PREACHERS AND PUBLICITY

We wonder how many preachers realize that a large measure of publicity given to their utterances in the daily press is, more often than not, an unending liability that what they have said conveys little sense, much nonsense or something that is merely startling. An able newspaper man, writing in the last issue of The University Magazine, declares that readers of newspapers, as such, are interested in religion only when they are fighting.

There is a large measure of truth in the statement. Many may be interested in religion, but few will wish to read sermons at the breakfast table or immediately after dinner. Men of culture frequently derive enjoyment from attendance at a circus, but culture would not detract from their resentment if select readings from the papers were substituted for the performance of the circus.

The function of the newspaper is, of course, the same as that of the circus. To the great majority of readers, however, the news columns of the daily journal are, to quote Mr. Sandwell in the article referred to, "the gossip of yesterday." It is because of this fact that the good sermon, in which the most inspiring utterance is given without the most profound truths, is seldom "good copy." Let the minister of the gospel, however, declare that all the sins and sorrows of humanity are traceable to cigarettes or that the morals of the race are on the decline owing to the prevalence of the bubble skirt, and his ignorance, stupidity or desire for self-advertisement will receive its reward in a "heave head."

A number of prominent preachers in some of the Eastern American cities were recently interviewed on the subject of the prevailing fashions in women's dress and made solemn deliverances in which they declared that the immorality of those fashions was responsible for a visible moral decline among the people of this continent. Needless to say, their statements received the widest publicity, not because of any truth, profound or superficial, in the opinions expressed, but merely because a preacher is expected to be shocked at a bubble skirt and because people enjoy watching a person who is shocked, especially if that person happens to be a preacher. If any of these men had said something worth while on a subject that was vital to religion it would not have found its way so easily into the columns of the newspaper.

We would not wish to curtail the supply of "good copy," but would commend to the ministers of the truth that wide publicity in the press does not necessarily imply the successful performance of the duties imposed upon the men in the pulpit. Dean Swift is credited with a somewhat cynical utterance in which there is perhaps more truth to-day than at the time when it was delivered. A friend who had been offered the charge of a big London church asked his advice before deciding whether to accept. "Don't," was the response. "You will become a popular preacher and go to jail." We do not remember that it was recorded whether the advice was accepted.

GREAT BRITAIN'S TRADE POSITION

Pessimistic protectionist journals are continually making the assertion that by the continuance of a free trade policy, the trade of Great Britain is being ruined by competition with protected countries.

The facts, however, show that British trade is increasing year by year and that there is very little inclination on the part of the British people to adopt a protective policy. It was free trade that developed British trade and it is free trade that is maintaining it in the ascendancy.

Commenting on this question, The Winnipeg Free Press says: "Advocates of high protection in Canada are perpetually worried by the refusal of Great Britain, to date, to abandon its system of free imports. If they were wise, they would base their argument for protection in Canada upon local and peculiar conditions, paying due regard to John

Stuart Mill's celebrated exception to his advocacy of free trade; and concede that under the differing conditions prevailing in England there may be something to say for freedom of exchange.

The contention is that while free trade was an advantage for Great Britain before Germany, the United States and other countries inaugurated their tariffs, the advantage disappeared giving way to a serious handicap, the moment those countries adopted protection. "With the remarkable development," says our contemporary, "of Germany and the United States and the adoption of those countries of a system of high protection, British industry, even in lines where it had been regarded as unassailable, began to decline."

The whole argument, as will be noticed, is based on the assumption that British industry is bound to decline. This statement is untrue. The English newspapers giving the trade returns for 1911 have just reached Winnipeg. These returns speak for themselves. "Record Trade Year," "All-round increase in 1911," are respectively the heading and sub-heading in the report of The London Standard of July 23 last. The Standard, by the way, being a good Conservative and protectionist newspaper. Immediately below follows this paragraph: "Statistics issued by the board of trade show that for all branches of our foreign trade the volume of trade in 1911 was the greatest ever recorded, exceeding that of both 1910 and 1907, the two earlier years of maximum trade."

"This appears to be a fairly good record for a year which contained two of the biggest strikes in the industrial history of any nation. Further down in The Standard's report we read: 'In all branches the volume of trade was greater in 1911 than in 1910, and for imports, re-exports, and net imports the increase of volume was identical, amounting to 3.1 per cent. in each case. For exports the increase amounted to 3.9 per cent.' It will thus be seen that there was a greater increase in the exports than in the imports.

"The Statesman's Year Book for 1912 gives the total exports for 1911 of the United Kingdom, Germany and the United States as follows:—United Kingdom, $2,785,016,000; Germany, $2,025,450,000; United States, $2,013,545,000. On a per capita basis the showing in favor of Great Britain is still more marked. Is this what the organ means by the statement that 'Great Britain under a policy of free imports has had to yield to Germany and the United States supremacy in almost every industrial enterprise except that of shipbuilding?'"

"There is much evidence to support the contention that the adoption by other nations of high tariffs, so far from injuring British commerce has helped it. A protective tariff almost inevitably increases the cost of production and while it creates some industries it may also ruin others, as it ruined the ocean shipbuilding industry of the United States. Great Britain, remaining a free trade nation, has had a constant advantage in the neutral markets of the world, owing to the cheapness of her goods. She has also the additional advantage that all over the world, through free trade, she gets most favored-nation treatment for her goods."

"As an illustration of the supremacy of Great Britain in neutral markets let us take the two markets of India and China, where all nations are on an absolutely equal footing as regards tariff treatment. From the Statesman's Year Book we find that whereas the United Kingdom exported to India in 1910-11 goods to the value of $203,408,000, Germany in the same year exported to India goods to the value of $17,182,000 and the United States goods to the value of $11,582,000. The figures for China also show a marked supremacy in the commerce of Britain, the latest figures given by the Statesman's Year Book being—United Kingdom, $61,376,000; United States, $19,870,000; and Germany, $16,618,000."

EDITORIAL NOTES

Making capital of the presence in the city of the medical men's convention, the wit of The Edmonton Journal says: "For the present week we are prepared to plead guilty to the familiar Calgary charge that the Edmonton population figures are doctored." We would suggest that when, in future attention is given to this failing Edmonton should know better how to take its medicine.

"What are our moral reform societies going to do about it?" asks an excited correspondent in The Toronto Star, shocked by the report that an alderman in an open meeting of the council had offered to back an assertion by betting a new hat. He is apparently unaware that one of the officials of a moral reform society, the Rev. Wm. Rochester, recently offered to back with a thousand dollars assertions which he made in controversy with a Seventh Day Adventist.

The German Emperor, who once boasted that he was the senior partner in an alliance, offensive and defensive, with the Supreme Being, is reported to be of the opinion that the most seek further assistance elsewhere before he can hope to be successful in a war with Great Britain while that country has the support of Col. Sam Hughes.

Judging from the speeches being delivered by the Canadian Minister of Militia in the West, the story "How Bill Adams Won the Battle of Waterloo" will be a tame affair compared with that which the historians will relate when they tell "How Colonel the Honorable Sam saved the British Empire."

CALGARY COMMITTEE INVESTIGATES SCHOOLS OF MANY WESTERN CITIES; MAKES REPORT

Everywhere Received With Courtesy and Given Every Opportunity to Study Systems; Technical Schools of Seattle the Best Visited

DECLARING that "Manual Training, Household Science, Drawing, and Technical work generally, must form the more and more important part in the education of our future citizens," probably the most comprehensive report on schools in the history of Calgary was presented to the school board Tuesday by the committee appointed to visit and report on the facilities of technical education in Western American and Canadian cities.

A special meeting of the board will be held in the near future to consider the report which covers 39 closely typewritten pages.

The committee was composed of Messrs. R. J. Hetching, R. S. Kinner, and H. McClelland, and the thoroughness of their observations is revealed by the detailed nature of the report covering practically every branch of school work. The cities visited included Spokane, Wash., Portland, Ore., Seattle, Wash., Victoria, and Vancouver, B.C.

Manual Training Important. In all of these cities the visitors were received with the utmost courtesy and given every facility to inform themselves. They found without exception that the manual training and technical work is occupying the most interested attention of foremost educators of the day.

The report says that "Seattle, Wash. presents altogether perhaps the best example of modern ideas of education." Among other things the board noted at new high school under construction in that city was a novel feature in the form of a typical plant dwellings completely furnished for use in household science teaching.

The first city visited by the committee was Spokane, Wash., where the new Lewis and Clark high school was the result of the visit. The board found that six courses were offered at this school, including Domestic Science (Manual Arts, girls), Scientific, Commercial, Manual Training (Manual Arts, boys), Classical, Latin, Literary, French or German.

Laboratories Well Equipped. The laboratories in the school include the following: "Biographical laboratory, chemistry laboratory, both of which the report describes in detail; there are also the Fine Arts room, Physical Geography, Physics laboratory, Household Science, Mechanical Arts, and the Calgary investigators describe fully the appliances and the equipment used in these important departments. Drawing, mechanical department, study rooms, are all described, illustrating the thorough manner in which the report is prepared.

"A very interesting feature," says the report of the committee on the Spokane school, "was the cafeteria in the basement under the assembly hall. The cafeteria is run on a cost basis by a committee of teachers. Seating capacity 400 but would hold more tables easily. The staff includes a head cook, 115 weekly and usually two assistants at $10. Student waiters and assistants get their lunch free. For ten cents any three things on the menu may be had. Soup, sandwiches, pastry, fruit, ice cream and milk chocolate, milk and cocoa sold at cost. No gymnasium is provided in the building. The school is in the administration building alongside it. The corridors and staircases in the building were found to be exceptionally clean, bright, and well lighted. The appointments, marble parkings and nickle-plated fittings used throughout, floors of tile."

Evening Classes a Feature. Another section of the report describes the Spokane evening classes on general lines and also classes in English for foreign born citizens. Industrial work in the elementary school is also touched upon and a full description given on the special school administration building maintained on the Campus of the Lewis and Clark High School. The report even discusses the question of janitors, and in closing on the Spokane schools quotes the superintendent of school of that city as saying:

"There is an unmistakable tendency throughout the country, as well as the world at large, toward an extension of manual training in the schools, even to the extent of eliminating or abbreviating some of the literary courses. There seems to be practical agreement that, below the high school level, the hand work should take the specific vocational training, or be directed toward the acquisition of a trade, or be confined to all courses, or confined to specific manual arts courses; whether it should be carried on in all high schools of the city or in separate buildings equipped for that work.

Portland Schools Described. Proceeding to Portland, the committee describes in detail the organization of that city. High school courses are described, and a visit was paid to the Jefferson high school, typical of Portland High schools. The building is about three years old, cost $300,000, without equipment, contains 60 rooms, laboratories and store rooms. All features of the school are described in the report including biological laboratories, chemical laboratories, physical laboratories, physical geography, including mineralogy, weather problems, etc., botany, arts room, sewing, cooking, manual training, commercial art, library, cloak rooms, and the cafeteria with an ice cream system. Boys and girls lunch in separate rooms, kitchen between.

The new Lincoln High School in Portland is described in a similar manner. The main corridor of this school is 18 feet wide and cross corridor is 18 feet wide. Dined with individual steel lockers, toilet room provided next to each locker room. One whole side of the basement is taken up by lunch rooms.

Calgary Ahead in Grade Schools. Two modern elementary schools were visited and the report states that "Portland is best in Calgary in that cooking is yet given in grade schools and drawing only in the first four grades."

The School of Trades in Portland is described as "the only technical school which is devoted purely to trade training. The school is five years old and is housed in a building formerly used for a grade school. In the Calgary report which closes with the statement that "the school is evidently fulfilling its purpose and we were informed that its system of work is likely to be copied in other countries."

The girls' courses in the purely trade school include millinery, dressmaking, tailoring, sewing and cooking. The boys' courses include plumbing, steam-fitting, pattern making, carpentry, machine shop, electrical construction, mechanical drawing, moulding and foundry work, architectural, drafting and mechanical drafting.

High School Enrollment. Preliminary to the report on the Seattle schools, the committee's report states that the city's population is about 240,000 and the high school enrollment is the highest in proportion to the population in the United States, giving high school courses, five of which are definite high schools. Handwriting is taught in many forms in the Seattle schools. Beginning with the youngest pupils, some Kindergarten are in operation and more are to be provided to cover the whole city. Drawing and construction are coordinated under one man, a woman supervisor having charge of the work up to the fifth grade. Boys and girls do similar work up to the sixth grade. Girls then take sewing under their own teacher and boys take shop work at the centers. Coping saw work is given in Grade IV, and cardboard construction objects, in Grade V. The superintendent said that Seattle business men take great interest in this side of school work and offer prizes but the board holds off from accepting them. An exceedingly important departure, the Calgary committee found, was the provision for industrial classes of "preparatory" schools. These are open to any pupil who has passed the first grade or is 13 years old. Half the time is devoted to industrial work. At present three centers, one for boys and 72 girls are in attendance. The academic course is a modified grammar course and the schools are open at the top so that the pupils will get into the high schools if they wish.

Schools for Feeble Minded. Departments known as "special" schools are maintained for feeble-minded pupils, ten or twelve being admitted. The teacher and student appropriate five times as much grant per diem as for normal children. City medical specialists give their services. The feeble-minded are employed in commercial and the state university psychology holds clinics at school and makes use of numerous kinds of apparatus. A teacher also is employed in each school building to look after backward children. The city also maintains a school for deaf and dumb children, and evening classes.

The committee's report then gives a detailed description of the big broad-avenue high school where much valuable information was obtained. Among other points, the report says: "A feature of this school was a large canteen for the students and stationary. Everything is provided for pupils free. Science laboratories are very fine and complete in zoology, botany, physics, chemistry and physical geography. Food very cheap, five cents usually giving enough for lunch. Soup and fruit are extra. The report also gives much space to the manual training features at the school which are on a most elaborate scale."

HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY

A 3 Day Shower in Pretty Waists at Values Worth Hurrying After

WOMEN won't be able to measure the full extent of their great good fortune until they have seen for themselves what splendid values these really represent, and how charming and varied the effects. Then qualities, too, are up to the usual high standard of this store.

The reason for this sensational sale? Here's the story in a nutshell. When manufacturers have anything big and extra special they naturally turn to the store in a position to handle big things. These came to us from one of the largest American makers at a very special price concession. First, because we took the entire lot, some 75 dozen; secondly, because we made a spot cash deal.

It's one of the most important events Calgary women have heard of in months and we expect record selling just as long as quantities last.

AT $1.25—12 distinct and attractive styles in this lot, consisting principally of neat tailored shirts with soft tailored collars and turn-over cuffs, some with small pocket, others plain tucked; splendid quality materials of linen, vesting, cotton crepe, flaxon and crossbar muslins, in plain white, fancy white, black and white stripes and colored stripes and two styles fine white lawn, embroidery and crochet button trimmings, fastened down front. A complete range of sizes. Three Day Sale $1.25

AT $1.50—This lot involves a variety of nine pretty styles, all in neat tailored shirt effects, with the new soft tailored collar and turn-back cuffs, nearly all with small pocket and plain set-in sleeve; materials of fine stripe silk and linen, in blue and white, black and white, fine gray and black stripe silk; plain white silk Japanese with colored stripe, tan silk Japanese and plain white linen, all sizes. 3 Day Sale $1.50

AT $2.50—This collection includes about 10 dozen plain white Japanese Silk Waists, of splendid quality, in strictly tailored styles with soft tailored collars and cuffs, set-in sleeves, small pocket on left and neatly trimmed with pearl buttons. These are beautifully made and finished after the most accepted styles and would be considered good value at twice this special price. A complete range of sizes. 3 Day Sale $2.50

Today and tomorrow you can choose from among our entire stock of Ladies' Wash Skirts at remarkable savings. But don't judge the value by the price—the price comparison does not tell the whole story—not by any manner of means. These are splendid quality skirts and represent the best of value at their original figures. But we must make room for fall arrivals now on the way.

White and Colored Wash Skirts, in white Indian head, imported repp, Holland linen, natural colored button, black and white and blue and white spot. Our entire stock included. Victoria's Schools Visited. Victoria, B.C. schools, the next visited, also are described in detail. Among other things, the report says: "Victoria has had manual training also in its elementary schools for some years, but no high school work in these lines has yet been started. A large new high school, in heavy construction, cost $380,000 and provision will be made in it for modern methods and subjects of instruction."

"We visited several of the manual training and household science centres. Most of these are housed in separate buildings on the school grounds in the style of the English manual training and cookery schools. The manual training is carried on almost wholly on the same line adopted at the introduction of the subject by the Macdonald and twelve years ago. The household science, however, is thoroughly up to date.

Dr. Robinson, superintendent of education for the province of British Columbia, informed the committee that manual training and household science are on the eve of great developments in the province, the government being convinced of the great value of these forms of education.

Vancouver Schools Make Progress. At Vancouver, B.C., the committee were impressed with the progress of school work in that city, particularly along manual training lines. The medical department is an important one, a medical officer devoting his entire time to the work, a second physician devoting his mornings and a nurse her mornings to the work.

Two high schools have fairly full equipment for woodwork, cold metal work and household science arts and crafts and general science laboratories. The superintendent informed the committee that they may some day have a technical school but he is a firm believer in the means of manual training for all high school students.

A manual training room is provided in every elementary school and a partnership science room in about every second school.

The Britannia high school is described in detail, and it is stated that "the school is being greatly enlarged by the addition of laboratories, workshops and gymnasium."

With reference to playgrounds, the report says: "We inquired into the matter and found that the Vancouver playgrounds were at first under a body composed of some school trustees, some members of the city parks board and one or two other bodies. The playgrounds were at first under a body composed of some school trustees, some members of the city parks board and one or two other bodies. The playgrounds were at first under a body composed of some school trustees, some members of the city parks board and one or two other bodies."

At present, the parks board maintains the several playgrounds each equipped with about $1,000 worth of apparatus. The Vancouver playgrounds were at first under a body composed of some school trustees, some members of the city parks board and one or two other bodies. Both Have Words of Praise for the Wonderful Domain of the West

J. S. Willson, editor-in-chief of the Toronto News, and Hon. W. J. Hanna, K.C., provincial secretary of the province of Ontario, were the guests of honor at a luncheon given at noon yesterday by the Canadian Club in the basement of the Central Methodist Church. Hon. Mr. Hanna's address dwelt largely on the wonderful agricultural possibilities of Alberta. He emphasized the need of consistent, systematic aid by the province to develop agriculture to its full possibilities. Mr. Hanna gave an especially interesting description of agents in Ontario in teaching the farmers the best way to handle crops. The result has been that farms which were producing $1,500 or $1,600 in crops a few years ago are producing as many thousands of dollars now, and the land has accordingly enhanced in value.

Mr. Willson entertained the members with a brilliant talk, among other things declaring that no more farms should be permitted to take his out in the Canadian house until he had taken a trip west and become acquainted with the immense possibilities and views of this part of the country. He also dwelt on the important effect that the opening of the Panama

CUPID'S KNOTS

GRAHAM-McLAUGHLIN.

The marriage was quietly solemnized yesterday at Crescent Heights parsonage, by William F. Graham and Edith Gertrude McLaughlin, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. McLaughlin of Calgary.

The Rev. J. B. Francis performed the ceremony. After a trip to the mountains, Mr. and Mrs. Graham will reside at 406 Sixth street west.

CARSON-GLANVILLE.

Knox Church was crowded yesterday, the occasion being the marriage of Mr. John Macaulay Carson and Miss Jessie Eleanor Frisken Glanville, the youngest daughter of J. F. Glanville, and the prettiest girl in Calgary. The marriage took place at five-thirty in the evening, Rev. J. A. Clarke being the officiating clergyman.

To the strains of the Wedding March, played by Mr. Frank Wiley, the beautiful bride entered the church on her father's arm. She was attired in a tailored suit of cream serge and a large cream hat with purple pansy crown. She wore a corsage bouquet of purple pansies and white sweet peas and carried a German silver mesh purse. During the ceremony the choir sang "The voice that breathed 'E Eden." The bride and groom were unattended.

The church was beautifully decorated for the event, pink and white roses and marguerites being used profusely. The altar and choir stalls were a bower of palms and ferns. The only guests were the immediate relatives of the bride. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Lowry, aunt and uncle of the bride (Lodge), and Mrs. Alley, of Fort Frances.

Mrs. Glanville, mother of the bride, chose an elegant gown of gold satin charmeuse, with shadow lace and gold embroidered trimmings, and a large white willow plumed hat, white Mrs. Alley, the bride's sister, wore a modest gown of blue tulle with over-dress of embroidered white marquisette and a large white hat.

Mr. and Mrs. Carson left immediately after the ceremony on the west-bound train, and on their return will live in Calgary.

Mrs. Carson was born in Calgary, and is one of the most popular girls in the city.

"She has been a member of Knox Church choir for several years, and the members, in appreciation of her faithful work, presented her with a beautiful engraved silver filled form basket."

TO HAVE CLEAR SKIN

A French physician says the woman who would have a beautiful complexion must live healthily, eat rich meats, greasy soups, too much game, heavy wines and highly seasoned food. Wealthy people who live highly and dress improperly often have fine features, which are marred by a miserable complexion. Women in the middle class of life, who live more simply and eat plainer and simpler and more wholesome food, often have much finer complexions, and do not seem to grow old and faded so soon. Their habit of going to bed early and getting up early and getting the health-giving morning air, also makes a fresher, clearer complexion.

One cannot eat and dress as one would please, regardless of the rules of health, and have a pretty complexion. One must live as nature says is best. If they wish to be beautiful and healthy, they should eat carrots, are very good for the complexion, and if properly cooked they are very good to eat.

LADY CHANNING

The Illustrated London News has the following sketch of Lady Channing, an American girl who was one of the pretty princesses in the King's recent celebration.

"Lady Channing is the wife of Sir Francis Alton Channing, and the first husband of his line—having been created in 1906. She was the daughter of Mr. Henry Bryant, of Boston and Co. and the first descendant of the old Counts of Vermandois, and was married in 1889."

BAKED APPLE

The baked apple makes one of the most convenient, reliable, and highly excellent desserts, and is equally good as a side dish to be served with meat.

To bake fine tart cooking apples, wash, stem and core them, and slice them in half. Dip them in a little water, and then in a little sugar, and then in a little butter. Bake them in a moderate oven for about an hour.

GOOD SUMMER DRINKS

For afternoon bridge parties, or any sort of gathering of either old or young, whether it takes place in the afternoon or evening, a cold drink forms the most important part of the refreshments, even if it consists simply of a glass of iced tea, offered to the friend who drops in informally.

Something a little out of the ordinary, if needed, is a summer drink is always greatly appreciated by thirsty guests, and while most of the following recipes are very easy to make, many of them will be found to possess the charm of novelty. Most of these drinks are strictly temperance with the exception of the first recipe for a simple claret cup, and even in this grape juice can be substituted if desired.

Sugar Syrup.—A sugar syrup is essential in all iced drinks if one wants to get the real fruit flavor, unless the fruit is allowed to stand for several hours before serving to allow the sugar to melt properly. It can be made by boiling two cups of sugar with two cups of water for ten minutes. If kept in a cool place this syrup will keep for some time.

Claret Cup.—Reserve one cup of raspberries from a box and crush the remainder, add 1 1/2 cups of sugar and 1/2 cup of water. Boil for five minutes, then strain and add the juice of one orange and four lemons, with a little sugar, if needed. Add half a tumbler full of claret and two wine glasses of champagne. Serve in a chilled glass with ice and a sprig of mint.

Watermelon.—Cut a watermelon into a large cube, and cut it into small pieces. Add a little sugar and a little lemon juice, and serve in a chilled glass with ice and a sprig of mint.

CUPID'S KNOTS

GRAHAM-McLAUGHLIN.

The marriage was quietly solemnized yesterday at Crescent Heights parsonage, by William F. Graham and Edith Gertrude McLaughlin, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. McLaughlin of Calgary.

THE PARSNIP

The wholesome parsnip is generally an unappreciated vegetable. Some of the most delicious dishes devoted entirely to vegetables have been prepared for the cooking of parsnips. But the parsnip is not only a vegetable, it is a fruit, and it is a fruit of the parsnip's sphere of usefulness.

One of the particular and dainty dishes made from this vegetable was perhaps devised by them—scalloped parsnips. These are made by cutting the parsnip into thin slices, and cooking them with enough milk and butter and cream to make a rich sauce. The parsnip is a vegetable of the parsnip's sphere of usefulness.

Coming Events

The choir of Westbourne Baptist church will give a social tonight at the church, corner Thirteenth avenue and Fourth street east. There will be a silver collection taken.

Women's Canadian Club.

Mrs. Creighton, the clever English lecturer, who is to visit Calgary this week, will address the Calgary branch of the Women's Canadian club on Friday, Aug. 16, at 4 p.m., in the lecture room of the public library.

Mrs. Creighton is an eloquent speaker, and the ladies of the club are fortunate in obtaining such a lecturer. The subject of her address will be "Topics of Fundamental Interest to Women."

PRESERVED ANTIQUITIES

In one of the apartments at University College, London, Prof. Pfunders Petrie has placed an exhibition some remarkably interesting antiquities unearthed at Tarkhan, Heltopolis, and Memphis, under the auspices of the British School of Archaeology in Egypt.

What was struck Prof. Petrie is the extraordinary preservation of the wood work and clothing unearthed from these places of interest of long ago. A great sheet of linen, which is placed on exhibit, is as fresh and as firm as when cut from the original length, and which in but few instances shows signs of decay.

Heart Deatment

Laura Jean Libbey.

Would They Be Happy?

"Dear Miss Libbey: He is 24, parents German, both living. His mother is a home lover, with no small social life; lives for her family alone. His father is a dull, smoking, drinking, saloon patronizing man—associates of low moral tone. Both parents instruct their children in good morals, but permit Sabbath breaking and drinking."

"He was raised as a farm laborer. Since manhood he has been in heavy and milling business, and now is a trader in live stock, agricultural products, etc. He has laid up $2,000, is industrious, hard working, ambitious and proud. He patronizes saloons occasionally, has been drunk, is profane, uneducated, with no ambition for self-education. His reading is confined to novels and papers. He has no social life and is uninteresting in conversation. Young people do not like him, so he has few associates. Just now for her, he attends church. He has lied to her about drinking."

"She, same age, parents American. Her mother, who died four years ago, was an exemplary woman, high in esteem of rich and poor, and was active in social and church life. She strictly temperate, abhors tobacco, drinking, and profanity, is an active member of the church, and is fast becoming like her mother. Socially and morally she has a high place in the esteem of young and old. She dances at private parties and plays cards, had ten years of education in common and finishing schools, and has travelled all over the states and old Mexico. She has all the money she wants for dress, pleasure, travel and other luxuries. She loves the better class churches and opera, does charity and church work, has high ideals and principles, and is a broad hearted, unselfish person."

"She admits he has lied to her, and that he is at least one stage below her. Six months ago she ridiculed the idea of leaving him, but now seems infatuated. She is ashamed of his illiterate, unrefined ways and his parents. Her friends and relatives are surprised she loves him. She has an idea of building him up to her standards."

"Are they suited for permanent happiness?"

HER FATHER

I think the girl would make a mistake in contracting such a marriage. However, there are cases where such marriages turned out all right. Personally, I feel that the girl is taking a great chance, and while she is a daughter of mine I would do everything possible to dissuade her from the marriage. Criticizing the fellow to her would not help matters. She will feel that she is bound to defend him, and such a course often drives a girl to instead of from a man. Try to have other young men of more desirable character at your home as much as possible. By contrast, she will eventually grow tired of him."

"A Poorly Bred Mother."

"Dear Miss Libbey: I was carefully reared in comfortable circumstances, among educated and refined people. My own studies and travel abroad have caused me to neglect matrimony. A year ago a kind of fate threw me into the company of an educated young lady of excellent character. Upon meeting the doctor, I learned that her father and mother and brothers and sisters are illiterate and unrefined. I must admit I do not enjoy their presence, but can one afford to forego the companionship of a good character because of a poorly bred mother? Could such a union produce happiness?"

"If you really love the girl the fact that her mother is illiterate does not count at all."

Said He Was Ill-Mannered.

"Dear Miss Libbey: I have been keeping company with a young lady about 18 for the last six months and am very fond of her. Last evening a friend and I stepped into the nickel show, and on going in we saw my girl and her mother. We sat down beside them, and, as they had my girl, they got up and left a few minutes after we came in. LONDON TIMES THINKS ASQUITH SHOULD NOT HAVE GONE TO IRELAND

Thinks He Should Not Have Displayed Himself in Chains to the Leaders of the Irish Party; Potato Blight in County Wexford

DUBLIN, Aug. 14.—Premier Asquith's visit to Ireland has stirred up a great deal of discussion. It appears to be a fixed idea with the Unionist newspapers of England that a British prime minister cannot come to Ireland to address an assembly of Irishmen without something which is derogatory to his office or without displaying himself "in chains" to the leaders of the Irish party.

It is clearly the honest opinion of the writer quoted that the fact that the great majority of the Irish people want home rule is of no account beside the fact that a small minority do not want it. It is his honest opinion that the Prime Minister who stands with the majority is guilty of a sort of treason to the British cause.

CARELESS SOLDIER TAKES HIS OWN LIFE

Berlin, Aug. 14.—A curious accident, which cost one soldier his life and by which four others were injured, two of them seriously, occurred yesterday on the artillery practice grounds at Kummerdort, some distance to the south of Berlin.

One of the men found a live projectile, and in defiance of the regulation which forbids the use of shells which have been loaded, the shell at once exploded, blowing the victim to pieces and scattering splinters of metal in all directions. The soldier to whose carelessness the accident was due was instantly torn to atoms and killed instantly.

THE CASE OF A PRIVATE DETECTIVE

BY DAVID CORNELL

3—The Hollister Jewel Robbery

THE STORY OF A MYSTERIOUS THEFT

(Copyright, 1912, by International Press Bureau.)

The news of the burglary had not been made public so, after introducing myself as a real estate man whom Col. Hollister had approached with a view of making extensive investments, I found no trouble in furthering my avowed mission—that of obtaining a confidential opinion on the state of the Bureau Detective Agency. The broker, Glavis by name, pulled his mustache and smiled easily.

"Cornell," said the manager to me, "you have had some experience in the burglary insurance line, but I guess you can handle the work. Go over and see what's up. And, say, Cornell, remember this, this agency is retained by the year by this insurance company. One of our big customers. Treat their work accordingly."

I found the offices of the Independent Company at a Forty-second street building not far from Fifth avenue. On presenting my card I was ushered at once into the private office of the vice president, Mr. Blaney. "All the man from the Bureau Agency?" said Mr. Blaney. "Cornell is the name? Ah, yes; glad they sent you, Mr. Cornell. We've heard something of your work. You've never handled any of our cases, have you?"

"Not any," I said. "Well, fortunately this isn't a complicated case, or at least we don't think it is. It's merely a case of the propriety of a policy holder's claim. A mere matter of form, almost. We always investigate all claims for payment, you know. Sometimes we are convinced that something is wrong; then we instruct your agency to find something for us to start a fight on. In this case, it isn't anything like that. In brief, Col. Malcolm F. Hollister, with us for $50,000, was robbed. There is scarcely the slightest possibility that there is anything wrong in the case. Col. Hollister is a fine, high-minded man, a gentleman of the old school. He has paid this company thousands of dollars in premiums for the last ten years and never presented a claim before this. We are all of the opinion that he will pay his claim in full, in due time. But—as a matter of form, you understand—we're sending you down to look the thing over. Being new to the city, but an expert in all our interests as well as the feelings of Col. Hollister and his family. Assure yourself that the burglary was committed, that Mrs. Hollister's jewelry was stolen, and report. That is the case."

That was enough, for before I had got through with it the Hollister case had developed into a case so sensational, so full of strange twists, that the Independent Burglary Insurance Company never dreamed of, that even today it is spoken of in the office of the agency as "the Hollister job." It was an investigation of the insurance company I went about the task in a way considerably different from that employed by the experienced investigators. I did not go to the scene of the robbery. The Hollister home lay up among the hills of Long Island on the sound. I had heard of it as a grand estate, the home of a man of great wealth—moderate for New York—could do in making complete a home. I had heard of Col. Hollister, too, in the same indirect way. He was a retired Major, had approximately 65 years old. His first wife had died many years before. Five years ago he had married again, the late taking for his bride Margaret Wyndering, the daughter of a prominent family for a brief space had won such distinction in Bernard Shaw's plays. There had been some opposition to the marriage, but the father of Col. Hollister's two grown sons by his first marriage, after the wedding this opposition was said to have simmered down until now report had it that Col. Hollister and his wife were happily at peace with all the world, especially including Hollister's two grown sons. I had seen pictures of both the Colonel and his young wife in the social sections of the papers. The Colonel was an ardent member of the Nassau Hunt Club, and Mrs. Hollister was credited with having developed a great interest in aviation. This served to keep them both in print often enough to make them comparatively well known.

Instead of repairing at once to this reputed ideal home of wealth and culture, I went down town. At the end of three hours' work I entered the office of the broker with whom Col. Hollister had been associated in business, and who now handled the old gentleman's investments. I was equipped with letters of introduction.

and then he cooled down, and at last he agreed to stay. I guess he had given in to her because she's had that bunch of show people out every Saturday since. And believe me, they have some times, then. One of them is her brother. A young fellow, great sport. After the rest of the bunch got out at night, he comes down here and has a few drinks with the bunch in the bar here. Great little fellow.

"After dinner went out and strolled down to the nearest saloon, and called up my friend in the book office in New York. Do you know anything about Mrs. Hollister's brother? He's a fellow with sporting tendencies?" I asked.

"Yes, I know of him, came the slow answer. "He's a little no-good. Tried to be an actor sometimes, and a press agent occasionally, and falls down on both jobs."

"What does he live on?" "Search me. He always has money. I've heard him at the Hollister sort of takes care of him. Don't leave it, though. The boy is a cheap, bright-light sport."

I went back to the hotel and sat one thing for you to do. Shut down on Mrs. Hollister. Don't let her handle a dollar. Otherwise you'll be selling that happy home of yours up on the Sound."

"And he shut down?" I asked. "Yes, yes. Closed down on her tight. For about a year she's had to go to the colonel for every cent she got, and believe me, sir, the colonel has been careful, very careful, indeed. O, yes, the colonel is safe as steel financially. Anything up to a million I should say."

Instead of going at once to the house I walked twice around the place string it up as if I were a burglar looking for a place to enter. One could hardly imagine a harder prospect from the burglar's point of view. The house was upon a bluff overlooking the Sound. All around it ran a red brick wall 12 feet high. On top of the wall were long iron spikes. On the side facing toward the Sound was the lodge of the boatman; in the opposite corner of the grounds was a small living house, evidently the home of the gardener, while in another corner were the stables and garage, with living quarters for coachman and chauffeur. To enter that house a burglar would have to scale the wall, or enter by the side of the three outlying houses, cross a long open space, and break into the house which obviously was well protected by the gardener's attention. I looked at the house the more I became interested. If a burglar had entered and stolen there, it would be a man whom it would be in the hands of the gardener, while in another corner were the stables and garage, with living quarters for coachman and chauffeur. To enter that house a burglar would have to scale the wall, or enter by the side of the three outlying houses, cross a long open space, and break into the house which obviously was well protected by the gardener's attention.

"I spent a long hour studying the house in the fashion, then I went back to the hotel and called up the agency to report for the day. Chief Burns himself answered my call. "Say, Cornell," he said, "Hollister had with the safe, but the insurance company asking why they don't send out an investigator to look up his claim. What's the matter?"

"I related all that I have here told. "The thing doesn't look right from the outside," said I. "That's why I'm not reporting at the Hollister house."

"The chief was silent for a moment. "Are you sure her brother was out there Saturday?" he asked. "That's the information I got here," I replied.

"Well," said he, "you go up to the house and report, and make your own investigation. Come back to your hotel for the evening. And for heaven's sake, don't do anything to make them think you may not believe things are all right."

"I ran down all the information I could score up in New York; then, next morning, I bought a ticket to the station on the Long Island Road, where the Hollister home was located. I arrived at the station, Sound-burst, near noon and registered at the little hotel in the village. The clerk at the hotel fined at my table and I led him to talk about the Hollister family. I was surprised to find that even there the news of the burglary had not become known, and the clerk did not hesitate in discussing the people who lived in the big house on the Sound. "I've got a cousin who takes care of their launches and boats," said he, "and I know about all that's going on up there. And I'll tell you, mister, those rich folk don't have so much smoother sailing than us poor ones. No, sir, they have their rows just like we do. Why, here two months ago this spring, Mrs. Hollister had some of her old theatrical friends out for a visit, and they were raising Ned out in one of the big launches, and Old Hollister came running out in a smaller launch and ordered the 'hole lot' of 'em back to shore. They had a merry row that night, him and her, and she was going to leave him, stairs, the window of the room also been opened, the jewel drawer had been forced and the jewels taken. "A plain case of robbery by someone who had studied the premises for a long time," said the colonel.

"The burglar's questions" to throw them off the scent, and in the meantime I took a careful look at that window. It was 30 feet from the ground in a flat wall. I looked at the marks on the frame; and then I nearly whistled in surprise. The marks were made by some clumsy round instrument not at all resembling the office of jimmy of the experienced burglar.

"An amateur's job," said I to myself. I looked more closely, and saw the marks of a flat wall. I looked at the marks on the frame; and then I nearly whistled in surprise. The marks were made by some clumsy round instrument not at all resembling the office of jimmy of the experienced burglar.

"I see that the man who did this job is an old experienced hand," I said, as I took my departure. "The signs of an old-timer's work are all over the job. I'm afraid we'll have a hard time recovering your jewels, Mr. Hollister, if you ever do."

As I said this I watched her closely and I thought that a slight look of relief seemed to flicker in her eyes; but instantly she began to lament. "O, I hope you do recover them. I never, never will be able to find such perfect stones in another set."

But all the time the impression was with me that this woman still was playing a part, still was acting. "Well, what did you find at the house?" I told him. I was rather proud of my work. He smiled.

"Cornell," said he, "I picked you out for this case because I know you've got patience for digging up details, and you've certainly made good. I want to tell you, however, that when this case comes in I had a hunch that we'd find something queer about it."

"Because," said he, "Mrs. Hollister's brother's reputation is no secret. 'What is it?' she demanded. 'Come to the house at once.' " "Good," said the chief. "I'll go with you."

It was night now, and at the Hollister home were ushered into the library by a maid. Presently Mrs. Hollister came in alone and closed the door behind her. "What is it?" she cried. "What has happened to my brother?"

"Don't be alarmed, Mrs. Hollister," I said. "Nothing has happened to him, and nothing will unless you wish it. It is all up to you."

"What is it?" she whispered. "O, what is it? Tell me!" "Mrs. Hollister," said the chief, "hasn't your brother been pressing you to give him large sums of money lately?"

Her eyes ran from one to the other of us, seeking to read what we knew. She wasn't acting now, and I felt sorry for her. "How do you know that?" she asked. "Isn't it a fact?" continued the chief. "The Colonel Hollister refused to give you any more money to give your brother?"

I called up Mrs. Hollister and asked if she would consent to see me alone without her husband's knowledge. "I cannot say over the phone, Mrs. Hollister," I replied. "But—it is about your brother."

"There was a silence of several seconds. Then came the answer: "Come to the house at once."

"Good," said the chief. "I'll go with you." It was night now, and at the Hollister home were ushered into the library by a maid. Presently Mrs. Hollister came in alone and closed the door behind her.

"What is it?" she cried. "What has happened to my brother?" "Don't be alarmed, Mrs. Hollister," I said. "Nothing has happened to him, and nothing will unless you wish it. It is all up to you."

While we were sitting thus a telephone call came for the chief. It was from Slavin, one of our men in this case. "Hollister is under shadow," was Slavin's report. "He's just reserved a birth on the Franconia, to sail tomorrow morning. He's sticking close to his room in the Delmont Hotel in the meantime."

"Don't lose sight of him on your trip, Slavin," said the chief, and rang off. "That about settles it," he said, turning to me. "Cornell, call up Mrs. Hollister, get her on the wire, and ask her if she will see you alone. If she asks why, tell her it's about her brother."

"But why?" I asked in bewilderment. "The chief smiled quizzically. "Why, because I happen to have a heart and a wife, Cornell," he said. "I see now how this thing is going to work out, and—and I want to spare Mrs. Hollister. Darn it, man, women are made queer. We'll give Mrs. Hollister a chance to save her brother."

She sank into a chair and sat staring at us in terror.

She sank into a chair and sat staring at us in terror. "Mrs. Hollister," said I as gently as I could, "when you saw me looking at that window didn't you see that I knew just as well as you did that no burglar ever had forced his way in there?"

"And don't you know that my suspicions naturally pointed to your brother?" "And just now we've learned that he's booked to sail on the Franconia in the morning."

"And Mrs. Hollister," said the chief with a gentleness I never had suspected him of, "we'd have to arrest your brother on suspicion if he attempts to sail—knowing what we do."

"What do you want me to do?" she cried suddenly, flinging out her arms. "Don't hurt that poor boy! What do you want me to do?"

I looked at the chief. "Mrs. Hollister," said he, "we are only engaged to investigate this case for the Independent Burglary Insurance Company. Our duty at present merely is to report that we do not advise the payment of your claim without further investigation. Then we will be instructed to continue our investigation at once. Which means that your duty would force us to take your brother into custody."

She thought it over for a few minutes. Then she went into the hall and called for her wraps and the big touring car. "Where are you going madame?" asked the maid. "I've got to run in to the Delmont Hotel," said Mrs. Hollister calmly. "I have an appointment there for this evening."

Late that night Col. Hollister called up Mr. Blaney of the Independent Burglary Insurance Company. "I saw," Blaney," said he, "drop that claim we presented for Mrs. Hollister's jewels. Luckiest thing in the world just happened. Mrs. Hollister's brother just came out to the house and took a walk down by the beach and found the jewel case with the stones all in it lying under a bunch of sand grass. Yes, yes; found them—all of them—yes, the burglars must have dropped them in making their escape—Yes; probably escaped in a motor boat up the sound—Yes, Smart boy, that Mrs. Hollister's made a great ado over the going to do something handsome for him—Yes; drop the claim completely. The jewels are back here safe in the house, and that's all we care for. Good night, Blaney good night."

A few days later the news of the attempted burglary of the Hollister home leaked out, and the newspapers made a great ado over the finding of the stolen jewels. But I wonder what they would have done had they known at the time that what I have told here is the real story of how the Hollister jewels did not disappear.

Tactful Request. Dobbleigh was a confirmed borrower, and what was worse, he seldom returned the borrowed articles. He had been borrowing Whibley's umbrella, for instance, for nearly a year. "And I'm beast if I know how I am ever going to get it back," said Whibley.

"Easy," said Hickenlooper. "Call a messenger and send Dobbleigh this note."

"And he scribbled off the following: "Dear Dobbleigh: If you can spare it I'd like to borrow that umbrella of yours for a couple of days. Can you oblige me?"—Harper's Weekly.

Not as Bad as He Feared. "I will be your Nemeses!" she hissed. "All right," he sneered. "I was afraid you might take advantage of the fact that this is leap year and insist on being something else."

Their Comparative Bulk. The latest Russian dancer to arrive for an American tour, Miss Piskovetschakakie, she will carry her wardrobe in a handbag and her name on three fatcats fastened together.

When Eyes Are Blacked. Benham—It is said that only one out of fifteen persons has both eyes in good condition. Mrs. Benham—I think the average is still smaller late Saturday night.

His Life Work. Is this an artist? Yes, that is what he calls himself. Is his studio beautiful? It is. Where did he get the money with which to buy beautiful things? From a rich uncle who died. Does the artist hold lovely afternoon receptions? He does. What is he painting? A picture. How long has he been painting the picture? About seven years. Will he ever finish it? NO!—Puck.

Dress for an Earthquake. An old lady was staying at a hotel at Nice at the time of the earthquake. "My dear," she was wont to say, "I was simply tumbled out of bed and the ceiling cracked. I threw on a dress and unconsciously pulled on one long black suede glove, and when I got down to the hall and found all the other guests—my dear, I was the best dressed woman there!"

...ING SESSION OF U. S. CONGRESS; LITTLE ACCOMPLISHED

WINE IN CHINESE REPUBLIC; THE SOUTH A SEETHING MASS OF REVISIONS

Notes Have Depreciated to Practically No Value; Those Who Possess the Means Are Leaving the Country; Deficit Budget $93,500,000

(By Edward Young)
The troubles of the new republic seem to be growing apace. Chinese patriots take a gloomy view of the outlook. According to one journal, administrative affairs are so chaotic that it is almost impossible to get a clear view of the situation. The government is a mass of confusion, and the people are suffering from the consequences. The deficit budget is a heavy burden, and the country is in a state of economic depression. The government is unable to pay its debts, and the value of its currency has depreciated to practically no value. Those who possess the means are leaving the country, and the country is in a state of social and economic chaos.

New Election Law.
Particulars given by a Pekin journal of the Chinese draft election law indicate that parliament is to consist of two assemblies—a senate and house of representatives. The term of the latter will be four years, and that of the senate six years, one-third of the senators retiring every two years. Each senator will have the right to be re-elected for one term only. The law provides for a system of proportional representation, and the franchise will be extended to all male citizens over 20 years of age who are not illiterate. The law also provides for a system of public education, and the government is to be responsible for the maintenance of schools and universities.

Teach Children the True Science of Life
Theories Advanced by Swedish Lady Doctor to Improve the Human Race
Los Angeles, Aug. 13.—If the human race is to improve instead of degenerate, the children must be taught the true science of life. This is the theory of Dr. G. G. Mellin, a Swedish lady doctor, who has written a book on the subject. She believes that the key to a better human race lies in the proper care and education of children. She advocates a system of natural living, and the use of natural foods and drinks. She also advocates a system of physical education, and the use of natural methods of treatment for disease. Her theories are based on the principles of natural science, and she believes that they will lead to a better and more healthy human race.

AN ENORMOUS DEFICIT.
The deficit in the budget last year is estimated at $47,000,000, but it is now estimated at $93,500,000. The government is unable to pay its debts, and the value of its currency has depreciated to practically no value. The country is in a state of economic depression, and the people are suffering from the consequences. The government is unable to pay its debts, and the value of its currency has depreciated to practically no value. The country is in a state of economic depression, and the people are suffering from the consequences.

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY.
With increased earning power and the ability to do better, it is the duty of every man to make the most of his opportunities. This is the theme of an autobiography by a successful businessman. He tells of his early life, his struggles, and his ultimate success. He shares his wisdom and experience with others, and encourages them to strive for excellence in their own lives. He believes that success is not a matter of chance, but of hard work and determination. He also emphasizes the importance of family and community, and the need for a strong moral foundation.

STREET CANS.
The city council has passed a resolution to install street cans in all public places. This is a measure to improve the cleanliness and safety of the city. The cans will be used to collect litter and debris, and will help to keep the streets clean and free of trash. The council also passed a resolution to increase the number of street cleaners, and to improve their working conditions. These measures are part of the city's efforts to create a better and more livable environment for its citizens.

DUCHESS OF SUTHERLAND SEEKS SIMPLE LIFE

Richest Woman in British Domains, Occasionally Retires to Quiet Cottage

London, Aug. 14.—The richest woman in British domains, the Duchess of Sutherland, is seeking a simple life. She has retired to a quiet cottage in the Scottish Highlands, where she enjoys the peace and beauty of the natural world. The Duchess is known for her philanthropic work and her love of the arts. She has a long and distinguished career, and has been a prominent figure in British society for many years. Her retirement to the Highlands is a sign of her desire for a more peaceful and quiet life.

OLD COWMAN DISCUSSES STAMPEDE.
The Old Cattleman's son ran lightly up the steps, nodded cheerily to us and disappeared in the house. The Old Cattleman, a man of great experience and wisdom, was discussing the recent cattle stampede. He told us of the dangers of the open range, and the importance of proper management. He also shared his own experiences and lessons learned from the stampede. He believed that the key to a successful cattle operation was a combination of hard work, good management, and a deep understanding of the land and its animals.

DUKE BELIEVES IN CANADA.
The Duke of Sutherland believes in Canada. He has spent a great deal of time in the country, and has been impressed by its natural beauty and the hospitality of its people. He has also been impressed by the progress and development of the country. He believes that Canada has a great future, and that it will continue to grow and prosper. He is a strong supporter of the Canadian cause, and he has done much to promote the interests of the country.

C. P. R. IS 2,000 LABORERS SHORT; NO HOPE OF RELIEF.
Montreal, Aug. 14.—There is a shortage of no fewer than 2,000 laborers on various parts of the C. P. R. system, and the company has no hope that the shortage will be supplied in the near future. The shortage is due to a combination of factors, including a general decline in the construction industry and a loss of experienced workers. The company is unable to attract new workers, and the situation is expected to worsen if no action is taken.

WANTS AD PROVERBS.
The Wants tell of chances for board and room. The Wants outline opportunities to buy and rent country places. There's a world of interest in the Want Columns for the workers. The Wants are an index of the needs of many individuals, businesses and homes. The Wants point to work in nearly every legitimate line of human endeavor. The Wants tell of chances for gainful transactions by selling and exchanging. People who fish for compliments don't get many bites. Never embarrass a friend by asking him what he thinks of you. There are days when we feel like writing a campaign song in self-defense.

THE MARKETS

Winnipeg Wheat Market.
Winnipeg, Aug. 14.—The volume of business in options on the wheat market today was very light and prices weaker. The opening figures were unchanged to 1-8 higher on the flour, continental and Liverpool cables, at opening were unchanged to 1-8 higher but later weakened, the local market following in sympathy. The cause of the lower figures was attributed to profit taking. Winnipeg closed 1-2c lower for Oct., 3-8c lower for December, and 1-4c lower for January and 1-4c lower for May. Chicago closed 1-2c lower for Sept., 3-4c lower for December and 3-8c lower for May. The market at Winnipeg was good and greatly in excess of the offerings with prices stronger. Oats and flax were weaker. Oats closed 1-4c lower and flax 1-2c lower. Receipts were light 25 cars only being in sight for inspection today. Chicago Grain Prices.
Chicago, Aug. 14.—Grain prices were weaker today, a factor in the decline being crop weather. Cash demand was feeble and stronger, the cables failing to hold the market. The close was generally steady on the lower grades, with wheat 1/4c to 3/8c off. Last trades left corn 3/4c to 1/2c lower, and oats 3-8c to 1/2c lower. Provisions advanced with a good demand, closing from 1/2c to 3/4c higher. Lack of buying was noticeable in the nearby futures, the force of the decline, price seemed slightly away from the low point in the last hour. The wheat market was reflected in corn, which was in demand, and oats 3-8c to 1/2c lower. The market was generally steady, with wheat 1/4c to 3/8c off. Last trades left corn 3/4c to 1/2c lower, and oats 3-8c to 1/2c lower. Provisions advanced with a good demand, closing from 1/2c to 3/4c higher.

Top Price for Beef.
Chicago, Aug. 14.—Steers reached the highest price ever paid on the Chicago exchange today when a load of Indiana fed Herefords sold at $10.50 a hundredweight. A number of steers were sold for $10.00 or better. This class of stock is now at the highest level ever reached here. Sellers are of the opinion that prime steers will reach $11 before their is any check. Chicago Live Stock. Chicago, Aug. 14.—Cattle receipts 20,000. Markets beavers strong. Cows higher. Others steady. 10c lower. Beavers $5.75 to $10.50. Texas steers $5.00 to $6.00. Western steers $4.00 to $5.00. Stockers and feeders $4.00 to $7.10. Cows and heifers $2.65 to $3.15. BRITISH HUMOR STIRS UP BERLIN POLICE.
Berlin, Aug. 14.—A party of thirty foreign students, said to be for the most part English, came into conflict with the Dresden police last night as the result of attempting to reproduce the German song the practical jests they were winking at in English university towns. One of them climbed the Bismarck statue and placed in the hands of the figure of the statesman a tankard full of beer. A policeman, who hurried up and wished to take the names of the revellers, was mobbed. His whistles were waved up in police reserves, who conveyed the students to the police station. One of them, who was seen to be an anti-noise society meeting with a brass band. When it comes to dispersing the joys of life, a losing ball team is almost equal to a sluggish liver.

EAST INDIAN WOMEN.
The Maharani of Baroda, the enlightened woman potentate of the east, says that if there were women teachers to teach "purdah" ladies the advantage of exhibitions and the methods of organizing them, dozens of exhibitions for the display of artistic and industrial work would spring up all over India. Her countrywomen, she points out, are already beginning to take a keen interest in these exhibitions. She thinks that it is especially important that the purdah ladies should be lecturers of their own sex to explain the displays and point out the economic and artistic possibilities. She hopes for the time to come, she is trying to ensure that it will come, when such operations as sugar-making, jaggery-making from the date palm tree, rose grass distillation for the manufacture of perfume, the working of the printing press, sericulture, the making of

Dear Sir:

Re policy 1605-11171.

Will say that I am very much pleased in the manner in which you are treating me and returning my note as per your letter of Aug. 5th, and will say that I am farming extensively in the Taber and Cardston district and next year should I insure my crop I will give your company the greater portion of my business, if not all.

I will also recommend inquiring friends to your company and let them know in the way I have been treated.

Yours truly
W. E. Bullock.

Well Known Citizens Aligned Views of H With Grain of Citizens Will Take No But Insist Comm Act Immedia

An effort to apolo- gize on his recent tri- umph, Sam Hughes yesterday afternoon pulled the honorable colonel a little effect that he thought that the govern- ment should be con- sidered for the prom- ising between eighth and ninth would form an ex- ception.

"In view of the fact that Trunk Pacific railway had bid this site for a railway, I will know, citizens of the city, the alleged views of a grain of salt. Ex- cept that the Grand Trunk Pacific had taken no public money to purchase it, there had been no reason to believe that the govern- ment should be con- sidered for the prom- ising between eighth and ninth would form an ex- ception.

"Whatever Colonel Hu- ghes' subject was, men in affairs in this city stand why the Colonel should have a few hours to stand should have stop- ping. The whole in- cident is peculiar and we should go before the com- mittee that some defini- tion be taken immediately to the subject.

"It is also pointed out that men cannot be in- formed in the Colonel's book at army sites. I have announced the day after that Col. Walker's offer for a few hours in twelve trains.
