THE ANGEL OF THE DEPOT;

OR,

What Came Of A Kiss.

The great depot was crowded. The 4th Regiment was about to leave for the seat of war, and it was known that the brave fellows were going where fighting was sure to come.
The cars had backed into the building, and the engine was shrieking impatiently. The regiment had filed into the depot, and, as the soldiers rested for a few moments upon their arms, fond friends gathered around, and the words of parting were spoken. There were tears, and sobs, and blessings; there was wringing of hands, and wringing of hearts.
Wives were parting with husbands; mothers were speaking the last words of caution and care. It was a season of painful anxiety; for the departing ones were going away with their lives in their hands, and the offering on the battle-field might speedily be made.

Corporal Walter Evermond leaned upon his rifle, and gazed upon the scene. No one came to kiss him—none to bid him farewell.
Not over one and twenty was Corporal Walter Evermond. He had a fresh, handsome face, and a bright, pure eye; and his frame was one of those marvels wherein a magnificent physical structure is developed with a small body.

"I declare, said the corporal, wiping a bit of moisture from his eye, I am glad that I have nothing here to weep and sob for me. Yet, no added with a longing look, it would be pleasant to hear away one parting kiss! But I shan't get it.

"I'll kiss you, if you'll let me!"
Walter Evermond felt a hand upon his arm, and the prettiest, sweetest face he had ever seen beamed upon him with a smile.

"I'll kiss you, sir! And the girl placed both hands upon his shoulders, and pressed her lips upon his blooming cheek.

"Thank you! Bless you!"
"Fall in! Fall in!"

The corporal pressed the hand of the beautiful girl; gave one more look into her beaming face, and then fell into line; and ere long the cars rolled out from the depot, bearing the volunteers towards the field where patriot duty called them.

In a little while the train was out of sight around the turn, and the throng of friends gradually dispersed.

Nellie, like astonished at you!
Astounded at me? repeated Nellie Preston, looking up into the face of John Gains-ford, who walked by her side to a carriage.

Yes. How could you do such a thing?
Such a thing as what?

As kiss that fellow in the depot. Goodness gracious! What were you thinking of?

I was thinking, replied Nellie, with a perceptive flush of feeling, that he might be a poor, thoughtless, senseless boy, who had no one in the world to love him.

And so you thought you'd love him, eh!
I love all those brave, noble men who have gone out to offer up their lives for their country's welfare! said the girl, with deep emotion. I never knew how well I loved my own brother until I saw him going away to-day.

I hope God will keep him, and return him to us in safety.

Did you notice, said Mr. Gainsford, after a pause, that your foolish behavior caused considerable remark?

I'd rather you wouldn't say anything more about that, Mr. Gainsford.

You are ashamed of it, eh?
I am ashamed of you, sir! You need not help me. I can get into my carriage alone.

Two days after this, Judge Preston came home looking very thoughtful. After tea he called Nellie to him, and asked her if she had made up her mind to be the wife of John Gainsford.

I have made up my mind that I will not be his wife! was her prompt reply.

I have no wish to urge you, my child.

I do not love him, father; and I should prefer to have no more intimacy with him. I never liked him. He is unkind to his poor sister; and he might be unkind to me.

You are right my daughter; and I am now free to confess that I am pleased with your decision.

said to me, before he left with his company, was, that he hoped you would not make John Gainsford his brother-in-law. He knows Gainsford well, and has no respect for him.

The Judge kissed his child, and the matter was settled. Gainsford was the son of one of his oldest friends, and thus the intimacy had commenced; and he had been willing, for his daughter's sake, to try the young man; but he felt a sense of relief now that the trial was over.

George Preston, the Judge's only son, had gone as Captain of a company; and the family watched anxiously for the news that was to bear to them intelligence of the movements of the 4th Regiment. By and by intelligence came. The regiment was at Pooleville.

The regiment was at Ball's Bluff! The regiment had been under fire nearly the whole of that terrible day; and a fearful havoc had been made in its ranks. Where was George?
O, how anxious was Nellie Preston now!
More than ever before did she know that she loved her brother.

"Ma! Good news. George is safe! The Judge came home with an evening paper, and handed it to Nellie, pointing with his finger to the paragraph she was to read. She read as follows:

CAPT. PRESTON, after being exposed to a merciless fire for four consecutive hours, was one of the last to swim the river. He had made his way down the bluff, and was assisting some of his wounded comrades, when the enemy came pouring down upon him. He was surrounded, and would have been slain, but for the heroic bravery and devotion of a sergeant of his company. This sergeant, whose name was Walter Evermond, seeing the captain in danger, sprang to his side, and with his revolver shot down three men who were pressing upon him. When they gained the water Capt. Preston had received a wound in the shoulder, which rendered it impossible for him to swim; but Ever-mond did not forsake him. The noble fellow clung to his captain like a brother, and succeeded in getting him safely over the river.

We are happy to state that Capt. Preston's wound is not dangerous."

O! Heaven bless that noble serjant! exclaimed Nellie, as she finished reading the account.

And her father joined her with his whole soul.

Late in the evening a curious thought worked its way into Nellie Preston's mind. She wished the man who had saved her brother's life so bravely had been only a corporal!

And then she wondered where that fair-faced, bright-eyed soldier was whom she had kissed in the depot. She wished that she knew his name.

It would be a satisfaction to know how he fared. She hoped he was safe.

Ere long a letter came from George, in which he gave a thrilling account of the battle. He spoke of Sergeant Walter Evermond as he would have spoken of a brother. He saved my life at the risk of his own, he wrote; and but for him you would have no son living to write this; and Nellie would have no brother. There was a postscript to the letter, as follows:

"P. S.—Walter Evermond has just received the commission of Second Lieutenant."

The winter wore away, and George, in his letters to his sister, frequently spoke of Walter Evermond as of a very dear friend. At length came a letter with the following passage:—My dear father and sister, give me joy. I am a Major, and my commission dates from the day of Ball's Bluff. My dear friend Evermond is Captain of my old company; and a better soldier does not live; and I know there cannot be a truer friend.

Once more the Judge and his daughter were anxious. The 4th Regiment was before Yorktown. Then came the bloody field of Williamsburg; but George was not called into that battle. At length, however, came tidings of another bloody fray, in which our regiment was engaged. FARE OAKS! The list of the killed and wounded lagged; but a letter from George was received. He was alive, but badly wounded.

Our column was stricken down, he wrote, early in the engagement. I had been acting as lieutenant-colonel for some time, and the command devolved upon me. I was following the lead of the gallant Howard, when a bullet passed through my thigh. Capt. Evermond was on the right of the regiment, and I had just time to pass the command over to him when the clash of the final charge came. I was faint and dizzy; but I saw him dash on at the head of our noble regiment; and the shout of victory struck my ear as I was borne from the field. Late at night Capt. Ever-mond was borne into our quarters severely wounded by a sabre cut on the shoulder.

He had a hand-to-hand conflict with the enemy over a battery; and he took it, and held it!

Three weeks afterwards another letter came:

"Dear Nellie, I am coming home. I have a furlough for forty days. Cap. Evermond is coming with me. Our wounds are doing well."

The train arrived at three o'clock in the afternoon. Major Preston came from the car upon his crutches, and his father was there to receive him. Nellie had not come down—Big, grand tears coursed down the old man's face as he heard the glad shouts that welcomed his noble boy; and for a while his son was monopolized by the multitude.

Where is your friend, Evermond? asked the Judge, as they moved towards the carriage.

O, he will be with us this evening. He had gone as Captain of a company; and the family watched anxiously for the news that was to bear to them intelligence of the movements of

A joyful moment was it for Nellie Preston when she threw her arms around the neck of her returned brother. O, she knew now how much—how very much, she loved him. What numberless questions were asked, and how eagerly were the answers listened to.

By and by Nellie asked Captain Ever-mond.

O, she cried, I hope he is not old and ugly, for I want to love him!

Not very old, said George, with a smile; and not very ugly. But there's a curious circumstance connected with his experience as a soldier, which is worth relating. He told the story to me with tears in his eyes. After the affair at Ball's Bluff we were like brothers.

Evermond is an orphan; without father or mother, brother or sister. He has a splendid education, which he owes to an old aunt, who intended him for a minister; but his disposition did not lead him that way, and he started to study law. His aunt withdrew her favor, and he was left to struggle alone. He was in danger of becoming dissipated when the thought struck him that he would enlist. He enlisted as a private in the company of which I was captain. While we were waiting at the depot, on the morning when we left for the seat of war, Evermond stood alone gazing upon the scenes of weeping and blessing; and as the thought passed his mind that he was relieved from the pain of parting with his friends, he felt thankful, and expressed himself to that effect. Yet, he said, he felt that it would be a blessing to bear away one friendly kiss that could remember as coming from a sister.

He said this aloud, and in a few moments a young girl—he says the most beautiful he ever saw—put her hands upon his shoulders, and kissed him upon the cheek. He says he had just time to bless the angel, when the order came to fall in. I think the girl that gave Walter Evermond that kiss did a noble deed.

He assures me that it made him all that he is.
He says that the memory of that sweet face has led him to high and holy resolves; and that he had sworn within himself that he would never do a deed that could cause that girl to blush that she had kissed him, even were she the daughter of a king.

Yes, said he, was a private then? remarked Nellie.

No—he was corporal. He was made a corporal very shortly after he enlisted, and before we had been in camp a week in Maryland, he was made sergeant. But, my sister, what's the matter? Move!—your look pale.

O! whispered Nellie, hiding her face with her hands, what dreadful things!

My—I thought this story of Evermond would attract your thoughts from the darker things.

So it does, in a measure, George; but I cannot help my feelings.

George Preston, never mistrusting, never dreading that his sweet sister had ever seen Walter Evermond, drew his arm about her and gave her a brother's kiss.

At eight o'clock in the evening the coach was sent to the depot, and at half-past eight it returned. Nellie left the parlor and sped away to her room. He heart was in a flutter and her face was burning. It might be possible that she had never seen Captain Ever-mond; but she did think it probable. What should she do? How should she meet him?

Twice she attempted to tell her brother of her adventure at the depot on that memorable morning but she could not.

Major Preston, upon his crutches went to the door and welcomed Captain Evermond, who carried his right arm in a sling. The old Judge welcomed the hero as another son; and he was surprised when he found that the captain was a fair faced, handsome youth, just upon the opening stage of manhood.

But where was Nellie? The bell was rung and a servant sent in quest of her. At length she came, trembling at every joint; but her father and brother did not notice it.

Nellie, my sister, cried George, there is our dear friend, Walter Evermond!

The captain advanced with a quick step, and half extended his hand, when he stopped as though he had been shot.

Good angels! he gasped; what is this?
This—your sister!

With a mighty effort Nellie smiled and put forth both her hands.

Alas! exclaimed George, lifting his crutches from the floor, and stamping them down with wonderful energy, I think I see it now! Say Walter—tell me—tell me—is this your angel?

Ten thousand blessings on her head! inmured the brave youth, while the tears started down his cheeks. I did not dream of this!

Then he dashed the tears away and extended his hand.

"Lady," he said, you will excuse my left hand, I know!

Goodness mercy on me! exclaimed the old man, who began to see through it. Is this the soldier you kissed in the depot, Nellie?

Again the poor girl came very near losing herself; but she made one more struggle and was successful.

"Yes, sir," she said Captain Evermond and I have met once before.

It was a curious position for both the captain and the maiden.

Hold on! cried the major, with another lump of his crutches. I have it. I know how awkward it is; and if I had mis-trusted, so much as by a thought that my own sweet sister was the identical angel of depot, I should have prepared the way for this meeting. But see how nicely I'll fix it; you, Nellie are my sister by right of birth; and you, Walter, are my brother by every tie of love and gratitude.

So, of course, you two are brother and sister.
Capital! exclaimed the Judge.

And now for enjoyment. Come, Walter, lead your sister to a seat and we'll talk of the times that have tried our souls.

Alas! the present was a time that tried Nel-lie's soul; but it was a happy, blissful trial.

Late at night they prepared to retire. The two soldiers were left alone after the rest had gone to bed; for they had got used to helping each other. The major cared for the captain's shoulder; and the captain took care of the major's thigh.

We are at home my dear Walter, said George Preston after they had dressed each other's wound, and we will have a happy time of it.

I shan't be able to stop with you long, returned Walter.

Mercy! What is up now? Where else will you go?

I don't know. I must not stop here.

And why not, pray?

Because I dare not!

Oho! cried George, who knew his friend well enough, and knew human nature well enough to read ordinary signs of feeling, I think I understand you now. But we'll say no more about it to night. On the morrow I'll help you to find a good boarding place.

And so they went to bed.

On the following morning, after breakfast had been disposed of, George took his sister away into the library and had along talk with her. She wept and smiled by turns during the conversation.

When he came out from the library he met his father in the hall; and he had a talk with him.

Half an hour afterwards he met the captain in the parlor.

Walter Evermond, he said, I have found a good, comfortable boarding-place for you.

Ah—have you? Thank you, George.

Yes. Sit down, and I will tell you all about it. Now listen, continued the major, after they were seated: I have assumed some what of a responsibility in this matter. I have even gone so far as to pledge my own honor that you will so bear yourself that the house can never be ashamed of you. In short, I have given you my word that you are an honorable, true man; incapable of premeditated wrong, and fixed in the path of virtue.

Thank you, George.

And now, my dear Captain, your place of abode is fixed in this house. My sister is hostess, and my father is the host.

But—George—
Nonsense! Do you think I am blind? At any rate, I can see plainly enough to discover what ails your heart; and all I have further to say, is—if you have courage you will stay here. If you have any further arrangements to make, make them with Nellie.

But—George—will Nellie—Don't ask me what she will do. Ask her yourself.

But your father—
Already looks on you as a son. What more have you to ask?

I don't know. Indeed, this is more than I had expected. I am dreaming.

Then I advise you to wake up.

When Walter Evermond did fairly awaken he awoke to a blessed hope. Before night he had resolved to stop; and before the work was out he had made arrangements with Nellie Preston to live with her always.

And all this came of the simple kiss in the depot.

A MYSTERY.

Did you ever meet with a person who drew out all the antagonism in your nature? In whose presence all of the kindly feelings seemed to shrivel up and blacken like some delicate fabric in the fire? Who caused you to say everything that you didn't think and believe, and that in the most positive, emphatic pugnacious and disagreeable manner? Who set you otherwise calm, tranquil blood babbling and seething like some intimated, chaud-ron mixture. Who took all the symmetry and sweetness and glory and beauty out of the ST. ANDREWS, JUNE 20, 1866.

Intercolonial Railway.

The unanimity with which the electors of this Province, have decided in favor of a closer union both with the mother country and with its sister Colonies, gives us reason to hope that steps will be soon taken for the practical promotion of that object. Political union with commercial and physical isolation cannot co-exist, and one of the most efficient agencies for realizing the benefits of Confederation, is the means of communication among ourselves. This necessity has been fully shown and is provided for in the 68th article of the Quebec scheme, which says—"The General Government shall secure without delay the completion of the Intercolonial Railway from River du Loup through New Brunswick to Truro in Nova Scotia."

We are happy to learn that operations have already been commenced in Nova Scotia. For proposing intercourse between Canada and the Mother Country, a direct railway line between Halifax and Quebec is very desirable at the same time we deem it equally important that railway facilities be provided for incidentally protecting the frontier of New Brunswick. Recent events have shown the necessity of placing Canada and this Province in a position for rendering mutual assistance in time of danger; and in that manner can we more easily meet this requirement, than by the extension of the N. B. & C. Railway to some convenient point of intersection with the Intercolonial. With the completion of Western Extension this would not only afford a support at Halifax to the Canadian railways, but also St. Andrews, St. John, and other points on the coast.

Instead of proximity to the United States being an objection, in a military point of view should it not be considered a favorable feature inasmuch as it would enable us to meet an invasion at once, instead of permitting the enemy to ravage the country and gain a foothold before offering him any resistance. Has not the experience of the late civil war in the States, demonstrated the correctness of this principle; it is not for military purposes alone that we desire to see this enterprise completed; we believe that a war with our American kinsmen is a calamity to be avoided for only as a last resort. It is principally for the purposes of trade that we desire a more intimate connection with our Canadian brethren and a freer intercourse with our republican neighbors. In spite of all disadvantages the requirements of traffic have so increased, that the rolling stock of the N. B. & C. Railway is entirely inadequate to meet its demands. Why then hesitate, when the construction of the remaining link of about 160 miles, will bring us into connection with the entire railway system of Canada and the West.

DECLARATION DAY.—Saturday last was the day appointed for the declaration of the members elect for the County of Charlotte. The attendance of electors was large, and the Poll books having been opened by the Sheriff, and the votes counted, he declared

JOHN McADAM, Esq.,
JAS. G. STEVENS, Esq.,
F. HIBBARD, Esq.,
J. W. CHANDLER, Esq.,

the members elected to represent this County in Provincial Parliament. We give the correct vote in each Parish from the Sheriff's lists. After the declaration, the members elect, and Messrs. Gillmor and Hill the rejected candidates address the people; we will content ourselves by giving at this late hour, a very brief outline of the speeches taken from our notes.

Mr. CHANDLER was the first speaker, he felt extremely obliged for the honor conferred upon him—the battle was fought fairly and the Confederates had won it—(cheers) the people had manifested their attachment and devotion to the Queen, with regard to the question it was one of principle and measures, not men; he would exert his best energies to assist in framing a scheme which would be beneficial to New Brunswick; he was not in favor of one farthing for tribute, but would advocate millions for defence. Mr. Chandler referred in eulogistic terms to the Volunteers, and believed that they would be found ready to sacrifice their lives in defence of the Country, and in the event of hostile invasion that they would meet their enemies at the shore and welcome them to hospitable graves. He was cheered during the delivery of his address.

Mr. McADAM said he felt much obliged to the electors for having done him the honor of placing him at the head of the Poll, with the largest vote ever given in the County (1708). He felt fifteen months ago, that the people had not rejected him, but confederation for the time, but that now they were satisfied of the benefits which would follow from a union of the colonies and they also were anxious to perpetuate British connection, and comply with the wishes of Her Majesty the Queen (cheers)—and had in most unmistakable terms declared by their votes that they wanted Confederation, (great cheering) you will have it gentlemen, said Mr. McAdam; he felt the importance of the position which they had conferred on him by their unbought and independent votes, and he would endeavor to perform the duty of a representative, honestly, and promptly.

John Bolton, Esq., on behalf of Mr. STEVENS returned thanks to the electors in a brief but eloquent speech. He stated that his friend Mr. Stevens' professional duties had called him to Fredericton, as counsel in an important and weighty case of appeal, which required his presence there. He (Mr. Bolton) expressed Mr. Stevens' thanks to the electors for their decided vote in favor of Imperial policy on the question submitted to them, and also his appreciation of their favor in selecting him as one of their representatives. Mr. Bolton read a letter from Mr. Stevens from which we give the following passages:—

"The sacrifice on my part which professional duty requires me to make, and which prevents my personal attendance on Declaration Day, is somewhat severe, as nothing would have afforded me so much pleasure as to have mingled my hearty rejoicings with the electors of Charlotte County, at the victory obtained, which is not to be considered one of mere party triumph, but nobler still, one of sound reason and matured judgment, prompted into exercise by loyalty of feeling and attachment to the British throne." Yes, said Mr. Bolton, it was a victory of principle, and he rejoiced that Mr. Stevens could not be present to thank the electors in his eloquent and pleasing style—(cheers).

Mr. HIBBARD said he did not boast of victory—but came forward to acknowledge the compliment paid him by his constituents. When the House met the most important measure ever submitted to the Legislature would be presented for its consideration. He then drew a picture of the beneficial results which would follow a union of the Colonies, and said that before 85 years had passed over the Bay of Fundy and the Pacific would be connected by iron bands. When the result of the election reaches England's throne, it will gladden the heart of the Queen. Confederation was a fixed fact. Mr. Hibbard is slowly recovering from his late severe illness, spoke well, and was loudly cheered.

Mr. GILLMOR said he never was much elated when elected, and was not much depressed at being rejected—that there had been a change in the public mind of Confederation, but his opinion was the same as it was fifteen months ago, and he thought that the people would yet admit he was right, he was satisfied Confederation would not benefit the Province, if it did its opponents would share in the benefits. He briefly sketched the peculiar traits of the members elect, observing that his friend (Mr. Hibbard) would not be a great party man, and would do what was right, he thought that Mr. H. feared the Catholic vote believing it would be against him, but he was elected now, and hoped that his friends visions of the future greatness of the Province would be realized, but added he could not wait for 85 years to see all that good accomplished—five or six years was quite long enough to bring about the great benefits which it was said Confederation would confer. He believed Charlotte Co. was the most intelligent and independent constituency in the Province, he would sooner represent this County than any other. Turning to Mr. Chandler, he said his very checked friend thought he could see through men, but did not appear to be aware that men could see through him; he would however make a fair representative, as able a one as he ever met. He complimented Mr. Stevens' ability, and pointing to his former colleague Mr. McAdam, said he was an honest man, but too strongly wedded to his own opinion, yet he would look after the interests of his constituents. Mr. Gillmor said that fault had been found with him for having his printing done in the "Freeman's" office—he would employ whom he pleased, his card to the electors had been printed in that office, and he would take this opportunity of saying "that Mr. Anglin was a man of great ability, modest, and one of the truest men he ever was acquainted with, when they became acquainted with him they would admire him—if Mr. Anglin was a Protestant they would all like him." He (Mr. G.) had kept his pledges to the electors, and was satisfied to remain at home and attend to his own business. If at another time they gave him proof that they required his services, he would be ready to respond to their call.

During his address he was frequently interrupted by one of the electors who questioned the veracity of his statements; he was however frequently cheered by his anti friends during his speech. He threw out several vague assertions regarding "fair play" during the election, hinting at the same time indirectly that the Confederates had something to do with the Fenian movement, which insinuations were treated by the people as they deserved.

Mr. HILL said he felt as proud of his position now, although rejected, as he did when he was elected, and entered at some length into a defence of his political conduct.

We regret to learn that James Hogg, Esq., Editor of the "Fredericton Reporter," died at his residence in that city, on Tuesday last, after suffering for a length of time from a painful illness. Mr. Hogg was among the best of our provincial editors, and was well and widely known as possessing eminent literary ability and accomplishments.

The St. Andrews' Battery gave a dinner to its officers, on Saturday evening last, at Wm. Morrison's. The table was tastefully decorated and amply supplied with choice dishes, got up in the first style by Mr. Morrison, who merits praise as caterer. After the removal of the cloth the usual loyal and patriotic toasts were drunk with cheers, as were also some volunteer toasts. Mr. Roe of H. M. S. Cordelia responded for the "Navy" in a becoming manner; and also for "Com. de Wahl and officers of the Cordelia" in a very neat and effective speech, in which he alluded to the kindness and attention of the inhabitants of St. Andrews, and the friendly feeling which existed. "Col. Anderson, commander of the Frontier"—was received with loud and prolonged cheering; and was responded to by a gentleman who spoke in eloquent terms of the Colony's popularity and zeal, his sound judgment, and prompt action when the Town was threatened by a host of ruthless invaders, and concluded by affirming that the whole people feared no danger while the Colonel was among them.

The inhabitants of St. Andrews were proposed by Mr. Stratton, responded to by Lieut. Odell.

The Ladies of St. Andrews—responded to by Lieut. Morris.

Several songs were sung, and the Company separated at a late hour well pleased with the entertainment.

On Monday Evening a dinner was given by the non-commissioned officers and men of the "Gordon Rifles" at the Railroad Hotel. Our limits will not permit of giving a further notice. The company separated about 10 o'clock.

CHANDLER.—A match came off yesterday between the Officers of the Cordelia, and inhabitants of this Town. We did not receive the score, but—well the "Cordelia's" were too many guns.

The China arrived at Halifax on the 18th inst., with date to the 9th. The news is regarded as very warlike—in fact almost certain between Prussia and Austria.

ANOTHER FENIAN RAID APPREHENDED!

N. Y., 15th, P. M.—Montreal despatches say the order calling the Volunteers back from the border has been countermanded, owing to the introduction of the resolutions of the Neutrality Act in Congress.

An Ogdensburg despatch says: one of Gen. Meade's staff has expressed fears of further trouble at Buffalo.

Gen. Meade was suddenly called to that point, and four companies of troops from Maine have been ordered there.

An Ottawa, Canada, despatch says another raid is expected at Fort Erie.

Fourteen Fenians were arrested at Hamilton. Important despatches were found in their possession.

Information as to the movement of troops is forbidden, and something important is on the carpet.

A large number of Fenians are reported to be assembling along the South-Western border.

A Buffalo despatch says the Fenian General Burns has challenged Col. Lowery, of the British Forces at Fort Erie, to a pitched battle with two or three thousand troops.

Boston, June 16.

Goderich, C. W., 15th—Major General Sherman arrived here this afternoon on the United States Revenue Cutter John A. Dix.

This General and staff were invited up town by the Major and entertained at a Hotel, after which they left for Detroit.

Buffalo, N. Y., 15th—General Meade has issued an order appointing General Barry to command the whole frontier from Erie to Pittsburg.

He has ordered all the United States troops, except one company, back to their stations.

General Meade thinks no further trouble is to be apprehended in this quarter.

off by the neutral powers, and it remains for the armed powers to negotiate among themselves or commence war. Hopes of peace have almost vanished.

The London Times says daily almost hourly, the chances of peace pass away. It believes that the first events will occur in the Elbe Duchies, but that the great move of Austria will be to attempt to possess herself of Silesia.

The Daily News says appearances indicate that a declaration of war, or a manifesto equivalent to it will proceed from Prussia.

The Prussian government has issued a circular note charging Austria with flagrant breach of the treaties by referring the Holstein question to the Diet. Prussia has also sent a protest to Austria declaring that the measures announced by Austria in the Diet violate the treaty of Gastein, cause the suspension of the Duchies and restore the two powers to the position accorded by the treaty of Vienna.

Military preparations are reported from all quarters.

Troy, N. Y., 14th.—An immense public meeting, in the open air, was held here to-night in favor of the repeal of the neutrality laws.

A New York paper of the 1st inst. has intelligence of a frightful tragedy in the Walkill Valley, Orange county in that State. Two hundred and thirteen persons have been gradually poisoned by the use of flour in which white lead had become carelessly mixed when being ground at the grist mill.

Washington, June 13.—The records of the Treasury Department show our aggregate trade with British America for the year ending June 30, 1865, was over $65,000,000; the tonnage of vessels cleared from British America during the year was over 3,500,000, and the entrances from British America 3,090,000 tons. Since the abrogation of the Reciprocity Treaty, American purchasers have been paying higher rates for Canadian timber, and purchasing in larger quantities than in 1865, notwithstanding the necessity of paying 20 per cent. on the frontier.

The document sent to the House to day by the Secretary of the Treasury, on commercial relations with British North America, is an elaborate document, made up mainly of a report prepared by an agent of the department, who, within the last year, has made a careful examination of the question raised by the agitation of the Repeal of the Reciprocity Treaty. He gives a general summary of trade with Canada and the Eastern Provinces, but devotes himself chiefly to the relation of the United States with the Northwest Territory and the Pacific Provinces. He urges the necessity of ship canal navigation by the St. Lawrence River, and the construction of an intercolonial railway from Halifax to the North Pacific coast. He lays down a programme of Northwestern development on the basis of voluntary union between the United States and British America. The secretary reserves his opinion upon the political views of the report.

"BANKRUPT CANADA."—The Montreal Trade Review of the 9th inst., has the following remarks on the state of the Money Market in that Province:

"Notwithstanding the great excitement which has existed during the Fenian invasion, and the continuance of the panic in financial affairs in England, our money market has remained quiet and unchanged. Happily, Canada was never in better circumstances, financially, to meet occurrences such as have transpired lately, both here and in England. The Banks are in an invulnerable condition after a year of most prosperous and satisfactory business. The Bank of Montreal and the City Bank made their annual statements this week. They exhibit a most satisfactory condition of affairs and show an active employment, of their capital, and evince careful and good management, which has enabled them to place large amounts to the credit of the Banks after paying dividends of eight per cent. for the year, and all expenses and losses which have taken place."
