DAISIES.

MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Rippling and tossing at every breath

Of the random zephyr that passes by,

The daisies sway like a sea beneath

The deep-blue vault of the cloud-flecked sky;

Over the billows of gold and white

Flicker the shadows and fall the light.

There's never a daisy in all the host

Was here in the summers of long ago,

And still the fancy which charms us most,

Is a haunting whisper sweet and low,

Stirring our hearts with a tender strain,

"Here are the daisies back again."

The same dear daisies we used to cull

When hands were tiny and hearts were gay.

Gathering them till our laps were full,

Many and many a summer day,

Softly repeating a magic rune,

Fruiting the petals to time the tune.

And here, in the midst of the white and gold,

Old as Eden yet ever new,

Is the same sweet story of gladness told

Under the sky so wide and blue,

Her face on the daisies shyly bent,

His eyes on her with a proud content.

There may be, far from this hushed retreat,

Din and tumult and sordid care;

Somewhere, perhaps, is the drum's harsh beat,

And women kneeling in tearful prayer;

There is only peace where to and fro

In the silent meadow the daisies blow.

There are always dreams in this toilsome world,

Pure as heaven and true as God,

Who sends us dawns with the dew's imperiled,

And scatters the glory of bloom abroad.

May the story that's ever both old and new

For the lovers here be a dream come true!

Interesting Story.

The Hoosier Schoolmaster.

BY EDWARD EGLESTON.

CHAPTER XVII.

A COUNCIL OF WAR.

Shokey, whose feet had flown as soon as he saw the final fall of Pete Jones, told the whole story to the wondering and admiring ears of Miss Hawkins, who unhappily could not remember anything at the East just like it; to the frightened ears of the rheumatic old lady who felt sure her old man's talk and stubbornness would be the ruin of him, and to the indignant ears of the old soldier who was hobbling up and down, sentinel-wise, in front of his cabin, standing guard over himself.

"No, I won't leave," he said to Ralph and Bud. "You see I just won't. What would General Winfield Scott say if he knew that one of them as fit at Lundy's Lane backed out, retreated, ran for fear of a parcel of thieves? No, sir; me and the old finklock will live and die together. I'll put a thundering charge of buckshot into the first one of them scoundrels as comes up the hollow. It'll be another Lundy's Lane. And you, Mr Hartsook, may send Scott word that ole Pearson, as fit at Lundy's Lane under him, did a-fighting' thieves on Rocky Branch in Hoopole kyounty, State of Injenny."

And the old man hobbled faster and faster, taxing his wooden leg to the very utmost, as if his victory depended on the vehemence with which he walked his beat.

Mrs Pearson sat wringing her hands and looking appealingly at Martha Hawkins, who stood in the door, in despair, looking appealingly at Bud. Bud was stupefied by the old man's stubbornness and his own pain, and in his turn appealed mutely to the master, in whose resources he had boundless confidence. Ralph, seeing that all depended on him, was taxing his wits to think of some way to get round the old man's stubbornness. Shokey hung onto the old man's coat and pulled away at him with many entreating words, but the venerable, bareheaded sentinel strode up and down furiously, with his finklock on his shoulder and his basket knife in his belt.

Just at this point somebody could be seen distinctly through the bushes coming up the hollow.

"Halt!" cried the old hero. "Who goes there?"

"It's me, Mr Pearson. Don't shoot me, please."

It was the voice of Hannah Thomson. Hearing that the whole neighborhood was rising against the ne-factor of Shokey and of her family, she had slipped away from the eyes of her mistress, and ran with breathless haste to give warning in the cabin on Rocky Branch. Seeing Ralph, she blushed, and went into the cabin.

"Well," said Ralph, "the enemy is not coming yet. Let us hold a council of war."

This thought came to Ralph like an inspiration. It pleased the old man's whim, and he sat down on the doorstep.

"Now, I suppose," said Ralph, "that General Winfield Scott always looked into things a little before he went into a fight. Didn't he?"

"To be sure," assented the old man.

"Well," said Ralph, "what is the condition of the enemy? I suppose the whole neighborhood's against us."

"To be sure," said the old man.

The rest were silent, but all felt the statement to be true.

"Next," said Ralph, "I suppose General Winfield Scott would always inquire into the condition of his own troops. Now let us see. Captain

Pearson has Bud, who is the right wing, badly crippled by having his arm broken in the first battle." (Miss Hawkins looked pale.)

"To be sure," said the old man.

"And I am the left wing, pretty good at giving advice, but very slender

in a fight."

"To be sure," said the old man.

"And Shokey and Miss Martha and Hannah good aids, but nothing in a battle."

"To be sure," said the old basket-maker, a little doubtfully.

"Now, let's look at the arms and accoutrements, I think you call them.

Well, this old mucker has been loaded—"

"This ten year," said the old lady.

"And the lock is so rusty that you could not cock it when you wanted to aim at Hannah."

"The old man looked foolish, and muttered "To be sure."

"And there isn't another round of ammunition in the house."

"The old man was silent."

"Now let us look at the incumbrances. Here's the old lady and Shokey. If you fight, the enemy will be pleased. It will give them a chance to kill you. And then the old lady will die, and they will do with Shokey

as they please."

"To be sure," said the old man,

reflectively.

"Now," said Ralph, "General Winfield Scott, under such circumstances, would retreat in good order. Then, when he could muster his forces rightly, he would drive the enemy from his ground."

"To be sure," said the old man.

"What art I to do?"

"Have you any friends?"

"Well, yes; there's my brother over in Jackson kyounty. I mout go

THE ELECTIONS.

The elections are over, and the result, a victory of the secessionists, has been heralded throughout the length and breadth of the land.

So far as the politics of the province is concerned we have taken no part or interest; but when the matter of secession was made the issue upon which the elections were to be run, we felt it our duty, believing as we firmly did that repeal would be disastrous to the best interests of the province, to use all our influence against the measure.

The result for the province as now reported is as follows:

Table listing election results by county: Guysboro, Lunenburg, Shelburne, Yarmouth, Digby, Annapolis, Kings, Hants, Cumberland, Colchester, Pictou, Antigonish, Inverness, Victoria, Cape Breton, Richmond.

King's has acquitted herself nobly this time, and we are proud of the old county. With the great amount of influence brought to bear it was thought by many people that she would return two repeal candidates.

Much dissatisfaction has been expressed in reference to the electors' lists furnished the presiding officers in polling sections 8 and 17, and not without cause as there were several names omitted from these lists which are upon the lists posted by the revisors, besides a number of names changed so entirely as to destroy their identity.

A pleasing feature in the election was the absence of drunkenness and disturbance. In former years in our own remembrance drunken fights have been no uncommon occurrence; on the contrary this year the day was quieter than usual and we saw no person at all noisy.

RUINS.

AN ESSAY DELIVERED BY MISS BESSIE ALLISON PAYZANT AT THE GRADUATING EXERCISES OF HORTON COLLEGIATE ACADEMY, JUNE 2, 1886.

The truest history of the universe, since the Creator first looked upon the work of his hands and pronounced it good will be found indelibly engraven, by the same divine hand, on earth's mighty tablets of ruins.

Within these sepulchred remains of ancient cities we are surprised to discover the relics of aboriginal civilization. Reverting to the period of their construction, we are presented with the astonishing spectacle of a great race cultivating the earth, possessing many of the arts of the present day, regular systems of religion, and their own peculiar form of government.

The question may be asked, what do these discoveries bring to the notice of the Biblical scholar? How far do they afford confirmation of the historical facts recorded in the sacred writings? To this we answer that the discoveries made in all the buried cities yield their direct testimony to the truths of the Bible.

King's has acquitted herself nobly this time, and we are proud of the old county. With the great amount of influence brought to bear it was thought by many people that she would return two repeal candidates.

THE GASPEREAU FISHERIES.

To the Editors of the Acadian.

MESSRS EDITORS.—Having waited for some one to open the subject regarding the rights of fishermen, and the protection of the fresh water fisheries on our beautiful river GasperEAU; and as no one has, as yet, made mention of it in your columns, I take the liberty of introducing it to the public.

As this is contrary to law, and a preventive to the propagation of fish, it should be stopped. Mill owners have a perfect right to use the streams for log driving so long as fishways are made for the passing fish; but they have no more right to destroy the fishing below them by throwing sawdust into the river than they have to cut of the supply of water.

as he views these strange scenes, hidden for ages, and leaving nothing but ruins to tell the sad story of thousands who lie sleeping "the sleep that knows no waking," with all their vanities and pleasures buried with them.

On our own continent even are found ruins of cities and races, whose mysterious history can be derived from few other sources. Here are most extraordinary remains of extensive cities, massive walls, and enormous pyramids.

And indeed they do answer, for they tell us that races powerful and civilized, long since passed away, built these vast edifices, and inscribed upon them the various symbolical figures and hieroglyphics, which speak to modern nations of their industry and skill.

And what is man but a living ruin? Of man's first disobedience, and the fruit of that forbidden tree, whose mortal taste brought death into the world, and all our woe? Yet, as he passes through life, with nature surrounding him on every side, with its marvellous beauty and grandeur, it is not surprising that he is oblivious of the great fact that he stands a ruin amidst ruins, dependent upon them for his very existence, and subservient to them for his many wants and comforts.

Thus gazing round, we see on every side the impress of a crumbling hand. The eternity past has left its visible scars upon the stony firmament above; long eons have looked up within the rocky layers of our earth the stony skeletons of species now unknown; and historic ages have seen levelled to the dust the proudest monuments of earth's proudest empires.

Yet turning from the dizzy whirl of worlds, or the mighty revolutions in the history of man, with much keener pleasure would we enjoy a walk beneath the now forsaken turrets of an ivy-mantled tower, and with far deeper interest would we regard from the window niche of a once stately castle—whose associations of plighted love and knightly deed are again enkindled in our fancy—the swaying destinies of men.

The history of successive ages shows that from the greatest wrecks have issued the grandest monuments of time. Civilized Europe has succeeded the barbarian, and the grave of Heathenism is the pedestal of Christianity. Moreover, though man, the noblest effort of creation, has been also buried in the general ruins of our universe, even from this fatal fall an all-quicken power has pointed to a final resurrection to the time when the corruptible shall put on incorruption, and the saints of God, now perfect, rise up to bless him.

ADOUPLY GOOD WORK.

All people who eat are indebted to the Royal Baking Powder Company not more for having perfected and prepared a leavening agent that is pure and wholesome beyond a question than for its exposures, so boldly made, of the numerous impure, adulterated and injurious articles that are sold under the name of baking powders, bread preparations, etc., in this community.

In the light for pure food made by the "Royal" Company some time ago, when its guns were particularly trained against the alum baking powder, it was noticed that the most trustworthy scientific authorities were emphatically upon its side.

In this contest two facts have been pretty conclusively settled in the minds of the public—the first that the Royal Company has found the means, and uses them, to make a chemically pure article of food, and the other that the average baking powder, no matter how strongly endorsed by "commercial" chemists, is an exceedingly doubtful preparation.

Pure baking powders are one of the chief aids to the cook in preparing perfect and wholesome food. The recent controversy in the press has left us no longer a question with those who desire purity and wholesomeness of food what baking powder they shall use.—Montreal Star.

A PLEASANT AFFAIR.—At 8.30 a. m. Monday morning, June the 7th, the elite of Advocate had assembled in the Baptist church to witness the marriage of Miss Nettie Dewis, only daughter of Capt. Robt. Dewis, to Mark B. Shaw, A. B., of Berwick, N. S. As Mrs Hill, a cousin of the bride, began to play a very pretty Processional March, every eye was turned to the door of the church. A moment later the bride, leaning on her father's arm, entered. She was dressed in a beautiful cream-colored raw silk dress trimmed with garnet velvet and cream lace. She looked lovely indeed and we wish to offer our congratulations to the happy groom. Miss Emma Smith, cousin of the bride acted as bride's maid, and Mr. Hainshaw supported the groom, his brother, Rev. David McKeen of Athol, performed the ceremony after which the happy couple with their friends and guests retired to the home of the bride's father where a reception was held, after which Mrs. Shaw left for Caw. Bay, C. B. Mr. Shaw is to take charge of the Baptist church there. Many beautiful presents were received among which was a very beautiful and valuable Silver Cake Basket, presented by the choir of the church, to the bride who had been organist for seven years. We wish Mr. Shaw and his bride a very pleasant honeymoon and hope that life may always be as smiling and pleasant to them as it seemed that beautiful day.—Com

PERSONAL.—Rev. C. R. B. Dodge was in town this week and paid us a pleasant call on Tuesday. We are pleased to learn that his health which has been poor, is improving.

Having recently imported a "Perfection Shear Sharpener." I am prepared to sharpen and put in first-class order shears and scissors of every description. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed. J. M. SHAW, Wolfville

G. V. Rand, Esq., our enterprising druggist, has received a large supply of the truly celebrated Dr Norton's Burdock Blood Purifier which is making such wonderful cures of Liver, Kidney, Blood and Nerve diseases all over the Province.

JOURNALISTIC CHANGE.—The Hunt Journal is again to change hands. The present publisher, Rev. A. W. Nicolson, finding his health considerably improved will return to this chosen profession and Mr J. J. Anslow formerly of the Union Advocate, Newcastle, N. B., assumes the proprietorship of the Journal. While we regret to lose Mr Nicolson from the fraternity we can not help admiring the motive which causes him to relinquish a profitable business; such as the publication of the Journal must be. May he long be spared to carry on the good work.

The following shows the votes cast in the different polling places in this county:—

Table with 3 columns: Name, Bill Harris, Rand, Welton. Rows include Kentville, Canaan, Somerset, Lakeville, Grand Pre, Scott's Bay, Canning & Pears, Centerville, Avonport, Wolfville, Aylesford, Berwick and Waterville, Jawnhoe Corbet, Gaspereau, N. & S. Kingston, 1455, 1323, 1542, 1446.

HYMENEAL.—Wolfville appears to be having a very liberal share of weddings this season, and they seem to be very equally distributed among the different denominations. Last Wednesday the public assembled at the Presbyterian church to witness the union of Miss Jean Mabel Blackadder, and Mr Wesley Taylor of Avonport. Every one seemed to be delighted with the ceremony and the simple and tasty arrangements of the whole affair. The bride, dressed in cream cashmere trimmed with cream satin, white tulle and orange blossoms, was given away by her father, W. C. Blackadder, Esq., and the ceremony performed by Rev. Mr Dawson of Canard. The church was prettily trimmed with plants and vines by the ladies of the congregation, of which Miss Blackadder was a member and former teacher in the Sabbath-school. We understand that more of these events will take place right away. Who, where, and when is the next!

DR. O. W. NORTON'S BURDOCK BLOOD PURIFIER

Purely Vegetable! A Valuable Compound FOR RESTORING HEALTH

Hundreds have been cured by us for LIVER COMPLAINT, COSTIVENESS, DYSPEPSIA, SALT RHEUM, CATARRH, RHEUMATISM, IMPURE BLOOD, LOSS OF APPETITE, KIDNEY DISEASE, —AND— GENERAL DEBILITY.

READ THE FOLLOWING TESTIMONIALS. Weymouth, Sept. 14, 1885.

DR NORTON: Dear Sir,—For twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Salt Rheum, and last Summer my head and part of my body was one fearful sore. My husband employed at different times three doctors, which failed to do me any good. In August 1884 I commenced taking your Dr O. W. Norton's Burdock Blood Purifier, and after taking three bottles, an entirely cured, as I have not the least symptoms of it since. The Blood Purifier has also cured Capt Brooks of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint.

Yours truly, Mrs John Grant

ARTHUR BLACKBURN, of Newport writes: "For five years I have been afflicted with two Erysipelas Fever Sores on my legs. Have consulted all the doctors far and near. All medicine failed to do me any good until last fall I commenced to take Dr O. W. Norton's Burdock Blood Purifier. After taking seven bottles my sores are entirely healed up and I am as well as ever."

There is no medicine known to the medical fraternity that has cured so many of Liver, Kidney Blood and Nerve Diseases as the medicines that compose Norton's Burdock Blood Purifier.

Sold by most of the dealers in medicine throughout the county, ask by G. V. Rand, Druggist, Wolfville, at $1.00 per large bottle.

"IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN."

It might have been! Oh, saddest words of all, We dream and dream of scenes beyond recall.

Oh, could we live our lives all o'er again! Could we forget the present, with the pain Of thoughts that are unspoken! "All in vain," "It might have been."

It might have been, "Oh," words of wild regret; Sorrow for vanished hours, and yet—ah, yet, Would we, if e'en we could, forget—forget "What might have been."

Ah, well! perchance for all some sweet hope lies Buried deeply, maybe, from human eyes, And none but God may ever hear our sighs "O'er might have been."

God knoweth best; and though our tears fall fast, Though none beside may know, he knoweth all, All that is sad and lost beyond recall—The "might have been."

BIG JIM.

"He's a bully!" "He's a coward!" "He's got to hang!" "That's his third man!"

The one narrow street of the frontier town was filled with a surging crowd of excited men. There were Indian fighters, scouts, gamblers, tramps, miners, speculators—everything and everybody.

Every town has its bully—every frontier town. Big Jim was the bully of Hill City. He could drink more, curse louder, shoot quicker and start a row sooner than any other man.

Two hundred men—all excited—some half crazed—all indignant—some terribly aroused, surged down the street to the Red Star Saloon bent on vengeance. Big Jim and the man he had killed were alone in the place.

"Bring him out!" "He's got to hang!" "Bring out the bully and coward!" "There was a rush, but it was checked. Men had pistols and knives in their hands, but the sight of Big Jim with a "naval" in each hand cooled their ardor.

Big Jim advanced a little. The crowd fell back. He stood in the door and surveyed the mob as coolly as another man might have looked up at the placid-covered crest of Carter's Peak. The mob grew quiet. There were 200 right hands clutching deadly weapons, but not a hand moved. Two hundred to one is an appalling odds, but the one was master.

Out into the darkness—down the rough road—over the rude bridge, and there Big Jim put up his revolver—turned his face square to the West, and stepped out without a look back at the camp. It was ten miles to Harney's bend. Men driven from the one camp took refuge in the other. The half way landmark was a bit of a valley skirted by a creek. Wayfarers who were journeying by team many times halted here. On this night there was a lone wagon. Under the canvas cover slept a mother and four children. Resting against the wheel was the husband and father, his eyes peering into the darkness—his ears drinking in every sound.

Big Jim had not reached the valley yet when the still night air was rent with war whoops—the crack of rifles—the screams of a woman and her children. Indians had discovered the lone and almost defenseless family. There were five scalps to adorn their lodges. The bully and the coward had not been discovered. He could find a safe hiding place. Did he?

A half dozen screaming, yelling fiends were dancing about the wagon—shooting—striking—dodging—closing in on the one white man who somehow escaped their blows and bullets, when there was a cheer and a rush, and the Navys began to crack. Sixty seconds later dead silence had fallen upon the valley.

One—two—three dead Indians. The immigrant leaned against the wagon, faint with a wound in his head. The wife looked out with an awful terror at her heart. Bullets had chipped and splintered wheel and body.

"Who are you?" asked the immigrant as a figure approached him from the darkness. "Big Jim."

"You have saved us from a massacre." "Yes, it was well that I happened along! Rouse up the fire, for there is no further danger."

When the blaze caught the fresh fagots and lighted up the little valley the immigrant counted the dead Indians again—one—two—three. He turned with extended hand, but Big Jim had departed. Next day, when men from Hill's and Harney's found his dead body beside the rocks a mile away, with five wounds which had let his life-blood out, they whispered to each other: "We thought we knewed him, but we didn't."

TWO POETS.

"And you saw her often?" asked a listener of the English lady who was speaking of Mrs Browning. "Yes, very often. I was in Italy that winter. She had come down to Rome for a little change, and I went to see her almost every day. Ah, that was something to remember!" "Was she beautiful?" asked the listener. "Tell me about her."

"No, she was not what people call beautiful; but she was more and better. I can see her now, as she lay there on her sofa. I never saw her sitting up. She was always in white. She wore white dresses, trimmed with white lace, with white, fleecy shawls wrapped round her, and her dark brown hair used to be let down, and fall all about her like a veil. Her face used to seem to me something already not of the earth—it was so pale, so pure, and with great dark eyes that gleamed like stars. Then her voice was so sweet you never wanted her to stop speaking, but it was also so low you could only hear it by listening carefully."

"Was Mr Browning there?" "Oh yes, and he used to watch her as one watches who has the most precious object in the whole world to keep guard over. He looked out for her comfort as tenderly as a woman. "I think there never was another marriage like that; a marriage that made two poet's souls one forever. Don't you notice how Browning always speaks of finding again the 'soul of his soul'? It was easy enough to see that that was just what she was. And the boy was there, too, a little fellow, with long golden hair careful he was not to disturb his mother. Sometimes he used to stand for a long time beside her, with her 'spirit-small hand,' as her husband called it, just playing with his curls. I wonder if he could have known that she was going away from him so soon."

"Sometimes I have thought he felt some premonition of it, he was so quiet and unlike other children; but perhaps it was only because his father had taught him, above all things, not to 'disturb mamma.'"

"The end came soon after that?" "Yes, very soon. Only think, that was a quarter of a century ago, and the son is a bluff, hearty-looking Englishman now, painting pictures and carving statues, and the husband's hair has grown white as snow, and no other woman has ever taken the place she left vacant. Well, I'm glad I saw her when she was only almost but not yet quite an angel."

HOW HE GAINED HIS POINT.

Jane wanted to go to the circus and John wanted to go to the theatre. "We can go to the theatre any time," she said, "but the circus is here for only a week and we have not always the chance of going to it."

"Well, as you like," said John, "but allow me to say this—I will not be responsible for the consequences."

"What consequences?" asked Jane in surprise. "These consequences," answered John gravely. "Suppose one of the lions should break out of his cage while we are there, it's all over with you—"

"All over with me!" "Certainly. The lions ain't blind, are they?" "N—no—but what has that got to do with me?"

"Just this: If you look to me to be sweet enough to eat, how will you look to a roaring, roaring lion? He will think you a delicious morsel and you are gone."

"But, John, there will be other girls there besides me."

"I know it, but you will be the sweetest one there."

"Very well, John dear; I think we'd better go to the theatre."—Boston Courier.

GIRLS IN COLLEGE TOWNS

A young man, whose breast was covered with glittering secret society badges, walked into a Whitewall street jewelry store yesterday morning, and asked that some plain gold rings be shown him. After a good deal of hesitancy he selected one, paid for it, put it in his pocket, and withdrew. The young man was a college student. He was about to contract an engagement with a young lady who resides in the town which contains his college. The circumstance caused the writer to call to mind a somewhat curious fact. Every small college town contains a number of young ladies, more or less great, whose inevitable fate is to die old maids. In early youth they begin their social career with them. The chief incidents are engagements to the students, one by one. Usually, the engagements end in nothing but "blasted hopes."

These students return to their homes, and leave their sanguine sweethearts to discover that they must try again. The writer has in mind a lovely little town among the "knobs" of Kentucky, in which, during his college days, there was a battalion of the fair sex, each from 25 to 30 years of age, and each husbandless. They have been deceived by each successive generation of students for a period of years ranging from ten to fifteen. They were still hopeful. That mother who desires that the opportunities for marriage shall be for her daughters equal to those of other young ladies, should never consent to live in a small college town.—Atlanta Constitution.

WISDOM.

Nothing is so credulous as vanity, or so ignorant of what becomes itself. Whoso keepeth his mouth and his tongue keepeth his soul from trouble. The virtue of prosperity is temperance; the virtue of adversity is fortitude. There is by God's grace, an immeasurable distance between late and too late.

The more we help others to bear their burdens the lighter our own will be. Study yourself, and most of all note well wherein kind Nature meant you to excel. Genius follows its own path and reaches its destination, scarcely needing a compass.

No cord or cable can draw so forcibly or bind so fast as love can do with a single thread. He that would live at ease should always put the best construction on business and conversation.

Reason cannot show itself more reasonable than to cease reasoning on things that are above reasoning. Whatever you would have your children become, strive to exhibit in your own lives and conversation.

To all intents and purposes, he who will not open his eyes is, for the present, as blind as he that cannot. Simplicity, of all things, is the hardest to be copied, and ease is only to be acquired with the greatest labor.

Conscience is a coward, and those faults it has not strength enough to prevent it seldom has justice enough to accuse. True politeness is the last touch of a noble character. "It is the gold on the spire, the sunlight on the corn-field."

Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods? Draw near them then in being merciful; Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge. Dignity is much better than much familiarity. In the coolness which it imposes it's always, like water freezing, somewhat elevated.

If you wish people to be kindly toward you, you had best begin by being kindly towards them. The man who scatters thorns had better not go barefoot. Calumny crosses oceans, scales mountains and traverses deserts with greater ease than the Cythian Abaris, and, like him, rides upon a poisoned arrow.

We must look downward as well as upward in human life. Though many may have passed you in the race, there are many you have left behind. Life is a series of surprises, and would not be worth taking or keeping if it were not. God delights to isolate us every day, and hide from us the past and the future.

Agitation prevents rebellion, keeps the peace and secures progress. Every step he gains is gained forever. Muskets are weapons of animals. Agitation is the atmosphere of the brains. The old, old fashion; the fashion that came in with our first garments, will last unchanged, until our race has run its course, and the wide firmament is rolled up like a scroll. The old, old fashion—Death.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Throat? If so send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers; there is no mistake about it. It cures Dysentery and Diarrhoea, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums, reduces Inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP," and take no other kind.

It is a sure sign that the fools are not all dead when a fat man tries to be a dude and wear tight pantaloons. Philosophy, Science and Experience have proved that the more a medicine resembles Nature in its curative action the more effective it is. This is further established by EAGER'S WINE OF BENEZE, which cures by supplying to Dyspeptics the real digestive principle.

Old Dr Johnson was a benefactor. Seventy-five years ago he invented what is now called Johnsons Anodyne Linctament, the wonderful success of which in the cure of diseases of the head, throat and lungs is truly astonishing. No family should be without it.

Thousands of dollars might be annually saved to farmers if they would give freely of Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders to their horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, and fowls. They prevent disease and promote the growth. We said Sheridan's. Those put up in large packs are utterly worthless. Sheridan in large cans 1.00.
