He dealt more fully with the Liberal policy, and said it was not calculated to destroy the manufacturing industries, but rather to build up the great industrial industries of the country. The tariff in any case must secure incidental protection to the manufacturers. There was no objection to have them encouraged so that it would aid legitimate home industries, but what Liberals waged war against was the monopolies, comin the various departments of his edito- bines and the privileges they enjoyed. materialize in any particular. He showed that the high tariff or tax was against the consumer and in favor of the manufacturer and while he was not at enmity with the manufacturer, yet like the others, he was prepared to wage war against the combines and cited the great cotton, sugar, cordage and other monopolies as instances of the result of a high protective tariff. His handling of the Manitoba school question was most masterly and was interrupted frequently by applause. He regretted the lateness of the hour prevented his going more fully into other important matters. In closing he referred to the Hon. Wilfred Laurier in glowing terms, and said that although of another religion, he was proud to be the follower of so great a man. The applause was deafening.

Is a seat in the ante-room of city. the government establishment for Mr. Wallace and a $5,000 salary attached, sufficient to win them from all their professed principles of "equal rights for all and special privileges to none"? Let us have a clear and distinct enunciation of Mr. Pitts' convictions, for instance, on the North Ontario situation. What does he honestly think of Mr. Wallace's course, and is he as an alleged leader of the Orangemen in this county, prepared to endorse the Grand Master, Mr. Foster, and the government in their present attitude towards the cherished principles of the order which he (Pitts) so earnestly pretends to uphold?

TORY DISSENSIONS.

In many constituencies in Canada, our Tory friends are badly rent into factions each jealous of the other, a pretty certain index of the general disaster, which awaits the dominant party when it faces the people of Canada at the polls, In Ottawa the Tories have two rival organizations, and two setts of candidates; in Stormont and Glengarry, the present member Dr. Bergin, has been cast aside and another man nominated but Bergin also announces himself a candidate for re-election; in Brock- overtaken by so sad a fate? ville, represented by Comptroller Wood, there are two fully organized Conservative Associations each ready to jump at the other's throat. And so on in other constituencies. We have a sample of Tory disorganization here in our own country. A number of the big wigs of the party, in-Mr. Foster to contest the county; others A. F. Randolph was re-elected president whose votes and influence in the party counted in the past, have set themselves against the importation of an outsider and if the Finance Ministor comes to York, will either openly oppose his candidature or sulk in their tents. Then there is another wing of the party, who pretends to be straightly opposed to Mr. Foster's separate school policy, all forming a most unhappy and quarrelling family, and indicating the final disintegration and defeat of the Tories throughout the country.

We think, in view of all the facts, that the trustees would be justified in effecting a settlement that would be satisfactory to Mr. Inch. A correspondent raises the point that in case the action should go on, whether or not the Sheriff who, as a member of the trustee board, and one of the defendants, would be qualified to summon a jury to try the case.
