"Oh, you need not look so wily-faced; I have no warrant for your arrest. I dare say you are as great a rogue as he, but the order says nothing about you. Don't swoon away; you are in no peril."

I was stung to be thought such a craven, but I pocketed the insult, and merely answered:

"I assure you, monsieur, I know naught of the matter. Yesterday I would have blurted out to him the whole truth; decidedly my experiences were teaching me something."

"Come now, I can't fool about here all day," he said impatiently. "Tell me where that precious master of yours is now. And be quicker about it than this old maid."

Maitre Menard, then, had told nothing—staunch old loyalist. He knew perfectly that M. le Comte had gone home, and they had throttled him, and yet he had not told. Well, he should not lose by it.

"Monsieur is about the streets somewhere. On my life, I know not where. But I know he will be back here to supper."

"Oh, you don't know, do you? Then perhaps Gaspard can quicken your memory."

At the word the soldier who had attended to Maitre Menard came over to me and said to myself that if I had talked like a dastard I was not one, and every time he let me speak I gasped. "I don't know." The room was black to me, and the sea roared in my ears, and I wondered what Maitre had done well to tell the lie. For

"Oh, M. Etienne!" I gasped, in agony that my pain had been for nothing. Now all was lost. Then the blur lifted, and my amazed eye beheld not my master, but—Lucas!

"How now, airah!" he cried to the dragon. "Hands off me, knave!" For the second soldier had seized his other arm.

"I regret to inconvenience monsieur," the captain answered, "but he is wanted at the Bastille."

"Wanted?!" Lucas cried, fear flashing into his eyes.

He felt an instant's terror. He remembered Mayenne had betrayed him. Quick as he was, he did not see that he had been taken for another man.

"You, monsieur. You are wanted for the murder of your man, Ponton."

He grew white, looking instinctively at me, remembering where I had been at three o'clock this morning.

"It is a lie! He let my service a month back and I have never seen him since."

"Tell that to the judges," the captain said, as he had said to me. "I am not trying you. The hands off me."

One of them produced a pair. Lucas struggled frantically in his captors' grasp. He dragged them from one end of the room to the other, calling down all the curses of Heaven upon them; but they snapped the handcuffs on for all that.

"If this is Mayenne's work," he panted.

The officer caught nothing but the name Mayenne.

"The boy said you were a friend to his Grace, monsieur, but orders are orders. I you make a mistake. On my sacred word, you mistake; this is not—"

"Get out!" cried the captain, helping him along with his boot. Maitre Menard fell rather than walked out of the door.

A gray line came over Lucas's face. His first fright had given way to fury at perceiving himself the victim of a mistake, but now alarm was born in his eyes again. Was it, after all, a mistake? This obtuse diabolical in his assertion, this ordering away of all who could swear to his identity—was it not rather a plot for his ruin? He swallowed hard once or twice, fear gripping his throat harder than ever the dragon's fangs had gripped mine. Certainly he was not the Comte de Mar; but then he was the man who had killed Ponton.

"If this is a plot against me, say so!" he cried. "If you have orders to arrest me, do so. But arrest me by the name of Paul de Lorraine, not of Etienne de Mar."

"The name of Etienne de Mar will do," the captain returned; "we have no fancy for aliases at the Bastille."

"It is a plot!" Lucas cried.

"It is a warrant; that is all I know about it."

"But I am not Comte de Mar," Lucas repeated.

His uneasy conscience had numbed his wit. In his dread of a plot he had done little to dissipate an error. But now he pulled himself together; error or intention, he would act as if he knew it must be so.

"My captain, you have made a mistake likely to cost you your shoulder-strap. I

Lucas gazed at him as if to tear out of him the truth of the matter. I think he was still a prey to suspicion of a plot in this, and it paralyzed his tongue. He so reeked with intrigue that he smelted one wherever he went. He was much too clever to believe that this arresting officer was simply thick-witted.

"I say no more," he cried. "You may spare yourself your lies, the whole crew of you. I go as your prisoner, out I go as Paul de Lorraine, son of Henry, Duke of Guise."

He said it with a certain superciliousness; but the young captain, bourgeois of the bourgeoisie, did not mean to let himself be put down by any sprig of the noblesse.

"Certainly, if it is any comfort to you," he retorted. "But you are very dull, monsieur, not to be aware that your identity is known perfectly to others besides your lackey here and my man. I did not come to arrest you without a minute description of you from M. de Belin himself."

Pale Faced Girls

Thousands Using Successful Cure For Paleness and Anaemia.

The pallid girl always lacks appetite. What little she eats is badly digested. At night she is restless, she does, but doesn't sleep soundly.

Vital force must be increased, new blood must be supplied and a general rebuilding take place before she will feel like aught.

Dr. Hamilton had invaluable experience in these cases and found nothing so prompt in building up the young women as his vegetable pills of Maudrak and Butternut.

D. Hamilton's Pills begin by cleansing the system and purifying the blood; they also improve digestion and render food ready for absorption. Additional nourishment is quickly supplied and the patient is fast strengthened and invigorated.

Full of spirit, ruddy and strong is the girl that assists her system by Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

The following recent letter from Miss Rita McEwen, of Halifax, speaks for itself:

"In using Dr. Hamilton's Pills I find my system is wonderfully built up. It is certainly the most effective remedy I ever used. I have now a good appetite, sleep more soundly and awaken in the morning feeling quite refreshed."

"Formerly I felt tired and depressed. I looked as if a severe illness was hanging over my head."

"Nothing could give quicker results than Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I strongly advise every young woman to use them."

All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box or five boxes for $1, by mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U. S. A. and Kingston, Ont.

AWFUL STREET CAR ACCIDENT

PROVIDENCE, June 3.—The most disastrous street railway wreck in the history of Rhode Island occurred early today, by which eleven people were killed and many others injured.

A heavy fifteen-seated open car, which had been chartered by a local Catholic society, was derailed at Moore's Corner. The track curves sharply at that point at the foot of a long grade. The motorman, who was not familiar with the road, was unaware of the curve and allowed the car to coast down the hill. When it reached the curve it jumped with such force that it was hurled into the road twenty feet from the track, where it fell on its side between a tree and a guide post. The list of dead and injured as far as known is as follows: George Atchison, 20 years, 26 Walnut street, Thornton (R. I.); Edward F. Kelley, 18 years, 1 Maple avenue, Thornton; John Schneider, 19 years, 24 Tuxedo avenue, Olneyville; Ethel Whitely, 19 years, 23 Marvin street, Providence.

"I could only choke and pant!"

Each I said that my master was in the Hotel St. Quentin, still these fellows would have found it no easy job to take him. Vagos might not be ready to defend Mille de Montic, but he would defend Monsieur's hair to the last gasp. Yet I would not yield before the choking Maitre Menard, and without and I stuck to my lie. Then I thought me, while the room wheeled about me and my head seemed like a burst, that perchance if they should keep me here a captive for M. le Comte's arrival he might really follow to see what had become of me. I turned sick with the fear of it, and resolved on the truth. But Gaspard's last guttural cry had robbed me of the power to speak. I could only pant and choke. As I struggled painfully for wind, the door was flung open before a tall young man in black. Through the haze that hung before my vision I saw the soldier seize him as he crossed the threshold. Through the noise of voices I heard the captain's cry of triumph.

have the warrant for your arrest from M. le Belin."

"At whose instigation?"

"How should I know? I am a soldier of the guard. I have naught to do with it but to arrest you."

"Let me see the warrant."

"I am not obliged to. But I will, though. It may quiet your bluster."

He took out the warrant and held it at a safe distance before Lucas's eyes. A great light broke in on that rascal's face.

"Mille sonneres! I am not the Comte de Mar!"

"Oh, you say that now, do you? Pity you had not thought of it sooner."

"But I am not the Comte de Mar! I am Paul de Lorraine, nephew to my Lord Mayenne."

"Why don't you say straight out that you're the Duc de Guise?"

"I am not the Duc de Guise," Lucas returned with dignity. He must have been cursing himself that he had not given his name sooner. "But I am his brother."

"You take me for a fool?"

"Aye, who still hang for his folly!"

"You must think me a fool," the captain repeated. "The Duke of Guise's eldest brother is but seventeen—"

"I did not say I was legitimate."

"Oh, you did not say that? You did not know, then, that I could read off the ages of every Lorraine of them all. No, M. de Mar, I am not so simple as you think. You will come along with me to the Bastille. If you have broken on the wheel for this," Lucas started. "I am no more Comte de Mar than I am King of Spain. Speak up, you old turncoat, he shouted to Maitre Menard. "Am I he?"

Poor Maitre Menard had dropped down on his iron box, too limp and sick to know what was going on. He only stared helplessly.

"Speak, rascal," Lucas cried. "Am I Comte de Mar?"

"No," the maitre answered in low, faltering tones. He was at the point of pain and fear. "No, monsieur officer, it is as he says. He is not the Comte de Mar."

"Who is he, then?"

"I know not," the maitre stammered. "He came here last night. But it is as he says—he is not the Comte de Mar."

"Take care, mine host," the officer retorted; "you're lying."

I could not wonder at him; if I had not been in a position to know otherwise, I had thought myself the maitre was lying.

"If you had spoken at first I might have believed you," the captain said, bestowing a kick on him. "Get out of here, old man, before I cram your lie down your throat. And clear your people away from this door. I'll not walk through a mob. Send every man Jack about his business, or it will be the worse for him. And every woman Jill too."

"M. le Capitaine," Maitre Menard quavered, rising unsteadily to his feet, tell you I am not Mar; the landlord, who knows him well, tells you I am not Mar. Ask those fellows M. de Mar; ask these thin people. They will one and all tell you I am not he. Ask that boy there; even he dares not say to my face that I am."

His eyes met mine, and I could see that, even in the moment of challenging me, he repented. He believed that I would give the lie. But the dragon who was bending over him, relieving him of his sword-belt, started me the necessity.

"Captain, you need give yourself no uneasiness; this is the Comte right enough. I live in the Quarter Marria, and I have seen this gentleman a score of times riding with M. de St. Quentin."

Lucas, at this unexpected testimony, looked so taken aback that the captain burst out laughing.

"Yes, my dear monsieur, it is a little hard for M. de Mayenne's nephew—a nephew, are you not?—to explain how he comes to ride with the Duc de St. Quentin."

"He hes! I never rode out with M. de St. Quentin."

"Oh, come now. Really you waste a great deal of breath," the captain said. "I regret the cruel necessity of arresting you, M. de Mar; but there is nothing gained by blustering about it. I usually know what I am about."

"You do not know! Nam de dien, you do not know! Felix Bruns, speak up there. If you have told him behind my back that I am Etienne de Mar, I defy you to say it to my face."

"I know nothing about it, monsieur. I repeated my little refrain. "Monsieur captain, remember, if you please, I never saw him till yesterday; he may be Paul de Lorraine for all I know. But he did not call himself that yesterday."

"You hullo!" Lucas cried.

"Go tell Lucas to drive up to the cabaret door, Gaspard," bade the captain.

KIDNEY DISEASE AND ITS DANGERS CAN BE QUICKLY CURED BY DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

Kidney disease comes on quietly, it may have been in the system for a long time before you suspected the real cause of your trouble. There may have been backaches, swelling of the feet and ankles, disturbances of the urinary organs, such as, brick dust deposit in urine, highly colored, scanty or cloudy urine, bladder pains, frequent urination, stone in bladder, etc.

Perhaps you did not know that these were symptoms of kidney disease, so the trouble kept growing worse, until Nephritis, Sciatica, Rheumatism, Diabetes, Dropsy, and worse of all, Bright's Disease have taken hold of your system.

Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken at the first sign of anything wrong. There is no other safe way, (plasters and liniments are useless), as the trouble must be eradicated from the system.

Doan's Kidney Pills go to the seat of the trouble, strengthen the kidneys, and help them to filter the blood properly and flush off all the impurities which cause kidney trouble. Mr. Thomas Mayhew, Smith's Falls, Ont., writes: "For over four months I was troubled with my kidneys, and my back got so lame I felt miserable all over. After taking five boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills I was as well as ever." Price 50 cents per box or three boxes for $1.25, all dealers or The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

FINANCIAL REVIEW

Reading became unquietly active and advanced sharply, the market refused to follow immediately. The general list reacted immediately.

Amalgamated has been very dull and has declined a heavy tendency, contrary to the side of making the stock quiet, with no idea of attracting attention by spectacular moves. The general list reacted early in the week, and at that time it is expected that the statement will be the usual Standard Oil statement, which will explain nothing to a stockholder should know. The fact, however, cannot be denied that the Amalgamated, as shown by the reports, has been a steady performer, and has been a steady performer, and has been a steady performer.

odd thing to go to Fairville to board the train, after he told his family that he was going to Glasgow. He left, it is true, a large amount of money in the safe. He admits though he was a defaulter. He might think he was a defaulter and a thief in the sense of deliberately taking it and running away. He left the money in the safe and that is a point in his favor. He says he did not board the train at the Union depot, because, though Mr. Abbott would stop him. He went away before Mr. Payne came back. There is a defect and who is guilty? He admits that he had $100 in his own safe. He did not own it, and what right had he to keep it? Just look at this. On one occasion he went to the lawyer of his book, he says, found his money gone, and never even reported it to the manager. Paid it out himself, he says. He has committed forgery and he ought to be convicted. That is your responsibility, not mine.

Judge Forbes' Charge

Judge Forbes stated in opening that the jury could take his remarks cautiously. His Honor deemed it necessary to comment on some of the evidence. The White company is a holding company, and whatever was said about the company's office here, His Honor could not say that it is any excuse for anyone to commit a criminal offence. The White company is a holding company, and whatever was said about the company's office here, His Honor could not say that it is any excuse for anyone to commit a criminal offence.

HARRY WHITE'S FATE IN THE HANDS OF JURY

"It would be easy," said Mr. Payne, "to launch out in abusive language towards this company and it is well they have not to deal with a man as tongue as abusive. It ought to be before the company can recon to their consciences what they have done."

The Solicitor General then opened his address to the jury. He referred to the conduct, attitude, views, etc., of the company. He said whatever they did it had nothing to do with the case. Suppose officials of any company acted favorably or unfavorably, if they acted justly, it would not matter what they did if it is before the people of this community.

ence, habits, etc. and Payne has sworn that he did not owe one dollar to the company. He is a young man in good standing. He was trying to shield White. He is trying to shield White. He is trying to shield White. He is trying to shield White.

DEFENDS MR. ABBOTT

Referring to Mr. Abbott the Solicitor General said he was the manager, and he had a right to take money if he wished to. Mr. McKewen did not even cross-examine Mr. Abbott. He learned about the bad business transactions. Payne held some reports over for the driver. He knew that Mr. Abbott had the right to take $1,400 in I. O. U.'s. I don't see any reason why Mr. McKewen should have said cross-examination. He could have seen the books of the company if he wished.

SAYS WHITE ADMITS GUILT

White has admitted his guilt. It is an offence against the criminal law. I am not a lawyer, but I know that "guilt is not a crime." I don't know what jury consists of in the city and county of St. John. I know that it would be a reflection upon juries in the county where I come from. Juries are sworn to do their duty. I am sworn to prosecute, and I don't care what people say about me. I have been sworn to prosecute. Are you gentlemen going to come here and play with the administration of justice. If that is the case every criminal may just as well be acquitted before being tried.

ACADIA STUDENTS HEAR VERY ELOQUENT SERMON

Rev. F. S. Bamford of West End Baptist Church Preached the Annual Sermon to Acadia Students at Wolfville Last Night --- It Was an Eloquent Effort.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., June 4.—The students of Acadia College and a large number of Wolfville people listened to an eloquent sermon from Rev. F. S. Bamford, at last evening's service. The sermon was a most interesting and instructive one, and was well received by all present.

It was said of a distinguished minister of a previous generation who had the honor to be the first to preach the sermon at the opening of the new building of the church. He was a man of great ability and of high character, and his sermon was a most interesting and instructive one.

Human nature is the material out of which character is made. It is the material out of which character is made. It is the material out of which character is made. It is the material out of which character is made.

Each pleading look that long ago I scanned with heedless eyes, Each eye that gazed on me with love, When I passed by, and I was not aware of it, and I was not aware of it.

Let us beware of the indifference to the needs of our time—the indifference to the needs of our time—the indifference to the needs of our time—the indifference to the needs of our time.

There is no question about Mr. White's high standing in the community. As far as his salary is concerned, we have nothing to do with that. As far as his going away to do with that, because we are all going to do with it, because we are all going to do with it.

There is no question about Mr. White's high standing in the community. As far as his salary is concerned, we have nothing to do with that. As far as his going away to do with that, because we are all going to do with it, because we are all going to do with it.

There are transitions in the lives of all. There are transcendent moments when we stand in the twilight of the chosen three, and look with very strength of human love.

AT YORK THEATRE

At York Theatre next Thursday the attraction will be "Fabio Romani," that sublime and impressive romantic play, which is a dramatization of Marie Corelli's enormously successful and world-famous novel, "The Vendetta." Like all of Miss Corelli's remarkable works, "The Vendetta" convincingly displays the intense depth of the imaginative power and romantic fancy and tells the story of a woman's unselfishness, its intrigues to the extent of having her husband entombed alive and her after life in false union with her favored lover, all of which terminates with the shocking death of both, occasioned by the terrific eruption of Mt. Vesuvius and simultaneously brings to earth the discarded human from his living grave. The play is divided into five acts, each of which are full of action and interest and permeated with dialogue for which Miss Corelli is particularly famous. The company presenting this play is composed exclusively of distinguishedly schooled and talented artists, while the costuming, scenic and electrical effects are complete and elaborate in every detail.

BAD CONDITION OF DOUGLAS AVE

The disgraceful condition of Douglas Avenue has been the subject of considerable comment within the last few days. In several places, the street car tracks are fully three inches above ground making it very difficult for teams to cross without taking off a wheel. The grading is also defective and a resident drew attention also to the fact that the "turn off" for the water supply are protruding above the roadway so as to make it exceedingly dangerous for horses. "To put it briefly," remarked a man who drives a great deal on the avenue, "it's almost as much as your life is worth to drive from St. Peter's gate to the risk of the hill."

WHERE THE BALLS CAME FROM

Very few people know why in front of all pawn shops they see the sign of the three golden balls. It came about the year 1845. Italy, during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries the people were very poor, and consequently the Jews who were the money lending line did a flourishing business at high rates of interest. In fact they were getting all of the surplus money of the poor into their hands, and consequently the people had no money to give to the church. The Medici family were then at the head of the Roman church and as a protection to the financial interests of the same, established in nearly every city in Italy places where the people could borrow money on their chattels at reasonable rates of interest, and in this way they soon took the business out of the hands of the Jews. The arms of the house of Medici were three golden balls, and naturally they hung these out in front of the different loan banks operated by them, to signify that this great and powerful family were guaranteeing the transactions of the institutions. In later years the contents of these places were often taken by the pope and sold publicly at auction to obtain money to carry on the work of the church. Napoleon rifled them during his invasion of Italy and the Medici family soon lost their prestige and the business fell into the hands of the Jews again, who always retained as their sign the arms of this once great and powerful family. In the past few years the Irish have taken it up, and on the 4th, 5th, and 6th the two great Irish Pawnbrokers will appear at the Opera House with matinee Wednesday. Go and see how liberal they are in dealing out laugher.
