DIVORCED FOR LIFE.

(Written for the Acadian.)
CHAPTER I
Many remarks had been passed by the passengers as to what a handsome man Mr. Emerick was, and what a beautiful group he and his children made, as they stood together on the after-deck of the S. S. Matie, looking out over the broad waves of the Atlantic.

Mr. Emerick was a tall, soldierly, upright figure; and the three children, a lad of ten and two girls, one of sober countenance about twelve, the other a laughing child of five, with a mass of flaxen curls falling in confusion over her shoulders, always ready to ask questions about anything that came within her sphere of reasoning. "Papa, do the angels have Christmas? Where does their Santa Claus come from? How does he get along without snow?" Mr. Emerick was trying hard to answer all the questions put to him by the youthful questioner.

There were a few people, however, who thought that Mrs. Emerick had sustained rather hard measures in this last event; people who asserted that folly and imprudence, however reckless, do not necessarily imply gall, and who spoke of her as a sensitive, affectionate creature, a spoiled child, wilful and exacting, but an adoring mother, and violently in love with her husband and children. When the time for separation came, Mr. Emerick settled on his former partner a yearly income of $500. This his many friends thought more than she deserved who had marred the happiness of his life and dishonored the name.

Selling the old home in Quebec he moved to Halifax, that his children might never know of their mother's faults. And now nearly two years had elapsed since the divorce.

It was by the pressing invitation of a sister in Montreal, that had determined him to take a trip to that city for his Christmas holidays, and as the Matie was considered one of the best coasting steamers on the St. Lawrence, and was due to arrive in Montreal on Christmas Eve, they had taken their passage by her accordingly.

The nurse had taken the children into their cabin for dinner, Earle leading his little sister Olla, so as to keep her out of mischief, and Zillah walking thoughtfully behind. The sun was shining brightly, and every person seemed to be enjoying the voyage. Mr. Emerick, turning to go in search of a book, found himself face to face with a woman wearing the dark blue uniform, with the white cuffs and capstrings, of a nurse. She was a very pretty woman, with dark, wavy hair, and lips as soft and red as a child's, but her lips and cheeks blanched to a deathly pallor, and those dark eyes grew wide as they met the undisguised horror of his.

"Great God!" he exclaimed, "You here!"

For an instant her white face flushed. "I didn't know—I had no idea—I came on board without taking any notice of any of the passengers. It was just a moment ago I heard a voice like—like my baby Olla. Oh let me—, for it now dawned upon her that her children were on board. "Are they here? Is it possible—let me—let me—"

"Wait!" he said. The frantic excitement in her eyes, her start forward, had brought back Mr. Emerick's self-control as completely as he had lost it, speak to you. I have no choice. You must give me a minute first. Please wait here."

He was gone as he spoke, and though she divined his purpose yet she moved not. He hurried at the door to the gunnery and gave her orders not to let the children leave their room until they reached Montreal, and then wait for his command. When he returned to deck he was cool and collected, and stood before the lady, who had dropped into a bench, as if unable to stand, and was trembling from head to foot.

"Oh! let me see my children!" was her first cry. "Oh, will you let me see my children?"

"Never, while I can prevent it." The words were spoken low and quietly, for never was there a man who could control himself better than Merrill Emerick.

"Merrill, can you be so cruel? Think what they are to me—my children—and nearly two years have passed since I saw the dear, sweet—I never guessed you were on board. I was on my way to join — at —"

"You can tell that by my dress. It isn't a sham. I wanted to be doing something useful. Merrill, have mercy! You have them always, surely you won't prevent our being together for the short time we will be on board this ship?"

"I most surely will—for your sake as well as for theirs. Do you know they believe you are dead?"

"What? Could you be so cruel as to tell them I was dead?"

"You died to them when you left your home and ceased to be their father's wife. They think you are in Heaven."

The clear sky had become overcast; by clouds, and a sharp, sudden shower was falling, chilly enough to drive most of the other passengers below. The woman sank farther back into the corner of her seat and sobbed pitifully, her face hidden in her hands.

"Oh, Merrill, I can't—I can't! It isn't possible for human nature to stand it. Oh, let me see my own children—the children who have my blood flowing in their veins—the children I love you!"

"You should have thought of that before you indicated that great injury which will ever shadow their lives with stain and dishonor," said Mr. Emerick, sternly.

"But I didn't! Oh, I never dishonored them, Merrill. With God for my judge, I never committed the crime you accuse me of. I know I did much, I tried you dreadfully, I was passionate and headstrong; but—but I did love you all the same. I loved you without bounds; and you never seemed to care for me but as a child. I wanted to make you feel angry, jealous—anything, so long as you would only care. And then, when you wouldn't, other people were kind and sympathetic. But I never did anything wrong—really wrong, but you would really care—nothing but you could forgive. I told you so then, but you wouldn't believe me."

turned up to his, her lips trembling. "Well?" he said. He had guessed instantly, and the prospect of fresh trouble was almost too much for him at the moment.

"Papa, I—have you seen—a lady—a lady in a nurse's dress, on board this ship?"

"In a nurse's dress? What of her?"

"Papa, I saw her just now. She was going into her cabin, and she didn't see me. She had her handkerchief to her eyes, but as she opened the door I saw her face. It—it was so like—no, not like; it was mother's face, the very same."

"What do you mean?" he said sharply. "Why, Zillah, are you mad to be trampling all over in this way about a chance likeness?"

"Papa, it wasn't a likeness, it was—everything—the face, the hair, even the way she moved. Only for the dress it would have been mother."

"If your mother had been alive, you mean; but, as you know, she is dead—"

"Yes, Papa; but—"

Overcoming the World.

BY CHARLES M. SHELDON.

The servant who came in answer to his call, and who had been waiting at once asked for Mrs. Penrose. When she came in where Kirk was standing, in the reception room, she surprised him by greeting him very warmly by name. He had merely met her at the time of Mr. Gilbert's illness, but not more than once or twice, and then very briefly.

She was a woman of great tact, and she made Kirk feel at ease. She had not the remotest idea that he was in love with Dorothy, or what was the object of his call, and in a few minutes, seeing this, he made up his mind what to do.

"Dorothy is down by the beach with Mr. Raleigh. They will be back for tea. You have met him, Mr. Kirk? I would be pleased to have you stay and take tea with us."

"Thank you. I shall be glad to do so," replied Malcom promptly. All the while he was fast arriving at a determination to tell Mrs. Penrose what he had come for.

"I believe you met Mr. Raleigh while you were abroad? He was telling us something about you this morning."

"Was he?" said Malcom Kirk quietly. "Yes, I met him on the Cephalonia going over. We had several little visits together. I enjoyed them."

Mrs. Penrose was sitting where she could see, from the reception-room window, the stretch of beach. She looked out and said: "I don't see them coming yet. They will be here soon, I think. You were saying, Mr. Kirk, that you enjoyed meeting Raleigh. Excuse me if I say that he spoke in warmest terms of you. He told us about your care of that poor baby. He wondered—what became of it afterwards."

"It's quite a long story," said Kirk, "but pardon me, Mrs. Penrose, if I don't try to tell it now. I want to tell you why I am here. I love your niece, and I am going to ask her to be my wife."
CHAPTER VI.
He had come directly to his subject, feeling that it was best so. Mrs. Penrose looked at him in the greatest astonishment.
"You—love—Dorothy?" she said slowly.
"Yes," replied Malcom Kirk, simply. "I have loved her for four years. Ever since I entered the seminary, in fact."
Mrs. Penrose sat still and looked more keenly at the awkward, homely figure in her reception-room. She was a woman of great quickness of perception. To do her justice, she had pre-eminently a large fund of fairness and a sense of justice which came to her through a long line of Pilgrim ancestors. She saw in the man who had just declared his love for her niece so abruptly something more than a common, average man. There was a look in his eye that spoke of limited endurance, and his voice was of an unusual quality, very nearly if not quite equal to a rare gift of music or art. She rose and walked over to the window and looked far down the beach.
"What you have so suddenly told me, Mr. Kirk, is, I need not say, a complete surprise to me. I suppose you know that Mr. Raleigh is a lover of Dorothy."
"No more than I am," said Malcom Kirk, quickly.
"I suppose you know he is an old friend of the family, and that Mr. Gilbert favored his suit?"
"That has nothing to do with my love for her," said Malcom Kirk, softly.
Mrs. Penrose smiled slightly. Then she frowned and looked somewhat vaguely.
"I am going to ask Dorothy Gilbert to be my wife."
"If she loves you?" said Mrs. Penrose a little grimly.
"Of course, if she loves me," replied Malcom Kirk, simply.
There was silence in the room. A servant came in quietly and lighted two long candles on the mantel. The dusk and the candle light blended together softly, and Malcom Kirk looked out of his side of the room at Dorothy's aunt with a somewhat pale face, calm, however, and fully self-possessed. Even Francis Raleigh, with all his inherited instincts towards gentlemanly habits, was not equal to Malcom Kirk during a supreme crisis.
Mrs. Penrose went over to the window again. Then she returned and took a seat nearer Malcom Kirk.
"Of course, after what you have told me, Mr. Kirk, it will be—you see the awkwardness of the situation—it will be embarrassing for you and Mr. Raleigh to meet."
"Why?" asked Malcom Kirk.
"Well, it will, won't it?" she asked in some slight irritation.
"I don't think so. I have nothing to be embarrassed about."

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFFVILLE, N.S., MAR. 24, 1899.

Public Meeting.

The public meeting on Wednesday night was large and very enthusiastic, to say the least. Nearly all the ratepayers were present and nearly all took advantage of their privilege in the speaking line.

The Mayor presided and the Town Clerk acted as secretary.

The first matter considered was the question of ratifying the promise of the Council made to the late Mr. Calhoun that in consideration for erecting the mill building establishment in Wolfville the property should be exempted from taxes for ten years. Rev. J. H. Bass moved that this exemption be allowed, but his motion was not seconded and after some discussion it was resolved on motion of Dr. DeWitt, seconded by T. L. Harvey, that the action of the Council be ratified.

The discussion on the question of the expediency of asking for legislation to permit the town to borrow money for the purpose of manufacturing the streets was then taken up. The debate was fast from the start. On request of the Mayor, the secretary read a report from Provincial Engineer Murphy concerning the cost and nature of preparing and keeping in repair various kinds of rock roads. Printed copies of the report were distributed among the ratepayers. Counc. Parker, Harvey and Franklin, as members of the street committee, explained that the committee had considered the treatment of the streets unsatisfactory in the past and had advised the calling of a public meeting to ascertain if the ratepayers were willing to tax themselves for the purpose of making permanent roads. The sum asked for was $5000. Counc. Harvey estimated the cost of a crusher, at $950; a roller at $500; which, he thought, could be run by an electrical motor at a cost of 60 cents an hour.

Mr. Bishop, superintendent of streets for the town of Dartmouth, who was present on request, gave a very practical account of the experience of that town in the work of macadamizing. A lively discussion followed in which a large number took part and during which much valuable information in respect to road building was elicited. Prof. Haycock spoke strongly in favor of macadamizing roads and recommended the rock formation of the North Mountain as suitable material.

Dr. Bowles, who championed the cause against the expenditure, claimed that $5000 would not even excavate the street for the stone. Our streets were not as good as in other places. Their bad condition last autumn was caused by the extraordinarily wet season. What was the good of spending so great a sum of money before a few inches of snow were on the ground? It was pointed out, however, that the proposition was deemed to be that the town was not yet ready for so great an expenditure and sufficient information as to the cost of the undertaking had not been given to induce them to take the step.

Finally Mr. W. H. Chase moved, seconded by Prof. Bailey, that the Street Committee be advised to procure 100 tons of crushed stone to be used in macadamizing a piece of Main street by way of experiment. Dr. Bowles and others opposed the motion on the ground that the experiment was unwarranted as it was admitted that stone would make a good road, if the town could afford the expense. On division the motion was lost.

On motion of Dr. DeWitt the meeting adjourned.

Editorial Notes.

Three feet of snow on the 1st fell at Montreal and Quebec Saturday and Sunday. We fared better in Nova Scotia.

The raising up of Rudyard Kipling from the very edge of the grave is like a happy miracle. Few men in so short a time have attracted so much of the world's attention and applause.

One of the "Wanderers" hockey team, of Halifax, the champions of the maritime provinces, appears in a late issue of the Montreal Star. Nova Scotia sports are just beginning to be recognized in the upper provinces.

We are glad to be able to give to our readers this week another article by "Harriette" and to promise them a frequent contribution in future from the pen of that popular writer. We have missed his bright sayings from our columns of late.

Among our exchanges the Clarkburg (N.S.) Review finds a very welcome place. The Review is in connection with Clarkburg College, of which Mr. W. L. Moore, formerly of Wolfville, is president. The journal is very brightly edited by President Moore and Prof. Black, the main object of the publication being to advertise the institution but a very successful family newspaper is at the same time supplied. The scheme is a good one, and the Review has our best wishes for a successful career.

The lecture to be delivered by the Rev. D. J. Fraser, of St. John, in the Presbyterian church next Monday evening will doubtless attract a very large audience. The eloquence and intellectual powers of Mr. Fraser are not unknown to the people of Kings, and particularly to those of Wolfville, in which place he pastor of St. Andrews he has made in the past many warm friends and admirers. His theme on this occasion is "The Religion of Rudyard Kipling," is one of peculiar interest at the present time when the poet's name is on every one's lips, and the point of the speaker is a guarantee that the subject will receive full justice. The admission is 25 cents.

NOVA SCOTIA SCHOOL OF HORTICULTURE.

REPORT OF THE COUNCIL BOARD.

To the N. S. F. G. A.

I have the honor to submit the 6th annual report of the Horticultural School and to refer to the work of the current year as perhaps the widest in its range of studies and most important in its history. Following is a tabulated statement of the students and class studies:

Class	Beginning of Year	Discontinued	From N.S. F. G. A.	From P. E. I.	From Acadia	Enrolled but dropped out.	Hours per week
Elementary Horticulture	20	1	10	10	0	9	10
Advanced Horticulture	10	1	5	5	0	5	10
Practical Horticulture	10	1	5	5	0	5	10
Floral Studies	10	1	5	5	0	5	10
General Work	10	1	5	5	0	5	10
Total	60	5	30	30	0	29

A special class for boys between the ages of 11 and 13 years was formed at the beginning of this school year. Agriculture is given at the start its rightful place. We believe a living sympathy for the subject will be maintained and the boys will be trained to observe the things they see. The prejudice found existing at this early age, it is thought, will be more easily removed and the liking for rural pursuits take its place.

Winter schools afford a special opportunity for the study of the frame work of trees and in some respects their characters are more pronounced. The methods of their twig growth and branching essentially differ. The steeply pointed and the horizontal branched oak are two extremes in shape. The aspect view of the horizon is an interesting study in landscape. We think of trees much as we think of persons. They suggest thoughts and feelings, restful or spirited. At this season of the year we get a different expression of them. Even the farmer is disposed now to consider the character of his trees, but it requires training to observe the minute differences between the varieties of plants or apples or the branches of the same tree. Boys of this age who are trained to think as they look on fine types of orchards in the vicinity of the school give wide opportunities to the teacher.

NATURE AND CHARACTER OF EXPERIMENT.

To enforce and illustrate the teaching of the classroom, wherever possible, the operations described, such as grafting, are actually performed by the students and in studying the structure and growth of the plant the microscope is freely used, to it and that the student may acquire by actual observation the truth of what he learns from text books and lectures. (The value of the nursery stock sold during the year from the greenhouse and grounds is $91.84.)

THE USEFULNESS OF GROUNDS AND PLANTS.

They furnish laboratory material for all classes in microscopic work, which is in itself of great importance. They illustrate many points thought out in teaching and seen as specimens in the discussion of landscape art.

Another and very important phase of the work of the school is the "spraying meeting," held in the orchards of interested growers. At these meetings Bordeaux mixture was prepared according to formula. The ingredients were weighed and mixed in the presence of the spectators, giving all present an opportunity to observe the details and ask questions. Samples of Paris Green were tested for purity and added to the mixture and the trees were sprayed. Eleven of these "spraying meetings" were held in Kings, Annapolis, Digby, Yarmouth and Lunenburg counties, and in every instance were largely attended and marked interest manifested. So encouraging and profitable have these meetings been it is now proposed to substantially enlarge the work the coming season. One month was given to lectures in the various counties of the Province. (During the year $200 was expended for microscopes and other apparatus for the school.)

The need of a larger institution is felt in a greater degree this year than heretofore and an adequate teaching force was never so strongly felt as now. On all sides young men on the farm are seeking more education but they want agriculture as well as horticulture, and they cannot afford the time to obtain one line of instruction at one school and the other at another school. Furthermore it is folly to attempt to separate two subjects which are so intimately connected.

If you have Grippe, or have had it and are suffering from its after effects, get OZONE at once. For sale at Druggists, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

It is as horticulture and agriculture. No man living can say what is horticultural instruction and what agricultural instruction for the very reason that many subjects are both horticultural and agricultural. That the horticultural school has done great good no one who is conversant with its history and work will attempt to deny, yet it cannot be expected that one man should offer a sufficiently extended course to cover all the lines in which the young farmer is seeking information. The work must be strengthened and extended and experimental lands secured.

Respectfully submitted,
COUNCIL BOARD: W. C. Archibald, chairman; J. W. Bigelow, H. Chipman, M. D. R. W. Starr, Colin W. Ross, M. A., S. C. Parker, C. E. Starr, E. C. Sears, R. S. Eaton, Miss Mac Briche.

Loving Our Neighbor.

BY HARRIETTE

Who is our neighbor? All mankind. We are the neighbor to every one that comes within the range of our word and act. We must think and speak and act in our neighborhood. That is quite an undertaking, but it is not necessary? "Love thy neighbor as thyself," we are told. Is that an idle message? Does it mean nothing? Is it only to be admired, and commented on, but not practiced? Now we know who our neighbor is; we know how much we are to love him. How much do we love him? Let us look around and see. We try sometimes to get his fifty cent piece for a quarter. We strive to get into the market just a little ahead of him. We see him drifting away from heaven, and we never notice him. We almost smile when he falls on the ice, in character. Is that love? Is that the way you want your neighbor to love you? We send missionaries away there to save them, but we do not care to sit in the same cushioned pew here with one who is being saved. We would like to tax a poor Chinaman five hundred dollars for coming here to toil, and we will pay a rich one three thousand dollars for coming to visit. We pray for the poor, and we always keep our parlors closed to them. We seldom cheer them with Gospel hymns from our piano. When they are sick we call, but when well, we do not often delight them with an invitation to dinner. We are apt to give the man with the gold ring and the fine clothing the first place.

Now if we have not been loving our neighbor as ourselves, let us begin. Speak only of others as you would have them speak of you. Never tell your friend not to mention your words. The words that need guarding should never be spoken. Our love to God can be measured by our love to man. God is love. There is little of God, where there is little of love. The best Christian makes the best neighbor. He is not interested only to himself. He will not take the advantage of me in a bargain and would not cheat me if he could. The men that love their neighbors as themselves are the neighbors that I would like to live beside. God knew how happy it would make this world and so he said, "Love thy neighbor as thyself." How much unhappiness the disobeying of that command brings! Love for our neighbor is what this country needs sorely to-day.

The Acadia Dairy Co. Under Review.

A gentleman from Ontario, who recently paid a visit to our province, writes as follows to Farming concerning the Acadia Dairy Co.:

In this province there is at least one model creamery, that operated by the Acadia Dairy Co. at Wolfville. The company manages a retail business in Halifax, keeping a man and team constantly employed in delivering their goods direct to the consumer. A large quantity of the butter made is put up in three and five-pound earthenware crocks, which are durable, cheap, and easily kept clean. At the Halifax Exhibition, 1898, Mr. T. J. Dillon awarded an exhibit of Mr. Logan's butter 99 1/2 points. Now it is that, Ontario creamery men! It costs 2 1/2 cents per lb. to deliver this butter, which sells for 23 to 25 cents.

4 POINTERS FOR THOUGHTFUL PEOPLE.

- I. In buying goods it is better to deal with a specialist, who, on account of having a large stock and big range to select from, is more likely to suit his customers; we handle nothing else but boots and shoes.
- II. We buy for cash and are thus enabled to give you the benefit of the cash discount.
- III. We sell for cash and do not require a larger profit to make up for bad debts.
- IV. Our goods, both low and high grade, are purchased from the best houses in the trade and customers can rely on getting the best value for their money.

Mrs. W. J. Higgins, of this town, met with a painful accident on Sunday morning. The fracture was set by Dr. Bowie, and we are glad to hear she is now doing as well as could be expected.

HIDES WANTED.—Highest market prices paid for hides at the Willow-Vale Tannery, Wolfville. D. B. Shaw, proprietor.

Millinery Opening.

The spring opening of J. D. Chambers' Millinery department is announced for Wednesday, the 29th inst. Mr. Chambers, who has just returned from St. John where he has been attending the wholesale openings with Miss Van Baskirk who will have charge of this department during the ensuing season. He has been fortunate in securing the services of such a competent milliner. She has lately attended the principal openings in Boston, where she formerly learned her business thoroughly, being a favorite pupil in "Parker's" millinery school, which is in itself sufficient advertisement.

Although the early Easter season will probably not be very suggestive of gaudy hats, still we think the opening will be well attended. Every effort will be made to make this a most attractive display of millinery and millinery novelties.

It Gives True Life! Paine's Celery Compound

The records and history of medicine point to Paine's Celery Compound as the most successful remedy ever given to sick and suffering humanity.

The use of alcohol as a medicine no doubt leads to the formation of an appetite in many cases, and brings about the downfall of a still larger number of cured men.

Help Some One Else. I once knew a wise mother, whose only child, an active wide awake boy, who could never apparently keep still,

Oh, mamma, I don't know what to do with myself. "Why," responded his mother, "when I don't know what to do with myself, I always try to help some one else. Can't you think of something to do for somebody?"

Instantly, the little fellow's sympathies were aroused and seizing his child's paper he ran briskly to Mr Ford's and offered to read, his services being gladly accepted.

A rural justice on being asked by an attorney if a certain decision of his was "according to the code," replied: "Oh, damn whether it is or not, an' what's more, I don't keer! Under false colors. Some Mackay stitched shoes are made to imitate Goodyear Welts.

Any shoe stitched under the foot must form hard and callous spots on it, as soon as the leather wears away under the stitches form elevations under pressure.

The sole of the Goodyear Welts "Slater Shoe" is sewn to a strip of leather outside the shoe—not a stitch or peg being under the foot.

Each pair remains six days on the last to take the stretch out of the leather, moulding it to keep the niceties which constitute fit and comfort.
