Messrs. Devins & Bolton,
Dear Sirs.—I. with pleasure, concede to the agent's wish that I give my endorsation to the immediate relief I experienced from a few do so of the Diamond Rheumatic Cure, hwing teem a sufferer from the effects of Rheumatism. 1. in now, after taking two bottles of this medic entirely free from pain. You are at liberty to use this letter, if you deem it advisable to do so.

I am, sirs, yours respectfully.

I am, sirs, yours respectfully, John Helder Isaacson, N. P. FURTHER PROOF. I AM ANOTHER MAIN, 1874. ST. JOHN, N. B., Sept. 29, 1874. ST. JOHN, N. B., Sept, 29, 1874.

Dear Sir.—I have suffered for fifteen mont as with Chronic Rheumatism, and could not find any relief, after try ng every medicine that I saw advertised to cure it, until I was told about the Diamond Rheumatic Cure. I have used three bottles of this valuable remedy, and now can say that I am another man to what I was. I would advise anybody sufferig with this terrille disease to to try it, and see if it does not d'a the same for them that it did for me.

Yours.

Congress convened to-day, and President Grant delivered his annual message. The message deals more elaborately with national affairs than has previously mark ed similar decuments from the same hand. The President argues strongly for a resumption of specie payments at the earliest practicable moment, He attributes the present depression in trade to speculations which a specie basis would cure, and initiate and perpetuate a healthy activity in all departments of business. Foreign relations are amicable, except with Spain, where the questions of the Virginius seizure and some other differences resulting from Cuban affairs are still pending. The attention of Congress is called directly to the necessity and propriety of interference, in conjunction with other foreign powers, in putting a stop to the war in Cuba. The President devo'es much space to the political troubles in the Southern States, justifies his devotes much space to the political trou-bles in the Southern States, justifies his own action, and refers to Congress the permanent settlement of the difficulties.

St. John, N. B. No. 120 Prince Wm. Street. a simple song of the season, and Sassafras and Coltsfoot listened outside until the last line was sung, and then clapped their hands in applause, and cried, "Bravo! Bravo!" All the family rushed to the door, and also some neighbors who had been invited. "Here they are -here they are!" they shouted; and they had a scramble and a race along the narrow lane after Coltsfoot and Sassafras, who pretended that they wanted to run away. The wrens, in their warm nests in the chimneys must have been astonished at the noise which awoke them, and as they raised their heads lazily from their beds of brown moss must have looked at each other with an air of "What's all this about?" The Christmas party returned to the house in a merry cluster, filling the air with their laughter. Some of the older wrens, who were well acquainted with them, doubtless thought to themselves, "Ah, that's Ragged Robin's 'Ho! ho! ho!" harsh, and wild, and unruly; and that's his father's creak, like a door with rusty hinges; and that's his father's creak, like a door with rusty hinges; and that's his father's creak, like a door with rusty hinges; and that's his father's creak, like a door with rusty hinges; and that's his father's creak, like a door with rusty hinges; and that's his father's creak, like a door with rusty hinges; and that's his father's creak, like a door with rusty hinges; and that's his father's creak, like a door with rusty hinges; and that's his father's creak, like a door with rusty hinges; and that's his no ther's cackle, 'He! he! he!" and that is Bluebell's tender voice—her laugh is like music—let us listen a little longer to it; and that's Sas a'ras's voice, low and soft. For these discrect old wreus had friends and relations living in the warm chimneys of the King's palace, and were in the habit of visiting them very often—being but flighty creatures, as you may guess; and there they had seen Myrtle in his proper form of Prince Sassafras, and consequently knew of the deception he was practicing upon Robin, and Coltstoot, and Bluebell and the rest. They chattered about it among themselves. "What does he do it for." they asked of one another, williout being able to furnish a sufficient explanation. "It is perfectly inexplicable," said the old wren, who had been born in the royal chimneys—indeed, in the very chimney of the bedroom where Sassafras slept—and whose courtly airs were a sight to behald the rest results to the control of the serious derangement exists. "To his common legs," continued the court wren, in a stately way; "and with a person like that Coltsfoot, who teaches ab c to a lot of dirty, ragged brats, and gives medicine and trash to a parcet of old women! Our Prince to associate with such-like! I don't know what we're coming to!" But an equally out-spoken old wren, who had been born in the cottage chimney, and who had live do the court wren, in a few hours now and then? And who are you that you should think the Prince demeans himself by coming to us for a few hours now and then? And who are you that you should try to take away the character of honest Robin and our good Coltsfoot? Let me tell you that the syith us; I have heard him say so as we were taking away our dinner which he spread on the silf for us." The court wren cocked her head disdainfully, and looked straight before her into vacancy, as though there were no Surch bird in existence as the cottage wren. But the cottage wren was not to be put down in this way. "You!" she continued, with you stuck-up ways and your grand airs! Who are you, I should like to know? Because you happen to be hatched in a royal chimney, you think yourself of more consequence than your betters!" In short, they had a desperate quarrel, which was not confined to themselves. All the other birds joined in, and such a chattering and a whistling were heard in the royal chimneys that it was a mercy something dreadful did not occur to the walls. The upshot of it was that a breach occurred in their friendship, and for eight whole days the cottage wrens and the court were were no reconsequence than your betters!"
