" The Public Herald." A latenumber of this well known news. paper makes the following remarks in reference to the death of Chas. T. Howard, under the heading of the "The Lot-tery Prince Dead."

"Chas. T. Howard, who was the brains as well as the capitalist that breathed life into the Louisiana Lottery, is dead. He was fatally injured by a runaway horse at Dobb's Ferry, New York, on May 29th, and died the Sunday following. Now, we are willing that the mantle of charity shall hide the misdeeds of those who have passed off life's stage, yet we cannot forget the unmeasurable curse fastened upon New Orleans, Louisiana and the South, in fact our whole country, by this man. Had his lottery only died with him we could gladly shout "Justice," but as it is, we hope the thieving concern is greatly crippled. It is said the deceased was worth $3,000-000, and that he had an annual income of about $600,000 from the poor, victims of the lettery. He lived like a prince, though thousands of his victims would pray for a crust. Let us hope the great future may not have the "blank" for him he was so accustomed io give his victims."
