ROUND-UP OF SMUGGLERS IN NEW YORK

Fashionable Milliners, Baggage Men, Customs Officials and Others to Be Indicted—Millions Involved in it

New York, Oct. 12.—Scores of indictments, probably more than a hundred, will be returned by the United States Grand Jury within the next two weeks against persons accused of swindling the government out of tariff revenues at the port of New York. Three classes of these swindlers will be prosecuted, namely: Fashionable milliners in the Fifth Avenue district; importers of raw sugar, and importers of figs, chestnuts, dates, etc., from Mediterranean ports.

Fully thirty of the best-known and most fashionable dressmakers and modistes in the United States will be indicted. It is known that Collector Loebl's inspectors have traced two hundred "sleeper trunks" containing fine millinery and lingerie from France and other countries upon which the government should have collected at least $2,000,000. These "sleepers" were all brought into this port during the last twelve months.

Prison Terms for Swindlers
Up to the present no systematic effort had been made to trace crimes of this kind committed more than a year before. But the fraud has run for several years unchecked, and it is estimated that the United States Treasury has been cheated out of eight or ten millions of dollars through this swindling scheme alone.

FOR WHAT DOES ST. JOHN'S $25 STAND, ANYWAY?

A Halifax Newspaper's Questioning Article on the Sir Sanford Fleming Tower and its Significance

(Halifax Recorder)

The school boy, when asked the question, replied that "a centopass was a tombstone erected to the memory of a man to show where he wasn't buried." We are beginning to think that the youthful detractor of the tower is not far from the mark. We are not at all opposed to the monument like the late Artemus Ward, we think a tower is a sweet word, but we think it right and proper that when a memorial is erected it should not be for its own sake alone but should commemorate something.

"Now it is just here that the crux of the matter lies in connection with the Sir Sanford Fleming monument. Of what would it be a commemoration? The chief object of the tower is to stand as a memorial of the establishment of responsible government in Nova Scotia in 1784, the legislation then founded being the first representative assembly on this side of the ocean. It was soon shown that the said year marked the establishment of a responsible government, a very different thing indeed.

"Occasional" in the Recorder has shown that the English colonies south of us had regular representative assemblies many years previous to 1784. The government of Nova Scotia, however, in this date, received royal instructions from London in which the several assemblies of the plantations—old term colonies—were referred to, and, of course, there are extant histories of those early colonial institutions.

"The main is now made that the Nova Scotia assembly of 1784 was the first institution of its kind established in any of the lands outside of the British Empire. Even this claim falls to the ground, however, because it has been shown that a representative assembly was introduced in the British West Indies at a prior date.

"Now then what inscription can we carve upon the proposed monument? This monument was raised to commemorate the establishment of the thirteenth representative assembly on the Atlantic. The visitor might ask, 'why not erect a monument in memory of the forty-second assembly established on this side?' Suppose we inscribe upon the monument: 'This monument was erected in commemoration of the establishment of the thirteenth representative assembly on the Atlantic.' This is an unusual thing for a people to raise monuments to record second best accomplishments. But supporting that the artist boldly carves this inscription: 'This monument was erected to commemorate the founding of the Dominion of Nova Scotia in all those countries now or at any time owing allegiance to Britain.' This is a very happy thought, and it is a monument of history would doubtless recall the lines of Pope concerning a certain monument in London, containing a false and offensive inscription:

"Where London's column pointing to the skies,
Like a tall bully lifts his head and lies."
"The only truthful inscription to place upon the proposed monument to the tower would run something like this: 'Erected to commemorate the fact that the first representative assembly was established in Nova Scotia.' But a negative declaration such as this would not only be a slur upon the tower, but it would have a slight tendency to raise a smile. Build the tower as you will, gentlemen, but see to it that it is a commemorative of something or other."

Jeanne of the Marshes

By E. P. OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XX.

Jeanne awoke the next morning to find herself between lavender-scented sheets in a small room bedstead, with a soft sea wind blowing in through the half-open window. Her maid was ready to wait upon her, and her bath was of salt water fresh from the sea. She descended to find Andrew at work in the garden, the sun already high in the heavens, and the sea as blue and placid as though the storm of the night before were a thing long past and forgotten.

"I am never going away," she declared, as they sat at breakfast. "I take you as my chapersons as you please, but I will not leave this island." "I am afraid," he answered smiling, "that there are other people who would have something to say about that. Your responsibility is already anxious. I have promised that you shall be back at the Hall by tea o'clock."

The gravity suddenly faded from her face. Her lips, which had been curved in a smile, quivered.

"You mean that?" she faltered.

"Most assuredly," he answered. "I have no place for loggers here. As a matter of fact, if you knew the truth, it is quite impossible that your staying here is quite possible."

"Well," she said, "I should like to know the truth. Suppose you tell me."

"You must confess, then," Andrew answered, "that I am somewhat of a fraud. Berners was my friend, not my lodger, and I am Andrew de la Borne, Cecil's elder brother."

He looked at him for several moments steadily.

"I think that you might have told me," he said.

"He shrugged his shoulders.

"What are you asked, or your stepmother?" "When Cecil told me that he had invited some of his fashionable friends down here to stay, I begged him to leave me out of it. I chose to retire here, and I preferred not to see any of my. Mine are country ways, Miss Le Mesurier. I am at heart what I pretended to be, a fisherman, countryman, and a man of the other side of life. Cecil's side, doesn't appeal to me a bit. I felt that it would be more comfortable for you that I would be more comfortable for you than I am. I kept out of the people and for me, I kept out of the way."

"You class me with them," she remarked quietly, "a little less than I think you for that as yet I have not chosen my way in life."

"That is true," he answered, "but how can you help but choose what every one of us who call themselves your friends regard as inevitable. You must dance, and fore the great ones of the earth. It is a part of the penalty that you must pay for your name and rank. All that I can wish is that you lose as little of yourself as possible in the days that lie before you."

"I thank you," she answered quietly. "You will let me know when you are ready to take me back," he asked, as they rose from the table. "I am clumsy, I know, and the words do not come readily to my mouth. But after all, you must understand."

"Yes," she said, "I do understand."

They went down to the beach and he helped her into the boat. Her maid sat by her side, and he rowed them across with a few powerful strokes.

"Storm and sunshine," he remarked, "follow one another here as swiftly as in any corner of the world. Yesterday we had wind and thunder and rain. Today, look! The sky is cloudless, the birds are singing everywhere upon the trees, and waves can do no more than ripple in upon the sands. Will you come to the village, and wait while I send for a carriage?"

"We will walk," she answered. "It may be for the last time."

The maid fell behind. Andrew and his companion, who seemed smaller and slimmer than ever by his side, started on their tortuous way, here and there turning to the right and to the left to follow the course of some tidal stream, or avoid the swampy places. The faint odor of wild lavender was mingled with the brackish scent of the sea. The ground was soft and spongy between their feet, and a breeze as soft as a caress blew in their faces. Up before them always, gaunt and bare, surrounded by its belts of weather-stricken trees, stood the Red Hall. Andrew looked toward it gloomily.

"Do you wonder," he asked, "that a man is sometimes depressed who is born the heir to a house like that, and to fortunes very similar?"

"Are you poor?" she asked him. "I thought perhaps you were, as your brother tried to make love to me."

"He frowned impatiently at her words.

"For Heaven's sake, child," he said, "don't be so cynical! Don't fancy that I am spoken for by your wealth. There are scoundrels enough in the world. Heaven knows, but there are men there as well. Give a few of the credit of being honest. Try and remember that you are—"

PHYSICAL NEEDS OF CHILDREN IN THE SCHOOL RANKS

Matter Receiving Considerable Attention at the Hands of British Authorities

By recent enactments the British parliament has declared its conviction that the true aim of education is something more than the mere training of the intelligence. The vital need of physical education is now indeed, universally recognized, and of late years a position of increasing importance has been assigned it in the school curriculum. A further stage in this development is marked by the issue of the British Board of Education's revised syllabus of physical exercises for public elementary schools. In the compilation of this manual, it is evident that a vast fund of practical knowledge has been drawn upon, and it should prove a valuable guide in the further development of a system whose foundations are already well established.

In a preparatory memorandum, Sir Robert Morant, briefly sketches the new scheme, and deals with certain general considerations which the board desires to impress upon those whose duty it will be to carry it out. Remarking that the physical health of the children lies at the root of education properly conceived, and that a healthy physique is an indispensable condition of the proper development of a sound character, an active intelligence, and a healthy physique, he points out that proper hygienic surroundings will not of themselves produce a sound physique. A further requirement is physical exercise.

"This may, no doubt, be promoted especially in the case of country children, by a variety of means, but none of these is such that special physical exercises should be entirely dispensed with, and in the case of children whose lives are spent both for the development of the body and for the correction of the defects of civilization, induced by an unhealthy physical environment.

Memory also is strengthened. As the exercises become more advanced there is an increasing demand on the powers of concentration and initiative, and also of endurance and determination. The constant call for self-control and self-restraint, for co-operation and harmonious working with others, needed for performing physical exercises and for playing organized games, helps to foster independence, and promotes a public spirit which is valuable in after life.

Moreover, rightly taught, physical exercises should serve as a healthy outlet for the emotions, while the natural power of expressing thought, feelings, and ideas by means of bodily movements is encouraged, and brought out—a power which was in a measure suppressed in the child under modern conditions. "This appeal to the aesthetic sense is very great, and extremely important for in learning to appreciate physical beauty in form and motion the perception of all beautiful things is inensibly developed, and the child gradually learns to seek beauty and proportion not only in his external surroundings, but also in the lives and character of those he meets."

THE INGLENOOK PHILOSOPHER of Kennebecasis Bay.

The road grows longer and the hills grow steeper every year. By the wayside few things except a blistering sun, a cold blast from the bay or a sudden shower can move me. I look over the water, the fields and woods, and am charmed by their placid beauty. By the wayside, of a pleasant afternoon, I am as indifferent to the world's activities as a potato in one of these occupied places. It is the years that banish the unrest of youth, and I am content to sit or to stroll, and I am content to say so. Mrs. Pollard is growing old as well as I. The years respect nothing that lives. Still, she greets them kindly as they come and go.

We do not meet as often as we did in the past, just because the road is longer and the hills are steeper than they were then. Her smile is just as pleasant and her greeting just as cordial as ever, but I do not fail to observe the sadness in her eyes that some strangers to her a few years ago. There are streaks of gray in her hair, and some tiny wrinkles about her eyes, but she does not try to conceal them. Why should she? We might as well try to convince ourselves that winter is not approaching irretrievably, as that age has no power will not soon "have us in his clutches." I cannot feel that these autumn days are the saddest of the year, as Bryant has sung. "I remarked Mrs. Pollard, as she joined me by the roadside a day or two since. "These are the harvest days that foretell repose. How busy Nature has been! She has perfected the grass, the leaves, the flowers, the fruit that she has been making, and after a night's sleep she will set to work and reproduce them. Still, or other forms from the same material of which they were made and have been made for ages. There is no death. What we call death is merely transformation. I lived before the flood; so did this tree, and we shall live on until space is empty."

"Consequently?" I queried.

"Maybe not," answered Mrs. Pollard, "a material entity, yet I cannot affirm that anything that lives is without thought. This tree may rejoice when the children frolic in its shade; this flower may be proud when it is admired; this brook may howl as the birds sing—"because it is content."

"Such thoughts," said I, "are such as fit through our minds in dreams. They are unprofitable because they cannot be discussed intelligently. There are mysteries, even in a question, and I find an irresistible scientist that ever lived has failed to solve. It is amusing to hear one trying to explain much who can explain nothing. How is Aaron or how is the farm?"

"Aaron's great ambition is to show that you did not overestimate his capabilities when you sent him to me a homeless wife, and the farm is improving in productive-ness and beauty every year. Both of us lay by a little money against a rainy day, and content. If Mr. Harriman was all the time plotting at scheming for another million he was a thousand times poorer than Aaron or I."

SUCCESS ATTENDS THE MCCORMICK BENEFIT

Large Number at Opening of Big Event in the Queen's Rink

The benefit entertainment to Hugh J. McCormick, ex-world's champion skater and a prominent oarsman, who, in his day, did much for the fair fame of St. John in the sporting world, was a pronounced financial success. A large number of tickets were sold and a goodly portion of the purchasers attended what proved to be an enjoyable entertainment. Postmaster Sears presided and introduced the performers. He also read a telegram from Hon. Wm. Pugsley expressing good wishes for Mr. McCormick and his entire cooperation with the idea of the benefit. The programme included selections by the City Cornet Band and Harrison's orchestra, solo by J. D. Wood, monologue by Ben Hillbert, reading by A. W. Baird, solo by Miss LeRoy, comedy sketch by Whitman & Davis, of the Orpheum theatre, solo by Thomas Malcolm, dancing by Lawrence MacLaren, comedy sketch by Arthur Furlong, cornet solo by D. J. Gallagher, comedy sketch and songs by Steve Matthews, and an instrumental duet by W. G. Stokes and W. G. Stratton.

All the numbers proved of excellent quality and were enthusiastically received. The instrumental duet, clarinet and piano, by Stokes and Stratton, was a veritable gem. Steve Matthews' sketches, Mr. Dooley and the Irish Justice, were very meritorious. Arthur Furlong, in kilts and sporrans, contributed a turn of the Harry Lauder variety which caught the house instantly. The comedy sketch by Whitman and Davis, of the burlesque sketch order—was also excellent, while Mr. Hillbert's monologue, Mr. Malcolm, Mr. Wood and Miss LeRoy in solos, Mr. Baird's bolges, in a quartet, and Mr. Gallagher's cornet solo were all very pleasing.

Mr. McCormick was resting easily last night. He sent a message to the Toronto committee among whom he expressed his gratitude for the kindness of his friends in their undertaking last evening.

THE ORANGE FAIR

Notwithstanding numerous counter attractions the big Orange fair under the auspices of the St. John District Lodge, L. O. A., which opened in the Queen's rink last night, was large attended and promises to be a most successful function. The Carleton Place, Ontario, was in attendance and all the booths and games reported good business. The voting contest for the most popular alderman is expected to prove an exciting one. At the close of the fair last evening Aldermen Baxter, Kelley, Vanwart and Sproul were running neck and neck. The prize is a handsome piece of cut glass and the winner will be announced on the last night of the fair.

The opening ceremonies last evening were very simple. On the bandstand in the centre of the rink were seated J. H. Burley, district master, who presided, Mayor Bullock, Hon. Robert Maxwell, M. P., Dr. A. W. MacRae, grand master for the province of New Brunswick, and officers of St. John county and district lodges.

Mr. Burley read a telegram from Hon. Wm. Pugsley regretting his inability to attend and expressing the hope that the fair would be a success. Mr. Burley also spoke briefly for the benefit of such organizations as the Orange Association whose keynote is patriotism and British liberty. He hoped the fair would receive the patronage it so highly merited.

Dr. A. W. MacRae congratulated the members upon the enterprise and zeal with which they had labored to make the fair a success.

Hon. Robert Maxwell, speaking along the same line, referred to the important position occupied by the Orange in all parts of the empire. He urged the members to live up to their obligation and work for the best interests of mankind. He then declared the fair open and joined with the other speakers in the gathering then dispersed and the guests interspersed the booths. It is the intention to have some special entertainment feature each evening and prominent Orangemen will also be invited to speak. On Thursday evening the speaker will be Hon. J. K. Fleming, provincial secretary. The members of the different lodges had been busily engaged for the past two weeks in preparing for what was easily the biggest thing of the kind ever attempted by any fraternal organization in this city and when the rink doors were thrown open last night the result of their labors was at once apparent. With the bright colors used in the decoration of the booths, the warm glow of autumn leaves backed by the sombre green of spruce and cedar, red, white and blue bunting, pictures, flags and clusters of sparkling incandescent lights, the scene was a beautiful one.

The games are under the general supervision of R. F. Goodrich with the following assistants: William Simpson, William Rogers and Oscar Grant.

Air-gun—James Sullivan and N. J. Morrison.

Babies-on the block—William Ruddock.

Sub-target gun—John Mowbray.

Beany toss—William Thompson.

THE BEST APPLES ON TOP OF BARREL

(N. Y. Commercial.)

That the United States has no monopoly in packing apples with the good ones on the top and bottom, with the inferior ones in the middle, is a fact which is being demonstrated in a most convincing manner. The Toronto committee among whom he expressed his gratitude for the kindness of his friends in their undertaking last evening.

There are people in the United States who are brazen as to take risks even in Ontario, where the fruit is grown. Householders are not always maintained through the bottom. For the prices that are being paid and the quantities of good fruit allowed to go to waste in country orchards and the apple supply in this city is unsteady.

The Free Press says that "packers who practice such deception find that punishment in the shape of loss of trade is sure to follow upon their wrong-doing." The regret is that such punishment is neither swift nor as direct as justice and the interest of Canadian trade require. Every encouragement should be given and every assistance to the law officers, both general and specific, to bring the punishment home to the guilty parties without delay and in the eyes of the public. Every case of dishonest packing should not only be prosecuted and severely punished, but the facts should be published broadcast. Honest growers and the great majority of fruit-powers are honest—and high principle merchants should make it their business to expose those who bring Canadian trade into disrepute at home or abroad.

But the private citizen who has been imposed upon by dishonest packers should report every case at once to the law officers that investigation may be made and the offenders punished. Just as soon as Canadians in general begin to exercise the Englishman's prerogative of standing for their rights this and many other afflictions and impositions will be remedied. Certainly it is of prime interest to Canada that the dishonest apple packer should be put out of business.

NATURAL RULERS

A group of the gentlemen who are described by Mr. Borden (if he is correctly reported in the Standard) as the natural rulers of the people met in Toronto one night last week.

There is a note of encouragement in the words of President Maxwell. An open confession is a good beginning. And yet it would not be the part of wisdom to assume off-hand that there would be no more vote-stuffing, or what the World in its report describes as "machine methods," whatever that may mean among natural rulers.

SAVE THE CHILDREN

A statement made by Dr. Bridges at a meeting of the board of school trustees last evening should arouse the citizens to action. He stated that several firms are employing girls and boys under fourteen years of age.

One can conceive of circumstances under which a child under fourteen might be forced to become the bread-winner of the family, but such conditions should not exist in the city of St. John.

should interest themselves in this matter. If parents would give a little serious thought to the question of what their feelings would be if their own children were the ones to be denied a fair start in life, their sympathy would be quick to find expression in an effective way.

The American contestant did not win the great balloon race. He was disqualified. This is sad news for the American people.

Since it is the law that the weight is to be stamped on loaves of bread, the law should be observed.

If the affairs of the Intercolonial railway are not conducted in a faultless manner it will not be because of any lack of expert newspaper advice.

Despite some disappointment in regard to attendance, the Fredericton exhibition appears to have left a small surplus. The directors have done well.

"One thing is certain," says an Ottawa despatch, "and that is that a shipbuilding plant will be established and ships will be built somewhere in Canada."

The question of a retiring allowance to School Secretary Manning, after so many years of service, should receive very sympathetic consideration by the school board, which will take it up at a special meeting to be called for the purpose.

Less than two years after the panic of October, 1907, the blast furnaces of the United States are producing pig iron at a record rate.

With 330,000,000 bushels of wheat, oats and barley of high quality selling at the highest prices for the last quarter of a century, western Canada enjoys prosperity.

It is stated in the Montreal Star that the English and West Indian members of the West Indian commission will sail this week for England, and that they and the Canadian commissioners will meet in the West Indies early in the new year.

The Rev. J. Hunter Boyd, who will deliver a series of lectures in the province under the auspices of the Anti-Tubercular Association, is thoroughly familiar with the subject, as will be remembered by all who heard him at a public meeting in the Opera House some months ago.

The Ottawa Citizen, in a reflective mood, makes these pertinent observations:—"Humanity recognizes the degree to which pain and piety may cover a multitude of sins and imperfections and insists upon making a closer examination than that afforded by the superficial surface."

The death of Mr. Charles S. Wilcox, leader of the provincial opposition in Nova Scotia, is a very severe loss to his party, but it is more than that.

It is nevertheless possible that some good will result from the heart-searching in Ward 1. It is not stated that Mr. Foster was present, but he will doubtless hear of it, and convey to Mr. Borden the information that the natural rulers in Toronto are likely to have a busy winter.

The United States circuit court of appeals has declared that Charles W. Morse must serve his term with hard labor for having violated the banking laws of the country. While awaiting the decision of the court he has been laboring to retrieve his fortunes, and has been re-elected president of two steamship companies.

There is far too great a tendency to assume that the law will enforce itself. In this matter of the employment of children, if employers would insist upon a certificate of age, it would greatly simplify the task of the truant officer and factory inspector.

THE PLAYGROUND MOVEMENT; PRACTICAL OPERATION THROUGHOUT THE STATES

(Worcester, Mass., Telegram) The board of trade began its fall and winter series of smoke-talks last night, in its hall, 11 Foster street, with Dr. Henry S. Curtis, Clark University, secretary of the Playground Association of America, as the speaker. The general subject was "The playground movement," and by the aid of stereopticon views. Dr. Curtis showed the practical operation of playgrounds in cities throughout the country and the work accomplished. Dr. Curtis also explained the need of playgrounds in Worcester.

There was a representative attendance and the interest aroused was shown by the number remaining after the lecture to question and discuss with Dr. Curtis the application of the playground idea in Worcester. Dr. Curtis prefaced his illustrated description with a history of the playground movement, what it has accomplished and what it is expected to accomplish. He said it was a movement rapidly spreading through the country so that there is hardly a city in the State of Worcester without a playground, while many smaller communities have several. He believes it is not far off fancy bound to have a meteoric career, and then come to a standstill, but rather come more and more into general use so that a few years hence will find a city without a playground system, the exception rather than the general rule.

Rapid Growth "The rapid growth and attendant success of the work shows this," said Dr. Curtis. "From 1907 to 1908 saw the number of playgrounds in the country doubled and the number is constantly being increased and those in existence are being improved. The playground system is not only known to America but it is to be found in many of the European cities. In Germany may be said to be the originator of the playground movement. In Germany there are regular courses for the school teachers so they may instruct their pupils to the best advantage and the number of courses is being constantly increased and the system improved. "The playground movement in a city generally begins with the organization of a playground association upon a philanthropic basis. The most influential people in the city are actively identified with the movement and raise the money necessary by subscription until the work is sufficiently developed to secure an appropriation. "The first state to pass a playground law was New Jersey, and others are following that example. Massachusetts has made playground provision by local option referendum vote. Of 42 cities voting; at the last election 40 adopted the measure with a vote of nearly five to one. "A detail of movement which is rapidly growing in favor is the presenting of memorial playgrounds to cities by wealthy men. The first example of this was in Philadelphia. Other cities have been membered in similar manner, among them Springfield. The first six months of this year 29 such gifts have been reported, making 40 such memorials during the past year. "The playgrounds are divided into three parts; school playgrounds, or those forming part of the school property of the city or town and use before and after school hours, and in use before and after school and during intermissions under the direction of an experienced instructor, municipal playgrounds under the direction of a branch of the city government and park playgrounds under the direction of the regular park commission. The school playgrounds are as important as the whole school system and serve several purposes. The first aim is to improve and protect the physical health. The second aim is to preserve the organic strength of the pupils through exercises used not merely to give exercise, but to stimulate and keep in healthy condition the vital organs. The third aim is to uplift the social and moral conditions. The playgrounds are used to give the children out of the saloon, the alley or side street and the back stable. It gets in touch with those not reached by many organizations working for the betterment of social and moral conditions. Take a simple example. In the game of croquet, not a few children are prone to move the ball to an advantageous position if they can do so without detection. It may seem a little thing in itself and a detail that the boy or school child knows little of. But following out this practice until 16 or 18 years old is not apt to fit the person for entering business with as fine a code of honor as if brought up differently.

THE CATHOLIC REGISTER AND THE PRESBYTERIAN MISSIONS

A Return to the Attack Made on the Work Among the Ruthenians in the West—Inconsistency of Methods is Contentions of Catholic Paper

The Catholic Register, in its issue of Oct. 7th returns to the attack on the Presbyterian missions among the Ruthenians in the west. It expresses the opinion that the Presbyterian Board was actuated by "humanitarian motives," and asks why it does not try its hand on uplifting of the poor and degraded English cities; so graphically described by the editor of the Toronto Globe. The Register contends that the Board had been favorably with other immigrants and then proceeds in a review of the statement of the Home Mission Society. "We have heard a great deal in praise of the public school system of Manitoba and we were rather surprised to learn that the provincial government had turned its back on the Ruthenians to the Home Mission Society. The Catholic Register, and the other provinces are justified in asking why and on what grounds? "The sight presented by the faculty of Manitoba College, a Presbyterian institution, preparing young Ruthenian men for 'ordination' is to say the least, singularly edifying. We are informed that 'Greek' Archbishop in our account, many of these young men and sent them out to labor amongst their own countrymen. We will add a little information on our account. Some of them were ordained by the famous 'Bishop Cyprian' in a lively stable at Sifton, Manitoba. The Archbishop took as his Lordship lowered the rate and was satisfied with 'spiritual' remuneration. "The second and third delegations of the Ruthenians have waited upon the members of the board and they were advised to organize a Greek Church in Canada not subject to the authority of any foreign ecclesiastic, and so set forth the clear light and full knowledge into the minds of the Ruthenians that they had already been brought. Note the fact that they were not advised to inaugurate the Presbyterian form of worship. We may be pardoned for asking the question, why not? We invite Drs. MacLaren and Campbell to go on and make the attempt, but we warn them beforehand that we will not be responsible for the personal safety. We fear it will be a repetition of the incident in which Jennie Geddes figured in the olden days. "The confession about the Ranko (newspaper) is very curious. It establishes a principle in business as well as in religion. These good people put up their money to aid a journal, and then they are informed that strange and defiling articles sometimes slip into the pages of their carefully conducted journal, but we find ourselves unable to slip this salacious

NATURAL RULERS THE SUGAR REFINERY Editor Times: Sir,—I have read with considerable interest the discussion as chronicled in the Times, to the Dundas Sugar Refinery Co. and the city council. It is a matter that requires serious thought. St. John cannot have too many of these kind of things. It is a matter of fact that the House of Lords would be a good field for his kind of politics. The world knows the past of the House of Lords. The House of Lords would be a good field for his kind of politics. The world knows the past of the House of Lords. The House of Lords would be a good field for his kind of politics. The world knows the past of the House of Lords.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES: Sir,—I have been treated to some ruling thoughts from the leader of the opposition, just come back from Europe in connection with Worcester vacation schools and explained by W. D. Hyde, director of the vacation work. It was shown where, at the Lodge street school, one of the sports at Crompton park in connection with the vacation school work were also shown.

OCTOBER ROD AND GUN On the eve of the big game hunting season, the October number of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, at Woodstock, Ont., gives foremost attention to big game hunting stories. They will be found varied enough in both localities and experiences to interest all sportsmen, and many will doubtless recall incidents in their own careers corresponding with those related in such pleasing fashion in these pages. In the same way the article on "The Characteristics of a Fine Back Wood" will remind numerous readers of character features shown by their own guides, and revive many pleasant memories—a rich storehouse of which is the property of every sportsman. Fish culture in Newfoundland will receive attention from every brother of the rod, and its inclusion shows that even at such a time the interest of the devices of the fishing art are not neglected. Other sea-fishing art are given, making the number one that should be the companion of every sportsman either at home or on his vacation, giving him many pleasant half hours in perusing what others have done and enabling him to fight some of his own battles over again. The housewife, in laying the table, must have an eye for preserving the balance with everything that is put on. Extra knives and forks, as well as extra dishes, add refinement to the table. MORSE TO APPEAL TO HIGHEST COURT

New York, Oct. 11.—Unless the Supreme Court of the United States reverse the decision of the president of the United States interpose, Chas. W. Morse, one-time "ice king," coastwise steamship line organizer, banker and capitalist, will serve fifteen years at hard labor in the federal prison at Atlanta (Ga.).

After having been at liberty under $125,000 bail since June last, he is back in the Tombs prison tonight, in cell No. 712, where he is considering the decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, rendered today, sustaining the judgment of the lower federal court, which found him guilty last November of violating the national banking laws.

There was solace in the decision of the court of appeals today, however, in that only ten of the fifty-three indictments on which he was convicted by a jury were sustained and on the strength of this, his counsel, Martin W. Littleton, will immediately carry the case to the United States Supreme Court on a writ of certiorari. To this end the United States court of appeals granted a forty days stay of execution late today and pending a decision by the supreme court, application will be made to have the prisoner again admitted to bail.

Morse took today's decision calmly, though he was plainly distressed and perhaps surprised. He has been in the office of United States Marshal Henkel and was almost immediately taken to the Tombs.

One of Morse's keenest regrets in being forced to return to prison is the interruption of the beaver-like struggle to rebuild his fortune. Since his arrest in the Tombs he had been re-elected president of the Metropolitan S. S. Company, a New England corporation and a member of the Navigation Company, operating a line of boats on the Hudson. He is also credited with having discharged the bulk of his indebtedness from the two transportation lines which within the week have elected Morse as their president, no official statement was forthcoming after today's decision. It is understood that for the time being at least, the elections will stand.

TRURO ROBBERY; ARREST IN THE WEST Vancouver, Oct. 11.—Winbourn L. Burgess was arrested here today on charge of being implicated in the mid-day holdup of a Canadian express agent at Truro (N. S.).

Cashed money orders bearing the same numbers as those stolen at Truro have been coming into the express company for some time ago. Instructions were wired to Detective Wain of the Canadian Detective Bureau here, to watch for the man cashing them.

The orders cashed amounted to $1,800, while the amount of money stolen was $1,000.

One of the best ways to get rid of cock-roaches is to scatter the parings of a cucumber about the hiding places. This is much cheaper than borax, which is also a good remedy for the pests. Cornmeal dough mixed with borax and then scattered about the hiding places of roaches will cause them to disappear almost instantly.

THE CANADIAN CAR MERGER Montreal, Oct. 11.—The latest merger is a consolidation, which it is understood will embrace the Rhodes-Curry Co., the Dominion Car & Foundry Co. and the Canada Car Company.

Nathaniel Curry, of the Rhodes-Curry Co., who is in Montreal in connection with the arrangements for the merger, when seen at the Windsor tonight stated that he hopes to be able to announce by the end of the week that the merger would soon be an accomplished fact.

Last year the companies worked about half their maximum and it is believed that the merger will obviate competition, reduce expenses and put the business on a sound basis.
