the hon. member for York-Peel (Mr. Stevens).

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): That was settled when the ruling was made.

Mr. Robert C. Coates (Cumberland-Colchester): Mr. Speaker, I would first like to say that the speech by the hon. member for York-Peel (Mr. Stevens) indicates the deep concern that he, members of this House and people across this country have as a result of the government's proposed national energy policy. The policy creates more questions than it answers. In fact, I do not know what it answers. For a good many Canadians it will mean a much higher oil and gas bill with only negative results with regard to the objective all Canadians hoped for, energy self-sufficiency by 1990.

I speak as a maritime Member of Parliament. I wish to indicate a concern about my area of Canada. It is similar to that so ably expressed by the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers) about his part of Canada. What the hon. member for Carleton-Charlotte (Mr. McCain) expressed in this House yesterday about our part of Canada is also true for me.

It is absolutely essential that we strive to reach energy self-sufficiency by 1990 so that prospective developments can occur in Atlantic Canada. When we talk about the national energy policy and this bill which conceives it, we must realize that there can be no national energy policy until the federal government arrives at some type of positive agreement with the provinces of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland.

This bill will make it more difficult for Nova Scotia and Newfoundland to develop obvious energy possibilities off their coasts. I refer specifically to the Sable Island development off Nova Scotia, the Hibernia and other finds off the coast of Newfoundland. Before we can talk about any type of national energy policy, we must know that an arrangement has been made between the federal government and the governments of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland in relation to what will happen to those potential oil and gas developments.

We do not see anything positive happening. In his speech, the hon. member for Red Deer pointed out that the current casualty report shows that over 131 drilling rigs will leave this country this year, leaving behind 471 to do the type of drilling that is required if we are to hope for anything like energy self-sufficiency. Also, the development of the lands of western Canada, the Northwest Territories and the Yukon must be considered if we are to realize the energy self-sufficiency for which we all strive.

If Canada were a socialist country, and God knows no one would ever want that, there might be some possibility of this policy working. The government would have total control over the economy as is the case in Russia and Poland, if that is any recommendation these days. In this country the engine that drives the economy is the free enterprise system. It is only by working within that system that we can hope to achieve the elusive goal of energy self-sufficiency.

The approach of the Clark government was to harness the free enterprise system in such a way as to provide incentives to the oil and gas industry to develop our potential resources. The approach of the Clark government with regard to the east coast of Canada, the continental shelf, was to regard it as an extension of the resource development of the provinces where there was potential for oil and gas. If that had been followed through, the free enterprisers of Canada would now be moving into the energy sector in an attempt to find the resources that are there. Rather than clarify the situation that exists, we have created complicated oil and gas regulations.

The government has said to those involved in the energy sector of this country: "We are an island unto ourselves." The reply to that has been: "We will go elsewhere to do our business in order that we can make a profit." The profit motive continues to be the driving force behind the free enterprise system. It is that force which keeps business here or sends it elsewhere. Today it is going elsewhere.

The reason there is absolutely no hope of ever attaining energy self-sufficiency in this country by 1990 is because of what this government is doing to Canadians in the oil and gas industry, not to the bogey-man or the multinationals, but to the individual Canadian who is the backbone of the oil and gas industry in Canada. What we are saying to him is: "You will have to make a decision to leave your country if you want to make any profit. If you stay here, we can almost guarantee that you will have to close your doors or go bankrupt if this policy goes into effect." That is what we are saying with this kind of legislation.

• (1250)

Some of the people involved in the oil and gas industry of Canada came down here to try and talk with politicians. They were not big fellows; they were not multimillionaires. They were fellows with trailer-truck operations and things like that. They were people who are necessary for the oil industry to remain healthy. They told me: "Unless this government does something that is positive, that reflects the free enterprise spirit that has built the oil industry in western Canada, we are finished; we will have to go to the United States or somewhere else."

That is not the kind of decision which means they can pick up their things and go to the United States today, returning in six months from now when the government realizes what it is doing to the industry and then trying to put their operation back together again. For instance, when 131 drilling rigs leave this country, do not expect them to come back next week or next month unless we change the legislation that is now before us. There is no way. Their commitment has to be for five years. No matter what we do with his package next week, next month or next year, once that decision to leave has been made, they are gone. We are then in deep trouble, as we are right now, and it is obvious.

I go back to the general election of February, 1980, to the period between December and January. I think of the debates that took place at that time, and I recall the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), who was then leader of the opposition, telling Canadians what a terrible thing the Clark budget would do to them. Mr. Speaker, if only they were given the opportunity today of returning to the Clark budget they would elect every member of the Progressive Conservative Party that supported that budget. There are no two ways about that. It was the best deal Canadians were ever offered. Unfortunately, Canadians were so mesmerized by the false advertising, the big lie, that they believed that they were going to be ripped off. The rip-off started as soon as this government was elected and it continues. It is happening now, it will be happening tomorrow, it will be happening the next day. At the time of that election, it cost me and every other Canadian something like $18 to fill the gas tank of their car. It costs $28 today. By the time this government sees the people of Canada again, it will cost something like $75 to fill that same gas tank.

I go back to the people I really feel sorry for, people who will not drive their cars and who will turn to alternate forms of energy, if the Minister of Transport does not destroy all other forms of transportation. He is certainly taking rail transportation away from most Canadians as an energy efficient alternative to highway transport. But what will happen to the poor individual who has to heat his or her home? With the Clark government, there was built-in protection for those people as far as heating oil is concerned.

With this policy, this government will see a great many individual Canadians freeze in the dark. There will be no alternative for them but to freeze in the dark when you look at the escalation of heating costs already. We are not Florida. Regardless where people in this country live, they have to heat their homes nine months of the year. At this moment in time, most Canadians depend upon oil to do that heating. As far as heating oil prices are concerned, it is a terrible atrocity that has been afflicted on individual Canadians. There is no concern shown them. There is no built-in protection for the individual Canadian, especially for the one that requires assistance the most. I am not talking about the person on welfare. I am talking about the person who is not on welfare and who lives a lifetime saving, with none of our system geared to assist him, the Canadian who tries to maintain himself in dignity on a fixed income, but who discovers what a terrible atrocity is being visited upon him and others like him by this government with its so-called national energy policy.

I feel sorry for them because there is no chance at the moment for them to get back at this government and to teach them, as they can with their vote at the ballot box, what the electorate do to people who promote and propagate the big lie. Unfortunately, they will have to suffer. As members of this House, we should do everything we possibly can to assist them and to give them whatever protection is possible.

I say to my colleagues here, regardless of party, that if this institution is going to be responsible to individual Canadians, we will have to show them that we are concerned about the terrible commitment that this government is trying to make in its special deal against them. We have to see to it that this matter is rectified. We have to see that at least that part of the Crosbie budget that provided the individual, low-income Canadian with some special protection with regard to home heating fuel is put in place.

Prince Edward Island is totally dependent upon oil for the production of energy for all the people who live there. We have to provide some cushioning against these escalating increases of oil costs similar to what the Clark government again was negotiating with the Atlantic provinces. This is to protect a province like Prince Edward Island that is totally dependent upon oil for its energy production, especially for its electricity. Nova Scotia is converting its energy use from oil to coal just as fast as it can produce new coal mines.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock p.m.

At one o'clock the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. When the House rose at one o'clock the hon. member for Cumberland-Colchester (Mr. Coates) had the floor. The hon. member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson).

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in my place to speak to the important matter before the House relating to energy and the Canada lands. I want particularly to speak about the back-in provisions in Bill C-48 which the government is trying to impose upon the industry and the people of Canada.

I have been a member of the Standing Committee on National Resources and Public Works for two years. I have followed very closely the direction of the government, particularly in regard to its energy policy. I must say with a great deal of disgust that I have seen a decline of the industry. There are oil wells in the constituency of Assiniboia, most of which are low production wells. I have seen a decline of that industry from a once buoyant industry to a situation where it is flat on its back.

One might ask whether this will change with the new energy agreement. I wish I could say that I am very optimistic about the future outcome but I cannot. If we look at the broad facts before us in the entire energy policy of the government and the proposals in Bill C-48, we find that the outcome is very simple. When we were defeated two years ago the situation in energy was that the consumer was paying approximately $1 per gallon for gasoline. I am using my own constituency as an example; I am sure it varies in different areas of Canada. Today the consumer in my constituency is paying $1.84. The increase in the price of gasoline under the energy policy is 84 cents at Estevan, Saskatchewan. When I fill up my car at the pump it costs me approximately $32.

Mr. Waddell: Get a Honda or a Volkswagen.

Mr. Gustafson: If the hon. member in the NDP would listen he would learn. The two levels of government receive $20 out of a $32 tank of gasoline; that is, the Saskatchewan government and the federal government. I am paying $12 for the gasoline in my tank. Under the guidelines, the new agreement, and the $16 billion projected program, over the next four years the provincial government of Saskatchewan will receive $5.1 billion, the federal government will receive close to $4 billion, and the industry will receive approximately 37 per cent. As I say, the industry is flat on its back. People are out of work. People from the Estevan-Weyburn-Radville area are driving down to Williston, North Dakota, to work in the industry there. How can we expect, even under this new agreement, the industry to rebuild? I want to tell Canadians that the consumer has accepted the tax load of paying for the debts of 12 years of Liberal government in the country. This tax load is too great. It will kill the goose that lays the golden egg. We cannot impose such a tax load upon an industry without breaking it.

What is happening in the Canada lands? I can give example after example of what is happening in my own area. People are out of work, but 220 oil rigs were exported to the United States of America in the name of Canadianization. Who were we Canadianizing? I talked with people working in the Williston oil basin, people working in Austin, Texas, as well as Canadian boys and girls from Calgary, Edmonton, Regina, Estevan and Weyburn with expertise in this field. The finest fleet of drilling rigs in the world has been exported to the United States. We lost 220 oil rigs, approximately 100 service rigs and 1,000 truck loads of equipment in a 24-hour period through the port of entry just south of Estevan. They were exported to the U.S.A.

• (1410)

We in the Conservative party are all in favour of Canadianization. We believe in that principle. However, in the mad rush on the part of the NDP and the Liberal coalition to nationalize the oil industry, which has been going on in this House for the last two years—

An hon. Member: Bill Davis.

Mr. Gustafson: I see one of the hon. members of the NDP looking over here.

Mr. Waddell: Why am I sitting here then?

Mr. Gustafson: A situation has been visited upon the people and consumers of Canada which is absolutely unbeneficial to the economics of the country. What has this attack brought? First of all, it has been an attack against the industry, and I covered that to some extent. At this point we do not have a policy in place which will turn this around. I would like to say that I was optimistic about what I saw, as I am an optimistic person and I would like to see that happen. But it is not there. In commenting on this area, one of the major oil companies stated it believes we will lose another 100 oil rigs before this situation levels out.

I think it is important that we draw the attention of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde), the people of Canada and this House to the very critical situation which lies before the people of Canada resulting from the national energy policy. There is an attack against the industry, but there is also an attack against the consumer. I mentioned this a little earlier. What were people paying and what are they paying now? There has been an increase of almost 100 per cent.

Do hon. members remember the 18-cent excise tax and what a joke it was going to be, what a terrible thing the Conservatives were forcing upon the people of Canada?

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): How could I forget?

Mr. Gustafson: Now they are looking at 84 cents. It is a shame, and there is no change in direction. I suggest that it is a direct attack against the economics of Canada. It is not enough that we have problems with high interest rates? We have problems in the area of agriculture and practically every other area. In my riding there has been a good example of what this government has done concerning VIA Rail. The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) came to Fillmore, Saskatchewan and announced, as an election promise, that he was going to double track from Winnipeg to Vancouver. He did it, all right; he took the train off the track.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Oh, hear that, Jean-Luc?

Mr. Gustafson: There was a complete change in direction of policy and promise. The same thing has happened with the energy policy.

I said earlier that we certainly agree with Canadianization. But do not drive Canadians out of Canada. If one examines the investments of small Canadian companies, one will find that the greatest percentage are investing more than 70 per cent of their investment money in the United States of America. They are drilling for oil there, not in Canada. That is the kind of Canadianization program this government has put into position.

Mr. Waddell: They have invested in the big Bermuda.

Mr. Gustafson: I want to suggest that this program is not working. The hon. member who just spoke up was very active in the Berger hearings. He will also do something for the people of western Canada that they will not soon forget. They will remember they could have had a pipeline that was pumping oil from the north into western Canada; now we might have to use icebreakers to clear a passage for oil, bringing it around a very expensive route. I hope he remembers that in about three years.

Mr. Waddell: That will be the end of the ten-year moratorium.

Mr. Gustafson: This energy policy and Bill C-48 will not work. What about the back-in provision? Confiscation without compensation is exactly what we are talking about in the back-in provision. Companies which would otherwise invest in Canada are losing confidence in this fair country of ours. If we are to turn this direction around, we must restore confidence in the investment community in this country.

Quite frankly, I do not believe that this government has the will or the intention to do that. This government is bent on nationalizing the oil industry at the expense of the consumer of Canada, at the cost of the industry, and we, the taxpayers, are paying a big price.

What about the taxpayer? Is it fair that the government should take a $30 tank of gasoline and state that it will take $20 in taxes from that $30 tank of gasoline? We know that the cost of energy around the world is high. The Prime Minister is continually saying that and drawing comparisons. However, I want to tell hon. members that a $30 tank of gas should really cost only $10. That is the cost of the actual gasoline. The rest is tax. The $20 is going to the treasury departments of the two governments to pay for 12 years of inept spending by the government in this House. In the next four years, this tax will generate $52 billion for the government.

It is not, should I say, a popular move to stand in the House and defend a big oil company or any oil company. At the same time, the government will blame the oil companies for charging the people of Canada such an exorbitant price for gasoline when, really, two thirds of the cost of that gasoline is going to the government.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): I think he has a point.

Mr. Gustafson: It is time these figures were made public to the people of Canada, that the people understood exactly what is happening and what it is they are paying for when they are filling the tanks of their cars with gasoline.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gustafson: It will be interesting to see just how the industry will take up the challenge. And a challenge it is, because the industry is faced with competition. I know many people who have companies in the Estevan area. They have crews of men working in the service and supply industry in our area. They have been forced to seek work in Williston and across the line. In numbers, they daily commute from that area in half-ton trucks, doing business on the other side of the line.

There are 22 million people in Canada. We have a country which is rich in natural resources. Surely to goodness, we must have the will, the common sense and the businesslike approach which will take into consideration production and productivity. We should say to the people of Canada that we can now provide enough of our oil to supply our own people. We do not have to go to Mexico, pay exorbitant prices, and then charge the taxpayer and consumer of Canada because of the inept action of the Government of Canada.

I place this bill before Your Honour and say that from witness after witness appearing before the committee one of the main complaints was that this government is not being fair. In the history of this country, the government has never had a 25 per cent back-in provision; in other words, a provision where the profits of another person or company would be confiscated. That is very unfair.

I ask that the government and the minister reconsider this provision, and that the minister change his direction in this area before it is too late for the industry and the consumers and people of Canada.

• (1420)

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have a brief comment to make in this debate. I hope to make my maiden speech on the budget. I have talked this over with my colleagues in caucus and they have assured me that they will still regard me as a maiden then! However, no one knows when the budget will be brought down. The last word was November 12, but we were not told whether it is November 12, 1981, November 12, 1982, or November 12, 1983.

The last two weeks have been very interesting and in some ways very entertaining. My hon. friends to the extreme right have to be commended. Over the last two weeks they have really done a splendid job. They have carried out an act that I did not think could be sustained like that for two solid weeks. Without even cracking a smile, hon. members have stood in their places, waved their arms, pointed their fingers and almost cried, complaining about socialism. I must say they have done a beautiful job of it. They have talked about blood on Liberals' sleeves and about the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) being a crypto-socialist. They have talked about confiscation and about robbery. To keep all of that going for two weeks without even cracking a smile, they deserve some kind of an actor's award. They have done so well that I might have believed them.

I am a socialist, of course. I might have taken some heart that this bill was socialist and believed them until I looked at some of the provisions in Bill C-48. Among other things I find that we will be giving 93 cents of every dollar to Canadian oil companies to spend on development. Oil companies get the 93 cents whether they find oil or not. If they find oil, however, and only if they find oil, the government takes back 35 cents, comprised of 25 cents in equity and ten cents in royalty. This 93 cents comes from the taxes of bus drivers, women who clean buildings, factory workers and all the other people who cannot dodge income taxes.

My leader asked the Prime Minister in the last few days about people who earn, say, $50,000 or $100,000 who can dodge paying their taxes, but his questions were brushed off. The money for oil exploration comes from people who cannot dodge their taxes, basically the wage or salary earner in Canada, the ordinary working man. Those are the people being taxed to give Canadian oil companies 93 cents of every dollar that they invest. If we are lucky, the country will get back 35 cents out of the 93 cents. If the working people are lucky, they may get some of that money back in education and health care.

These poor, starving oil companies are getting a free gift of only 58 cents out of every dollar spent on projects which will net them unlimited profits as the years go by and oil shortages increase. This is a subsidy oil companies are receiving from the bus drivers and other people who cannot dodge income tax. Hon. members to the right call it socialism. There is a phrase "socialism for the rich". If that is what they mean, what the former leader of our party called the corporate welfare bums, then what they are saying is true. Nevertheless, I must admire my hon. friends for talking about the subject for two weeks, calling it socialism but never mentioning that they and their friends are the beneficiaries of what they call socialism, at the same time pretending it is a great crime, that it is confiscation. It is a kind of confiscation, but it is not a confiscation of something that oil companies created. They did not create the tundra, nor did they create the Beaufort Sea. One hon. member even admitted that the oil is worthless while it is under the ground and under the sea. But all of a sudden, if the government wants to tax it, we hear their cries of confiscation. It is a kind of confiscation of the hard-earned tax money of the ordinary working people of Canada which will make the rich richer. It is a wonderful act my friends on the right have carried on for the past two weeks.

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to take part in this debate. I have listened to the remarks from the red rump. I have listened to the remarks of the socialists on the left. What they are trying to do is take our freedoms away.

All one has to do is to look at Poland.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Fennell: Poland is a prime example. The people there have lost their rights. They have lost their spirits. Socialism has not worked in Poland and it will not work here. My colleagues in the Progressive Conservative Party have expressed the views of the Canadian public. They have expressed the true spirit of Canada. The Liberals and their socialist alliance are expressing the views of the Kremlin and related socialist countries.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Waddell: The Kremlin?

Mr. Nielsen: Do not laugh. It could happen here.

Mr. Fennell: Motion No. 21 provides a logical solution to this expropriation act.

I am used to expropriation. The Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) knows why I am used to it. The Department of Transport took away 18,000 acres from people and then taxed them for that right. I think the minister could express a view on that. I think the minister knows the government goofed. He was not there, so he can duck out.

We are discussing a geographical area representing 40 per cent of the area of Canada. An area that size cannot be treated lightly. How are we treating the original citizens of this country? Are we looking after those citizens through this bill? We are expropriating their rights. We are taking away the rights of the original citizens. That is serious. Even under the provisions of Motion No. 22 it is not 25 per cent the government wants to take, but 50 per cent. These percentages are being taken away from the aboriginal people of the country. The rights of the few who are left in the territory will be taken away.

Mr. Waddell: Whose rights?

Mr. Fennell: You know whose rights.

Mr. Waddell: Not native rights.

Mr. Fennell: This act does nothing more than give this government the right to expropriate on behalf of another Crown corporation. Like all Crown corporations, it will end up in the red, losing money and wasting the funds on itself rather than spending them for the good of Canadians. This bill does not help Canadian corporations, nor does it help anybody in the country. Even with this 25 per cent donation which the territories are giving to these people, a proper rate of return will not be provided compared to a rate of return which would be provided by the private sector. I would like to know what right the government has to expropriate the property of Canadian-controlled corporations. This is nothing more than a retroactive tax on Canadian citizens.

This bill also affects pension funds. Pension funds are involved in investment in energy in Canada and the amount of investment is large. Admittedly, while pension funds are being built up they are not taxed. They are exempt from tax. This is a hidden 25 per cent tax which will be imposed on pension funds in this country.

• (1430)

I think it is an absolute disgrace that our senior citizens have problems. We will have far greater problems when those born during the time of the last baby boom become senior citizens. Who will have to pay the bills? The bills better be paid by the private sector because the government is running out of money.

I ask this government to reconsider carefully our motion. There should be no expropriation of any corporation that is 51 per cent or more Canadian owned. Nor should there be any expropriation of a foreign corporation which makes an agreement to become Canadianized, that is 51 per cent owned by Canadians, through pension funds or investment by Canadian citizens.

Consider the shareholders in the pension fund of Imperial Oil, for example. Thirty per cent of Imperial Oil is owned by Canadians either through pension funds or money of individual citizens. While that is not a large amount, these people are being taxed through expropriation under Bill C-48. Will this government please consider this motion and look at it in light of what it is doing to Canadian citizens? It is inequitable and unfair.

My colleague the hon. member for York-Peel (Mr. Stevens) stated earlier that if there is only 30 per cent of Imperial Oil that is Canadian owned, then take 20 per cent; but work out some arrangement which will encourage foreign corporations to Canadianize, rather than a method that is blatantly dictatorial. This cannot all be done in one fell swoop; it must be worked through over a period of time.

Free enterprise with foreign capital debt will assist this country to develop our oil. The Canadian government has run out of credit. It has run out of dollars, and its great friend, Dome, has also run out of money. It is now sitting on the edge of the fence praying to God that oil is found in one of the three or four holes or however many it drilled this summer, in order to relieve some of its financial woes.

What we are not looking at in this bill, and what we have not appreciated in this entire National Energy Program discussion, is the small Canadian producer. We have not considered the service contractors. It is time this government started paying attention to the majority of Canadians, the little guy who makes his living from small business. How will this government hurt these people? Perhaps in one respect it has done them a favour. The government has forced them to go into the United States; it has forced them out of Canada. What is that doing for Canada? It is driving our funds away, driving our money out of this country and creating an imbalance in capital flow. By following this entire National Energy Program, as exemplified by Bill C-48, we are hurting the Canadian citizen.

The climate is entirely wrong in Canada today with this present government's policies. Will the government please change the legislation in order to attract the Canadian entrepreneur who wants to stay in this country, who wants to succeed and to benefit from our great riches? All we are doing is driving this country into what the government calls Canadianization, what I call nationalization or socialism, or, to go one step further, communism, where the state owns everything. This is all being done by degrees. Hon. members can make all the noise they want but they will not change the situation or the dangerous route we are following.

Do you realize, Mr. Speaker that this measure permits the government to commit a criminal act, namely, straight, direct robbery. The citizens who elected this government would go to jail if they followed this practice. This government is above it all. It can do whatever it wants. The government laughs at these people. I hear hon. members laughing at them every day. The Minister of Transport laughs at them because he is taking their transportation away. The Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox) laughs at them. He is taking away their opportunity to listen to good programs from all over the world. Perhaps I should take that back as I understand he is relenting on his original stand.

I have been involved in the private sector all my life. I have done something that many people in this chamber have never done, namely, I have met payrolls. That is difficult to do when you are a small-business man starting up in this country. But there is an opportunity to meet payrolls in this country and there is an opportunity for people like ourselves to create industry here. Why is this government so dedicated to stopping that? Hon. member should just go out and try to raise capital in Canada for a small oil company. First of all, your foreign markets are cut off. Secondly, interest rates are so high we cannot afford to borrow money from the banks.

The government has eliminated opportunity for Canadians, and that is why I am angry. I am damned annoyed at what this government is doing to the citizens of this country. It should be making it easier for them to raise funds wherever they can in order to create labour wherever that is possible. The government should not be destroying incentive for the entrepreneur. I know how damned hard it is to raise money, but today it is impossible for small oil companies to do so.

What is happening? Small oil companies have only one route to follow; they are being taken over by the larger companies, and one reads about that every week in the newspaper. The government is eliminating the little guy. In this country you have to be a multi-multi-millionaire to exist. The little guy does not have a hope. The entrepreneur is prepared to give up something in order to create labour. I believe it is now time for this government to be prepared to give up something in order to create labour and solve some of the problems in Canada.

This bill with this 25 per cent hidden tax removes any real incentive there is left for Canadians to invest in Canada or to raise foreign capital. My recommendation to the people is that as long as there is the hostility in the atmosphere created by this administration, they should not invest in Canada. I have talked to many people over many days about a great deal of things, but one question keeps coming up; why bother investing in Canada with the rate of return that has been created by this government? This government is taking over two thirds of the revenue received from every barrel of oil. It thinks it is going to attain energy self-sufficiency. This government is on its knees praying to God that somebody will hit enough oil in some of these expropriated lands that we will have enough oil to look after us in 1990. I assure you, Mr. Speaker, that it will have to do more than pray, because it takes a lot of money to achieve that. It takes more than prayer to accomplish things in this world; it takes hard work. You have to get your hands dirty and your brow must sweat.

● (1440)

I do not see any point in investing in Canada. I think it is a tragic thing for me to have to stand in this chamber and say that. I think it is tragic that we are at the point where there is such a hostile atmosphere that it is not wise for Canadians to stay here.

The one benefit which will come out of the National Energy Program is that American and foreign banks are flooding into Canada because of our fantastic interest rates. They are all getting charters. I am not against this; I am merely pointing out that this is the only group which will benefit from the National Energy Program. I believe in competition, Mr. Speaker, but the foreign banks will benefit because no Canadians will invest. People who are investing are the ones with depth, going into the company paying a 20 per cent return. But that money is flowing straight out of the country again. They definitely will be beneficiaries. Many of these banks are coming into Canada for that reason alone. Their head offices may be on Bay Street in Toronto, but the administrative offices are in Calgary where the action is.

How long can small companies continue to borrow at these rates and still exist? There is no future for investment in this country. The government should be thinking of trying to attract funds which have gone out of this country back to Canada where they should be invested.

I know the Liberal government will not listen to us on Motion 21. I am fully aware that they will do nothing about it and will just bulldoze it through, as they do everything else. But I plead with them to be considerate. They are imposing a tax on Canadian citizens and on pension funds throughout this country.

I would like to reiterate that the territories we are concerned with are hopeful of becoming provinces one day. This act automatically treats them as have-not provinces. The federal government, which wants to take a quarter of their money away from them, and the socialists to my left who want to take 50 per cent, will be creating have-not provinces. Before this bill is passed we should consider the territories and the poverty they will suffer under this bill even before they become provinces.

I am concerned that this country grow, particularly in the north. If these territories are turned into poverty areas before they are even permitted access to provincial rights, no one will be attracted to that region. This bill will remove their future provincial rights and the rights of the original settlers of that part of the country.

Mr. Waddell: What about the native people?

Mr. Fennell: I was asked about native rights. The majority of people in the north are natives. We have a great responsibility to prevent their rights being taken away. We must also give them something in return.

Mr. Waddell: You want to give it to the oil companies.

Mr. Fennell: I would rather give it to the natives of the north more than anyone. That is my priority. The government is not worried about them.

An hon. Member: What share do they own in Imperial?

Mr. Fennell: Look at the negative effects on the economy of Canada and at the shrinkage in manufacturing resulting from the National Energy Program and Bill C-48. These measures, along with the exorbitant spending of this government over the last 15 years, have resulted in shrinking the manufacturing facilities of this country, as well as the processing and contracting facilities, including housing.

The Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen) during the previous election campaign made the statement that if any injury or significant disadvantage is experienced by any group, he would remove the burden in the subsequent budget. I hope he remembers his own words when he considers the next budget. This bill, Mr. Speaker, does nothing more than compound the inflation spiral by siphoning off this money to a Crown corporation which does not give the same benefit to a Canadian citizen. All it does is increase the price of fuel oil, gas and heating oil. Under this bill there are absolutely no benefits received by the citizens of this country.

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Mr. Speaker, this being the ninth anniversary of the election of 1972, I rise with some considerable pleasure to speak to the House. Madam Speaker was one of the class of '72. I understand my friend, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin), went the other way in 1972, and I have the impression that sometimes he wishes it was 1972 again.

Mr. Pepin: Not at all.

Mr. McKinnon: That was the election where we lost by two seats. It could have been one of the best governments we ever had, under Mr. Stanfield.

I would also like to mention that the maiden speech given by the hon. member for Spadina (Mr. Heap) indicates a person is let off scot free during a maiden speech, but only one time. I noticed that he tried to have it and keep it too, but I did enjoy his speech. I very much favour short sermons.

I would like to speak today on Motion No. 21 put forward by our party, and Motion No. 22 put forward by the New Democratic Party. The hon. member from Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) is very quick to claim credit for taking away the Mackenzie Valley pipeline, but he is not so quick to take credit for causing the tankers to show up in the Strait of Juan de Fuca because there is no pipeline through which to send Alaskan oil. However, that is his problem, not ours. The NDP have a lot to say on this issue. They are suffering under the rather serious handicap of having western membership and eastern leadership.

Mr. Waddell: You have the problem. You have western membership and no leadership.

Mr. McKinnon: I can appreciate the extremes to which they go when they have to send missionaries from Etobicoke to run for seats in Vancouver.

I will now discuss Motion No. 21 and the difference it is going to make. This bill represents a rather serious incursion by the government into private industry. It is very serious indeed.

I would like to point out some of the problems we would have by an incursion of the government into not only the marketplace, or industry, but almost every aspect of Canadian life. With respect to investment, it is questionable whether this is really investment and we hope to stop this through Motion 21. It is borrowing the resource and paying for it some other time. I would not go so far as to say that the government is stealing from the industry, as some of my colleagues have stated. But they are taking it without the owner's permission.

I understand the speech of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) the other day was headlined "Caring and Sharing". The government would rather the industry take care of the resources and the government share them. That is how we came to Bill C-48, so the government could get in on the sharing part. Although the government would like to share in the success, if the company loses money it will turn it back to the industry and give it 100 per cent of the losses.

I might point out some interesting figures which were released mainly by government agencies. The first one I would like to mention is the current gross fixed capital formation in government investment, and it has gone down steadily since 1960 as a percentage of gross national expenditures. In 1960 it was 4.1 per cent; in 1965, 4.4 per cent; in 1970, 3.7 per cent; in 1975, 3.8 per cent; and in 1980, 2.8 per cent. That is a percentage of gross national expenditure, so that means excluding inflationary figures.

• (1450)

If we were using inflationary figures, we all realize it would be a sum of billions of dollars going steadily upward. However, when we look at that, we can see that government fixed capital formation is not working out any more than government funded research and development is, which is, interestingly enough, in the same schedule issued by the Department of Finance in April, 1981, showing that government funded research and development increased from 0.62 per cent to 0.65 per cent between 1960 and 1965 and since then went down in 1975 to 0.48 per cent and in 1980 to 0.46 per cent. Despite the great claims of various ministers, the research and development program has not been producing. It is getting to be more and more miserly.

What I am putting across is that the funds which are being expended by the government are more and more getting to have less and less to do with the future of the country. They are just current transfers of payments to individuals. They are not hooked to something that is really good for the country, such as investment in plant, in training or in research and development.

Trends in government employment are of some interest and, I believe, illustrate again the point I am making. The percentage of government employment as compared with total employment in 1961 was 22.1 per cent. That figure went steadily up each and every year since then until it is now 24.3 per cent. However, if we look at government wages as a percentage of total wages, we find a rather peculiar situation. In 1961 government wages as a percentage of total wages paid in this country were 19.4 per cent. In 1965 that figure was 19.7 per cent; in 1970, 23.1 per cent; in 1975, 24.3 per cent; in 1976, 24.9 per cent; and in 1977, 25.1 per cent. Hon. members will notice that while there has been very little increase in the number of people employed, there has been quite a substantial increase in the amount of money spent by the government in wages. This indicates simply that the fat cats are getting fatter and fatter as the years go by. I do not think this is really what the government or the people of Canada are looking for. This may be why surveys taken in Ottawa about mortgage problems come up almost blank. This is the fattest of all fat cities. I am glad to see that the hon. member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Evans) is here to agree with me. I imagine he would. There are very few people in Ottawa who have financial difficulties. There are many people everywhere else who have.

It is clear that the government has tended in the past 20 years to decrease its spending on capital and on research—these are two types of activities which can be viewed as akin to investments—and to increase demand on the economy's available work force. Moreover, the work force which the government is employing has become more expensive, whether because of higher salaries for similar work or through alterations in the type of work performed for government. The change is clearly one away from investment and toward increasing current consumption.

I would like to talk for some time about federalism, the fiscal arrangements we have and energy taxes. After all, is that not what the motion is all about?

There are two events—one is now in process; that is, this event, and the other has just concluded—which are going to alter substantially the fiscal structure of the Canadian confederation. The first of these events was the settlement between Ottawa and the oil producing provinces of their disputes over the production and pricing of oil and gas. The second is the current renegotiation of intergovernmental transfer programs and specifically discussions about the amendments to federal-provincial arrangements and the Established Programs Financing Act. As the recent energy pricing disputes are best understood in the context of fiscal renegotiations, I will talk about them first.

Fiscal renegotiations between levels of government are not normally the cause of great strains within a country. Even less frequently do they penetrate the public consciousness. In Canada, however, they have become, and will be for at least the next five years, a focus of a great deal of the constitutional debate. Please let us not think that the constitutional debate will end Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday. There will be years of debate on the Constitution, no matter what the results are on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next. The details of the settlement which will come about after the renegotiation of the fiscal arrangements will affect not just the economic structure of the country, and particularly its tax structure. In addition, the negotiations and the process whereby a resolution is achieved will themselves profoundly affect the politics of this country. In essence the federal government is embarking upon a course which will almost inevitably bring it into serious conflict with a number of provinces. Given the current strains on confederation and the existence of a government in Quebec which wants, at the least, a dramatic restructuring of the country—and, indeed, Quebec was promised that by those occupying the government benches during the recent referendum campaign in Quebec—there is clear potential for a major crisis which will be fought over this issue.

With its very large deficit the federal government faces a serious dilemma. It has very large obligations stemming directly from the regional equalization role it performs as well as from related regional transfers. At the same time the government is unwilling to raise visible taxes to any degree. This is no doubt hampering the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen) a great deal. In several election campaigns the government has built up the expectation that it will never raise taxes. It simply imposes taxes in a way that is invisible. We do not pay a high price for gasoline because gasoline is more expensive; we do so becasue there is a much higher tax component. Every gallon is taxed far more than it was two years ago.

As the federal government views the problem, its crux lies in the fact that Ottawa has responsibility for alleviating regional disparities which have been made more extreme, in large part because of the explosion of the value of the west's resource riches while having relatively little access to the additional revenues generated. In short, the central government wants a drastic rearrangement of fiscal priorities to facilitate the current level of transfers from richer to poorer provinces without bankrupting the federal government, and to ensure that Ottawa's visibility as a provider of services is as great as its visibility as a collector of taxes. This is a problem any government faces. Everybody wants to be Santa Claus, and up until the present time the government has been able to perform that role because of the increases which sprang, for a time, from the inflation which was rampant and has been rampant for the last 12 years in this country. However, for a time it expanded the tax take of the government quite considerably and naturally. Then indexation of taxation took place; this restricted the amount the federal government stood to gain from inflation, and immediately it began to get into fiscal trouble. The federal government had by then developed the idea that it need never raise taxes but could go on spending more and more money. With the indexation of taxation the government was unable to do so. I thought that its only alternative was to go into debt, so it proceeded to do that rather than face the problem honestly and try to move toward having our income and our outflow of funds equalized.

● (1500)

In two months it will be two years since the Crosbie budget did its best to put this country on a sensible economic path. It does not appear possible for the Liberals to do anything except run expenditures up with the taxpayer's dollar. They now have an additional bonanza in the energy agreement which will supply them with some $50 billion in the next few years. The government looks upon this as found money. Suddenly they have inherited this money and now, I expect, they will look for ways to spend it. We would prefer that they pay some attention to the Economic Council of Canada. Perhaps the council's statement in its recent paper on fiscal arrangements should be read into the record at this time. It reads:

> —but the federal deficit problem cannot be solved by transferring the problem to the provinces. Not only do those economic trends indicate inadequacy of such an approach, but also council projections show that the coming decade will require investment at an unprecedented level in Canada, probably as high or higher than the peak periods of investment reached so far this century. This means that all governments will have not only to restrain their spending but also to raise taxes. Only then will they be able to encourage the financing of investment activities of the sort required. Given the difficulties with restraint, the different levels of government will want to shift the burdens of any increase in taxes to each other. The political ramifications of policies calling for increased taxes inevitably lead in this direction. But this exchange of burdens goes nowhere toward solving Canada's economic difficulties.

As these talks begin in the next few weeks, I would strongly recommend to the Minister of Finance that he remember that what one gets away with in one area is simply imposed in another. If they are going to squabble over the tax dollars, they must remember the pot is only a certain size and they have to share it. I have complained about the ever-increasing government intervention in private industry and the problem of increasing labour costs of such intervention.

I would like to conclude with a quote from a famous analyst of bureaucracy, namely, Max Weber. He identified one characteristic of the bureaucracy early in this century in this way:

> Bureaucratization offers above all the optimum possibility for carrying through the principle of specializing administrative functions according to purely objective considerations . . . The "objective" discharge of business primarily means discharge of business according to calculable rules and "without regard for persons."

This has a danger. It is an attractive way to do things. The only problem is that it does not work very well. Nobody is ever to blame. The blame is shared. The bureaucracy assumes it as a whole. Things go on, Ottawa gets bigger and fatter, and the people pay more and more for less and less. I hope this motion will come to a vote fairly soon. I thank the House for its kind attention.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 21. All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed, will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Section 11 of Standing Order 75, the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

I believe the Chair indicated, following the point or order raised by the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell), that a negative vote on Motion No. 21 would require a vote to be put on Motion No. 22. For this reason, the vote on both these motions will be deferred until the time has been agreed upon with the House leaders. The House will now proceed to Motion No. 23.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre) moved:

Motion No. 23

> That Bill C-48, an act to regulate oil and gas interests in Canada lands and to amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act, be amended in Clause 28 by striking lines 13 to 17 at page 16 and substituting the following therefor:
>
> "former lease under which significant or commercial discoveries of oil or gas were made on or before October 28, 1980 or in respect of any interest that succeeds that former lease".

Mr. John Thomson (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, Motion No. 23 deals with the exemption of certain properties under the Canada Lands Act. Where production has occurred prior to December 31, 1980, these lands are to be exempted from the back-in provision. As everyone knows, the only production we have on Canada lands today is Norman Wells and the gas production at Pointed Mountain. In effect there are two properties.

The position of the Conservative Party is that we do not believe in any form of confiscation. We do not think this back-in is right. What we are proposing in our motion is that at the very least those companies which have gone out in the Canada lands and have made a discovery of oil or gas should be exempted from that back-in provision. After all, they have spent money, gone out and proved up an asset. I think it is fair that anyone who has discovered oil or gas on Canada lands prior to December 31, 1980, should be exempt from this back-in provision. It is confiscation in any form, but it is that much more so in this case if a discovery has been made on the land. That is the intent of Motion No. 23.

When speaking on Bill C-48 the other day, I attempted to describe what self-sufficiency means in Canada, what we are looking at over the next 10 to 20 years, and the formidable job ahead of us if we are to approach even any kind of oil self-sufficiency in Canada. In my previous speech I said that Canada is looking at a shortfall of a million barrels of oil a day. I attempted to describe what an immense job it will be for Canada to try to find a million barrels of oil a day.

There is another aspect of Bill C-48 that I want to address this afternoon. In my view, the impact of Bill C-48 will have a devastating effect on many other aspects of economic life in our country. I am concerned that when we talk about Canadianization, and let us assume it is Canadianization and not nationalization—

Mr. Waddell: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I hesitate to interrupt the hon. member. I would not normally do this. However, as I read the amendment before us, it seems to be virtually the same as the Liberal amendment brought in with this bill. After the hon. member has told us about Canadianization, and since I have to reply to him, I wonder whether he could give us some guidance on how he thinks this amendment differs from the Liberal amendment.

Mr. Thomson: If I have any time left at the end of my speech, I will be happy to try to do that.

• (1510)

I should like to return to what I believe to be the broader aspects of Bill C-48 and their impact on Canada. One question we should consider is where we will find the money. Energy self-sufficiency is a nice goal. It sounds nice, it is a nice phrase. But where will we find the money? Not only will we be required to find money to finance one million barrels of new oil production per day, but we will have to find money for a lot of other things in the next 20 to 30 to 50 years in Canada. Do we think we can get it all by ourselves? Can we generate all this cash by ourselves in Canada?

I was interested in a talk given the other day by Mr. Ed Neufeld, the senior vice-president and chief economist of the Royal Bank of Canada. The title of his talk was "Who will Finance Canada's Economic Growth in the 1980s?"

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Thomson: I am not sure whether hon. gentlemen on my left really care, but the Conservative Party cares about financing Canada's economic growth. It is important to us because it means jobs and incomes for Canadians. Mr. Neufeld said that we would need $1.4 trillion in the next decade to finance our growth. It is beyond my comprehension—$1.4 trillion. This is a staggering sum of money. The Canadian government spends $65 billion a year. What is that in terms of $1.4 trillion? Is it 20 or 200 times that amount?

Mr. Neufeld also said that of this $1.4 trillion, $300 billion will be required in energy and energy-related areas but that huge amounts will also be required in metal mining, pulp and paper, transportation, chemicals, the steel industry, and so on. He went on to say that the rapid development of investment in technology will be the single most important element for achieving Canada's productivity potential. Where will we get $1.4 trillion? I guess much of it depends on the ability of Canadian business to generate its capital requirements. Mr. Neufeld also said that business will have to raise $900 billion of this $1.4 trillion. What does this mean? It means that Canada must have a healthy private sector industry to generate that cash flow.

He went on to indicate that individual Canadians will have to put up $400 billion from their savings in the next 10 years. This means that Canadians should be able to save, to go out and to work. They should have adequate incomes. They cannot be taxed out of existence, or they will not have any money to save and reinvest in their own country.

He went on to say that the government will be required to put up $60 billion. Finally he said that we would need something in the order of $60 billion to $100 billion of foreign investment to achieve our productive potential. We will need foreign investment, and we must recognize this. Business will have to put up $900 billion, so we need a strong entrepreneurial society to go out and create that cash flow. Individual Canadians need an opportunity to invest in Canada. They need the incomes and jobs to create that investment. We need foreign investment capital.

How will we encourage the foreign investment capital we desperately need when the legislation before us this afternoon is put into effect? Has the government thought about that? Does it care? I presume that it does not really care. We will not have any access to foreign capital. We will not get it. People will not invest in Canada. They do not want to invest in a country which will confiscate their assets. Would any hon. member invest in good faith in a country the government of which would come along and steal it?

Mr. Irwin: They will invest anywhere they can make a profit.

Mr. Thomson: I hear the hon. member opposite. He should not kid himself. That is exactly the point—there is no return on the investment.

Mr. Irwin: Then why did they make those profits on Wall Street?

Mr. Thomson: I read a speech which was given the other day by the Canadian ambassador in New York. He said that Americans should understand that our National Energy Program is not discriminatory. "Goodness, no, we would not discriminate against foreign investment," he said. He indicated that Canada has a legitimate right to manage its own affairs. Sure we do, if we do not give a damn about what people think of us. But the fact of the matter is that the legislation discriminates against investments which are made from abroad, and the Canadian government is expropriating assets which do not belong to it. The assets belong to the companies that invested in Canadian land. The government is not only expropriating the assets of foreigners, it is expropriating the assets of Canadian companies which have invested in Canada.

The Canadian ambassador went on to say that the Americans should be tolerant of the course Canada is pursuing through its energy policies. How tolerant would hon. members opposite be if somebody walked into their living rooms and stole their property? Would they be tolerant?

I wonder whether hon. members opposite understand how difficult it is to raise capital. How many of them have gone out to raise capital for a new plant? How many of them have attempted to raise capital for the creation of something worth while? Did the hon. Minister of State for Mines (Mrs. Erola) ever try to raise capital to do anything worth while?

Mr. Taylor: She ran for Parliament.

Mr. Thomson: Did she ever try to raise money to drill an oil well or to purchase a drilling rig? I have been there. I tried to raise capital for 20 years and it was darned difficult. I can remember making many trips to Toronto and Montreal in the 1950s, 1960s and 1970s trying to raise money for oil and gas development, for oil well drilling rigs and to expand the company. Not a dime could I raise because the banks and eastern Canadian investors thought the business was too risky. It is a lot easier to steal it than to go out and make it. The government and hon. members opposite know that. I had to go to Houston and Dallas to raise capital. I could not raise it in Canada, but I could raise it in Houston and Dallas because the people there saw the opportunity which existed in western Canada. It was too risky for Canadians.

The last company for which I worked started from nothing. It started with one rig in Estevan, Saskatchewan. The rig cost $125,000 in 1964. The company started with 15 employees. In a period of 15 years the company managed to survive through some good times and bad. It grew, and it grew on foreign capital. It did not grow on Canadian capital; it grew on foreign capital. The company was sold in 1979 to another Canadian company. At that time, it had become the largest land-based oil well drilling and servicing contractor in North America. It employed over 1,500 people, of whom 1,000 were Canadians. It is U.S. capital that made it possible. It created 1,000 jobs in Canada and 500 jobs in the United States. The company drilled a couple of thousand wells over a period of 15 years and made a positive contribution to the ecomomic wealth of Canada, but it also made a positive contribution to the welfare of 1,000 Canadian workers. Many of those employees owned shares in the company and they took pride in that ownership.

• (1520)

If I were to make a single point with regard to the success of that company, it would be that the employees who owned shares, who owned a piece of that company, took great pride in the achievements and the success of that company. I cannot tell you how many of those employees valued and respected their ownership in that company.

There is a right way and a wrong way to Canadianize Canadian industry. The right way is to allow Canadians and Canadian employees to acquire shares in Canadian companies. The wrong way is for the government to do it for them. How can you create incentive and pride among employees when the government owns the asset? Answer that question. Would you take any personal pride in your home if the government owned it? Would you take any personal pride in your automobile if the government owned it? There is the difference between state ownership and individual ownership.

Hon. members opposite seem to forget that vital point. It is pride that makes people go out and work in this life. It is not a kick-in-the-ass type of philosophy that is exploited by the Liberal government.

Canada needs large amounts of foreign investment in years to come. When we talk about foreign investment, we talk about real jobs for real, live, Canadians. We talk about incomes for Canadian people. Surely that is the direction in which government policy should go.

It seems crazy to me that we should deny Canadians the opportunity to invest in their own country and that we should discourage foreign investment capital that we need in Canada to create a healthy productive economy.

How much capital is required to create one job in Canada? Does anyone know? It varies from industry to industry. I think $100,000 per job is probably a very low estimate.

I see the hon. member for Ottawa-Centre (Mr. Evans) shaking his head and saying that it does not cost $100,000 to create a job in Canada. I have looked at a number of figures and I believe it is a very conservative number. In any event, it is $100,000 a job. How many jobs do we need to create in Canada in the next ten years? One million? I am pointing out to you that the amounts of money that will be required to create the investment for a healthy and productive economy for this country are staggering. We cannot do this all ourselves and fulfil the aspirations of the Canadian people. We will have to rely on foreign investment capital, whether we like it or not. Canada with 23 or 24 million people, cannot live as a nation unto itself. It is beyond our financial resources. What do we do? Do we constrain ourselves and our productive capacity and contrain the aspirations of Canadians? Do we do this because we simply want to go out and raise capital to do something? What is wrong? Tell me, what is the difference between capital from Belgium and capital out of your pocket?

Does it have a different colour to it? Do you pay a different rate of interest on the money?

We have our own federal government that borrows money on foreign markets. It is all right for the federal government to borrow those funds, but it is not all right for the private business to do it. That is bad. I do not understand the logic of that.

We are playing a very dangerous game with our friends in the world in terms of foreign investment. We have not only turned off the United States, but we have turned off the Germans, the Dutch and the British. I have been there and I have listened to them. They do not want to have anything to do with Canada any more. They do not want us. They do not even trade with us. As far as they are concerned, we have failed to live up to our international obligations under the GATT agreement and they will take us to court. That is how they feel about us. I do not care whether the Canadian ambassador says, "Be tolerant and respect our policies," because it will not drill and it will not sell. They are not buying. The Canadian government will not pay the price but individual Canadians will pay it. It is not you. You will not suffer, and I will not suffer. However, individual Canadians will suffer because of this policy. You can bet on it.

It is not as though Canada were the only country in the world that needs capital investment. Do we really believe that we are all that great and that we are the only country in the world that needs capital investment today? Others should consider it a privilege to lend us money to develop our economy. Every country in the world needs capital investment, and lots of it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but the time allotted to him has expired. He may continue with the unanimous consent of the House.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Thomson: Every country in the world is trying either to improve the quality of its plants and equipment or to create new plants and equipment.

I want to conclude with this statement. All Canadians will live to regret the foolishness of the legislation before us this afternoon if it passes through the House. Every Canadian will live to regret it—mark my words.

Mr. Waddell: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I indicated earlier that I should like to put a question to the hon. member. With the consent of the House and of the hon. member, I wonder if I may be able to put it to him now.

An hon. Member: Go ahead.

Mr. Thomson: My hon. friend, the hon. members for Calgary Centre (Mr. Andre), who is more familiar with this legislation than I am, would perhaps be better able to respond to the hon. member's question. I think he will be speaking very shortly. However, I will try to answer the question, if the hon. member wishes.

Mr. Waddell: Perhaps I can put the question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I just want to clarify a matter with regard to time. Normally the mover of a motion would have 40 minutes. The hon. member who spoke was the seconder of the motion. I assume there may be other speakers from his party who would like to speak on this motion. I understand there is unanimous consent of the House to extend his time, if he wishes to do so. I gather it is the mood of the House that he should. In the circumstances, I give the floor to the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell).

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, perhaps the hon. member could answer this question since he knows a lot about this subject, or he may defer answering the question. My question is—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I believe the hon. member for Calgary South (Mr. Thomson) has declined to answer the question and suggests it be put to another spokesman for his party. Perhaps the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway might hold his question and another spokesman for the official opposition might—

Mr. Thomson: Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as I have been granted a further 20 minutes, I would be happy to try to answer the question to the best of my ability.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, Motion No. 23 deals with Clause 28. The original bill deals with pioneer production. The cutoff date of the previous production, if it was before this bill came into effect, was set at January 1, 1976. Therefore, the Crown share could not come in to any production before January 1, 1976.

● (1530)

The amendment the Conservatives have advanced changes that date, backs off the Crown's share a little, and takes the date to October 28, 1980. Therefore, any pioneer production before October 28, 1980, would be excluded from the Crown share. Then the government, in the amended bill which is before us, backs off even further and goes ahead of the Tories to December 31, 1980. Clause 28 states:

> No Crown share is reserved out of a former lease under which oil or gas was first produced, other than for test purposes, on or before December 31, 1980, or in respect of any interest that succeeds any such former lease.

That is the government's bill. My question is whether the Conservatives are talking about something different, and that may be the explanation; however, at first blush it looks as if their amendment did not even go as far as that of the government.

Before I get a chance to speak, I would like the hon. member, or another spokesman for the Conservatives, to clarify at least what their amendment states. I am just a simple, happy Tom from Vancouver.

Mr. Thomson: I think that I can answer the hon. member's question quickly. The amendment we have put forward deals with discoveries which took place before October 28, 1980, not production. The government's amendment deals only with production in place. What our amendment states is that if one found oil before October 28, 1980, then the government does not have the right to back in to those properties. The government's amendment says that if one found oil and had any production on stream prior to December 31, 1980, then one would be exempted from the government back-in. As I said at the outset, what that means is that Pointed Mountain and Norman Wells are the only two properties under Canada Lands which were, in fact, on production as of December 31, 1980. Therefore, any other discoveries which have been made, such as Hibernia and the Beaufort Sea, would still qualify as eligible for the back-in under the government amendment.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell).

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I will try to be very brief. I do not think we should leave this point without getting a further response. I can see that I have already had a good reaction to my speech when I said I shall be brief. There is some wisdom in this place today.

An hon. Member: All the kids in the country should be crying over you.

Mr. Waddell: I would like to hear from the government on this motion and to hear further explanation from the opposition. Let us deal first with the opposition. I have just been told that discoveries of oil are exempted before December 31, 1980. Does that exempt all of Hibernia? Does that exempt the Beaufort Sea? Does that exempt Dome? Am I led to believe that? I understand it does, it exempts all that.

An hon. Member: It is our amendment, and it does.

Mr. Waddell: It exempts everything in Hibernia. This is the opposition's amendment, the Conservative's amendment.

An hon. Member: Tory.

Mr. Waddell: It exempts everything that Dome may or may not have up in the Beaufort Sea, and everything in Hibernia. It seems to me that that is a pretty big concession to the industry. I have heard of concessions, but this is really doing it.

The hon. member for Spadina (Mr. Heap) said that the taxpayer—the bus driver, the waitress, the cleaner and so on—had to pay 53 cents on every dollar, and that another 25 cents had better be added to that to make it 78 cents, exempting all of the pretty rich discoveries in the Canada lands. I think that if there is anything to show that the Conservative Party has totally gone into bed with the oil industry, this amendment is an example of it.

An hon. Member: Yes, we wanted oil self-sufficiency.

Mr. Waddell: I want to raise a point with respect to the government members who are sitting over there laughing as the Conservative Party refights the election of 1979 and goes right back into its opposition to Petro-Canada and government involvement. I suspect the government members know—that is why they are laughing—they are getting the Conservative Party into an unpopular position in this country.

However, let me deal now with the government before hon. members laugh too heartily on this matter. The fact is that the original date on this bill was January 1, 1976. The government backed down, one of the backdowns on the changes of this bill. The reason I am somewhat bitter—but not as bitter as my friends here from Alberta—is that the government would not back down on environment matters, on native matters or on any consumer matters in this bill, but it backed down in about eight instances, that I put on the record the other day, with respect to the industry and, in one instance, with respect to representations from the government of the United States.

I would like the spokesman from the government to stand up in this debate and tell me why the government moved this cutoff date to December 31, 1980. What it means, in simple language, is that if there is any production before that date, the Crown does not get the 25 per cent share.

I have been informed that one gas field operated by Columbia Gas Development Company of Canada Ltd. benefits. Who has been twisting whose arm? What does Columbia Gas get out of it? What does the Liberal Party get out of exempting Columbia Gas? What is the point of doing this? What is the idea of exempting this one particular field? Someone has a lot of power there. Someone has a little bit of influence, unless, of course, it can be explained away. I invite a government member to stand up and explain it away. However, there is something odd in the government backing off from its original bill, extending the date forward, and exempting the operators in the Columbia Gas Development from the 25 per cent Crown share.

It is a nice windfall for the company in this area. There might be an explanation, but it sure looks and feels a little bit smelly. Therefore, I would ask the government to reply indicating why it has exempted this particular field, and why it has brought in this change to the bill from its original version when it came down to the committee.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Mr. MacLaren: Mr. Speaker, I believe the hon. member opposite was seeking some information, and I will gladly attempt to respond briefly. The hon. member may recall that in committee, the January 1, 1976, cutoff date for pioneer production evoked some discussion. Pioneer production, of course, means the production for which oil and gas rights will remain in force according to their existing terms and conditions even after the passage of this bill. The date in the original draft of the bill came from a statement on policy made on May 19, 1976, by the then minister of energy, mines and resources on proposed new oil and gas legislation for the frontier regions.

Some hon. members of the House may recall that this legislation was given first reading on December 20, 1977, as Bill C-20. Obviously, a lot of water, or some fluid in any event, has gone under the bridge since then. It is hardly surprising that we heard in committee a persuasive argument on this point from Columbia Gas Development with respect to the Kotaneelee gas field in the southeast corner of the Yukon Territory. We agreed that the cutoff date should reflect events that have occurred since Bill C-20 was proposed. Accordingly, we changed the cutoff date in our amendment for the determination of pioneer production to December 31, 1980. The Kotaneelee field would thus be added to the pioneer production category which I defined earlier.

● (1540)

Hon. Walter Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I am moved to enter the debate by the remarks made by my colleague, the hon. member for Calgary South (Mr. Thomson), who has spoken the most feelingly and sensibly of any member thus far. His speech is one which should commend itself to all Canadians. The hon. member for Calgary South has made a significant contribution to Canadian business, albeit business in western Canada, but important business indeed to the country.

The energy industry is important. As we look ahead, we can see that we have precious few growth industries in our nation. There is a dearth of our growth industries. It seems to me there are only two in the private sector in any event. One is in the energy and resource development field, and the other is in the high technology field in eastern Canada. It seems to me that we ought to pay very close attention to members of the House and to people who are not members of the House who are making comments now on the government's approach to Canadianization and its effect on those industries, particularly the energy industry.

Knowledgeable people in Canada are saying there is nothing wrong with the concept and principle of Canadianization. I do not think there is a member in the House of Commons, looking at the principle of Canadianization and moving toward a period when Canadians will have a larger and larger slice of the ownership, however it is defined in the industries and businesses of the country, who thinks of Canadianization as a bad thing. Speaking for my own party, that has always been our position. As an hon. member said earlier, Canadian ownership is important.

The history of the country is interesting. The Liberal Party, especially the post-war Liberal Party, was very much a continentalist party. It is its conversion to Canadianization that is relatively recent.

Mr. Rose: That is right.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Perhaps based on some polls Mr. Goldfarb may have taken showing that Canadians are suddenly interested, the Liberal Party has made an about turn. I do not say this unkindly in terms of my friends who are in the chamber today, but I do say it is important from the point of view of the country. If we are to move to Canadianization, both the pace of that movement and the way in which it is made could have a significant and profound effect on the wellbeing of Canada.

A great many western Canadian members have taken part in this debate. Some say that the development of high technology in eastern Canada is the business only of eastern Canadians and that somehow or other the development of the resources in western Canada is the business only of western Canadians. Both of these statements are, of course, untrue. We are intertwined in this country by every advance and every backward step that is taken in developing any part of Canada. If a backward step is taken in the forest industry in British Columbia, it ripples across the nation. If an advance is made in the resource industries in western Canada, we are all affected by it. All Canadians have a vital interest in the continued and growing vitality of the nation.

From time to time we tend to think of these debates in regional terms. They have a direct impact on the regions affected, but ripples cut across boundaries, waves wash over boundaries, and it does not matter.

If a step is taken by any government advancing any good principle—and Canadianization is a good principle—people from every part of Canada are involved. However, if a step is taken that has a deleterious effect on one of our major industries, particularly one in which there is some capability for growth, then people from every part of Canada have to become concerned. Therefore, I think it is relevant to the people in my constituency and in my part of Canada, just as it is relevant to my friends in the province of Quebec, to be very much concerned, just as an increasing number of knowledgeable economic writers and commentators are concerned about the effect of the National Energy Program on the resource industry in western Canada.

This is not a concern reflected just in partisan terms about government policy toward the development of business in Canada. The same concern was reflected the other day in a statement made by Mr. Thomas Kierans who is the retiring chairman of the Ontario Economic Council. Mr. W. A. Macdonald, a distinguished Toronto lawyer and member of the McMillan Binch firm spoke in similar terms. I am sure hon. members recognize the McMillan Binch firm as the firm John Turner went to. Mr. Macdonald expressed concern about the impact a number of policies of the government were having on the country.

We should stop and take stock of where we are moving. If we are moving in the right direction, are we using the right tools and are we on the right track? Are we going too quickly? Is the speed at which we are travelling having deleterious effects?

I am sure all those who heard the special report carried by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation broadcast in the early part of this week must have been moved by the discussions on activities in western Canada. When I was in Regina, Edmonton and Vancouver, I talked to a great many people, not just Conservatives but people who are interested in the development of Canada as much as anyone else is. I was told about the tremendous diminution of drilling rigs in western Canada.

Since the National Energy Program began, more than 100 drilling rigs have left the country. If my figures are incorrect and they can be checked, I will certainly correct them on the record. But the movement of 100 rigs is a major movement. Drilling rigs are not like hand pumps that one can pull out of the ground, they are not like electric drills that can be moved easily. The movement of one drilling rig involves 30 trucks. A big decision is made when a rig is moved. Where are these drilling rigs going? They are not going to the United States because their owners like Americans more than they like Canadians. It is not that at all. I do not believe rigs are leaving Canada because their owners do not like the policies of the government of Alberta. They may not, but I do not believe that is the reason. If anyone can tell me of a commentator who would say that, I would like to know. Drilling rigs are being moved by their owners because of the National Energy Program. People are concerned about the Canadianization policy. They are concerned about the the proposals involving Canada lands. Given that kind of concern, it is only natural people turn to the United States.

● (1550)

I am not suggesting at all by what I am saying that companies should have an untrammelled right with respect to Canada lands, but I think we have to stop, look and listen to what has happened. We must listen to those who are knowledgeable in the business. We must ask ourselves whether the policy, of which this bill is the keystone, is really in the best interests of the country, given the speed of implementation and given the side effects from it. That is of interest to us because I believe it can be demonstrated that for every Canadian job lost in Alberta, for every drilling rig which is taken out of Canada, and for every negative shift, the impact is not felt only in Drayton, Alberta; it is felt in Ontario among the suppliers of valves, pipes, fittings, trucks, drills and all of the things manufactured here and used in the drilling industry. This can have an impact on the petrochemical industry in Sarnia, represented by my friend, the hon. member for Sarnia (Mr. Cullen) who is in the House. We are not little islands in this country, we are joined together as one country in the economic sense, and that is the course of the matter. That is the thing that concerns and worries me about this bill.

I had determined not to enter the debate until I heard my friend, the hon. member for Calgary South. I think it is very important that the government not consider anyone who is opposed to the bill as being opposed to Canadianization, but that at least it consider another way to Canadianize. I hope it is considering other ways.

I do not have to tell you, Mr. Speaker, about the importance of foreign capital to the industry. My friends have talked about that importance, and it is important. You represent a part of the province of Ontario, as I do, and you must know, as I know, the concerns there are within the province of Ontario regarding the whole question of deindustrialization. We do not have oil here. We have some very small quantities of natural gas, but we do not have oil. If we are to see our growth, it will be in high technology, in the developing, manufacturing, assembling and processing industries. That is not happening in Ontario at the moment. That is one of the difficulties of this province. If we are to have balanced economic growth, I believe it is important to have growth everywhere.

One of the things that you and I encountered, Mr. Speaker, when we were in the Republic of Germany was that wherever we went—and you will recall that we met Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, provincial officials in Stuttgart and officials in Bonn, we met them socially, as you will recall, and we also met them at the session of the committees of the parliament in Bonn—was their puzzlement, they were scratching their heads. They wondered why we took this kind of universal approach to the question of foreign capital. They indicted a willingness to enter into joint ventures with us, ventures in which they did not want the majority holding. They are interested in making money and they look upon Canada, they thought, as a reasonable place in which to invest, but they scratched their heads. I think this government too is beginning to scratch its head a little about this matter.

As the hon. member for Calgary South has said, jobs are created as a result of the creation, the building, the augmenting of industry in any part of Canada. There is a great problem in Canada with respect to jobs. We have a million Canadians unemployed. We have people who are trained to do some jobs, but there is no place for them to work. We have people who are educated but because there is no development at the moment, they find themselves underemployed. There is nothing wrong with working at what might be termed a job at an ordinary level, but it is a shame if a person is trained to work at something different and cannot do it. That is a concern we all must have, and I gather the government is suddenly becoming concerned about it.

All those brave words in the Speech from the Throne have come to nothing. Little has been heard recently of the Foreign Investment Review Agency, and little has been heard about the strengthening of it. The reason is that it was regarded, and is becoming regarded within the Liberal government, I think, as a matter that will slow the pace of needed development. The same can apply to any government policy. However we like to cut it, in the resource industry in western Canada at the moment the application and the pace of the program under the national energy policy as announced, and the form and method of Canadianization, is having that kind of dulling effect on the cutting edge of one of our industries with the greatest potential in Canada.

If the government does not soon develop some reasonable policies with respect to research and development, then we in our own part of Canada will begin falling behind the Germans, the Japanese and others in terms of high technology. In that case, we can use some help from the government in terms of some reasonable approach to research and development. If those reasonable approaches are not made with respect to the national energy policy, Canadianization and all the things involved in Bill C-48, the same thing could happen in western Canada. Whether that kind of decrease happens in this part of Canada or in western Canada makes no difference to Canadians. To the extent that we do not realize our potential, wherever it might be in Canada, the best interests of the country, the people and the future, are not appropriately served by government policy. That is the isssue before the government with respect to Bill C-48. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. May I call it four o'clock?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. It being four o'clock p.m., the House will now proceed to the consideration of private members' business as listed on today's Order Paper, namely notices of motions, public bills, and private bills.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

[English]

Motion No. 43 allowed to stand by unanimous consent.

* * *

ENERGY

HYDRO DEVELOPMENT AT CHURCHILL FALLS, LABRADOR

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the government should act on the request of the government of Newfoundland outlined in a letter addressed to the Prime Minister by the Premier of Newfoundland dated April 16, 1980, to ensure that hydroelectric power pass freely from the development of the Lower Churchill River in Newfoundland and Labrador from Labrador across the territory of the province of Quebec to other provinces and territories so that the said hydroelectric power can be sold freely to other customers and not be forced to be sold to Quebec Hydro alone at whatever price Quebec Hydro wishes to impose, and that the government invoke its authority under the BNA Act to grant to Newfoundland the right to transmit hydroelectricity across the province of Quebec in a similar manner to action taken to permit the free flow of oil and natural gas from Alberta and the western provinces to consumers in Ontario and Quebec by way of interprovincial pipelines, and that the government act immediately so that financing arrangements can be concluded and steps taken to commence the development of the hydro resources of the Lower Churchill River in Labrador during 1980.

● (1600)

He said: Mr. Speaker, I rise on this motion to put before the House the facts of a situation which is a national tragedy. It is a national lost opportunity. It is a national shame. This is a cry to the nation for justice.

This motion was moved, Mr. Speaker, on April 30, 1980. It is now a year and a half later, and we have progressed no further.

In 1965, an agreement was entered into between Quebec Hydro and the Churchill Falls-Labrador Corporation, a subsidiary of Brinco, to build the Upper Churchill power project with the approval of the Newfoundland government. It was completed and it now produces 5,600 megawatts of electric power, 35 billion kilowatt hours per year that is purchased by Quebec Hydro and sold by CFL Co. It is the equivalent of 60 million tons of oil in energy. Under that contract, the power is sold for 3 mills, that is three tenths of one cent per kilowatt hour, which transposes into $1.80 per barrel of oil. The equivalent price of oil would be $1.80 per barrel. Under the contract entered into, which became effective September 1, 1976, for 65 years, this contract will continue to the year 2041. After 40 years, the price will go down to 2 mills per kilowatt hour, two tenths of one cent per kilowatt hour, the equivalent of $1.50 per barrel of oil. This will be in the year 2016. In essence Quebec will be getting oil at $1.50 per barrel, or hydroelectric energy at a price of 2 mills per kilowatt hour.

As we know, imported oil is now costing Canada $40 per barrel. Quebec obtains its power at a cost to Quebec Hydro of about 10 mills per kilowatt hour, when you include the cost to Quebec of bringing it across the transmission lines from Churchill Falls into Quebec. The power that they are getting at a cost of 10 mills per kilowatt hour, they are now selling within Quebec for an average price of 25 mills per kilowatt hour. The profit per year to Quebec Hydro for 35 billion kilowatt hours of energy sold at 25 mills per kilowatt hour is $525 million a year. That is a very good deal, you might say. You might say they were stupid in Newfoundland to have entered into this arrangement, and doubtless that is true. The person who was responsible was the then premier, Mr. Smallwood, who in large measure has to bear the responsibility for this. Of course, we are looking back from our vantage point now and it is very easy to be smart in hindsight.

This contract does not have a provision for renegotiation or escalation. The inflation alone would amply demonstrate that if CFL Co. were left as a private enterprise, it would be bankrupt before this contract was even half completed. This contract was so ineptly drafted, showed so little forethought, that CFL Co. would have been bankrupt if left as a private enterprise before half the 65-year term of the contract was over. There was not even an escalation clause included to cover inflation.

That is a very good contract for Quebec Hydro. In Newfoundland there is a feeling of great injustice. I do not think Newfoundland is making any money from this. The $8 million or $10 million, which was the original estimate of what Newfoundland would make in the Upper Churchill, has gone with the increased costs since then. This is confirmed by the study done by the Economic Council of Canada. That is the Upper Churchill.

In 1974, the Newfoundland government took over CFL Co. from Brinco by nationalizing it. I was there and I am delighted to have been a member and one of the originating spirits of that action. Work was planned to begin development on the Gull Island site in the Lower Churchill. That site would provide 1,700 megawatts of power. Work was also planned to develop the Muskrat Falls site on the Lower Churchill River, which would have produced another 600 megawatts of power, resulting in a total of 2,300 megawatts of power.

Newfoundland had to have the power. It ran out of new hydro sources in Newfoundland, as I will demonstrate in a moment. They are now left to use very expensive oil. We all know what has happened to oil. Newfoundland spent $78.3 million working on the plans for those two projects. In 1976 the Newfoundland government had to stop because there was no agreement with Quebec. You might ask: no agreement about what? Well, Mr. Speaker, in Newfoundland we cannot develop 1,700 megawatts of power from the Lower Churchill without having more customers than exist in Newfoundland. The surplus has to be sold somewhere for a period of 10 to 20 years.

The only way to sell that surplus is to sell it to Hydro-Quebec for use in Quebec, and if Hydro-Quebec does not want it, to sell it to somebody outside Quebec, such as the United States, Ontario, New Brunswick or Nova Scotia who need and want the power. However, the position of the Quebec government has been negative. They have said: "No, you are not going to sell that power to anyone else". They have said: "You cannot transmit that power over our territory unless we buy the power ourselves." They will not allow us to sell to some third party, and they will not buy it.

In any event, they have told us that if they did buy it, they would not give us very much for it. They have said: "You have to surrender any rights or claims you think you have on the Upper Churchill before we will agree to let you sell this power to us or transmit it to anyone else."

Well, Quebec is obviously in a very stong position. The Government of Canada has never exercised its constitutional right to expropriate land or permit construction of interprovincial and international electricity transmission lines, such as they have done for oil and natural gas transmission lines. It has exercised its power to allow oil and gas to come from Alberta, across Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario into Quebec. No province can stop them from doing that, but the federal government has not done that for hydroelectric transmission.

Newfoundland was left without any accessibility to the power from its sites at Gull Island and Muskrat Falls. In 1978, the federal and provincial governments formed the Lower Churchill Development Corporation, 49 per cent of which was owned by the Government of Canada and 51 per cent by Newfoundland. The two governments have spent $25 million to date, $15 million from the federal government and $10 million from the province. The plans for the development of Gull and Muskrat have been found to be economic and feasible. Gull Island is preferred because it gives lower cost power, but the surplus power must still be sold for a number of years and Quebec has stopped all further progress because of the reasons I have outlined.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the Newfoundland government says it is not going to give up any claims on the Upper Churchill. Never will it give up its rights or claims on the Upper Churchill. No, no, never, never, nay never. No more will we sell our heritage, nay, never more. That is the attitude of the province of Newfoundland. They are not going to surrender their right to that tremendous resource on the Upper Churchill for justice and equity to develop the Lower Churchill. The Newfoundland government would allow the lights to go out first. I hope it will never come to that. It is unreasonable for it to be asked.

In an attempt to get justice on the Upper Churchill, Mr. Speaker, a court action was commenced in 1976, when I was minister of mines and energy in Newfoundland, under the original lease between the Newfoundland government and CFL Co. The action was taken under a provision of the lease which said that Newfoundland had the right, provided that upon the request of the government, consumers of electricity in the province shall be given priority where it is economic and feasible to do so.

Newfoundland, acting on that clause, asked Quebec Hydro and CFL Co. to permit Newfoundland to recall 800 megawatts of power. The answer from Quebec Hydro—and CFLCo had to observe what Quebec told them—was no, it is not going to allow Newfoundland to recall anything but the 300 megawatts permitted under the original agreement. They would not allow any more than that. We cannot get any power from the Upper Churchill, although we need the power on the island of Newfoundland and Labrador. A court action was commenced against CFL Co. and Quebec Hydro was joined as a party. It took five years to get it into court. It is in court now, the trial is under way and it will be another five years before that is all concluded. We cannot wait another five years. So in November of 1980 the Newfoundland government passed legislation known as the water rights reversion act which provides that they are going to expropriate, or nationalize, CFL Co.'s assets. They are going to take them over, take back the water rights. They will pay off all the bond holders, and if that legislation is found to be intra vires of the province, and I hope to God that it is, then Newfoundland will at last be in a position to deal mano a mano with the province of Quebec in this situation, because Newfoundland will own the assets and have the power and will not have to sell power to anyone. It could just turn the switch off quite legally and properly if this act is intra vires of the province. The case went before the Newfoundland court of appeal this month on a reference. They will be giving a judgment by early 1982. It took five years to hear the argument. All the parties were represented. After a judgment is given there, it will go to the Supreme Court of Canada, and we can expect to have an answer in another year as to whether or not that legislation is intra vires of the province. If it is, then the province for the first time will have an equal bargaining right with the province of Quebec. Quebec will have to sit down with Newfoundland, and they will have to decide on a fair and equitable arrangement on the Upper Churchill.

• (1610)

Newfoundland is not asking that Quebec give up its right to this power from the Upper Churchill or that it surrender much of the power. It only wants the opportunity to have some of that power at a reasonable cost to meet the needs in Newfoundland now. It wants and is quite prepared to do a deal with Quebec to develop the Lower Churchill and Muskrat Falls.

I have already mentioned the 1,700 megawatts on the Gull Island site. There are 600 megawatts at the Muskrat site. There are five more rivers whose headwaters originate in Newfoundland. They go down through the territory of Quebec into the Gulf of St. Lawrence. On those five rivers there are another 3,000 megawatts of hydro power wasting away, running into the ocean. Fifty-three hundred megawatts of energy are now running into the ocean every day, unused, the equivalent of another 60 million tonnes of oil per year that could be used here in Canada running away because no one can solve this conundrum and because the Government of Canada, the national government which has the constitutional powers and responsibilities, has taken no action to date to resolve this and to force the two parties to be more reasonable. The federal government could certainly exert some pressure by using its constitutional power and asking Quebec to be more reasonable. It could show Quebec that it really will have to be more reasonable.

There has been another cost to Newfoundland. The cost of site work on Gull Island in 1976, if construction had started then, would have been $2 billion. The estimated cost today is $4.3 billion. The cost has more than doubled because of this unnecessary delay caused by the somewhat, I believe, predatory and unneighbourly position taken by the province of Quebec, but, of course, they are responsible to their own electorate. I suppose they feel they cannot give anything up unless they are forced to give it up. They cannot justify it to their customers or their people, and they are in a difficult position. I can see that in Quebec. Unless they can show they are forced, that they have no choice, are they going to give up $535 million a year, which will eventually become a billion dollars a year? And God knows what it will be before the 65 years are up.

So that is one cost to Newfoundland. The cost to Gull has now doubled. If it started now, it would be $4.3 billion. But Newfoundland had to have more energy. They had to build a third oil fired unit at Holyrood. It cost $75 million for 150 megawatts of power, oil fired. That is very, very, expensive, as hon. members know, the oil costing now whatever it is. There is some subsidy from the Government of Canada, but it is $34 a barrel, $40 imported. It is costing the Government of Canada quite a bit to subsidize that oil.

Then we had to do the Hinds Lake hydro project in Newfoundland, $80 million for 75 megawatts of power. That costs 25 mills a kilowatt hour. Then the province had to start the upper Salmon development; $155 million to produce 84 megawatts of power. The cost to Newfoundland hydro is 40 mills per kilowatt hour, almost 20 times what Quebec is paying for Upper Churchill power, and now the government of Newfoundland has had to start the Cat Arm hydro project, the last site left on the island of Newfoundland; $300 million to produce 127 megawatts, and the cost, 60 mills per kilowatt hour that we have to produce in Newfoundland, power for which our people pay 60 mills, while we are selling all this power to Quebec at 3 mills per kilowatt hour. We are paying in Newfoundland now 20 times what Hydro-Quebec has to pay for the power from the Upper Churchill.

The total cost of all those developments on the island, all of which would have been unnecessary if Gull Island had been permitted to start, was $610 million which had to be spent unnecessarily in new plants. This was because Quebec said that Gull Island could not go ahead because they would not purchase any surplus power and they would not permit Newfoundland to transmit it to anyone else.

Those are the basic facts. The government has presented, in an energy security bill to the House—no, it was not presented to the House, I do not think. It is a suggested draft bill that is planned to be presented to the House. There are provisions in it that would give the Government of Canada the right to put under the National Energy Board interprovincial and international electric lines which link producers of electricity with customers elsewhere in the country or on the continent. If that legislation is eventually passed, that would give the government and the NEB the legal powers to do this if they so wished, but that legislation is not likely to pass the House for another six months, nine months or however long it might take, and this situation requires action now. It is a national tragedy, not just a Newfoundland tragedy, that one of the most disadvantaged provinces, one of the provinces lowest in per capita income, one of the provinces striving to pull itself up by its boot straps, should be losing $535 million a year at the moment because of a bad contractual arrangement made in 1965. It would be bad enough if it had been since 1968, but that for the years since 1976 it has been prevented from developing all this power in Labrador because the province of Quebec has a strong stranglehold on whether or not the development goes through and wants to exact capitulation and surrender with respect to the Upper Churchill is intolerable. That is what we have a federal government for, and it clearly has the powers. It does not need to amend the Constitution to get these powers. It has them already but has failed to exercise them.

So I believe either this should come forward now and the government should act now—separate this out from the energy security bill—or the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) should try to see if some progress cannot be made by persuading Quebec and Newfoundland that there is no point in waiting any longer. These developments have to come. How long can Canada wait for all that power to be developed in these rivers? Fifty-three hundred megawatts of power today are just running away into the waters of the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the Labrador current because of this impasse.

The solution to all of this, of course, was back in 1965. I will say this for Mr. Lévesque: he was the minister of resources in Quebec, and he approached Mr. Smallwood back in those days and suggested, before the project started, that the Upper Churchill should be a joint venture between Newfoundland and Quebec. Had that been done, it would have been a sensible way of doing it. They could both have shared these resource rents equally. But the then premier of Newfoundland, Mr. Smallwood, said "No." He would not abandon his favourite son, BRINCO, that he had had something to do with having created years before. As a result, this great opportunity was passed up, and we face in the province of Newfoundland this impasse today.

I am not advancing this or putting these facts forward in any way against the province of Quebec. Naturally they want to protect themselves and enjoy all the fruits of that contract they can enjoy. As I said before, their politicians and their government have to remember that if the cost of power goes up in Quebec because Hydro-Quebec agreed to pay more for Upper Churchill power, their own electorate might be very, very angry at them. So the only solution now is either if the Newfoundland legislation passes the test of being intra vires, that will mean that there will have to be a settlement between Quebec and Newfoundland because their two bargaining powers will then be just about equal and they could work out some arrangement between them, or, failing that, the Government of Canada has to exercise its jurisdiction in the national interest because this power is not all needed in Quebec. The power is not all needed in Newfoundland. It will save the importation of tremendous amounts of expensive oil altogether on the Upper and Lower Churchill and the other rivers that I have mentioned, 120 million barrels of oil a year in energy. That is why I say it is a national tragedy. That is why I have put this motion forward. I hope putting the facts on the record will induce members of this House to urge the government to take some action, and take it now, before the final conflict and struggle comes when the Newfoundland legislation is found to be intra vires. If it is found not to be intra vires, there is no telling what the future will hold for the province of Newfoundland or what confrontations or conflicts will then ensue.

● (1620)

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, one of the advantages of being a member of this House is that you can see problems outside your region and appreciate some of the great difficulties in making a country like Canada work. My riding is in Vancouver, some 4,000 miles away from the area talked about by my friend, the hon. member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie). I learned a lot from what he said in his speech today. I want to state some of what I have learned in order to clear it in my mind and get it on the record. I want to suggest some ways this very delicate issue might be handled.

I understand that 14 years ago Newfoundland agreed to sell almost all the hydroelectric power from its massive Churchill Falls project in Labrador to the province of Quebec, that it is a 65-year contract, and that Quebec agreed to pay Newfoundland $100 million a year. That works out to slightly less than three mills per kilowatt power per hour. A mill is one tenth of a cent. Since the signing of that agreement in 1967, world energy prices have soared. Current market prices for electricity are in excess of 30 to 50 mills per kilowatt hour.

As I understood the hon. member for St. John's West, Newfoundland should be collecting about $700 million a year for this energy. It wants Quebec to tear up the old contract and renegotiate. I gather that Quebec says, "A contract is a contract. We know bargain-basement prices when we see them, and we will not tear it up."

The hon. member also referred to a court case, which no doubt will be decided by the Supreme Court of Canada. I have read and heard about this issue before. It is like a peat fire smouldering under the surface for many years, and now it is flaring up. It is approaching the stage where we must think of trying to resolve this problem.

I knew the hon. member was going to make his speech today so I made some inquiries as to the Quebec side of the argument. Being a lawyer like the hon. member for St. John's West, I suspected there are usually two sides to any argument or case. I want to put this on record as well and to clarify it in my mind and get it through my thick Scottish head so that I can make some suggestions.

I understand that Quebec maintains that unless Hydro-Quebec had agreed to buy the electricity in the first place, the Churchill Falls project would never have been developed. I also understand that Quebec Hydro raised money for the project in the United States, laying itself on the line in doing so, because Newfoundland could not raise the money. It may be said that it was easier for Hydro-Quebec to raise the money than for Newfoundland, to do so.

I further understand that the province of Quebec had been involved with long-term contracts with Ontario for hydroelectric power at very disadvantageous rates. In fact, when the last contract expired in 1976, Ontario was paying 2.7 mills for Quebec power. The then market value was four mills. That was the going rate for power generated by Ontario Hydro at the time. Quebec did not like those contracts but, to quote Premier Lévesque, they lived up to them to the bitter end. One might say there is a big difference between that discrepancy in mill rates and the discrepancy the hon. member for St. John's West clearly set before the House today.

I understand there is another issue running in tandem with this, which was not mentioned today by the hon. member for St. John's West. There has been a long-term Quebec-Newfoundland dispute as to who owns Labrador. That dispute goes back some time. Again to quote Premier Lévesque, he said, "If we were robbed in 1927, by God it was only simple justice to get some of our own back by getting the lowest possible price for their power." The issue of an equitable contract is therefore clouded with the issue of the ownership of Labrador. It may not logically follow, and some would say it should not, but it is there. When you try to weigh the argument on both sides, you have to recognize that.

The hon. member's resolution may be somewhat premature. The National Energy Board Act amendments in the energy security bill before the House will cover some of the concerns the hon. member mentioned. Let me say something about that so that I can get it clear as to what those amendments do.

As I understand it, the amendments to the National Energy Board Act, as proposed in the energy security bill, will have the effect of broadening the board's jurisdiction with respect to power lines and redefining the board's jurisdiction in relation to oil and gas export prices.

The NEB will be able to regulate interprovincial power lines which may, in the future, be designated as falling within its jurisdiction. Authority for these designated lines has been added to the board's mandate to ensure that authority exists to permit construction of a dedicated power line between two provinces through a third.

The amendments also grant the board authority to expropriate the necessary rights-of-way for both international and the designated interprovincial power lines. This will provide treatment for power lines analagous to that accorded pipelines.

I should say that this has never been decided in law. The Supreme Court case may be helpful, although it may not settle the issue. According to Professor John Laskin at the University of Toronto, one of the finest law schools in the country, it has been established by the Federal Court that pipelines can go across provincial boundaries, but the issue is yet to arise with the interprovincial transmission of electric power. Therefore, it is a complicated issue.

There are negotiations being carried on between the governments of Quebec and Newfoundland over this issue. I believe it would be better to await the outcome of these negotiations. If you listen to the debate, as you have, Mr. Speaker, on this and on Bill C-48 which we have been debating, you can see the kind of anger and frustration that some of the members on my right feel. They kid me a lot and I kid them, but I can pick up the regional anger and frustration. They are saying, "By God, Ontario did that to us for hundreds of years." I think the hon. member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) expressed it best. I will not quote him directly, but to paraphrase his remarks, he indicated that Ontario did it to them for hundreds of years, that is, it controlled energy and so on, and that they would do it to Ontario now. We can see the anger and frustration, but unfortunately a country cannot be governed consistently on anger and frustration. There must be some equity and some justice. The hon. member for St. John's West appealed rather eloquently for the justice of the Newfoundland case. On its face, it seems to be a bad contract. I have learned much from what he said, but I note that he ran for Mr. Smallwood and the Liberal Party in 1966, approximately six years after the negotiation of the contract. Presumably he supported the policies of the then premier, Mr. Smallwood. I am sure even the hon. member in his wisdom could not have foreseen the increases in energy prices and their effects on the old contract, the old deal.

● (1630)

I should like to refer to some remarks made by a past prime minister, the late Right Honourable Lester B. Pearson, as reported on page 2145 of Hansard for April 14, 1964, as well as some of his remarks later on. He said:

[Translation]

It is the task of parliament, without regard to party; it is the challenge of statesmanship rising above faction, to find the solutions to our problems which are now more serious and more difficult than any we have faced in peacetime since 1867.

[English]

I especially like the lines where Mr. Pearson went on to say:

[Translation]

Mr. Pearson was referring to the problems with Quebec during the sixties. He discussed the quiet revolution in Quebec which strangely enough, Mr. Speaker, offers a number of similarities with the kind of economic revolution western Canada is going through at the present time. Mr. Speaker, former Prime Minister Pearson said, and I quote:

We must find these solutions by agreement, not force them by compulsion. We cannot hope to find such agreement in our country if we cannot find a basis for it in our parliament.

[English]

I take it he was setting forth the general principle that we should try to settle things by co-operation. That would be the best way in delicate interprovincial matters. The best way to settle the dispute between Newfoundland and Quebec is by negotiation. We on this side of the House recognize that there are arguments on both sides and that the dispute must be settled by negotiation.

The hon. member for Vancouver East (Mrs. Mitchell) recently returned from a trip to Labrador. She told me that Labradorians feel quite separate from Newfoundland, and that they act accordingly. Anyway, they prefer to be called Labradorians rather than Newfoundlanders. I suspect much of this is caused by their isolation from Newfoundland. They indicated to the hon. member that they would like a redistribution of federal representation to ensure that they would have their own representative from Labrador, rather than counting on an islander, who apparently never visits them. Certainly it would be helpful to have a member from Labrador in the House who could express their case just as forcefully, or perhaps even more forcefully than it was expressed today by the hon. member for St. John's West.

I understand as well that Labrador is not very happy with the deal between Newfoundland and Quebec over Churchill. They would like to use Churchill as a regional economic base from which to develop Labrador. It sounds similar to some of the arguments in the north concerning the development of megaprojects—there is much rhetoric but there are very few local benefits. I might add that the hon. member for St. John's avoided any heights of rhetoric that I have sometimes heard from him in the House in order to lay the facts before us. It might be interesting to note what the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) said in 1972 when the power was finally turned on at Churchill Falls. As reported in the Toronto Star, he said:

—he proclaimed the project begged "comparison with the pyramids but with a usefulness which promises the benefits of a Nile."

There was much promise when that project happened. By using our heads, being very rational, with a little give and take on both sides, we should realize that, on the one side, this is a very bad contract for the government and the people of Newfoundland, and, on the other side, that the Quebec government goes back a long way and feels aggrieved by the loss of Labrador—there may be some solution through continued negotiations, rather than by way of Parliament declaring what should happen. I do not deviate from the principle that if this Parliament has to do so, it should, but I would prefer if we followed——the feelings of Mr. Pearson, and finally reach an agreement between the province of Newfoundland and the province of Quebec.

[Translation]

[English]

Mr. Roger Simmons (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie), my good friend of many years, and I are not often on the same side of an argument. But I am delighted to say this afternoon that I find myself very much in agreement with many of his points. Certainly I support the spirit of the cause he espoused in the House today. I will elaborate on that point in a moment or two.

Before the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) leaves the chamber, I should like to comment on one or two of the points he made in this debate. He made much of the quotation of the late Right Honourable Mr. Pearson. Then he chided the hon. member for St. John's West about the time when he was a Liberal. Perhaps I should indicate that when Mr. Pearson made that particular speech the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway was also a Liberal working very hard for the Liberals in Toronto. Unfortunately he took a below-the-belt dig at the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. Rompkey) and pointed out that he was an islander. From my knowledge of the careers of both gentlemen let me indicate that the hon. minister has lived more years in Labrador, namely ten or 11, than the member has lived in Vancouver. I suggest he stick to the issues and he would be less inclined to trip himself up. Also he indicated that he learned a lot from the speech of the hon. member for St. John's West. I am sure he has. I would caution the hon. member, nevertheless, to separate facts from fiction. There is a fair amount of fact in what the hon. member for St. John's West said today. There is also a little fiction. I want to address myself to both, Mr. Speaker, during the next few minutes.

● (1640)

The hon. member for St. John's West talked about the lease signed in 1961 involving the transmission of power, the 65-year deal we have heard so much about. In effect, it forms part of the basis for the motion before us. Mr. Speaker, it has been 20 years since the deal was signed. It would be purely academic to spend time defending the deal at this particular time. Suffice to say, for the purpose of what I want to say later, that at the time it was considered to be a very good deal. Indeed, it took the best brains on both sides of the Atlantic to put the deal together.

At that time, it was considered such a good deal, Mr. Speaker, that it was unanimously endorsed by every member, without exception, of the Newfoundland House of Assembly, including the three lonely Tory members who sat as the official opposition in Newfoundland at that time. Every member of the House in that day, in 1961, thought it was such a good deal that every person, at that particular time, no one abstaining, endorsed the deal.

As my friend, the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway pointed out, it continued to be a good deal as late as 1966 when my good friend from St. John's West joined the cabinet of the gentlemen who engineered that particular deal. It is significant to note that the hon. member for St. John's West, in the three years he served in Mr. Smallwood's cabinet, did not utter a single word about the deal in terms of it being unfair, inadequate or less than good for Newfoundland.

An hon. Member: We were not told anything about it.

Mr. Simmons: No, Mr. Speaker. Do not misunderstand me. I am not at all attacking the position of the member for St. John's West at that time. The reason he did not speak out is he had good reason to believe in 1966 that it was a good deal. In 1966, 1967, 1968 and 1969 it was perceived to be a good deal. It was a good deal as long as oil was $1.80 a barrel. Although my good friend for St. John's West was able to forecast and to look ahead, he could not have guessed that in 1966 or in 1969 the OPEC countries would do what they did in the 1970s to the international oil prices.

That is the key we are missing in this particular issue, Mr. Speaker. What was considered in 1961 and for a decade afterwards to be a good deal is not a good deal in today's terms. That is the point that the hon. member for St. John's West is making, I believe. In 1981 terms, it is an unconscionable deal. It is an insult and it is an unfair deal. It is highway robbery. The times have changed. The terms are changed.

As a consequence, I submit that the deal has to be rewritten. There has to be a new deal in so far as Upper Churchill Falls power is concerned, Mr. Speaker. On that point the member for St. John's West and I see eye to eye and cheek to cheek, to quote him. I will not quote him further because of my propensity for common decency.

Let us set aside the old business of hindsight, the hindsight everyone seems to exercise these days, about how shocking the deal was in 1961. In 1961 and in 1965 it was a good deal, but it is not a good deal in 1981 because of the circumstances that have since transpired. I will repeat it in another way for you, Mr. Speaker. If prices had remained at $1.80 or $2 a barrel today—and we know they are not because they are around $34 or $35 a barrel—Mr. Smallwood and his cabinet would be heroes because they had the foresight to sign a 65-year deal to lock the people of Quebec into a deal—at such good bargain basement prices. Was it the foresight of the people who were negotiating the deal in 1961 that was at fault? No, Mr. Speaker. Who would have dreamed at that point in time that we would today be talking on the international market about something in the order of $34 or $35 a barrel, as opposed to less than $2. That is what went sour with the deal, and that is why it is wrong in today's terms, Mr. Speaker. Conscience and common decency dictate that that deal must be renegotiated in terms of today's realities, realities that changed drastically in the early 1970s after the advent on the world scene of the OPEC phenomenon.

The member for St. John's West talked about gas moving from western Canada through the pipeline, so why not electricity. Mr. Speaker, where has the hon. member been? On June 22 the minister in the House, I believe, gave notice that it is the intention of the government to rectify that situation. It is the intention of the government, through the energy security act, to provide that the National Energy Board have the same powers in respect of the transmission of electricity as it does in respect of the transmission of natural gas. We have given notice that we intend to do that. Mr. Speaker, at such time as we do, and I expect it will be in the reasonably near future, I hope we will have the unqualified support of the hon. member for St. John's West. It will go a long way, not the whole way, to address the issue he identified today in this important resolution.

The hon. member for St. John's West during his speech today also mentioned the so-called joint proposal involving the hydro development in Labrador, the joint proposal that would have involved Mr. Lévesque at the time of the Lesage administration in Quebec and Mr. Smallwood on the Newfoundland side. As often is the case, Mr. Speaker, my good friend for St. John's West conveniently forgot to mention an essential component of that particular joint deal. He forgot to mention that an integral part of the proposal was an alteration of the Labrador boundary between the province of Quebec and the province of Newfoundland. The then Quebec minister of energy, Mr. Lévesque, wanted access to the headwaters of five rivers that have their headwaters in what is now Newfoundland-Labrador but flow through the province of Quebec to the ocean.

Mr. Speaker, as part of the deal, they were looking to alter the Quebec-Labrador boundary. I say to you, Mr. Speaker, that my good friend from St. John's West does not understand Newfoundland politics at all if he is advocating a position that would in any way toy for one fraction of a centimetre with that boundary between Newfoundland and Quebec. In advocating that particular position, harking back to the day when we could have had a joint proposal, I am sure he is not for a moment giving credence to the idea that any sensible, sane, Newfoundlander who is still alive and kicking would stand idly by and allow a premier of any province to toy and tamper with the boundary between Newfoundland and Quebec. That is the kind of half truth, Mr. Speaker, we have come to expect from the member for St. John's West. It is unfortunate. We have before us a case involving the development of hydro in Newfoundland where all of us in this House, irrespective of party, irrespective of what part of the country we come from, must be able to subscribe to the principle of fair play, and to the concept that a province of Canada, be it Newfoundland or some other, ought to have the right, without question, to move its product to market, whether that product be electricity or something else.

If the Canadian federation means anything, it should certainly mean the right of the people of Newfoundland or the people of any other province to move their product to market, without obstruction and without interference, without having to ask the permission of another province of this country. In this particular case, it so happens that the nature of the commodity is such that it has to be moved in a way that is different from the movement of commodities by rail, ocean or air. This happens to be electricity. We happen to need an immobile, physical structure across another province to get that product to market, either in another province of Canada or in a state of the United States.

● (1650)

Mr. Speaker, should that make it any different in terms of the basic right of the people of a province to have their products, produced by their own sweat and toil, moved to market? That is the principle. I defy anyone in this House, no matter what the party or where the hon. member comes from, whether Newfoundland, Quebec or any other province in this country, to stand up and tell me that he or she is against the principle of having the free movement of goods and services, the free movement of products from place of production to place of consumption. That is the principle. We will disagree on the mechanism. We will have a dialogue, partisan and otherwise, on how it ought to be achieved; but no one can argue the principle which is embodied in the resolution of the hon. member for St. John's West, that is, the principle of moving, without obstruction or impediment, a product of a particular province to that province's market for that particular product.

I had hoped there could be more time to speak on this particular motion so that we could allow hon. members from all parts of this country, from all sides of this House, from all parties, to stand up and take a position on this important issue, because I submit to Your Honour that the issue is considerably larger than some infighting between two neighbouring provinces of this country. The issue is whether we in this House will stand by and allow, even by implication or default, interference with the free movement of goods and services. That is an issue which is addressed in the charter of rights which will shortly be before this House again. I implicity believe in the issue. I do not believe I have the corner on the market on that one. Knowing hon. members of this House as I do, I happen to believe that every hon. member supports that principle. It is so fair and so sensible that I wonder how anyone could be against it.

Let us not see it as only a fight between Newfoundland and Quebec. I understand what the hon. member for St. John's West and the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway have been saying. I understand that every politician, whether from Quebec, Newfoundland or anywhere else, tends to see things very much from his own vantage point. However, I believe there is an opportunity here to take this out of its potential parochial context and to address it as a principle which is as sacred as Canadianism itself. It is as sacred as the Canadian confederation that there cannot be any thought entertained for a fraction of a second that a province of this country has any right to interfere with the free movement of goods to market. In this particular case, the goods happen to be electricity.

Given the nature of the rather special relationship I enjoy with my good friend, the hon. member for St. John's West—

Mr. Waddell: Cheek to cheek.

Mr. Simmons: —the good relationship, the cheek to cheek, hand in hand relationship I have always enjoyed with him, I would do him an injustice if I sat down without pointing out in a partisan, but nevertheless positive, fashion, a couple of holes in his otherwise brilliant presentation this afternoon. I am talking about two particular holes, and he will know the two holes I am talking about.

It is difficult to keep track of this fellow, because he moves around; but I remind him that—not when he was a member of a Liberal cabinet in Newfoundland, but some time later when he was a member of a Tory cabinet, the Tory minister of finance in Newfoundland, which was before he became the Tory minister of finance here, which was before he become the Tory finance critic here, which was before he became the Tory external affairs critic here—indeed, there goes a man with his future behind him. I remind the hon. member of two holes during the period when he was the Tory finance minister, just before the Tory 1975 election, because he made much today of how much these projects, the Churchill Falls and the Lower Churchill development, have cost the people of Newfoundland and the treasury of Newfoundland, of which he was the guardian in 1975, as Your Honour will remember. I remind the hon. member that one of the reasons—$14 million worth of the reason—is because during or just before the 1975 election, when he and his colleagues were looking for a renewed mandate from the Newfoundland people, they went down to the northwest coast of Newfoundland, in what is now the riding of my good friend, the hon. member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin), and they dug a great big hole in the ground. It cost $7 million, mind you, so it was a big hole. They went across to the Labrador side and made another hole. If nothing else, my friend from St. John's West is a master of illusion. The illusion is that they were getting ready to dig a tunnel under the Strait of Belle Isle, so they put the two shafts down, those two multimillion dollar holes in the ground.

Therefore, I say to him in fairness that if he is going to talk about how much this project has cost the Newfoundland people so far, he should at least do a mea culpa. He should at least admit that part of the reason it has cost so much is the cheap political decision with which he was involved when he was in the Newfoundland government. One of the reasons it has cost the Newfoundland people so much money is that they have been led down the garden path so often by that particular hon. member—and it does not matter to him whether he is a provincial Liberal, provincial Tory—by the way, for a while, he was also leader of the provincial Liberal reform—

Mr. Crosbie: That's impossible.

Mr. Waddell: That's impossible.

Mr. Simmons: He was the leader of the Liberal reform in Newfoundland for a while, and then he became provincial Tory. It does not matter if he is Liberal or Progressive Conservative. As my good friend and predecessor, the Hon. Don Jamieson, said, he is now a member of the turkey trot party. Does Your Honour know what a turkey trot is? A turkey trot is one step forward and two steps backward. He will be known as "Turkey Trot Crosbie" from now on.

Mr. Crosbie: It is better than the cow plot party.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member's time has expired. The usual practice is to refer to hon. members by their constituencies. The hon. member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath).

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, I have only two minutes, and if I exercise my right to speak for those two minutes, I would be talking out my colleague's resolution. Consequently, I have to resist the temptation to take up the two minutes to deal with the contribution of the hon. member for Burin-St. George's (Mr. Simmons), except to say for one brief moment that in speaking of illusions, I mentioned to my colleague, the hon. member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie), that the hon. member for Burin-St. George's has finally cleaned up his act. However, that was an illusion because as he went on into his speech, he reverted back to his old self.

Mr. Brian Tobin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): First of all, Mr. Speaker, in the very short time allotted to me, I would like to say that my hon. colleague and good friend, the hon. member for Burin-St. George's (Mr. Simmons), has once again done an excellent job of putting forward this government's case with respect to some of the more nefarious statements made by the hon. member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie). I would also point out that the great friendship which exists and the closeness between the hon. member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) and the hon. member for St. John's West is evidenced by the fact that the hon. member for St. John's East is giving me the opportunity to respond to some of the allegations of the hon. member for St. John's West. My old boss, the previous member for Burin-St. George's, before my present good colleague, for Burin-St. George's (Mr. Simmons), was fond of saying, and indeed perhaps he said it in this very House, and even perhaps to the hon. member for St. John's West, that if hot air were music, the hon. member opposite would be a brass band.

Mr. Waddell: You are full of blarney, too.

Mr. Tobin: Indeed, that is the case. This government has taken every reasonable step necessary to ensure that the potential and the opportunity which exist in Newfoundland, if approached in a mature and rational manner, not in a wild, arm's flailing, voice yelling—

Mr. Waddell: Like you are doing.

Mr. Tobin: —hysterical fashion, but if approached in a mature fashion, can be developed. Indeed, we saw, as I am sure my hon. colleague pointed out, the introduction in this very House of Commons, just some months ago, a piece of legislation of which I am most proud. I would end on this note. It was a piece of legislation which gives to the province of Newfoundland, through the powers now vested in the National Energy Board, the right to permit—

Mr. Taylor: Why are you talking it out?

Newfoundland Hydro

Mr. Tobin: —if dealing is done in good faith, a power corridor to be established through that province to allow that very important Labrador project to go ahead.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hour provided for the consideration of private members' business has now expired.

[Translation]

It being five o'clock, this House stands adjourned until Monday next at 2 p.m., pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

At 5 p.m., the House adjourned without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Monday, November 2, 1981

The House met at 2 p.m.

● (1405)

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

FEDERAL BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT BANK

CALL FOR RESCINDING OF PENALTY—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Madam Speaker, whereas many small Canadian businesses have their backs against the wall as a result of the government's mismanagement of the economy and the Liberal high interest rate policy, and whereas often these businesses are being forced to rationalize and liquidate assets used as collateral for Federal Business Development Bank loans, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Peterborough (Mr. Domm):

That the high penalty charged by FDBD on the early retirement of loans be rescinded to aid those businesses already forced to the brink of bankruptcy by the inept economic policies of the Liberal government.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

HOUSING

ASSISTANCE SOUGHT FOR HOME OWNERS IN PETERBOROUGH AREA—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Bill Domm (Peterborough): Madam Speaker, later today I will present a petition to the House signed by no fewer than 32 residents of the Peterborough area who are in very grave danger of losing their homes through foreclosure. These are not merely 32 mortgage numbers to be added to the list already prepared by the minister, they are 32 families, and when you foreclose you take away not only their shelter but also their dreams, plans and sense of place in Canadian society where honest work used to mean a just and fair reward.

Under Standing Order 43 I move, therefore, seconded by the hon. member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath):

That the help promised in the Minister of Finance's budget be announced and put into effect immediately.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

METRIC CONVERSION

CALL FOR REVERSAL OF GOVERNMENT POLICY—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Madam Speaker, in that the forced implementation of metric across Canada will add an estimated half billion dollars to grocery bills because of the cost of converting to imported scales, and will seriously affect resource industries, farming and ranching, and will jeopardize trading patterns with the United States, I move, under the provisions of Standing Order 43, seconded by the hon. member for Peterborough (Mr. Domm):

That the Minister of Finance consult with his colleagues before the introduction of his budget to learn fully the negative impact metric conversion will have on the over-all economy, and reverse the government's position on the implementation of the metric system.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

LABOUR DISPUTES

WABCO LTD.—IMPORTATION OF PARTS DURING STRIKE—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Beaches (Mr. Young):

That the government review all of the terms and conditions currently in existence which permit WABCO Ltd. to import into Canada air brakes from their U.S. operations during the prolonged labour dispute which has resulted in a strike and, furthermore, that action be taken to protect Canadian workers who are exercising their legal right from having their position undermined by subsidiaries of U.S. companies, such as WABCO, which, while refusing to bargain in good faith, replace their Canadian-made products with a product manufactured by them in plants outside this country.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

● (1410)

PUBLIC SERVICE

MINISTER'S STATEMENT OF VIEWS ON DUTIES OF EMPLOYEES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Stan Darling (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of some urgency. The Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. Blais) during a recent speech to the Management Consultant Institute said unblushingly that public service employees have a duty to support government policies and programs in public and should be actively marketing the programs they have been trained to administer. While I fully understand the concept of "Who's bread I eat, His praise I sing", a demand that employees market government programs smacks more of an attempt by the government to force employees into a propaganda role.

In light of this shameful statement by the minister, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Prince Edward-Hastings (Mr. Ellis):

That if after all the money being spent by this government to promote its policies and programs, Canadians remain understandably unimpressed, this government concede that the messages and not the messengers are to blame.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

THE MINISTRY

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT BY CABINET MINISTERS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Madam Speaker, four Liberal cabinet ministers, including the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Axworthy), Supply and Services (Mr. Blais), Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Gray), and Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Munro), flew to Winnipeg this past weekend in four separate JetStars, thus costing the Canadian taxpayers a totally unnecessary $40,000. I therefore move, seconded by the hon. member for Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan):

That this House instruct these arrogant and wasteful Grit ministers to practise what the Prime Minister preached in Toronto last week about Canadian people coming to their senses, and that these Grit ministers come to their senses and stop trying to surpass Otto Lang's extravagant record of JetStar use.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Axworthy: Madam Speaker, on a point of order, the information transmitted by the hon. member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine is false information. I did not take a JetStar to Winnipeg.

Madam Speaker: The hon. minister may debate this motion, but instead he made a point of order. The motion is not before the House. I asked if there was unanimous consent for the motion, but there is no unanimous consent.

* * *

COMBINES

DEMAND FOR INTRODUCTION OF COMPETITION LEGISLATION—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Madam Speaker, whereas the Liberal government has stood by without taking action while the oil companies ripped $12 billion away from the Canadian consumers; whereas Thomson and Southam have taken under their control most of the daily print media in Canada, as well as the major department stores; whereas merger activities over the last five years have resulted in tighter control of the Canadian economy than in most banana republics, and whereas the minister has done nothing but gut the proposed legislation, fire the director of investigation and research, and make promises, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton):

That the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs get on with his responsibility and lay before this House the proposed competition legislation that has been sought for so long.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

CANADIAN HOME INSULATION PROGRAM

NUMBER OF HOMES INSULATED WITH UREA FORMALDEHYDE—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Geoff Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Madam Speaker, in view of the recent statement by the manager of operations of the Canadian Home Insulation Program that more homes were insulated with urea formaldehyde foam under CHIP than was previously known, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Simcoe North (Mr. Lewis):

That the government compile an exact list of all home owners who received a CHIP grant for the purposes of using UFFI, so that if and when the government does decide on a program to help these people remove the foam, it can proceed immediately with those who received CHIP grants.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

AGRICULTURE

SUGGESTION THAT MINISTER APPEAR BEFORE STANDING COMMITTEE—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Alex Patterson (Fraser Valley East): Madam Speaker, since the government has failed miserably to assist the agricultural community to survive the impact of unconscionably high interest rates, and bankruptcies, seizures and foreclosures are taking place at an alarming rate and in a seemingly arbitrary and intensive manner. I therefore move, seconded by the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers):

• (1415)

That the Minister of Agriculture appear before the Standing Committee on Agriculture to explain to the members specifically what action the government proposes to assist those who are facing seizures and foreclosures.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

LABOUR CONDITIONS

INCREASE IN RATE OF UNEMPLOYMENT

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Madam Speaker, I would like to get the attention of the Minister of Employment and Immigration, who is kneeling in the aisle.

Mr. Nowlan: He should kneel.

Mr. Hawkes: The minister will know that in the month of September Canada experienced the largest one-month jump in the unemployment rate in the entire history of this nation. When questioned about that fact on October 14, the Minister of Finance indicated that he was surprised and suggested that this might be an aberration or a sampling error. This weekend the Minister of Employment and Immigration indicated that he could see the softening all summer. Could the minister tell us what he saw that the Minister of Finance did not see throughout the summer, what he said to the Minister of Finance, and what the Minister of Finance responded?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, just so that the record is clear, I would like to point out to the hon. member that the unemployment figures as they relate to this last month should not be seen in isolation but in the context of the figures over the past year and in the future. In that respect I would point out that in the last 13 months there was unprecedented growth in employment in this country. Therefore, we have to take a very careful look at the figures for this past month and compare them with future figures before we make any precipitous judgments about the patterns we face in the employment field. I think it is very important that we deal with this subject very carefully and not be stampeded into a wild panic, which is what the hon. member is obviously trying to do.

* * *

THE ECONOMY

FIGURES RELATING TO GROWTH

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Madam Speaker, I accept the minister's invitation to compare some figures, and I would like to direct a supplementary question to the Minister of Finance. On that same date, October 14, the Prime Minister stood in the House and, in response to a question from the Leader of the Official Opposition, indicated that real growth in the Canadian economy in the first nine months was 6.3 per cent. Today we have figures from Statistics Canada which indicate that in the first eight months growth was one tenth of 1 per cent. The Prime Minister inflated the figure 63 times.

Could the Minister of Finance stand and, first, repudiate the Prime Minister's figures and, second, indicate to us why, when the figures in July and August indicated that real domestic product was going down and not up, he was surprised by the increase in unemployment in September? Could he tell us why that surprised him, when he is supposed to know that the economy is going backwards and not forwards?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the question is quite argumentative. It does not ask for any information. It simply makes a series of argumentative comments. If the hon. member wants to ask a question, I would be glad to try to answer it.

Mr. Hawkes: Madam Speaker, I asked the minister if he would give the House the real figures instead of the ones the Prime Minister gave us. However, the figures today from Statistics Canada indicate that I am right, and they are there for everybody to see.

MEASURES TO REDUCE UNEMPLOYMENT

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Madam Speaker, I wish to return to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. I am wondering whether the image the Minister of Employment and Immigration had in his mind over the summer was really a common sense image. When interest rates go up, two things happen: businesses go bankrupt, and there are fewer jobs. The second part of the rhythm is that Canadians need to work harder and more hours to make their mortgage payments. Was this the kind of insight, and can the Minister of Employment and Immigration, in his new role as the economic guru of the cabinet, indicate to us that the budget of November 12 will tackle the high interest rate problem so that there will be fewer unemployed and an increase in the gross domestic product?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I would like to point out to the hon. member that every member of this government is very active and very strongly concerned about the state of the economy. This is not restricted to any one minister. It is a collective concern we have.

What we are attempting to do is maintain a balance between the obvious need for restraint of expenditures and the need to maintain some stimulus in those areas of the economy which need it most. It goes back to the basic principle this government has put forward of helping those who need help most. In that regard I would point out, as I have many times before to the hon. member, that it was this government which restored the direct employment program which his government had cancelled. There are now over 40,000 Canadians employed in direct employment programs who would not otherwise be employed because of the actions his government took when in power.

* * *

● (1420)

AGRICULTURE

SURVEY OF CONDITIONS IN INDUSTRY

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Bruce-Grey): Madam Speaker, my questions are directed to the Minister of Agriculture. The minister will know that, as the unemployment crisis which my colleague from Calgary West spoke of looms, about three million jobs in Canada are dependent upon agriculture. He will also know that a survey he has had done recently suggests that 48 per cent of one of the agricultural sectors appears to be in serious trouble. This has been supported by literally thousands of letters to the Prime Minister. Others say it is as small a figure as 1 per cent of agriculture which is in trouble. What percentage of agriculture does the minister feel is in trouble? What message has he communicated to his cabinet colleagues? What immediate action can we expect?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, we have used the very quick survey done by our own people. In addition, we are using the accurate financial statements which have been sent to us. On checking, however, we find that many of these people are only lending their support to those in need. When we asked what financial problems they had, many replied that because they were a chicken producer, milk producer and so on, they had none, but were lending their support to those in the red meat industry, beef first and then pork. All of this evidence is being used in our representations and the discussions we are having and have had with our colleagues who are concerned.

Mr. Gurbin: I am not clear what the minister said, but I think he said he does not really believe there is a problem.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER ACT TO RELIEVE INTEREST RATE PRESSURE

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Bruce-Grey): Madam Speaker, farmers in Canada are increasingly concerned about the minister's apparent impotence in cabinet, particularly at a time when he is fronting for a government that has a high interest rate policy and constitutional diarrhea.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gurbin: The only federal response we have had so far is an increase in the Farm Credit Corporation rates to 16.75 per cent, and that for funds that are not even available. Will the minister give this House a commitment to relieve immediately the high interest rate pressure on the agricultural economy?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, the hon. member has made several assertions or accusations as to how many people need aid. He could go to his good friend, the minister of agriculture in Ontario, who says that only 1 per cent of the farmers are in difficulty in that province. I dispute those figures, as I think he does. The facts we have show that there is as high a percentage as 47 per cent in certain parts of Ontario and some parts of Canada who are in grave financial difficulty. Those are the people we want to aid.

I must say the hon. member has made some good suggestions. But he has described certain discussions that are taking place concerning the constitution, and maybe his thoughts are constipated when he talks about what is very important to the economy and the discussions taking place between the first ministers and the Prime Minister today.

* * *

THE MINISTRY

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT BY CABINET MINISTERS

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance. Just before this past weekend the Prime Minister, at a $175 plate Liberal dinner in Toronto, urged Canadians to maintain restraint, and stated that the Liberals were a party of sharing and caring.

Miss MacDonald: For one another.

Mr. Broadbent: Considering that thousands of Canadian families are losing their homes, farmers are in great difficulty, and businessmen are going broke, can the minister tell us why three federal cabinet ministers, in three separate executive jets, flew to Winnipeg on Friday at a cost of more than $30,000 for fuel alone?

Mr. Epp: It's called restraint.

• (1425)

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I want to ask the Leader of the New Democratic Party whether he thinks it is responsible on his part to stand up in the House of Commons and say that thousands of Canadian families are losing their homes. There is enough fear about the future with respect to high interest rates without making what are totally false statements to the effect that thousands of Canadian families are losing their homes, because that is totally inaccurate.

GOVERNMENT POLICY ON USE OF AIRCRAFT

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, the minister is a past master at avoiding both his responsibilities in this House and answering any question that is put to him. He will not get away with it.

It was a cabinet document, by the way, Madam Speaker, that said up to 40,000 Canadians could lose their homes in the coming year. The minister might have read that document. I hope the minister will deal with the question, in view of the fact that the Prime Minister goes around lecturing Canadians to cut back. Will the government demonstrate that it is concerned? Is it government policy that three cabinet ministers go on three separate executive jets to the same city on a weekend? Will he answer that? Is that the policy? Will he confirm that the present cabinet has set a five-month record in using executive jets for personal travel?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I am pleased that the hon. member has rephrased his statement. Now he says instead of "are losing" their homes, they could lose their homes—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. MacEachen: —under particular assumptions that have been put forward in a document. It is my intention, Madam Speaker, to do everything possible to prevent any Canadian family from losing a home because of high interest rates; that is the policy of this particular government, as stated in the Speech from the Throne.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. MacEachen: Madam Speaker, the hon. member asked about the use of government aircraft by ministers going to Winnipeg. I went both to Edmonton and Calgary on the weekend and I used commercial aircraft—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. MacEachen: —both on the way out and on the way back. I think the hon. member wants to be fair and understand the reason that ministers use government aircraft in preference to commercial aircraft. It is when scheduling problems make it impossible to use commercial aircraft. That is the policy of the government. The three ministers who went to the west left at different times and had different responsibilities and different engagements in the west; that is the reason these aircraft were taken.

PROPOSAL TO EXTEND RUNWAY IN MINISTER'S CONSTITUENCY

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, as a matter of fact, I know that two of the ministers were going to the same meeting and for the same purpose, and could have flown in the same aircraft. Since the minister is making much of his personal virtue—and we know what a virtuous fellow he is—there was a memo dated in June requesting an extension of an aircraft runway in his own riding that would enable the minister to fly in on jet aircraft. This morning I checked to find out if that request is still active. I was told by the Department of Transport officials that that request is still active. Given his great concern for virtue here, will he assure us of two things: one, that he will withdraw that request that would cost the taxpayers some $2 million? Second, will he lay down guidelines for the cabinet as a whole to stop wasteful spending on government travelling, cabinet ministers travelling in jets when they could be going by Air Canada or by other means which would save taxpayers' money?

• (1430)

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, at present there are guidelines in operation which were put in place by the Department of Transport. They obligate ministers not to use government aircraft when available commercial flights can be used. These guidelines are observed by ministers. In this particular case obviously commercial airlines could not be used to complete those engagements.

Mr. Broadbent: It is not obvious.

Mr. MacEachen: The hon. member referred to a newspaper comment about the extension of a runway in my constituency.

Mr. Broadbent: It is a government document; it is from the Minister of Transport.

Mr. MacEachen: Let me say that I have been travelling to my constituency for quite a long time. I have been able to do it without the use of a government jet. I intend to do it in the future, but I will not withdraw any request for an improvement to that particular airport because it is a request supported by the municipality, by the town council, and by all business leaders. I do not intend to withdraw any request, not at all.

Oral Questions

REQUEST THAT MINISTERS SHARE SPACE ON AIRCRAFT

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. I am very glad he is also the Minister of Finance who is supposed to bring in a budget soon showing certain leadership in terms of restraint. As a preface to my question, I wonder, when the minister answers, whether he could say that the reason he flew west commercially is that all other JetStars were already in use. Although the Deputy Prime Minister hopes to be other things some day, I refer him to the speech of the Prime Minister to the Liberal fund-raising dinner in Toronto last Wednesday wherein he said:

> I want to speak to you about the economy, about the challenges it presents, about how a Liberal government responds. In tough times, what is a Liberal, what does he think, what does he do?

On another page he said:

> Liberals believe in caring; Liberals believe in sharing.

My question is along the lines of that of the Leader of the NDP. Does the Deputy Prime Minister think that three ministers, using three government jets within three hours, to travel from Ottawa to the same city of Winnipeg, is an example for Canadians in caring when three ministers cannot share equal space on those three jets?

An hon. Member: Are you going to answer?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I have decided against it, after deep reflection.

QUERY RESPECTING TRAVEL TO LIBERAL PARTY DINNER IN TORONTO

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Transport. I assume the minister can assure us that on Wednesday, after the vote here, there were no government jets or planes which flew from Ottawa to Toronto to the fund-raising dinner. If he cannot assure us today, could he let us know tomorrow?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I checked with my office, because obviously we keep track of the use of planes.

An hon. Member: Not very well.

Mr. Pepin: I am sure that none of the planes were used for trips to Toronto for that particular event.

* * *

VETERANS AFFAIRS

WOODS COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS—REQUEST FOR REVIEW OF IMPLEMENTATION

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Veterans Affairs. The Senate committee just completed a study into the serious problems in the Department of Veterans Affairs. It recommended that "the government appoint a committee composed of officials from both the government and veterans associations to review and update those recommendations of the Woods committee which have not been implemented and to identify, study and make recommendations about the anomalies" which exist in the minister's department. The Woods Committee conducted a study a number of years ago of problems in Veterans Affairs. One of the more serious problems in the department is that it takes five years to process pension applications, whereas it takes only 90 days in the United States. Will the minister be appointing the committee recommended by the Senate?

Hon. W. Bennett Campbell (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Madam Speaker, as the hon. member realizes, approximately one and a half months ago we engaged the services of Mr. Arthur McCracken to review the administrative and adjudicative process within the Canadian Pension Commission. Part of his mandate is not only to review the process and to consult with people within the commission, but also to meet with veterans organizations to hear their concerns and suggestions. I would certainly want to receive the report from Mr. McCracken prior to establishing any committee.

I might also say that the hon. member made reference to the fact that this study will not be completed until 1983. This is not true. I can tell him that the study is proceeding very effectively. I hope to have a report within the next month.

PRISONER OF WAR PENSIONS

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Madam Speaker, I fail to see how an authority on the Veterans' Land Act can make recommendations to the pension commission. Also the Senate committee pointed out that there were inequities in the pensions of prisoners of war. When will the minister introduce legislation to stop these inequities? One example is that Dieppe POWs receive only 20 per cent pensions whereas other POWs receive 50 per cent pensions.

Hon. W. Bennett Campbell (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Madam Speaker, as the hon. member knows, the percentage approved for various categories of POWs was arrived at after fairly extensive study. We recognize the recommendation made by the Senate committee. We are reviewing it. Of course it will be some time before we have a final conclusion on it. At that point in time I would be happy to provide the information to the House.

* * *

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

ISSUANCE OF WRITS OF ASSISTANCE

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Solicitor General. It deals with his statements last week respecting writs of assistance and his intention to press upon his cabinet colleagues reinstatement of writs of assistance on a large basis, and the removal of the moratorium. In view of the fact that writs of assistance provide the holder with extraordinary legal ability to carry out search and seizure without a search warrant, no discretion being provided to the court with respect to the issuance, with no back-up material needed to be filed outlining the reason for the issuance, and no time limit being imposed upon the length of time which writs of assistance are in existence, could the Solicitor General, in all conscience, and on behalf of the government, indicate that it is his intention to ask for the reinstatement of this particular legal device?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General): Madam Speaker, I did not mean to speak on behalf of the government. I indicated quite clearly that it was a personal view—

Miss MacDonald: You cannot do that.

Mr. Kaplan: —which I was hoping to take to government; I still do. I would be very glad to come at some proper time before the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs to demonstrate the benefits in terms of drug law enforcement which would be derived from these writs. I would also want to indicate a great number of safeguards which could be imposed and would be quite acceptable. They would ensure that none of the kinds of dangers which have been spoken about recently in connection with these writs would take place. For example, I could visualize circumstances where, immediately after any entry pursuant to a writ, a process could be gone through either before a judge or some official that would meet or could meet all the standards which apply to writs obtained before the fact.

REASONS FOR MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): Madam Speaker, the type of writ to which I and the Solicitor General referred has been abolished in the United Kingdom for a considerable period of time. Under the Bill of Rights in the United States it is prohibited. Over the weekend the Solicitor General made a fulsome defence of an entrenched charter of rights. How can he take that position with respect to supporting the principle of an entrenched charter of rights which protects the rights of individuals against the state, and at the same time try to bring forward and press upon the government his concept of the expanded use of the writ of assistance, as he now does?

Mr. MacKay: It is the Liberal way.

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General): Madam Speaker, I do it because I am gravely concerned about drug trafficking in Canada and because I believe that, as effective as the RCMP has been, the problem, particularly on the west coast, is getting out of hand. Those who are interested in more effective law enforcement in connection with drugs, and the problems with drugs, ought to be searching with me for some additional ways to achieve effective law enforcement consistent with our democratic tradition in Canada on civil liberties.

* * *

• (1440)

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

VISIT OF UNITED STATES WARSHIPS TO VANCOUVER HARBOUR

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Defence. The minister is aware, of course, that three U.S. warships have spent the weekend in Vancouver harbour—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss Jewett: —including a 71,000 ton aircraft carrier the U.S.S. Ranger and a guided missile cruiser. Neither the commanding officer of the Ranger nor the U.S. government is willing to tell us whether or not these vessels are carrying nuclear arms. Since Canada claims to be free of nuclear arms and committed to disarmament, can the minister tell us whether or not nuclear arms have been sitting in Vancouver harbour since Friday last?

Hon. J. Gilles Lamontagne (Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, I would like to tell the hon. member that if I had a chance to be in Vancouver these days I would welcome our American friends.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Lamontagne: As far as nuclear weapons are concerned, the defence policy of the Canadian government is well known. We are against any nuclear weapons whatever they are. We do not like to have them on our land and we do not like to have them on our soil. But if someone comes to our country as a NATO ally, as a friend, and being one of our allies, some of whom are nuclear powers, we rely on them for the best credible deterrents that are possible against war. As such, without saying whether they have or have not nuclear weapons, they are always welcome.

TIMING OF VISIT

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, in a television interview last Friday in Vancouver the commander of the U.S.S. Ranger said it was a matter of concern only to himself as commander and to the U.S. government. He did not mention the Canadian government at all. I wonder if the minister will tell us whether the Canadian government did in fact know whether nuclear arms were aboard these ships. Will the minister also tell the House, when he invited the U.S.S. Ranger and the other two ships to spend four days in Vancouver harbour, whether he knew at that time this would be during the United Nations sponsored Disarmament Week? In fact, has the minister ever even heard of Disarmament Week?

Hon. J. Gilles Lamontagne (Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, the hon. member asks whether we invited our friends or not. If she has friends, she must know that we do not necessarily invite friends to come to our home; they drop in when they feel like it, and we are always glad to have them.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Lamontagne: As far as the basic question of the visit of the U.S.S. Ranger aircraft carrier to Vancouver is concerned, I cannot give an answer to that because it would be irrelevant to explain the whole policy of defence of the NATO alliance and how we work together toward a deterrent and toward the best way possible to avoid war. If the hon. member were to come to my office I would try to explain all this to her.

Mr. Nowlan: As a friend.

* * *

GARRISON DIVERSION

UNITED STATES FUNDING OF PROJECT

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton-Lawrence): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. A week ago last Thursday the U.S. Senate appropriations committee approved additional funding of $4 million for work on the Garrison diversion project. This comes after a statement by the United States Interior Secretary that he is fully behind the Garrison project. Can the minister assure the House that the Government of Canada will seek guarantees that the additional funding will not be spent on parts of the project which could harm Manitoba waters, or that it does not represent a commitment of any kind toward the completion of the entire project?

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, I thank the hon. member for raising this important question again. It is one that greatly concerns the government and is one which I have frequently discussed with my colleague, the Minister of Employment and Immigration.

The alleged comment of the U.S. Secretary was referred to previously in this House. We have been informed by his office that he did not make any such comment during his visit to the contiguous part of the United States but that a rather careless newspaper headline, which was not reflected in the story, probably gave rise to that impression. We are, of course, concerned about the action of the U.S. Senate committee. We have made representation to them before and we have since discussed the matter with the U.S. government.

The relieving factors at the present time are, first of all, that it is still a decision of the committee and not of the whole Senate and, second, there are some legal problems with it which may mean that, in any event, it may not be appropriate to be attached to an appropriate bill.

Beyond that, there is written into the legislation, at the stage at which it is now, the instruction that it must not be used for any construction which would in any way affect Canada. Of course that is the assurance we are seeking. It is the assurance which the U.S. administration repeated to us as recently as last week.

* * *

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

APPEARANCE OF CANADIAN PIPERS AT EDINBURGH INTERNATIONAL TATTOO

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Madam Speaker, my question is addressed to the minister who answers in the House for the CBC. The minister may or may not know that Canada was honoured this past summer by the international military tattoo in Edinburgh, by the adoption of the theme "Canadiana" for the event. He may or may not know either that a contingent of more than 100 Canadian pipers, drummers and dancers from all parts of the country took part in the tattoo and did Canada proud with their outstanding performances.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): That was amply demonstrated by a TV program shown throughout the United Kingdom and the continent, both alive and by rebroadcast.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. Really, this is unreasonable to have such a long preamble to a question.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Madam Speaker, he would not know about it, and I had to explain the background.

Will the minister find out why the CBC has refused to carry this TV program, even though it has been offered to them, and even though it is being broadcast widely in the United States and throughout the Commonwealth?

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Yes, Madam Speaker.

REQUEST THAT BROADCAST BE SHOWN IN CANADA

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Madam Speaker, at least the minister knows something that he did not know before.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Perhaps the minister would find out at the same time whether TV audiences in Canada will ever have the opportunity to see this outstanding display of Canadian talent in an overseas setting. In short, it was good PR for Canada, and I see no reason why Canadians should be denied access to it.

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, once again the answer to the question is yes. The tattoo was obviously a great success and everyone on both sides of the House is terribly proud and impressed with the success of the tattoo. I do not think anyone on either side of the House would want to take particular credit for it. The credit lies with the people who were involved in the tattoo, and I am delighted to send to them my grateful congratulations.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

CANADIAN ARMED FORCES

POSSIBLE PARTICIPATION IN SINAI DESERT PEACEKEEPING OPERATION

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Madam Speaker, in the absence of the Prime Minister I will direct my question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. He may know that a few days ago the Associated Press carried a news story concerning peacekeeping forces in the Sinai Desert which stated, "Canada says it will participate but has not yet been asked."

As this peacekeeping force is not to be under the United Nations auspices but rather under the auspices of the United States, and as it will be a first time, will the minister assure the House that, before these troops are committed, the House will be consulted and will give its approval?

● (1450)

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, first of all, it would not be the first time we have engaged in such an operation and it would not be customary to give any such assurance to the House. At this point we have not been officially asked to participate in the force. Because it is being talked about we have given it some consideration, but I have no further announcement to make at this time.

REQUEST FOR DETAILS OF PROPOSED PARTICIPATION

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Madam Speaker, I shall direct my supplementary to the Minister of National Defence. Perhaps he could enlighten me as to when we sent peacekeeping forces anywhere in the world under U.S. control.

Referring to these discussions, could the minister tell me how many Canadian troops are involved, and has any thought been given to setting a time limit on the length of time these troops will be employed? Also, will the minister notify our NATO allies that some of our other NATO commitments must be placed on hold during the time our troops are serving under United States control in the Sinai?

Hon. J. Gilles Lamontagne (Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, I do not remember any time that Canada had a peacekeeping force under U.S. control.

Miss MacDonald: Tell that to Mark.

Mr. Lamontagne: I think most of the peacekeeping forces in which Canada had a part were under the auspices of the United Nations. As to the other details of the question, I ask the hon. member to place them on the Order Paper and I will prepare an answer.

* * *

AGRICULTURE

STABILIZATION PAYMENTS FOR BEEF PRODUCERS

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Agriculture. In view of the serious financial problems facing beef producers this fall with dramatically increased input costs and prices reduced, is the minister prepared to recommend to cabinet that a substantial stabilization payment be made to these hard pressed producers, and that this assistance will be announced in the budget on November 12?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: And will he resign if that does not happen?

An hon. Member: Again.

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, the hon. member knows that finished beef is a commodity about which a recommendation has to be made when the year ends for that product. That recommendation will be made concerning stabilization. I am sure the hon. member knows that the Canadian Cattlemen's Association have recommended, not the statutory 90 per cent of the last five-year average, but 95 per cent or 100 per cent of the last five-year average. If I go that way, I have to have cabinet approval, etc.

Mr. Epp: What is the etc. business?

Mr. Whelan: The other way, just using the statutory 90 per cent of the last five-year average would need no payment for beef. Farmers have had low income over the past four years and unless you move to either 95 per cent or 100 per cent of the last five-year average, it would mean no payment. We are considering that.

* * *

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

OPENING OF FIRST CLASS MAIL—REQUEST THAT STUDY BE RELEASED

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Solicitor General who speaks for the RCMP. The concern in my question relates not only to the invasion of private homes through the use of writs of assistance, which should be abolished instead of expanded, but also to another concern about the invasion of Canadians' first-class mail.

Over a year ago the minister indicated his view was that the RCMP should have the power to open first class mail in Canada. At that time the minister promised to release a study which would justify this demand on his part. Will the minister now release the study, which was done apparently some time ago, having promised to do so after the report of the McDonald commission? Will the minister indicate whether it is his view that the RCMP should have the power to open first-class mail in Canada and, if so, why?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General): Madam Speaker, let me begin by reminding the House that the opening of first-class mail is illegal. It is not being done currently by the RCMP or by any other police authority in Canada.

In so far as a change of policy is concerned, I favour that kind of change. I will be bringing forward recommendations in that area after they have been considered by cabinet. They will be considered in due course with a whole package of other changes relating to the establishment of a civilian security intelligence service.

For the time being, I have no other proposal or plan to put forward on the subject of letter opening. I can continue to assure hon. members that first-class mail is not being opened.

DESTRUCTION OF UNNECESSARY FILES

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, with homes being invaded by the RCMP, and with mail being opened, it seems that 1984 is much closer than some of us had thought.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): My supplementary question is also for the Solicitor General and it relates to another invasion of privacy. The McDonald commission stated that 1.3 million files are held on over 800,000 Canadians. The Solicitor General has agreed that some of these should be destroyed. Will the Solicitor General tell the House now how many of these files have been destroyed, and what procedures are in place to destroy all of those files quickly which the McDonald commission indicated should never have been opened in the first place?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General): Madam Speaker, indeed, I have made a commitment to speed the destruction of all files which should not have been opened in the first place. It is a complicated problem. Not the least complication is the necessity of doing it in a way which will satisfy Canadians that the files have been destroyed and that the information is effectively removed from the possession of the RCMP. I am working on that problem almost on a daily basis. I do not have it solved yet. However, I hope to be able to bring forward my thoughts shortly on how this can be accomplished in a way that will be effective and satisfy the Canadian people that it is effective.

NATIONAL REVENUE

MINISTER'S VIEWS ON OPENING OF MAIL

Hon. Walter Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Madam Speaker, the seatmate of the Minister of National Revenue has expressed his view that he is in favour of mail opening. I have a question for the Minister of National Revenue. As he knows, there is a report extant in his department that first-class trans-border mail ought to be opened by customs officials in order to intercept the illegal entry into Canada of drugs and other contraband. Since the Solicitor General has expressed his opinion with respect to mail opening, could we have the opinion of the Minister of National Revenue with respect to the phenomena that I have just represented to him in this question?

Hon. William Rompkey (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, first-class mail is not being opened now by customs officers.

Miss MacDonald: What do you mean by "now?"

Mr. Rompkey: There is no intent to change that practice. It is true that illegal drugs and other materials can come in by first-class mail, and it is our responsibility to intercept those materials where they are prohibited. I think we have to do that under the proper guidance of law and with the proper legal authority. That is the practice under which we operate, and under which we will continue to operate.

* * *

COMMUNICATIONS

COMMUNITY RECEPTION OF TELEVISION BROADCASTS TRANSMITTED VIA SATELLITES

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Communications. He has recently announced, as reported in the press, that government policy with respect to the reception of satellite signals through earth receiving stations is that, if done by individuals, it would be legal, and that it would still be necessary to obtain a licence if the signal is rebroadcast either by cable or transmitter by associations and communities. As the minister knows, I welcome that change in policy. I know it was always his view that that should happen. However, has this policy been transmitted to the CRTC, and has the CRTC been instructed to receive applications from communities and associations which operate these earth-receiving stations? In addition, can the minister tell me the reaction of the CRTC?

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, I thank the hon. member for his question in this regard. He has demonstrated his concern for this issue for some months now. I have not yet announced the policy in question. Our intention of deregulating as far as ownership of TVROs for individual purpose is concerned was gazetted some time last fall. As a result of that notice we received some 12 or 13 representations from various groups across the country. I took advantage of the latest federal-provincial conference of ministers of communications to consult with my colleague ministers on the federal government's course of action. I expect to be in a position to make an announcement in this regard in the next two or three weeks.

REQUEST FOR RESTORATION OF RECEIVING FACILITIES SEIZED AT FORT ST. JOHN, B.C.

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Madam Speaker, because of the uncertainty of the government with respect to this particular problem, and because of the questionable jurisdiction under which the CRTC has proceeded to close down certain of these receiving stations—I am making particular reference to the rather autocratic closure of the facilities in Fort St. John, B.C.—would the minister undertake to consult with the CRTC with a view to restoring the equipment that has been confiscated from the people in Fort St. John, a community of 20,000 people, by a criminal law action, and dropping the charges laid against individuals in that community, charges based, as I have said earlier, on rather questionable foundations?

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, I will be pleased to look into the matter for the hon. member. I understand a cable licensed operator is now in Fort St. John who is able to bring in for the viewing public in that area not only Canadian channels but also the three plus one U.S. channels, which is the prevailing rule of thumb applied throughout the country.

My understanding also is that the cable operation that was the subject of a seizure in Fort St. John, was competing with the cable licensed operator. The hon. member says that is not the case. I will be more than pleased to look into the matter to verify the facts.

* * *

• (1500)

PRIVILEGE

MR. DONALD MUNRO—COMMENTS OF MINISTER DURING QUESTION PERIOD

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Madam Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. My question of privilege arises out of some comments which were heard on this side of the House during the course of my questioning the Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox). He interrupted some of my comments using language which was highly derogatory to me, language which I consider unacceptable—

Madam Speaker: Order, order. The Chair did not hear any unparliamentary language, otherwise the Chair would have intervened to ask for the withdrawal of such unparliamentary language. Therefore, the point of order or the question of privilege brought up by the hon. member cannot be heard.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Madam Speaker—

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

IMMIGRATION

TABLING OF ANNUAL REPORT ON IMMIGRATION LEVELS

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, under the provisions of Standing Order 41(2) I wish to table the Annual Report to Parliament on immigration levels, in accordance with Section 7 of the Immigration Act, 1976.

* * *

PETITIONS

MR. DOMM—PLIGHT OF HOME OWNERS

Mr. Bill Domm (Peterborough): Madam Speaker, at the suggestion of the minister of housing I have taken the opportunity to meet with 32 families in the Peterborough area. These are not just 32 names, but 32 families who are going to lose their homes. We have carefully documented in my constituency office the names of the mortgage holders, as requested by the minister, the mortgage account numbers and letters from each of the individuals explaining why they are having difficulty meeting their mortgage payments because of high interest rates. I respectfully submit to this House this petition of these 32 real, live families, and I suggest that if these were multiplied by the number of ridings in Canada we would be looking at thousands of people who are apt to lose their homes in the immediate future.

I would also like to tender a copy of the petition to the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Cosgrove) now in his seat so he can immediately start to process these 32 names while the Table officers are processing this petition.

MR. LAWRENCE—VIA RAIL—CUTBACKS IN PASSENGER SERVICE

Hon. Allan Lawrence (Durham-Northumberland): Madam Speaker, I ask leave of the House to lay upon the Table a petition signed by some 8,300 Canadians who are protesting this government's peremptory decision to terminate VIA Rail passenger service between Havelock, Peterborough and Toronto. These petitioners charge the government with using grossly inaccurate figures to justify killing the service which is moving toward profitability, and for which there is no economic alternative form of public transportation.

Order Paper Questions

[Translation]

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 2,451, 2,716 and 2,797.

[Text]

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

Question No. 2,451—Mr. Neil:

1. What are the qualifications for male and female applicants to be accepted as recruits with the RCMP?

2. Is there a quota for Anglophone, Francophone and bilingual recruits and, if so, what is the ratio?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General): 1. The qualifications for male and female applicants to be accepted by the Force are as follows: Canadian citizen; possession of valid driver's licence; successful completion of Grade 12 (or equivalent); medically fit; good character; speak, write, read and comprehend English or French; 19 years of age.

In order to be successful in their application, candidates must possess the required attributes or qualities that are considered essential for a career as a peace officer. These are based on a weighted selection standard which provides a means of assessing the qualities of an applicant in a manner which allows the applicant to be graded from most suitable to not acceptable. All applicants who are successful in meeting the established weighted selection standard are placed on a national waiting list. Procedural and engagement preferences are established on a yearly basis in line with the Force's specific needs.

2. The highest priority/preference in 1981/82 will be offered to: (a) bilingual candidates (this includes the language training candidates who possess a useful knowledge of both official languages), (b) female candidates, and (c) native candidates. This policy does not imply, nor is it meant to imply that bilingualism is a prerequisite for entry into the Force. Our national waiting list is maintained in a manner which identifies preferred candidates and these individuals are offered preference for their additional qualifications.

The current participation in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police of those whose first official language is French, is of the order of 13.3 per cent, well below the 29.4 per cent representation found in the Canadian population as a whole. By combining a ratio approximating that of both official language communities in Canada for the federally developed Royal Canadian Mounted Police and that of both official language communities in the contracting provinces and municipalities for the provincially funded Royal Canadian Mounted Police, we arrived at the reasonable first stage objective of 20.8 per cent. The Force hopes to attain this objective expeditiously. This figure represents the minimum needed if the Royal Canadian Mounted Police is to conform with the Official Languages Act. As the number of preferred candidates on the national waiting list is relatively low, in comparison to the large number of candidates available, the proportion of unilingual recruits selected is likely to remain high.

CANADIAN POLICE INFORMATION CENTRE COMPUTER

Question No. 2,716—Mr. Beatty:

1. With respect to the Canadian Police Information Centre computer (a) on what date were criminal record synopses first put on line to all terminals (b) how many synopses are currently available and how many are expected to be added each month (c) what sort of information about an individual is kept in the synopses?

2. Are individuals whose records are placed in CPIC's data bank notified of the action and, if so, what procedures are available to them to challenge the validity of the synopses?

3. Does CPIC have plans to expand the categories of data in the data bank and, if so, what are they?

4. In regard to the centre, what regulations or agreements exist with respect to the (a) protection of an individual's privacy (b) type of information that may be entered into the data bank (c) categories of individuals and organizations to whom information contained in the data bank may be given?

5. Since the creation of the CPIC, how many complaints were received of arrests arising from misinformation in the data bank?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General): 1. (a) May 1, 1974.

(b) At this time there are 1,608,661 synopses available with an average of 10,000 added each month. An average of 800 are removed from the system making net average monthly gain of 9,200 entries.

(c) Criminal record synopsis file: Records entered in this file are based on information contained on criminal fingerprint forms filed by the identification services of the RCMP.

Each criminal record synopsis output by the system has a statement "caution this is not a criminal record". If there are no convictions registered for the individual in the criminal record file maintained by identification services, this fact will be identified by a statement in each applicable output record "no convictions". If the record contains juvenile entries, the printout also shows "caution—this response contains juvenile charges".

The data output from the criminal record synopsis file is broken down into four information areas as follows:

(1) The record file number and fingerprint classification of the individual and tombstone data respecting the file itself. Cautionary codes indicating the FPS file contains documentation that:

(a) The subject has been charged with a crime of violence.

(b) The subject has escaped, or attempted to escape from custody.

(c) The subject has a history of mental instability.

(d) The subject has attempted suicide.

(2) The latest available description of the individual, and the date the description was recorded.

(3) (a) The individual's current status in the judicial system.

(b) The date that the identification services file was opened and the date of the last fingerprint form submitted for that individual.

(c) Categories of the types of offences the record subject had been charged with. Offences are categorized as to being offences of violence, robbery, offensive weapons, breaking and entering, theft of vehicles, thefts, drugs, fraud, sex, other criminal code, other federal statutes, failing to attend (bail) and arson.

(4) Names used by the subject of the record as recorded on fingerprint forms received by identification services.

2. No. A criminal record on which the synopsis is based is indexed as a federal information bank, bank index No. 23825, allowing an individual to institute procedures to determine and challenge information contained in the criminal record. Any resulting changes made to the criminal record will be reflected in the criminal record synopsis. Procedures to access and challenge the content of the criminal record are contained in the index to federal data banks available at most Canadian post offices.

3. Yes. Two changes approved by the last advisory committee which are in the process of being implemented to the criminal record synopsis are:

(a) removal of the information outlining the individual's current status in the judicial system, and

(b) inclusion of an additional offence type, i.e., Criminal Code driving offences.

4. (a) Direct access to CPIC files is limited to: (i) the RCMP, (ii) provincial police forces, and (iii) city police and those municipal police forces approved by the CPIC advisory committee.

Currently approximately 2,500 Canadian police units have access to CPIC.

A police force having direct access to CPIC may disseminate information to other agencies legislatively responsible for law enforcement on a need-to-know basis. In addition, the Attorney General or Solicitor General of Canada or the attorney general or solicitor general of a province or territory may approve dissemination of CPIC information to other agencies.

The liaison services branch of telecommunications and EDP directorate, RCMP, is responsible for co-ordinating investigations into complaints respecting violation of CPIC policy and procedures. If the investigation is unable to satisfactorily resolve the identified problem to the mutual satisfaction of all parties concerned, the complaint will be brought before the CPIC Advisory Committee for a decision.

Repeated or serious breaches of established policy and procedures will be referred to the CPIC advisory committee for action.

(b) See part 1(c).

(c) See part 4(a).

5. Our statistics are available only from 1975. To date, five complaints of arrest arising from misinformation in the data bank have been received at CPIC. In most of these cases the person was arrested on a warrant of committal for which the fine had been paid but the courts had not notified the police accordingly.

IRDIA GRANTS

Question No. 2,797—Mr. Waddell:

1. From 1967 to 1978, under the provisions of the Industrial Research and Development Incentives Act (IRDIA), were grants given to Imperial Oil or to any of its subsidiaries and, if so, in each case (a) to which company (b) in what amount (c) on what date?

2. Did the Syncrude consortium receive grants under the provisions of IRDIA and, if so, in each case, in what amount and on what date?

Hon. Herb Gray (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): 1. and 2. In accordance with section 13 of the Industrial Research and Development Incentives Act, information concerning recipients of IRDIA grants cannot be divulged.

[English]

Mr. Smith: Madam Speaker, I would ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker: The questions enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary have been answered. Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

[English]

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I wonder if there is an explanation for the parliamentary secretary not having given us the usual copies of the questions to be answered today. Neither the whip nor myself received the customary copies.

Mr. Smith: Madam Speaker, I was not aware that they had not received it. I will look into the matter and let the hon. member know privately.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 58—ALLEGED FAILURE TO SUPPORT FARMERS

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette) moved:

That this House, noting the disastrous increase in farm bankruptcies, condemns this government for its continuing failure to support Canada's farmers, and its inability to curtail the devastation high interest rates are bringing to Canada's agriculture section.

He said: Mr. Speaker, it is always a pleasure and a privilege to have the opportunity of speaking in this House, particularly for those of us who have some regard for this institution and a regard and concern for our parliamentary system in Canada. It is a particular privilege for me on this occasion in that it is the first time I have had the opportunity of being the lead speaker on an opposition day. I should like to thank my party for this opportunity which I very much appreciate.

I am also very pleased to have the opportunity to speak this afternoon on a topic that is very dear to my heart, and that is agriculture. This is a topic that is of very real concern to a lot of Canadians. It is of concern for many reasons, not only to us as producers but also as consumers.

Unfortunately I think a lot of us take agriculture in this country for granted, yet whether we like to admit it or not, it is very important to us. I would point out—this has been said many times but I think it bears repeating—that without an efficient agricultural sector in this country we would not be able to enjoy the standard of living we now enjoy. It is well known that Canada and the United States are countries that spend the least amount of disposable income on food.

I see that the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) is listening intently. I hope he stays throughout the duration of my remarks because at the conclusion I want to put some suggestions to him on what we can do to improve Canadian agriculture. I know the Minister of Agriculture has quite frequently emphasized the fact that we in Canada spend a very small percentage of our disposable income on food.

Without an efficient agricultural sector in our country we would not be in that position and we would not be able to enjoy such things as the common 40-hour work week and holidays with pay. People in countries like India use upwards of 50 per cent of their total effort to provide food, and they do not have time to do the things we do after supper. Many are out working in their fields and gardens in order to feed themselves. We do have a lot to be thankful for in terms of the efficiency of agriculture in this country.

The agricultural industry is not only efficient in feeding the country, it is also an efficient sector of our economy in earning foreign exchange. We are going to export something like $8 billion in agricultural products this current calendar year, during which time we will import roughly $5 billion in agricultural goods. This means that Canadian agriculture has a surplus as far as our balance of payments is concerned. This is very important in assisting our foreign exchange, the value of our dollar and our interest rates.

It is everybody's concern in this country that we encourage agriculture to not only remain efficient in supplying our food, but to earn as much foreign exchange as possible, and by doing so help our interest rates and the value of our Canadian dollar, and thereby lower the inflation rate.

Agriculture is an all-important sector in our economy. I could go on and give some additional statistics. For example, it is the third largest manufacturing industry in the country. I think I have said enough to make the point. Most people will agree that agriculture is very important and, in many ways, a dominant sector of the Canadian economy.

What has been happening in the last few years? I go back to the time the present minister became Minister of Agriculture in 1968. I see the minister shaking his head.

Mr. Whelan: 1972.

Mr. Mayer: I am wrong; the minister says 1972. I cannot blame him for sins committed before 1972, but there are many to blame him for since 1972. I do not think this will slow us up at all in some of the things we have to say about him later on.

• (1510)

What has been happening since this government has been in power, leaving out the few months in which we had the privilege of forming the government, is that agriculture has been suffering many ill effects. I think we would all agree that the main one today is interest rates. Agriculture is very dependent upon interest rates because it is a large user of capital. One of the ways in which it uses capital is to create jobs. I have some agricultural figures from Statistics Canada for 1979. These statistics point out that the agriculture industry needs approximately $56,000 to create a job. In the manufacturing industry, $37,000 is needed to create a job. This need for capital is one of the reasons agriculture has become very efficient over the last number of years. It has used large amounts of capital to increase its productivity.

Another reason the agriculture industry is affected more than other industries in Canada is that agriculture is the only major sector in our economy that finances itself internally. It finances itself from its own revenue-generating capacity. It does not go into the market like some resource companies such as Imperial Oil or some other large companies listed on the stock exchange. The agriculture industry finances itself by and large from earnings it has generated. It finances itself by going to the banks, credit unions or other institutions such as the Farm Credit Corporation. It borrows money which it has to repay. Other industries finance themselves by going to the market and taking an equity position by selling shares or bonds payable over a period of time. For those two reasons, agriculture is very dependent upon capital.

I point out again, and I hope the minister is listening, that agriculture is dependent upon capital because it is a large user of capital needed to generate a job, and it is very dependent upon interest rates because it generates its own capital and has to repay it from internal earnings.

When the economy is faced with high interest rates the productivity of the agriculture industry is crippled. I have figures from two categories which bear that out. First, interest on farm indebtedness. This is looked at in two ways; proportion of operating expenses and depreciation, and percentage of farm cash receipts.

Statistics from 1956 show that interest on farm indebtedness as a percentage of operating cost was 4.3 per cent. Farm cash receipts as at 1956 amounted to only 2.8 per cent. This 2.8 per cent of total cash receipts in 1956 was used to pay interest on farm indebtedness. Moving forward to 1966, this figure of 2.8 per cent of total farm cash receipts jumped to 4.7 per cent, not quite double. Moving further ahead to 1976, that figure jumped to 6.7 per cent and in 1980 it went to 10.2 per cent. This year it is estimated it will be 11.3 per cent, almost quadrupled from 1956. This graphic example provides solid evidence why interest rates are having such a devastating effect on the farming community.

Turning now to farm indebtedness as a proportion of operating expenses, the figure rises from 4.3 per cent in 1956 to an estimated 14.1 per cent this year. This percentage of their operating costs has also quadrupled. I am sure many other industries, including small businesses, are in a situation similar to that of the agricultural industry.

The last three years have been especially devastating. Farm costs have risen dramatically faster than income. For the year just completed, as far as farm statistics are concerned, operating costs have risen 15 per cent. This certainly is higher than the inflation rate and is higher than the increase in income. The increase in income, taken as a total, was only 9 per cent. Some sectors in the farm economy, particularly in the meat industry, such as pork and beef, have had a decrease in income. As a whole, incomes rose 9 per cent last year whereas costs rose 15 per cent. That should be of concern to us all.

The lack of ability to increase productivity affects the standard of living of all Canadians and our balance of payments. For example, the cattle industry—and my hon. friend from Medicine Hat (Mr. Hargrave), a well-respected spokesman for the industry, will elaborate on this later—is particularly affected by interest rates. Looking at interest costs as a factor which the consumer has to contend with, the average price of meat to a consumer over the counter is $2.80 a pound. Of that $2.80, 60 cents is attributable to interest charges. That 60-cent figure is a result of the producer owning the animal only. It does not take into account the cost of land or the cost of machinery. That is simply the cost of owning a cow for a year and owning the feeder for a period of time suitable to get that feeder to market weight. If we add the cost of land, machinery, depreciation and some other costs associated with buying feed and caring for the animal before it is sold, I suggest that cost would probably be twice as much as 60 cents a pound.

When the consumer today buys a pound of beef at the average price of $2.80 per pound, I suggest that $1.20 per pound is attributable directly to interest costs. Not only does that figure affect consumers now in terms of the amount of meat they are able to buy, it will affect them in the future because the cattle farmers have to risk borrowing money for a period of six months or a year, the period of time necessary to produce a beef animal for sale. The interest cost can become very high.

Ontario is in as much difficulty in some ways as any other province in the country as far as beef production is concerned because this is where a large percentage of the feeding industry is located. Ontario is a highly productive province in terms of producing feed but it imports a lot of feeder cattle from western Canada. We are glad to have that market. What has happened over the past year, and I am sure the minister is well aware of it, is that rather than these cattle producers risking the cost of producing beef, they are simply cutting back on production. The result is that the consumer is not only paying $1.20 in indirect interests costs but there will be less beef available.

Producers are going out of business for no other reason than that they simply cannot meet increased interest costs. This should be of concern to the government because of its past policy of maintaining a cheap food policy for this country.

• (1520)

Let me talk for a moment about the 60 cents a pound which is the direct cost. The only cost that is used in that 60 cents a pound is the cost of simply owning the animal for the period of time it takes to get it to market. That figure for 1978 was 28 cents a pound, so in two years we have seen more than a doubling of interest costs associated with owning an animal for the period of time it takes to get it to market. That is a direct result of this government's high interest rate policy.

The minister talks about some of the things which need to be done for Canadian agriculture. It would be very interesting to see him use some of those figures to show how they have affected the consumer in this country and why we have some of the increased costs associated with agriculture and food. If the minister were honest and straightforward about it, he would have to admit that they are the result of his government's supporting the high interest rate policy of the Bank of Canada. It has been mentioned to me many times that some of the producers in this country would almost sooner see Al Capone at the head of the Bank of Canada. They think producers probably had an easier time, as far as interest rates are concerned, in the thirties than under the present governor, and this government is supporting that kind of policy. If we were to bring back Al Capone, we might be in better shape as far as interest rates are concerned.

That makes the point as to why many of us in agriculture and in small business think it is a complete fallacy to try to fight inflation simply by using high interest rates. As I pointed out, high interest rates affect the consumer not only directly in the interest cost he pays to the marketplace, but they also affect him down the road because there will be less production as a result of producers choosing not to produce food.

To talk about bankruptcies for a minute, we have heard much in the past number of months about farm bankruptcies. I can give figures on farm bankruptcies; I think we all can. They are up 147 per cent over 1979. They were up 25 per cent in the third last quarter. The point has been made many times before—and it needs to be made again—that bankruptcy is only part of the picture. It is only the tip of the iceberg. This is to say nothing about people who choose to cut back on production. It is to say nothing about people who choose not to get into business. It is to say nothing about the small farmer who would like to expand and get away from working part time at a job off the farm and become a farmer full time. It is to say nothing of the terrible consequences for a young farmer who is starting up. I have had many conversations with young farmers in my riding who talk about the concerns they have and why they think it will be very difficult for them ever to start farming. Simply to talk about bankruptcies is not really giving the total picture at all.

The Minister of Agriculture wants to attack the banks. I have here an article from the Brandon Sun of last Wednesday.

Mr. Dinsdale: A great paper.

Mr. Mayer: The headline is "Whelan unleashes attack on banks and farm leaders." I do not think the minister gets results by attacking banks or farm leaders. We would very much like him to come forward with policies everyone could support. I quote from the article as follows:

> And he lambasted farm organization leaders, saying it is "about time they came up with some good suggestions for helping farmers."

Surely as Minister of Agriculture it should be his job to come up with suggestions and try to implement good suggestions in order to help farmers. Those of us on this side of the House who care about agriculture have made many suggestions in the past on how to help farmers, but there has been no indication that this government is even willing to look at some of the suggestions we make. And we will make some constructive suggestions today before this debate closes.

One of the things which concerns us about banks and about what is going on today is the spread between the bank rate and the prime rate. In March of 1980 when the bank rate was floated or tied to treasury bills and announced every Thursday afternoon, the spread was 1 per cent. That spread increased to 2.8 per cent in July of 1980. It dropped back very briefly to under one half of 1 per cent in November of 1980, but in September of this year the spread between the bank rate and the prime rate—when I refer to the bank rate I mean the rate set by the Bank of Canada each Thursday—was over 2 per cent. It rose to almost 2.5 per cent in October, and presently the spread is 1.79 per cent. The prime rate today is 20 per cent and the bank rate is 18.21 per cent.

Many of us feel that the Minister of Agriculture or, for that matter, the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen), could be putting some pressure on the banks. The Minister of Finance says the banks should bleed a little bit. He could be putting some pressure on the banks to lower their prime rates. If we had a prime rate 1 per cent above the bank rate prior to the floating of the bank rate, then surely to goodness we could expect something like that after the bank rate was floated. I suggest that there is room for the minister to go after the banks and try to get them to reduce the spread between the Bank of Canada rate and the prime rate. Incidentally, the prime rate is a rate at which very few people, if any, borrow at in this country.

I see that my time is going by quicker than I would like. This is a broad topic which could occupy a lot of time. However, I would like to make some suggestions to the minister as to what we could do to help Canadian agriculture. First, perhaps I should talk about some of the things the New Democratic Party has been doing.

Mr. McCuish: That won't take long.

Mr. Mayer: I suppose that would not take long because they have not been doing much, as my seatmate points out. I have to agree with him.

Mr. Deans: It lets you know you don't have much to talk about, right?

Mr. Mayer: It annoys me that we have not heard much from them about agriculture, but this past week I did hear from the NDP spokesman on agriculture, the hon. member for Broadview-Greenwood (Mr. Rae), who was appearing before the Ontario Federation of Agriculture task force on credit and interest rates. I do not know whether he is a distinguished farmer or whether he has changed his profession. It seems to me that the only real connection he has with agriculture is the fact that "green" is part of the name of his constituency. Other than that I do not think he is very much of a distinguished farmer. In fact, I doubt if he would know which end of an animal to look at to see what sex it is. In any event, one of the things he said is that the government should give more money to the Farm Credit Corporation.

That is only part of the problem. I do not think the solution to agricultural financing is simply to make more money available. After all, money has to be paid back. We would much sooner see policies implemented by the government which would allow farmers to be proud of their occupation and able to produce to their potential, and earn money so that they could generate more capital and expand.

As a member of the cabinet the minister has it in his power to recommend to the cabinet, first, that Canadian Wheat Board cash advances be increased. They were implemented in 1957 and 1958 and were set at $15,000. That was almost 25 years ago, and the advisory board to the Canadian Wheat Board has suggested that those cash advances be raised to $50,000. Whether or not the minister chooses to support that figure, I think it should be amply evident that a figure set at $15,000 in 1957 and 1958 and not raised since could certainly be looked at in terms of raising that cash advance level. That would certainly help many young farmers.

I have spoken with people in my constituency—I am sure we all have—who are very concerned about their cash flows. They have grown good crops and, in some cases, crops which would more than allow them to meet their commitments for the coming year. However, because of their cash flows and their inability to sell their grain, they are in very real danger of not being able to survive for another year. They would very much like to see cash advances increased. That would help them very much, but that is something which would have to be done by this government.

As I said, that recommendation came from the advisory board to the Canadian Wheat Board. It has come from many farm organizations across western Canada, and we have heard no reaction at all from this government. If the minister wants evidence of the fact that farm cash advances are being used, in 1980 there were slightly more than 15,000 applications for cash advances, and the total amount in cash advances given to the 15,000 producers was $61,640,000. The number of applicants this year is up to 28,155, which is not quite a doubling of the number of applicants. I received these figures this morning from the Canadian Wheat Board. The value of those cash advances this year is $205,795,000. There has been not quite a doubling in the number of people applying for cash advances, but more than triple the amount of money has been applied for. Farmers are making use of it. If the minister is interested in getting some cash into the hands of producers very quickly, one thing this government could do would be to raise the ceiling on cash advances.

● (1530)

As I pointed out, for some producers, particularly the younger ones starting up—and this may sound foolish in terms of good business—cash flow becomes more important to them than price. The ability to generate money now is very important. If the producer has to wait three or four months for the sale of the majority of his crop, he may not be in business when he has the opportunity to deliver his crop. That is why I say in some cases cash flow becomes more important than selling price.

I would like to see the minister do something to increase the potential to produce in this country. I talk here of western Canada. There are approximately 90 million acres of arable land presently being farmed in western Canada by approximately 150,000 producers. If you do the arithmetic, you find very quickly that Canadian farmers have more arable land under their control as individuals than any other farmer in the world. Therefore, there is a responsibility to make the best use of that land. It should be the responsibility of this minister to ensure that we can produce to that kind of potential.

As I said, the hon. member for Medicine Hat will elaborate on suggestions with regard to the Agricultural Stabilization Act as it applies to beef. I will leave that to him. I would say everyone is in agreement that the federal government needs to show some leadership with regard to harmonization of provincial stabilization programs. We do not need a change in the Constitution to do that. All we need is courage and leadership on the part of the federal government. To date that has been sadly lacking.

Many of us in this House have made suggestions with regard to the small business development bond. As I said on another occasion when speaking in this House, the conditions under which the small business development bond is made available should be liberalized. It should be made available to unincorporated businesses for financing other than new purchases, for lines of credit, used machinery, expansion of buildings by small business and so on. That would help.

There should be no reason why that cannot be done. Some two months ago the Bank of Montreal suggested to the government that it was prepared to do that, pending the government changing the legislation in order that that could be done. However, I see no indication that the government is going to take up the lead.

The government should talk to the banks, instead of shouting at them as a headline in the Brandon Sun indicates, and encourage the banks to have fixed rates of financing for production periods. If a farmer growing crops could have a fixed rate of interest over a production period of six or eight months, it would assist him in planning. It would remove some of the risk from the operation as far as calculating interest costs is concerned. There are some things the minister could do with regard to talking to the banks. We would all support him in that. We would be very interested in seeing this happen.

I do not know how long the Outlook Conference has been in existence. I attended the conference before I had the privilege of sitting in this House. Many have come to refer to it as a look-out conference. That is truly what it is. It is not a question of outlook but how we should look out to stay in business for another year.

That conference usually follows the American outlook conference which is on this week in Washington. In the past it has been largely a one-way communication with the government presenting papers to producers. I think the conference could be expanded in terms of the situation in agriculture today. The conference could go an extra day and there could be some workshops. There is an opportunity to gather together farm leaders from across the country where they could sit down and really talk about the problems of agriculture. They could try and find some solutions rather than the conference simply being a social gathering. Rather than the people just coming together, talking in the halls and having papers presented by the government, there could be some input from the industry. That is something that could be looked at.

Along with several of my colleagues from this House and the Senate, I had an opportunity about ten days ago to attend a meeting in Washington. We met concerning international wheat pricing arrangements as far as Canada and the United States are concerned. I very much appreciated that opportunity.

Something I found very disheartening was a statement attributed to the minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board who sits in the other place. He pointed out that this meeting between Canadian and American legislators would not amount to anything because it did not have official government sanction. That was a deplorable statement by the minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board, and therefore responsible for a large number of Canadian grain producers.

At the meeting we found areas of concern which affected both of our countries in terms of cost of production, our potential to produce and the market conditions we operate under internationally. We certainly reached many conclusions. I hope this minister will not have the same attitude toward that kind of dialogue and possible solutions to problems in grain marketing that his colleague, the minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board, displayed. If the minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board really had the concerns of the agricultural producers at heart, he would not be making fun of such a meeting beforehand, saying it was of no consequence because it did not have official government sanction.

I hope that when the Minister of Agriculture replies this afternoon, he does not do what he did on June 3 last. He spoke for 40 minutes, talking about everything under the sun except interest rates. We all know that interest rates today are the major factor in Canadian agriculture. They threaten its viability in the long run.

I wish to repeat a story that was told to me some time ago. It made the point that the only difference between North America and South America as far as stability of government is concerned is that South America was settled on the basis of land barons and serfs. As a result, South America does not have the same kind of stable conditions as far as government is concerned. Nor do they have the affluence we have in this country.

If interest rates make things very difficult for a young farmer, or if we condone interest rates which prevent anyone who wants to own a house or private property in this country from doing so, there is a very real danger of the kind of situation which they have in South America occurring here. I refer to the situation where many countries change governments by revolution rather than election. With this minister supporting the Bank of Canada and the fight against inflation and his colleague the Minister of Finance through high interest rates, he is pushing this country toward that kind of situation, and it will be very difficult, if not impossible, for young farmers to get started in agriculture.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I apologize to the Conservative member who just finished speaking. I am not a farmer. I had not realized when I came to the House of Commons that you were only allowed to speak about things you had absolute direct and personal knowledge about. If that were to be the case, there would not be very many speeches made by anyone in this House.

I suggest it is appropriate for members to speak about matters that worry them. I am vitally concerned about what is happening to farmers in Canada. The motion before us today ought to motivate more members to rise to their feet. There is a serious problem that hits the farming community and other related communities which has to be dealt with by this government and dealt with forthwith. It is about that that I want to speak this afternoon. I hope I do not offend anyone with my lack of knowledge, although I suspect I could find which end of the animal to look at to find out which sex it is.

The motion before us states the obvious. There is a distressing increase in interest rates for farmers as there is in interest rates generally. We condemn the government not only for this distressing increase in farm interest rates, but for its inability to come to grips with the interest rate problem in general.

The problem that concerns by far the vast majority of Canadians is compounded by the fact that farmers must rely so heavily on their borrowing capacity to see them through from one season to the next. The government will not only have to take a long, hard look at the short-term impact as evidenced by the high and ever-increasing numbers of bankruptcies that are taking place within the farming community. The long-term impact of high interest rate policies require farmers to delay unnecessarily the purchase of replacement machinery. This has affected the machinery manufacturing sector. The long-term cost is felt not only by the farmer and the farm machinery manufacturing sector, but by the community at large. It is the consumer who over the next four or five years should buy the machinery but who cannot afford to buy it. These delays mean that farmers must continue to use machinery that will become obsolete. In the case of the farmer that obsolescence results in an inability to meet production requirements, the cost of which in the long run is on the consumer in Canada. It is to that end I wish to speak.

• (1540)

Many people tend to isolate groups in society and try to deal with them in a segmented way. They talk about farmers as if their problems are quite unique and they do not in any way impact on anyone else. They will then look at the situation in the consumer area, outside of the farmer, and try to make it look as if that group can be dealt with separately and apart from the other.

I do not happen to believe that is the case. I think what we see happening in the farm community is what we see happening in the small business area and throughout most of Canada's manufacturing and producing sector. What we will have in the long run is an undermining of the stability of the economy. If that undermining has not already taken place, it will certainly take place in the not too distant future.

I should like to deal with some matters that I think are of vital importance. First of all, I want to suggest it is of some significance that today we see the Massey-Ferguson Industries Limited of Brantford, along with a number of others, cutting back on their work force. Why are they cutting back on their work force? It is because the farmers of Canada cannot afford to undertake the cost of replacing the machinery that should be replaced during these years. They cannot afford to carry the burden of indebtedness that the replacement undoubtedly will bring. The end result for Massey is that the lay-offs are significant.

It is not only in Massey that the lay-offs are significant. I was reading an article with some interest in The Globe and Mail by Kevin Cox that had a dateline Hamilton. He said:

> More than 30 per cent of the farm machinery dealers in Ontario will go out of business in the next six months unless farmers get a break from high interest rates, a Simcoe-area equipment distributor predicted yesterday.

He is quoted saying:

> "Nobody's buying a thing and I can't blame them," Robert Laning of Laning Farm Equipment Distributors told the Ontario Federation of Agriculture task force on the farm economy.

Mr. Laning went on to say:

> —many of Ontario's 400 dealers are in serious trouble because farmers can't afford to buy new equipment at interest rates of more than 20 per cent.
>
> There have been lay-offs throughout the farm supply industry, and "if something isn't done to lower interest rates, we'll see businesses go under. Even with a good equity position, paying $3,000 to $4,000 a month in interest is a bit much."

This is clear evidence of the spin-off effect of high interest rate policy being followed by the government. The government systematically has informed this House and the public of Canada that the high interest rate policy is intended to reduce inflation. Both major political parties, but primarily the NDP, have said that, in fact, the high interest rate policy pursued by the government through the Bank of Canada has been adding to inflation and has undermined the economic stability of a significantly large sector of the economy. If the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen) were here he would understand that when we say thousands of people have been forced out of their homes, we mean thousands of people have been forced out of their homes. Anyone with half a brain would understand that is a truism and a fact in Canada.

This is now having an impact on most small businesses because farmers are delaying purchases that should be made. Because of that delay it is, therefore, impossible for the manufacturers and dealers to maintain their position in society. It is also causing untold hardship on the farmers because they must carry high inventory. It is also causing hardship for those who must borrow the money and must pay the 16 ¾ per cent in the one case, or the 20 or 22 per cent in the other case, depending upon the reason for borrowing the money. There is no opportunity for those people to realize sufficient return on investment and sufficient return from the sale of the produce or livestock so as to maintain their position.

I was interested in noting at this self-same Ontario Federation of Agriculture task force hearing that one of those who made a submission said:

> "I resent the fact that I produce beef and pork for 1,500 people a year and I can't make a living working more than ten hours a day," said Lyle Peters, a Guelph-area pig and beef producer.
>
> Mr. Peters said an interest rate of more than 20 per cent on a loan of more than $200,000 left him and his wife with only $6,000 to live on last year, and they had to buy their clothes at a second-hand store.

It is almost unbelievable, Mr. Speaker, that a person put in the position of having to borrow $200,000 to maintain a pig and beef operation and who was running what was a viable farming undertaking should find himself and his family, after they have paid back their loan and sold off their produce, left with $6,000. It takes a bit of understanding to appreciate that that can happen.

Mr. Crawley, head of the Wellington County Federation of Agriculture, went on to tell the task force that he borrowed $500,000 to finance his hog operation. He said:

> If interest rates continue at more than 20 per cent and pork prices do not improve, we will be bankrupt in two years.

I do not think you can put it any clearer. I do not think anyone can write it any better. I do not know how you can say it in clearer terms. The farmers in Ontario whom I am addressing at the moment, but also farmers right across the country, are faced with the most severe financial hardship. They are asked to continue to produce for the needs of the consumer, while at the same time they are expected to carry indebtedness far beyond their ability to realize a return on their investment. The impact of this undoubtedly will result in a further increase in the numbers of bankruptcies that will take place. If we do not keep a viable farming community in Canada, we know we will eventually be at the mercy of those who will maintain viable farming communities in other parts of the world.

That is the biggest worry for those who look into the future. As you see fewer and fewer viable farms, the food supply needs of Canadians will ultimately be filled by farmers elsewhere. And at what price? What will we have to pay in order to get what we must have to put in the stores in order to feed the people of this country if we are not prepared now to take the kind of action that will guarantee the viability of the farms that currently exist? What will it cost us in terms of dollars that will flow out of the country to produce for our future needs? Is it worth that potential sacrifice in years to come, when you measure that against the cost of providing for farmers' loans and financial assistance at a price they can reasonably afford?

In the present circumstances certain parts of society have to be subsidized. It is absolutely essential. Farmers are not asking for subsidies; they would rather stand on their own two feet. Until we are able to receive sensible financial and fiscal policies from this government, then in the short run it is obvious to me we will have to guarantee the farmers, who must purchase today in order that they can produce tomorrow, will have access to the money they need and at a price they can afford to pay from the sale of their produce.

• (1550)

That seems elementary. I say to Conservative members that they do not have to be farmers to understand it. It is elementary economics. Perhaps it is too elementary for the government. It is common sense. This is something which seems to be lacking in the policies which are being brought forward by the government during this period of time.

Of course, we hear statements that farm incomes have risen. I read with interest the other day that farm incomes have risen. If one reads this and reads no further, one gets the impression that the farmer is doing better this year than last year. It does not tell one that it is talking only about cash receipts. It is not talking about net incomes. It is not talking about the problems incurred by farmers trying to meet additional costs which are a result of high interest rates, high fuel costs, high transportation costs and high feed costs. These costs must be paid out of the increasing receipts.

Last week Statistics Canada released a preliminary net farm income figure for 1980. It showed a shocking decline of 30 per cent in the province of Ontario in net income and 27 per cent in total net income. These figures were for last year. Ontario is second only to Manitoba. In Manitoba the size of the decline in net income was an astronomical 77 per cent. Even if there were a marginal increase in the nine-month period of 1981, when it is measured over and against the dramatic decrease in 1980 it is virtually impossible for the farmer to maintain his position of 1979.

It is to this end that we must address ourselves. Farming in Ontario and across Canada is suffering a cost-price squeeze which is unprecedented in our history. Everyone understands that never in history has it been possible to go broke so big and so fast in this country. The figures on the cost of interest on indebtedness are good indications of the problem. In 1978 in Ontario the cost of interest was $253 million. By 1979 it had increased to $374 million, which was a 48 per cent jump in the cost of indebtedness. Debt charges rose last year to $465 million, which was an increase of another 24 per cent over the previous year. Over all there has been an 83 per cent increase in the amount of indebtedness and debt charges on indebtedness in the last two years. This year when interest rates really took off, we can imagine that the cost of borrowing to the farmer will be something in excess of $600 million. That is equivalent to the total net income for 1980. There is a very serious problem here.

I listened to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) as he travelled around the province expressing what I do not doubt for a moment is his genuine concern. But there comes a time when an expression of concern is no longer enough. There comes a time when people expect results. They do not expect a further pat on the back with a vague promise of help in the future. They expect to see some tangible results from the efforts of the minister. Today they want to see some government commitment. They do not want to hear a statement by the minister that he will try or quit. They want a government commitment that it recognizes the value of the farming community to the future of the country and that it is prepared to take the steps necessary to ensure that the costs I have just enumerated and the burden about which we have been speaking will no longer have to be borne by this vital sector.

Let us look at the problems. For example, in Ontario 112 farmers went bankrupt to the end of September this year. This figure compares with only 15 farmers in the province of Saskatchewan. The difference is in the nature of government. The government of Saskatchewan put in place measures to assist farmers, while the government of Ontario failed in its obligation to protect farmers in areas where protection could be undertaken. The problem is neglect not only by the federal government but in many instances by provincial governments as well.

There are some measures which must be taken by the Government of Canada, and they must be taken now. Perhaps a week or two ago—and we have said this for the last seven or eight months—we said that some action had to be taken to assist home owners. I think the message has gotten through, but I am not sure whether the answer is forthcoming. Certainly the message is that home owners in Canada are not prepared to accept the piecemeal policy the government has offered over the past. They will not tolerate being left at the mercy of Canadian banking institutions. The federal government had an opportunity to play a role in the Farm Credit Corporation, but it has not lived up to its obligation.

The Conservative member who spoke previously said that it was not the only answer. Of course it is not. No one expected it to be the only answer. It is a sad commentary when the month of September arrives that the Farm Credit Corporation does not have any money in the province of Ontario to meet the needs of Ontario farmers when they apply for loans. It is even more of an indictment on the government that, at a time when farmers are undertaking a debt load far greater than they could ever be expected to recover from the marketplace, the government has approved an increase in the interest rate of the Farm Credit Corporation to 16.75 per cent.

I do not doubt for a moment that there is some element of truth in the rumours circulating on Parliament Hill that the Minister of Agriculture will certainly quit if his own government does not respond.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but his allotted time has expired.

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the motion put forward by the official opposition alleges in the form of an argument that the government has failed to support Canadian farmers. I think it is about as far off the mark as any comment could be. It would be fair to say that no government in Canada has ever provided the kind of support to the entire agri-food industry which has been given during my term as Minister of Agriculture.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Whelan: It would be remiss of me to go over all the things we have done for agriculture since 1972, but I will try to put a few on record. Under this government the Agricultural Stabilization Act has been amended to increase the percentage of pay-out when prices fall below the five-year average and to bring more commodities under the stabilization program.

The hon. member who led off the discussion today told us to provide leadership. A former member of this House who was also a former minister of agriculture for the province of Alberta stated the same thing in a report that he was commissioned to bring forward by the province of Alberta on the subject of beef marketing and some other aspects of agriculture in that province. I refer to Dr. Hugh Horner. He said that we failed to give leadership and he spoke about more money for stabilization, as did the hon. member who just spoke for the New Democratic Party.

• (1600)

In 1977 we proposed and got cabinet approval to present 100 per cent harmonization of stabilization to the provinces and farm organizations. That is 100 per cent of cost of production. We were turned down on the grounds that it was a wild dream of mine to provide that kind of program and that kind of income. They felt it would cause an oversupply of products in Canada. They did not think it was needed in agriculture so they turned it down. We could see that, Mr. Speaker. I do not think you have to be a great economist to see it. A blind man on a galloping horse could see some of the things that were going to happen in some agriculture industries. I think particularly of the red meat industry where there is a big problem today. I see the hon. member for Medicine Hat (Mr. Hargrave) in the House and I am sure he will cover that subject in detail when he speaks.

The groups that are in difficulty today are those that depended on that great free market system that was going to take care of them. It has taken care of them in the way the black sheep does in the slaughter house. Before he goes into the slaughtering pen he detours and all the others following him go to slaughter. That is what has happened to many, many people, especially young people in the beef industry.

When we speak of stabilization we should remember what has been done for hog producers in 1980. Payments totalling $112 million will go out to hog producers; indeed, practically all of that money has been paid out already. Some of the provinces are what we call "piggybacking" that program and the total pay-out to hog producers for 1980 will be $200 million. That will go to a very efficient group of producers who run a very inefficient marketing system.

The spokesmen for the New Democratic Party and the official opposition used sweeping statements about the agricultural industry but they know as well as I do that it is not the total agricultural industry that is in trouble; only those people who operate outside some system that the farmers set up and run themselves to market their products are in the difficulty that we all know about at the present time. Many efficient areas of agriculture are not in financial difficulty today and are able to pay their bills. Their cost-pricing formulas use interest rates, taxes, energy, etc. when they set a price for the product and as a result they are not experiencing any difficulty. People who depend on the buyer saying "I will give you so much for your product, take it or leave it," are in difficulty, especially if their product is perishable.

The red meat industry, both beef and hog producers, is a very important part of our agricultural production. Beef producers are probably in the worst position, but that was brought on mainly because of overproduction of pork. People bought the cheap pork product. Not as much beef was sold and so the buying power of the producers declined. The same thing happened in the United States.

The hon. member opposite said that I should speak about interest rates. I think my officials have been fairly accurate in calculating what happened when American cattle came to Ontario and took over about 25 per cent of the market for about four months. Mr. Speaker, we could have given them interest-free money for their whole operation at that time and they still could not have made a buck, because the market was depressed as the result of importation of big, cheap, fat cattle from the United States. Many people contend that we can compete with that system but, Mr. Speaker, when they have a production machine that is geared to feed 240 million people and 2 per cent of their surplus is sold to Canada, which has a machine geared to feed 24 million people, the machine gets plugged up. That is not a managed supply, Mr. Speaker.

In other production areas farmers have taken the initiative and looked after themselves, whether it be through a provincial marketing system or a federal marketing system under the jurisdiction of the Department of Agriculture and the National Farm Products Marketing Council—which only include dairy and poultry products—plus the Canadian Wheat Board which is under the jurisdiction of another ministry. It was set up in 1935 to provide some order in the marketplace for grain. Order in the marketplace is the most important thing because it ensures that the market can absorb the product and that it will not be piled up in the hope of selling it.

The hon. member who spoke for the opposition put on record how many millions of dollars farmers receive interest free from advance payments for grain. Listening to him, one would think that no such program was provided for anyone else. The estimate of applications from the Canadian Wheat Board and for producers of perishable crops will amount to about $255 million interest free. Close to $500 million will be lent by the Farm Credit Corporation and until October 1 the interest rate was 14 per cent, which was highly subsidized, and even at the present time it is being subsidized by about 6 per cent. Today, anyone who can obtain a mortgage pays approximately 21.5 per cent or, if they are lucky, perhaps 20 per cent.

There is still a tremendous amount of assistance available to farmers through government programs, Mr. Speaker. If there is a good marketing system, then I do not think tremendous sums of money are required for stabilization programs. The poultry industry has not received a penny of tax dollars since 1972 when I became minister. They run a fairly healthy industry and they run it themselves.

Stabilization programs will be announced as they are needed. They will provide income support to farmers to help them remain in farming and run a viable business. Since 1958 the federal government has paid out nearly $4 billion in stabilization payments. This is similar to what was offered to farmers for other commodities but no province or farm organization took it up. No farm organization said it was something they wanted; they condemned it but it was similar to the Western Grain Stabilization Act with a contribution by producers and a contribution by the federal government. In the case of the Western Grain Stabilization Act the ratio is two to one. It has been suggested that a similar program be set up for hog stabilization involving the producers, the provinces and the federal government. For four years we have been trying to get agreement for such a program but it has not come about yet. I have stated that I would go ahead with a hog stabilization plan similar to the Western Grain Stabilization Act involving the producers and the federal government. It would be a voluntary type program.

The benefits to western Canada of a program like the western grain stabilization plan are difficult to estimate. Indeed, it benefits all Canada. It is not just that $360 million has been paid out since the inception of the plan; the real benefit has been the confidence instilled in the grain industry. It has allowed farmers and all types of agri-business in the west to plan for the future in an orderly fashion.

The same type of stabilization program is under discussion at the present time for hogs and I am sure it will eventually apply to other agricultural commodities. I have already mentioned that we had proposed this to the provinces and to farm organizations in 1977. They have very short memories but I do not comment, Mr. Speaker. I remember what we proposed.

One province went ahead and put the program into effect. That Province was British Columbia. There are less bankruptcies in the agricultural sector in B.C. than in nearly every other province. That does not mean it has eliminated the problem, but the program we offered superseded everything they produce, other than for cow-calf producers. We said we were willing to negotiate that item with the other provinces, even with the province of British Columbia.

• (1610)

In the past we have suffered from a balkanization of the industry as a result of a variety of provincial stabilization programs. While I can sympathize with the desire of the provincial governments to help their farmers, I think it is important that agriculture is treated equally across the country. In a newspaper editorial I was lambasted because they did not understand what equity and equalization meant. The rich provinces with tremendous resources in their coffers can bring forward programs to assist producers, whereas the have-not provinces do not have those resources, and their producers compete in a very unfair fashion. The inequality that exists between us is terrible. Some provinces have money to pave every road, to provide natural gas, to provide loan programs and subsidize interest rates. For instance, under loan programs in Alberta farmers are getting up to $600,000. When the interest rate is figured out, it amounts to about 6 per cent for that special group of farmers.

Mr. Hargrave: There is no cattle program in Alberta.

Mr. Whelan: The hon. member knows where they are getting the money. They are using some of the money from the heritage fund.

Mr. Hargrave: No.

Mr. Whelan: Then there is that great free system in Alberta called the Alberta trust. That is their banking system. It is owned by the government of Alberta. I must say they are distributing some of the surplus earned on high interest rates in fair interest loans to some of their farmers. That is commendable. They increased their profits by 345 per cent and said they would distribute some of the profits to some needy people. That is commendable. Hon. members talk about me yelling about other banking institutions in this country, but I will touch on that shortly.

We talk about stabilization and different programs in our provinces, but even the minister of agriculture in the province of Alberta wants a national program for beef. Yet when all of the provincial ministers are seated together, they cannot agree on what kind of a national program we should have. Hon. members talk about leadership. The hon. member who represents that great constituency in Manitoba, his constituency name escapes me for the moment—

Mr. Mayer: It is Portage-Marquette.

Mr. Whelan: When the hon. member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer) talks about leadership, does he want me to impose a red meat marketing commission and provide leadership like R. B. Bennett did in 1935? When I see the hardships, I am about ready to provide some of that kind of leadership. We have tried persuasion of every kind that we can think of to get the provinces to go along with a national program. I must give the minister of agriculture from Alberta some credit, because he has withstood some pretty rough meetings lately, but he seems to be staying with the philosophy that it is better to have an all-Canadian program. We are not that far apart.

The hon. member talked about the cattle feeding program in Ontario and about the cattle feeders being especially hard hit. I will have to take hon. members on a little tour of that part of Canada. Ninety-nine per cent of cattle in those feed lots are fed by the feed the farmer produces on the land he cultivates himself. I am told that not 1 per cent would be bought feed from any other source. We could take hon. members to areas where there are 1,400 acres of corn which are put in pit silos and upright silos, you name it, wet corn, etc. They are pretty well self-sufficient.

However, they got into a lot of difficulty, and I find this rough. I have appealed to the bankers to get into the farm loan business. I have hundreds of letters from farmers; some of them sent me complete financial statements and some of them hardly owed a penny five years ago. These farmers borrowed on demand notes, which is a floating loan. The amounts they borrowed varied from $250,000, $300,000 to $350,000. Money should not be lent for those kinds of physical structures in rural Canada. Floating loans is an improper way to lend money. Lending should be at a fixed rate with at least a ten-year mortgage and possibly a 15-year or 20-year mortgage. Ninety per cent of those people in financial difficulty today would not be in financial difficulty if they had a fixed loan.

An hon. Member: That is what we said.

Mr. Whelan: That is why I said that under the Bank Act the banks have the authority to do that. They have the authority to do just what the Alberta trust is doing at the present time. Under the Bank Act the banks have the authority right now to give long-term mortgages at reasonable rates of interest. Some of the bankers come out with stories like: "Well, Whelan knows that when we have a dollar on deposit and we are paying 17 per cent interest on it, we have to make a profit on it."

Mr. McDermid: Speak to the finance minister, that great supporter of the banks.

Mr. Whelan: But the banks loan out that dollar at least ten times. In some instances they can lend it as many as 75 times. So when the banks talk about profits, we should make sure the banks put their profits back into the rural community. Last year the banks collected $1.5 billion in interest from farmers. This year the banks will collect more than $2 billion in interest from farmers. The Bank Act allows the banks to distribute some of that wealth in any fashion they see fit. Are hon.

members opposite from that great free enterprise system suggesting that we put the banks under the hammer?

Mr. Blenkarn: You are the government; why don't you do something about it?

Mr. Whelan: I have the hammer and I am ready to swing it if you want me to do that.

Mr. Blenkarn: If that doesn't happen, will you resign?

Mr. Whelan: Farmers and small-business men should have an appeal against that kind of a system. We have an untold amount of letters. People are telling us they will give us affidavits or will swear they asked the banks for long-term money but were refused and told they were getting money at 12 per cent, to wait, that interest rates would be down to 10 per cent or 11 per cent in six months. Therefore, people did not go ahead with long-term mortgages. This happened a little over a year ago when people were asking for five-year mortgages at fixed rates of interest.

People can see some of the pitiful things that have been done by the banking interests. The banking industry does not need the money, but the Bank Act allows the banks to do the very things that I am talking about. Banks can give long-term mortgages with a moratorium. For instance, a bank could give a 20-year mortgage. The banks created this problem. In most instances, they are responsible for farm takeovers. The bankruptcies do not tell the whole story. Many farms have automatically been taken over by the banks. The farmer just moves out and there is a quiet sale. The banks take what belongs to them, and if there is anything left it is given to the farmer.

We can compare what these banks are doing with other lending institutions in the province of Alberta. Alberta is a rich province but the lending institutions there are not keeping everything for themselves. Some people in Alberta would probably say: "Whelan, they are not doing as much as you think they are and they could be doing more". I think that is probably true.

Last year we heard it said that we did not do anything for agriculture and we did not pay any attention to the industry. But we put $60 million into the herd maintenance program, drought assistance, livestock, fodder procurement program and the livestock transportation program. I wonder how many farmers would have been forced out of business if we had not put in that $60 million?

The hon. member talks about the great programs in Saskatchewan. Let me tell him about the great programs in Saskatchewan. There is one they call the Saskatchewan Crown corporation insurance company, or something like that. I wish I could run a company like that. The federal government pays 50 per cent of the premiums, the producers pay the other 50 per cent, the province administers it and it is called a Saskatchewan Crown corporation. That is a little bit much! In Saskatchewan last year we spent over $130 million assisting farmers in that province, yet the province, which does all things for agriculture production out there, spent only $61 million. Who is doing the most for whom? The federal government does not have the propaganda system to get the credit for what it is doing. That is about what it amounts to.

The crop insurance program is a unique program. No other country in the world has a crop insurance program like ours. We pay 50 per cent of the premiums and the producers pay the other 50 per cent. The provinces administer this program and take 99 per cent of the credit when there are claims. The provinces generally spend only a couple of million dollars in this program. I will give hon. members an estimate of what the federal government spends. More than 121,000 farmers bought crop insurance for their 1981 crops, an increase of 8,000 over the previous year. They bought coverage worth about $2.5 billion. This government will contribute $120 million in premiums to this program, with farmers contributing a similar amount.

• (1620)

Do hon. members think the United States has that kind of a program for its farmers? I can remember a former secretary of agriculture in the United States saying this is a wonderful program. I asked him what kind of program they had and he said, "We call it a disaster program, and that is just what it is, Mr. Minister, a disaster." I do not know whether the United States has come up with any other kind of program, but I know they did study our program in Canada two or three years ago.

Last year the crop insurance program paid out a record $261 million to farmers across Canada to cover losses. A large part of that sum went to farmers in Manitoba and Saskatchewan for losses due to the drought. That is what I call support to the agricultural industry and to Canadian farmers.

This has been an exceptionally good year on the prairies. There was one large area that had a lot of hail damage in southern Saskatchewan but I do not expect there will be that many big insurance claims or payments made for grains or oilseeds in the west this year; at least, that is the advice I have been getting from my crop insurance people. Growers in Ontario and Quebec will be thankful for the crop insurance program this year. Many vegetable and grain farmers in southwestern Ontario had their crops washed out by unusually wet weather. They had the largest amount of rainfall ever recorded in that area this year.

Farmers do not want to live on handouts. They want the government to provide policies and programs that will make it possible for them to do what they do best, grow crops and market them at a price that will give them a reasonable return on their investment and their labour. That has been the basic aim of the agriculture policies of this government, and I think it has been appreciated by producers. They have certainly thrived under it and developed an agriculture industry that is second to none in the world.

No one is more aware than this Minister of Agriculture of the difficulties that farmers are facing right now with inflation pushing up the cost of farm inputs at a rate that exceeds the rise in commodity prices. It is a cost-price squeeze that is hitting some farmers harder than others. Farmers who have been operating with low equity and high debt are in trouble. That is a poor way to do business at the best of times, and maybe if some of those farmers had had better financial advice in the first place they would not be in that position.

Farmers who have been able to establish orderly marketing arrangements, as I said earlier, are in better shape, and that too is a form of support this government has given to farmers. Hon. members will notice that it is not the dairy and poultry producers, as I have said, who are having great difficulty in the present situation. Supply management has a lot of advantages that many people do not realize until they get into the sort of bind some hog and beef producers are in at the present time.

As I have said, I have the right to challenge farm leaders in the community because I was a farm leader at one time. We did things; we organized ourselves and went to the government and told the government what we wanted. Most of these farm leaders at the present time are just sitting back and yelling without making any constructive suggestions whatsoever. They are afraid to go into the farm communities and really organize the farmers as we did at one time. I do not have time as Minister of Agriculture to do that and it is not my job to do that. It is the farm leaders' job to do that.

Some farm leaders have done a good job and certain products come under provincial or national boards, and those producers are making a buck. If they are efficient producers they are making the dollars and paying the bills. The bankers know that as well, and so do we in the Farm Credit Corporation. We have lent money to the farmers of Canada. At the present time there are 70,000 farmers in Canada who have farm credit loans. Of farmers who are presently farming, 70 per cent have at one time or another received assistance. I want to make that clear; some 70 per cent of farmers who are now producing in Canada at one time or another in their lives received assistance from the Farm Credit Corporation.

The Farm Credit Corporation was at one time the main lender to farmers. At one time 70 per cent of all long-term loans in Canada were made by the Farm Credit Corporation. We appealed to the lending institutions to become more involved in lending in rural Canada. They were hardly involved at all in that kind of lending before 1978. If one checks the records one will find that the bankers were hardly involved in this type of lending before that time. Little did I know when we appealed to them that they would operate in the fashion they have. They have shown their ignorance about lending in rural Canada. They have shown that ignorance as indicated by some of those things I have mentioned. They lent huge sums of money without any advice to the farmers, without any real study of the operation and without any real study of the economics of the production entity. They did not make sure the farmers were going to have some kind of program so that they would know they would be able to pay back the loan in the following ten years. One can hardly believe the heartbreaking situations some of these people are now in, mainly because of the policies of the banks in lending money.

This is what I was thinking about when I talked about whether the Farm Credit Corporation should be given more money and whether the small business development bond program should be expanded, allowing more money to be again administered by the banks. Should there not be some way of having control over how this money is to be lent and to whom in order that we do not just put these people in jeopardy again? I maintain that even with a small business development bond some of these farmers would still be in difficulty, at least until they get a better marketing system for themselves. They will not be able to get out of difficulty even with a 10 per cent or 12 per cent mortgage under the Small Business Development Bond program. They are not able to write this off as an income tax expense. What they need are long-term mortgages with a moratorium on the first three years of interest payment on capital. I know I am repeating myself, but this could work. They should have mortgages for 20 years with an amortization period over the final 17 years. This would allow them to get on their feet. For some of these people this is a must. We need these agricultural producers.

These producers are not necessarily inefficient. Some of them are the most efficient producers in existence. I could name one young farmer in my area who went bankrupt owing $750,000. He had the most efficient beef cattle feeding program in Ontario on the basis of pounds of beef produced. He was self-sufficient; he did not buy any grain for his cattle, he produced it all on his own farm.

We want amendments to the Farm Credit Corporation legislation and we have made certain recommendations. Other members on both sides of the House have made suggestions. It has been suggested that a Crown corporation or trust company be set up to entice people to invest in agriculture. We could pay a lower rate of interest but the investors could get an income tax break.

There will be other members on this side of the House who will be speaking on this subject. There are many things I should have liked to say in answer to some of the comments by hon. members. An hon. member referred to an outlook conference, which I think is a commendable idea. There are many things we think can be done to really help agriculture in Canada, but—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please.

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity of taking part in this debate on the opposition motion on agriculture proposed by the hon. member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer). I listened with interest to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) expressing his concern again, again and again, but like my colleague, I would like to point out to the minister that we understand the problems. Every farmer, every cattleman and every producer of food products in this country understands those problems. We need some answers from the government. If this minister and his government also understand those problems, then will they please supply some answers and some solutions?

The minister talked about marketing. He said the entire problem which exists in the red meat industry can be related to marketing. He said these producers are those people who, to use a government expression, are in the most dire straits.

• (1630)

Mr. Speaker, coming from a grain producing area, I would like to give the minister a small lesson in economics. I will give him some statistics showing what part grain plays in my particular part of Saskatchewan and, indeed, the western part of Canada as well as Ontario and Quebec. The dominant crops on the prairies are grains and oilseeds. In Saskatchewan, grain and oilseeds account for 74 per cent of cash receipts, cattle accounts for 18 per cent and other crops account for the balance. In 1980, of the $3.2 billion in Saskatchewan farm receipts, wheat accounted for 60 per cent, barley for 5 per cent, rapeseed for 7 per cent, cattle for 18 per cent and others were 10 per cent. Barley and wheat, a total of 65 per cent, was under the authority of a central marketing agency.

The central marketing agency the minister talks about for the red meat producers is not the answer. We have had the central marketing agency in the wheat industry, the Canadian Wheat Board, since 1935 when it was established by the Progressive Conservative government. In my opinion, the only thing wrong with the Canadian Wheat Board is that our party has not been in government long enough to make it operate properly.

Using the Canadian Wheat Board as an example, any producer-controlled agency or producer central selling desk should have leadership by someone who is at least as capable as those he represents. Anyone who is at all familiar with the Minister of State in the other place and his past experience knows he is not a representative of the producers. He is not as capable as the people he says he represents and that is the problem we are faced with in that central selling agency.

Turning to Saskatchewan agriculture, after the strike at Thunder Bay the Minister of State for the Canadian Wheat Board issued a press release in which he said:

> Producers, grain handlers and members of the elevator association have all emerged winners at the end of this disruption of the grain handling system.

The Minister of State went on to say:

> —no sales were lost nor were any contracts cancelled as a result of the strike and the union has indicated it feels it can make up for lost time.

Somebody lost. I know it was not the government that lost. I know that the union workers lost because they were on strike. I know that the sales target of 26 million tonnes which has been set by the Canadian Wheat Board will be behind. We will not make 26 million tonnes this year, even with the best efforts of all parties. That is another matter which we will discuss on another day.

However, this is the type of leadership that has been given to the people of Saskatchewan who have contributed 65 per cent of the $3.2 billion in farm sales. As of today, we in Saskatchewan finally had a six-bushel quota. Up until this time last week we were at three bushels per acre. That is $12 an acre which the farmer has been able to sell when the input costs are closer to $40. This is the reason the people in my part of the country are in severe financial difficulty.

The minister says that a marketing board is the answer for the red meat industry. It may well be the answer to something like the poultry industry, where there is a ten-week cycle, but the red meat industry cannot pile up sides of beef in a granary.

Mr. Whelan: I know you can't.

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, the minister says he knows we cannot, so why does he insist on saying the only problem in the red meat industry is the marketing process?

We have problems in the grain industry in western Canada which has had a central selling desk since 1935. The problem we have there is the same problem we have in the red meat industry, namely, lack of leadership on behalf of the government.

The minister does not have to criticize the banks. The producers will do that themselves if they feel they are being taken advantage of. I have yet to receive one letter from a producer which says that he has been harshly treated by the bank because of his inability to pay. A producer may well say: "I know I have a legal contract and the bank has assisted me over the last 12 or 18 months to try to recover, but I do not want to see my farming business go. I had a legal contract and the only place I could borrow money was at the bank. The Farm Credit Corporation did not have any funds."

This government will not move to let the Small Business Development Bond work for unincorporated farmers. It will not move to let the operating loans that producers have fall under the Small Business Development Bond. This government and its supporters in the New Democratic Party voted against the Small Business Development Bond in that part of the Crosbie budget, yet they brought it back in. However, they only brought it half way. We have wondered why the banks are the only people who can lend money and not have to pay tax on the interest accrued, as with the Small Business Development Bond. We have made suggestions to the minister and to the government that there is absolutely no reason why the Farm Credit Corporation could not be funded by individuals investing money in the Farm Credit Corporation without having to pay tax to Revenue Canada when they withdraw their income from it, as the banks do. The minister could get all the money he needed for the Farm Credit Corporation if he treated the individuals who put their money into RRSPs or home ownership or just saved money in the same way as the banks that he criticizes and blames. Why cannot this be done by individuals in the Farm Credit Corporation, Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, small business development, all these areas which are hard hit by the high interest rate policy of this government? If the minister would allow these individuals to invest in a central lending agency without being subject to taxation when they collect their money, you would have all the money you need.

Last year the farming industry had approximately $1.5 billion in interest payments. It will be $2 billion, using the minister's own words, by the end of this year. The farming industry pays this money to carry on business. It does not do it for any other reason. What the minister and his government forget is that Revenue Canada is taxing the people who lend that money. Therefore, we have interest rates of 18 and 20 per cent when it could be 9 per cent or 10 per cent. This is not new to the minister because we have asked him about this in the House, we have written to him, and we have made proposals to the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen). It is nothing new.

Today the minister was asked a question on cattle stabilization. He said in order to get 95 per cent or 100 per cent he would have to go to the cabinet. He told us that his batting average has been pretty lousy lately and that the chances were that he would not be successful. He told us that the cabinet made him go to 16.75 per cent interest for Farm Credit Corporation instead of the 14 per cent he wanted. He said he would just as soon have 90 per cent in cattle stabilization over the last five years because that was in the statute and his cabinet colleagues could not take it away.

In Saskatchewan we have a stabilization plan. I am not sure if the minister is aware of it.

Mr. Whelan: I know that.

Mr. McKnight: The minister says he is aware of it. I also hope he is aware of the consequences of it. It does not help anybody unless he happens to be a commercial feeder. It does not help the cow-calf operator. It does not help the guy who brings in cattle and feeds them on his farm because the plan provides that animals from the cow herd may be custom fed to slaughter while purchased feeders must be finished on the farm. You cannot go to the feed lot with that. It is very well set up! The stabilization fund is very well set up. The stabilization fund will be actuarially sound over time and if the deficit in the fund becomes too large the levy will be increased.

● (1640)

That is like the western grain stabilization fund the minister mentioned earlier, of which he seemed overly proud. When it first came in producers had the option of opting out of the western grain stabilization fund, and the premium was fixed at $500 per producer. A couple of years later producers were locked in and the premium was increased to $900 per producer. Now they are still locked into the fund and the premium is $1,100. That is the history of that fund, and it has been three years since there has been a payout.

Mr. Whelan: The best investment a farmer can make.

Mr. McKnight: The minister says that is the best investment a farmer can make. How can a farmer invest in a grain stabilization plan when he is paying 20 per cent at the bank, does not have any quotas in order to sell his grain and is going broke? How can he pay that?

I will come back to the minister's point about marketing agencies and central selling. There is a central selling agency for grain. In one area of my constituency which is rural and relies on grain production I spoke with a local banker and learned that financing for operating alone three years ago at his bank averaged $21,000 among producers who had operating loans. Today operating loans average $34,000. That is in three years, so I do not know why the minister says central selling is the answer. We have an agency; that is not the problem. The problem is paying $100,000 for a combine at 20 per cent interest, or paying $50,000 for a tractor.

The spokesman for the New Democratic Party spoke about his concern—and we all share it—about laid-off workers at Massey-Ferguson. I think the minister would have mentioned, if he had remembered to do so—and the spokesman for the New Democratic Party forgot as well—that those workers have the cheapest food in any industrialized country. Those workers have increases built into their contract. When they bargain, they bargain for increases every year. What has happened in farming? The reason those workers are out of jobs is that farmers have not been able to buy new machinery. I agree with the hon. member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) that that is a very serious problem. It is serious not just for the farming community but for all of Canada. We have a built-in problem because of the high interest rate policy of this government.

When we talk about what farmers would like, I think I speak for any producer of a product. Farmers would like to take their incomes and wages from the marketplace. They do not want to get their incomes from the minister's department. They do not want to get it from Revenue Canada. The minister agrees with me.

We have heard much about Canagrex, of which the minister is proud. There is tremendous opportunity for the sale of food products produced in this country—and value added—to virtually every country in the world. There is talk about the inflow of American cattle. I have had the same discussion with the minister regarding the inflow of sheep. Presently there is a meat import law before the Standing Committee on Agriculture. Sheep are not dealt with by that law, and we hope the minister will take our suggestion that sheep and mutton be dealt with, because what we see happening to Canadian sheep producers is something which should never happen in a country which has the ability to feed itself. Canada definitely has that ability. Our farmers are productive and hard working. They have initiative, but the government should assist in terms of refereeing and playing the game.

On April 28 the minister said to the Canadian Food Processors Association at Halifax, and I quote:

> Governments don't produce, but they certainly can play a role in your productivity. Government sets the rules and it creates the climate in which private industry plays.

By the minister's own admission, the government is not setting the proper rules, and that is what we would like to have in the form of leadership from this government, and from the Minister of Agriculture in particular. I do not doubt for one minute what the minister said when he was at a meeting in Ontario. I will not quote him unless I can do so accurately. I do not doubt for one minute that the minister said, and I quote: "I won't stay as your Minister of Agriculture if there isn't something done that is practical and workable." I hope that is, as the minister often says, as clear as a bell. I do not doubt that, but why should someone like the Minister of Agriculture have to say that? Over the past nine years he has served the farming community quite well, in some instances. At this time when the farming community and the whole economy suffer because of the high interest rate policy of the government, why should someone like this minister have to leave the cabinet and the government he serves? We will have the answer on November 12. I very much hope the minister will not have to keep his word and resign because if that happens the producers of this country will be in worse shape than they are at present.

An hon. Member: You are being very kind.

Mr. McKnight: One of my colleagues says I am being very kind, but I do not think I am. The minister knows the respect he had in the farming community. He knows it has been eroded over the last two or three years. I am not saying that is the minister's fault, but he knows he has not been able to carry the ball for the farmers of Canada. I am not saying he is not trying. I am saying he does not have the ability to convince his colleagues; or perhaps his colleagues do not understand the problems.

Research and development are very important to the agricultural industry and to Canada as a whole. We in Canada spend 0.9 per cent of our gross national product on research in agriculture. The United States spends about 2.4 per cent. Sweden spends 1.9 per cent, and Japan spends 1.7 per cent. Because of a need to find a type of grain which will respond to bacteria to produce nitrogen—because nitrogen fertilizer costs close to $300 a tonne—the Department of Agriculture funds a research program in Lethbridge. Bob Rennie's research program to inoculate wheat seeds with bacteria so that they are nitrogen-producing is funded by a budget of $20,000. That is less than it cost three cabinet ministers to fly to Winnipeg last Saturday. The price of energy is rising—up to $4 per gallon for diesel fuel—and the cost of nitrogen will increase because of the cost of natural gas. However, only $20,000 is being put into a program which is so vital to the farmers of Canada.

At times we have had differences with the minister, but I must give him credit for one thing. I am sure this has been mentioned to him by some people in his department, but the minister has not yet introduced a program of state ownership for land. I would like to make it clear to the minister why he should not want a program like the one in Saskatchewan called Land Bank. I will give an example. A son rented his father's land from Land Bank after it was sold to them for $120 an acre. Five years later the Land Bank offered to sell it back to the son at $530 an acre. That kind and democratic socialist party which governs Saskatchewan made a profit of some 400 per cent.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. gentleman but his time has expired.

Agriculture

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[Translation]

QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please! It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 40, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: The hon. member for York-Sunbury (Mr. Howie)—VIA Rail—Elimination of Atlantic Limited train service. (b) Request that minister meet New Brunswick representatives; the hon. member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn)—Housing—Sale of houses held by Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation. (b) Sales to investors and speculators; the hon. member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie)—VIA Rail—Effect of cutbacks on western economy.

• (1650)

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[Translation]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 58—ALLEGED FAILURE TO SUPPORT FARMERS

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Mayer:

That this House, noting the disastrous increase in farm bankruptcies, condemns this government for its continuing failure to support Canada's farmers, and its inability to curtail the devastation high interest rates are bringing to Canada's agriculture section.

Mr. Marcel Ostiguy (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I listened to the two previous opposition speakers speak to the motion introduced by the member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer), which reads as follows:

That this House, noting the disastrous increase in farm bankruptcies, condemns this government for its continuing failure to support Canada's farmers, and its inability to curtail the devastation high interest rates are bringing to Canada's agriculture section.

Mr. Speaker, from this motion, moved by the hon. member for Portage-Marquette, it is clear that this opposition day will be used to discuss agriculture, a very appropriate subject for debate in this House in a country like ours. However, I feel that time is of the essence for this House, and the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) pointed this out just now when he said that a bill had already been tabled in this House in 1979, and that since then, there had been two elections, the business of the House had been delayed fairly regularly, and this particular bill, a bill to amend the Farm Credit Act, had not been able to materialize.

Mr. Speaker, I believe the sudden rise in interest rates actually occurred after the bill was tabled in 1979. There is no doubt that for farmers, entrepreneurs, small and medium-sized businesses, home owners who face mortgage renewal, in fact for all Canadians, interest rates are high, and that we have galloping inflation. But, as the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen) says almost every day during question period, high interest rates are the only way to fight inflation. We all know that the Farm Credit Corporation recently had to raise its interest rates to 16¾ per cent, which is still two, three, even four per cent less than the interest rates charged to small and medium-sized businesses. The Minister of Agriculture has just outlined also all the benefits and all the help given to Canadian farmers through stabilization payments to hog producers and potato growers, and recently to apple growers. The government must intervene on a regular basis under its stabilization insurance program.

The Farm Credit Corporation has been administering the Farm Credit Act for over 22 years. During that time it has made about 147,500 loans worth $5.1 billion all told. Thanks to its long-term credit programs it has been one of the most important factors which has enabled Canadian farmers to boost their agricultural output and increase their efficiency over the last two decades. That corporation has granted in excess of 60 per cent of the long-term farm credit in recent years. The remainder came from provincial organizations, banks, credit unions, caisses populaires and private individuals.

Mr. Speaker, I represent a riding in the province of Quebec—Saint-Hyacinthe-Bagot—which is indeed the garden of the province, perhaps second to your riding, Mr. Speaker. Two or three years ago farm land used to sell for $1,000 or $1,200 an acre, but last week a young farmer told me he had just bought a farm which cost him $3,500 an acre. In other words, the price of farms is inflated. And since 1973, the number of long-term farm loans has increased by almost 20 per cent each year and it is expected in some quarters that it could double between 1978 and 1981 to reach $2 million. During the last year for which complete statistics are available, that is 1980-81, the Farm Credit Corporation has approved 4,680 loans for a total of $508.8 million and the regional distribution of those funds for 1980-81 is as follows: British Columbia, 175 loans, $21 million; Alberta, 640 loans, $71 million; Saskatchewan, 1,346 loans, $128 million; Manitoba, 470 loans, $47 million; Ontario, 1,084 loans, $138 million; Quebec, 742 loans, $81 million, the Atlantic provinces, 229 loans for a total of $20 million and in all, $508,885,200 representing 4,686 loans.

What is amazing, Mr. Speaker, is that most of the approved loans were granted to persons under 35 years of age. Their share remained relatively constant around 70 per cent over the last three years. We often hear opposition members say that young people cannot afford to take up farming. Yet, 70 per cent of the funds I mentioned a while ago were paid to young farmers of under 35, and God knows, Mr. Speaker, that in the province of Quebec it is the young people who are going back to the farm. Once again, I feel the Farm Credit Corporation has done more than its share in helping to finance over the long term those young farmers who want to settle on the land. Three per cent of the loans approved were granted under the young farmers' loan program, or the one that allows the borrowers to keep a job outside the farm.

• (1700)

This program, which has been changed by means of the regulations of the Farm Credit Corporation these last few years, enables a young farmer to get a loan and settle down on a farm while keeping his job for a period of three to five years. We still often see, at least in Quebec, young farmers and their wives who keep an outside job while they own a farm and who slowly increase their herds and equip their farm so that they can leave their outside job after three to five years and devote all their time to farming.

About 27.9 per cent of the loans approved last year were used to purchase additional land compared with 29.8 per cent during the previous year. The loans granted for other purposes may be listed under the following categories: new units, 24.4 per cent; permanent improvements, 16.5 per cent; mortgage debts, 12.3 per cent; other debts, 12 per cent; equipment, 2.3 per cent; livestock 2.2 per cent; and miscellaneous, 2.4 per cent.

The repayment record of farmers has remained good in 1980-81. Out of $75.2 million due last year, 89.4 per cent had been repaid, and the farmers have also repaid $52.2 million on the principal not yet due. Moreover, during the year, 91.9 per cent of the $279.1 million in due interest was paid. At the end of the last fiscal year, 93 per cent of all FCC active accounts were in order compared with 93.2 per cent the previous year and 90 per cent in 1979-80. That just shows, Mr. Speaker, that there are certainly problems, as we have heard from the other side, but I think that what our friends opposite would have the Canadian people believe are horror stories. They use every means at their disposal to exaggerate the crisis in agriculture. I was looking at the figures quite recently, and if I recall correctly, under 200 farmers went bankrupt in Canada last year.

If one compares this figure with the number of small and medium-sized businesses that have and have had difficulties, one can see that the Canadian farmer, like any Canadian citizen, is a good manager. He manages his farm with his family, and what he needs is of course credit, but also assistance to market his product and assistance to get through difficult or disastrous periods. And I believe that the Department of Agriculture provided some $112 million to hog producers last spring under its stabilization program.

Real losses on loans have increased—I hope our friends opposite are listening—real losses on loans have increased by $1.5 million, which represents .04 per cent of the Farm Credit

Corporation's envelope. During the first six months of the current fiscal year, the Farm Credit Corporation approved 3,500 loans for a total of nearly $360 million, and according to our projections the total budget for the year will be close to $460 million. Only approximate figures can be given, since a large part of the total budget of the Farm Credit Corporation is made up of repayments or advance payments made by borrowers.

Mr. Speaker, so far this year, loans have been used mainly to purchase additional land, with purchases of new farm units coming a close second. However, the number of loans granted to consolidate debts has increased considerably because of the difficult situation brought about by high interest rates, which rose from 24.8 per cent on March 31, 1980 to 27.1 per cent on September 30, 1981. However, Mr. Speaker, we still see Canadian farmers who are consolidating their units and buying additional land and farms. We see this every day in every province, and in any case in Quebec, farmers buy land from one, two or three neighbours to considerably expand the size of their farms. While the number of farmers is decreasing, actual farm acreage is stable or rising, and each year shows a sizeable increase.

The Farm Credit Corporation knows for a fact that credit productivity is directly related to the managerial ability of the borrower, and that effective farm management has become tremendously important during the last two years because of fluctuating interest rates. However, the work of the Corporation and the Department of Agriculture goes even further, since last spring and last summer, Mr. Speaker, the Department of Agriculture helped Canfarm to get back on its feet so that Canadian farmers could continue to benefit from the bookkeeping assistance provided by Canfarm, to improve management of their farm operations.

The Corporation makes available upon request advisory services on a voluntary basis to all its current and former borrowers. The purpose of these services is to dispense advice in the areas of organization, planning and administration to help family farms reach their economic and personal goals. As of March 31, 1981, some 2,742 borrowers were availing themselves of these services and others will probably do likewise. There is also the Farm Syndicates Credit Act. Its purpose is to provide financial assistance to farmers who want to join forces to fight against rising costs which individual farmers have to meet when they seek to purchase farm appliances, buildings and stationary equipment, through loans which may be granted to groups of three farmers or more up to a maximum of $100,000 or $15,000 per qualified farmer, whichever is the smaller.

For the year 1980-81, Mr. Speaker, the Farm Credit Corporation has granted to the above mentioned people 169 loans for a total of $4.8 million. Up to this year, we have witnessed a marked increase in the demand for loans of this type, and one of the reasons appears to be the rising costs of specialized equipment over the past few years.

• (1710)

Concerning the point raised by opposition members about farm failures, I would like to say a few words and give reasonably accurate figures. From 1979 to 1980, the number of farm bankruptcies across Canada increased from 124 to 220. According to the figures for the second quarter of 1981, there has been to date 191 farm bankruptcies, a 16.5 per cent increase over last year. In 1979-80, 32 farmers who had borrowed from the Farm Credit Corporation went bankrupt, compared with 56 in 1980-81. And as of September 30, 1981, 41 borrowers from the Farm Credit Corporation have gone bankrupt. Those figures, Mr. Speaker, are for all of Canada, for all provinces. We have no hesitation in recognizing the seriousness of the situation, and of course official bankruptcies are only part of the total failures in the farming community. There are others. You must not forget, however, that the latter represent only a small proportion of the total farm population, because a good many farmers, even if they are faced with high interest rates—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but the time allotted to him has expired.

[English]

Mr. Bert Hargrave (Medicine Hat): Mr. Speaker, initially I want to say that the opposition motion before us today is timely and appropriate. It provides all of us who are actively involved in agriculture with an opportunity to comment frankly and honestly on the state of each of our special interests in agriculture. This is what I propose to do. The motion pinpoints the issues which dominate every sector of the Canadian agricultural economy today—the devastation of high interest rates, the increasing cost of production, and generally increasing inflation.

The hon. member for Elgin (Mr. Wise), a former minister of agriculture, is presently serving as a member of an Ontario provincial task force on agriculture. I visited with him last week concerning the public meetings which he helped to conduct. Recently he commented that the hearings throughout Ontario are very revealing in terms of what is troubling Ontario farmers. They reveal that the interrelated issues of interest rates, increasing production costs, inadequate market prices and ongoing inflation are first and foremost. Heading the list of commodity groups in real trouble are beef cattle and hogs. The Ontario agricultural task force has struck a sounding board for all Canadian agriculture, especially the cattle industry.

This afternoon I intend to discuss my special responsibility—and I am sure some hon. members will say that it is my labour of love—Canada's beef cattle industry. First I should like to make some background comments on the total cattle industry. Many of my comments apply to the United States beef cattle industry as well.

There are two beef cattle sectors which are in serious trouble today and were over most of 1980 as well. They are the cow-calf, grass yearling producers in western Canada and cattle feeders in Ontario and the west, especially cattle feeders in Alberta. The concerns of cattle producers are: the aftermath of the western drought which took place in 1977, 1980, and the first part of 1981; interest rates; increasing cost of production; worsening inflation; and live fat cattle imports for the first half of the year from the United States of America.

Our cattle feeders are probably more acutely aware of the interest rate disaster and feed grain costs—and I mean by that barley in the west and corn in Ontario—in addition to the other factors I mentioned for producers. Fed cattle prices have been at or below—and I would say mostly below—the cost of production throughout most of 1980 and all of 1981 to date. This is not because of the overproduction of domestic live cattle and beef which we experienced in 1975, 1976 and throughout most of 1977.

The current situation is different. Canadian beef cattle numbers and supplies have been at the bottom of their respective cycles for the last four years. This is where it differs from the other years I have mentioned. There has been no genuine incentive to expand breeding herds in the face of the short and long-term realities I have already mentioned. There is not an oversupply of beef in Canada today. However, throughout 1980 and 1981 to date there have been record supplies of meat, that is, beef, pork and poultry. This is true in both Canada and the United States. Our meat prices reflect this situation.

During the spring of 1980 most hon. members will remember that hog prices were less than half cattle and beef prices at both the farm gate and in retail stores. Consumers reacted quickly and predictably by backing away from the most expensive food today, beef, and settled for the cheaper meat supplies of pork and poultry. The result was that cattle prices and consumption declined rather rapidly, pork and poultry prices and consumption increased quite dramatically. All three commodity price levels are now much more closely grouped. We have not experienced this situation for many years. It will likely continue under the intense inflationary pressures and fierce competition for the consumer food dollar of which we are all so conscious today.

I should like to refer to the current situation. In retrospect it is easy to say that Canadian cattle feeders paid too much for their yearlings, and especially for their calves in the fall of 1980. This is true both in southern Alberta and in Ontario. Today, approximately a year later, Alberta and Ontario feeders have two alternatives. They can buy at lower prices, perhaps substantially lower than last year, or they can suspend feeding over the coming winter. I am sure feeders in the west and in Ontario are seriously considering these options, even as late as it is this season. Some Alberta feeders may very well do this, but Ontario feeders may not be able to do so. In spite of recent severe losses, cattle feeders may have difficulty justifying lower bid prices for feeder calves in the face of the anticipated all-time high record production of barley in Alberta and corn in Ontario and the consequential expected lower feed grain prices.

Grass and hay supplies across southern Alberta and southwestern Saskatchewan are excellent. The grass is the best I have seen since 1953; it is even better than it was in that good year. These conditions are a wonderful and welcome turnaround from last spring when there was a severe drought right at our doorstep. These conditions may encourage cattlemen to hold their yearlings, especially their calves, until late November, hoping for a higher price, or even into January and February of next year before selling them. As recently as a month ago I predicted lower feeder cattle prices in the early fall, strengthening in late November and December, and holding firm into the first quarter of 1982. After about two weeks of the larger calf sales in Alberta and in southwestern Saskatchewan, we now know that calf prices are significantly lower than a year ago.

I want to give some examples of actual calf sales over the last two weeks. Good steer calves in southeastern Alberta and in southwestern Saskatchewan, weighing approximately 450 to 500 pounds—and these are in large lots—are selling from $71 per hundredweight to a top of $74, with comparable quality heifers selling at approximately $12 per hundredweight lower. In the Fort Macleod area of southwestern Alberta their earlier prices were somewhat stronger, perhaps $2 stronger but with the same wide spread to heifer calves. The indications today are that they have pretty well settled down to that same level and the same wide spread is applied to heifer calves.

● (1720)

Ontario calf buyers are obviously remembering last year's extravagance and are bidding much lower and buying considerably fewer calves at this date. It is quite possible that the late Ontario corn harvest, due to extremely wet corn fields, could be at least a partial explanation of what I would call their careful and guarded buying pattern for western calves. The major explanation must surely be, however, that Ontario calf buyers are aware that the interest on a $350 calf—and that is the present cost that I just mentioned—at 20 per cent comes to $70. That amount has to cover their cost for the 12-month period which is needed to winter and grow out a calf and fatten it to slaughter weight approximately one year from now. At this date, early November, western calf sellers are acutely aware that calves are selling for about $100 per head lower than a year ago, yet their production costs are considerably higher.

I should like to say a few words now about beef imports and GATT, Mr. Speaker. Live fat cattle imports from the U.S.A. to Ontario for the first half of this year prevented any hope of a fed cattle price recovery this year. It was last summer's 80-cent Canadian dollar that finally halted these imports, but recently they have resumed although at a more modest level. At the moment the average is about 929 head per week, over the last seven weeks. For a number of weeks last spring the average was from 5,000 to 7,000 head per week. I am speaking of live fat cattle coming in from the United States. That killed our fed cattle market at that time. Not only did it depress the market in Ontario but it had an impact on every market in Canada.

The minister's meat import legislation, or Bill C-46, is still in committee and the last witness will be heard tomorrow. The real usefulness of this proposed legislation has been significantly limited, however, by the last Tokyo Round of the GATT negotiations. Our Canadian negotiators were clearly outmanoeuvred when they agreed to a guaranteed minimum access level of imports which was arrived at by using Canadian cattle population figures at their all-time high level, that is, at the top of our cattle cycle. In addition, we agreed to a human population growth factor that no other GATT trading partner was asked to accept, certainly not the United States.

Canadian cattle producers are very concerned about the implications of the GATT limitations because they destroy any real indication of a long-term incentive to increase our beef cattle breeding herd numbers. We have been sitting at the bottom of the cycle for four years, and given the implications of low markets and high interest rates, I would say we will sit there for another two years. This is causing some producers to think of getting out of the cattle industry altogether.

I am not impressed with the recent Senate report on alternatives for a Canadian beef cattle marketing system. At best, it is a hurry-up assessment by a confirmed supply management author, Max Roytenberg, that completely ignores the real challenge to governments and to our cattle industry. This challenge must surely be to find a way to allow our present free market to function without the risk of loss of access to the American cattle and beef market. That is the challenge that should have been addressed, not that of selling supply management to the Canadian beef cattle industry.

I have tried to give the House a factual and sincere appraisal of our beef cattle industry today. I do not exaggerate when I say that some producers and feeders have already given up and others are in a critical and urgent position, bordering on desperation. The minister is well aware of this situation—I know he is—so I say to him now that out of this cattle crisis, and it is a crisis, surely some good could emerge. Agriculture Canada and the minister himself could regain some of the high profile, prestige and indeed leadership that has been noticeably absent over the last several years.

I should like to lay a short term, emergency program before the House and the minister, Mr. Speaker. The minister already has the necessary federal legislation to act now under the Agricultural Stabilization Act. I urge him to begin immediately the necessary planning for a national cattle and beef harmonized stabilization program under the federal act with the following component parts.

First, it should involve three groups, the federal and provincial governments of the cattle-producing provinces and the cattle producers. It should be a three-way partnership approach. Second, there should be specific cost-sharing by the three groups. Ways must be found to allow cattle producers to contribute their share, somewhat like the grain stabilization program, using numbers of cattle instead of acres and/or bushels. I am sure the minister knows what I mean.

Third and most important, the immediate objective should be a 1981 stabilization payout based on 95 per cent of the previous five-year average market price, with a cost of production increment calculated by quarterly averages. In his remarks this afternoon, the minister indicated that a 95 per cent payout would not be worth while. I am sure he knows that if it were claculated on a quarterly basis it would be a little better. If we have to move to 100 per cent, as the minister mentioned, that can be arrived at as well when we get the three component groups working together. Something must be done. The actual cost of this first payout should be shared equally between the federal and provincial governments. I feel certain that the needs of the cattle industry are such that the cattle provinces would move on this. I refer to Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario and, we hope, British Columbia, which has its own top-loaded program which may or may not allow it to move. If there is to be cost-sharing Saskatchewan would be glad to join.

I would quickly add that for political reasons the provinces cannot wait. Only two months are left to the end of this year and I am sure some provinces will be forced to plan a provincial subsidy to cover 1981.

It seems obvious that there is a need now to halt any further balkanization of our cattle industry. We have heard that term frequently and I think it is a good one. Balkanization is what has been happening. This program should have been started a year ago when there were signs that a national stabilization program was necessary. Let us not fail this time. This proposal is the best way to accomplish that objective.

Finally, and briefly, I would like to remind the minister of two other long-term policy proposals. The other one that I have been dwelling on rather pointedly is for the short-term, emergency situation, but two long-term policy proposals have been advanced by cattle producers and I am sure the minister is aware of them.

The first one is the income averaging trust suggestion which has been well documented by the Canadian Cattlemen's Association. This would be an individual stabilization plan to allow tax-free income from the good years to be used in the lean years when they would be taxed. This is just a common sense approach. The plan would also allow for tax deferrals for investing long-term improvement of the cattle industry itself, and I suggest this be done on an individual basis. After all, it is a well accepted principle.

• (1730)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but I must advise him that his allotted time has expired. He may continue with unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Hargrave: Mr. Speaker, I thank hon. members for their indulgence. As I was saying, this procedure that I have been talking about was allowed for oil and gas exploration and for Canadian-made movies. Why should it not apply to our cattle industry in its hour of need? I think this proposal should be looked at.

The second suggestion is patterned after a U.S. agricultural bond market which is designed to provide lower interest rates to farmers. Agriculture producer credit associations would issue bonds to raise money. Interest paid on such bonds would be several points below bank rates, but the bond investor is taxed at a much lower rate on the bond interest received. The producer credit association then lends money to farmers at 3 per cent to as much as 4 per cent below prime. Both of these long-term policy suggestions could help restore some confidence in our cattle industry, which today is almost non-existent.

Mr. Robert Bockstael (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I want to speak about the Farm Credit Corporation and how it helps to increase productivity in agriculture.

One of the current expressed desires of the government is to increase the levels of productivity of all sectors, and especially agriculture. With reference to the Farm Credit Corporation, its contribution to the productivity of agriculture can be itemized to show that through the FCC lending programs, the Government of Canada has made, and will continue to make, sound and wise investments in Canadian agriculture.

Canada has the resources and technology to produce food in excess of its needs. With a growing world population and the inability of many other countries to produce adequate food because of environmental conditions, social turmoil or inadequate resources, Canada can and will play an even more important role as a food exporting nation during the next few years when a worldwide food shortage crisis is being projected. However, in order to do that, Canada must maintain its present equilibrium in agriculture. Government policy has supported this equilibrium with programs such as those administered by the FCC, the Canadian Dairy Commission, the Canadian Wheat Board, the Agricultural Stabilization Board and crop insurance, all of which provide the stability within which the agricultural sector can function.

The Farm Credit Corporation has been an important component of this stabilizing force. With a total of over $3.3 billion outstanding on over 72,500 loans at fixed terms for up to 30 years, Canadian farmers have at least some of their credit insulated from the volatile interest rates which have been seen during the last 12 months or projected for the future.

From 1975 to 1979, productivity increases averaged 3.3 per cent per year in agriculture, and this is higher than in any other goods-producing industry. Data collected by the Farm Credit Corporation indicate that FCC loans for farm consolidation or expansion, farm improvement, purchase of capital items and debt restructuring have been an important factor in increasing farm productivity. Furthermore, by helping to solve their financing problems, the FCC has ensured that an adequate number of people have remained in the agricultural sector even when other sectors were progressing rapidly and attracting more and more people.

Assuming that financial success is a good indication of an increase in productivity, we wish to submit the following considerations. Of approximately 2,000 farmers who were refused an FCC loan in 1980-1981 because they had sufficient resources to borrow funds from private institutions, 65 per cent were previous FCC borrowers who had made an evident success of their farm operation.

An analysis of FCC data indicates that FCC loans contribute to the productivity of a farm and to the increased welfare of farmers. In 1980-1981, gross farm incomes before the loan averaged $61,800 and after the loan they averaged $96,500.

In assessing loan applications, the FCC requires that the applicant submit realistic plans that indicate the farm unit under his farm management will generate an income sufficient to meet all obligations as well as provide a reasonable standard of living. FCC credit advisers are very often a positive factor in improving these plans and in ensuring that the farm unit will be viable and more productive after the loan is granted.

Suggestions have been made that the FCC should have conditions similar to those of the private sector. It is my understanding that a Crown corporation is intended to provide an important service to individuals whom the private sector is unable to serve properly and continuously, and in order to do this, a Crown corporation must maintain all of its specific advantages. I submit that the FCC should continue to offer lower interest rates, because of lower administration cost and lower profits, fixed interest rates, advisory services, special collection policy, etc. It is only fair that young and beginning farmers and average operators of family farms be provided with these advantages if this government is going to continue to support the family farm as the most efficient means of agricultural production in the country.

The primary objective of Farm Credit Corporation Canada is to provide long-term farm credit and advisory services in order to develop viable farm operations so that agriculture can provide farmers with a fair return on their capital investment, labour and skills and so that agriculture can make its greatest contribution to the Canadian economy.

The Farm Credit Corporation provides much more than loans to farmers. During the recent periods of bad weather, escalating interest rates and depressed periods of bad weather, escalating interest rates and depressed prices for some commodities, the minister suggested to the FCC that it give extra consideration to farmers facing financial difficulty and to assist them where possible. This was done, and many farms were permitted to continue regular operations instead of going through the crisis of a foreclosure, and thus the average productivity of agriculture has been maintained.

The FCC directs its credit to young and beginning farmers. In 1980-1981, 70 per cent of all FCC borrowers were under 35 years of age, and this trend will continue in the present fiscal year. The FCC continues to be a very important factor in the smooth passage of a farm from one generation to the next and most of the time within the same family. This maintains the family farm as the main system of agricultural production in Canada, and such a system has been proven to be better than any other. Furthermore, by offering an efficient method of succession, the loss of productivity that we witness on farms that have to go through prolonged estate contention is eliminated.

For the last four years, the FCC has not required an appropriation from Parliament and, furthermore, it has contributed profits to increase the equity of Canada. Present projections indicate that the level of profit should increase progressively in the future.

• (1740)

These are some of the more tangible elements indicating the contribution of the Farm Credit Corporation to the productivity of Canadian agriculture. There are many intangible contributions. For example, the farm and financial management counselling by FCC credit advisers contributes to the successful investment plans of many farmers who visit FCC but are not given a loan. These credit advisers are highly respected by the farming community, bankers, provincial credit and agricultural extension people, as well as others. When the small farm development program was initiated, the FCC was asked to administer the program because of its competent network of staff distributed throughout all the agricultural communities in Canada.

The corporation hopes to be in a position to offer beginning farmers a loan program better adopted to their restricted cash flow during the start-up period. We would do this by reducing initial payments for a maximum period of three years and then reamortizing their debt over the remaining term of the loan. This program would be complemented by intensive advisory services in the area of agricultural financing.

The FCC will continue to examine on a case-to-case basis the situation of many young farmers who are currently in financial distress because of high interest rates, and we will offer assistance whenever a practical solution is possible. We hope that Canadian farmers will take maximum advantage of the services offered by the FCC. We are convinced that this will allow Canada to successfully face the challenges of the 1980s and enhance its excellent reputation in the world as a major agricultural power. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Murray Cardiff (Huron-Bruce): Mr. Speaker, I was about to say that I rise with pleasure to speak on this motion, but I wonder how it could be a pleasure to speak on a motion such as this which relates to so many of our farmers who are in the plight they face today. We know there has been a dramatic increase in the percentage of farm bankruptcies, but few in relation to the actual number of farmers that exist. We have heard the figure of 1 per cent in this regard, but we know that is not a correct assessment of the situation. Perhaps the statistics indicate that, but there are some areas in Canada and in Ontario where the problems are greater. We do have regions in the province of Ontario capable of growing various crops. It appears that our red meat industry is in much more difficulty than some segments of agriculture producing selected cash crops. Some of them have done extremely well this year. A great part of Ontario agriculture is made up of mixed farming, including beef, pork, poultry, dairy and other products.

The plight of the farmer who is losing his equity daily because of high interest rates being paid to the banks or feed companies never seems to be brought to the attention of this government. These farmers face the inability to raise credit and often have to get credit wherever they can find it, often from a feed company or a feed manufacturer. These farmers are paying as much as 30 per cent interest on their credit.

We are also aware of some farmers who are working under quota management supply system, yet are still facing severe problems. I know the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) is aware of the case of one individual I have in mind who has suffered various degrees of distress over the last two or three years. He had a fire in his operation not too long ago and a personal accident in his family. This has set his family back somewhat. He built new facilities, and during the past year he had to sell some of his milk quota in order to carry on. At the present time he is trying to find ways of keeping his family farm viable. His two sons are ready and willing to take over but cannot raise the necessary capital.

Many beef and cash crop farmers were in very good financial shape two, three or five years ago. As a result, they have borrowed more money over the years and now find themselves in the position of being unable to handle the interest rate. They have been borrowing on a floating interest rate which has turned out to be devastating.

I do not know when we developed this idea of having a floating interest rate. It looked good at one time, but we certainly can see its bad effects today. No major company would enter into long-term debt without selling debentures at a fixed rate. In this way the company knows what its costs will be for the term of the debt. I do not know why we find ourselves in the present situation with the floating interest rate policy. Perhaps this is a banking problem that comes under bank legislation, but the problem does exist and I do not know how to correct it.

Some banks have been more than willing over the past few years to make loans at fixed interest rates. Other banks have discouraged this or have actually refused. I know of instances in the last year when fixed interest rates loans were not available even for capital expenditures or the refinancing of mortgages on agricultural lands.

There are many feedlot producers in my part of Ontario who are at present facing a crisis. The minister is aware of some of these cases because he has visited that part of Ontario quite often. He knows what is happening there. Many of our feedlot operators and livestock producers are not going to be able to carry on. There are dozens and dozens of operators within 20 minutes of where I live who are not going to be financially able to put livestock back on their feedlots, or keep their hog barns full. This situation has a devastating effect in the area and across the country. Many Ontario farmers have gone to areas such as Medicine Hat and other parts of the western provinces to purchase livestock, so these problems will have a flowback effect.

Most farms in our area are family farms. I think most farms in Canada are family farms. Most of them are unincorporated. Many of these farmers in the past have hired labour, but in the last 18 months this has changed. Farmers and agricultural producers cannot afford to hire labour. They would like to have more people working on the farms but this is just not economically possible.

Farming can be a good and rewarding life provided the operation is viable. In recent years we have often seen young children, the sons and daughters of farmers out driving the tractors and operating farm equipment. I think all hon. members know the cost of tractors and other farm equipment today. They are making use of those young people who really should not have that responsibility at their young age. I have seen young children, 11 or 12 years of age, as well as the wife working on the farm.

• (1750)

I believe farmers are doing their best to try to overcome this crisis. It is very discouraging for a farmer who works a full year, plants a crop in the spring, tends to his livestock in the barns and does everything right, but when he goes to market he finds he has less money at the end of that year. The result of that is that he has lost large amounts of equity in the operation which he has built up over a lifetime.

Agricultural producers have always had what they thought was inexpensive food. That is the producers' belief; consumers may hold a different view. It may seem like a lot of money to pay $15 for a roast, but if they were to drive up the street to a gas station to fill up with gas, it would cost anywhere from $25 to $35, depending on the car and where they are travelling to.

It seems we have an oversupply of pork and beef which is also creating a crisis. However, we also have cost increases in fertilizer, seed, pesticides, fuel and other input costs which hurt the producers' profitability. Although that may not be the real cause of the crisis, those costs are there and getting greater all the time.

Whenever a farmer has to buy a repair part or new machinery, the price has gone up another 10 per cent. This happens perhaps three or four times a year. New machinery today costs at least $20,000, and many pieces of equipment cost upward of $75,000 to $140,000. I do not believe that is the real cause of our crisis situation today, either. The crisis we are in results from the interest rates we are faced with today.

Farmers have control over some of the things they purchase but they do not have control of the interest rate they pay. If farmers are going to produce food for Canadians and citizens of other countries in this world, which they are capable of doing and wish to do, the high interest rate policy cannot continue. Farmers cannot continue to pay the high interest rates today.

Most farmers today have no choice but to borrow money. They have to borrow their operating capital on a floating loan, and if they are to stay in agriculture they have no choice but to take the money on the bank's terms. They have no other way of doing it. Quite often they cannot liquidate any of their debts because of floating interest rates.

Farmers would not have to borrow on a floating rate if the government would put an end to that policy. This amendment could be made to the bank legislation, and it should be discussed at a finance meeting as well.

The hon. member who spoke before me talked about farm credit loans made to a number of farmers to increase their land base and about the fact that farmers felt they had to take out these loans to stay competitive. I would suggest that most farmers in the area which I represent are refinancing or trying to refinance just to hang on to what they have. There are many farmers who cannot last. They have to buy their seed, fertilizer, and other items I have mentioned on short-term operating credit. This year the long-term financing through the Farm Credit Corporation has gone up to 16.75 per cent, and it is more elsewhere. In some cases there is no medium-term financing available. Even a Farm Credit loan at 14 per cent is not a workable situation for many of our farmers.

Most of our producers used to look at farm credit as a means of staying in production. I believe we have very devoted producers who are willing to take a lot less, and have taken a lot less, just to maintain their home and family operations. Even for those who, I believe, will be fortunate enough to get a loan at 16.75 per cent, it will be extremely difficult at today's prices to carry on their farming business. As a result, I think this year we are going to see another severe loss of equity after our crops are harvested. Corn is coming off in Ontario at approximately $2.85 a bushel. That certainly does not meet the cost of production.

Farm machinery dealerships will be in difficulty again. Farmers will not be able to purchase machinery, and if they do, they will not be able to pay for it. Farmers who are desperate to stay in business will do almost anything. They will obtain financing at the farm dealership or anywhere they can, and in some of these cases the dealerships will have to repossess the machinery. If dealerships go out of business, it will have a severe effect on manufacturers such as Massey-Ferguson and White. I would like to see these companies stay viable as well.

The small-business men in the farming communities are also being hurt by high interest rates. Businessmen in small towns such as mine cannot keep the stock they used to have. They are feeling the severe effects as well because the farmer can no longer afford to use their services to make the small purchases or repairs on his farm equipment. He would rather try some other means of getting by in the meantime. The interest rate policy of this government is having a devastating effect not only on the farmer but also on our businessmen on the main street. It will eventually hit our cities just as hard.

The town of Goderich, for instance, with a population of 6,000 has a good industrial base. It has a harbour that can load ocean-going vessels with salt and grain which comes in from Thunder Bay and other centres in western Ontario. The main square in Goderich has had 11 of its businesses close in the last 12 to 15 months.

The government has said that high interest rates are temporary. Farmers have tried to hang on, but interest rates have been too high for too long.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): It being six o'clock, I do now leave the chair until eight o'clock this evening.

At 6 p.m. the House took recess.

[English]

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 8 p.m.

Mr. Cardiff: Mr. Speaker, earlier today the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) said that the businesses which are hurting most are beef producers, which have a free market. That is probably true, but if we had a free international market, our beef would probably be selling in Toyko or somewhere at $25 a pound. However, we do not have a free money market. As farmers we have no opportunity to borrow money except under the policies of this Liberal government. We have no choice but to borrow money under the present economic policy.

Another hon. member spoke briefly about the Farm Credit Corporation, its contribution to agriculture and how it has served. It probably has, but that was yesterday. This is today, we need changes to the Farm Credit Corporation and we need them now. We need them now because the corporation is outdated. It is like buying a tractor not equipped with hydraulics.

We know that Bill C-46, a bill to change the meat import law, is almost completed. I urge the Minister of Agriculture to deal with the current economic situation facing farmers in this country and to take this problem to the Standing Committee on Agriculture along with the Farm Credit Corporation legislation. These matters need immediate attention today because we are swiftly losing our farmers. Small bankruptcies usually produce large bankruptcies.

I would like hon. members to remember that agriculture serves us, consumers, at least three times a day.

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Dionne (Chicoutimi): Mr. Speaker, I am also very pleased to speak on this subject because it concerns the Farm Credit Corporation, of which a study has been made during the last four years. As you probably know, the government tabled a bill in the House in the spring of 1979, which would have brought about important changes in the Farm Credit Corporation's program. Since then, two elections have held up the process considerably. Nevertheless, we shall soon be in a position to submit to the government the proposed amendments to the Farm Credit Act. Without wishing to anticipate on the discussions that are still going on, I would like to submit some of the general principles we are advocating.

Many of the proposed changes are aimed at improving the program's administration, but I wish to concentrate on one important change which will allow the Farm Credit Corporation to borrow money from the private sector. If Section 13 of the Farm Credit Act is amended, the Farm Credit Corporation, with the approval of the Minister of Finance, will be authorized to borrow part of its funds on the financial market. The Farm Credit Corporation would, however, continue to have access to the Consolidated Revenue Fund. Its capital would be increased to bring its loan capacity beyond its present level of $3.5 billion. As of March 31, 1981, the Corporation was considered to have borrowed some $3,300,000. If the total demand for long-term farm credit reaches $2 billion during the next two years, as projected, the Farm Credit Corporation will have to make frequent use of the Consolidated Revenue Fund if it is to meet its share of the demand. Once it is authorized to borrow part of its funds on the private market, the Farm Credit Corporation will be able to reduce its demands on the Consolidated Revenue Fund, while being better able to meet demand for long-term credit, notwithstanding annual fluctuations.

An adequate supply of credit must be available to farmers in order to provide for rational development of the farming community and for the transfer of farms from one generation to the next. With the food industry, agriculture is responsible for 14 per cent of the actual domestic product in the industrial sector.

Do you know that Canadian consumers spend more than $30 billion on food, and that this is only 18 per cent of their annual income? Mr. Speaker, I should like to point out the very considerable efficiency of the agricultural sector and its dynamic position at the world level. Comparing world figures, agriculture is one of Canada's most effective activity sectors. Young farmers who take over the family farm or who have to acquire more land to make their operations profitable must have access to long-term credit, in order to be able to compete with other potential buyers of land. The fact is that the cost of buying farmland is increasing from year to year. Figures from the Canada Farm Credit Corporation on land purchases show that the value of farmland has increased by 158.5 per cent between June 1972 and July 1978, and this trend is continuing. Farmers are obliged to invest more and more money in their operations. Farming is becoming more and more a matter of increased mechanization and economies of scale. Production costs have obliged farmers to spread over a longer period of time capital improvements, that should be done in the short term. Borrowing as an agent of Her Majesty, the Corporation should have no trouble borrowing part of its funds on the financial market. The Export Development Corporation is already doing so very successfully. However, the Corporation might be forced to change the conditions under which it now lends to farmers.

● (2010)

To be able to attract the necessary capital investments from the private sector without changing substantially its rate of interest to farmers, the Corporation might have to offer shorter-term bonds. It now borrows for a term of 20 years, but the proposed changes could also force it to borrow for five and ten-year terms. This could force the Corporation to review periodically its interest rates to make the terms of its bonds coincide with those of its loans to farmers. These loans from the private sector could lead to a slightly higher rate than that offered under the present formula. It could prove necessary to increase or lower periodically the mortgage rate of the Corporation. The interest rate, the terms and conditions of the loan will be set so as to cover lending and administration costs while allowing for sufficient funds in reserve as an insurance against losses. While the terms and conditions of the loans granted by the Corporation could then be less attractive than at the present time, I know for a fact that the agricultural community would support any government initiative to increase long-term credit supply at reasonable rates and to guarantee the future profitability of Canadian agriculture.

The proposed changes are the result of many letters which we have received from farmers, farm organization advisory committees to the Farm Credit Corporation, provincial agriculture departments and Members of Parliament. All of these recommended an increase in long-term credit available to farmers. The Farm Credit Corporation of Canada contributes to the stability and profitability of the family farm by allowing it to make the technological changes necessary to increase its efficiency. Figures from the Farm Credit Corporation prove that family farm operators have used credit to guarantee the success of their operations. For this to continue, they will need adequate long-term credit. I know what Canadian farmers have done in the past and what they can do in the future if they are provided with the tools they need. I know that they will continue to operate family farms successfully and to improve the efficiency of their operations.

I also know that the Farm Credit Act is a tool which will enable them to continue to produce high quality food products as efficiently as the farmers of any other country. I also know, Mr. Speaker, that if, as I have suggested before in committees, the Farm Credit Corporation were to treat Canadian farm producers on the same level as they do a business or an industry, the agricultural producer would perhaps behave increasingly better, and I would like to explain what I mean. I have suggested previously in committees that certain options should be opened to farm producers who want to reimburse their loans over a shorter period. Instead of taking 20 years to repay a farm loan, a farmer should be allowed to pay it back ahead of time without his payments being considered as income up to a maximum of $5,000, which would mean that they would not be subject to the Income Tax Act. What I am trying to say, Mr. Speaker, is that the Farm Credit Corporation could make many adjustments to put once and for all the farm producer on the same level as any businessman.

Mr. Speaker, although agriculture seems to be experiencing great hardships at present because of high interest rates, we must remember that government offers farmers many ways of protecting themselves in difficult situations, in cases of poor crops or lower than normal prices. For example, Mr. Speaker, let me mention the Crop Insurance Act. Many Canadians tend to forget that this is an extremely important tool for the farmer and I would like to quote briefly from it to show you that the producer can avail himself of the existing legislation to make his operation profitable. It reads:

> Under the 1959 Crop Insurance Act, Canadian farmers can subscribe to an all-risk crop insurance scheme. This is a federal-provincial cost sharing program designed to stabilize farmers' income by minimizing the economic effect of crop losses due to environmental causes.

I would also like to read the part which deals with crop insurance. In 1979-80, a federal-provincial agreement which is still in effect was reached with each of the ten provinces. I quote:

> Under the agreements reached with Quebec, New Brunswick and Newfoundland, each level of government shares 25 per cent of the total premiums and half of the administrative costs. With regard to the other provinces, the federal share is 50 per cent of total premiums with the provincial governments bearing all of the administrative costs.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, Canadian farmers everywhere pay only 50 per cent of crop insurance premiums. To show you the great importance and benefits of this crop insurance program for all Canadian producers, let me say that in 1979 alone the federal government's share amounted to $78 million. It is therefore up to farmers to take advantage of this program.

I would also like to mention the Agricultural Stabilization Board. The Board was set up to provide compensatory payments for crops where prices were lower than production costs, and I would like to point out some specific sectors of production. For instance, let us consider that support payments amounting to $48 million were paid to 29,475 producers in 1980-81. This figure does not include support payments made to the dairy industry. In that industry alone, $287 million had been paid to Canadian dairy producers as of March 31, 1981. And then we might mention the stabilization of pork prices in 1980 under which Canadian pork producers got roughly $100 million. Had it not been for that, Mr. Speaker, it can certainly be said that the great majority of pork producers in Canada would probably have been on the brink of bankruptcy. We have also taken steps in the potato growing sector, for it is fair to say that 3,780 Canadian potato growers were given $21 million in 1980, most of them in the provinces of Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

I could go on listing a number of programs through which the government brought immediate assistance to farmers who were financially strapped. I would invite those farmers to avail themselves of those programs which make them feel more secure and enable them to remain very effective and very productive. Farmers are facing serious difficulties because of the rising costs of interest rates. Of course, the Farm Credit Corporation does offer certain special advantages to those borrowers. The corporation mortgage loans feature a set interest rate for the full terms of the loans. The farmers who borrowed from the corporation in recent years are not forced to renew their mortgage loans at higher interest rates, so they are relatively secure from soaring interest rates. The Farm Credit Corporation's current 16¾ per cent interest rate compares very favourably with those of many other lending institutions whose rates stand at 20 per cent or more. The corporation has always maintained an efficient collection policy which is also flexible enough so it can make certain adjustments to help the borrowers who find themselves in a temporary bind.

That policy allows for a case by case assessment, an analysis of the situation of each borrower. Payments can be postponed for a certain length of time, then when the crisis is over, they are adjusted somewhat to enable the farmer to bring them into line with the original schedule. The interest rate that applies to the back payments is the same as on the original debt. In exceptionally difficult circumstances, where the new adjusted payment would be too high, back payments may be paid off at the same time as the balance of the loan and a new schedule set up. The interest rate under the new schedule remains the same that applied to the original loan when it was approved.

Refinancing debts is one of the objectives of the loans policy of the Farm Credit Corporation. It will refinance debts incurred with a view to buying what resources are needed to set up a profitable operation, but only if that improves considerably the financial structure of the operation and the owner's chances of making it profitable. Before lending to that end, the corporation will demand that the farmer consider selling some of the capital goods that are not necessary to the efficient operation of the business; it will make sure that the reorganization of the borrower's finances will produce sufficient revenue to guarantee reimbursement of the loan. Present conditions this year have forced the Farm Credit Corporation to give higher priority than usual to debt refinancing in those sectors where the crisis is more severe.

• (2020)

[English]

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I have read the Conservative motion on this opposition day. It notes the disastrous increase in farm bankruptcies. It may or may not be disastrous. It is certainly a lot higher than it was last year or the year before last. There were a lot of them in those two years, too. Of course, we still had the Conservative and Liberal governments in those years as well. It is fun listening to the black cats name-calling the white cats and the white cats name-calling the black cats. Either way, the farmers lost.

I am an ordinary prairie-type alley cat, Mr. Speaker. For many years I have watched these purebred white cats and black cats standing up in Parliament and blaming one another for what each one of them has done.

Mr. Speaker, there have been substantial increases in farm bankruptcies. That is only the tip of the iceberg. The president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture tells us that for every farmer who goes into bankruptcy in a formal, legal way another ten quit farming one way or another.

I suspect, Mr. Speaker, that is the case right across the country. When you get to a situation where the interest payments on your land or on your machinery take the entire income from the crop you have produced, then surely you will not continue farming. We have farmers, whether they are grain, beef or hog producers or farmers in another sector of the agricultural economy, who have to use the income from most, if not all, of their current year's crop to pay the interest charges on their borrowings. Surely that is economic madness. However, it is a madness they are forced into with no other alternative.

The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) has been snorting and stomping his feet across the country for the past year and a half. I have seen him react in a similar way to a bull in the pasture. He has been snorting and stomping with regard to bank rip-offs and high interest rates. I believe that most times when he was snorting and stomping he was perfectly right. In fact, I shall use him as my witness. The financial institutions have been, in fact, ripping off the farmer.

My good Conservative friends who moved the motion—and I have seen them do it every year over the last fourteen years, except one year when they were in power—rave and rant about high interest rates. It took them only nine months to raise interest rates by 3 per cent for the farmers, the small-business men, the fishermen and the home owners. It took the Conservatives nine months to raise the interest rates by 3 per cent, and yet the Liberals are taking a year and a half to raise it another 6 per cent. They are running about equal, Mr. Speaker. Both parties have about the same track record—it is muddy. Both parties are hollering, snorting and stomping about the same issue. There is no difference between the black and the white cats or the black and the white horses.

Would either party—if it had the power to do so—direct the Bank of Canada and the chartered banks to have loan capital available at interest rates that are geared specifically to discriminate in favour of small farmers, small-business men, ordinary home owners and ordinary fishermen? Would they really do it?

Both parties have had their chance since 1867. Neither one of them has done it. The fact that any minister of agriculture would countenance an increase in the interest rates of the Farm Credit Corporation means he has had to give in to the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Johnston) and the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen). He was told he had two choices: it was either compulsory or he had to do it. That is the minister who says he will resign if something does not happen. Both those ministers follow the same tight money, high interest rate policy that is adhered to by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark), Mrs. Thatcher, and President Reagan. It is a litany of the so-called private enterprise syndrome. It has been particularly noticeable in the last three or four years. I have yet to understand it, Mr. Speaker, and I know it is difficult for someone with my background, who is just a dumb prairie boy. I am still waiting to find out. I wish the Minister of Finance, the Minister of Agriculture, the Conservative financial critic, and the mover of this motion would explain to me again, for the umpteenth time because I still do not understand, how raising interest rates can reduce the cost of production. I have not been able to figure it out. The hon. member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie) when he was minister of finance and the present Minister of Finance both told us they would fight to reduce inflation by raising interest rates. Somehow or other it was supposed to reduce inflation, which would mean a reduction in the cost of production to farmers; somehow or other it would reduce the cost to consumers, somehow or other it would reduce the demand for higher wage increases, somehow or other it would provide an incentive for investors. It has provided an incentive for investors, but not investors in the farm economy, in the housing industry or in our productive capacity. It has provided an incentive for investors in everything from Canada Savings Bonds to term deposits and guaranteed investment certificates. Also it provided an incentive for investing in the United States. This is the only incentive which has been provided—"'twas ever thus, nothing changed."

● (2030)

Since coming to this place, I have listened to five or six ministers of finance. They all sounded like Herbert Hoover, R. B. Bennett or Mackenzie King. They have learned nothing in 45 years. They keep doing and redoing the same thing; they did not listen to history. They were condemned to repeat it. The problem is that they repeat it at the expense of farmers, home owners, small-business men and fishermen. High interest rates result in concentrated ownership of land. An across-the-board high interest rate policy does not distinguish between investment in productive capacity, such as farms and small businesses, and investments in swimming pools and fancy shopping centres. The federal government can and should reduce interest rates for home owners, small-business men, farmers and fishermen. They should be geared to their income. This will mean an imposition of selective foreign exchange controls. If Canadian Pacific, BrasCan or any other company has a few spare million dollars to invest south of the 49th parallel or anywhere else in the world, the national government should tell that company that we need that investment in Canada. They should be told to invest here, that they will get a reasonable return on their investment. They should be told that they have one of two choices—it is either compulsory or they have to do it. I am not interested in the person who retires, sells his little business, his farm or whatever. We must have selective foreign exchange controls in place to carry out an interest rate policy which is geared to the operations and incomes of farmers, small-business men, fishermen and home owners.

There needs to be a moratorium on mortgage renewals for farmers as well as home owners. I recall a provincial premier who tried that in 1944-45. It was opposed in the courts by the then Liberal government and supported by the then Tory opposition. At the time it was indicated that it was an infringement on the right to control or own private property, that it was an infringement into private sector investment. But there was one province which indicated that there was no way to foreclose on the home quarters or the homestead. It was taken to the courts. All the bleeding-heart Tories and Grits cried about poor farmers, home owners, fishermen and small-business men. They are part and parcel of the assistance which was extended then and is being extended now.

An hon. Member: Rubbish!

Mr. Benjamin: If it is rubbish, I challenge the hon. member to rise and say on behalf of his party and his government that a fundamental change will be made in interest and monetary policies. We will see how long he lasts in his caucus. Since neither this government nor the previous one would take effective control over the monetary policy of the country, it is time for the ordinary citizen to rebel. It is time for the ordinary citizen to tell the banks to get off their fat assets. It is time for people to withdraw their savings from Canadian chartered banks. This would amount to $130 billion. They should withdraw their savings, pool their capital and put it in credit unions, with direct interest rates geared to incomes. Instead of credit unions being required by law to adhere to the monetary policies of chartered banks, financial institutions owned and controlled by ordinary people could dictate the interest rates.

The government's restraint policy has more in store for us. The Minister of State for Economic Development (Mr. Olson) has some news for us. It is not only interest rates and mortgage foreclosures. He has news in a cabinet document which eliminates clothing and textile subsidies. I hope the hon. member for Chicoutimi (Mr. Dionne) will take his financial lecture to the clothing and textile industry of his province. The minister of state in charge of economic development has even more news. He indicated that we should find ways to make the fishery a self-reliant industry and that federal contributions to the industry should be cost recoverable. This is news for the fishermen of Canada.

Let me turn now to the Department of Agriculture. It was indicated in a document that a review of income stabilization and compensation schemes is currently under way with a view to reducing subsidies. I wonder whether the Minister of Agriculture knows about this. The document indicated that there is a cabinet committee, under the chairmanship of the hon. Senator from Medicine Hat and, further, that ways must be found to stabilize producer income without spending tax money.

Mr. Whelan: Good idea.

Mr. Benjamin: I wish the Minister of Agriculture would rise on a point of order to indicate one way, let alone 100, to stabilize producer income without spending tax money—and without using up a portion of my time.

Mr. Whelan: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member claims to be a farmer from urban Regina. He knows full well that neither the provincial government nor I am putting a penny into the coffers of farmers through provincial marketing associations or boards or through the federal system, and they are making a darned good living.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. minister does not have a point of order. He appears to be entering into debate.

Mr. Benjamin: I hope, Mr. Speaker, you will take that one minute off my time. I am glad the Minister of Agriculture said that. I have listened to him expounding for many years around here. I give him credit for supporting orderly marketing and marketing boards. I wish he would get that message through to some of his colleagues who seem to carry more weight and muscle on that side of the House. When it comes to orderly producer-controlled marketing and marketing boards, the system indicates that agricultural producers shall get their cost of production plus their living, which is all I am requesting. I defy anyone to tell me the producer of any agricultural product can cover his cost of production and make his living under the so-called free and open market system. It has never happened and will never happen, Mr. Speaker. Only those who rely, either totally or mainly, on a marketing board process have been able to achieve some measure of economic stability or financial stability.

• (2040)

With all due respect to my colleague, the hon. member for Medicine Hat (Mr. Hargrave), I want to tell him that I have listened to beef producers from all over Canada for the last 14 years. Most years they come here and ask us not to interfere, to leave them the free, open market system. But as soon as they are hurt, they are back here crying, with their hands out. They have to make up their minds, Mr. Speaker, and admit once and for all that the so-called free market system under which they operate out of Medicine Hat, Maple Creek, Regina, Swift Current or anywhere else, is based on prices set in Chicago and Montreal. The beef producer of western Canada has absolutely no say whatever in it. It is about time beef producers got rid of the delusion that somehow or other they have a say in the free and open market. It has never worked that way and it never will.

There is other news for us, Mr. Speaker, from the Minister of State for Economic Development who sits in the other place and is supposed to be a prairie boy. The committee says that the termination of the Crow rate is the first priority of a new transportation policy. This committee of cabinet suggests—and I suppose this is the buy-off—that they should buy another 3,000 hopper cars, pay $500 million for a branch line rehabilitation program and pay an annual subsidy of $500 million to $600 million. That would cost those dummies more than they are paying out now, Mr. Speaker.

The same cabinet document refers to "we". I presume that means the Minister of State for Economic Development, the Minister of Finance and the other five people on the committee. They conclude that it would be ideal if farmers paid the full price of transporting western grain. It is no wonder that farmers have no prospects, Mr. Speaker. At the moment they have high interest rates and mortgages that they will not live long enough to pay off. They have the prospect of what the cabinet committee proposes to hand to agriculture and to transportation generally right across Canada.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Fred McCain (Carleton-Charlotte): Mr. Speaker, it was rather interesting to listen to the hon. member for Regina West (Mr. Bejamin). It did not seem to me that he had any solutions but just the same old philosophical yarn that he has been spinning for a long time. Perhaps one of his deficiencies is that he has never lived on a farm and has no conception of how to run one.

Mr. Benjamin: I worked on one.

Mr. McCain: He feels that the only answer to the requirement is a marketing board. Let us examine the conditions where there is one of the strongest marketing structures in agriculture in the country. That happens to be in the hands of the dairy farmers of Canada. I should like to refer to a couple of lines in a document which shows the support that this strong organization has received from the government. A copy of its submission arrived in my office on June 8 of this year. In part it said that the level of government expenditures on the program may be unjustified or excessive. They contended that they were justified and, moreover, were declining in real terms at a substantial rate.

This is an organization which is not being continually supported by the government. It entered into its agreement with the government in good faith only to find that the government's contribution was declining in real terms at a substantial rate. The document went on to say that industrial milk in Canada is being substantially overpriced. It questioned the inclusion of this document among the interdepartmental committee papers as being very odd. Not only are its conclusions unsupportable, it claimed, but they are not even reflected later on in the discussion papers.

So much for farm organizations and government fair play. I would say to the hon. member for Regina West that farm organizations are not dealing with a structure that understands how to treat them.

I should like to commend the hon. member for Chicoutimi (Mr. Dionne) on his speech. Tonight, as always, he proved himself the most knowledgeable and intelligent contributor to agricultural debate from your right, Mr. Speaker. He relied upon his knowledge of farming to present his case to the minister. I wish he would do the same here.

As is his wont when I speak, the minister is now leaving the House.

Mr. Smith: That is understandable.

Mr. McCain: Perhaps so, but it is rather offensive when it happens repeatedly.

There is another situation where a board of the Government of Canada, after extended hearings, has made recommendations to the minister. It is a report on public hearings carried out by the National Farm Products Marketing Council. It recommends that a board should be established with a board of directors comprised of two producer representatives from each province and two members representing other sectors of the industry and consumers, all members to be appointed by the governor in council on the recommendation of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan).

It is at this point that I quarrel with that recommendation very vigorously. If we are to have a board to govern the affairs of the potato industry, it should most certainly be made up of members elected by those who will be dealing with their own fate. Those people should not be selected by the governor in council on the recommendation of the Minister of Agriculture. I believe that to be totally unacceptable and unworkable.

I should like to discuss this proposed board for a few moments, Mr. Speaker. In the provinces of eastern Canada, marketing structures are already in place which influence the marketing of potatoes. We find that when one agency or one province tries to arrive at a price, other provinces will undercut it. I am sorry that the minister is not present because I would implore him to consider what happened in exactly these circumstances in the fall of this year and see if he can determine how a marketing board can work under this structure.

I challenge the hon. member for Regina West on this as well. He has suggested that every farmer in Canada should be part of a rigid marketing board structure.

Mr. Benjamin: I did not say that.

Mr. McCain: I challenge the hon. member or any other who says that—

Mr. Benjamin: I didn't say that.

Mr. McCain: —to come up with a plan under which the Government of Canada, unequivocally and with a long-term contractual agreement, can arrange to dispose of a variable crop to the benefit of the farmer as well as of the consumer. That is what is lacking in marketing boards in the fruit and vegetable industry. The constraint of marketing does not fit in with that structure.

Some interesting things are going on internationally and I should like to mention a couple of them tonight. In the state of Maine at the moment there is a movement to try to inhibit the shipment of potatoes from Canada to the United States. I implore the minister and the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacGuigan) to take a long, hard look at the movement presently in place in the United States, particularly in the state of Maine. On an average, we have been the recipients of more potatoes in Canada than we have exported to the United States in the last ten years. In the last two crop years we have shipped more to the United States than we have received, but historically the United States has had the positive side of the interchange of potatoes between the two countries. We have a need for their potatoes, but I submit to you, Mr. Speaker, that the United States too has a need for ours. Because for two years the balance has shifted in our favour, that is no excuse for the rigid barriers to trade which the state of Maine today is trying to establish against our products. This movement goes both ways, from coast to coast in Canada. It is imperative that government at the highest level, from the Minister of Agriculture to the Secretary of State for External Affairs, even to the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), take a very serious part in the discussions which may lead to the inhibition of trade on an unfair basis. Potatoes moving from eastern Canada to the United States are of a higher quality on a grade basis than vice versa. On that basis I think we have been able to market without cutting prices and without damaging the market, yet the Americans wish to inhibit our shipments to them.

• (2050)

It is interesting to note that since the present Minister of Agriculture has been in office, he has always had to have a scapegoat. He has always had to have a crutch. He has always had to have something or someone to blame. It is never an acknowledged error on behalf of the Department of Agriculture. Today it may be the banks—perhaps we should not have any sympathy for the banks. Tomorrow, it may be the farmers who will overproduce. It may be the farmers of yesterday who were not organized and could not market. But we have always heard an excuse. There has always been something which has allowed the minister to get off the hook.

He is beginning to be recognized as the one in need of a crutch as he faces the public. What the Whelan crutch will be tomorrow has yet to be determined, but there will be one. Farmers had high expectations that there would be prosperity. Because a few prosper, and there are not that many, that is the excuse for everybody else to prosper and they should not have the minister's sympathy. It is rather unfortunate that those who need price stabilization payments have to depend upon a formula which is outmoded and inadequate. At this point a little history and a little explanation is required.

Not too long ago I spoke to an official in the minister's department. In trying to explain the cost of potato production in Atlantic Canada—and again I am sure the hon. member for Chicoutimi will agree with me—for seed or processing, say in the month of April in the year following planting, interest costs exceed the total costs of production for the same acre of potatoes ten years ago. That is how much the cost of potato production has increased. The executive member of the minister's staff stated that farmers do not borrow all the money they use. Farmers have working capital and they keep it alive. I do not think any man in business—and farming is business today, not all that small—should be expected to arrive at a cost which does not reflect the value of the money, whether it is his money or borrowed money. If he has been smart enough that it is his money, then he should get the credit for it. If he is young enough and poor enough, as many farmers are, and it is borrowed money, then it must be taken into consideration. When interest as a cost of production is not fully considered in any price stabilization payment, a farmer is shortchanged. He cannot be anything other than shortchanged.

The formula may recommend that you take 90 per cent of the five-year average. That is what you are going to get. But in the potato industry, or any other agriculture crop, whether on the hoof or on the ground, when you look for the five-year average return or cost, you come up with a figure so far below the return you need today because of inflation that it just does not make sense to use the formula. The price stabilization payments being made today are being made on the basis of the advice given to the minister that the five-year average is what we should use.

It is imperative in price stabilization payments that we take a look at the discretionary powers in the act and that we recognize that, if a price stabilization payment is needed, the cost of the year in question is the basis for the arrival at 90 per cent or 95 per cent of their cost. I have never been one who recommended that price stabilization payments should generate a profit. I do recommend, however, that they should approach stop loss, and this is not being accomplished as the present act is being interpreted.

Farmers' operating costs are going up at a rate exceeding the increment in return in many sectors of the fruit and vegetable industry. I wonder what will happen to some of them this year.

With respect to advanced crop payments, I recommend that the minister should forthwith bring in an amendment to the act, if it is not already included in the budget, which would bring the limit from $15,000 up to $30,000. Perhaps the $15,000 was an excellent figure when the bill was introduced, but it is no longer in tune with the realities of the cost of production today. It is better than nothing, but it is not what it should be.

I also recommend to the minister, having reviewed the price stabilization formula and given it careful consideration, that we take a look at the Small Business Development Bond borrowing opportunity for farmers. This instrument of borrowing has been available only as a last resort in too many instances. It has been available only to small business as a last resort. If one bank has turned a business down, then the next bank does not want to accept that business under any circumstances, even though the SBDB is guaranteed by the government. For that reason we have to allow not only the incorporated farmer to approach government and banks for a Small Business Development Bond but also ensure that the unincorporated farmer have the same privilege. This would make a major reduction in the cost of production of many agricultural products from beef, to fruit to vegetables, to grains, in fact, the whole ball of wax as far as agriculture is concerned.

I think that is imperative if we are to keep the cost of production and the cost of food down in any way. As I pointed out last spring, it would be an instrument which would make Canada much more competitive with many of the cattle feed lots in the United States, for instance. Feed lot operators in the U.S. are able to tap emergency funds that have been in escrow for many years. They are using these funds to obtain interest rates at one half of the rates our feed lot operators are paying today.

I think agriculture in Canada has been neglected by the minister. There should have been some bridge financing. This should have been on an SBDB basis. Surely the agricultrual industry should be permitted to borrow from the lenders of this land today as big business can borrow. Surely the farmers are entitled to the same privilege.

Historically, the Farm Credit Corporation has given farmers low rates of interest, but the SBDB does not have any money to lend. It is, therefore, at a point in time where it is no longer useful to the hard-pressed farmer on a second mortgage basis or on a first mortgage basis. It does not make any difference. It is high time this was reconsidered, and reconsidered in a major way.

• (2100)

In conversation with maritime farmers I find that one of their beefs over a decade has been that the feed freight assistance program is not serving its purpose. Freight rates have gone up much faster than feed freight assistance. As a result, the competitive position in the production of poultry and meats in Atlantic Canada has deteriorated. The intention of the plan was that it should be possible to produce eggs, poultry and meats in Atlantic Canada at a competitive price, not with an advantage, with those products that are produced in other parts of Canada. That was its historic intent and I do not think the minister will disagree with that. It has slipped from that position. I plead with the minister to take a look at it.

There is an alternative I have been pleading for ten years in this regard. Let us take advantage of European technology. Let us bring in some of those varieties of grain and use them on a much more extensive basis. Let us increase research programs in eastern Canada. Why does the minister not give to the eastern grain producer one half of the present freight assistance that is extended in respect of western grains? This would encourage the production of grain in the east. Why do we not breed varieties of our own, or introduce foreign varieties which will give us viable yields? Some of those varieties with viable yields have been brought in from Europe by various means with which the minister is familiar, and they have certainly produced viable crops in areas where grain is needed.

In summary I guess I would have to say that the agricultural community needs a stable program under the Department of Agriculture. It needs the historic assurance that if and when a sector of agriculture is not prospering, but is suffering serious losses as many of them are today, the price stabilization board will in fact be a stop-loss. I say to the minister that so long as this is settled by a committee of cabinet ministers, including the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Ouellet) and the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen), and so long as the Minister of Agriculture is in a secondary position, this subject matter is not going to receive the consideration which is necessary for perhaps Canada's biggest local consumer, its biggest food supplier and the one with biggest impact upon the cost of food in this land. Stability can be introduced by a sincere governement, and with an influential minister we do not need to be in the doldrums or in the position of uncertainty which we have experienced in the last ten years.

Mr. Ralph Ferguson (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, I am afraid I cannot agree with the comments of the hon. member for Carleton-Charlotte (Mr. McCain) or the hon. member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) about the hard-working, conscientious Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) and his ongoing efforts on behalf of the producers who find themselves in a bind in dealing with the banking institutions in Canada.

Only today I received a request for help from a grain elevator operator who has been facing receivership, not because of a lack of equity, but because of a lack of ready cash. He has been placed in receivership during the peak of the corn harvest because he missed one monthly payment on his mortgage. Another example is a farmer in my area who called me for help today. He revealed that he is being charged 30 per cent interest by one of the banks because he is behind in his payments. I wish to advise members of the House that under the authority of the Bank Act the inspector-general of banks has, as one of his obligations, the duty to act as an ombudsman to examine such abuses and disputes between the lender and the borrower. Believe me, he is available and he is effective in cases such as this.

Perhaps the current problems confronting some sectors of our agricultural economy today, particularly in eastern Canada, are the result of the bumper crops we have had throughout western Canada, most parts of central Canada and in the maritimes. These bumper crops have brought about lower prices. These lower prices have been caused in part by a supposed surplus during the peak of harvest, but also as a result of dropping currency values in other countries. For example, the currency values in England are down 21 per cent compared to the Canadian dollar this year, in France by 20 per cent, and in Germany by 18 per cent. When the currency values of these countries drop, naturally the grain marketers price the product accordingly, and the farmer ends up taking the loss.

We also have higher input costs due to increased energy prices and interest rates. Again we cannot discount the fact that decisions made in other parts of the world have a dramatic effect on our price structures here in Canada, particularly for those commodities which do not come under a marketing organization or an authority to set prices according to cost of production with a reasonable return to the producer.

As a matter of fact, Alvin Toffler, author of the "Third Wave," points out that no longer can we expect in this country, or in any nation, to isolate ourselves completely from policy decisions made in other countries, because we are serving a global market, not just a domestic market.

It is interesting to note the stability of those products under our national farm products marketing program, or legislation in that area. Those products which are subject to the cost of a production formula do not suffer the same hardship as those produced in a free enterprise price system. I am speaking in this case of poultry meats, eggs and milk. Let me state to those opponents of these plans who suggest there is a high quota value built into the cost of production formula that there is no quota value at the national level. If there is a quota value involved, it is at the provincial level, under the provincial area of jurisdiction. Consequently those values are not included in cost of production formulas and, therefore, are not added costs to the consumer. Rather, those products are operating in a system of planned production, production planned for both domestic and export markets, at a reasonable price for both the producer and the consumer.

Perhaps I should refer to a study done in 1979 by Mr. A. Cayer comparing the price of eggs in Canada and in the United States at both the producer and the consumer level. The Canadian producer was receiving more than his American farm counterpart but the Canadian consumer was paying less. The consumer in Toronto, for example, was paying less than the housewife in New York. Our producers had a narrower margin between the farm gate price and the consumer price, to the benefit of society.

By contrast, producers such as beef producers have no countervailing force in the marketplace. Consequently, we see here in Canada very few but large supermarket chains, but when they decide to increase the margin of profit—that margin between the farm gate price and the selling price—the producer suffers. I submit to you that the current price war taking place among the supermarkets in Ontario at the present time will reflect dramatically lower profits or incomes to beef producers in Ontario. As a matter of fact, I suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that the only products on which they will not lower their price are those they have to import from other countries, and the consumer will be paying for those products through the nose. In fact, one very large buyer of beef cattle withdrew from the marketplace on two afternoons last week and broke that price structure in the so-called free enterprise system by approximately $6 per hundredweight. I suggest that this is just a start of the drop on the price of fat cattle across Canada which will be an added burden on the beef producers of Canada.

• (2110)

I am a beef producer and an egg producer. I know the hardships, and if I had to make a choice between which product I would delete from my operation, it would have to be the beef operation until such time as some order can be brought to the marketplace.

I submit that there is a desperate need in the marketplace for a countervailing force on behalf of the producers to deal with these very large and complex retailing chains that are creating havoc in the industry.

I would ask those who disagree to explain the price spread between the producer and consumer for A-1 and A-2 steers in Toronto of 45 cents per pound on a dressed basis in 1977 and $1.18 a pound in 1980. That is an increased price spread of 271 per cent. It is no wonder that the beef industry is sick. The producer prices did not increase by that much. It is not hard to see where these profits are going. By comparison, price spreads in the egg industry in that same period, between the producer and the consumer, increased by 25 per cent.

Although there is much discussion in this House about agriculture, it is also a provincial responsibility. It is interesting to note that in five out of ten provinces, the provincial budgetary expenditures are greater than the federal government expenditures. In eight of the ten provinces, certain classes of producer receive interest rate subsidies. I must admit as an Ontario farmer that I am getting an inferiority complex because, as the slogan says, "We stand alone."

I will now quote from a brief submitted on October 5 to the Federation of Agriculture Task Force by the Lambton County Federation of Agriculture. I am sure you will agree that we in Ontario have some serious problems. The brief says:

> In Ontario it seems unrealistic to operate a farm for a period of years and walk away from a failing endeavour, sometimes with nothing. This is happening, however, and even though those who are leaving agriculture seem to be small in numbers, they are in fact many of the young farmers that will be needed in future years. A young farmer who is 37 years old who has been farming since the age of 25 and is forced into leaving the farm has much more to lose than just money. These individuals have given the best years of their lives to a failing industry and country. How can anyone put a dollar value on those years? The way in which lending institutions and individuals, both professional and federal, are treating the issues that face agriculture would seem to indicate the years of hard work are without value. This is not just an over-simplification of a problem but in fact is the reality of the situation for many young area farmers. The banking institutions must share the larger responsibility for the present day crisis in agriculture.
>
> As recently as 1980 banks encouraged many farmers to expand their operations, to buy more machinery and of course to borrow more money. At the time interest was much lower and the cash flow projections that a farmer presented generally indicated that farm expectations were viable but in many instances might have been marginal. Often bankers and farmers hoped for high commodity prices that may have been unrealistic. Many bankers that were approached for the purpose of this study believed the commodity prices had to improve because costs of production were always getting higher and these increased costs surely must be a global phenomenon. For example, the world wide increase in fuel costs should be seen in commodity price increases. In the U.S.A. state and federal programs were established to help the failing agriculture industry. Machinery companies offered unusually low interest programs. The American farm cost increases were up not nearly as high as the Ontario farms. In the rest of Canada provincial governments seemed to anticipate the growing problems. Many provinces began interest subsidy programs to keep their province's agricultural businesses viable... To our disappointment Ontario has no current industry subsidy programs. If we remember the program last year, we realize that the subsidy offered was 3 per cent of total interest to a maximum of $3,000 rebate. The $3,000 figure was barely the tip of the iceberg that most farmers, particularly young and new farmers, had to face. That situation seemed rather peculiar to Ontario farmers. How is it that Ontario, one of the wealthiest provinces, and certainly one of the largest in population, is not and has not provided a subsidy that would protect its agricultural interests from the present inflationary spiral? The answer, I am afraid, may in fact be political.
>
> The rural community is probably about 5 per cent of the population in Ontario and the consumer community which puts our politicians in power, is the balance of that population. Government cannot support a smaller sector of society at the price of losing both. The rural vote is really not that aim; at least this appears to be the case. Private business would certainly expect the same kind of subsidy. Interestingly enough, this has not been the case in other provinces, with a possible exception of Quebec. The solution in Ontario may not be as complicated as it seems. A high profile campaign aimed at educating the urban centres about agricultural productivity in Ontario and its importance to food production in Ontario would seem to be necessary. The public must be made to realize the fact that only through higher Ontario agricultural productivity can they be guaranteed a continued supply of high quality products at the supermarket.
>
> The Lambton County Federation of Agriculture further recognizes that the criteria that lending institutions use to lend money must remain fairly static when considering farm operations. Farming operations do not lend themselves to fast changes in terms of their production. The banks should be forced to honour previous commitments and should change their policies to accommodate farmers facing financial difficulties. Lending institutions that have encouraged the development of farm operations along certain lines should be forced to continue to support these operations. The lenders themselves should be penalized along with the producers if there need be a penalty at all.
>
> In most instances, banks have contributed to the decision-making of farm operations. Bankers have always been thought of as having a certain expertise in financial matters concerning the farm. In the past few years they have proven to the farmer that the chances of them making the correct decision are about as poor as the farmers'. This has resulted in an underlying feeling of resentment that the farmers seem to have for the lender. Bank managers only wish to ensure that the banks get what is coming to them. Farmers are experts in the job of farming and they see bank managers as being inexperienced or incapable of making proper decisions when it involves the operation of a farm. They are playing a dangerous guessing game trying to anticipate what the next move will have to be. This can obviously be seen in the Bank of Montreal's Small Business Development Bond for farmers. If the government does not approve the SBDB program for farmers then the results to marginal farm operations who receive the benefits of the bond will be disastrous and of course the banks will appear as if they really tried to push for the program but the government let them and the farmers down. The government will have appeared to be the villain in the case when actually the bank has only manipulated the situation to produce this result.

This quotation from the Lambton Federation of Agriculture is most interesting. They conclude by saying:

> The task force must insist that the Ontario government be made responsible for the needs of the farmers' communities in Ontario.

I wish to compliment the Lambton Federation of Agriculture on this document and its conclusion.

In closing, I wish to say that the Minister of Agriculture has legislation at his disposal that would enable the producers of Canada to direct, plan and control their destiny, if and when the majority of producers in Canada or a region of Canada request it and its implementation. I am speaking of the legislation I referred to earlier, the Farm Products Marketing Agencies Act, which allows producers, either through declaration by lieutenant governor in council or following plebiscites, or by other means, which could include a petition, to organize, to set their own prices, to market their own products or plan their production based on need, whether it is for domestic consumption or for export. I suggest to producers that this is one of the moves they will have to make if they are to have that countervailing force in the market to which I referred earlier. I suggest that we examine what is happening in the total context of where the problems are in agriculture at the present time. Certainly it is those who have at their disposal this legislation and who are currently using it who will weather the storm.

• (2120)

I would like to draw retail food prices as of October 15, 1981, to the attention of the House. Beef prices were down 4.6 cents, although live cattle prices in Toronto had remained unchanged for a few weeks. However, this was the start of the price war among supermarkets. Pork prices were up by one point, but retail pork prices, they say, are likely to come under downward pressure, as 100 index hog prices in Toronto fell by $5.15 per hundredweight during the first two weeks of October. They too are heading into difficulty. Poultry meat prices are up slightly, reflecting the termination of Thanksgiving specials on turkeys. The price of eggs is up by 0.1 per cent, and the index there is expected to remain steady during the next few weeks and several months ahead. Dairy product prices are up only 0.9 per cent, and they are expected to remain steady. The price of vegetables is up 4.2 per cent due to higher prices, again for imported fruits and vegetables.

In closing, I suggest to members of the opposition that the Minister of Agriculture has other legislation in the works. He would like to have it introduced to relieve pressures on the farmer. The best help we in Parliament can provide to the farmers of Canada is to allow the government to proceed with its workload, to pass Bill C-48, and to get on with other pressing legislation, which will relieve the pressures on the farmers of Canada and allow them the stable incomes they so richly deserve.

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Mr. Speaker, it is interesting that the hon. member for Lambton-Middlesex (Mr. Ferguson) should say we should get on with Bill C-48. I would have thought he would realize that if we defeated Bill C-48, the Canadian dollar would show some real strength in the marketplace, interest rates would come down, and it would not be necessary for this government to continue to have a 5 per cent interest differential, as is presently the case, with the United States. It is this very program of the government which caused us to bring forward the motion we are debating tonight.

The hon. member for Lambton-Middlesex did make some excellent suggestions. He said that the price spread on beef had changed dramatically. I would have thought he would make that suggestion to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Ouellet). The minister has been in charge of that department off and on for a long period of time. Perhaps now that the hon. member for Lambton-Middlesex is Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of State for Small Businesses and Toursim, he will investigate supermarket price spreads. Whether he knows it or not, the province of Ontario is not responsible for interest rates. That responsibility was clearly set out in 1867 as a responsibility of the Government of Canada. There is no point in the hon. member for Lambton-Middlesex, or any other member of this House, suggesting to the people in his riding that it is the province that should be responsible when we have interest rate problems. It is not a provincial matter, it is a federal matter and the hon. member knows it.

Mr. Ferguson: How about the other provinces? Co-operative federalism!

Mr. Blenkarn: The hon. member refers to co-operative federalism. If we had co-operative federalism in this country, we would have nowhere near the economic problems, dislocation problems and disharmony we have.

One might wonder why a member from a riding with absolutely no farms in it—there is not a chance of a farm, although my constituency did have one at one time—should be speaking about an agricultural matter.

Mr. Deans: Why not?

Mr. Blenkarn: I agree with hon. members to my left. It is good that we do so because it is important that members from all parts of Canada speak about the interests of farmers. We all like to eat three square meals a day, and we all ought to understand that if we are to eat well, those who produce the food we eat must be able to make a dollar or two. There is no question that farm incomes have reduced dramatically this year and last year and that high interest rates are seriously hurting our farm community, particularly young people coming into the farming community to take over their fathers' farms or other farms. I refer to people such as a young Rover Scout of mine who decided, after working at construction for some period of time—he is a graduate from Guelph—that he ought to go into farming. He used all the money he could save, borrowed some money from his family and one thing and another, and went out and bought a farm. A farm and its equipment and cattle cannot be bought for less than $300,000 or $350,000. I do not know how many young men wishing to go into the business will be able, even scrounging at every source, to pick up more than $60,000 or $70,000. That means there is not a young man anywhere who can go into this business unless he is prepared to borrow a quarter of a million dollars. If such a young man were so prepared, he would be forced or induced to borrow at prime plus. That did not sound so bad in 1978. At that time prime was 8.25 per cent. Prime plus 1 per cent was 9.25 per cent. That was pretty reasonable. It was less than 10 per cent. However, prime plus 1 per cent today is 21 per cent, and prime plus 2 percent is 22 per cent. On a quarter of a million dollars, the difference is well in excess of $25,000. That is a lot of money. The difference is the possibility of paying back such a loan, the possibility of keeping a farm going, going bankrupt or not going bankrupt.

Earlier today in his speech, the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) said that the banks are wrong, that they should not have lent money at prime plus and that they should have insisted on term loans. Hindsight tells us he is right, but everyone realized that prime plus was a fair way to go. After all, the prime rates in this country did not vary too much. They varied perhaps 1 per cent or 1.5 per cent, but not much more than that. For years and years prime rates in this country remained stagnant. I said that in 1977 the prime rate in September was 8.25 per cent. The rate a decade before was only 6 per cent. There was not much difference. However, what has happened is that this government has lost control of things. It has no ability to manage, so it has allowed the prime rate to go up and up and up with the thought that this would control inflation. This policy does not control inflation. It destroys production and producers. When interest rates rise, people who cannot pass the increases on are put out of business. If they can pass the increases on, prices increase. The result is that prices go up in both cases. We had a situation in the past three or four years where prices have been continually rising. We have seen a bank policy that tried to control inflation by controlling interest rates. Interest rates have been raised presumably to reduce inflation. Now we have 12 or 13 per cent inflation and a 20 per cent prime rate.

• (2130)

We have been told that this will eventually reduce inflation. That is nonsense. It is a disaster. It is not only hurting us but tearing us apart, and is particularly disastrous in the farm community.

Farmers are the only people in our society who are expected to buy retail and sell wholesale. There is no way that a farmer can pass on the costs of his interest. A manufacturer might include that in his cost of production and pass it on in the wholesale price. A storekeeper might include the cost of carrying his inventory in his overhead and pass it on. However, how would a beef farmer or one inolved in a cow-calf operation do that? There is no way he can.

A calf born in 1978 might have produced offspring this spring. However, it might not produce until next spring. It depends on how competent the farmer may be. How can a cow-calf operator pass on his interest rates when to produce an animal it takes probably 27 months from birth to the next birth? It is totally impossible.

What does this government which is responsible for interest rates do? The minister blames the banks. He says they are terrible fellows. I suppose they should not have lent money to the farmer. What does the minister propose? He has huffed and puffed around the country. We will see after November 12 whether there is something for the farmers, or perhaps he will huff and puff his way out of the cabinet and out of this House.

I wish to make three suggestions as to what the minister might include in his budget. In a sense these are only band-aid measures. Looking at the high interest rate policy of this government, it is essential that it be prepared at least to extend the concept of the Small Business Development Bond into farming. The government should at least be prepared to allow unincorporated farmers to use the bond system. I agree there is a benefit to the big lender. However, it gives the farmer money at perhaps prime plus one.

There should be three kinds of small business development loans. First, I suggest some kind of small business development long-term bond, for example, 20 years on a fixed term for the young person going into business, to be amortized. This would help him get into business. If we do not have new farmers, we are dead. The people in Peel talk about saving Peel for farming. Unless there is someone to farm it, you can have all the agricultural land you want, but what good would that be? You need someone to sit on the tractor. The old fellows are getting older. We need young farmers in the game. Therefore, they must be given a chance.

Second, we should have one-year Small Business Development Bonds for the farmer on a roll-over basis so that he can buy his feeder cattle in the fall or finance his grain crop in the spring and pay it off in the fall. He should be able to pay it off with interest that comes out of capital. He might find it better to borrow on a regular basis, but he should at least have that option. Third, I suggest the Small Business Development Bond on a fixed term of seven or ten years so that he can buy equipment, rather than bonds on a short term which the banks insist be amortized over five years. My colleague would like to speak further on this matter tonight.

[Translation]

Mr. Irénée Pelletier (Sherbrooke): Mr. Speaker, I should like to use the few moments allotted to me to state the facts as they are and point out the unquestionable efforts made by this government for many years to help the Canadian farming community. The federal government, mainly through the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and the Department of Regional Economic Expansion, has been implementing a number of programs designed to improve the efficiency of the Canadian food and farming sector and to provide producers with fair revenues while of course providing Canadian consumers with a proper supply of first-rate products at reasonable prices.

• (2140)

One of the main programs to which I wish to refer comes under the Agricultural Stabilization Act which was amended in 1975. It is designed to provide a certain amount of balance between the price which producers can obtain for their products and the cost of goods and services which they must purchase. The legislation guarantees to the producers of nine commodities listed in the legislation an income which at least amounts to 90 per cent of the average market price during the five previous years and an adjustment to take into account various production costs. Under that legislation, Mr. Speaker, the costs and prices are determined annually for the nine commodities mentioned in the legislation which are of course, beef, pork, lamb, milk, industrial milk, corn, soya beans as well as oats and barley coming outside areas designated by the Canadian Wheat Board. Other products may also be designated for price support under the Agricultural Stabilization Act, at the discretion of the Minister of Agriculture if in his opinion market conditions warrant it.

The nine commodities for which a support price is mandatorily calculated every year include all the major animal and vegetable lines commercially produced in Canada. The main objective of the Agricultural Stabilization Act is to stabilize the income of farm producers against the market hazards. But it is also aimed at protecting the family-type operations and indeed at promoting this type of operation in the agricultural sector. Moneys paid out to agricultural producers under the various federal stabilization programs are limited to a given volume of production per farmer or farm in the case of corporations. Thus, government aid is aimed at farmers who are directly dependent on the market for their income, and not at big corporations we all know in the food business.

As of March 31 of this year, the federal government had paid over $3.5 billion under the Agricultural Stabilization Act, which included payments made by the Canadian Dairy Commission. These stabilization payments have helped put Canadian producers in a better competitive position on the market and promote the development of stable Canadian sector. There are several other federal programs aimed at providing a more reasonable return for Canadian farm producers by enabling them among other things to obtain better prices on the market while guaranteeing that market prices also take production costs into account.

Under the provisions of the Agricultrual Products Marketing Act, the National Farm Products Marketing Council monitors the activities of the national egg, turkey and chicken marketing agencies which were created under this act in 1972, 1975 and 1978 respectively. These agencies co-ordinate the activities of provincial boards as concerns supply and prices during the three previous years. Under these programs, Canadian egg, turkey and chicken producers get a return that is proportionate to their production costs, their work and their investments. Costs, such as prices of poultry feed and interest rates, are taken into consideration in the pricing formula for these products. While there is no guarantee that the prices will cover all production costs, prices have not fallen below cash production costs since the establishment of these agencies.

Other federal programs are designed to achieve the basic objective of the Canadian government's agricultural policy, which is to protect the Canadian agricultural food production sector and promote its development and efficiency. I am thinking about another extremely important piece of legislation for this sector concerning crop insurance. Under the Crop Insurance Act, the provinces receive certain amounts to provide a comprehensive insurance plan for farmers. While some of the elements of the plan may vary from province to province, the objectives at the national level remain the same, namely to stabilize the annual income of farmers and minimize income fluctuations resulting from a decrease in production due to unforeseeable natural causes. Crop insurance is offered to all farmers in the ten Canadian provinces and covers most major crops. In 1980-81, for instance, over 113,000 Canadian producers were insured for a coverage of over $2.3 billion. Farmers were eligible last year to compensation exceeding a quarter billion dollars or $254 million. The federal contribution to the crop insurance plan for 1980-81 is now just under $100 million.

The Advance Payments for Crops Act also helps Canadian producers to sustain larger inventories for a certain period of time and to take advantage of better market conditions later in the season. The act has been in effect since 1977 and enables groups of storage crop producers to benefit from interest-free loans in order to pay advances or advance payments to their members. Thus, producers can pay production bills right after the harvest, as if they were selling their crops at that time. And consumers can buy fresh Canadian products over an extended marketing season. So far this year, the federal government has paid a total of some $3 million interest on amounts advanced to farmers.

Another program which has promoted marketing of Canadian farm products by helping producers financially is a federal financial assistance program for the construction of fruit and vegetable cold storage facilities. Under this program, groups of producers receive substantial financial assistance for the construction or renovation of storage facilities for fruits and vegetables. Many farm groups have benefited from this program which was started in 1973. So far, the government has spent more than $15 million towards completion of nearly 200 projects.

I could go on for quite some time if I wanted to enumerate all the federal programs and policies aimed at providing financial assistance to Canadian farmers and at helping them to become more efficient and to operate within the open economic system that is typical of the North American food market. Our farmers are efficient, and besides being able to compete with many imported products, they also are able to compete successfully on various foreign markets.

There is a whole array of measures in this session's legislative program that are designed to provide increased help to the Canadian agri-food industry. These are not novel measures and will surprise no one. A number of them are at the second reading stage, such as the measure to amend the Farm Credit Corporation Act to allow the corporation to seek funds on the private financial markets in order to better meet the credit needs of Canadian farmers. Everyone knows also that there is a piece of legislation to establish the Agricultural Export Corporation, the so-called Canagrex.

In July last, the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) published a discussion paper on an agri-food strategy, which refers to the growth potential in that sector over the next two decades, and identifies current constraints to growth. Canada could increase its food production by two thirds before the year 2000, doubling this year's current dollar value.

This document proposes a strategy based on market development, increased research and the strengthening of the supply base. The federal proposal has been very favourably accepted by the various parties in the agri-food industry and also by the Canadian provinces. The Minister of Agriculture and his officials met with most provincial ministers of agriculture, to discuss that strategy and priorities to be allocated to the various proposals in order to eliminate constraints to growth in the Canadian agri-food industry. Meetings have also been held with a number of non-government agencies such as the Canadian Federation of Agriculture and the Canadian Food Processors Association, which also had very favourable comments for the strategy put forward by the Minister of Agriculture of Canada.

It is easy to suggest that this government has failed in implementing policies and programs designed to maintain a strong and fully developed agri-food industry. It is just as easy to prove, based on facts and figures, that the Canadian government has shown such undeniable leadership in agri-food policy as to put Canada among the four countries in the world that are net food exporters.

Besides, Canadian agricultural exports would not have the positive effects they are known to have had the government not played its role of assistance to this very important economic sector. Mr. Speaker, having had the privilege of serving as parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Agriculture, I must say that many programs have been set up not only by the federal government alone but also in co-operation with the provinces, and because I have worked hand in hand with the Minister of Agriculture, I can assure the House that I have been most happy to see not only what has been done in Canada but also what has been done by us for developing countries.

I have been interested for several years in world food aid and Canada is second to no other country as far as food aid is concerned. I know about Canadian producers, and here I refer especially to our colleagues from western Canada, an area that has contributed so much to Canada's food exports, and each time I have been given the opportunity to visit that part of the country, I have realized how better acquainted with the facts of food aid the western provinces are than central Canada or the maritimes. Which does not mean that the maritime provinces, Quebec and Ontario are less interested in the food aid issue, but I think that because they acted somewhat as pioneers in Canada in the area of assistance to underdeveloped countries—I mean in food assistance—the farmers of western Canada, as far as I know and especially as far as I could ascertain when I had the privilege to serve as parliamentary secretary, are very much aware of the assistance which Canada is providing on an international level to the have-not countries of the world and where people are undernourished or dying of hunger.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I must say that although agriculture is not a top priority in the constituency which I have the honour to represent in this House, there being no farms there, mine being essentially an urban constituency, farming in Canada is of paramount importance to all Canadians, because we all have to eat and agriculture provides us with an abundant source of nourishing food. I have also had the opportunity to visit underdeveloped countries and appreciate the effort Canada is making. I came back to Canada convinced that we could increase substantially the level of our aid to Third World countries and especially that we could help underdeveloped countries develop their own agriculture.

It is a well-known fact, Mr. Speaker, that there are tens of thousands of people every year who are not only undernourished but who are dying from starvation, and I feel that it is a real shame that some countries should spend such huge amounts of money to arm themselves while devoting such a little share of their national budget to develop their agriculture. Together with the Minister of Agriculture, I have had the opportunity to take part in a number of FAO conferences in Rome and to visit a number of underdeveloped countries both in Latin America and Africa, and I can assure the House that back in Canada when we realize the tremendous potential of our farm industry, we are proud of all our past and future achievements. I must say that agriculture in Canada, which has already been mentioned by several speakers during this debate, is one of our major industries. High interest rates affect all Canadians, but in some parts of the country farmers are affected most. And I recognize with the opposition which has introduced this motion that solutions must be found to this high inflation and mostly high interest rates dilemma which, I hope, is only temporary.

Mr. Speaker, I certainly hope that our colleagues across the aisle will recognize this, and I do believe that several of them, who have sat on the Committee on Agriculture, will also recognize that the federal government, and I do not mean only the present government but all previous governments, has done everything in its power to provide Canadian farmers with all that they need so that Canada may continue to be one of the most progressive agricultural countries and, especially, the best fed country in the world.

Finally, I would like to pay tribute to the Minister of Agriculture. Perhaps I am a bit biased for having worked with him, but if there is someone who has stood up for the cause of agriculture both in caucus and across Canada it is certainly this minister, and also for having acted in his capacity a number of times, I can say that everywhere, be it in the maritimes, in western Canada, in Ontario or in Quebec, people have always had the highest regard for him, because agriculture means a great deal to him, and because he defends it as best he can, and he does so admirably well.

• (2150)

[English]

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills): Mr. Speaker, it is easy to agree with this motion condemning the government for its treatment of the agricultural community. Among the many faults the government must bear, clearly the major one must be its treatment of agriculture. There is no doubt that the farmers of the nation should be in the streets rioting. The government has failed to respond in any meaningful manner to their needs.

What has the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) done for energy? The last tax increases imposed upon energy will put $50 billion into federal coffers. As Canadians we will all share a portion of that through automobile gas and home heating fuels, but 320,000 Canadian farmers will bear an inordinate share because the money which is coming in will be used for general purposes, not specific agricultural ones. Thus farmers will bear an extra burden in paying for their farm fuels, for their fertilizers, and for their chemicals. It is unfair to put that on the backs of 320,000 farmers. It should be a tax borne by the general population because the $50 billion is being used for general purposes.

What has the Minister of Agriculture done? He travelled across the country bragging about how cheap food is. For a 21-item food basket he brags that Canadians spend $55.58 as compared with $135 in Japan. The Minister of Agriculture should not be going around the country bragging about cheap food because the cost of cheap food is that farmers dropped away one by one, in the dozens, and now in the tens of hundreds. This is the cost of cheap food. Surely it is not something for the minister to brag about. He should be travelling around speaking to city groups. He should be saying to them, "Folks, you have had cheap food. It has cost us enormously because we have lost many agricultural producers". Why is the Minister of Agriculture not doing that?

Mr. Whelan: I am doing that, and you know it.

Mr. Thacker: What is the Minister of Agriculture doing? I have read all his speeches. I do not see that in any of his speeches.

What is the Minister of Agriculture doing about the capital gains tax? He was elected on a promise of changing V-Day to 1974. They did not honour it. He is party to a white paper which claimed that now they will increase the tax to 100 per cent. We will know when the next budget comes out whether the Minister of Agriculture has any sway in cabinet at all. I do not think he does. It is very regrettable because the 320,000 farmers of Canada need a strong and influential spokesman on that side of the House. The Minister of Agriculture, I say with great respect, has lost that. What has he done with the capital gains tax?

Mr. Whelan: Over half of them are financially well off because they are in those good programs. No other country in the world—

Mr. Thacker: He has done absolutely nothing. Everyone who lives in cities, the urban citizens of the country, get their homes—and this is their major investment—totally free of capital gains tax. But the government is putting capital gains tax on farmers, the productive side of the country.

Mr. Whelan: Farm homes are tax free.

Mr. Thacker: They are not only taxing the gains. They are taxing capital because the increase in value does not have anything to do with the real gain. It is an inflationary gain. The government has let them down badly.

Mr. Evans: They have the lowest tax rate of any group in our society.

Mr. Thacker: The hon. member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Evans) should know better. Surely he wants to have his children fed.

May I call it ten o'clock?

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. It being ten o'clock, it is my duty to inform the House that pursuant to Standing Order 589(11) the proceedings on this motion have now expired.

• (2200)

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 40 deemed to have been moved.

VIA RAIL—(A) ELIMINATION OF ATLANTIC LIMITED TRAIN SERVICE (B) REQUEST THAT MINISTER MEET NEW BRUNSWICK REPRESENTATIVES

Hon. J. Robert Howie (York-Sunbury): Mr. Speaker, most of the applications for rail passenger abandonment during the past few years have been rejected by the Canadian Transport Commission, but the very people who have been unable to convince this impartial body of the merit of their arguments in favour of abandonment have apparently been able to convince the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) that it is a desirable step. The minister has cancelled one half of the rail passenger service in the maritime provinces. In doing so he has made a mockery of this government's commitment to the principle of regional development. The minister has bypassed the democratic process. He avoided Parliament by making this announcement after Parliament was adjourned by closure. He has refused to see municipal officials from southern New Brunswick whose communities are directly affected by this cutback. He has ignored his provincial counterparts, particularly the minister of transport in the province of New Brunswick.

The minister said he would account to the transport committee for his conduct and would give his reasons, but his colleagues and the minister will not permit the committee to sit until after the cruel deed is accomplished. This shabby charade written for the Minister of Transport by the madhatters in his department is most unlike the gracious gentleman we have come to know in this House.

I want to call upon every Member of Parliament from New Brunswick not to be content with comments made outside the House but to stand up in this House and oppose these severe cutbacks and condemn the ruthless and undemocratic way they are being made.

The Atlantic Limited has moved more people on the shortest distance between Halifax and Montreal than any other rail passenger train in the maritime provinces. The minister has refused to make public the 1980 monthly revenue expenditure and ridership figures for the Atlantic Limited. I asked him, in writing, to do this long before Parliament resumed this fall.

We have learned from independent sources that over 200,000 people have travelled on the Atlantic Limited in 1980, and that more have travelled on it in 1981. We know for a fact that over 140,000 people travelled through McAdam, New Brunswick, en route to and from Montreal.

The visiting Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) stuck his nose into the debate last week and indicated that for every dollar spent on tickets the Government of Canada had to contribute two dollars. He did not tell us that for the air mode, the figure is in excess of $2 and for the limited marine transport in Canada it is even larger. I do not know what the Prime Minister thinks Canadians pay taxes for if not to hold our country together with a reasonable and responsible transportation system. Most certainly we are not paying taxes to buy him a new stone desk or pave his driveway or keep him in matches and candles.

One good thing to come out of this whole mess is that the Halifax-Saint John, New Brunswick, rail liner has been extended to Fredericton. I look upon this as a progressive move, but again, when a good move is made, the madhatters in the Department of Transport work on the schedule. The train is scheduled to leave Fredericton at 2.15 in the afternoon and arrive in Saint John at four o'clock. I ask you to guess when the return trip from Saint John to Fredericton leaves, Mr. Speaker? It leaves at ten minutes after four—just ten minutes after passengers arrive. Saint John is a great city but what can anyone do in ten minutes? If they could do anything in ten minutes, is it worth the time and expense of getting there and back?

The train goes on to Halifax where it arrives at 10.50 at night. It leaves there at 9.40 the next morning, so at least you could get a good night's sleep in Halifax although it might be a pretty expensive one!

For passengers travelling west from Fredericton the story is even sorrier. It now takes 13 hours, and with the new system it will take 20 hours. It seems that people are at work in the Department of Transport trying to discourage rail passenger service.

I would ask the parliamentary secretary to use his good offices to see if the schedule could not be revised so that more people could ride the trains, and thus help improve the service. The cruel abandonment of the Edmunston to Moncton daylliner contributes to the isolation of Plaster Rock, Napadogan, McGivney, Minto and many small communities in southern New Brunswick which do not have an alternative form of public transportation. Plaster Rock got some good news on September 29 from the CTC. An order was made that the existing station facilities at Plaster Rock be kept clean, heated and lighted for the comfort and convenience of the travelling public. But on November 15, there will be no travelling public.

• (2205)

The way to go, I suggest, is to modernize and use the light rapid comfortable trains. Therefore in April, and again in May of this year, I urged the minister to include the maritimes in this train system and to bring these more modern trains to downtown Fredericton. On July 14, I received a letter from the vice-president of VIA Atlantic who referred to my correspondence to the minister and said he was answering for him. His letter reads:

> When the LRCs were first ordered in 1977, it was our firm intention to assign two train sets for operations in the maritimes. However, conditions have changed considerably since then. We must now live within a financial envelope system for rail passenger service in Canada, and in order to ensure that the best possible return on investment be earned by the LRCs, circumstances dictate that we must use the first ten sets in the Quebec-Windsor corridor.

When the minister was in Saint John, New Brunswick, a few weeks ago and lecturing politicians to the effect that we should be unpopular, advice which he himself has taken very well, he indicated that maritimers would soon be travelling on the LRCs. Where? In the Windsor corridor? I would like the parliamentary secretary to clarify this matter for us tonight and indicate that maritimers will be travelling on the LRCs in the maritimes.

My final request tonight is for the visiting Prime Minister. The next time he goes around the world on a tour, will he please take the Minister of Transport with him?

Mr. Robert Bockstael (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member asked if there was reasonable doubt about the correctness of the government's decision to terminate some VIA Rail services, particularly in New Brunswick.

The government's decision was taken only after careful consideration of all the factors. It was not an easy one. It was recognized that the discontinuance of certain services would cause some inconvenience, but it is hoped that those affected will be able to adjust relatively quickly.

The reason for discontinuing the Atlantic train is based on the extremely high cost of operating transcontinental services. The Atlantic and the Ocean together cost the Canadian taxpayer over $45 million in 1980, which represents a subsidy of $76 for the average passenger. A passenger travelling the full distance from Halifax to Montreal would pay a fare of $58, but the true cost of his trip is $210. The Canadian taxpayer pays the difference of $152.

Transcontinental trains are expensive to run because they provide a full range of sleeping and dining facilities designed for long-distance travel, even though the trains are primarily used for shorter trips where these facilities are not required.

Once the government had decided to retain only one of the two transcontinental services, the question became which one? Both trains carried approximately the same number of people in 1980; the Atlantic carried 286,000 and the Ocean carried 304,000. Both had similar costs and revenues. The revenue-cost ratio was 28 per cent. However, the Ocean served an all-Canadian route, whereas the Atlantic passed through U.S. territory and was therefore chosen for termination.

The actual travel time from Halifax to Montreal on the Ocean route is only a few minutes longer than by the old Atlantic route. It is recognized that residents of southwestern New Brunswick will have to backtrack to Moncton to catch the Ocean, but the connection is a good one, with the Ocean departing for Montreal 30 minutes after the arrival of the train from Fredericton and Saint John.

• (2210)

HOUSING—SALE OF HOUSES HELD BY CANADA MORTGAGE AND HOUSING CORPORATION (B) SALES TO INVESTORS AND SPECULATORS

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Mr. Speaker, on October 22 last I asked several questions of the minister responsible for the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation. The first question was with respect to the selling of repossessed townhouses and apartments to purchasers on the basis that the minister would cause the corporation to take back first mortgages. The second question was in connection with the manner of the sale.

It has become apparent to me and others that the minister is insisting on one price for townhouses or apartments to the ordinary purchaser, but is prepared to deal wholesale with the speculator or investor. Indeed, in one case he is prepared to offer apartment townhouses to tenants and others at $38,000 on average, and presumably prepared—indeed, we understand he has a back pocket sale lined up—to sell 150 units to one speculator at an average price of $31,000.

Dealing with the first issue, two years ago Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation ran into serious problems and was required to borrow some $200 million from the government in order to re-establish its insurance fund. It is on that basis that the minister says, "I cannot take back mortgages and hold mortgages in Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation." We in this House have to remind the minister that he is in charge of a corporation called the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, and it is his business to hold mortgages. Certainly at a time when the mortgage rate on the open market is 19.5 per cent, 20 per cent and 21 per cent, it is his obligation to do what he can with his limited stock of housing to lead the way and give decent low-cost mortgages to people. I do not suggest he give these units away. This is not to be a giveaway program, but the rates should be 10 per cent, 12 per cent or 14 per cent at the most—something that people can afford to pay.

What is this minister doing with his repossessions? Is he saying to the proposed purchaser, "pay me all cash?" Having regard to the one project at 3120-3170 Kerwin Avenue in Mississauga, the minister is saying to the tenants who have leases with CMHC that they can buy their suites for $38,000 cash. He will take them down to the Toronto-Dominion Bank and arrange a 19.75 per cent first mortgage for them. He might, under certain circumstances, be prepared to pare down the mortgage by 3 per cent so the face of the mortgage will only look like 16.5 per cent. He will work a bonus deal with them. That is a bit of a scabby system, but that is the kind of thing this minister is prepared to do.

The most scabby thing this minister wants to do is to send around a girl to talk the tenants out of picking up their options. He says, in effect, "You people really cannot afford to pay $38,000 all cash for these apartments, can you?" It has to be all cash; he cannot take terms. He can then sell them to an investor for $31,000.

I want the minister or his parliamentary secretary to give a couple of undertakings to the House tonight: First that he will sell his condominium and townhouse apartment repossessions on the open market using real estate brokers on an open listing, and that he will take back mortgages for 85 per cent of value at 12 per cent or 13 per cent, and that is all, on a fair basis, and let people have a chance at these units. My second request of the minister or the parliamentary secretary is that he will under no circumstances do what he did at 570 Darcel Road, Malton. At that time, as shown in an answer to an Order Paper question on June 17 to the House, the minister declared the details of the sale of 570 condominium town houses to four numbered Quebec companies. The companies did not even have enough sense to give themselves a name. They were numbered companies. These companies can be incorporated by writing an application for incorporation to the Quebec government and it will assign a number. Four numbered companies bought 570 units at a price slightly in excess of $20,000 each.

• (2215)

I want the undertaking from this minister that the speculators are out and that never again, at any time, will he sell houses in the region of Peel en bloc to speculators, and that he will sell them on the open market and hold mortages on reasonable terms.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Robert Bockstael (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I should like to comment on matters concerning the sale of houses held by Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

As the hon. member is aware, CMHC is responsible for the administration of the mortgage insurance fund known as MIF. The recent unprecedented number of claims against the fund has resulted in the MIF encountering substantial losses. To replenish the fund, CMHC has accelerated the sale of its real estate holdings. The fund itself, while it sells the real estate it acquires, lacks the liquidity to finance these sales. Accordingly, these sales are effected with private mortgage funds, at private institutional mortgage rates. In the sense that CMHC does not provide direct funding, units are sold to individuals on a cash basis. Purchasers may, in certain cases, benefit from NHA insurance by arranging financing through an approved lender.

I should like to point out, Mr. Speaker, that CMHC units are being offered for sale at market prices. In condominium projects where a large number of units have been acquired and cannot be sold individually on the open market at their target price, CMHC may obtain the consent of the condominium board and offer the units to investor-purchasers at prices which generally reflect home owner prices. The conditions of sale can, at times, reveal an apparent disparity between the price paid by an investor-purchaser and a tenant-purchaser, for example where an interest rate buy-down is involved.

The request for proposal technique is directed toward qualified bidders interested in purchasing CMHC's real estate for rental-investment purposes. This process allows potential purchasers more flexibility as to the terms and conditions than the traditional tendering process. This procedure has proved to be a flexible and effective marketing approach in the attainment of CMHC's objective of disposing of some of its real estate portfolio directly to the open market. It offers no special favours to the private sector and obtains the best price and associated conditions for each property, taking into account the current and near future market conditions at the time of sale. Where CMHC anticipates that the purchaser may resell, the agreement for sale may provide, among other conditions, that CMHC will share in the profit ultimately realized by the speculator-purchaser on such resale.

VIA RAIL—EFFECT OF CUTBACKS ON WESTERN ECONOMY

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Mr. Speaker, on October 26 I directed a question to the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Axworthy). I pointed out:

> As chairman of the Western Development Committee, and as one who is supposed to be stimulating economic growth in the west, he will know that the unilateral cutbacks in the VIA Rail routes will have a devastating effect on the western economy in general and cause the Canadian tourist industry losses in the millions. Also, there will be lay-offs in the rail and tourism industry.

The minister replied that a major Air Canada facility has been moved to Manitoba. He concluded by saying:

> —which will be of substantial help to the hon. member's constituency. We are trying to promote industries in western Canada which are modern, up to date, and high technology industries, and not to support obsolescence.

● (2220)

The Minister of Employment and Immigration is supposed to be stimulating employment, not reducing it, as the VIA Rail cuts will do. Between 8,000 and 16,000 jobs will be lost across Canada, and 500 will be lost in Winnipeg alone. How many hundreds will be lost in related sectors? The Winnipeg local of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Transport and General Workers Union has lost 167.

The minister stated that it is all right to cut VIA Rail back because we now have a new Air Canada overhaul hangar in Winnipeg. The minister is giving us nothing. The Liberal Party is giving us absolutely nothing. All the government is doing is returning a small portion of something that should never have been taken away in the first place.

I want to read from a letter I received from the Winnipeg-Farlane Camping and Recreation Association, which is a group of Winnipeggers who travel by VIA Rail from Winnipeg to the Sioux Lookout area. The association points out the following:

> We have recently received figures on the performance of Trains 144 and 145, which show that over the past three months a total of 4,368 passengers were carried. This amounts to a load factor of over 120 per cent either arriving or departing at or from Winnipeg.

This is not obsolescence, yet the government is going to cut back on VIA Rail. What are these people supposed to do, take JetStars down to their camps? They have no other way to get down there except by VIA Rail. It is all very well for Liberal cabinet ministers to fly around in JetStars and for two of them to go to the same city at the same time.

This camping association also said this:

> What more can VIA ask for in the line of performance? As it is, at least 20 per cent of the passengers on most runs have to stand in the baggage car and/or wait for next week's train.

The Liberals want to cut this back, and there is 120 per cent occupancy.

The western tourism industry and economy in general will lose millions of dollars and will be forced to lay off hundreds of workers because of the cutbacks. Jasper will be hard hit, since trains are the main method of getting into the town. Cuts will also hurt many Manitoba towns such as Rivers, Thompson, Thicket Portage, and numerous other small communities.

Recently there was a letter in the Winnipeg Free Press from a travel agent in Florida in which he pointed out:

> Our travel agency sends more Americans to travel by Canada's scenic railroad routes than for any other reason.

We will lose tourist dollars because of the VIA Rail cutbacks. Tourists do not spend money just on the railroad. They spend it in hotels, restaurants, buying souvenirs and so forth. We will lose all this business.

What about the 500,000 acrophobiacs, those who fear heights? They have no way to travel or they will have to find other methods of travel because they cannot travel by aircraft. It is all right for Liberal ministers to fly around in JetStars, but these people, 500,000 of them, will have their VIA Rail travel cut back. No consideration will be given to those people by the Liberal government.

The government is supposed to be cutting back in order to save money. It is all right to save by cutting back VIA Rail, but there will be not cutbacks on Liberal ministers' flying around in JetStars. They can fly anywhere they like. They can fly to Liberal fund raising dinners—two to the same location—and to hell with the Canadian people.

This is just another example of why western Canada feels alienated. Western Canadians are not permitted an input into the decision-making process. Indeed, in the case of the VIA Rail cutbacks no one was. The Conservative VIA Rail task force allowed Canadians to have some input. This is what the Minister of Employment and Immigration should have been fighting for. He should have been fighting for full-scale hearings. I hope we will hear tonight from the parliamentary secretary that the minister will take some action and put some pressure on the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) to withdraw his order in council cutting back VIA Rail service in western Canada.

Mr. Mayer: Good luck.

• (2225)

Mr. Rémi Bujold (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member mentioned that some ministers have travelled on government planes to benefit dinners. I think the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) denied that in the House today. Second, if the hon. member was here last week, he heard the reason why the Minister of Transport has made some cutbacks on VIA Rail. The Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Axworthy) took some measures to be in charge—

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, all cuts in VIA Rail services were planned in such a way as to encourage surplus employees to adapt to change. The company and the unions representing the workers concerned have agreed on a series of measures designed to minimize the negative impact of the changes on the workers. In addition, the minister has encouraged the company and the unions to find other jobs for the employees to be laid off, especially at this time when there is a great demand for specialized workers throughout Canada. In the case of all surplus employees at VIA Rail the minister favours the setting up of an employer-employee advisory committee under the sponsorship of the Manpower Advisory Service with the view to finding a solution to the workers' problems.

[English]

The hon. member asked what the Minister of Employment and Immigration as chairman of the Western Development Corporation has done to help western Canada. I remind him of the new economic initiative during the last year in western Canada through the efforts of the Minister of Employment and Immigration. First, there was Canertech, the new federal Crown corporation for alternate energy. Second, there was $100 million for the core area development initiative by the federal government. There were 3,500 new jobs created to revitalize the centre of the city. Third, there was the micro-electronic research centre at the University of Manitoba. Fourth, there was a new computer facility for Air Canada in the city of Winnipeg at a cost of $60 million. Finally, there was a $150 million contract for aerospace firms, especially in the city of Winnipeg, in the year 1980. These are examples of what the Minister of Employment and Immigration as chairman of the Western Development Corporation has done for western Canada during the last year.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at two o'clock p.m.

At 10.28 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Tuesday, November 3, 1981

The House met at 2 p.m.

• (1405)

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

AGRICULTURE

ASSISTANCE SOUGHT FOR CATTLE PRODUCERS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, Canadian beef producers are in a real financial bind, mostly due to high interest rates. All the federal government has done to date is spend $40,000 on a Senate report, plus a few more thousand dollars on another report which the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) has ordered. Both are directed toward forcing the cattle producers into marketing boards. I move, seconded by the hon. member for Medicine Hat (Mr. Hargrave):

That the federal government make use of the present stabilization program and assist the cattle producers to at least 90 per cent of the previous five-year average which the program guarantees, but more preferably to 100 per cent.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

CALL FOR REMOVAL OF FEDERAL SALES TAX FROM FARM FUEL—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia): Madam Speaker, in view of the pressures on farmers relating to escalating production costs, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers):

That this House call on the government to remove all federal sales tax from farm fuel used in the production of food.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

THE MINISTRY

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT BY CABINET MINISTERS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Madam Speaker, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Central Nova (Mr. MacKay), that this House of Commons endeavour to make known:

Cabinet members tell us they really care
As they flit about our nation travelling by air.
Formation flying becomes part of the test
As each high-flying minister wings his way west.
For—

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Towers:

—13 Cabinet members all Alberta-bound
And there aren't enough JetStars to go 'round
To accommodate all the "Captains of the Clouds."

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I must admit I enjoy the hon. member's verses but 43s are for serious motions.

Some hon. Members: It is serious.

* * *

INDIAN AFFAIRS

EFFORTS BY INDIANS TO ACHIEVE ECONOMIC INDEPENDENCE—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Madam Speaker, I hope this motion may obtain the full consent of the House, as I think we all agree with its purpose. Whereas the Sechelt Indian Band is one of the most progressive bands in British Columbia, if not of all Canada, and whereas the narrow and restrictive controls imposed by the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development have curtailed rational social and economic development of the Sechelt Indian Band, and whereas the government encouraged the band, who invested years of planning to develop guidelines for a separate act to cover the development of the Sechelt band, only to be turned down by the bureaucrats, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton):

That the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development commit himself to assisting Indian people to free themselves from dependence on government and to support their efforts to achieve economic independence and social fulfilment.

S.O. 43

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

USE OF CANADIAN-DESIGNED ARM BY UNITED STATES SPACE SHUTTLE—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mrs. Ursula Appolloni (York South-Weston): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. Tomorrow morning the space shuttle Columbia will begin its second voyage out of the earth's atmosphere. It will be carrying in its cargo hold a special arm developed in Canada by Spar Aerospace and the National Research Council.

In view of the fact that the Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Roberts) will be in the United States on Thursday to mark Canada's contribution to the American space program, I move, seconded by the member for Willowdale (Mr. Peterson):

That the minister convey to representatives of the United States government as well as to officials of NASA the best wishes of this House for a safe and productive journey.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

EMPLOYMENT

NECESSITY FOR IMPROVED FORECASTING OF CAREER OPPORTUNITIES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Madam Speaker, whereas this week has been declared Canada Career Week, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Pembina (Mr. Elzinga):

That the minister responsible for employment improve forecasting of future job needs so that career counsellors in our high schools can help our students prepare for careers that will not be obsolete when they finish their training and education.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

POST OFFICE

IMPACT OF POSTAGE RATE INCREASES ON CHARITABLE ORGANIZATIONS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. John McDermid (Brampton-Georgetown): Madam Speaker, the announced postage rate increase will create a severe burden for all Canadians. Charitable organizations such as the Canadian Lung Association, whose sole source of funds is derived through the Christmas seal campaign utilizing the mail for its drive, will be seriously jeopardized. I move, seconded by the hon. member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker):

That this House reject the postage rate increase until such time as an improvement in service becomes apparent and supports a measure relieving recognized charitable organizations using the mail to raise revenue, from this horrendous increase.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

THE ENVIRONMENT

POLLUTION OF LAKE ONTARIO WATERS USED FOR HUMAN CONSUMPTION—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43. Since Pollution Probe has recommended that the Harris Water Treatment Plant in Toronto must be upgraded to where it is capable of removing the estimated 30 chemical substances that have been identified in the waters of Lake Ontario, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Broadview-Greenwood (Mr. Rae):

That this House direct Environment Canada to provide financial and technical assistance to Metropolitan Toronto to ensure that the Harris Water Treatment Plant is upgraded so that the plant can remove all chemical substances from Lake Ontario water which is used for human consumption, and that persons responsible for this contamination be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

● (1410)

HAZARDOUS SUBSTANCES

UREA FORMALDEHYDE—COMPENSATION SOUGHT FOR HOME OWNERS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Madam Speaker, 2,000 home owners in the region of Niagara answered the call of the government to conserve energy by insulating their homes, but unfortunately they did it with CMHC-approved urea formaldehyde foam insulation. I move, seconded by the hon. member for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. Bradley):

That since those home owners are now suffering emotional and economic hardship and suffering health impairment as well, the government should proceed to evaluate damage caused by that foam insulation in accordance with a commitment made by the hon. member for Hochelaga-Maisonneuve, and undertake to compensate the victims accordingly.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

ENERGY

WESTERN POWER GRID PROJECT—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Robert Bockstael (St. Boniface): Madam Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43. The federal government has contributed considerably to the development of Manitoba's hydroelectric power industry by providing large long-term loans to the province at very low interest rates, and on excellent terms of repayment. Recently it was announced that the provincial premiers were unable to reach an agreement on their much discussed western power grid. In light of the accomplishments of the federal government in developing Canada's energy resources it is now time the three western premiers showed some responsibility and initiative in deriving revenue from these hydroelectric power resources. I move, seconded by the hon. member for Don Valley East (Mr. Smith):

That the House direct hon. members opposite in both the Conservative and New Democratic parties to urge their provincial counterparts to reach an agreement as soon as possible on this important energy project so that western Canadians are no longer misled or subjected to any further delays.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

IRAN—GOVERNMENT ATTACKS ON BAHA'I COMMUNITY—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. David Kilgour (Edmonton-Strathcona): Madam Speaker, the United Nations Commission on Human Rights has expressed profound concern for the safety of members of the Baha'i community in Iran. I believe all members of this House have received written indications of systematic persecution, including torture, beatings, murders, kidnappings, and other forms of harassment. I therefore move, seconded by the hon. member for Edmonton South (Mr. Roche):

That this House expresses its profound concern about the perilous situation facing that religious community, urges the Secretary General to continue his efforts to persuade the Government of Iran to prevent further attacks on the Baha'i community and to grant them religious freedom; and draws the attention of the Canadian people to the perilous situation faced by the Baha'i community of Iran.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

FORESTRY

MOUNTAIN PINE BEETLE EPIDEMIC—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Madam Speaker, under the provisions of Standing Order 43 I move, seconded by the hon. member for Cariboo-Chilcotin (Mr. Greenaway):

That representatives of the federal government presently attending a two-day workshop on the economic, social and ecological problems related to the mountain pine beetle epidemic in western Canada and the western United States be given instructions to commit, on behalf of the federal government, all the resources necessary to combat this natural phenomenon threatening our trees, which are our most important natural resource.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

FINANCE

INTEREST PAID ON GOVERNMENT OF CANADA ANNUITIES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, in 1976 the Government of Canada promised a periodic review of Government of Canada annuity interest rates. The government is prepared to pay Canada Savings Bond purchasers 19.5 per cent on their bonds, is prepared to pay nearly 18 per cent on Treasury bills, and is prepared to pay long-term bond holders 16 per cent or more. I therefore move, seconded by the hon. member for Brampton-Georgetown (Mr. McDermid):

That the Government of Canada forthwith increase the interest paid on Government of Canada annuities to holders of those annuitities to at least 16 per cent, that the Government of Canada cease taking unfair advantage of persons who, in good faith, purchased annuities from the government, and that the government fulfil the promises it made.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

[Translation]

HUMAN RIGHTS

REQUEST FOR AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL BILL CONCERNING YOUNG OFFENDERS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, I rise on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity under the provisions of Standing Order 43.

Whereas the Supreme Court of Canada's decision with respect to Quebec Bill 24, the Youth Protection Act, takes away the basic rights of young Quebecers, and whereas this decision undermines the fundamental principles of this progressive piece of Quebec legislation, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Saskatoon-East (Mr. Ogle):

That the Solicitor General of Canada immediately announce his intention of amending the provisions of the federal bill respecting young offenders so as to restore and observe the principles of Bill 24, not only for the sake of young Quebecers but for all young Canadians.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. This motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent for this motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

● (1415)

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

THREAT OF RETALIATORY ACTION BY UNITED STATES IN RESPONSE TO CANADIAN LEGISLATIVE PROPOSALS

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: I hope the minister will be as cheerful. On October 28 Marc Leland, the U.S. Assistant Treasury Secretary, said before a Senate subcommittee that the United States administration intends to pressure Ottawa before GATT, the OECD, the IMF, the World Bank and, if necessary, to invoke special presidential powers under the U.S. Trade Act in response to Canadian measures that adversely affect U.S. interests and undermine the international trade and investment climate. The minister will also know that the United States need to do nothing in response to various requests Canada has made to them about acid rain, the east coast boundary and fisheries dispute, the northern pipeline and the like.

Will the minister now make it clear, particularly for his junior colleague from Windsor, whether the government is going forward with the changes proposed by the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce which would expand the powers of FIRA? Has the government decided to initiate any changes in the new economic policy that might improve the atmosphere with the United States and encourage them to meet our requests in these other areas?

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, since the hon. member has today asked his first question in the area of his new responsibilities, perhaps inspired by press reports, I think I should congratulate him on the new duties he has assumed. He may need my congratulations.

Mr. Clark: No wonder Pierre Trudeau travels.

Mr. MacGuigan: With regard to the preamble to the hon. member's question, Canada has no reason to be concerned about any kind of challenge which any government, including that of the United States, may bring to our actions in international bodies. We have not taken any actions which are inconsistent with our international responsibilities. We are prepared to have them challenged and will successfully defend them at any time. The hon. member will have to wait for the budget to get some of the answers to his questions. However, I can tell him that the matters about which he inquires are presently under review.

* * *

TRADE

QUERY RESPECTING GOVERNMENT POLICY

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): Madam Speaker, my supplementary is directed to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. The Minister of Finance made a speech in Calgary several days ago. He said his budget will not aim to Canadianize the industrial and trading sectors the way the oil industry is being Canadianized by the NEP. He stated that "the private sector has the principal role for economic development". Will the minister confirm to this House that the new industrial and trading policy he has been working on will not discriminate against the foreign or even the domestic Canadian investor as the NEP did? Will he confirm there will be no further federal intervention in the economy by the expansion of Crown corporation activities, PetroCan, or whatever? In other words, will he confirm that he has come to his senses, and drop the piffle he was speaking a few months ago?

Hon. Herb Gray (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Madam Speaker, the National Energy Program document that was tabled at the time of the last budget said that the government did not envisage expanding the minimum ownership approach of the National Energy Program to other sectors. Instead of trying to develop questions in this area, questions which I think we would describe as piffle, the hon. member should have simply checked back and read what was already in the National Energy Program document.

QUERY RESPECTING PROMOTION OF FREE ENTERPRISE

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): Madam Speaker, the government has got our relationship with the United States into "dire straits" already, as it has hundreds of thousands of Canadians. Last week the Prime Minister spoke in Toronto at a $175 a plate dinner where he said that Liberals "value private enterprise as a truly magnificent creator of wealth and opportunity." The Prime Minister is a "closet" free enterpriser. Or he is suffering from economic transvestism? Is the minister also an economic transvestite? Is he going to drop the policies he has been promoting and now promote free enterprise, private enterprise as a creator of wealth and opportunity? Will he assure the House that there will be no more takeovers by Crown corporations and that he is dropping his anti-the-private-sector policies that he had ready until several months ago?

• (1420)

Hon. Herb Gray (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Madam Speaker, the policies that we are developing and promoting as a government are those which received the support of the Canadian people in the last election that gave us a majority mandate.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gray: We said from the outset, Madam Speaker, that we believe the Canadian people want the government to play an active role in support of the capacity for innovation and entrepreneurship in the private sector; that is what we have been doing and that is what we intend to continue to do.

* * *

PIPELINES

ALASKA HIGHWAY GAS PIPELINE—PASSAGE OF LEGISLATION IN UNITED STATES

Mr. Harvie Andre (Calgary Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources and it deals with U.S.-Canada relations. One of the possible casualties of the poor U.S.-Canada relations caused by the National Energy Program is the Alaska highway gas pipeline. As the minister knows, U.S. legislation necessary for this project to go ahead is receiving rough treatment from U.S. congressmen and senators who are incensed or mad with Canada for some of the more ham-handed aspects of the NEP.

Can the minister tell the House what action he is undertaking, or he is planning to undertake, to ensure that this legislation passes so that this project, worth some $30 billion and several thousand jobs to the Canadian economy will, in fact, go ahead?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, first of all I would like to congratulate the hon. member on his appointment as energy critic. He is the third energy critic for the Conservative opposition in the span of a year. I wish him a long life in his position.

With regard to the question, I shall remind my hon. friend that the Alaska highway gas pipeline is a project that is, indeed, in the interest of the United States. We have passed the necessary legislation and have taken the necessary steps to ensure the realization of this project, following strong representations from the United States, which feel that this project is in their interest. Contrary to my friend I do not believe that the United States Congress or the United States as a whole would decide to shoot itself in the foot, to use the expression of our ambassador, by not proceeding with the bills the President has asked Congress to consider and pass.

QUERY RESPECTING CONTINGENCY PLANS

Mr. Harvie Andre (Calgary Centre): I want to remind the minister of comments he made when he was energy critic for the opposition in December of 1979, when he said that iron-clad guarantees for all aspects of the Alaska highway gas pipeline were absolutely essential before the pre-build would be put in place. After asking for these iron-clad guarantees in July of 1980 the minister settled for some tin-clad guarantees from then President Carter. The minister now appears to be operating on the basis of a hope and with his fingers crossed.

In view of the daily statements in the U.S. press about reactions by congressmen and senators, as well as members of the administration, that they are not pressing this legislation and without such pressure the legislation will not pass, can the minister tell us why he can take such a complacent view and what contingency plans he has in place to look after the situation when this pipeline is, in fact, killed, as is very likely at the present time?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, for the last year and a half my hon. friends opposite have been coming out with all kinds of sombre predictions of doom and gloom. Their predictions are proven wrong every time. I shall remind my hon. friend that the United States Congress passed the resolution in 1980 stating that the Alaska highway gas pipeline was an essential part of securing the nation's energy future and that the system enjoyed the highest level of congressional support for its expeditious construction and completion by the end of 1985.

• (1425)

We have a letter of the then President of the United States, dated July 17, 1980, also confirming that view which had been passed unanimously by Congress. I believe the American Congress, the American President and the American administration stand by their statements. I think the bill introduced in Congress is clear evidence of the interest of the United States in seeing that project go.

* * *

LABOUR CONDITIONS

SEPTEMBER UNEMPLOYMENT STATISTICS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Employment and immigration figures for September show that 20,397 additional people were laid off across Canada and that in Ontario 16,284 people were laid off in the month of September. This means that 1,000 people every working day in Canada are now made unemployed. It means that over 800 people in the province of Ontario every working day are being laid off. How can the minister say that this is not the time for panic, that we have to wait another month? What kinds of programs does he now have which will give those people an opportunity to find gainful employment, either in the short or in the long term, to meet their commitments to their families?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, the reason we counsel that it is not time for panic is that any attempt to create that kind of hysteria does not lead to effective long-term solutions to the problem. We on this side of the House prefer to deal with matters in a careful and effective way rather than the rhetorical and hysterical way the hon. member apparently endorses. What we are really trying to do, as we did this summer, is establish direct job-creation programs so that 1981 and 1982 will provide additional work for well over 80,000 Canadians in a variety of ways to ease those areas where high unemployment is expected. The approach taken by the government is a careful and effective one, rather than the rhetorical and panic-ridden approach which his party oftentimes adopts.

MASSEY-FERGUSON LAY-OFFS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, by way of supplementary question let me ask the minister, in the careful and considerate approach which he is taking, whether he can offer some guidance for the 600 people who are about to be laid off next Friday at Massey-Ferguson in Brantford. Where should they go to find employment? How will they be able to find employment in an area where, within a 20 or 25-mile radius there is massive unemployment in almost every community? What kind of reasonable thinking will come from the minister to give those people some help?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, the federal Department of Employment and Immigration, along with other departments, has a number of programs in place designed to deal directly with the problem of lay-offs. We establish, in co-operation with the unions and local business corporations which may be affecting those lay-offs, manpower consultative services that deal with each individual employee. If they want to provide for retraining or for new job applications, they are given the available information, the available counselling, and the available job opportunities in the same area. I suggest the hon. member speak to his leader. In the area of Oshawa where lay-offs occurred, we were able to place close to 80 or 90 per cent of those persons laid off. We cannot control individual decisions by individual businesses affected by the cycles of the business economy.

Mr. Andre: It is not cycles, it is government policy.

Mr. Axworthy: But we have a number of programs in place to ensure that the workers are helped in the circumstances.

PROGRAMS TO ASSIST UNEMPLOYED

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, let me be quite specific with the minister. Indefinite lay-offs are currently taking place in Welland, London, Tillsonburg, Scarborough, Brantford, Downsview, Hamilton, Stoney Creek, Midland, Kitchener, and again in Brantford with Massey-Ferguson. Where are the specific programs for those 2,000 people who will be laid off as of next Friday in those communities? Where are the specific programs which will enable them to find either short-term or long-term employment in order to meet their commitments this winter, given that the minister has known since the summer, by his own admission, that massive unemployment figures would be showing up by the end of this fall?

• (1430)

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I would remind the hon. member that it was the action taken by this government in supplying a guarantee to Massey-Ferguson that maintained the employment for the entire work force at Massey-Ferguson and has kept them in the work force. The decision taken on November 6 was for a temporary lay-off and was in response to business conditions that the company must face. Without government action there would not be any work for people at Massey-Ferguson at all.

* * *

POST OFFICE

APPEARANCE OF MONARCH'S PORTRAIT ON POSTAGE STAMPS

Mr. Bud Bradley (Haldimand-Norfolk): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs who is responsible for the Canada Post Corporation. I was pleased that last week the Prime Minister chose this place to renew his allegiance to the Queen and to reassure us that the Queen's portrait will in fact appear on the 1982 stamps. My concern is not with the 1982 stamps, however, but with the 1983 program. Since the minister is still directly responsible for the stamp program—that does not go to the Canada Post Corporation—will he confirm or deny that instructions have been given to the planning department that the Queen's portrait is definitely to be left off all 1983 stamps?

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, I think this is speculation in the mind of the hon. member because no such instruction has ever been given. The program is decided in the very last month of the year for the following year. So obviously no plan whatsoever has been made for 1983. I am very surprised that the hon. member is speaking of the Queen's portrait not appearing on stamps in 1983. I think somebody, somewhere, is really trying to create a problem that does not exist. A lot of members of the opposition have accused the Prime Minister of being anti-monarchist. I think he showed his loyalty to the Queen clearly last week. I hope the hon. member will do the same.

Mr. Bradley: Madam Speaker, that speculation comes directly from the minister's design department for the stamp program. Since the minister did not in fact confirm or deny it, I would assume that that is a confirmation that the instruction did go out.

REQUEST THAT SENIOR CITIZENS ENJOY REDUCED POSTAL RATES

Mr. Bud Bradley (Haldimand-Norfolk): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is also for the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. The minister will know from his mail that senior citizens and handicapped persons in Canada rely almost totally on the mail to communicate with their friends and loved ones. He will also know that an increase in postal rates of the magnitude proposed by the government will be tremendously detrimental to people on fixed incomes. Will the minister consider some form of assistance for senior citizens and handicapped persons, possibly along the lines of a special stamp, at say, 50 per cent of the first-class rate?

[Translation]

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, I think the hon. member misunderstood my earlier reply. I denied outright that my department's postage design division had been given orders not to publish stamps with the portrait of the Queen in 1983. I denied this allegation and if the opposition member wants to be reassured and if he is interested, I can assure him that I have given no order for either 1983, 1984, 1985, 1986 or 1987.

Concerning the possibility of assistance to the handicapped, I am sure that all members on both sides of this House sympathize with the problems these people may have. However, I do not feel that the new Canada Post Corporation should get involved in this kind of assistance program. Within the Canadian government and also at other levels of government, there are programs aimed at providing assistance to those who require it, and I do not think the Canada Post Corporation should be used for this purpose.

[English]

FINANCE

TAXATION OF VOLUNTARY ORGANIZATIONS

Mr. Walter McLean (Waterloo): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State. The minister will recall that earlier this year the former Secretary of State indicated that the National Voluntary Organizations' "give and take" tax proposals would be presented to cabinet. Would the minister tell the House whether he has persuaded the government to adopt these proposals?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, the question is accurate in relation to the position that was taken by the former Secretary of State. I have assumed his responsibilities and will see to it that cabinet has occasion to examine a particular proposition carefully. At this time my officials are preparing a document to be placed before cabinet for consideration in relation to the "give and take" proposals. I can assure the hon. member that the matter will be processed without unreasonable delay.

REQUEST FOR CUSHIONING OF VOLUNTARY SECTOR FROM INCREASE IN POSTAL RATES

Mr. Walter McLean (Waterloo): Madam Speaker, as I listened to the Secretary of State I did not hear him indicate to the House that, when presenting these proposals, he would encourage their adoption. The voluntary sector, which was encouraged at Consultation 81 earlier in the year to believe that the government was going to act, now finds itself faced with the government acting in only one way, that is, with increased postal rates to effect them adversely.

May I ask the minister whether he will send a signal to the over three million Canadians who support the voluntary agencies with time and money, and will the minister intervene on their behalf to see that the voluntary sector is cushioned from the negative effects of this massive increase in postal rates?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, since assuming the portfolio of Secretary of State I have met with representatives of the National Voluntary Organizations. I want to reaffirm the recognition by this government of the vital importance of the contributions made to our society by voluntary organizations in Canada. They make a tremendous contribution. In many ways they are the backbone of our country, and certainly the government is going to continue to be supportive of the propositions they bring forth.

* * *

SHIPBUILDING

QUERY RESPECTING GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. Is the minister aware that over the next ten years roughly $33 billion will be spent on marine platforms, with about $1.3 billion being spent next year and $1.8 billion the following year? In this House the minister has consistently promised to put forward a coherent shipbuilding policy for Canadians. On July 8, 1980, he promised that we would have the policy by early fall; he promised it again on July 15; his parliamentary secretary has promised it, and the Prime Minister has promised it. Now it is the late fall of 1981. Where is the shipbuilding policy so that Canadians can capture the benefits from the shipbuilding that will go on in this country?

Hon. Herb Gray (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Madam Speaker, I said that before the government would announce a new policy for the shipbuilding and ship repair industry we would carry out a wide-ranging consultation with the industry, its workers, and potential users of ships. This consultative process is just being completed. I hope to receive the report from the chairman of our interdepartmental working group very soon and I will use that as a basis for discussion in cabinet with a view to bringing forward the policy that my hon. friend has requested.

Mr. Skelly: Madam Speaker we have heard two ministers stand up today with the old pie in the sky theory. There is going to be pie in the sky when they die!

● (1440)

ORDERS PLACED IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): In the last nine months of this year, $700 million worth of Canadian ships has been contracted for building in foreign countries such as Japan, the United States, and Europe. When is the minister going to get his butt in gear and ensure that—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Skelly: —these jobs will be created in Canada? We cannot afford this kind of problem any more. Therefore, when will he stop creating jobs in Japan, in Europe and the United States, and start creating employment for Canadians?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Herb Gray (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Madam Speaker, my hon. friend may not know this, but yesterday, in Saint John, New Brunswick, I announced federal government support of some $12 million to enable the expansion of the Saint John Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Company so that that company could go, at one and the same time, into the shipbuilding, ship repair and offshore equipment field, something which will bring some 400 new jobs to the workers of that area. A few weeks earlier, I was in Vancouver where I took part in the ceremony at the Burrard yard with respect to the opening of a new floating drydock which will bring hundreds of new jobs in the ship repair field to workers in that area.

Also, the federal government assistance to the Panamax project in Halifax which will also bring hundreds of new jobs to that area. Finally, I might add that on August 27 I announced the federal government's new program to assure Canadian workers a full and fair opportunity with respect to taking part in the megaprojects, including offshore equipment. This program is in operation, so we are not waiting for the shipbuilding policy. We are operating now to carry on the type of development my hon. friend has been talking about.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): You just torpedoed yourself.

* * *

[Translation]

NATIONAL CAPITAL COMMISSION

INQUIRY WHETHER POLICY RELATED TO GREENBELT IN OTTAWA-CARLETON HAS BEEN MODIFIED

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Public Works who is responsible for the National Capital Commission. Last week, Ottawa newspapers headlined that the NCC was prepared to give up NCC land located in the Greenbelt, the untouchable zone surrounding the national capital, for the purpose of promoting the building of a microelectronics centre in the Ottawa-Carleton region. Could the minister tell us whether this transaction is to be interpreted as a change in the NCC's policy with respect to the Greenbelt in Ottawa-Carleton, and if so, when and by whom the details of this transaction will be officially announced?

[English]

Hon. Paul J. Cosgrove (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, I thank the hon. member for his interest in this subject, and congratulate him on his continuing interest in matters affecting the National Capital Commission and the area, generally speaking. I confirm that I have discussed the subject which he has raised with the chairman of the National Capital Commission. He has indicated to me that the commission has not changed its policy vis-à-vis the Greenbelt, that there is opportunity to work with the province, I understand, through its BILD program, and other municipalities and the private sector. Such a program, under proper conditions, would fall within the existing policy and plans of the commission with respect to the Greenbelt.

* * *

EDUCATION

MINISTER'S POSITION ON GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State, who knows that there are some 738,000 young Canadians in our colleges and universities and that they represent the real, true future for the country. He also knows that the cost of post-secondary education is some $5 billion, of which the taxpayers allocate $2 billion through this Parliament, and some $3 billion through their legislatures. He also knows that the seven provincial governments east of Saskatchewan have substantial deficits. He also knows that it is Liberal policy to reduce its share for post-secondary education, and that that will immediately cause tuition increases, a cut in programs, or, indeed, increased provincial deficits. Why does the Secretary of State, as a former premier of a have-not province, agree with such a policy?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, I thank the hon. member for Lethbridge-Foothills for learning his lines so well. I only regret that the quality of the delivery was much better than the accuracy of the content, and that the hon. member—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Regan: —had so many errors that, if I were marking his paper, there would be no way I would be able to give him a pass at all.

First of all, in relation to the proportion of the cost of post-secondary education that is paid by the Government of Canada as compared to the provinces, the hon. member is totally inaccurate, as he is in a number of the other items he mentioned. I want to assure him, in case he was not here when I explained before, that the Government of Canada places a very high priority on the continued support of post-secondary education. I point out to him that in this regard the proof of the pudding is in the eating, and that for the past number of years the federal government has been increasing the proportion of the cost of post-secondary education that we pay; whereas the provinces, as a whole, and most of them individually, have been decreasing their share. I suggest to the hon. member that he go back home to Alberta and urge the province to use its great Heritage Fund to provide a better level of support to post-secondary education.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST THAT MINISTER RESIGN IF FUNDING REDUCED

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills): Madam Speaker, every one of these statistics came from the Task Force on Fiscal Arrangements. The minister knows that the three-year delay in the GNP results in the federal government paying less. Concerning all of the figures, I challenge him to show me that they are in error. In a letter to students, dated October 29, 1981, the minister said:

> Some may say that the federal Government plans to drastically reduce its support for post-secondary education. This is simply not true.

My supplementary question is this: Is the Secretary of State prepared to resign his seat if there is a cut in the federal share of post-secondary education?

Some hon. Members: Yes or no?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Secretary of State): I want to assure the hon. member through Your Honour that I have no intention of resigning my seat, because I think that by being here I am able to express a view of the way Canada should operate which is useful in relation to providing assistance to our students in higher education and in relation to the development of a better, not worse, system of post-secondary education. I suggest to the hon. member that if he is going to be taken in by phony statistics, if he is going to listen to the Tory propaganda—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Regan: —that was spread across this country, he is not serving the interests of the students. He should recognize that, if he has some way of making criticism based on actions that government has not taken, then that is not serving a particularly good interest. He would be better off, when he has something to talk about when government has taken some action, to ask then for an explanation rather than question us on some mythical Conservative propaganda.

STATEMENT MADE BY GOVERNMENT LEADER IN SENATE

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Secretary of State, who tends to dismiss as totally inaccurate reports that the government intends to reduce its commitment to our community colleges and our universities. I would like to refer him to some accurate figures. At least I would think that they are accurate, because Senator Perrault, speaking on behalf of the government in the other place, stated on October 27 that the government remains committed to a continuous $1.5 billion reduction—

Mr. Nielsen: Quote, unquote.

Miss MacDonald: —in post-secondary education and health care.

I would like to ask the Secretary of State whether he agrees with that statement made by the government leader in the Senate, or whether this is the case of the cabinet speaking out of one side of its mouth on one occasion and speaking out of the other side when it so suits it.

Hon. Gerald Regan (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, if the hon. lady will—

Some hon. Members: "Member"!

Mr. Regan: —the hon. lady member will have a little patience—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Regan: —then she will have the opportunity, on the 12th, to see a budget presented. After that budget is presented by the Minister of Finance, then we will be able to deal in the situation of hard facts which are before the House, instead of speculation that may be made by various people in the Conservative ranks. I also want to take advantage of the opportunity to say to the hon. lady member that, since she is an Ontario member, she might well look at the decrease which has occurred in the past number of years in the amount of support for post-secondary education by the province of Ontario and try to get it to do its bit.

● (1450)

MINISTER'S ACTIONS

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): Madam Speaker, I would refer the Secretary of State to page 2902 of the Senate Hansard of October 27 of this year where Senator Perrault is reported to have stated, when referring to the $1.5 billion continuous reduction:

Honourable senators, this is the response provided by the Minister of Finance.

I would like to ask whether or not the Secretary of State has spoken to the Minister of Finance who has, at various times, made it very clear that there will be a $1.5 billion lowering of commitments to the provinces, to the community colleges and universities and to health care in the amount of money transferred by the federal government? Has he talked to the Minister of Finance about that, and has he and will he look at the Senate record, and will he then, on the basis of his previous statement, agree to put in his resignation from the point of view that he has said there would be no reduction coming up?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Secretary of State): No, Madam Speaker. The hon. member, of course, is one of the most practitioned practitioners of twisting around facts and figures. I do not know how many hours, when she should be making representations to the Ontario government to do its bit towards education, she spends in searching through Hansard to try to find a misprint somewhere so that she can misquote somebody.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Regan: But I do tell her this, that what I said elsewhere, what I said here and will say again, is that I am highly confident that there will not be any $1.5 billion reduction in the support of post-secondary education.

Some hon. Members: How much?

Mr. Regan: I will also tell her this—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I cannot hear the answer, so I expect a lot of members cannot hear it.

Mr. Regan: I do want to say, Madam Speaker, that I am distressed to see such an element of glee on her part in the possibility of a reduction in educational support when she represents a city like Kingston.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

STATEMENT MADE BY GOVERNMENT LEADER IN SENATE

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Acting Prime Minister.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark: I will wait until the howling stops on the other side, Madam Speaker.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Clark: Madam Speaker, was the government House Leader in the Senate speaking the policy of the government when he made the statement just quoted by my colleague, the hon. member for Kingston and the Islands?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, obviously in view of what has been said I will have to look into that. The Prime Minister would certainly want to give the answer himself.

STATEMENTS MADE BY MINISTER OF FINANCE

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, could the Acting Prime Minister tell us whether the Minister of Finance was speaking the policy of the government when he said on several occasions that there would be a reduction of $1.5 billion?

Mr. Ouellet: Ask him the question directly.

Mr. Clark: The minister, Madam Speaker, who spends most of his time advising judges, or advising small-business men to get along without the Post Office, is offering some free advice to me.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark: He is best known as the minister who digs holes in Quebec and he is digging them for himself.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark: If I could have a little quiet in the House with some of the shouting stopped on the other side—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An hon. Member: You are not the Speaker; sit down.

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Clark: Was the Minister of Finance speaking the policy of the government when he said, as he has on several occasions, that there will be a reduction in the neighbourhood of $1.5 billion in payments under the established programs financing to the provinces and, if not, what will the reduction be?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I think the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs made a lot of sense a moment ago when he observed that the Minister of Finance has been here every day since the opening of the House of Commons.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Pepin: Well, almost; give me one or two. He has certainly been here more often than anybody on the other side. He will be here tomorrow, most probably. The question can wait until then. I presume it will be resolved without a shadow of a doubt by the next budget, so nobody is being hampered, antagonized, provoked or damaged in the process.

[Translation]

INQUIRY WHETHER GOVERNMENT INTENDS TO REDUCE PAYMENTS TO PROVINCES

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): I thought that perhaps the Acting Prime Minister had played a role here, but it is obvious he did not. May I direct the question to the Minister of State for Finance? Can he tell us whether it is the intention of the Canadian government to reduce transfer payments to the provinces for social services and for post-secondary education by $1.5 billion, and if it is not $1.5 billion as the Minister of Finance has said, can the minister provide the House with the total figure for reductions planned by the government?

Mr. La Salle: It's easy, Mr. Pepin!

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of State (Finance)): Madam Speaker, I would like to remind the Leader of the Opposition that copies of the October, 1980, budget are still available. In that budget it was clearly stated that with a view to reducing the government deficit and expenditures, certain reductions were planned over two years in an area that would cover more than 20 per cent of government expenditures. If the Leader of the Opposition wants to take the trouble, he can read the paragraphs relating to that provision.

* * *

[English]

FITNESS AND AMATEUR SPORT

FUNDING OF ATHLETES

Mr. Mark Rose (Mission-Port Moody): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State responsible for fitness and amateur sport. It seems to be his day, but perhaps after the Question Period he will decide it was not his day. In any event, my question concerns the statement by Abby Hoffman, the new director of Sport Canada, who has been quoted as saying:

—too much time and effort is being spent on bureaucracy without ensuring those bureaucratic elements will have a positive effect on sport.

Miss Hoffman has also suggested that Canada will never break into the top eight internationally unless we increase our direct support for athletic funding. Presently direct sport funding, as the minister will know, amounts to about $3 million out of the $30-million budget, with the rest going to the bureaucracy and other forms of grants. Does the minister agree that we have achieved or have gone about as far as we can go athletically at international levels unless we increase this direct support to our athletes, and if he does, what does he plan to do about it?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, the hon. member, who has been a very great supporter of amateur sport in this country, quotes from a very, very distinguished acquisition to the Government of Canada. I think Abby Hoffman will be a great director for Sport Canada, and her presence there in such a senior position will, indeed, be very helpful to the cause of amateur sport in this country.

In relation to the quantum of money available for the support of amateur sport, I think we are making very great progress; indeed, we did in the Summer Games in Montreal in 1976 when, because of the game plan and the efforts of provincial and federal governments in the three years before, we moved from twenty-fifth position to tenth position in the final standings. I believe having the Winter Olympics in Calgary in 1988 provides us with the reason to make that sort of effort in relation to Winter Games in the coming years.

Certainly having additional money for broader training of elite athletes, and for providing more international competition, is a very worth-while objective. If these dismantlers of Canada across there on the left had not given away Loto Canada to the provinces we would have that kind of money right now. I look forward to hon. members supporting the establishment of a sports pool of Canada in the forthcoming legislation.

● (1500)

FUNDING FOR 1982 GAMES IN AUSTRALIA

Mr. Mark Rose (Mission-Port Moody): The minister, as one of Canada's most prominent athletic supporters—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Rose: —knows full well and understands clearly that even if his sports pool does go ahead, there will be no pay-off whatsoever until 1983. The minister also knows that in 1982 the Commonwealth Games are in Australia, the games which Canada won in Edmonton in 1978, lifting the pride and spirit of all Canadians.

Does the minister have any plans and any special funding in mind and, if so, will he tell the House?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Secretary of State): I want to tell the hon. member that the money that is being presently voted for fitness and amateur sport is being spent in such an efficient manner that we believe the needs and demands leading up to events such as he has mentioned, the World Student Games that will be held in Edmonton, are provided for. What we do need is a great deal of money to help support the Winter Olympics in Calgary in 1988 and in the years leading up to that date. That is why it is important we move now in the direction of something like the sports pool. In the meantime, I am confident the Treasury Board, in its infinite wisdom, will continue to recognize the importance of the work of fitness and amateur sport.

The Late Hon. Thérèse Casgrain

PETITIONS

TABLING OF REPORTS OF CLERK OF PETITIONS

Madam Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the Clerk of the House has laid upon the Table reports of the Clerk of Petitions stating that he has examined the petitions presented by hon. members on Monday, November 2, 1981, and finds that they meet the requirements of Standing Orders as to form.

* * *

[Translation]

THE LATE HON. THÉRÈSE CASGRAIN

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): On a point of order, madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker: The hon. Minister of National Health and Welfare on a point of order.

Miss Bégin: Madam Speaker, I have just learned—and the procedure I am using may not be the right one—of the death this morning of the Hon. Thérèse Casgrain. Without intruding on the official tributes that the party leaders will want to pay her, as a spontaneous reaction I would simply like to tell all my colleagues that this great Canadian and Quebec woman passed away in the only fitting way for her, that is quickly without pain, at an age where she had given enormously to her country. As she had called my office yesterday, I know that she was in good health. All we can say is that we offer our most affectionate sympathies to her children and grandchildren of whom she was so proud.

Madam Speaker: I am myself surprised to hear this news which, I am sure, affects everyone sitting in this Parliament. Canada has lost in Mrs. Casgrain a conscience and a great militant because she was a woman of action. Canadian women have certainly lost a model for their social and political action and many of us have also lost a very dear friend. On behalf of the House of Commons, I would like to offer her family and her children our deepest sympathy, and I am sure that others will want later on to express their feelings of sympathy and admiration, but I am speaking now on behalf of the Members of Parliament.

[English]

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, on behalf of my colleagues I would like to join in the expression of grief and condolences to the family which you have just expressed along with the minister. It comes as a great shock to all of us to hear of the death of such a distinguished Canadian.

Today Canada has lost a person who has made a very great contribution not only to the people of her own province for whom she worked all her life, not only to the cause of equality of women to which she devoted a good part of her life, but to the cause of the general improvement of the human condition for all Canadians.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): Madam Speaker, it is with great shock and regret that we learn the sad news of the death of Madame Thérèse Casgrain. She was a friend to many of us. I think particularly of the way she offered encouragement not only to those within her own province or to those with whom she associated on a regular basis, but to the many of us with whom she came in contact from time to time. I think of the encouragement she offered us to fight not just for women, as she did on an unending basis, but in the way she helped achieve the franchise for women in the province of Quebec. She instilled in all those who knew her the desire to go ahead and fight for the things we knew were right and proper in whatever forum we found at our disposal, whether it was in the House of Commons, the Senate, provincial legislatures or among the general public.

She inspired people to follow her example and it is a great loss to her family, friends and country.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

PRIVILEGE

MR. SKELLY—S.O. 43 MOTION

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Madam Speaker, my question of privilege might be delayed because the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development has left the chamber. I do not think the motion that was defeated under Standing Order 43 should be allowed to be sabotaged by the government saying no. I hope to raise this with him at a later date.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I would just indicate to the hon. member that if he is thinking of raising that question again when the hon. minister is present, I will not allow him to reflect on a decision which the House has already made. The House has made a decision concerning that motion under Standing Order 43. It has said that it did not give unanimous consent to put the motion to the House. Therefore, the hon. member may not comment further.

* * *

POINTS OF ORDER

MR. LEWIS—S.O. 43 MOTIONS MOVED BY PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARIES

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, referring also to the proceedings under Standing Order 43, today there were two motions made by parliamentary secretaries under that Standing Order, the hon. member for St. Boniface (Mr. Bockstael), the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport, and the hon. member for York South-Weston (Mrs. Appolloni), who is Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Defence.

Traditionally, we have used Standing Order 43 to bring to the attention of the House matters of urgent and pressing necessity. The rule on this side, Madam Speaker, is to give Standing Order 43 motions to as many non-front bench, non-ex-cabinet ministers as possible. We occasionally break that rule, such as last week when the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) presented the very important report on VIA Rail. It gives our members an opportunity to bring matters forward which they might not do during question period.

We have worked very hard to shorten the length of preambles under Standing Order 43. Today we had nine. Occasionally we get the odd humorous motion to give a little balance.

I would draw your attention, Madam Speaker, to page 134 of Beauchesne under the heading "Questions by Parliamentary Secretaries", where it states:

> Those such as parliamentary secretaries who are clothed with the responsibility of answering for the government ought not to use the time of the question period for the privilege of asking questions of the government.

I would suggest that motions under Standing Order 43 is also a time in which it is a matter of privilege. We feel very strongly that that privilege should be reserved for backbenchers. That may not be the feeling among hon. members opposite.

● (1510)

We realize that there are occasions when there is a death of a head of state and when a frontbencher, a cabinet minister or, indeed, the Prime Minister may wish to bring forward a motion under Standing Order 43. This has been brought to Your Honour's attention in the House before. We do not object to motions under Standing Order 43 of a local nature which a member on the government side can legitimately bring forward. We do object to lengthy, self-serving motions under Standing Order 43 moved by parliamentary secretaries which are meant only to advertise the government.

If there is a legitimate reason for proposing a motion, there is no objection from this side; but I point out with respect that, as recorded in Hansard for December 1, 1980, Your Honour undertook to look into this practice. On a day when two parliamentary secretaries have proposed two motions under Standing Order 43 of a self-serving nature, I ask Your Honour to look at that practice and give us a ruling.

Madam Speaker: I think I can give the hon. member a ruling on this matter. It is up to the parties to determine whether they prefer to allow backbenchers or frontbenchers to propose motions under Standing Order 43. I recognize hon. members when they rise. I do not make much distinction whether they are backbenchers or frontbenchers. If they rise, they are entitled to be recognized, if there is time, and that is the practice I follow.

I think the hon. member was confusing the asking of questions with motions under Standing Order 43. I believe my predecessor ruled that parliamentary secretaries may not ask questions during question period, but Standing Order 15(2) says very clearly that members other than ministers of the Crown may propose motions pursuant to Standing Order 43. Members other than cabinet ministers include parliamentary secretaries. It has been the custom in this House to allow parliamentary secretaries to bring matters forward under the provisions of Standing Order 43. I agree with the hon. member that the shorter these motions the easier it is for the Speaker to fit in everyone who wants to put motions under the provisions of Standing Order 43. This, by the way, also applies to questions in the course of the question period.

I am sorry, but I will take this opportunity to say that I feel that the matter is really getting quite out of control. Questions are certainly too long, and I might say that of certain answers. But when questions are long, hon. members cannot expect the Speaker to interrupt the answers too quickly because there is a certain logic to the proposition that sometimes answers need to be a bit longer than the questions, although not all the time. If the hon. member wants to restrict the putting of motions under the provisions of Standing Order 43 only to Members of Parliament who are not parliamentary secretaries, I am afraid he will have to have the Standing Orders changed because, as I read them, parliamentary secretaries are allowed, and have traditionally been allowed, to put motions under the provisions of Standing Order 43.

Mr. Lewis: Madam Speaker, with respect and without in any way questioning your ruling, you did get into the subject of the question period, and I point out that since this House resumed on October 14, 61 per cent of the questions asked by government backbenchers have been self-serving and not "back home" type questions. If that point is to be made, I think it should be made to members of this House on the government side because that is where the questions are coming from. Last Friday there were three of them.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I commented on the length of questions and not on the suggestion that they are self-serving. The Speaker has no opinion on the substance of questions.

Incidentally, I want to correct myself. When the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers) presented his motion today under Standing Order 43, I referred to motions being serious. I should have said that there is a certain form which we are accustomed to following under the provisions of Standing Order 43. When I said "serious", I was in a way passing judgment on the nature of the motion, and I should not have done that. However, I think the hon. member understood that I was referring to form.

MISS MACDONALD—CUTBACKS IN POST-SECONDARY EDUCATION FINANCING

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order as a result of the words today of the Secretary of State (Mr. Regan), who has since left the House. However, at one point he said that I had reacted with glee to the news of cutbacks in post-secondary education. He should better have said that I reacted with grief. As I do, the Secretary of State comes from a city with large numbers of students, universities and community colleges—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member is debating. She is continuing the debate, and that is not a point of order.

MR. PAPROSKI—LOTTERIES—REQUEST FOR STATEMENT FROM MINISTER

Hon. Steven E. Paproski (Edmonton North): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order in reference to the remarks the Secretary of State (Mr. Regan) was supposed to make today telling us what he is going to do with the $32 million he is getting from the provinces with respect to lotteries.

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

MR. WADDELL—SUGGESTED IMPOSITION OF PENALTIES FOR LENGTHY QUESTIONS

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order with respect to the remarks you made in relation to the length of questions. I wonder why we cannot apply the rules of hockey and give penalties when people ask long questions; in other words, they should not be allowed to ask supplementary questions. I suggest Your Honour might do that. Our party used to be allowed four questions. It is a long way down here and, if hon. members to my right continue to abuse their privileges by asking long questions, we will not be able to ask four questions. I respectfully suggest that Your Honour apply the rules of hockey and impose penalties. I will sit down. That will be the first penalty.

Mr. Nielsen: Send him to the showers!

Madam Speaker: It has happened that members of the New Democratic Party have been allowed to ask four questions in the course of the question period, but that has only been when all questions have been extremely short. I try—and I have statistics to substantiate this—to allow exact proportions of questions to the opposition parties as related to their numbers in the House. We could add another factor and speak of presence in the House, but I think that would be terribly unfair because when members are not in the House, that does not mean they are not working toward the accomplishment of their responsibilities. They might be in committees or somewhere else. So I do not think any kind of penalty—if I am allowed to use that word—should be applied in such circumstances. However, I do try, and the proportion is absolute.

If all questions were shorter, I am sure I could sometimes allow four questions to the New Democratic Party. What is happening in fact is that the Conservative Party is allowed three times more questions than the New Democratic Party. However, sometimes when questions are too long I have to proceed on the basis of time rather than numbers because I cannot penalize the New Democratic Party if its members' questions are short and when questions from the Conservative Party are too long. I have statistics on that. They are absolutely clear.

When hon. members rise and I do not recognize them, I keep a carry-over list. Once in a while I let the list go, but from week to week I keep a carry-over list and I try to recognize those who rise several times unsuccessfully. That is the situation respecting questions in the House, but I urge hon. members to make their questions shorter.

Mr. Paproski: And answers.

Madam Speaker: Members of Parliament who were in the House ten years ago say to me that they do not recognize the House because we do not have questions any more, we have statements. I think we would be better off if we followed the Standing Orders, which say that questions should be brief and should be made to elicit information.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I have just one sentence by way of a suggestion to the Chair. The Chair might also—and I am sure it will—urge ministers to keep their answers short and not in the form of statements.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: If I may add very briefly to what my learned colleague has just said, replies could sometimes be shorter, but there is so much shouting on the side of the opposition that we are not able to say what we have to say and before replying we must wait for the opposition to stop shouting.

Madam Speaker: I must say that there is heckling on both sides of the House. Sometimes the disturbance comes from one side and sometimes from the other.

[English]

The hon. member for Yukon.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, you have just said what I was going to say.

MR. TOWERS—PROCEDURE RESPECTING S.O. 43 MOTIONS

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of clarification respecting Your Honour's comment in which you suggested that perhaps I was out of order. It has never been my intention to be out of order, but I want to know in what respect I was out of order and if there is something in the Standing Orders which prohibits a member from finishing two lines which rhyme in order to make a point.

• (1520)

I could have suggested that cabinet ministers are abusing privileges with three of them flying in separate jets to Winnipeg. No doubt they feel it is a government perk, but it certainly gives the taxpayer an awful knee-jerk. This is the point. If I am in error, I want to know where I am in error so that I will not do it again. Nevertheless, as a member I think I have the right to make a point.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: I thought of that. Nowhere in the Standing Orders is it written that a member may not express himself in verse. However, I was basing my comment on the fact that there is a certain form which has traditionally been used for motions under Standing Order 43. When the hon. member has to bend what he wants to express through his motion in order to satisfy the need to verse, sometimes the House breaks into laughter and obviously we get the message that the hon. member is really trying to speak in verse rather than propose a motion under Standing Order 43.

It is, however, a good point and I will look at it. I do not think that anywhere in the Standing Orders does it state that members may not express themselves in verse. A motion under Standing Order 43 must be put in earnest. The hon. member must move something that is meaningful in order to fulfil the requirements of a motion under Standing Order 43.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

DEPARTMENT OF NATIONAL HEALTH AND WELFARE ACT

TABLING OF ANNUAL REPORT—CORRECTION OF ERROR

Mr. Doug Frith (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Madam Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 41(2), I would like to indicate that an error was contained in the original document tabled in the House on Friday, October 30 of this year. Recommendation 35 subparagraphs (1), (3), (4) and (6) should read recommendation 35, subparagraphs (2), (4), (5) and (7), which I am pleased to table herewith in both official languages.

* * *

PETITIONS

MISS MACDONALD—CUTBACKS IN POST-SECONDARY EDUCATION FINANCING

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): Madam Speaker, I wish to present a petition signed by 1,852 students from Queen's University and St. Lawrence College in the constituency of Kingston and the Islands. These students are gravely worried about the threat posed to their future and to the development of our human resources by the proposed financial reduction to their institutions of higher learning by the federal government. They took collective action last Thursday to protest any cutback of this federal contribution.

Introduction of Bills

MR. WENMAN—EFFECTS OF HIGH MORTGAGE INTEREST RATES

Mr. Robert Wenman (Fraser Valley West): Madam Speaker, I have the duty to present a petition on behalf of my constituents. The purpose of this petition, signed by another 466 citizens in the greater Vancouver area, is to indicate to the government that the mortgage interest crisis that is forcing them out of their homes and into dire straits is continuing unabated.

The nature of the petition is to demand that in the forthcoming budget the government lower interest rates, allow mortgage interest to become income tax deductible and to allow and encourage the vast reserves of capital available through RRSPs, pensions and other large blocks of government money to be made available to the mortgage market.

The petitioners hope, Madam Speaker, that in your examination of their petition you will find the petition in order, sense the urgency and desperation of their plea and that you might use the discretionary powers vested in your office to allow discussion and referral to committee at the earliest possible moment.

* * *

SENATE OF CANADA REFORM ACT

MEASURE TO PROVIDE STRUCTURAL REFORM

Mr. Bill Yurko (Edmonton East) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-640, to provide for structural reform of the Senate of Canada.

Some hon. Members: Explain.

Mr. Yurko: Madam Speaker, I thought my seatmate was going to second the motion rather than the hon. member for Esquimalt-Saanich (Mr. Munro). Nevertheless, you have indicated that somebody did second the bill.

This bill is intended to highlight the fact that the first order of business of the Parliament of Canada after the patriation of the Constitution is Senate reform. It is intended to provide representation in Parliament of the national interests, regional interests and provincial interests by structuring the Senate of 150 senatorial chairs to relate to the national interest, by providing 30 senatorial chairs for each region of Canada and permitting five of the senatorial chairs to be filled by provincial appointments for each province. Furthermore, the bill is structured to provide the Senate body and each individual member with stability, continuity, accountability, legitimacy and independence, maintaining the power of the Senate as it exists today.

I hope that at some future time I will have the opportunity to discuss in much more detail the structure of this bill as it relates to the national interests, the regional interests, the provincial interests and to a much more meaningful role of the Senate of Canada in this nation in the years to come.

Motion agreed to, bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

Order Paper Questions

POINT OF ORDER

MR. BEATTY—QUESTIONS ADDRESSED TO COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN DURING QUESTION PERIOD

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I apologize for interrupting at this point. However, I was wondering whether the Chair might give some guidance as to when it might be possible to rule on the point of order I raised last week with regard to questions put to committee chairmen being answered by members of the cabinet.

Madam Speaker: I will rule tomorrow on that point of order.

* * *

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 2,321, 2,426 (Revised), 2,434, 2,677, 2,768, 2,787 and 3,236.

[Text]

YOUTH BETTERMENT PROJECTS

Question No. 2,321—Mr. Herbert:

For each of the past five years, by province (a) what amount was granted by the Department of the Secretary of State to rural youth for community betterment projects (b) what was the total amount spent to provide information exchange between social regions?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Secretary of State):

(a) The department has no specific program for rural youth.

(b) Please see revised reply to question No. 2,426 answered this day.

OPEN HOUSE PROGRAM GRANTS

Question No. 2,426 (Revised)—Mr. Herbert:

1. In each of the past five years, by province, what amount was granted under the Open House Program?

2. Did the Department of the Secretary of State grant moneys under the Program to L'Ecole Secondaire de Vaudreuil and, if so (a) on what date (b) in what amount (c) for what purpose?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Secretary of State): 1. See list of grants below.

2. Date	Amount	Purpose
April 26, 1978 (trip took place in April)	$8,468	Travel grant for an exchange visit with the Port Moody Senior Secondary School, in Port Moody, B.C.
April 13, 1981 (trip will take place in June)	Approx. $15,000	Travel grant for an exchange visit with the Armstrong Junior Secondary School in Armstrong, B.C.

Open House Canada Grants by Province

Province	Year 1977-78	Amount	Year 1978-79	Amount	Year 1979-80	Amount	Year 1980-81	Amount
Nfld.		26,668.00		430,256.00		301,549.00		313,107.90
P.E.I.		8,874.00		113,221.00		120,611.60		158,846.00
N.S.		20,468.00		541,423.86		369,293.00		274,000.90
N.B.		1,773.00		236,730.20		182,186.00		239,291.20
Que.		176,667.94		1,770,305.96		1,580,067.00		1,414,000.00
Ont.		994,616.71		4,443,375.25		838,595.00		697,000.00
Man.		25,692.00		247,808.00		198,119.15		184,311.00
Sask.		34,187.80		501,773.10		352,399.00		283,470.00
Alb.		14,706.00		1,187,095.45		773,554.00		833,000.00
B.C.		172,577.32		2,169,371.28		1,709,258.00		1,507,666.00
Yukon				74,872.00		19,256.00		76,505.00
N.W.T.		4,000.00		237,195.68		152,741.00		85,808.00
Non-governmental national organizations						3,369,000.00		3,646,271.00
Total		1,480,230.77		11,953,427.78		9,966,628.75		9,713,277.00

NOTE: O.H.C. granting activities did not begin until 1977/78.

URANIUM TRIOXIDE REFINERY

Question No. 2,434—Mr. Blaikie:

1. Does the Department of National Health and Welfare have information on the amounts of uranium dust and other radioactive or hazardous material that will be discharged from the proposed Uranium Trioxide Refinery at Blind River and, if so, what is the information?

2. Are the figures the same as the figures for Eldorado Nuclear Limited or were they arrived at independently?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): 1. Yes. The information on uranium dust levels and other discharges received by the department is the "Application to the Atomic Energy Control Board for Construction Approval, Blind River Refinery". The department is requested to review this information by the AECB to ascertain whether the proposed refinery's assumptions and calculations are plausible and reasonable. All submissions to the AECB for construction of nuclear facilities are available to the public and can be obtained from the library of the AECB.

2. The AECB is the sole legal authority responsible for assessing and licensing of nuclear facilities. At their request, the Department of National Health and Welfare reviewed the figures that were submitted by Eldorado Nuclear Limited. The figures quoted by Eldorado Nuclear were based on accepted predictive models and were not arrived at independently by the Department of National Health and Welfare.

METRIC COMMISSION MAILING LISTS

Question No. 2,677—Mr. Beatty:

1. For 1981, does the Metric Commission have mailing lists and, if so (a) how many (b) in each case, what is the nature of the list and how many names are on it?

2. Do some names appear (a) on more than one list (b) more than once on the same list and, if so, how many names?

3. Are the lists updated and, if so, how often?

4. Are checks done to determine whether an individual on a list is from the same organization as other individuals on the same list and, if so, how often?

5. In 1980, what was the cost to the taxpayer for duplications by the Metric Commission?

Mr. Ralph Ferguson (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): In so far as Metric Commission Canada is concerned: 1. (a) and (b) One master mailing list file comprised of 83,635 names within 650 specific mailing list categories. The purpose of the mailing list is to disseminate information related to metric conversion to the primary intended audience and to increase the general awareness of metric conversion activities.

2. (a) Some names are included in more than one mailing list category within the mailing list.

(b) All names appear only once within each mailing list category.

3. The mailing list file is updated once a month.

4. In some cases there are more than one individual from the same organization on the mailing list. In such cases, each individual has requested a personal copy of a specific publication.

5. The costs to the taxpayer for duplication are minimal. Before any name is added to the mailing list file, it is checked to ensure that it is not already included in the list.

PATENT AGENTS

Question No. 2,768—Mr. Skelly:

1. In what manner is the impartiality and fairness of the examination procedure for patent agents guaranteed and maintained?

2. How is the difficulty of the certification examination for patent agents established?

3. In each of the past six years, how many individuals attempted the patent agent certification examinations and how many were successful in passing?

4. Does the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, on behalf of the Institute of Patent Agents, intentionally attempt to regulate the number of patent agents that are certified and operating in Canada?

Mr. Gary F. McCauley (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): 1. Candidates for the Patent Agents examination are given a number when they enter the examination centre. This number is the only identification for all their papers and no other identification is allowed. The supervisors at the examination centres note the numbers and names of the candidates at their location and return this, with the papers, to the Public Service Commission. The officer of the Public Service Commission responsible for conducting the examination makes a key list of all the candidate's names and numbers and sends it, sealed, to the Commissioner of Patents who keeps it sealed. The examination board learns the identities of the candidates only when the envelope containing the key list is opened after the marks and standings have been settled. Every answer in the examination is marked by at least two Board members acting independently of each other and without knowledge of the marks allotted by the other. They make separate returns of their marking to the secretary of the board. The board meets to finalize the marking and grading of all papers while they are still identified by number only.

2. The standard and subject matter of the examination is set by an examining board appointed by the Commissioner of Patents. The board consists of six persons, four patent agents who have been nominated by the Patent and Trademarks Institute of Canada, and two persons from the examining staff of the patent office. The maintenance of uniform testing standards is achieved through a continuity in the make-up of the board, which results from having members serve three-year terms on an overlapping basis. The examination is divided into four papers, A to D, of equal value. Each paper includes one major question as well as some minor questions. The candidates are told in advance that the following areas will be covered in the major questions: the drafting of an application for a client, patent validity, problems associated with the prosecution of a pending application before the patent office and advising a client in an infringement action. The technical subject matter used to test these areas is selected by the board and is such that a competent patent agent should be able to understand and work with it.

3. Breakdown of examination results 1976-1981

Year	Number of candidates	Number of successful candidates
1981	28	10
1980	21	11
1979	25	7
1978	24	11
1977	21	8
1976	22	11

4. No.

Order Paper Questions

LANGUAGE TRAINING FOR POSTAL EMPLOYEES

Question No. 2,787—Mr. Cossitt:

With reference to the answer to question No. 2,524 which states in part that 200 postal employees are being given crash courses in the French language, by province, how many employees are being given crash courses of a similar nature in the English language?

Mr. Gary F. McCauley (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): A total of 280 postal employees from the province of Quebec took part in courses of a similar nature offered in the English language.

RULES OF HOUSE OF COMMONS

Question No. 3,236—Mr. Cossitt:

Under the present rules of the House of Commons, are Members of Parliament not allowed to question directly House of Commons expenses, appointments and promotions and, if so, is the government prepared to give consideration to proposing alterations in the rules to enable Members of Parliament to have full control of their own House and to have the right to question the administration of the House in the House of Commons?

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): All inquiries about the administration of the House of Commons may be directed to the Speaker of the House of Commons. Standing Order 65(13) provides that "All matters relating to the administration of the House and the provisions of services and facilities to members shall be deemed to have been referred to the Standing Committee on Management and Members' Services on the first day of each session." The names of the chairman, vice-chairman and other members of this committee are published as an appendix to House of Commons Debates each Wednesday. Successive editions of Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules and Forms are quite clear about these matters, and even if the Table ignores these rules and allows questions such as this, the government considers the hon. member for Leeds-Grenville to be able to read the relatively straightforward precepts cited which are published in both official languages.

[English]

Mr. Smith: I ask, Madam Speaker, that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Madam Speaker: Shall the remaining questions stand?

Mr. Cossitt: Madam Speaker, approximately three weeks ago when the parliamentary secretary made his debut in the House as the newest Dr. No, I raised a reference to question No. 30 which has stood on successive order papers in various Parliaments and sessions of Parliaments for a period of five and a half years. The question concerns, very simply, the members of the Canadian Transport Commission who have passes on Air Canada, their names, the names of their wives who have such passes and the names of employees who have such passes.

I would think it would be very simple for the question to have been answered, but in five and a half years it has not been answered. In this regard, I was advised by officials of Air Canada at least eight months ago that the answer had long been prepared and long since sent to the minister's office for passing on through the Privy Council to this House. Therefore, I raise it again. I intend, if the Chair permits, to keep raising it periodically to find out why a question of such a serious nature is not answered when it involves the Canadian Transport Commission which, in effect, is the body that controls Air Canada to a great extent. At the same time, the CTC has in return been accepting passes from Air Canada, gifts from Air Canada in effect, yet we are not allowed to know who these people are and what they may be doing or may not be doing, as the case may be, in return for these gifts from Air Canada. I believe it is time the people of Canada were told.

• (1530)

There are two other questions. One is question No. 93 asking for the names of all executive assistants and special assistants to members of the cabinet, their salaries, when they started and anyone under contract to a cabinet minister. That question has been on the Order Paper for months. I think it would be relatively simple to compile an answer to that question unless there are more niggers in the woodpile, such as what we heard about recently in the case of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. There is certainly something wrong when that question cannot be answered.

Finally, question No. 136 goes back to the election of May, 1979 and again concerns Air Canada when the Liberal Party rented from the Crown corporation, Air Canada, a DC-9 to travel the Prime Minister around the country. This aircraft was never paid for. The bill was still in dispute months later. I asked when the bill was paid, and what amount was paid. Officials at Air Canada told me this answer was prepared eight, nine or ten months ago and placed on the minister's desk.

Perhaps I can ask the President of the Privy Council, whom I see in the House, to respond to this question, rather than the parliamentary secretary, because he would be in a better position since he has been in office longer and obviously he is more familiar with these points of order since I have raised them so often. I would expect the President of the Privy Council would be able to tell this House why we cannot receive answers to the three questions I have just mentioned. It indicates to me that there is a deliberate attempt on the part of the government to hide some legitimate things we have a right to know about. We find out all sorts of secrets about three ministers flying to Winnipeg on three different aircraft. This is the type of thing that is prohibiting them from telling the House who has all the free passes, who is having all the joy rides on Air Canada and things of that nature.

Mr. Smith: Madam Speaker, first of all, it is regrettable that the hon. member made his point by using a remark that I consider to be a racist slur. It may or may not be unparliamentary, but I believe it is beneath the dignity of this House to use such a phrase in the House.

With regard to questions on the Order Paper, the government has a very good batting average. Prior to the resumption of the House on October 14, we had answered over 83 per cent of the questions on the Order Paper. There have been over 500 new questions put on the Order Paper since then, many placed there by the hon. member. I believe the hon. member should be referred to Section 363 of Beauchesne, which says that insistence on an answer is out of order.

The hon. member says that he may continue to raise this point. I submit, Madam Speaker, the hon. member is really out of order in continuing to insist upon answers when we have gone out of our way to come up with the answers to most of his questions.

Mr. Cossitt: I rise on a further point or order, Madam Speaker. I should like to clarify the reference the parliamentary secretary made to what I said. I do not know whether he said it sounded racist or what, but I was using an expression that is simply a common expression. It has gone beyond the point—

Madam Speaker: The hon. member is now debating.

Mr. Cossitt: If the remark was taken as a racist remark by anyone, I would naturally withdraw it. To me it is similar to saying "where there is smoke, there is fire". It is simply a matter of fact. I certainly was not intending a racial slur of any kind. I should like to make that very clear.

I know there is no insistence in the rules that questions must be answered. I acknowledge that point. On the other hand, there is a moral obligation that requires something to be done in the nature of answers to questions. I do not believe I am wrong in raising points of order. I believe it is my privilege. I could even make it a question of privilege that I have the privilege to raise points of order. It is a well established precedent of this House that a member has that right if the government ignores questions or it tries to hide something. Granted, the government can keep hiding it for another five and a half or ten and a half years if they are that hard up in not letting the Canadian people know the answers.

I believe it is an error to impugn my motives by saying I have no right to raise points of order in this regard. I will certainly continue to raise them when the government deliberately and obviously denies information to the House and to the Canadian people about answers they are rightly entitled to have, unless the Chair rules me out of order.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADA OIL AND GAS ACT

MEASURE RESPECTING OIL AND GAS INTERESTS

The House resumed from Friday, October 30, consideration of Bill C-48, to regulate oil and gas interests in Canada lands and to amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on National Resources and Public Works, and Motion No. 23 (Mr. Wilson).

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Madam Speaker, last Friday afternoon we commenced debate on Motion No. 28 with regard to Bill C-48. I shall refer to some remarks that were made by my colleague, the hon. member for Calgary South (Mr. Thomson). My hon. friend pointed out that the position of the Conservative Party is that we do not believe in any form of confiscation. We do not think the back-in provision is right. This clause concerning confiscation is causing serious problems across the country and the mass exodus of funds from businesses leaving this country. In a few moments I shall go into detail.

Mr. Waddell: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. McKenzie: My hon. friend from Calgary South, as reported at page 12365 of Hansard, said this:

I should like to return to what I believe to be the broader aspects of Bill C-48 and their impact on Canada. One question we should consider is where we will find the money. Energy self-sufficiency is a nice goal. It sounds nice, it is a nice phrase. But where will we find the money?

At the rate we are going with Bill C-48, the National Energy Program, we will have difficulty finding the money. Someone has to think up these National Energy Programs for Bill C-48. The October, 1981, edition of Saturday Night went into some detail as to who was drawing up these socialistic and nationalistic bills. Saturday Night points out:

Ottawa's energy policies have created a new rogue's gallery for the oilpatch. Marc Lalonde, the energy minister, is cast in the most satanic light, but the bureaucracy has also produced villains, Ed Clark, one of the authors of the NEP document—

—and probably Bill C-48—

—has assumed a notoriety in Calgary never previously accorded a civil servant. A mythical view of him has seeped down even to the roughnecks, among whom he's variously rumoured to have been either an aide to Che Guevara or Fidel Castro's right-hand man.

Selected quotations from his PhD thesis—"Socialist development and public investment in Tanzania, 1964-73"—are passed around as proof of his communist leanings.

No wonder these bills have so much support from the NDP.

What's more, Clark seems impervious to the most hypnotic technical logic of Calgary's promoters. "He's just not interested in permeability and porosity," moans Jim Gray, "I don't talk to him any more."

Ed Clark cannot even consult with members of the energy industry.

The article went on to say:

If Ed Clark has emerged as the newest bête noire, he at least has only to travel occasionally to Alberta. For Ottawa's men on the spot, the heat in the past year has been intense. The brunt of vilification falls on Bill Hopper and Joel Bell. They were always clearly Ottawa men in the eyes of the oilpatch, but the period of Tory rule stamped them as Liberal Ottawa men—cynical manipulators who politicized PetroCan for the defeat of Joe Clark. Those executives who showed insufficient loyalty in that period, who even suggested to the Tory task force that Hopper and Bell might be the problem with PetroCan, paid the price when the Liberals returned to power.

In other words, revenge, Mr. Speaker. With regard to Bill C-48 the Liberals tell the Canadian people about their energy policies in their householders to their constituents. They point out that the new deal will benefit all of us and that there is a new spirit of compromise and co-operation. There is no such thing. The Liberal policies have driven business after business and billions of dollars of investment funds out of this country. I will go into that in more detail in a moment to show what a dangerous piece of legislation Bill C-48 is.

● (1540)

The Liberals, in misleading their constituents, also pointed out:

Canadian consumers are protected from spiralling and erratic OPEC prices.

This is absolute nonsense. We will have to import more and more OPEC oil. We are not being protected at all. The Liberal policy of paying world prices for oil is not protecting Canadian consumers. The Liberals went on to say there will be——jobs and opportunities in every region due to energy projects, and new economic growth.

But they neglected to say in their mailings that the growth will be in the United States, not in Canada. In a recent article referring to the NEP and Bill C-48, it was pointed out that both have been a disaster for everyone in the Calgary oil patch but that for some it has been a blessing in disguise. Larry Darling, president of Concept Resources Ltd., said in the company's latest annual report:

At this time we wish to thank the Liberal Government of Canada for its national energy policy.

The Liberals are getting thanks from someone. He continued:

Without this policy Canadian entrepreneurs might have stayed only in Canada and thus would have missed the international opportunities the Liberals so much wanted them to find elsewhere. Without this new energy policy, Canada could not have been self-sufficient in oil by 1990. We are now assured of success, the same success we have with the Canadian Post Office, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, Canadian National Railways and Mirabel Airport.

He went on to say:

On a smaller scale, without this policy, Concept would not have found the Givans and Cowans wildcat wells. We would not have opened our office in Denver and Billings.

This was Billings, Montana. He continued:

Finally, had it not been for the Canadian government, we would not have discovered the Hailstone Dome oil field in Montana. Thank you Pierre Elliott Trudeau and your Liberal party followers for your help and assistance in furthering our cause for free enterprise.

Of course, this is in the United States, not in Canada. The Liberals are saying that Bill C-48 and the NEP are good for Canadians. They are not good for Canadians. They are costing jobs and businesses are closing down. Also they are causing one of the greatest booms the United States has ever experienced, going down as far as Oklahoma and Texas, thanks to Liberal policies. Motion 28 in regard to Bill C-48 is just another road block for small Canadian developers. Motion No. 23 in the name of the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson) reads:

That Bill C-48, an act to regulate oil and gas interests in Canada lands and to amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act, be amended in Clause 28 by striking lines 13 to 17 at page 16 and substituting the following therefor:

"former lease under which significant or commercial discoveries of oil or gas were made on or before October 28, 1980 or in respect of any interest that succeeds that former lease".

We want to remove this further penalty on Canadian oil companies. I want to make it perfectly clear that we are not talking about a bunch of multinational oil companies. We are talking about Canadian oil companies and Canadian developers.

Recently the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Axworthy) stated that he foresaw a hard winter ahead because of September jobless figures. He said that it will be a really tough winter with a lot of unemployment. But there will be no hard winter ahead in the United States due to Bill C-48 and the National Energy Program. We are helping its economy immensely with ridiculous socialistic and nationalistic bills. It is all very well that they want to nationalize oil companies and "get" those big, bad oil companies, but taxpayers will have to pay a penalty. Actually these big, bad oil companies are not all that big. They are just small Canadian firms.

In order to provide a further idea of what the energy program and Bill C-48 are doing, a recent article appeared in The Calgary Sun entitled, "Oil Patch Brain Drain". It indicated that a stampede of Canada's best oil brains to the United States was under way; that is, according to sources in Calgary and Denver, Colorado. It also indicated that they were leaving because Ottawa's oil policy was forcing small, independent oil firms to cut costs by laying off their technical staff. I fail to see how this helps Canada in any way. This was a report of statement by a Calgary oilman, Mr. John Masters. It went on to indicate:

Masters, president of the Calgary-based Canadian Hunter Exploration Ltd., a half-billion dollar oil and gas exploration firm, has criticized the national energy policy before. But his charges are confirmed by The Denver Post which says U.S. immigration is now processing "literally hundreds" of requests for work permits from Canadian oilmen.

The Denver Post quoted Jim Hardin, a Denver U.S. immigration official, as saying:

There's been a big rush in the past year . . . we've never had anything quite like it.

I find it strange that the Liberals are not telling their constituents this in their householder mailings. This is what they should be telling them. Instead, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde) is leading them around by their noses, and Ed Clark, with a communist background, is drafting this diatribe. Also it reported that 25 to 35 Canadian energy companies opened offices in the nine-state Rocky Mountain region over the past 12 months. Mr. Masters called it "a panic flood of the best technical people in the Canadian oil industry." I fail to see how this is helping us in any way.

We have heard the platitudes and overtones of the parliamentary secretary, but there is never any detailed technical or statistical information. We hear only general statements that the NEP and Bill C-48 are good for us. This is how socialist talk. Anyone who reads about socialism will find out that socialists do not want to confuse with facts, figures and statistics. It is just an endless flow of words which read like a prayer.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. As reported on page 12364 of Hansard, we are now dealing with Motion No. 23. I believe the hon. member is speaking to Motion No. 28. Perhaps Mr. Speaker could draw his attention to the fact that we are supposedly debating Motion No. 23 which concerns three-year periods of tax holidays. Perhaps the hon. member could speak to that.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member's point is well taken. Debate at committee report stage is supposed to be specifically directed to the amendments before us.

Mr. McKenzie: Motion No. 23 is our motion. We are debating Clause 28 of Bill C-48 with which our motion deals.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all due respect to the hon. member, the motion which has been moved and is currently before the House is Motion No. 23.

Mr. Jarvis: That is correct, but Motion No. 23 amends Clause 28.

Mr. McKenzie: I read our motion into the record; it amends Clause 28. I was dealing with the mass exodus of investment money, businesses and technical expertise out of the country because of Liberal policies. Also Mr. Masters indicated:

> They're trying to save their skins, their income and their lifestyle by getting down into the U.S.

He also said that the exodus was triggered by the 35 per cent cut in the cash flow of small, independent oil firms created by the national energy policy. The particular clause to which we are referring to today is a further penalty for small Canadian companies. These companies are predicting wholesale lay-offs just around the corner. Masters says he already knows of 15 companies where the lay-off of 65 technical staffers has been recommended. They have been laid off and are leaving the country. They do not just go back and forth across the border, Mr. Speaker; once they get established down there they stay and we have lost them. I fail to see how that helps Canada in any way.

● (1550)

Bill C-48 and the National Energy Program are causing a great exodus of capital. I should like to go into detail and point out just how devastating this document is. It quotes the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources as saying that the Canadian energy industry may become 50 per cent Canadian owned by 1985, five years ahead of schedule, and that it may be 75 per cent Canadian owned by 1990.

However, not all economists are rejoicing over such a prospect, Mr. Speaker. In Toronto, William Mackness of Pitfield MacKay Ross Ltd. says the Canadianization program has set off an unprecedented exodus of Canadian capital and that it is questionable the Canadian economy can stand it. If the National Energy Program and Bill C-48 were of any value, Mr. Speaker, they would be attracting capital, not driving it out of the country. The energy program and this bill should be withdrawn and Mr. Clark in the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources, should be replaced with someone who knows something about this business who could draw up legislation which would help make the country energy self-sufficient.

Mr. Mackness went on to say that the method of calculating capital outflow is not perfect and is subject to error but that, nevertheless, there is overwhelming evidence that the outflow of capital from Canada amounted to about $17 billion in the last 12 months, during which time the stock of several major foreign-owned companies was acquired by Canadian companies or the federal government. He said that after deducting capital inflows, the net loss was $6.7 billion, of which about $2.5 billion was moved out by Canadians, the rest by non-nationals. That is a great deal of money, Mr. Speaker, and we cannot afford to have it driven out of the country. He went on to say that the average annual outflow during the 1970s was $600 million, so the new pace is absolutely unprecedented.

We are heading for tragic times as a result of this plan to nationalize the Canadian oil industry, Mr. Speaker. Mr. Mackness said that making matters worse is the fact that Canada does not now have a surplus in its balance of trade against which the capital outflow could have been offset, that instead, there is a deficit of $3.7 billion for the last 12 months. He said that the most alarming aspect is that Canadians are in fact borrowing abroad to raise the money to buy foreign-owned oil stocks. Hence, interest payments abroad rose from the $1.3 billion level they were showing six years ago to $4.6 billion in the last year; also, dividends that Canadians may earn on their newly acquired oil stocks will be offset by overseas interest payments on the money they borrowed to buy them. You can see what a tragic affair this is all around, Mr. Speaker. Mr. Mackness pointed out that all these factors have served to further weaken the Canadian dollar.

This policy of harassing small Canadian oil companies and developers, which would be the result of Clause 28, will do absolutely nothing to make us energy self-sufficient and will do nothing at all for the country.

An article appeared in the Ottawa Citizen on October 28 this year to the effect that the government is fleecing the public with the oil pact. That is an excellent way to describe what is happening. It is just unbelievable how the Liberal government can be taken in by some of the bureaucrats it hires. If I were a member of the government I would not be led around by these people. The power that they have over the government is unbelievable; it accepts this stuff that is drafted for it. The Citizen article says that some discouraging words were heard the previous Tuesday as the oil industry began to study details of the energy agreement signed the previous Monday by the federal and Saskatchewan governments. It quoted Bill Dutton of Clan Resources Ltd. as saying that the two levels of government had got together and had fleeced the public. He wondered if the public realized that we have only been producing and shipping at about 47 per cent to 50 per cent since last March and he asked when the situation would be straightened out.

The article also quoted Led Stein, the owner of Sage Oilfield Services Ltd., as saying that he was frustrated that the two governments claimed to have reached an agreement. He contended that it is not an agreement but a concoction. Mr. Stein is also the mayor of Swift Current.

Bill Whelan, head of the provincial branch of the Canadian Petroleum Association, was quoted as saying that he hoped the agreement will mean a return to the vigorous activity of the past. He said that meetings had been set up at which the association would analyse the accord to see what it would really mean to the industry, referring to the $15.4 billion agreement initialled by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and Premier Blakeney. Saskatchewan, the second largest oil-producing province, is expected to gain $5.8 billion from the accord which expires at the end of 1986, while about $6.1 billion in revenues is predicted to be generated for the industry.

I see you are on the edge of your chair, Mr. Speaker, so I will close by pleading with the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. MacLaren) to speak to the minister and ask him to withdraw Bill C-48 and the National Energy Program, and bring in a sensible energy plan that will make Canada self-sufficient.

Mr. MacLaren: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. During the previous speaker's intervention, which seemed to consist of reading from various newspapers and magazines, he chose to quote from an article which disparaged senior public servants in the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources. The article, which he evidently quoted with approval and subsequently referred to, named the public servants. They are not in this House, Mr. Speaker, and do not have an opportunity to defend themselves. It is not in accordance with the best traditions of this House to name public servants and attack them individually from behind the immunity conferred by membership in this place.

If the hon. member opposite knew the system of government which we enjoy in this country, he would realize that there is one person, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Lalonde), who speaks for the government in this area. Today in his absence I act as his surrogate, but the responsibility for the policy resides entirely with the Government of Canada. It does not reside with the group of public servants who are named in this House as if they are perpetrating some monstrous fraud on the Canadian people, or whatever the allegations were.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The parliamentary secretary was recognized in the normal course of debate and he has the right to participate as a member of the House. I do not feel the point he is making is, strictly speaking and within the rules of the House, a point of order. If the hon. parliamentary secretary wishes to continue his speech, the normal time would be allotted to him.

Mr. McKenzie: On the same point of order, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I recognized the parliamentary secretary as participating in debate in the normal course. I have not recognized a point of order.

Mr. McKenzie: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just want—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: No, the hon. member has spoken. The parliamentary secretary has the floor and this is his speech.

Mr. McKenzie: I am rising on a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie) on a point of order.

Mr. McKenzie: I am rising on my own point of order to correct the record. The parliamentary secretary said that we should not mention senior civil servants in this House. It is not a precedent that I have set today. Senior civil servants have been mentioned dozens of times in this House. We are talking about a matter—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Chair has ruled that a point of order is not involved. The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources has the floor.

Mr. MacLaren: Mr. Speaker, I did rise on a point of order after the—

Mr. Rae: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member for Broadview-Greenwood (Mr. Rae) on a point of order.

Mr. Rae: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the hon. member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine would accept a question?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The time of the hon. member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine has expired. The Chair has recognized the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources.

Mr. MacLaren: Mr. Speaker, I rose on a point of order. I shall take the occasion to speak later in the debate.

Mr. Ron Stewart (Simcoe South): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to speak this afternoon on Bill C-48, the Canada Oil and Gas Act and in particular Motion No. 23 which, as has been pointed out by my colleague, the hon. member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie), amounts to sheer and utter confiscation. Unfortunately, I do not champion the legislation in its present form, but it is one of immense importance to all Canadians.

• (1600)

I do not sit on the energy committee but I am keenly interested in our national energy policies, as is everyone in this House. It is interesting to note that over 100 witnesses appeared before the energy committee when it considered this legislation, and yet from what I can gather none agreed with the over-all details of the bill. There were no amendments at the committee stage—shades of unilateralism once more, Mr. Speaker. This is the same type of unilateralism we had at the start of the constitutional debate, and what Premier Lougheed said as early as this morning is going on across the street. It is the same type of unilateralism as with VIA Rail.

I fear this government is attempting to wrap itself in the cloak of motherhood in regard to Bill C-48—Canadianization—and hoodwink the Canadian people into believing its actions are in the national interest, that a back-in clause such as Clause 23 is a normality. It is not; it is Jesse James without a gun, Mr. Speaker.

We do not build a healthy petroleum industry by punishing those who risk venture capital and are entitled to a fair return on their investment. A government should be a leader, not a "backer-inner". Many of the free enterprise small Canadian oil companies are going to feel the whiplash of this legislation, particularly Clause 23.

Our problem in this country, in my view, is not with foreign ownership or foreign control; our problem is not just with the flight of capital in the form of dividends, interest and earnings; our problem is not that the west is getting rich at the expense of the east. Our problem remains the same as it was in 1973. We are running out of conventional oil. We are running out of crude oil extracted by conventional methods, mainly in Alberta which accounts for about 85 per cent of Canadian production.

As we run out of oil what steps are we taking to develop alternate sources? What steps do we take to advance technology and venture capital so desperately needed to develop our tar sands? As we run out of oil what positive measures does the government envision to alleviate the crunch which will surely come because we are still dependent on OPEC or foreign oil?

The government looks to Canada lands, it looks to Bill C-48 and Canadianization, and it looks to the Beaufort Sea. All these things are very worth while, but in my view we are putting too much emphasis in that direction. Can we bring them all on stream in time?

Bill C-48 proposes to regulate the oil and gas interests in Canada lands and to amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act. It also directs itself to Canadianization, and Motion 23 relates to that backing-in formula I just mentioned.

Canadianization is a very desirable thing. I gainsay there is not one of the 282 of us who sit in this House who is not for Canadianization. But what has been happening with this government is not Canadianization, as I view it. It is not supportive of the free enterprise system as we know it. This government has been consistently sliding down that slippery road to socialization and this bill embodies that slide; as a matter of fact, it smacks totally of the first chorus of the full melody of nationalization.

Since I have been in this House I have had the opportunity to understand what has been happening to this great country of ours—a slow and steady creep to the left; more and more unilateral government control. This has come about by increased use of closure to muzzle free speech, the use of the Official Languages Act for crass political purposes, the increased use of orders in council to control public inquiry, such as in respect of VIA Rail, and unilateral ministerial decision such as the proposed dumping of radioactive soil on a military base.

An hon. Member: Who wrote your speech?

Mr. Stewart: I did, and I wrote it better than you could.

Canadianization to me does not mean the ownership of the oil industry by the state. I would just like to quote from The Globe and Mail of Monday, March 16, 1981. It states:

> The business has steadily become statist, no matter how distasteful that may be to the private enterprisers—

Those are good Canadian private enterprisers.

> —who work the oil patch. Public rather than private objectives have become fundamental to the corporate actors.

The article goes on to state:

> Last October's National Energy Program shows how far the federal government is willing to go in its policies. No significant area of industry activity is left untouched . . . federal involvement in the industry is rapidly becoming institutionalized and more bureaucratic as the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources expands its empire to implement objectives set by the NEP.

I might add, they are socialist objectives. Finally this article states:

> Questions can be raised about how the industry will be changed in the longer run. The most serious question concerns the fate of the entrepreneur with a small company, limited capital and unlimited optimism. Big government likes to work with big business; federal bureaucrats are more likely to be happy dealing with the giants that know their way through the system than with small fry who do not have a road map through the corridors of power.

Ownership by the people of Canada is the important thing here, and there is a great difference between that and state control. That is why we on this side champion the cause of the issuing of shares of Petro-Canada to every Canadian so Petro-Canada is owned by individuals, not by the state.

If there are any companies in Canada that are abusing the industry, then control them by taxation or incentive, not by nationalization. If the government wants to Canadianize the petroleum industry, it can easily accomplish this goal through use of the carrot and not the stick. It can easily accomplish it through the tax system by making it more attractive for Canadians to purchase stock in drilling and exploration ventures, by a layer approach to taxes on capital gains, earnings and profits.

Bill C-48 is supposed to give us oil self-sufficiency, but will it? Of course not. Hundreds of drilling rigs, according to statistics, have left Canada. Millions of dollars worth of foreign investment has been cancelled, and a lot of Canadian dollars are going abroad. The tar sands projects have been postponed. Does this smack of energy self-sufficiency? To me it smacks of idiocy.

Instead, the government's answer was to purchase Petrofina. It purchased a string of service stations and paid double what the firm was worth, $120 a share instead of an acknowledged $60. These figures are not just according to me; they are according to the president of Petrofina who was flabbergasted that the government of the day paid twice the company's worth.

Will this deal give us more barrels of oil, more discovery? Not on your life, Mr. Speaker. We gave Petrofina $1.5 billion, and that is capital fleeing this country at a time when we can least afford it. As one of my colleagues said, the Minister of Finance (Mr. MacEachen) is now the patron saint of Belgium as a result of the Petrofina deal. All of this was done so that the present government could have a propaganda program going for it with service stations sitting on every street corner in Canada with "Petro-Canada" painted on them in Liberal colours to bamboozle the Canadian public.

What is next, steel, the banks or the supermarkets? Perhaps we will have "SteelCan" or "GroceryCan" or "BankCan". This is the slippery road to socialization, the rotten road to nationalization.

We in North America represent one of the last bastions, if not the last bastion, of the free enterprise system. There are few countries left in the industrialized world that have not taken that turn to the left. France has now gone the way of those who would let someone else do it for you, and that is the socialist system.

Let us turn to Clause 28 of this bill which regulates oil and gas interests in Canada lands. It states:

No Crown share is reserved out of a former lease under which oil or gas was first produced other than for test purposes, on or before December 31, 1980, or in respect of any interest that succeeds any such former lease.

My colleague, the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson) has proposed under Motion No. 23 that we strike out lines 13 to 17 in Clause 28 and insert the words:

"former lease under which significant or commercial discoveries of oil or gas were made on or before October 28, 1980 or in respect of any interest that succeeds that former lease".

This would prevent the Crown from backing in in any case where a discovery was made before the announcement of the National Energy Program. The way it reads now, the Crown does have that back-in privilege. We would like to see the clause struck out. Why should the government back in? Anyone who really believes in our free enterprise system does not want to see that system perverted, especially at the cost of Canadian oil companies. No one wants to see the government make rules to suit itself. Many of my colleagues have said it is a form of theft, and I agree. It is confiscation. When you take something from someone who, by dint of their own exertions, put it forth, it is theft, whether it be by government or anyone else.

● (1610)

What this legislation boils down to is that we on this side of the House believe that the free enterprise Canadian can better develop resources than the government bureaucracy. We believe that the private sector would never condone a back-in clause such as Clause 28, which is a cowardly theft system thwarting pre-dated free enterprise.

Does government ownership in some magical way make us more Canadian or better Canadians? I say it does directly the opposite. It robs us of initiative and delineates us as socialists. That is what Bill C-48 does to us.

I would now like to quote the following:

The state will use its political supremacy to wrest, by degrees, all capital, to centralize all instruments of production in the hands of the state. Of course, in the beginning, this cannot be effected except by means of despotic inroads on the rights of property, and on the conditions of production—

In most advanced countries, the following will be pretty generally applicable—

1. Abolition of property in land and application of all rents of land to public purposes.

Is not Bill C-48 the beginning of this?

2. Confiscation of the property of all emigrants and rebels.

Is Bill C-48 the beginning of this? There is no mention of property rights in the charter of rights in the proposed Constitution.

3. A heavy progressive or graduated income tax.

We have that now and I am wondering how much more we will have a week from Thursday night.

4. Abolition of all right of inheritance.

We have seen that in the United Kingdom and our taxation policy is headed in that direction.

5. Centralization of credit in the hands of the state, by means of a national bank with state capital and an exclusive monopoly.

Every Thursday we have the start of that.

6. Centralization of communications and transport in the hands of the state.

You just have to think of the CBC, the CDC with its control of Global television, of the rail cuts and the Kent report. That will be the next task of the Pravda of Canada!

7. Extension of factories and instruments of production owned by the state; the bringing into cultivation of waste lands, and the improvement of soil in accordance with a common plan.

If you look at the clauses in this bill, Mr. Speaker, you will see that this is in the bill also, where it says:

Currently the minister has complete discretion to determine the appropriate level of Canadian labour and material content. An amendment will introduce a detailed schedule which will require the greatest level possible of Canadian and native labour content and a specific Canadian procurement program of goods and services for each development. This approach is preferable to establishing a rigid quota of Canadian content.

To continue with my reading:

8. Equal obligation of all to work. Establishment of industrial armies, especially for agriculture.

9. Combination of agriculture with manufacturing industries; gradual abolition of the distinction between town and country, by more equable distribution of population.

These are the sort of things we are arguing about now concerning the charter of rights in the proposed Constitution.

That preamble and those nine points, Mr. Speaker, did not come from the other side of the House, as you might have thought was the case. They sound exactly like what we are talking about in Bill C-48, but I will tell you where they did come from. It is the communist manifesto of Marx and Engels.

I was mailed a book written by Mr. John A. Masters, President of the Canadian Hunter Exploration Limited. I have not had the pleasure of meeting him but I hope to in the near future. Mr. Masters wrote a book called "The Hunters" and it is a personification of free enterprise in Canada, in my view. This is what he said:

When all the rhetoric is cleared away, and the great policies forgotten, whether or not we find enough energy in this country to maintain our democratic freedoms will depend on the people we have looking for it. Their brains, expertise, and dedication will be equal to the job—or we will fail.

I wanted to show the quality of people who are actually involved in this job, and to make the point that no country has the combination of resources and trained manpower that Canada has. Neither has any country a more encouraging economic environment to bring forth the effort and creativity of its people.

Canada's oil industry, made up largely of Canadians whether they work for small companies or multinationals, and its great energy resources are a priceless national asset. Together, they give Canada a particular strength denied to virtually every other nation of the western world.

It is the imperative duty of our governmental system to use these great resources and these priceless people to preserve the freedoms of this country. Where we are obviously in danger is in the lack of will among our political leaders to do the simple, sensible and sometimes unpopular things that are necessary for energy self-sufficiency. These are:

1. Recognize that energy self-sufficiency for Canada alone is pointless. Canada's economy is so intimately tied to the U.S. that depression there means disaster here. We must share our energy supplies to survive.

2. Understand that the U.S. and Canada are together threatened as never before. The decade of the 1980s will likely see Russia attempt to strangle the U.S. by manipulating events so that it is denied crucial oil supplies from the Middle East. This will surely happen unless alternate supplies are available. We are, in a very real sense, at war.

3. Examine each new energy regulation or law to see if it actually encourages the production of oil and gas. This is accomplished primarily by drilling wells but also by building plants, pipelines, and other facilities. Much regulation actually impedes development.

4. Allow oil and gas prices to rise to world levels to make supply and demand conform to reality. Demand will decline as oil costs more. Supplies will increase as lower grade sources become economic. Low energy cost is the single, most important cause of shortages.

5. Approve exports of surplus gas to provide the revenues necessary for the companies to maintain a continuous 25 year gas reserve supply for Canada.

6. Permit sufficient revenues to flow back to the companies, rather than to governments, so they can find new fields. Governments do not find energy supplies.

7. Preserve the sacred competition of ideas, probably the single most important element in finding oil and gas, by encouraging a diversity of companies.

Bury forever the concept of a single national company controlling the entire oil business. This would be certain disaster. I say this not as a political ideologist, but as one with some experience in the mysterious art of finding energy.

I think that speaks for itself, Mr. Speaker, as well as for us on this side of the House. We are free enterprisers, not statists. We do not like the philosophy of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and all of his writing along those lines. As I said before, God help us if we slip down that slippery slope to socialism.

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join in this debate to speak in favour of Motion No. 23, which is an amendment to Clause 28 of the Canada Oil and Gas Act. As we know, Clause 28 of the Canada Oil and Gas Act gives the Crown in right of Canada the right to back in by way of a 25 per cent carried interest on oil on Canada lands that has not yet been produced.

I think we need to understand just what that means. Prior to the formation of Petro-Canada, our state-owned oil company, some 700 companies in this country of which the majority are owned by Canadians were out in the field taking leases from provincial governments and the federal government for regions off the west coast, east coast and in the north, but mostly in the western plain. They would take up a lease and pay a lease fee to the provincial or federal government which would give them exclusive rights to these lands. They would then go in and do some seismic, then do some drilling to see if there was well oil or gas there. On many occasions they found oil or gas, but because we did not need it at that moment, the well was capped and is sitting there. All the work had been done and all of the risk had been taken but production had not started. That is the way it is at the moment.

What Clause 28 does is to give to PetroCan, as our state oil company, the right to take 25 per cent of that oil or gas without ever having contributed to the search for it, doing the seismic and high technology analysis and then drilling the well.

• (1620)

What our motion in the name of the hon. member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson) says is that we should let bygones be bygones. If a company has found oil, then that company should get that oil and, of course, pay royalties to the federal government—in short, the people of Canada—if the oil happens to be on Canada lands. If it happens to be in the western basin in the province of Alberta, it would pay a royalty to the provincial government. The company would have gross income, expenses and taxable income, and it would pay income tax to the federal government and to the provincial government. As a matter of principle and on a practical basis, we do not believe we as a government or as a people should be taking material which has already been produced.

One of the rationale often used by the cabinet for this back-in provision is that the government had permitted tax depreciation and depletion to the oil industry and that, in a sense, therefore, paid for part of this, and 25 per cent is reasonable. We have all deducted our personal income tax deductions and we have all received tax credits if we have owned MURBs or apartment buildings. Other companies have. Farmers get to depreciate their machinery.

Mr. Waddell: Ninety-three cents on every dollar?

Mr. Thacker: The hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) thinks it is a matter of amount. I would like to discuss the principle of it. If a government can come in because it has permitted somebody to have a deduction, then surely it would want to come in and take over all farms since farmers for years have not paid income tax because of their depreciation on machinery. It is that principle to which we should address our minds. I do not believe as a matter of principle that because a government has given a deduction, it should come along later and take something over, using the deduction as an excuse. If a government wants to take something over, then why does it not pay for it? Why do we not set up a third party arbitration process, analyse the fair value and pay for it? Even Third World countries—the very worst of them, if that is a proper phrase—do not come in and expropriate. Petro-Canada, our own state oil company, operates in the Norwegian sea. I do not think we would be happy if Norway were to expropriate Petro-Canada's efforts there. We operate in the Far East. We are going to be in Tanzania. Those countries do not come in and take our projects away, so I really do not believe in my own mind as a matter of principle that it is fair for us to do it.

Nor am I convinced as a matter of theory that Petro-Canada can operate as an oil company and be as successful as the other individually owned companies in which the management has to report to the shareholders each year and the shareholders can stand up and make that management accountable to them. I think that is a very great incentive for the management to produce results, and I honestly believe that we will not find that in a Crown corporation. We have hundreds of Crown corporations in this country, and we do not find in them the same level of creativity, ambition and energy to get out into the fringe areas that we see in individually owned companies.

That is not to say that individuals are not good people, because in the Post Office the people are all good people individually. The same is the case with the National Harbours Board and so forth. However, the system wherein a Crown corporation has to be accountable to politicians, a cabinet, means that the test does not become efficiency in the industry. The test becomes political as to whether or not it has an adverse effect on elected politicians. It does not matter whether the cabinet is Liberal, PC or NDP; the test is whether there is efficiency. The market economy which developed in the late 1700s and 1800s developed for a very good reason, and the reason is: how do you cull people off the bottom? That goes on even in socialist countries.

The great advantage of the market economy is that if someone comes up with a new idea and can turn out a product better and more creatively than other companies, people take it on; or if it is bought out, that technology which has been developed is taken on. The inefficient drop off the bottom, and that is a continuous rollover process which works very well. The minute there is state intervention, the test for dropping off no longer becomes economic efficiency; it becomes political accountability of a minister and, if I were a minister, I would not want the company to fail either.

Mr. Waddell: Tell that to Bill Davis and Sir John A. Macdonald.

Mr. Thacker: Absolutely.

Mr. Waddell: You would have kicked Sir John out of your party.

Mr. Thacker: I presume the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway would want everything to be operated by government enterprise.

Mr. Waddell: I have never said that.

Mr. Thacker: So he does want some mix, then.

Mr. Waddell: I am a Sir John A. Macdonald type.

Mr. Thacker: The hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway says he is a Sir John A. Macdonald type. That is very interesting; he should certainly be sitting over here.

Mr. Fennell: He is more like the Marxist type to me.

Mr. Rae: After the couple of speeches we have heard this afternoon, you must be joking.

Mr. Thacker: The only thing I am implying is that the New Democratic Party wants to take over the other companies. Members of the NDP do not really want to have a mixed economy. They want to take over Esso and Shell. They do not want to have a real competitor for the Crown agency. I can see why. It is because the Crown agency always comes up second best. The example of CNR and CPR is classic. This Parliament has had to write off hundreds of millions of dollars every few years in order to keep CNR in the black. We do not write things off for the CPR.

Mr. Rae: Like hell. You wrote off the last hundred years to the CPR.

Mr. Thacker: The CPR has not received any benefits from this Parliament other than the usual income tax deductions, which are exactly the same ones—

Mr. Rae: They bought the whole country for five cents in 1880.

Mr. Thacker: The government does not tell Petro-Canada it must operate as an oil company and make or break on its own. That is not what happens. We threw $1.5 billion into Petro-Canada, and it was not making it as an oil company so we gave it preference in choosing leases in western Canada over other Canadian and non-Canadian companies. That was not quite enough, so we then gave Petro-Canada the right to back in provided it purchased its 25 per cent interest. Even with that the corporation was not doing well, so we now have the flowering of the policy, which is an absolute confiscatory 25 per cent back-in, or theft. We are going to make that company work if it takes every acre of land and if we have to destroy every other company.

Mr. Waddell: You guys are bum boys for Exxon, Mobil and the United States.

Mr. Thacker: The government must not be seen to fail. If the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway was in the government, that would be true—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Lethbridge-Foothills has the floor.

Mr. Taylor: You are getting to them, Blaine.

Mr. Stewart: Keep it up, Blaine.

Mr. Cullen: You just made Hansard.

Mr. Thacker: Let us look at what might have happened in the oil industry over the last five years. I ask hon. members to consider this. We know that all the retail service stations owned by ownership companies, individual shares, have gone through an enormous change, from being full service service stations to self-serve service stations. That process has been painful for many individuals who were service station lessees, but the change was made. If those retail service stations were all owned by a Crown corporation, how could that change take place? If they happened to be unionized, it would be impossible under the terms of agreements. If they were not unionized and had associations, they would be able to put incredible political pressure on the government of the day. Whichever government it might be, it would be impossible for that change to occur, and we would therefore still have in place tens of thousands of full service service stations operating inefficiently. Because they would go back to the government, the government would just increase the rates by way of a regulatory mechanism, and the individual at the end of the chain would still have to pay.

• (1630)

There is a practical objection that relates to Petro-Canada, however well-meaning the individuals may be. Based on my experience of viewing Crown corporations, the Post Office and departments, however good the individuals are, I just do not believe they have the creativity. The oil industry is one area that needs creative people.

In this land we have hundreds of thousands of square miles of land which has to be swept over by very sophisticated seismic equipment. We need to apply high technology to analysing the data. Money has to be put in to drill a well which very often comes up dry.

I do not believe that Petro-Canada can meet that technology. It is with great regret that I must say that Petro-Canada did about $1.1 million of research and development last year. That is a drop in the bucket. It means absolutely nothing in the oil industry. If it were not for the multinational corporations, many of which have shareholders in Canada and operate around the world, we would not be even close to self-sufficiency.

Mr. Waddell: Your pals.

Mr. Thacker: I have nothing against the multinational corporations. They are a natural evolution, just as is the United Nations, and must evolve into bigger spheres that are necessary for us to operate on this globe as an interconnected network. I see international taxation in a form we can all agree with, one which does not affect sovereignty, coming in the long run. We need the multinational corporations. They permit a collection of skilled, creative people who can cope with these huge projects that are now running into multibillions of dollars rather than just a few hundred million.

Petro-Canada bought three existing companies, all of which were searching for and finding oil and all of which were paying income tax. We need to ask whether PetroCan has paid any income tax. It has not. It has deferred all its income taxes. The consumers, the taxpayers of Canada, have had to put up with deficits, all of which were financed at 19.35 per cent in order for this company to take others over at a cost of $1.5 billion.

Let us look for a minute at how important ownership is. Leases are not granted unless a provincial or federal government puts up the land. There is no drilling unless drilling licences are given. The rate of production is determined by the provincial conservation boards. The federal government sets the price and decides whether there is any export. It is the most highly regulated industry that we have.

Under those circumstances ownership becomes more like a banker's operation with a rate of return. We are now in the process of purchasing back foreign-owned companies. In the past, the outflow of money from Canada had been by way of dividends, averaging 2 to 3 per cent per year. Now that we have bought them out, we hold debt dollars and the interest on those debt dollars is 19.35 per cent. That is an incredible disservice to the Canadian public.

What are the multinational corporations doing with the money we give to buy them back? They are putting it into solar research, hydrogen research and the new wave technology. When we get to the end of the oil industry, which will come within the next 15 to 20 years—and it will be gone in a conventional sense—we will have to turn to the multinationals and buy new wave technology from them. We will be in exactly the same boat we are in now.

Far better than buying out the oil industry which is now at its tail end, why not create corporations and give tax incentives to Canadians to get into the new wave technology so that when it strikes we will be ready? People will come to us for the new wave technology rather than our having to buy it in the future.

When we get down to the bottom line, we need to ask some hard questions about Petro-Canada. Has it added any new oil? It has not. Any wells that have produced new oil have always been in partnership with the multinational corporations. Has it added new technology? It only spent about $1 million in research last year, and I do not see any increase in that figure.

Has it paid a return to Canadians on the $1.5 billion put into it? It has not given us one cent of return. It is one of these great emotional, nationalistic ideas that are hard to control. Perhaps it would be beneficial if it were for new wave technology. However, to get carried away with nationalism and buying back an industry that we totally control, one which was only costing us 2 to 3 per cent by way of dividends compared to 19.35 per cent to buy them back, is not doing a service to Canadian citizens. On many occasions I have sat down with people at kitchen tables to explain the background. They think it is absolutely absurd. They would rather see Parliament and the Government of Canada putting its money into the new wave.

I appreciate having had the opportunity to say a few words on this motion.

Mr. Bill Yurko (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, I want to see a new energy regime finalized at the earliest opportunity. New legislation in this area has been a long time coming. I hope that in the very near future we will have legislation that will provide stability and working rules that are known to everybody, rules that are not changed at the whim of a minister or without appropriate consideration.

I want to say first that I was involved as a minister of a government for over half a dozen years in changing drastically the energy regime in Alberta. No one has to tell me about retroactive legislation. We changed every lease in Alberta retroactively and changed the royalty structure from a maximum 16⅔ per cent to a much higher royalty. Indeed, we changed legislation to effectively change the transfer of ownership of oil and gas.

In the early seventies massive amounts of gas were found on the Suffield reserve in Alberta. It was suggested that the federal government owned those resources, but it was soon proven false, as was the case with the gunnery reserve at Cold Lake. They were Alberta resources.

We had to handle those resources in the best way that we knew how as a Progressive Conservative government in Alberta, and we did. We had an excellent model from the Social Credit government. The Nova Corporation, an Alberta corporation, was set up and given a monopoly to collect oil and gas in Alberta. It was set up as a private enterprise company. The only government involvement was that the government would annually select four members of the board of directors of that company so that provincial government input of policy could always be injected into that corporation which received the monopoly in Alberta for the collection of oil and gas. It has become a very successful model. The Nova Corporation is one of the most dynamic and growing corporations in Canada today, Canadianizing a lot of the oil and gas industry.

We also had to deal with the resources in Suffield and on the gunnery range at Cold Lake. We formed and developed a new concept, the Alberta Energy Company. The Alberta Energy Company was given all the leases and all the resources in the Suffield reserve and also in the Cold Lake gunnery reserve. Therefore, it works in partnership with the private sector to develop these resources.

• (1640)

The Alberta Energy Company also is a model. It is owned 50 per cent by the Alberta government and 50 per cent owned by the people of Alberta. The one thing we do is attempt to keep the government out of management and administration of the company in terms of its dealings with the private sector. In Canada, as in Finland and all over the world, there are all sorts of public and private corporations in this vital area of providing energy for society. I do not believe that the federal government has a monopoly in structuring a regime on Canada lands. In fact, I am sure they have copied many of the regimes of other jurisdictions.

After consideration of Bill C-48 in committee for some six to eight months, the minister eventually came in with a substantive statement indicating a substantial number of changes to the initial legislation brought about by the pleading of some of the oil companies and by pleading in committee. Some of them were rather specific and dramatic. I hope someone will read some of the statements made by the minister in committee before the bill returned to the House. For example, the minister could move in to take over as operator of any company where there was any amount of interest by the federal government in that company. This was changed to provide that the federal government could only take over operation when it had 25 per cent.

In the area of the future Crown share of 25 per cent on all future leases, there were few changes made or no changes made at all. In the back-in 25 per cent share there were essentially some cosmetic changes made.

One of the things I suggested strongly to the minister in committee is that there was a need for a change in the 25 per cent maximum figure. On the Crown ownership share, both the back-in one and the forward one, there was no minimum figure of 5 per cent, 10 per cent or 15 per cent; there was simply a maximum or minimum figure of 25 per cent. Some hon. members realize the extent and complexity of not only Canada lands but also of the industry in Canada. Some of it is largely foreign owned. The multinationals are foreign owned.

I do not disagree with the program of Canadianization. Indeed, it is timely and necessary. But the manner in which it is done is very important. If one backs in or takes a future share of 25 per cent of a small corporation, then what one does with that block of shares totally controls the company, particularly if ownership is widely dispersed or oftentimes if it is narrowly held. You cannot buck the government's 25 per cent with a small corporation. I have worked for some multinational companies and they can. The multinationals can adjust from day to day, from month to month and from year to year. The multinationals can contend with a 25 per cent ownership by the federal government. However, the little corporations that we have in Canada who are always growing and coming up by the entrepreneurial spirit of Canadians simply cannot adjust. They must toe the government line in every respect and at every turn. They cannot fight the government's 25 per cent share.

The 25 per cent share will be voted upon by a civil servant possibly receiving periodic directions from a government. I have also been there. When you have thousands of leases and you are dealing with hundreds of companies, I suggest to hon. members that civil servants make decisions on their own. They apply the letter of regulation and the letter of the law.

If I were to agree with the 25 per cent share on a forward basis with all leases associated with multinational corporations and very large Canadian corporations, I would hope that in the development of the Canadian oil and gas industry on Canada lands there would be a profusion of small companies, that the entrepreneurial spirit of Canadians would blossom like it never has before to provide energy self-sufficiency for this nation in the future, and perhaps in a decade.

In situations such as that, why should the federal government have a 25 per cent share of a small corporation that is drilling in the Mackenzie or in the Beaufort Sea or on the east coast? That is why I am disturbed about this piece of legislation. It is not the 25 per cent share as applied to the multinational corporations or as applied to the very large Canadian corporations that disturbs me, but the application of the 25 per cent either back-in share or forward share in the small Canadian companies or small entrepreneurial companies that will develop and that have developed in this nation.

It was for that reason that I suggested to the minister in committee that he look at the 25 per cent figure. If the minister will ever need more flexibility in this whole bill, it will be on that particular point. The minister or the government needs flexibility on that point. Then if it wanted to back in with a particular company with respect to only 10 per cent, it could. In fact, one might even question whether a 25 per cent forward partnership with some of the multinationals is sufficient. I believe I was told in committee that in Norway the crown reserved an 80 per cent ownership share of all exploration leases.

