FRIDAY, SEP. 10th, 1886.

HALDIMAND, WE SALUTE YOU.

The efforts of the Tories to force that ghastly subject, the Regina scaffold, into prominence has been fittingly rebuked in Haldimand. The good men and true of that county, and of this province, look away behind and beyond that dangling rope, and see a corrupt government goading a wronged people to desperation. The cause of Toryism is doomed, and the dawn of better and purer government is at hand.

SOMETHING dropped in Haldimand on Wednesday. It was the "bloody shirt." And the editor of the Hamilton Spectator is now wearing craps on his hat.

The man who will take the least satisfaction out of the result of the Haldimand election is a Tory gentleman, whose name is Welsh. Saturday last he was caught actively engaged in the bribery business and promptly jailed. The caging of Welsh decreased the Tory vote materially.

The Hamilton Spectator boasted that the Grit assessors would no longer control the vote in Haldimand, but that every man entitled to vote had been placed on the roll by the revising barrister. The result is an increased majority for the Reform candidate. We are pleased with the result. How does the Spectator feel?

We hope the Tory press will not fail to publish the congratulations of J. D. Edgar to Mr. Coulter, M.P. for Haldimand. When Edgar congratulated Prefontaine, M.P. for Chambly, on the result of his election, the Tories advertised him all over the land. Now they have another chance. Whoop'er up! Gas stock is rising.

A SCOTT ACT CONVENTION will be held in Seaford on Friday next the 17th inst. We hope there will be a large attendance from every part of the county. Let temperance men make a little sacrifice and turn out in large numbers at the Seaford convention. One of the attractions of the gathering will be a speech from F. S. Spence, the eloquent Toronto prohibitionist.

The Dominion government, according to the Mail, has decided to hand over all moneys accruing from fines under the Scott Act to the Local Government. This is as it should be. Now let the Provincial government see to it that diligent inspectors do their work faithfully, or else appoint men who will. West Huron is all right, but there's a loose string hanging out over the adjoining riding.

The Kingston Whip has discovered the awful fact that it was Sir John Macdonald and his "troopers" that caused the parliament buildings to be built at Ottawa instead of at Kingston. Parliament at Kingston! Think of it! Now let us hear from Gananoque and Adolphustown.—Hamilton Spectator.

If some of the "boodle" members had their due they would be serving a longer term in a Kingston public building than they now are likely to spend at Ottawa. The "blind share" politicians, the "boys" and all that crowd are as well fitted for the penitentiary as they are for parliament.

THESE are a great many people who believe that the man who publishes a journal must necessarily be bound neck and crop to the political party whose cause he espouses. This is a popular delusion, and a Western Ontario contemporary, the Petroler Advertiser, has taken the trouble to undeceive some of the public in its immediate vicinity. This is how it does it: "This journal will be run by the proprietor, in the interest of the proprietor, and for the benefit of the proprietor and his family. It is the property of the owner, invested for the benefit of the owner, and for the use of those who are willing to pay him for the use of the same. It will pay for its own paper, type and material, for the muscle and brain employed in getting it up, and those who use and enjoy must pay for such use and enjoyment."

Out of 125 Indian names on the roll in Haldimand, the "dear red brethren" gave a Tory majority of 28. It will thus be seen that the Redmen as well as the Orangemen don't lean heavily towards Liberalism.

A Tory briber named Welsh has been arrested in Haldimand. If there was a law to arrest the persons who had received bribes, there wouldn't have been a Tory stumper in Haldimand during the past two or three weeks.

THE Tories were returned to power in 1878 by the N. P.—National Policy—cry. They are riding for a fall at the next election on the N. P.—No Popery—cry. Their efforts to ride the Protestant horse have been frantic but futile.

The London Advertiser puts it neatly when it says:—"Sir John has been telling the people of Port Arthur what a fine rich country there is in that section. He forgot to add that but for the efforts of Mr. Mowat, he would have had that section snatched from this Province."

The harbor mills which have been running fifteen hours a day for several months past, will run day and night during the remainder of the year. This will look like old times. The new grain will get a ready purchase from the mill here. Let the farmers who want good prices for their grain come to Goderich this fall.

THE Tupper boom appears to have been a failure, and an effort is now being made to bring the Minister of Justice, another Nova Scotian, prominently forward as a party fighting man. Mr. Thompson has lately been doing yeoman's service for the party in Haldimand to counteract the prominence given to Hon Tom White's "Protestant horse" utterances. But as a counterfactual Mr. Thompson has been a failure.

A GOOD DEAL is spoken about liquor "informers." Patrick Heffernan, the active government official who looks after the temperance interest in Brace, writes as follows on this point to the Walkerton Telescope:—"I will give the Herald another piece of information. Every conviction obtained in this county under the Scott Act, has been got on secret information furnished by the liquor dealers against each other. A particular friend of the Herald's is very active in this respect. He wants to close up the hotels of his business rivals."

THE Opposition charge that 2,000 half-breeds suffered from cruelty and injustice. The fact is only 200 or 300 half-breeds rose in arms on account of fancied wrongs.—[Hon Mr. Thompson in Haldimand.] That was cleverly put, Mr. Thompson, but it is a dishonest argument and is a negative way of stating a falsehood. The Opposition charge that 2,000 half-breeds suffered from cruelty and injustice was correct. The Commission appointed to enquire into the complaints of the half-breeds, and which sat south of Clark's Crossing, whisk bullets and sword thrusts were being indulged in north of Clark's Crossing, awarded scrip to nearly 2,000 half-breeds who had been dealt with unjustly by the Government. It is a wonder that Mr. Thompson did not deny that there was a Commission appointed at all, or that it made any awards.

SOME time since Hon. Mr. Blake named Dr. Hickey, M.P. for Dundas, as a member of the Boodle Brigade. The doctor thought he had covered up his tracks, and threw out a challenge to Mr. Blake, daring that gentleman to come to his constituency and prove the statements. Wednesday last Mr. Blake went to Dundas, and at West Winchester, in the presence of 7,000 witnesses, rammed home the charges which he had previously made. An invitation had been sent to the valiant doctor to be present at the meeting, with the privilege of speaking in his defence, but with great tact, if not commendable discretion, he failed to appear and take the medicine which was to be administered. Mr. Blake read the charges which he had previously preferred against Dr. Hickey in regard to railway dealings, and then produced the original proposition made by the doctor, in his own handwriting, to the New York railway men, which proved the accuracy of every statement made. The Boodle Brigade is thus being exposed one by one, and at the next election Hickey, of Dundas county, will be another dead duck to fall in line with the late "Boy" Beatty, the late Prince-Albert-Colonization-Scheme White, the late Father-in-law Bowell, the late "Rooster" Farrow, and others of that ilk. So mote it be.

Victory!

THE BOODLE PARTY ROUTED IN HALDIMAND.

Coulter, Liberal, Returned by a Clear Majority of 194.

Ring the Glad News Throughout the Land:

There's a Tory Rout in Haldimand.

They Waved Aloft the "Bloody Shirt"

But Waved it only to Their Hurt.

Tis Worse to "Wave the Shirt" and Fall

Than Never to Have "Waved" at all.

For He Indeed Must be a Noodle

Who Did Not Know That Shirt Hid "Boodle."

The "Blind Share" Party Cannot Hope

To Cling to Power by Chap-leau's Rope.

Away Behind Regina's Nooses

The People Knew Were Foul Abuses.

They Saw the Greedy Tory Band

Grabbing Choicest Timber Land

They Knew That Dewdney and His Ring

In Contracts Had a Snug, "Soft Thing."

The Shining Silver, Green Bank Note,

And E'en the COPPER Indian Vote

Could Not the Tory Rout Avert.

Where, Oh Where's the Bloody Shirt?

They Thought That Thompson, the New "Stretcher,"

By His Tall Talk Would Surely "Fetch Her."

But Falsehoods Are Not Hard to Boost:

Like Chickens, They Come Home to Roost.

With Cant and Lies, White and McCarthy

Led on the Hosts, But Now Where Are They?

The "Boodle" Gang Is Losing Hope;

They've No Peace, But a Piece of Rope!

The Farmers, Too, Do Now Agree That a Big, Big Fraud is the Great N.P.

Sir John is Now in Deepest Sor-row:

He's Told That He Must Quit "Tomorrow."

on that account. The Toronto News sums up the situation in the following words:—"To the Tories, the defeat in Haldimand means an awakening to the fact that the people of that county love justice and fair play; despise the tricky and expensive franchise act, and are offended by the reckless lust for power which placed the ballot in the hands of half-civilized Indians."

THE FEELINGS AT OTTAWA.

OTTAWA, Sept. 8.—Hundreds gathered about the telegraph and newspaper offices tonight for the news from Haldimand. It was generally expected the constituency would go Conservative, and many bets were made as big odds that way. Twenty minutes after the result became known not a Conservative could be seen. Sir Hector Langevin said: "It's a crushing defeat; that's all there is of it."

WHAT'S UP?

Things That Are Happening Around Us.

A Sermon on Shade Trees—Something about Architecture—The Tory Sacrifice in West Huron.

I was mighty near securing a relaxation from the communication business this week, owing to the enervating action of the weather upon my system, but after mature reflection I came to the conclusion that I had better wrestle with the feeling of lassitude that had taken possession of me, and down it for once and all. You see, as we get on the down grade toward the seventies, the weather—whether it be warm or cold—catches on to us more strongly than when we are full of the enthusiasm of youth, and I am forced to admit that a few of the days during the week now past caused me to desist from exercises of a muscular nature to any great extent. These are the days when the hired man, the old sorrel mare, and the brindle cow like to gather themselves beneath the shelter of the spreading maple in the ten acre field, and for a time seek intermission from the blistering rays of Old Sol. And right here is a good place for me to enter a protest against the manner in which some of the neighbors have gone to work and injured their fields by clearing them of timber to such an extent that nothing more pretentious than the raspberry bush in the fence corner can be seen. This is not a square deal, and I have no hesitation in advising the neighbors who rejoice in cleared out fields to lose no time in setting out a few trees for purposes of shelter for man and beast from the steady rays of the sun. Next to a never-failing creek on a farm there is nothing like tree shelter for cattle, and the shade of the umbrageous foliage during a resting spell is of far greater moment to the hired man or the farmer himself, than the moist cabbage leaf in the "cow's breakfast" as a mulchifier of a hot sun's rays. Take the advice of an old chap that knows all about it, and let a few trees remain in every field.

But talking about the hot time we've been having lately, why isn't a circumstance to the trouble the people have had down at Charleston, S. C., where, in addition to a storm, an earthquake has come upon the scene and caused ruin and desolation and death to follow in its track. You have all seen the reports, but perhaps you all have not been thinking the matter out in the same line that I have, and so I make bold to give you some of my reflections. In the first place, the theory that bricks and mortar, on a supposed solid foundation, are a sure investment has been knocked upon the head, so to speak. Secondly, it has been shown that in a great natural upheaval life and property is not safer on shore than upon the sea, and Dribbin's song which we used to laugh at in our youth, wherein he describes two jolly tars in a storm at sea, weathering a gale with their vessel under bare poles, and congratulating themselves upon their good fortune in being at sea instead of on shore where their lives might be endangered by falling walls and chimney pots, is shown to be not so far wide of the mark after all. Thirdly, it has shown the superiority of wooden buildings over brick and stone edifices, for practical purposes, when the earth quakes and the ground shakes. Why, do you know, that for earthquake purposes there is no building that will stand the same amount of wear and tear as the old-style of log-house with pin-driven morticed corners and clayed chinks. If some of the more wealthy residents of Charleston would pull down their brown stone houses and put up good log buildings they would set a good example to their neighbors, and run less risk of realizing prematurely upon life insurance policies. Gimme a good log house for a resting place when old Mother Earth is suffering from dyspepsia, and I shall be satisfied.

I see in the Star that "Temperance" would like to know if THE SIGNAL would support William Campbell if he gets the nomination at the Tory convention. I'll let the Grit editor answer that conundrum himself, but I'd like to put a question to "Temperance" or Mr. Campbell—which probably amounts to the same thing: Would William Campbell, if he fails to get the nomination at the Tory convention, pledge himself to vote only for a pronounced temperance advocate or a politician who is on record by his votes as a promoter of temperance legislation. If Mr. Campbell is a solid, flat-footed temperance advocate I would like to see him act differently from the manner in which he worked after the resignation of Mr. Gibbons, when Dr. Worthington was brought out as the temperance candidate in South Huron. Then his Toryism got the better of his temperance principles, and I'm afraid he has not changed his practices since that time. "Temperance" may have meant well toward Mr. Campbell, but it only makes that gentleman's fast and loose playing with temperance a subject for criticism. If I were Mr. Campbell I would say, "Save me from my friends."

—However, I don't think it is necessary to worry much over Wm Campbell's chances for the nomination. He's about the best of the lot of candidates, and for that reason he won't stand the ghost of a show before the convention. I hear the race will be between Patrick Kelly and Fred W. Johnston, with the odds slightly in favor of Kelly. In 1879 Johnston stepped aside in favor of Kelly, and allowed him to be sacrificed, and I wouldn't be a bit surprised to see him act equally graciously in the present instance. The brotherly love between Patrick and Fred is akin to that between Esau and Jacob in olden times—one is willing to sell out what he believes to be an empty hoop cheer, and the other will take care not to give much "boot."

My honest opinion is that it makes small consequence who gets the Tory nomination for West Huron. The nominees have no earthly chance of having anything save the empty honor of being a badly defeated candidate. The title of Tory nominee for West Huron is indeed, an empty honor, a delusion, a snare, a hollow mockery, a make-belief, and, like the curl on a pig's tail, is intended more for ornament than for any real practical benefit.

In addressing the Indians on the Grand River Reserve on Monday last, Sir John Macdonald remarked:—"In the first place, Riel years ago murdered in cold blood that poor man Scott, and in the following year Mr. Blake offered $5,000 for his head. Then, after this, he was pardoned, not by the Government of which I was a member, but by Mr. Mackenzie."

But Sir John Macdonald did tell his "dear red brethren" that he paid Riel $3,000 to avoid capture after he had murdered that poor man Scott; that he afterwards hypocritically "wished to God he could catch him" that in 1872, he (Sir John) got Riel to resign in preference in favor of Sir George Cartier; that before the fall of his Government, in 1873, he completed the arrangements with Sir Hector Langevin and Mr. Robtelle for the amnestying of Riel and his compatriots; and that Mr. Mackenzie only honestly carried out the compact which had been entered into by his predecessor. Sir John in his talk with his "dear red brethren" has as usual been economical of the truth. But he should remember there is an Indian adage, "Beware of the man with the soft voice and forked tongue."

THE Tory organs find fault with Mr. Laurier for stating that if he had been on the banks of the Saskatchewan in the late rebellion he would have shouldered his rifle with the insurgents, and yet Sir John Macdonald spoke as follows at Winnipeg, in reference to the late Sir George Cartier: "He was a Frenchman every inch of him, but he was also a true patriot. As a young man he carried his musket in 1837." Now, it must be remembered that the Canadian rebellion occurred in 1837, and Lount, Matthews, Schultz and many others shouldered their muskets at that time in the patriot cause, but they were caught, like Riel in 1885, and were promptly hanged. Cartier, Lyon Mackenzie, Papineau, and others escaped across the border and lived to be patriots. Had Cartier or Mackenzie been arrested at the time a short shrift and a long rope would have been their portion. Yet Sir John is forced to admit that because of carrying a musket on the "rebel" side in 1837 Sir George was "a true patriot," while he had no compunction in hanging Riel for doing the same thing in 1885. Sir John and his dotage are not far apart.

THE crops on the whole have been good in Huron this season. Grain has given a fair yield, oats being a very heavy crop. The roots promise an average, notwithstanding early frosts. Potatoes will be rather under the usual yield; but apples, pears and the orchard yield generally has been most generous. But for the high tariff, and bad Government at Ottawa the lot of the farmer in this county would be a happy and prosperous one.

SANCTIFICATION.

Rev. Joseph McCoy, of Egmondville, on the Subject.

Notes of a Sermon Preached in Knox Church, Goderich.

Several months ago, Rev. Joseph McCoy, of Egmondville, preached a sermon on "Sanctification," in Knox church, Goderich.

The story of the founding of the church at Thebesonia is recorded in the 17th chapter of the Acts.

Thebesonia is situated at the head of a beautiful gulf, and so at the terminus of navigation in that part.

To this place Paul came, and according to his custom he entered the synagogue of the Jews and preached Christ.

What is sanctification? The word is a compound of two Latin words, and means simply the act of making holy, and the condition of holiness so effected.

How is it to be secured? It is the product of the Holy Spirit operating in the heart; Eph. 1:13; 1 Cor. 3:12; John 3:3, 5, &c.

What does that spell? Why, "backache," of course, though you would not suspect it at the first glance.

Every boy and every girl ought to have a good friend. Most people naturally pick out a "chum."

Of winter bring to the surface every latent pain. It is one of the strange things associated with our physical well being that the very air, without which we could not exist, is heavily laden with the germs of disease.

In England the population doubles in fifty years. Cucumbers and the festive watermelon evidently have hard work among the conservative Brits.

MAKING A NEWSPAPER.

It was an exceedingly cold night, and Mr. and Mrs. Bunby hugged the stove closely.

Without any preface whatever, she dropped the paper. With so much force did it strike the hearth that Mr. Bunby stopped his reading abruptly.

He hesitated. The longer he hesitated the more impatient she grew, and he felt it. Seeing that postponement was of no avail, he heaved a long sigh.

"What do they do; sit on it?" "No, thunder, no; they are the compositors who set it up."

"What kind of matter, and how do they prove it?" "Well, you wait a moment; if so, I will try and explain—but give me time."

CHAPTER XXIX.

STILL ALIVE.

Morven had slowly slipped when Beatrice spoke. He leaned against a heavy piece of furniture, as though for support, and contemplated her with blank yet anguish-stricken eyes.

"Gerald!" he stammered. "Gerald! I did not know—" "Say nothing!" cried Beatrice, sinking into a chair and hiding her face in her hands. "Keep silence if you like, but do not tell me a lie."

"I will tell you no lies," said Morven, in a quivering voice, "and yet I cannot tell you the truth. Believe me at any rate when I say that I—" he paused, drew a long breath, and went on in a firmer voice—"that I did not cause Gerald's death. Indeed that is true."

She raised her head and looked at him with marked distrust. "You struck him," she said in a low voice. "Yes," Morven hung his head. "To my infinite shame—I struck him. God forgive me!"

"But the blow—it led, surely, to his death?" "No." "How can you tell?" "I can tell. I am sure of it. Beatrice, would I not tell you, if I had caused his death? I could not look at you and tell you a lie to your face—because I love you."

Then, seeing that she shrank back: "It is too late to tell you so now, is it not? You have learnt to despise me, to hate me—and I do not wonder. Your instinct warned you to beware of me. You broke your promise to me, Beatrice, but I do not blame you."

"Morven, I never thought your care," she said, greatly softened, but hoping that he was exaggerating his regret. He uttered an agitated, scornful laugh.

"Not care?" he exclaimed. "Where have your eyes been Beatrice? Or perhaps I should rather say what has my tongue been doing to keep silence so long? I ought to have told you, morning, noon, and night, that I worshipped you, that I was willing to kiss the ground on which you trod, and to be trampled beneath your feet in return, until I made you believe my words. I forgot that women needed to be told of a man's love."

I was afraid of wearying you; but a woman is never weary of hearing her own praise. Forgive me; you are not like other women; but I thought you still more unlike them than you are. It seems that you can bear to be caressed—to listen to tender words. It was I that you hated, not Love itself. And I thought—I thought that you hated Love!"

"I never hated you, Ralph," said Beatrice, drawing nearer to him. "I wish you had. Hate would have been nearer love than indifference. Oh, Beatrice, is it too late? Can I not win you back?"

"I see," he continued sorrowfully, "I understand. I was first—and yet I am too late." Beatrice's eyes slowly filled with tears.

"Dear Ralph," she said, "I am so sorry. I have wronged you more than I knew. I thought that you would not care—that you would be willing enough to give me up when you found that I did not love you as I should—as a woman ought. Forgive me, and—forgive—Anthony too; it was my fault."

She held out her hands to him. He turned as if to take them; but suddenly his face changed. His lips turned white; his eyes glanced around as if he had heard a sound that brought terror to his soul.

"Ah," he said, with a groan, "you would not give me your hand if you knew all. If I did not kill Gerald—I am guilty still."

And then he flung himself back on the sofa, and hid his face between his hands. Beatrice was puzzled. She would have spoken but for an interruption—one which Morven had perhaps anticipated. The inner door of the room suddenly opened, and Dr. Airie appeared. Was it his footsteps which Lord Morven had distinguished? His usually neat attire was disordered, his face was pale, his voice agitated and unsteady. For the first time in her life Beatrice saw the doctor in a state of extreme nervous excitement. He was not even sufficiently on his guard to observe her; he advanced to the Earl, and almost wrung his own hands as he addressed him.

"My lord—my lord," he said, "it is you who have done this!" Morven lifted his face from his hands; he did not seem to understand. "What is it?" he asked.

"What is it? You do not know what has happened," gabbled the little doctor.

"He has gone—he has escaped. That is what has happened. The doors were all unlocked, though I myself locked them as usual last night. The devil is in it!"

"Compose yourself," said Morven, with the dearest smile which Beatrice had ever seen. "The devil has had plenty to do in the matter, no doubt, and so have you; but in this case neither he nor you were to blame. I unlocked the doors."

"You—you! You unlocked the doors, knowing that his escape meant ruin? Fool!"

"Fool, indeed," said Morven, bitterly. "But not perhaps so utterly vile as you would have had me be!"

The doctor muttered an imprecation between his teeth, then, turning round, caught sight of Beatrice. His agitation changed to fury as soon as he saw her face.

"It is you that have done all this," he said. "I told you that if you breathed a word you would ruin everything. It is you and your lover who have spoiled our game. But you shall suffer for it yet."

And before that Morven or Beatrice could reply, he had torn from the room as if a legion of evil spirits were pursuing him. Beatrice looked at Morven for explanation, but he, with knitted brows and folded lips, averted his head and seemed resolved to give her none.

There was a painful pause. Beatrice waited for some minutes and then resolved to question for herself. "Morven," she began, "of whom is Dr. Airie speaking?"

But before he could even try to answer her another interruption occurred. The door was opened—timidly this time, as if the new-comer hardly liked to show herself; and both Morven and Beatrice uttered a quick exclamation of surprise.

It was Lady Lillias Ruthven, who came up to them with outstretched hands of greeting, flushed cheeks, and sparkling eyes and words of apology upon her tongue.

"Oh, Morven," she said, "I could not stay away. The Claremonts were called back to England, and I did not like to stay at the pension all alone. You will forgive me, will you not? I am so glad to be at home!"

Beatrice glanced at Morven in some alarm. But he did not seem displeased. He kissed his sister on the forehead, and then turned away from her with a heavy sigh.

"It comes to the same thing in the end," he muttered to himself. "Nothing can matter now."

Lillias had left the door open; and Beatrice perceived that the old butler was making signs to her from the hall. She went away to speak with him; and returned in a few moments with a somewhat heightened color and a puzzled look upon her face.

"Morven," she said gently, "will you allow Mr. Douglas to speak to you for a few minutes?"

"Douglas! What does he want with me?" said Lord Morven. Then his eye fell upon Lillias. "It is useless," he said, sadly rather than angrily. "He should not have come. Lillias, you are mistaken in this man. He is not fit for you. He is going to marry a different woman."

"It is you who are mistaken, Ralph!" cried Lillias. "He is not going to marry anyone but me. Oh, dear Ralph, will you not be kind and good to us? Listen to him, at any rate. He will explain everything that seems strange, and I shall not mind being poor. Dear Ralph, you will let him come, will you not?"

"I am afraid," said Beatrice quietly, "that you both misunderstand Bertie's purpose in coming here today. Not but what he is true to you. Lillias, do not be afraid of that but I mean that you must today on other business. You are not to be alarmed—Mrs. Drummond, of whom Dr. Airie wrote to you—is with him here."

"Lillias's fair face paled for a moment. 'Mrs. Drummond with him?' she exclaimed. 'But what has he to do with Mrs. Drummond?'"

"It is all right," said Beatrice in her ear. "I know it is all right," rejoined Lady Lillias indignantly. "I never thought it was anything else; but I confess I do not see why—"

"You will see why presently," said Beatrice, ruthlessly cutting her short. "You have only to wait and listen. Other people have more cause for fear than you. Morven, shall they come into the room?"

Morven bowed his head, and seated himself; he seemed tired of contending. His face was very pale, and his eyes were a look of utter weariness—perhaps also of despair. Lillias, still standing, watched the door by which her cousin went out. For Beatrice departed at once to meet Bertie, and also to send a message—an urgent message—to Mr. Lockhart, bidding him come to the Towers at once. This done, she delayed the interview between Lord Morven and the visitors as long as possible; and when it could be put off no longer she left word with the butler that on Mr. Lockhart's arrival he should be shown at once into the library. For "what was going to happen might tend, she thought, to a reconciliation between him and Bertie Douglas; and this she ardently desired to bring about. Bertie was not at all disconcerted at finding Lillias present. He entered in the wake of Maggie Drummond, whose beauty was never more brilliant than in this moment of trial and possible defeat, and as he saw Lillias an illumination of pleasure kindled in his face. He and Lillias both made an involuntary movement towards each other, then restrained themselves out of consideration for their friends, but flashed bright answering glances of trust and affection into each other's eyes. There was really no need for speech when eyes could be so eloquent.

Maggie came in with some natural dignity and a little nervousness as well; but she expected to be the queen of the occasion, and was somewhat surprised to find that the first words spoken concerned her not at all. For Lord Morven, after a slight bow to her—he had not the faintest conception of her name or of her errand—turned and spoke at once to Bertie Douglas.

"I do not know why you have come," he said. His voice was low and broken, like the voice of an old man, and it started Bertie into grave attention.

"Before you speak let me ask one question. Is it true—as Beatrice thinks—that you are in the same mind about my sister Lillias? Or is there any change?"

"Morven!" said Lillias, indignantly. She had flushed crimson with anger and shame, and would have left the room but for Beatrice's detaining hand. Beatrice understood better than Lillias what Lord Morven meant. He scarcely knew that Lillias was in the room. His mind seemed bent in one direction; it would be useless to force it into another. Let Morven have his say.

"There is no change," replied Bertie manfully. "I did not come to speak of it at present; but I am ready at any time to avow my love for Lady Lillias."

"Very well," said Morven. He was standing, with his hands on the table before him, leaning a little towards the assembled group with a worn and weary look in his hollow eyes. "Wait then, till tonight. Perhaps you will change your mind. If, after all you hear, you still hold to your choice I will put no obstacle in the way. But do not commit yourself, you do not know what may happen before the close of day. No words; stand back, Lillias. Till you have heard all that you will have to bear, say nothing. You will not find that you have much to thank me for. Now, sir, may I ask what is your business with me?"

Bertie had colored deeply, and was looking at Lillias with an expression which seemed to beseech her to have confidence in him. But at Lord Morven's abrupt question he turned away from Lillias and gathered himself up for conflict. Maggie had refused Beatrice's kindly invitation to seat herself; with her baby-boy in her arms, her face lighted up by an unusually vivid color, her attitude slightly defiant. Bertie glanced at her and then at Lord Morven before he spoke.

"I do not know whether I had better ask for a few words in private before I go on," he said. "But Miss Esimont knows something of the circumstances, will she kindly be the judge?"

"Go on, Bertie," said Beatrice. "It is better to speak now, while Dr. Airie is away," she added to herself.

"Then I can have no hesitation," said Bertie. "Lord Morven, I am sure it is by no wish of yours that this lady does not occupy her rightful position. You are the last man to allow your brother's widow and your brother's child to be wronged in any way—"

"My brother's widow and child!" gasped Morven. His face became deadly pale; his eyes showed a sudden terror. Beatrice came round to his chair and laid her hand on his shoulder.

"Ay, an' that's me an' wee Ronald," said Maggie, advancing a step in the pride of her glowing and defiant beauty towards Lord Morven's chair. "It was the said doctor that garred me hand my tongue. He tauld me that Gerald had said on his dying bed that I wasna his wife ava, and that his lordship would put me in prison if I said anything about it, and I daurna speak. But Mr. Douglas here has lookit into the matter, and he says that the doctor led, and that it's plain enow that I was Gerald's wedded wife."

"Lord Morven can probably tell us, at any rate," said Bertie in a very quiet tone, "whether or no Gerald Ruthven, on his death-bed denied his marriage."

Lord Morven looked stupefied; he did not reply to this appeal.

"Can you remember, Morven?" Beatrice whispered anxiously in his ear. "Did Gerald speak of anyone? Her name is Margaret—Maggie; did he speak of her?"

"Oh, my lord," said Maggie, suddenly throwing a tone of vehement passion into her voice, "it's no for my ain sake that I would ask you listen to me; it's for the bairn's. Look at him, my lord, and see whether he isna like Gerald. It's Gerald's ain laddie, an' Gerald lo'd's her dearly—an' me too, although the doctor says that he denied me on his dying bed! He must have been wrong in his heid when he said so, I'm thinking; for it wasna mair than a week syne that he had bidden me good-bye and set out for Glenbervie. He said he would be back sune, and I'm sure he likit me then! If it's true that he cast me off, it's a sad woman I shall be for the rest o' my days; but whether he cast me off or no, the laddie's his ain, and should be treated as such by his ain kith an' kin!"

They all listened to Maggie's outburst in silence, but with varying degrees of responsive emotion. The tears rushed to Lady Lillias' eyes. She and Bertie looked eagerly at Lord Morven to see what effect had been produced upon him. Morven sat like a rock; impassive, grey, motionless; it might have been thought that he had not heard a word. Beatrice moved away from his chair and came to Maggie's side, then, laying her hand on the young mother's arm, she also spoke.

"Don't be afraid," she said. "We are all anxious to do you justice. Lord Morven will tell us whether Gerald spoke of you and what he said."

Maggie turned and gazed at her. The grave and earnest sympathy of Beatrice's tones and looks seemed to impress her. The defiant light in her hazel eyes quenched for a moment in a rush of tears. "Oh, my lordy," she said, passionately, "it's no for my ain sake, it's for my bonnie bairn's!"

"Give me the child," said Beatrice, holding out her arms.

For a moment Maggie hesitated; little Ronald was not accustomed to strangers, and might cry if he were transferred to other arms. But when Beatrice smiled her wonderfully radiant smile, the little fellow stared somewhat doubtfully, then smiled in return, and held out his little hands towards her. Beatrice took him in her arms, and then went up to Morven, who still sat as if turned to stone in his great arm-chair.

"Look at him, Ralph," she said. "Is he not Gerald's very image? Will you not tell us what you know?" She drew nearer to him and spoke in a lower tone. "If ever you wronged poor Gerald," she said, "you can at any rate do justice now to his wife and child and make amends—"

Morven rose from his chair, putting out his hands with a wild gesture, as if to entreat her to say no more.

"You need not tell me that!" he said, standing up, with an aspect of such stern dignity that all except Beatrice fell back abashed. "I do not need to be reminded of my duty in that respect. This matter has come upon me so suddenly that my silence is surely excusable. I do not know this—this lady. But I did know—I heard it from his own lips—that he had married a young woman named Margaret Logan; and that the marriage, though somewhat irregularly performed, was a legal one. He spoke in terms—in terms of the highest affection and respect of his wife; and begged me to care for them—and for his child. I have the legal papers in my own possession."

Maggie drew a long breath of relief; she snatched her child away from Beatrice's arms, and pressed it to her bosom. "It's a richt, then," they heard her murmur, "my wee lammie, ye shall hae your ain name an' your own place in your father's hoose."

Lord Morven looked at her sternly. "I have said that my brother was married," he remarked, "but I have not added that I had every reason to believe that my brother's wife and child were dead."

"From whom did your lordship get that information?" said Bertie, with irrepressible satire in his tone.

Lord Morven winced. "It was Dr. Airie," he said, somewhat unwillingly. "who went to Glasgow and reported to me of the highest affection and respect of his wife; and begged me to care for them—and for his child. I have the legal papers in my own possession."

"No," said her brother, quietly. "No, as I have said, he did not deny it. He told me of his marriage—a spasm of pain passed over Lord Morven's face at the recollection of Gerald's confession—and begged me to care for his wife and children. You will understand," he continued, addressing himself to Bertie, "that without throwing any imputation on any one, I must have proofs of the identity of this lady and child. As the boy will probably be my heir—"

A slight shock seemed to run through the hearers; they glanced expressively at Beatrice, and Lord Morven saw the glance. "My cousin Beatrice, he said, 'is about to be married to Mr. Anthony Lockhart, of Glenbervie; and I have every intention of going abroad for a few years, when all these matters are settled. In the meantime—my brother's wife was Margaret Logan. Is this Margaret Logan?'"

"There is no doubt of that," said Bertie. He turned to Maggie, but she, forgetting her position for a moment, had retreated several steps and was looking at Anthony Lockhart with a strangely agitated expression. "O' Glenbervie!" she repeated. "Then it's a richt again! Mr. Anthony has come to his ain again!"

At first nobody replied. Then Beatrice answered. "Yes, Anthony has come to his own. He is master of Glenbervie."

"Not I," said Anthony abruptly. He raised his eyes and fixed them upon Bertie's face. "I made the claim in anger—under a mistaken impression; I desire to withdraw it now."

"You cannot withdraw it," said Bertie. "It would be wrong if you did—"

"Ay, ay!" broke in Maggie, to everybody's surprise. "It was he wrang in deed gin ye didna tak' your ain birch-richt, and set straight what's been crookit for sae many a year. It's for Gerald's sake that I'll speak the truth, as he wad bid me do if he were here. Ye'll hae forgotten maybe, my lord, that I'm niece to Mrs. Pirie who nursed the laird o' Glenbervie in his last illness—"

And then Maggie launched forth into a full account of the dying moments of poor old Mr. Lockhart, and of the part which she herself had played—a story which gave more pain to some of her hearers than she had perhaps anticipated. Certainly Bertie Douglas suffered keenly at this exposure of his mother's greed.

"An' I tauld nobody for years an' years—no even Dr. Airie," said Maggie, excitedly, "though often he spert at me about the box; but when Gerald an' me was man an' wife I couldna hide anything from him, an' he heard the hail story an' handle mair that I haena time to tell ye i' the noo. I mind o' fine, for I never saw him sae eager nor sae muckle put about. He speired a' manner o' questions about the papers an' the bit boxes an' the money, an'—"

"For heaven's sake," said Lord Morven, rising to his feet, "if you have any respect for your husband's memory say no more!"

Maggie stared at him. "It's juist because I hae a respect for him that I mean to speak," she said proudly; "jist because he was aye generous an' kind, although maybe a bit foolish now an' then—an' I'll no keep silence for any man's bidding. Maybe, my lord, ye'll no hae heard the story. It was the thocht o' the will that made him sae anxious to get at the box. He said to me, 'When I was a boy, Maggie, Dr. Airie led me into committing a great wrong against Anthony Lockhart. I did not then know who it was that was blamed for my fault and sent to prison in my stead for a shameful petty theft of mine, that I've repented ever after—but I've found out since and tried hard to get to know what's become of him. Now that you've told me this I believe I could do him a good turn. I'll get the box out of that hole, if it's there still, by hook or by crook; and I'll see that justice is done. I won't go openly,' he says, 'for fear there should be difficulties put in my way; but Glenbervie's an easy place to get into, and I'll just make an expedition there some night and explore. And I borrowed some workman's clothes for him, and saw him off, and he kissed me before he went'—here Maggie's voice began to tremble—"an' thanked me for trusting him, helping him to set right a great wrong—"

She broke down utterly and sobbed aloud. Her sobs were the only sounds heard for a few minutes in the room where Morven, Anthony and Beatrice alike stood aghast at the unexpected turn given to a story which they had interpreted so very differently. Now that the clue was in their hands, how plain the mystery seemed! It Gerald then had been no thief. He had tried to redeem the honor which he had lost by his boyhood's act; he had vindicated his claim to the love which his wife and sister at least had lavished upon him. But what were the feelings of three who had condemned him without a hearing?

Morven spoke first. "My God!" he sighed, scarcely above his breath. "What have I done?" He sank back into his chair and buried his face in his hands.

Then Anthony spoke, with a face of marble and voice so unlike his own that his hearers turned upon him in amazement.

"More than one of us may say that, my lord. But you have special occasion, perhaps. For it is owing to this great and terrible mistake that you have tried to hide the fact that Gerald—poor Gerald Ruthven—is still alive."

Day and Night

During an acute attack of Bronchitis, a ceaseless tickling in the throat, and an exhausting, dry, hacking cough, afflict the sufferer. Sleep is banished, and great prostration follows. This disease is also attended with Hoarseness, and sometimes Loss of Voice. It is liable to become chronic, involve the lungs, and terminate fatally. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral affords speedy relief and cure in cases of Bronchitis. It controls the disposition to cough, and induces refreshing sleep.

I have been a practicing physician for twenty-four years, and, for the past twelve, have suffered from annual attacks of Bronchitis. After exhausting all the usual remedies

Without Relief, I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It helped me immediately, and effected a speedy cure.—G. Stovall, M.D., Carrollton, Miss. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is decidedly the best remedy, within my knowledge, for chronic Bronchitis, and all lung diseases.—M. A. Rust, M.D., South Paris, Me.

I was attacked last winter, with a severe cold, which, from exposure, grew worse and finally settled on my lungs.—By night sweats I was reduced almost to a skeleton. My cough was incessant, and I frequently spit blood. My physician told me to give up business, or I would not live a month. After trying various remedies without relief, I was finally Cured By Using two bottles of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I am now in perfect health, and able to resume business, after having been pronounced incurable with Consumption.—S. P. Henderson, Sausalburg, Penn.

For years I was in a decline. I had weak lungs, and suffered from Bronchitis and Catarrh. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral restored me to health, and I have been for a long time comparatively vigorous. In case of a sudden cold I always resort to the Pectoral, and find speedy relief.—Edward E. Curtis, Rutland, Vt.

Two years ago I suffered from a severe Bronchitis. The physician attending me became fearful that the disease would terminate in Pneumonia. After trying various remedies, without benefit, he finally prescribed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved me at once. I continued to take this medicine a short time, and was cured.—Ernest Colton, Logansport, Ind.

Saltford.
Mrs. John Sands has gone on a visit to her brother's at Paisley, Bruce county.
Mr and Mrs A. Book and deputy reeve Joe attended the Harvest Home, near Dunnan, last week. They all report a good time.
On Monday last, while some boys were fishing in the river, some distance below the Falls, one of them named Willie Jones, got his boat entangled in some object in the river. He recklessly went in to disengage it, and in doing so got beyond his depth and sank. The other boys, being unable to swim, could render him no assistance, and he was drowned. As the parents were away on a visit at the time this was a severe shock to them. They have the heartfelt sympathy of the community in their sad bereavement.

Fort Albert.
Mrs. Eliza McConnell, widow of the late James McConnell, is seriously ill.
Mrs E. McConnell has returned from a month's visit to friends in Hamilton.
It is our painful duty to chronicle this week the death of Mrs Wm. J. Givan, which sad event took place at the residence of her parents on Sunday last. Deceased was the eldest daughter of Geo. Hawkins, of this village. She came here last fall from her home in 'Austin, Michigan, hoping that the air of her native village might restore her to perfect health. But the dread disease, consumption, had too firm a hold, and after ten months of patient suffering, through which she had all the attendance that a kind and loving mother, sister and friends could bestow, death came to her relief and terminated her suffering on Sunday last. Her husband was telegraphed for, and arrived on Saturday. Her sudden death was a great shock, as he expected her to return to her home in a few days. She leaves two bright little children of eight and six years, who with her husband and friends will deeply mourn her loss. They have the sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement.

BORN.
At Westbourne Farm, Colborne township, on Thursday, 28th August, the wife of O. F. Carv, of a son.
At Moncton, N.B. on 29th Aug. 1886, the wife of John Galt, of a son.
MARRIED.
On Wednesday, Sept. 8th, by Rev. G. R. Turk, at the residence of the bride's father, Goderich, Rev. T. J. Smith, of Linwood, to Marion, eldest daughter of David Wilson.

The Poet's Corner.

There was a man, it said, one time, Who went astray in his youthful prime. Can the brain keep cool and the heart keep quiet...

Household Hints.

Save your cold tea; it is excellent for cleaning grained wood. CORN PUFFING.—Grate ears of green corn. Add to a quart of it a teaspoonful of cream or milk...

A great Awakening. There is a great awakening of the sluggish organs of the human system whenever Burdock Blood Bitters are taken.

SPICED GRAPES.—Five pounds of grapes, three pounds of sugar, two tablespoonfuls each of cinnamon and allspice, one-half teaspoonful of cloves...

BAKED EGGS.—Mince half a pound of lean boiled ham, add an equal quantity of cracker crumbs. Moisten and spread the mixture over a platter...

A Complete Breakdown. "For ten years," says Jennie M. Harrett of Wallaceburg, Ont. "I did not see a well day—was all broken down with dyspepsia, liver complaint, catarrh and debility."

An antidote for poison by dew, poison oak, ivy, etc., is to take a handful of quicklime, dissolve in water, let it stand half an hour, then paint the poisoned parts with it.

How a Dude Caught Cold. A slim young man in the height of fashion was violently sneezing in a street car, when a companion remarked, "Aw, Charles, dear boy, how'd you catch that dreadful cold?"

16 A NASAL INJECTOR free with each bottle of Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy. Price 50 cents. For sale by J. Wilson, druggist.

LIGHT CAKES FROM STALE BREAD.—Light cakes are made in this way; pour hot milk over the broken pieces; when cold mash finely with a spoon or pass through a colander.

DURABLE WHITEWASH.—Put a half bushel quicklime in a barrel and add boiling water until it is covered nearly six inches deep; cover the barrel to keep the steam in...

VEAL SALAD.—Mix one-half teaspoonful of mustard with half a cupful of vinegar. Beat the yolks of two of three eggs with a little salt, until they are quite thick and light; then, stirring briskly all the time, slowly add two or three tablespoonfuls of best salad oil...

Why They Married.

Tid Bits: We lately sent out postal cards to the married men of a small town in Western New York with the inquiry: "Why did you marry?"

"That's what I have been trying for eleven years to find out. "Married to get even with her mother, but never have."

"Because I was too lazy to work." "Because Sarah told me that five other young men had proposed to her."

"The old man thought eight years' courtin' was almost long enough." "I was lonesome and melancholy, and wanted some one to make me lively."

"She makes me very lively." "I was tired of buying ice cream and candies and going to theaters and church, and wanted a rest." "Please don't stir me up."

"Because I thought she was one among a thousand; now I sometimes think she is a thousand among one." "I think it was because I was cross-eyed; now I am afflicted with two pairs of cross-eyes daily."

"Because I did not have the experience I have now." "The governor was going to give me his foot, so I took his daughter's hand."

"I thought it would be cheaper than a breach-of-promise suit." "That's the same fool question that my friends and neighbors ask me."

"Because I had more money than I knew what to do with. Now I have more to do than I have money with." "I wanted a companion of the opposite sex."

"P.S.—She is still opposite." "Don't mention it." "Had difficulty in unlocking the door at night and wanted somebody to let me in."

"I was embarrassed, and gave my wife the benefit of my name so that I could take the benefit of her name, signed to a check."

"Because it is just my luck." "I didn't intend to do it." "I yearned for company. We now have it all the time."

"Have exhausted all the figures in the arithmetic to figure out an answer to your question; between multiplication and division in the family and distraction, in addition, the answer is hard to arrive at."

"I married to get the best wife in the world." "Because I asked her if she'd have me. She said she would. I think she's got me."

National Pills will cure constipated bowels and regulate the liver.

Fun and Fancy.

A bee is very economical—in fact, quite stingy. Why should artists not be trusted? Because they are designing men.

There seems to be some sort of an affinity between a Gladstone and a shamrock.

A little child once asked his mother the question: "Mother, what part of heaven do people go to who are good but not agreeable?"

It seems a hard thing that so many doles should be walking about with nothing to do, when the hand-organ man has to pay $40 for a monkey.

"Maude, dear, why is a gardener like your cheeks?" "New, John! You know never can guess conundrums. Why is not?" "Because he is the culler of roses."

Butcher (to young housekeeper): I have nothing left, mum, but a hindquarter of lamb and liver. Young housekeeper: Very well. You may send a small hindquarter of liver.

"Young men believe in nothing nowadays," said Mrs. Ramsbotham, with a deep sigh. "Why, there's my nephew Tom, who was brought up as a Christian, but now he's an Acrostic."

One of the graduates of a female college had for her essay, "Our Crowning Glory." But the girls thought it inappropiately named, as it did not contain a single reference to bonnets.

At the horticultural exhibition.—He: This is a lime tree, Clara. But you are not looking. She: Yes, Charles, I see it. But I was wondering how they extracted the mortar from it.

"The born poet," truly remarked Miss Cleveland, "has no agony in his song." Indeed no. It is the poor wretch who listens to his songs who lies awake and moans for the choriform.

"Husband (handing his wife some money): There, dear, is $50, and it has bothered me some to get it for you. I think I deserve a little praise." Wife: "Praise! You deserve an encore, my dear."

In last year Japanese girls who want husbands set out flower-pots on the front porch as an emblem. In this country they sit out there themselves with a young man as an emblem.

The man whose wife woke him up in church by sticking a pin in him says he doesn't like such pointed suggestions.

Forty rods make one road, but one rod will often make one civil, especially in the case of the small boy.

Some men have greatness thrust upon them; especially when a fat person sits next to them in the street car.

He (on horseback): "Shall we take the highway home?" She: "No; I would prefer the bridal path, I think."

A pious old lady recently sent as wedding presents a pair of fat iron, a rolling pin, and a motto worked on cardboard, reading, "Fight on."

"Do you know the nature of an oath?" inquired the judge. "Well, I reckon I do," was the reply. "My nephew drives a canal boat."

At a flower show two young and talkative ladies were discussing their reasons for their fondness for particular flowers. "Oh! I do love heliotropes," said one. "They are so fragrant. They smell just like vanilla ice cream!"

A Frenchman thinks the English language is very tough. "Dere is 'look out,'" he says, "which is to put out your head and see, and 'look out' which is to haul in your head and not for to see.—just contrairie."

Important News Item. Cookstown.—Mrs Campbell has been troubled for a number of years with Indigestion and Constipation, and was induced to try McGregor's Speedy Cure and found it all that was needed, and would recommend its use to any person similarly troubled. How Much Sleep. The only rule is, take enough. Old Mother Means in Eggleston's Hooper Schoolmaster advised her husband when buying cheap land, "While yer a gettin' get a plenty." So say in regard to sleep, a full quantity of which is more valuable than the grandest prairie farms the sun ever shone on. It is during the wakeful hours that the muscles and the nervous system and the brain expend their energies. Muscles are partially recruited during the day by nourishment taken, but the great recuperating work of the nerves and brain is done during sleep. Such recuperation must at least equal the expenditure made through the day or else the brain is ill-nourished, wastes, withers. Persons who, in early English history, were condemned to death by being prevented from sleeping, always died raving maniacs. Persons who are starved to death suffer brain starvation also, and pass into hallucinations and then into insanity.—[Health and Home.

Little Perplexities.

A housekeeper who takes a sensible view of the minor trials of a woman's life, writes the following for this column: Why cannot the housekeeper feel that her position is a noble one, and act accordingly? Who does she so many times look upon herself as a drudge? "Women Steadfastmen" officiates in their management of affairs, even in the kitchen of a farm house; and if they would look upon themselves as such, even when weary and careworn, they would be happy.

It is not the large matters of the household that worry the woman as much as the little perplexities of every day life: the washing, ironing, churning and baking are all expected, and pass smoothly along, but the dust and dirt often make woman long to pitch things out at the window, as did Thoreau, to get rid of dusting. But what need of fretting? After one has come to years of maturity, and she must prepare to meet them pleasantly. When I first kept house I thought the meals must be eaten the moment they were placed upon the table; but I find there are worse things to be met than a pool baked potato. I find it is the woman's place to have the meals ready at the usual time, and if the men-folk are behind time say nothing and they will not.

And another thing I find it an excellent plan to keep busy when waiting for the men to come in, instead of running about doing nothing but wonder why they don't come; you can wash the cooking utensils you have used getting dinner, the fry-pan, potato kettle, etc.; then you can do the work up quicker after dinner. Whenever about the cooking you are done with a dish, fill it with water whereby a minute or two may be saved in washing it. Keep calm and cool when hindered so that when dinner is at last served you may not be a "roasted lady" as Charles Lamb tells about, served with every course, but may make up by your pleasant manner and witty remarks any deficiency that waiting may have made to show in the food.

It fruts a woman less to have dinner wait a few moments than to have the men wait for dinner. The latter stand round and hardly know what to do or say until the welcome voice calls them to the table. Have a paper, book or magazine at hand, and if you are getting fretted and nervous, go to reading and forget for a few moments your trouble. This is a curious world, and we must learn to make the best of it and take all the comfort we can if we are farmer's wives.

About Advertising.

If you can arouse curiosity by an advertisement it is a great point gained. The fair sex don't hold a the curiosity in the world.

It is a mistaken notion that a fine store in an eligible location, surrounded by attractive signs, is a superior advertisement; for the experience of the most enterprising merchants is that it pays better to spend less in 1886 and more in advertising.

Now is the time to think about advertising, and reflection should be followed by judicious action.

To make a man realize an idea as you realize it, is what is necessary to make him understand his needs. Advertisement should aim to place a matter so clearly before the public that they see it as clearly as the advertiser does.

Each spring, people are beginning to learn the value of advertising of the year round. The persistency of those who are not intimidated by the cry of "dull times," but keep their names ever before the public, will surely place them on the right side in the end.

Advertising is the pole that knocks the pessimists.

OUR TOWN FATHERS.

Minutes of the Last Regular Meeting of the Town Council.

The regular meeting of the town council was held Friday evening. Present—the mayor in the chair, councillors Colborne, Murney, Thompson, Reid, McEwan, Bingham, Humber, Butler, Dunlop and deputy-revere Cameron.

REPORTS.

The treasurer's statement showed a balance of $770.73.

The sexton's report showed that 3 adults and 8 children had been interred. Also that the fence had been removed from between the private burying ground and cemetery, and the walks connecting them together are now made, with a number of lots staked off, and may now be on the maps of the cemetery.

The fire warden's report gave details in connection with recent fires, and also drew attention to the fact that the tank on Victoria street was in need of repair.

COMMUNICATION.

From the American Public Health Association. Filed.

PETITIONS.

From night watchman Yule, asking for leave of absence from duty for one week. Granted. Substitute to be paid by the town.

From C. Crabb and 37 others, asking that the license fee for transient traders be raised from $50 to $150, and reciting reasons therefor.

Moved by Bingham, seconded by Colborne, that the prayer of the petition be granted, and that the by-law be amended. Notice of motion was given to have the by-law amended by raising the fee from $50 to $150.

The mayor reported re mill property, that he had taken advice and that there was no legal obligation on the part of the town. Mr Garrow thinks, however, that the original agreement should be carried out.

The matter was left in the hands of the committee.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

The following accounts were recommended to be paid upon being only certified to—E. Graham, $3; Smeal, $8; Mrs Mitchell, $3.50; Williams & Murray, $11.08; G. C. Robertson, $1.70; estate of Geo Grant, $3; C. Straube, $90; Geo Neuberger, $24.12; G. C. Robertson, $1.

A fatal accident occurred to Mr James Brownlee, of the Bose Line, on Tuesday morning, 7th August. He was looking after the cows when he was attacked by a bull and fatally gored.

COUNTY NOTES.

FOR THE OLD COUNTRY.—David Todd, of St. Helena, left on Tuesday of last week for Scotland. He took with him about forty head of cattle for the Old Country market.

FATAL DISEASE.—During the past week no less than three deaths have occurred among infant children in the village, from a species of cholera infantum. The homes afflicted were Thos. H. Treleaven's, Fred Gravelly's, and David Mal-lough's.—(Locknow's Sentinel).

BURGLARY AT EXETER.—One night last week Grigg's tailoring and clothing store was broken into and four pairs of pants and one vest were stolen. Mr Treble's boot shoe and store was also entered and three pairs of fine shoes and 8 cents in cash was taken. Entrance was gained through one of the back windows in both cases.

RID BROKEN.—A couple of weeks ago while Jas A. Cline was batting at a cricket match, Rev McCosh bowled him a hot half which missed its mark and struck him on the right side, just over his vest pocket. The injury at the time was considered but slight, until last Saturday it became so painful that Mr Cline consulted a physician and ascertained that one of his ribs was broken. He is taking things easier now, and will be all right in a week or so.—(Wingham Times).

A SUCCESSFUL ATHLETE.—Mr. G. Perry, who by the way is a resident of this county, and of whose feats as an athlete we have frequently had mention before, has again been distinguishing himself at the Irish games at Boston, on the 5th August, Mr. Perry, in throwing the 56 lbs. weight for height attained the height of 14 feet 2 inches, beating the record by 1 foot 3 inches, and defeating West, the American champion, and other eminent athletes. At Lawrence, Massachusetts, last Saturday, he threw the 16 lbs. shot, 45 feet 9 inches, while the record is 44 feet 4 inches. At this competition he carried off three other prizes, and there was the keenest competition. Mr Perry is a resident of the township of Grey, near Brussels, and first became prominent as an athlete about a year ago. Since then he has carried everything before him. He is just 23 years of age, stands 6 feet 2 inches, and weighs 134 pounds. He is a modest, unassuming young man, and if he takes care of himself has a brilliant career before him in the athletic world.

HURONITES ABROAD.—Mr Thomas Morrison, formerly of McKillop, but now of Pembina county, Dakota, had 200 acres of wheat and 50 acres of oats and barley this year. He has a very destructive hail storm, which cut down everything before it, came within three miles of his place. But, while he was so fortunate as to escape it, other Huronites were not. Mr Chas Murchie, also an old McKillopite, and brother of Mr Alex Morrison, the esteemed postmaster of Wingham, had 120 acres of crop which will not yield over 50 bushels, and Mr Frank Grieve had 200 acres completely destroyed. Grain growing in these Northwestern States seems to be a sort of lottery. Mr Wm Somers, formerly of Wingham, had a 100 acre farm on shares, and he will have over 600 bushels of wheat for his portion.

Colborne.

Messrs Scharfe & Durst are doing good work, and plenty of it, with their new Decker thresher.

Hullett.

Mrs John D. Kelly, of 3rd con., and her son, T. S. Kelly, have returned from Houghton, Michigan, where they had been visiting for some time. The former's daughter, Mrs Wm Cullyford, and her daughter, accompanied them home. The healthful breezes from Lake Superior seem to have agreed with them.

Death has been busy in our midst within the last ten days. Miss Ellen, daughter of Chris. Dale, Huron Road, died recently, also Thos. Brown, of the 6th, a native of Cork, for about 40 years a resident of the township, and John Thompson, of gravel road. And on Friday night Mrs Geo. Westcott died very suddenly, aged 54. She had performed her ordinary duties during the day without any apparent ailment.

A meeting of the municipal council of the township of Hullett was held at Kinburn on the 31st Aug., 1886. All the members present except the reeve. Minutes of former meeting read and confirmed. Taxes levied for the present year as follows:—For county purposes, two mills on the dollar, for township purposes, one mill and four tenths of a mill on the dollar, and in addition the sums required by the respective school corporations. Council adjourned to meet again at Lonsdale on Tuesday, when called by the reeve. Jas. Braithwaite, tp. clerk.

A fatal accident occurred to Mr James Brownlee, of the Bose Line, on Tuesday morning, 7th August. He was looking after the cows when he was attacked by a bull and fatally gored. No one saw the occurrence. When found he was partly under a fence where he had crawled to get out of the way of the enraged animal. His hat was found some distance from the fence. Deceased was 67 years of age, an old and respected resident of the township. He has several brothers living, one of whom is Mr Robt. Brownlee, of Blyth. He leaves a widow and four grown up sons and five daughters.

"THEY MIXED THOSE BARRIES UP."—This occurred at the R. C. picnic in Ingersoll on Tuesday. But what could be expected when Father Flannery, with his inimitable drollery, selected as judges a handsome young Ingersoll widow, a pretty and accomplished young lady and, horrors, a Woodstock bachelor? Who can wonder that the prize twins have proved not to be mates, the winning Irish-born baby a Scotch-Canadian half-breed, and, worst of all, the last prize boy baby to be a pretty, but precocious little miss?

Colborne.

Moses Dickson, of Brucefield, is visiting relatives here this week.

A little girl named Lizzie Horton, youngest child of John Horton, broke her arm by a fall one day last week. She is now doing well.

Weekly prayer meetings are now to be held in the Presbyterian church. The first of the series was held last week, and was fairly attended. Rev John McGilivray is being assisted at these meetings by some of the young people of the church.

TEA MEETING.—A picnic and tea-meeting under the auspices of the Presbyterian church will be held on Thursday next, 16th inst. In the afternoon there will be games and sports, and in the evening, at the tea-meeting, addresses will be delivered by Kera, W. Johnston, Salton, Dr Ure and J. McGilivray. The church choir will furnish appropriate music. Admission 25 cts.

They are Desperate.—The Government have determined to carry Haldimand; or perhaps they will succeed. It is a by-election and every power of the Government, including the newly-made Indian voters, will be brought to bear. It will be strange indeed if they do not succeed. But, as is not improbable, that success raises the cry of Protestant and Catholic throughout the country, as Sir John is trying to do, then the English of Lower Canada, the business men through the country, will have little to thank him for. He will do more in one act to retard the progress of the country than he has done in ten years to forward it.—(Montreal Herald).
