

DECLARATION DAY.

Mr. Robinson Formally Declared Elected

BY SHERIFF CALL.

Speeches by Messrs Robinson and Morrissy and a vote of Thanks to Sheriff Call.

At the Court House on Saturday morning Mr. James Robinson was formally declared elected as the member of the House of Commons for the electoral district of Northumberland by Sheriff Call in the presence of two or three hundred people. After the ballots had been counted the Sheriff declared Mr. Robinson elected by a majority of 499.

Mr. Robinson stepped forward and addressed the assembly. He said:—

Mr. Sheriff and Gentlemen:—

Again I have to thank you for returning me as your representative. This is the sixth election I have run in this County and every time have been successful. I do not claim that this result has been due to any great ability on my part, but more to the fact that as a business man and one carrying on extensive operations in my native county my views have met with the acceptance of the majority of the electors. In my nomination speech I laid down certain platforms. This I will adhere to. As all matters pertaining to the welfare and interests of this County I will use my best judgment as a business man and will support all measures brought forward by the Government in its interests. It is a matter of regret to me that so many good men have fallen by the way, but such is the fortune of political war. To my friends who have always stood so loyally by me I wish to return my sincere thanks. I recognize the great responsibility that rests upon a representative of a County of such importance as Northumberland and in all I do and in every act during the term I will have always before me your interests and the honor of this noble Constituency.

Mr. Morrissy then made a short address. He thanked the people for the handsome vote that had been given him. It was thought by some that a man who opposed Mr. Robinson could not save his deposit. He thought that it had been demonstrated that Mr. Robinson could be beaten. Mr. Morrissy referred to the triumphant return of the Liberal party at Ottawa. They had done better than ever. Mr. Blair and reason to feel proud of his success, and he was a follower of his principles should remain with him. He felt that Mr. Blair was a man of the province today. Mr. Morrissy then said that he had been in election in this election and he would be a member of the next one if the Liberal party of this County chose him as their candidate. He had nothing to regret. He did not bear any ill feeling towards his opponent. He had been nominated by men who had always been advocates of liberal principles and would always be. Mr. Morrissy felt that if the Liberals of this County had stood together there would have been a different tale to tell. He brought his remarks to a close by saying that he had nothing but the kindest words for the gentleman who defeated him.

Mr. Robinson then moved that a vote of thanks be tendered Sheriff Call for the very able, efficient and fair manner in which he had conducted his business throughout the election.

Mr. Robinson seconded the motion.

Carried unanimously. Sheriff Call in a neat speech thanked the assembly for the resolution. He had treated everybody alike throughout the election, showing no partiality whatever, and it was a source of joy to him to find that his labors were appreciated.

Sergt. Anslow Talks About the Country.

A FINE CLIMATE.

Its People, Towns, Farms, Railroads, Stores, etc. Described.

Sergt Anslow of the First Canadian Contingent was drawn out by an Advocate scribe the other day, and for over an hour talked very interestingly on his experience in the Dark Continent. Speaking of the Canadian marksmanship, Sergt Anslow said he believed it to be above that of the average British regiment. The Boers shot bad; on the field they were not what they were cracked up to be by any means. But he believed they shot better at practice. They invariably lost their heads on the battlefield and hardly knew what they were doing.

Sergt Anslow said the First Contingent could not complain of the food served to them.

Except in rare cases, they received three 'squares' a day. They would have fresh meat, compressed vegetables, soup, etc. for dinner.

How'd you find the officers of Company G?" asked the scribe.

"First class fellows," he replied. They weren't all exactly soldiers, but they were all gentlemen and treated us right.

Sergt Anslow says that their hardest march was the one from Gras Pan to Bloemfontein when they were on short rations. On Sunday from 5 o'clock p.m. to day break they marched over twenty five miles.

When asked if he met a Burgher friendly to the British, Mr. Anslow replied in the negative.

Mr. Anslow spoke in very high terms of the climate. He considered it a good place for consumptives under good circumstances.

Speaking of Bloemfontein, he believed it covered as much area as the town of Newcastle. It contained many handsome buildings of brick and stone. The stores were up to date, having plate glass fronts etc. Males were chiefly employed. The streets of the town, however were very poor.

Mr. Anslow said that Pretoria was a very pretty city. It contained many handsome residences. The people spared neither work nor money on their places. A great many residences were surrounded by pretty lawns and gardens and hedges. Some of the more elaborate places had artificial brooks running through them and quite often a fountain was seen.

Mr. Anslow said that the Boers as a rule were very ignorant. Their leaders could almost make them believe that the moon was made of green cheese.

The Burghers grew a good deal of corn but very little wheat. Lots of squash, melons etc. were seen.

On the battle field the Boers were clad in a different tale to tell. He brought his remarks to a close by saying that he had nothing but the kindest words for the gentleman who defeated him.

The Advocate's Information Bureau.

IF THERE was one man on the North Shore whose face was radiant with smiles Thursday morning it was Mr. D. G. Smith. Wednesday night was the first night since Nomination Day that he slept well.

D. G. is happy and J. L. is angry. THE "I told you so" man got in his fine work Wednesday night.

WE HAVE a choice little story about a strong party man. It will be commenced in our next. We would have told it this week if the man had completed fortifying the ADVOCATE Sanctum.

LOOK out for squalls. ITS loife thot's loike a foot ball game. You're up against it all the toime.

THERE was a scarcity of stump speeches in Northumberland during the campaign and there are so many stumps in the woods, too.

IT IS said that the Commodore takes all the credit for converting D. G. He is very happy over his conquest.

"IT NEVER rains but it pours," remarked the good conservative as he heard in quick succession the downfall of Sir Charles Mr. Foster, Hugh John, and others.

WHAT a gathering of the chosen there will be at Ottawa in a few days.

THE Commodore is going around with a razor these days.

WHAT A COUNTRY EDITOR MUST DO.

You will have to be able to write a poem praise Jones' new house, umpire a base ball game, report a wedding, beat a lawyer, saw wood, describe a fire so that people will shed their wraps, make one dollar to do the work of ten, shine at a circus, address country fairs, test whiskey, abuse the liquor habit, measure calico, subscribe to charity, go without meals, attract politicians, defend the national platform, sneer at snobbery, wear diamonds, invent advertisements overlook scandal, praise babies, delight the pumpkin raisers, heal the sick, fight to the finish, publish resolutions free of charge, speak at prayer-meetings and stand in with everybody and everything.

AN APPREHENSION.

"There is a great deal that is unsatisfactory about being a great orator," remarked the man who had made a speech.

"Don't you enjoy the applause of the multitude?"

"Not much. You never can tell whether all these people gather around you because they like you or merely because they want a chance to get fresh air and holler."

HOW SCANDAL GROWS.

Said Mrs. A.

To Mrs. J.

In quite a confidential way,

"It seems to me

That Mrs. B.

Takes too much—of something—in her tea."

And Mrs. J.

To Mrs. K.

That night was overheard to say,

"She grieved to touch

Upon it much,

But Mrs. B. took—such and such!"

Then Mrs. K.

went straight away

And told a friend, the selfsame day,

"'Twas sad to think"—

Here comes a wink—

"That Mrs. B. was fond of drink."

The friend's disgust

Was such she must

Inform a lady "which she nussed,"

"That Mrs. B.

At half past three

Was so far gone she couldn't see."

This lady we

Have mentioned, she Gave needlework to Mrs. B.

And at such news

Could hardly choose

But further needlework refuse.

Then Mrs. B.

As you'll agree

Quite properly, she said, said she,

"That she would track,

The scandal back

To those who made her look so black."

Through Mrs. K.

And Mrs. J.

She got at last to Mrs. A.

And asked her why

With cruel lie,

She painted her so deep a dye.

Said Mrs. A.

In sore dismay:

"I no such thing could ever say.

I said that you

But stouter grew

On too much sugar—which you do!"

NOW THE CHURCH. OVER THE WIRES

Soldiers Attend Divine Service.

REV. MR. PICKLES'

Interesting Sermon to the 12th Field Battery and the Khaki Lads.

The Methodist church, Newcastle was thronged with people on Sunday morning to listen to Rev. F. H. W. Pickles' sermon to the 12th Field Battery. The soldiers under command of Major R. L. Maltby were present attired in bright artillery uniforms and Messrs Kitchen, Gifford, Harris and Anslow, South-African heroes were there clad in khaki. Mr. Pickles preached an eloquent, and consequently an interesting sermon, holding the close attention of the large congregation throughout.

After welcoming the Battery to the church, making special reference to the boys in Khaki the Rev. gentleman said he did not intend to address them on a military theme but had chosen a subject that would fit them for the duties of life whatever department they might be called to fill. We are builders, building for eternity. Hence it will be wise to build under Divine direction according to Divine plan. You will find our text in 2nd Peter, 1 chap—5, 6, 7, verses. Add to your faith, virtue and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance patience, and to patience godliness, and to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness charity. Reputation is what the world thinks about us, it may be right or it may not, character is what God knows us to be, character we take into eternity with us. It largely depends upon ourselves the kind of character we build. We must look well to the foundation, Christ taught this in his description of the man building on the sand and the man building on a rock. With faith in Christ we may proceed to build a christian character. The first stone we lay upon it is courage, satisfied that a thing is right we need courage to do it. Said one officer to another on the eve of battle, you are afraid you are white, I admit it, replied the other, and if you were as afraid as I am you would run away. Moral courage is of higher type than physical courage. Some of you have proved your possession of physical courage to a marked degree. Have you the courage of our text? (We lay upon this stone) knowledge, knowledge is desirable. No man should be satisfied without knowing all he can know of his profession or trade, above all he should not rest without the knowledge of sins forgiven through Jesus Christ, of Jesus Christ himself. Paul said I know whom I have believed. Next to this we have temperance, the spirit and practice of a man's national self control which will make the same in the excitement of New York as in the quiet of his own home. The principle and practice of total abstinence from intoxicating beverages. The Mayor and Council of Newcastle are to be congratulated that in the reception of our soldiers returning from the war they were in perfect harmony with the expressed desires of Lord Wolseley and General Roberts.

Then patience, what an important place it fills in the home, in society, in the various associations of men. "Let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and enter wanting nothing." Next our text mentions godliness—like God. How can we be like him? Only by being born again, by having the mind which was in Christ Jesus. We can then believe God in character. Another stone is brotherly kindness. How much the world needs this to win it back to God. How it would change the condition of things if all were actuated by this principle. Well expressed by the poet—

Help us to help each other Lord
Each others cross to bear,
Let each his friendly aid afford
And feel his brothers' care."

Charity the grandest of them all, binding together, the bond of perfectness, all need it, there can be no perfect character without it, Christ said "ye are the light of the world. The Apostle analysed the statement to find that the blending of the seven christian virtues makes the pure white light of a christian life. A character built of these virtues will stand the test of the judgment day and will ensure a home with the blessed forever.

Help us to help each other Lord
Each others cross to bear,
Let each his friendly aid afford
And feel his brothers' care."

Charity the grandest of them all, binding together, the bond of perfectness, all need it, there can be no perfect character without it, Christ said "ye are the light of the world. ORANGEMEN ENTERTAIN

Boy's in Khaki and their friends, Friday night.

On Friday night last No Surrender, L. O. L. No. 47, Newcastle entertained the returned soldiers and their friends at a supper in the Temperance Hall. The Hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion. Mr. T. A. Clarke, W. M. read an address to the khaki clad lads and presented them each with a regalia on behalf of the lodge. Messrs Anslow, Gifford and Harris replied. Addresses were also delivered by Mayor Morrison, Mr. T. A. Clarke, Rev. Messrs. Brown, Snow and others.

Mr. Henry Wyse was the caterer and he has reason to feel proud of the sumptuous supper served. It was highly enjoyed by all. Rev. Messrs. Aitken, Murray and McInnes sent regrets.

Metalization of Wood.

The following method of treating wood to give it the appearance of metal is published by The Moniteur de la Photographie. The wood is soaked for three or four days, according to hardness, in a solution of caustic alkali at a temperature of 75 to 90 degrees C. It is then transferred at once to a bath of hydro-sulphite of calcium, to which a saturated solution of sulphur in caustic potash is added after a lapse of 24 hours. The wood should remain in this bath at a temperature of 85 to 90 degrees C. for about 48 hours. Finally it should be soaked for about thirty to fifty hours in a solution of acetate of lead at a temperature of 85 to 90 degrees C. These successive baths take some time, but the effect is surprising. After the wood has been dried at a moderate temperature, it may be polished with a burnisher of hard wood, and acquires a brilliant metallic lustre which may be heightened by previously rubbing the surface with a piece of lead, tin or zinc and using a glass or porcelain burnisher. The wood then resembles a metallic mirror, and it is very hard and strong.

Since its inception the order has paid to its members and their dependents upwards of two million dollars in insurance and sick and funeral benefits. The society issues policies for $500, $1000, $1500 and $2000, the latter sum being the limit of any life, and the premiums for the same are only 60 cents to $1 per month per $1000, according to the age of the applicant. The death rate in the society was only 4.56 per 1000 of the membership in 1898, and the average death rate since the organization of the society was 4.94.

The Sick and Funeral Benefit Branch, though an optional feature, is very popular among the membership, upwards of 16,000 being enrolled in that department. The benefits are $3 per week for the first two weeks of illness and $5 per week for the succeeding ten weeks during any year, besides a funeral benefit of $50. The fee for same, payable monthly in advance, are from 25 cents to 45 cents, according to the age of the member when joining the branch. During the year 1898 over $43,000 were paid out in sick and funeral benefits, and $143,000 in insurance.

There are now about 700 subordinate branches, or courts as they are called, throughout Canada, and the order is now well established in all the provinces and territories of the Dominion.

All physically and morally qualified males, between the ages of 18 and 45 years of age, who are not debarrd on account of their occupation, are accepted for membership.

DEAR SIRS,—Please pardon my delay in answering yours of weeks ago. Yes, I have no hesitation in recommending your Involgorating Syrup.

During a fall and winter of '96 and '97 I was greatly distressed with indigestion. I tried several remedies, each of which gave me no relief. I was advised to try your Involgorating Syrup, which I readily did, and have felt grateful ever since to the one who gave me such good advice.

The very first dose helped me, and before half of the first bottle was used I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the disease since. I have taken occasion to recommend your medicine publicly upon several occasions, and heartily do so now. You are at liberty to use this in any way you please.

TIRE ARMOR.

Device for Enabling One to Cycle on the Ice, Which is Both Ingenious and Practicable.

The device for cycling on the ice is shown in the accompanying illustration, reproduced from the Cycle Age, is both ingenious and practicable. The invention is nothing more or less than a belt of specially formed chain links which lie snugly against the tread of the tire. The ends of the link are formed into hooks to engage the adjacent link and also to act as teeth or lugs to grip the ice and prevent slipping. The required number of links are attached to a canvas strip and are placed over the tread of the tire when it is deflated. When the ends of the chain belt have been joined and the tire inflated to riding pressure the chain will stick securely in place. For the front wheels the ends of the link hooks are beveled to form sharp longitudinal cutting edges, which tend to prevent side slipping.

George Brown's Son.

Veritably (writes a correspondent of M. A. P.) I must be growing old, for it seems only the other day that I was at school, with Mr. G. M. Brown, the Radical candidate for Central Edinburgh, opposed by Conan Doyle, and who, for all practical purposes, is the famous publishing firm, Thomas Nelson & Co. More years than I care to think about have passed since G. W. Brown and I were schoolmates at Merchiston Castle, best and footballist (if I may coin the word) of Scottish schools; but I remember him well, for we were friendly rivals for the Hope Prize, founded by an old Merchistonian for the best scholar of his year in French, German and English literature. Brown won the prize. He was a good-looking boy in those school days, and I have a pleasing recollection of a warm, creamy complexion, russet-colored hair, earnest sympathetic eyes and a mobile mouth.

It may please some M. A. P. readers to compare this portrait of the boy with the candidate of to-day. Brown was in no sense, of a word a prig—he was a fine cricketer and tennis player—but he was a decidedly earnest boy. Perhaps the consciousness of coming wealth and responsibility oppressed him, perhaps his nature was naturally quiet and studious; whatever was the cause he was reserved, reticent, and sensible beyond his years. At the same time, he possessed much independence of spirit and daring of thought, and he was ever the champion of a weak or of a lost cause.

The picture here given is a copy of Rene Bull's famous drawing of a Bengal lancer, a type of the gallant regiment which cut up the Tartar cavalry near Peking. There is little doubt that for perfect discipline and for supreme courage the Bengal Lancers have few equals in the world. Among other Indian troops now in China are the Afridi and the Ghourkas. The latter were originally fierce enemies of Great Britain, and it is the mutual respect born of many hard fights that has led to the excellent relations now subsisting between these forces and Tommy Atkins. The Ghourkas are said to rival the Highlanders in the ferocity of their charges.

THE FURNACE FIRE.

Points That Should Be Mastered Early in the Season.

A whole winter's annoyance may be saved by coming to a thorough understanding of the furnace and its workings early in the season. No matter how good the "help" in other directions, the housewife should understand the "know how" of furnace management, and insist upon certain rules being carried out, if the house is to be kept at the proper temperature with the least labor, and the greatest saving of fuel.

The furnace fire should be shaken down and raked perfectly clear in the morning. A few shovelfuls of coal should be put on, and all the draughts opened. The ashes should then be taken up.

As soon as the coal begins to burn well, and the fire looks clear at the bottom, put in enough coal to come to the top of the fire-pot. Keep the draughts open until all the gas has burned off; then close them, and later, if the fire be too hot, open the checks.

Except in extremely cold weather, this is all the attention that ought to be necessary through the day.

The fire must be raked down and fresh coal put on in the evening, but a small amount of coal will answer for the night, unless the draughts have been open the greater part of the day.

On an extremely cold day it may be necessary to have the draughts open a part of the time, and some coal put on at noon.

All the clinkers should be removed when the fire is raked down in the morning. The water-pail should be replenished in the morning.

Some careless people leave the ashes for days at a time at the bottom of the furnace, where they absorb the heat, robbing the house of its share and often burning out the grate.

If the furnace be allowed to burn to a white heat it will be ruined for that day, unless some coal be put on a little later.

The cold-air boxes must admit enough air to drive the hot air through the house, but not more than can be heated.

John Burns, M.P.

John Burns, the English labor leader, has been returned as a member of Parliament by an increased majority. Although the Opposition made every effort to secure his defeat, Burns' victory and that of Kier Hardy, the Socialist Labor Leader, who has also been returned as a member of Parliament, is the fly in the government's party. These two men were bitter opponents of the war against the South African republics and the whole war policy of Salisbury and Chamberlain and in their canvasses were especially bitter in denouncing the latter gentleman. Most of the other opponents of the Premier and Colonial Secretary on this question did not fare so well.

A Royal Photographer.

At the exhibition at Berlin of photographs, under the auspices of the German Photographic association and under the patronage of the German empress, her majesty herself displayed a most interesting number of photographs taken during her journeys through Russia, Turkey, Palestine and on the Rominthen moors as well as several family groups. The photographs are beautiful specimens, and some are most interesting, the shooting scenes and pictures of game shot by the kaiser being especially good as well as the family scenes in which the royal children are to be seen at work and at play.

In the Night

Sudden disease, like a thief in the night, is apt to strike confusion into a household. Croup chooses the hours of darkness for its deadly visitations. Cholera morbus, cholera infantum, cramps and colic come frequently in the night. Are you prepared for midnight emergencies? A bottle of JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT gives security, eases pain and saves life. The real danger from a large number of ailments is inflammation. JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT is the remedy for inflammation and, whether used internally or externally, it subdues it, gives relief from pain and cures the disease.

Johnson's ANODYNE LINIMENT

A FOE TO INFLAMMATION

Is just the same as it was ninety years ago. At all seasons of the year it is in daily demand for curing colds, croup, diarrhoea, cholera morbus, cholera infantum, cramps, colic, rheumatism, neuralgia, toothache, headache, earache, sore throat, inflammation of the lungs, pleurisy, bronchitis, is grippe, la grippe, muscle soreness and pain and inflammation in any part of the body. Get it from your dealer. Two size bottles, 25 cents and 50 cents. The larger size is more economical.

No Sweet Sixteen in China.

In China there is nothing of the sweet girlhood which is enjoyed in this country—in fact, one rarely sees girls in China, says a writer in the London Mail. They marry so young that they appear to spring from childhood to maturity without any intermediate stage of girlhood. There is no "blushing 15" or "sweet 16," no flirtations, no balls, no picnics, no billets doux. The child has not ceased to play with her doll before she has a baby to dandle.

The only joy of a woman's life is in dressing her hair. This is done with an elaborate, artistic science curious to see. Their hair is invariably black and very long. It is drawn tightly from the face and stiffened with gum. It is then piled up in coils and wings and loops that stand alone without the aid of pads, roulets, pugs or hairpins.

There are no spinsters in China except the nuns who dedicate their virginity to Buddha. These ladies shave their heads like priests and thus deprive themselves of the only Chinese sign of gender—the hair dressed a la teapot.

How Best to Eat.

At a recent meeting of medical men Dr. F. A. Burrell spoke of the amount of mischief done by the very common habit of eating the meals rapidly. Thorough mastication was of the utmost importance, and of course this presupposed a proper condition of the teeth. Gastric digestion was often weakened and much distress was caused by taking in too much food with the food, particularly at the beginning of a meal. Another factor in causing dyspepsia was the habit of eating food in silence or without that mirth and good fellowship so necessary to insure the normal action of the digestive organs. These little details might seem trite and unimportant, but it was the duty of the careful physician to instruct his patients in regard to them. The long continued and free use of digestive agents served to make the digestive organs lazy and inactive.—Medical Record.

Horses Wounded in Battle.

The war correspondent of the London Times, writing of the battle of Sedan, said that only those who had seen a battlefield could form an idea of the extraordinary way in which wounded horses will follow their regiment or battery as long as they have a leg to crawl. He saw what had evidently been cavalry sergeants' horses following the squadron to which they and their masters had belonged, keeping their regulation places in rear of the troops, wheeling with them and halting exactly as though their riders were in the saddle and all the time streaming with blood. Habit is everything; it is a difficult thing to persuade a troop horse to leave the ranks, and a horse which has been regularly ridden by a groom in attendance on a lady needs much persuasion before he will consent to move alongside another horse; he has learned that his proper place is 50 yards in the rear and cannot unlearn it in a hurry.

Tailors' Bad Backs.

The cramped up position in which a tailor works comes hard on his kidneys and hard on his back. Very few escape backache, pain in the side and urinary troubles of one kind and another.

Often times the first warnings of kidney disease are neglected—think it will be all right in a day or two—but sick kidneys won't get well without help.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

Are the best friend of kidneys needing assistance. Read the proof from a tailor who has tried them.

Mr. John Robertson, merchant tailor, Durham, Ont., gives his experience as follows:

"I had been ailing with my kidneys for more than a year when I commenced taking Doan's Kidney Pills, which I got at McFarlane's drug store, and am sincerely glad that I did so. The wrong action of my kidneys made me sick all over and caused me much inconvenience and pain. That is now a thing of the past, because Doan's Kidney Pills cured me. I have had no trouble or inconvenience with my kidneys or back since I took these remarkable pills, and you may be sure that I gladly recommend them to other sufferers."

LAXA-LIVER PILLS

are the ladies' favorite medicine. They do not purge, gripe, weaken or sicken. They act naturally on the stomach, liver and bowels, curing constipation, dyspepsia, sick headache and biliousness. Price 25c.

LAURIER PARTY RETURNED.

As expected by THE ADVOCATE the Laurier party has returned to power in Canada. We fail to see how any keen sighted person could have expected otherwise. The Conservatives were without a leader who could go into Quebec—the second largest province in the Dominion—and meet with a reception that would guarantee not even a fair representation of conservative members from that province. Our neighbor to the north showed unmistakable signs of going decidedly liberal, and conservative leaders probably did not expect otherwise. So with that province strongly, if not wholly in favor of liberalism, how could the conservatives hope for a victory. At the last election Ontario gave the liberals a majority in the House and it was unreasonable to expect that in the short space of four years that province would turn so completely around as to give the conservatives a majority that would offset the liberal majority in Quebec. In time such a state of affairs may be brought about, but it will indeed take time. The other provinces, taking them as a whole could not be expected to send more than a half and half representation to the House. The elections of last week seem to demonstrate one thing quite clearly and that is that this country at the present time is controlled by the French. We do not mean that the House of Commons is under their control, but that it remained last week with the French speaking province of Quebec to decide which party should dominate at Ottawa, and that French speaking province said the liberal party, and the liberal party it is. The conservatives need never expect to be returned to power until the time comes when they can bring forth a leader who can command the respect and admiration in Quebec that Sir Wilfrid Laurier does in Ontario and the other English speaking provinces to day—a leader who can receive as great an ovation in a French speaking province as in an English speaking province. Until that time comes they must wait.

SIR CHARLES' RETIREMENT.

As Sir Charles Tupper has retired from the leadership of the Conservative party in Canada, that party is now looking for a man to take his place. The names of Hon. George E. Foster, Hon. Mr. Casgrain and others are spoken of. With all due admiration for Mr. Foster's ability as a debater we think that if the Tory party is wise it will choose a man of the stamp of Mr. Casgrain. He has considerable influence over the French Canadians and if he had been leader of the opposition on Wednesday last there would not have been such a walk over in Quebec for the Laurier party. However, Sir Charles Tupper has done much for Canada and his name and deeds should be cherished in the minds of all true Canadians regardless of their political complexion. He has the stainless reputation and character and has led the blameless life that endear him to his countrymen and give to him the confidence, the respect, the admiration, the love and affection of the whole Canadian people. He is an ideal man and represents the highest type of Canadian citizenship. Long live Charles Tupper!

McKINLEY'S ELECTION.

The election of McKinley and Roosevelt proves conclusively that the American people have no use for Bryanism, or in other words they want no part of silver coined at the ratio of 16 to 1. As the New York

Journal remarked—"free silver is dead and so unpopular that even its corpse was enough to drag any man down to defeat." We believe the election of McKinley, however, does not necessarily mean that the American people are in favor of Imperialism and Militarism. A large number of electors considered the silver question of Bryan and the Imperialistic tendencies of McKinley as evils. So between two evils they chose the lesser—Imperialism. At the same time a large number are in favor of McKinley's policy in the Philippines and elsewhere but the number was not large enough to give him the majority of the electoral college votes.

LIBERALISM AND PROSPERITY.

It remains to be seen whether the prosperity of the past four years will prevail throughout the term of the Laurier administration just beginning. It goes without saying that the liberals owe their victory in the Maritime Provinces largely to the good times which the provinces by the sea have enjoyed during the past few years and it is to be hoped that this wave of prosperity will continue indefinitely. Although the Maritime Provinces have displayed their appreciation for the government's successful efforts in bestowing prosperity on the Dominion, Ontario has not done so. On the contrary that province has spoken decidedly against the Laurier government, and obviously does not give parliament credit for the era of prosperity. So it now remains to be seen whether the Laurier administration and prosperity have anything in common.

MR. ROBINSON'S ELECTION.

As predicted by THE ADVOCATE Mr. Robinson was elected on Wednesday last as the representative of the people of Northumberland County in the House of Commons of this Dominion. A large majority of the electors are obviously well satisfied with him as their representative and certainly they have no reason to feel otherwise. However, as we said two weeks ago, the fight waged by Mr. Morrissey should at least create silent admiration among his opponents and open praise from the liberal party whose banner he carried in the face of disheartening opposition.

(Fredericton Herald.)

Mr. Pitts was in great glee for a while last night, but when the final returns from York were to hand, he sneaked home by a back street.

A NEW USE.

(St. John Star.)

Now that the campaign is over the Star will devote less attention to politics, but will continue to give its readers the best value for their money of any newspaper published in St. John.

NO NEED TO REASON.

Referring to the American election The New York Sun says: No process of reasoning can make of this magnificent victory anything else than an endorsement and approval of the administration of President McKinley."

A NATIONAL VICTORY

The New York Tribune says it is a national victory. The administration is sustained in its foreign policy towards the territory acquired through the war with Spain and its stand for the gold standard.

AMERICAN HONOR SAFE.

The New York Times concludes a long editorial by saying: "The currency is safe; the national honor is safe. We can now give ourselves with contented minds and assured confidence to our honorable public and private concerns."

CANADA'S BRIGHT FUTURE.

(St. John Globe.)

Canada as a result of the proceedings of Wednesday, may look forward to four or five more substantial years in which progress and a wise administration of affairs will proceed together, with the best possible results for the welfare of the Canadian people.

THE CONSERVATIVE LEADERSHIP.

(St. John Sun.)

Various suggestions will be offered as to the conservative leadership. Sir Charles Tupper, who has done his whole duty and all that any man could do as leader of the party, will, no doubt, be asked to retain the command. Should he accept he can easily get a seat. Should he decide to retire he can do so with a clear conscience and may congratulate himself that he is leaving the party united, well organized, and representing at least half of the Canadian electors. The defeat of the party is not Sir Charles Tupper's fault. He has made a great campaign, and one that will never be forgotten.

THE FALLEN LEADER.

(Halifax Chronicle.)

Politically, no one can sympathize with Sir Charles Tupper in his downfall. He put his trust to the last in slander and deception. They have failed him. He tried to deceive the people. They have resented it. He imported the discredited methods of a past generation in the campaign that has closed, quite oblivious of the fact that the conditions have entirely changed. He has met his Waterloo in consequence.

Still he is an old man. He has been a strong man in his time. He has been a ruthless and not always a fair fighter. He has had the faculty of stirring up extreme bitterness in his opponents. But withal he has had his good points. He has his admirable qualities. He has done some good deeds. There are few generous Liberals who will not be personally sorry for the "old war horse of Cumberland" in his overthrow, and will not regret that the defeat of his life has come at its close.

THE USEFULNESS OF
DIAMOND DYESIn Country Homes is Beyond Calculation

Diamond Dyes are great blessings to every farmer's wife. No other article brought into country homes can give such a return of profit, pleasure and happiness as the Diamond Dyes.

A ten cent package of the world-famed Diamond Dyes will give new life to any faded and dingy dress skirt, jacket or cape. From ten to twenty cents expended on Diamond Dyes will enable any one to recolor a faded suit of clothes for any youth or man, and make them look like new clothes from the tailors hands.

To get the best results from your work of home dyeing, do not allow any dealer to sell you some make of dyes that he calls JUST AS GOOD. No other package dyes in the world equal to Diamond Dyes in purity, strength and brilliancy.

THE CLERGY ENDORSE IT.

We notice that the leading clergymen of every denomination in Canada are publicly endorsing the beautiful picture, "CHRIST IN THE TEMPLE," and are recommending it to every home.

The picture, "CHRIST IN THE TEMPLE," is that of a most touching incident in the life of the Saviour. It is a subject that has ever appealed to the poet and the painter. It shows our Saviour when a boy of twelve in deep discussion with the grave and thoughtful Rabbis who are astonished at the wisdom of the youth. The colouring of the painting is superb and the Monticello, and there were a number of others awaiting her at Yarmouth. Had the disaster occurred as the steamer was leaving Yarmouth as at first reported the loss of life would have been very much greater."

The other picture is one that at once appeals to Canadians. It represents the return of one of our Canadian soldiers from South Africa, and is bound to be a popular picture. There is a beautiful story connected with this picture. It is printed in pamphlet form and will be sent free to any of our readers who will send a card to the Family Herald and Weekly Star, Montreal, requesting it. The Family Herald should do a bigger business this year than ever with two such beautiful pictures to be included free with such a magnificent family paper at the small price of one dollar per year.

Kidney Duty.—It is the particular function of the kidneys to filter out poisons which pass through them into the blood. When the kidneys are diseased they cannot do their whole duty, and should have the help and strength that South American Kidney Cure will afford in any and all forms of kidney disorder. It relieves in 6 hours.—14

ACCOUNT OF THE DISASTER.

The cause of the awful disaster was simply this, that the Monticello, after battling for hours with a head wind she sprang a leak, filled with water and became unmanageable and finally foundered. Acting Quartermaster Cook when seen by a correspondent today was in bed, considerably bruised. He said: "We left St. John at 11.15 a. m. on Friday and made Petit Passage at 5 p. m. Friday. The weather looked fair for the night and we thought the wind was going hard to the north west; instead the wind shifted to the south west. After coming through the passage before the wind, blowing a gale, the steamer shipped a heavy sea, clearing off the forward saloon deck and starboard paddle box. She then started to leak. We tried to get the ship before the gale but found she would not steer. I was at the wheel from 7 p. m. Friday until 7.30 a. m. Saturday. The Captain and chief officer were in the wheel house the whole time. About 10.30 she came into the wind again and lay there wholly unmanageable until morning. We could see Yarmouth Cape about 5 miles off again but she would not steer. She was then leaking badly. The water put out the fires in the stoke hold. The engines then stopped and she listed to port and began to sink. About 11 o'clock the captain ordered the boats to begin to make ready and all the passengers put on life belts. The port after boat was the first to be lowered and the ladies were put aboard. I was in the boat and helped to get the ladies in. Capt. Harding was standing at the forward tackle of our boat when I last saw him. The starboard boat was hauled over to the port side and launched from the first boat's davits.

About 15 minutes after we left the SHIP BROKE IN TWO

The forward part sank bow first and the aft stern first. I saw four or five persons standing aft on the ship as she sunk. There had been no confusion and no outcry; in fact no one except the officers spoke a word. Instead of rushing to them the passengers seemed to hold back from the boats. Every man discharged his duties promptly and everything that could possibly be done was done. The last I saw of the second boat she was filling alongside the ship. I saw some inside and some outside holding on. I think there were about seven in her and they did not get the forward davit clear before the ship went down. The third boat was a zinc lifeboat. She was launched from the port side. I think about 15 persons got in her. They had oars out and were lying beside the ship. I did not see her after the ship sank. We then scudded for the shore. When we reached it, two hours later, I was at the after oar, the second officer at the rudder, Capt. Smith rowed the forward oar and Fleming bailed. As we approached the shore Capt. Smith looked for a good place to beach her and told all hands to be ready. Then a big sea came, the boat ran sixty yards, struck a rock and broke up. The next I knew I was scrambling in the surf."

Hon. W. S. Fielding, Finance Minister, was to have taken passage on the Monticello, and there were a number of others awaiting her at Yarmouth. Had the disaster occurred as the steamer was leaving Yarmouth as at first reported the loss of life would have been very much greater."

A Goddess of Africa

A Story of the Golden Fleece.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "MISS CAPRICE," "DR. JACK'S WIFE,"
"DR. JACK," ETC., ETC.

So they all entered the tunnel, which was hardly more than a fissure in the rock. Lord Bruno had come prepared, and without delay flashed a little bull-eye lantern upon the scene. It was well chosen since, when carried by the leader, the little party would remain in darkness while a great light shone ahead.

More than that, it might yet serve them in the way of necromancy, for the superstitious blacks could easily believe it to be the one glaring eye of a spirit monster, seeking fresh victims.

They advanced cautiously. Rex could not forget how he and the professor had illuminated their way with a torch which, waved above the head had created a tremendous emigration on the part of innumerable bats so that at times the bold explorers were compelled to call a halt in order to prevent their light being extinguished by the current of air created by the myriad of unseen mystical wings.

The passage wound this way and that, now fairly comfortable and anon so narrow that some of them had to squeeze through.

Once they entered a round apartment, and as Rex flashed the light about, the others held their breath with awe.

And no wonder, for it seemed a chamber peopled with spirits of departed giants. To the left and to the right could be seen the ugliest old demons ever devised by human hands. Vishnu was not in the same class with them, and Buddha might well hang his head in shame. Had there been a prize offered for the most frightful effigy the skill of man could devise, some of these ancient idols would have been hard indeed to beat.

Lord Bruno made an involuntary move toward his note book, as though his first thought was to secure a counterfeit resemblance of these jolly boys while the golden opportunity presented itself, for really the man who could transfer that collection of ancient beauties to his collection need never lack for a subject in the future.

"Come, none of that!" said Rex, grimly, knowing how overwhelming the artistic spirit controlled one who used the pencil to perpetuate the odd and the beautiful, so that millions might enjoy them.

"But I really must focus the light on that grisly old heathen with two heads. Do give me just five minutes, I beg," said Waterford, as might a man pleading for his life.

"Not a single minute in here. It would be wasted, I tell you. Why these chaps don't even hold a candle to the freaks in the next grotto. Come on—haste to the wedding. Once in there we will fire the pan, and you can scurry away to your heart's content while I crawl into the stomach of the grand-daddy of all the idols and remove the booty."

Thus he artfully lured them on. Even the little Frenchman was shivering, not with fear, but excitement. Though he had seen these monstrousities before he was not averse to gazing upon them again, for strange to say they seemed to exercise a peculiar charm, as hideous objects generally do.

Another passage was traversed. It was no longer a tunnel. The work of man could be seen in the blocks of stone that shaped the walls and even the roof. When one remembered how this temple had for many hundreds of years been a ruin, it was almost like unearthing the relics of Babylon and Nineveh.

Upon these blocks of stone strange pictures had been cut, which no doubt formed stories recording the achievements of this remarkable people in bygone days when old Krokato was hardly cool after the last paroxysm. Many nations thus wrote their history by means of crude pictures, and in both Egypt and America the reading of these stories has given the world much valuable information regarding the past. Suddenly the passage ceased, and another opening yawned before them. Rex kept the light almost at their feet as they advanced, so the others could see next to nothing, although they were impressed with a consciousness that fearful shapes hung out near them.

A Gloomy Future

Made Bright, and Health and Vigour Restored by the Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Headache, backache, sleeplessness, despondency, and irregularities are the result of an exhausted condition of the body and nervous system.

No treatment was ever so efficacious in restoring health, strength, vigour, and vitality as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, the great blood builder.

Mrs. M. M. Bradley, 100 Jane street, Ottawa, states: "For several years I have been gradually running down in health. I became nervous and weak, and was greatly over my future."

"Having used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and the wonderful results it has accomplished for me, I obtained a box and began using it as directed. I began to feel better immediately, and am now in full health and vigour."

"I can recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as an excellent tonic for the weak, nervous, or run down."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, the world's greatest tonic, and nerve restorer, is sold by all dealers and Dr. J. C. Co., Toronto.

"Have you the pan ready with the flash-light powder?" asked Hastings. The sturdy Briton assured him all was in readiness for a plunge.

"Then touch it off, and remember—silence!"

Instantly there was a "click," and the dreadful darkness was shot into shreds by myriad flashes of dazzling light.

Eager eyes were turned around so as to take in the entire circuit, and in truth, such an amazing spectacle has seldom if ever before greeted human eyes. No one uttered a sound—indeed, they were almost paralyzed with the sensation of awe that swept over them, and could only stand and gaze and turn their eyes from one colossal figure to another, as though the power of speech had been temporarily placed under a ban by a magician's wand.

As suddenly almost as it had flashed into being, the light died down, leaving them in blackness again; but Lord Bruno had prepared for that, and a succession of charges was touched off, which promised to turn night into day so long as they lasted.

As they looked again it seemed to their excited imagination that the idols moved their heads, and a sensation of horror came over the venturesome intruders, who had dared the vengeance of gods in their quest of gain; but a closer examination disclosed the fact that a multitude of hideous bats, no doubt recognizing some affinity of the awful shapes that formed the circle, had attached themselves to ears and noses and chins in countless numbers and hung there, heads down, like brown stalactites.

The sudden flash of the sunlight, in the chamber where gloom had held sway, lo, these many hundreds of years, had startled the creatures of darkness, and there was a constant migration, as in clouds they sought various exits in the way of crevices.

The artist stood transfixed before the chief of all the idols, a monster with three heads and four arms, a fetish that if but glanced at a single time was hideous enough to give one the nightmare for a month.

And Lord Bruno stood there as if entranced, his face beaming, his nostrils dilating with eagerness, his hand creeping in search of his versatile pencil, and his book.

"Well?" asked Rex, smiling.

"I say, isn't he just a beauty now? Did you ever in all your life dream there could be such a monstrosity? Ye gods! I wouldn't miss catching his royal highness triple mug for the Shah of Persia's biggest diamond. Go on—th your infernal robbery. Rex, my boy, and leave me alone until I've transferred this treasure to paper, and then I'm with you heart and soul. Duty first and play afterward you know, old chap."

Jovel he was already at it, and the way his pencil dashed over the paper spoke of aroused genius. Indeed, under ordinary conditions it would be something of a job to drag the excited artist out of the ancient temple until he had drawn the more remarkable among that collection of deities, since they excelled any he had ever run across in India or China, in temple, pagoda or mosque.

Rex left him to his idols. Rex who had something on the carpet that was of much more importance to him than all the ugly images the world ever knew, Rex who was quivering with eagerness to know whether he would, as on the previous occasion, be interrupted just when about to possess himself of the treasure of the crater temple.

CHAPTER XI.

PARADISE.

Hastings knew what lay before him, and was also aware of the value of time in a case where tremendous perils hung like a pall over their heads.

He advanced full upon the colossus with the three heads. The exceeding brightness of the flash-light powder penetrated every niche and corner of the dusty and musty old chamber, revealing an accumulation of horrible atrocities in the line of idols that might have staggered even a cool customer like Jim Bludsoe, and while the cowboy gave no evidence of alarm, no doubt his flesh experienced that peculiar prickling sensation as if red ants were creeping over the surface of his body.

As for the professor, he was wildly exuberant, and poured forth a jargon of French and English, regardless of the fact that no one paid the slightest attention to his rhapsody, each being concerned in his own affairs.

It seemed to Rex that the triple headed squatting monster glared at him with the eyes of a demon, and the stone arms appeared ready to clasp him in their cold embrace; but Rex had looked upon this monster before and was not at all alarmed.

He passed between the king idol and the one on his left, which resembled a carved Buddha, he had seen in an Indian city. As he stood there, the three heads were fully six feet above his shoulders. The shadows behind the great image were clean cut and intense, just what might have been expected when a white flash illuminated the centre of the apartment.

Rex knew what to do. He had been posted even on his first visit, thanks to the explicit directions given him in advance. His hand touched the cold stone, slipped along it carefully until a reached when the proper pressure caused a portion of the pedestal to give way, revealing an inky black cavity.

The adventurous American was down on his knees instantly, and thrust his head inside the opening.

Strange colored fires seemed to gleam above—lanes of green and blood red and golden yellow flashed across each other. Rex knew the origin of these—that they came through the eyes belonging to the three heads of the heathen image, eyes formed of great jewels perhaps, rubies, emeralds and topaz, through which Lord Bruno's photographic flash-light shone with the power of an electric flood.

Another instant and Rex had drawn a match along the cold stone, and as the flame burst forth he applied it to a small candle which he had taken from his pocket, which in turn was fastened to the flag that formed the base of the idol's interior, using a little melted wax to secure it there.

He gave but a single glance of curiosity upward, and smiled at what he saw, comprehending the use to which the stone steps must have been put in the time when this idol was worshipped by the people who had their habitation in the ancient crater of Krokato, ages before the Zulus appeared upon the scene.

Undoubtedly crafty priests were wont to secrete themselves within the hollow god, and in various ways suited to their unscrupulous ingenuity work upon the credulity of the prostrate worshippers who cast themselves before the stone image.

Rex knew that such impositions were not altogether unknown in the present day, although perhaps they might not be so openly practiced—still, the abject devotees were just as blind with regard to the fearful deceptions practiced upon them.

After that one cynical survey of the empty space above his head, Rex turned his attention to another quarter, in which he had more reason to be interested.

The dust of ages had settled upon everything—a fine impalpable dust that upon the slightest movement filled the air, almost causing strangulation. When centuries roll on such an accumulation assumes generous proportions even in the most air tight repositories as the pyramids of Egypt—grain by grain it gathers, growing slowly but surely as the years creep on toward eternity.

As Rex Hastings knelt there, with his remnant of a wax candle serving as a torch, his eyes fell upon what appeared to be little more than an irregular heap of stones, lying at the foot of the rude steps, and covered with dust to such an extent that its nature could only be vaguely guessed at.

A second look might arouse still greater curiosity, for it would disclose the fact that something had recently occurred to disturb one end of the dust strewn ridge. Rex could no doubt have explained that to the queen's taste, since his hand had been the prime cause of it all.

Even now he lost no time in speculation, but reached out a hand that trembled in spite of his remarkable nerve.

Another instant and the decoration he had accomplished—the eyes of a latter day argument had fallen upon the treasure of the ancient gods. The little pile seemed to be covered with a parchment like fabric that had resisted the ravages of time, and at the same time served to protect from the encroaching dust the precious collection which it shadowed.

When this cloth had been cautiously dragged aside, disturbing as little as possible the accretion of ages, Rex gasped for breath, and surely with cause, for certainly the eyes of an adventurer never before were ravished with a more wonderful sight, since the famous conquistadors of old, Pizarro and Cortez scoured Peru and Mexico, unearthing the treasures of the sun-worshippers and the ancient Aztecs, and gathering rooms full of gold and silver.

Heaped upon each other, in a confused mass, just as they had been tossed into this sacred and secret hiding place ages ago, perhaps by the last priest of the oracle, were scores of golden images and vessels of the most amazing and grotesque shape imaginable, such as would fill the soul of an antiquarian with the most stupendous delight.

Many of these were possibly idols, others may have had some connection with the temple. One must admire the delicate workmanship shown in their construction, and it was very evident that this ancient people who lived in the heart of southern Africa, even before the blacks held undisputed sway, must have brought their knowledge at working in the precious metals either from far away India or from Egypt.

Little Rex cared at that particular moment what the origin of this ex-

Bleeding Piles

A Prominent Business Man Testifies to His Cure by Using Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Not a day passes but many people volunteer recommendations of Dr. Chase's Ointment as an absolute cure for every form of piles.

Mr. Jas. Jackson, of the Laurie Spool Company, St. Alexis des Monts, Que., writes: "You may put my name to any praise you can give to Dr. Chase's Ointment, for it has done me more good than any medicine I ever used."

"I was troubled for two years with that cruel disease, bleeding piles, and after using Dr. Chase's Ointment, I can say I am entirely rid of it. It is a treasure to all suffering from piles."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is guaranteed to positively cure any case of itching, bleeding, or protruding piles. It has never yet been known to fail, and certainly will not fail in your case.

For many years Dr. Chase's Ointment has stood alone as the only absolute and guaranteed cure for piles and itching skin diseases. 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is by far the largest sale of any remedy for throat and lung troubles. 25 cents a bottle.

White Watery Pimples.

Five years ago my body broke out in white watery pimples, which grew so bad that the suffering was almost unbearable. I took doctors' medicine and various remedies for two years but they were of little benefit, whenever I got warmed up or sweat the pimples would come out again.

A neighbor advised Burdock Blood Bitters, and I am glad I followed his advice, for four bottles completely cured me.

That was three years ago and there has never been a spot or pimple on me since.

quisite gold filigree work upon several of the vases might be—his whole soul was wrapped up in contemplation of the collection, and the thought that by right of discovery it was his almost overpowered him, for at this moment of exaltation scruples were not apt to arise within his mind regarding his prerogative as claimant.

He again stretched out his hands and allowed his eager fingers to close about a vase that stood almost eight inches high. It was bound over the top with parchment tied with several ligatures, and as he raised the whole Rex found it necessary to exert considerable strength.

To snatch out his knife and score away the parchment was but the work of a second, when out poured a handful of small stones that glittered and glowed even in the feeble candle-light.

They were gems of the purest water, precious stones, rudely cut it is true, but many of them in such a prismatic way as to bring out astonishing beauty—rubies that may once have adorned the brow of a Cleopatra, dazzling diamonds that in the cycles of time passed since they were torn from their original lodgment in the dark mines of the earth, possibly glittered in the crown of some mighty rajah of ancient India, or the coronet of a Chinese Mogul. In mystery was their story wrapped, and in impenetrable gloom must it ever remain.

After lying here in the ruins of the Temple of Azor these centuries, when the world had made such progress, with the Anglo-Saxon race dominating its arteries of trade and seeking adventure and conquest in every land upon which the sun shone, behold, in due time one of this same venture-some people, fated to tear away the barrier that had so long prevented these princely gems taking their rightful place among the coveted treasures of a world's admiration, and once more casting them forth to become an object of barter among the nations.

Rex was a practical man after all, and he sternly crushed down those feelings of awe and veneration which he must naturally experience upon gazing upon such a remarkable treasure trove.

There would be a better time and opportunity to consider these things in the future, when danger no longer hovered about them.

Just now the practical business in hand enlisted his whole attention and sympathy.

That he had anticipated this very pleasant moment became evident, for what should he do but haul out from a pocket several stout little canvas bags, such as are used by banks— all over the world when transporting the gold coin of the realm.

Snatching up a handful of the gems he thrust them into the yawning mouth of a small bag.

As he did so, from the idol above came a rusty sound very like a dismal groan, and which naturally thrilled the adventurer, such was the strain upon his nerves.

Springing to his feet he dashed out of the cavity and sprang around the base of the idol, half expecting to have one of those many arms swoop down and thrust him through with a poisoned blade.

A cheery laugh greeted his appearance and did much to restore his equanimity, especially when his eyes also reassured him that all was well.

The man who laughed was of course Lord Bruno, still squatting on the head of a broken idol which Red Eric had rolled out for his benefit, and evidently making remarkable sketches of the assembled deities, which in due process of time would ravish the eyes of those who patronized the enterprising London magazine for which the artist travelled.

"Don't wonder it set your nerves in a tremble, my boy. It's only Jim, perched up on the pedestal, and moving one of the extra arms his royal nibs is provided with. I suppose the priests were quite to work it from the inside, and that awful groan sent the cold shudders through the multitude lying on their faces. Gad, they were up to delightful tricks in those good old days, eh, and yet in my travels I've seen things just as brazen practiced in communities supposed to be civilized to-day. Go on with your work, Rex. If it's as pleasant as mine, you are to be envied I tell you."

Hastings waited not to argue the pro and con of that question, since he was quite in a fever to continue his task. He had travelled many weary leagues, had encountered innumerable perils from wild beasts and still wilder men, in order to enjoy this hour, and now that it had come his whole being thrilled with the sensation of victory such as but few men experience, and then only once in a lifetime.

ZEPPELIN'S AIRSHIP.

Its Inventors Spent a Fortune on the Device—
Description of the Giant.

The following news item from Friedrichshafen, published on the 18th October, created more than a mild stir in scientific and military circles the world over.

"The ascent of Count Von Zeppelin's airship this afternoon appears to have been a perfect success. It was steered against the wind and made successfully a number of tacks and other manoeuvres. At the close of the trial it sailed away in the direction of Immenstadt, which is about five English miles from this town. After a short flight toward Immenstadt it remained poised in the air for 45 minutes at a height of 600 metres, and then safely descended to the lake. Among the personages who witnessed the trial were the King and Queen of Württemberg in which this town is situated."

The idea upon which Count Von Zeppelin's success so far attained appears to be based, is that the envelope or outer portion of the balloon should be of such material as to hold the contained gas for as long a period as possible. The difficulty has not been in the making of gas in great quantities nor the buoyant power of large volumes suitably contained, but its retention in the envelope or receiver. Acting upon this idea, the Count has produced a material which would hold the hydrogen, the buoyant element being the lightest substance known for five weeks without appreciable loss. The cigar-shaped envelope has a capacity of 11,000 cubic metres of this gas (1 metre equal to 39.37 inches.) The exterior of the balloon is covered with a protective surface of pegamoid and silk. The total weight of the ship and crew is estimated not to exceed 20,000 pounds. The ship when completed resembles a huge cigar, made chiefly of aluminum. It is 415 ft. long, and the cylinder proper is 40 ft. in diameter. The total depth including the gondolas in which the passengers sit, is about 80 ft.

The framework of this huge cylinder consists of aluminum bands, 24 in number. The interior of the cigar is divided by 16 vertical ribs into 17 compartments, each of which contains an independent balloon, made of a material which the manufacturer calls "ballonin." The first ascent was to have taken place in October, 1899, but the balloons supplied did not fill the requirements and the first ascent did not take place till July 2, 1900, when it was seen that it was more than likely, to be a success.

The motive power of the big airship is furnished by 4 screws or propellers attached to the sides of the cigar, actuated by 2 Daimler motors of 15 horse-power each, and capable of turning at the rate of 1,200 revolutions per minute. These propellers are made with blades of aluminum. The action of such propellers known to the inventor and his friends, various experiments had to be carried out with them. One of these was to attach them to a boat resting on the water of Lake Constance and set them in motion against the air in order to see whether they would drive the boat forwards and backwards in spite of the extra resistance of the water. This experiment was eminently successful, the boat being driven in either direction at the rate of nearly ten miles an hour.

The cost of the device to Count Zeppelin before the first flight was something like $100,000. Even one charge of hydrogen gas for the balloon costs in the neighborhood of $2,500. The Count is now a man of 70, and lives at the castle of Ebersberg, near Constance, on the German side.

He served in the German army during the French war and it is said that a small part of his inspiration in ballooning was derived from his experience as a scout on a dangerous trip during that war and by the desire to see better methods of obtaining information. It is believed that a balloon which can be directed at will—can maintain its equilibrium and descent together without danger to the life of occupants or to the structure—has been at last attained.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS.

British Empire Building Unique Feature of The Century.

Britain's expansions has been easily the most wonderful achievement of a wonderful century. From the beginning of the nineteenth century to the present time the British Empire has grown from a small slip of the world, representing 2,000,000 square miles, scattered in little patches about the globe to a 'great kingdom of more than 20,000,000 square miles representing almost one-fourth of the world.

The detailed story of this growth would make a great volume: to give a slight idea of what it means is all that can be attempted in the limited space of a newspaper article.

With the beginning of the century the Union Jack was flying over little patches of Canada, over one or two small spots in Africa along the Western coast, over few isolated places along the coast of India, over a small settlement on the coast of Australia, where it guaranteed protection to none but a colony of convicts. To-day these small and widely scattered settlements have grown into empires; the few small patches of Canada have been connected, the rule of the Hudson Bay company has given way to the British Government and all of Canada is British. In Africa the two or three little spots along the Gold Coast are almost forgotten amidst the great expanse of English territory covering as it does nearly one-half of the great continent. The little colony of convicts in Australia has grown into a prosperous and populated continent with the British flag floating over every acre of it. And in India the British East India company has surrendered its government to that of Britain and our beloved sovereign reigns over the whole of a vast united empire. These represent only the great gains in territory by Britain. Her flag flies on every continent, and on the island of every ocean, and the end is not yet.

The close of the last century saw the British Empire growing smaller, rather than larger. Britain like other nations, had held her colonies for the aggrandizement of the home country only. To this the colonists objected; they desired citizenship that meant more than the privilege of paying taxes to the mother country. It was the later half of the new century that brought the change, though minor events had foreshadowed it. The repeal of the corn laws of England and the instituting of free trade meant privileges for Britain's colonies such as they had never known before, while the rise of the principle of democracy meant colonial home rule. Under such conditions citizenship in Britain's colonies was not to be despised.

Men flocked from the mother country to the colonies and pushed the boundary lines further and further inland from the oceans and little coast settlements. There was opportunity awaiting them in the new lands, and in them their rights as British subjects were as secure as though at home in the United Kingdom.

It was the rise of democracy that changed Britain from a country with colonies to one vast empire with London as a centre on which to revolve. It was the adoption of this democracy in her colonial policy that has given Britain the advantage of other European countries. Through a century of modern history France has retained the methods of the middle ages in dealing with her colonies. They have been held for the aggrandizement of the mother country, and Frenchmen have declined to emigrate to new lands where, though living under the tricolor, they cease to be Frenchmen, and because of this France has failed to carry civilization and advancement to the peoples she has subjugated.

For the past century the British Empire has grown at the rate of two acres of territory for every second of the passing time. In population the Empire has increased from 115,000,000 to 390,000,000. In connection with this statement of population Mr. J. Holt Schooling gives some interesting figures in an article published in a recent number of the Pall Mall Magazine from which the illustrations accompanying this article are taken. He shows that outside of the United Kingdom, Greater Britain had in 1800 a population of 100,000,000 of which only 2,000,000 were white and the remainder colored, or in other words only one person in 50 was white. While in 1900 the population has increased to 349,000,000 in Greater Britain outside of the United Kingdom, and more than 12,000,000 were white or one person in 28.

Of the great mass of Greater Britain's population—outside of the United Kingdom—all but 62,000,000 reside in India, and it is out of this 62,000,000 residing in other colonies that are taken the 12,000,000 whites, so that outside of India one in every five of the population of Greater Britain is white. The same writer has figured that Greater Britain has a population of 33 persons for every square mile of territory, and yet should all of this vast multitude visit London at the one time they could stand within a space covering but about half the size of the city.

Pain inaugurated a period of discovery and exploration at the end of the fifteenth century; upon the lands discovered Britain has builded a mighty empire by the close of the nineteenth century.

MALARIAL FEVER.

AFTER EFFECTS LEAVE THE VICTIM WEAK AND DEPRESSED.

Miss Emma Huskinson, a Captain in the Salvation Army, Tells How She Regained Health Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

From the Sun, Orangeville, Ont.
Among the oldest and most highly respected of Orangeville is Mrs. John Huskinson, whose daughter, Emma, has for a number of years been an acute sufferer from the effects of malarial fever. A reporter of the Sun on hearing of the wonderful effects which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have had on Miss Huskinson, called at her home to inquire into the truth of the rumor. After stating the reason of his visit, he was kindly received by Mrs. Huskinson, who gave him the following facts of the cure: "Some years ago," Emma who is now Captain of the Newmarket corps of the Salvation Army, was attacked by malarial fever. She was under a doctor's care for a long time and although she recovered sufficiently to go about, the after effects of the fever left her very weak and the doctor did not seem to be able to put any life into her. She had frequent headaches, was very pale, and the least exertion would greatly fatigue her. We thought a change might do her good and consequently she went on a visit to Toronto. While there she was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and at once purchased a supply. Before she had finished the second box she noted a marked change for the better; her appetite improved, her color returned, the feeling of exhaustion had disappeared, and by the time she had taken a half a dozen boxes she was enjoying the best of health, and all her old-time vigor had returned. Although her work in the Salvation Army is hard and exposes her to all kinds of weather, she has since been able to do it without the least inconvenience.

"Some time after my daughter's cure I was myself completely rundown, and to add to my trouble was seized by a severe attack of rheumatism. Remembering the benefit my daughter had received from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I decided to use them, before I had taken half a dozen boxes I felt fully recovered and have been in the best of health ever since. My advice to all ailing is to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have restored more weak and ailing women and girls to robust health than any other medicine ever discovered, which in part accounts for their popularity throughout the world. These pills are sold by all dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box, or six for 2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE OILY ASIATICS.

They Regard Europeans Generally as Vulgar Plebeians.
The manners of the European always strike the Asiatic as plebeian. He expects in an equal or superior kind of smoothness which few Europeans possess and which they never display in their intercourse with the colored races, who want of frankness and tendency to be deferential and general failure to secure the results which Europe desires slightly irritate them. The Asiatic thinks that want of frankness essential to politeness is always reserved unless he intends to be insolent and looks upon familiarity, especially if there is any difference of grade, as offensive, presuming and, in a word, rude. Very few Europeans appear to him to be gentlemen and those few only when they are not familiar.

The European's laugh in especial is to him as disagreeable as the laugh of the uncultivated is to the refined European, and European "chaff," persiflage, humor, is to him absolutely unendurable. It is, he thinks, the very quintessence of vulgarity and reminds him perpetually that he is being civil or submissive to one who is essentially, when the mask is off, a barbarian. This feeling, which is universal and incurable, greatly increases his sense of his opponent's stupidity, which again is deepened by his perception that the opponent is fettered in using his intellect by all manner of nonintellectual restrictions, is apt, for example, to resent a cruel or immoral suggestion, does not employ falsehood when falsehood clearly would be convenient and does not detect falsehood if it is plausible as a quick witted man should.

Long observation has convinced us that the Asiatic who lies to the European despises the European so much for accepting the falsehood that he often out of sheer contempt makes his falsehood less artistic than he could. Anything, he thinks, will do for a mind so dense as that. He is vexed, too, when his lie is too roughly exposed, vexed not as an ordinary European is, because he has been detected, but as a diplomatist is vexed when his smooth arguments are not put aside as smoothly. He ought not to be told that he is lying, but only to be shown as lightly as may be that the falsehood has not succeeded. Any other conduct he classifies as the result of ill-mannered, not to say brutal, stupidity and despises in his heart as the gentleman despises the scolding of the rough.

There was never any doubt as to Mr. Blair's standing on the North Shore. Both conservatives and liberals joined in support of his enlightened policy as a public administrator."

Pte. T. Moss Aitken was happily entertained last evening by the Boating and Bicycle Club, of which he is a member, at a complimentary dinner at the Barker House. Twenty guests were present and host Coleman excelled even himself in the excellence of the repast and the delightful manner in which it was served. Mr. R. S. Barker, president of the club, was in the chair and had the hero of the evening upon his right and Lt. Col. Loggie upon his left, and Manager Foster of the Merchant's bank was in the vice chair. After dinner the usual round of toasts were honored.—Gleaner.

Rev. Mr. Robinson, assistant pastor of the Sackville Baptist churches, will preach his farewell sermon next Sunday morning. The Rev. gentleman goes to Gibson, York County, on the opposite side of the river from Fredericton. He will have but one church to look after, and the work will consequently be much easier than in Sackville. The salary is much larger. Mr. Robinson has made many friends during the comparatively short time he has been in Sackville not only in the churches with which he has been associated, but among other churches as well. He will leave Sackville with best wishes for success.—Sackville Post.

Senator Gardner of Massachusetts, a son-in-law of the distinguished Senator Matthew Lodge arrived here on Saturday in company with Gay Norman of Boston. They went up to Bald Mountain in search of moose with Arthur Pringle as guide.

The death occurred at Black River on Monday of Mr. William McNaughton a well known resident of this section of the country. Mr. McNaughton was at one time captain in the 73rd regiment.

F. M. Smith and E. H. Bankine, of New York, came over the Canada Eastern Monday and registered at the Barker. They have been hunting on the Miramichi for the past few weeks but had poor luck.—Herald.

Fredericton Gleaner: Lumber operators say men are hard to get. Good wages have been offered all season, but the laborers continue scarce. It is thought, however, that now the election is over, there will be more men offering. In any event the prospects are that wages will be high, and all available men will be in demand.

"Our Boys Under Fire," is the title of a book received at this office. Its authoress is Miss Annie Elizabeth Melish of Charlottetown. As you will infer it is a work dealing with the campaign of the Canadians in South Africa. But it treats more especially of the part taken in the war by the men of the Maritime Provinces. The book is written in a bright, airy style and holds the close attention of the reader throughout.

The many friends of Mrs. Flewelling will regret to hear of her death which occurred in the west last week. She was a sister of Mrs. Jas. O. Fish and Mr. Edward Sinclair, and resided here prior to her departure for the west. She was a most estimable lady and leaves a very large number of mourning friends.

The Temperance Hall, Millerton will be formerly dedicated on Tuesday afternoon Nov. 20th at 3 o'clock. Rev. Jas. Crisp, G. W. P. will officiate and other Grand Division officers will assist in the service. A public meeting will be held in the evening at which addresses will be delivered, interspersed with vocal and instrumental music. A collection will be taken in aid of the building fund.

It is the intention of the members of the Maritime Province division of the First Contingent to hand themselves into an organization to keep green the memories of their South African campaign. Captain Stairs of Halifax is president, and two men from each province are on the executive committee. Messrs. Anslow and Aitken are the New Brunswick members of the executive. The organization will probably meet in Halifax, February 27th.

Adam Moore, the well known Tobique guide, is in town today, having just come out of the woods with a hunting party, Messrs. Nichol of New York, and Whitney, of Rochester. The former got a moose and a bear and Mr. Whitney secured a bear. Mr. Moore states that the two bears shot by these American hunters are the largest he has ever seen in New Brunswick. The present has been an eminently successful season for big game hunters on the Tobique, as well as elsewhere in New Brunswick. Mr. Moore has had nine gentlemen and one lady with him and they have secured eight moose, two caribou, six bears and a lot of smaller game—a record which will be hard to beat. The lady hunter was Mrs. Clifford Tower of New York, and she brought down a fine moose at 150 yards, and proud she was of her trophy.—Gleaner.

The following list of meetings will be held in Northumberland County under the auspices of the Maritime Stock Breeders' Association, for the discussion of breeding, feeding and marketing live stock, and the marketing of their products:—Napew, Wednesday, Nov. 21st; Blackville, Nov. 22nd and Indiantown Nov. 23rd. The speakers at the Northumberland County meetings will be Messrs. B. M. Fawcett, Sackville, N. B., and W. W. Hubbard, Secretary Maritime Stock Breeders' Association. Meetings will be held in the evening. The fullest possible discussion on all matters pertaining to the breeding, feeding and marketing of live stock is invited from those present.

SAFE, SURE, AND PAINLESS.

What a world of meaning this statement embodies. Just what you are looking for, is it not? Putman's Painless Corn Extract—or—the great sure-pop corn cure—acts in this way. It makes no sore spots; safe, acts speedily and with certainty; sure and mild, without inflaming the parts; painlessly. Do not be imposed upon by imitations or substitutes.

Dear Sirs,—I was for seven years a sufferer from Bronchial trouble, and would be so hoarse at times that I could scarcely speak above a whisper. I got no relief from anything till I tried your MINARD'S HONEY BALSAM. Two bottles gave relief and six bottles made a complete cure. I would heartily recommend it to any one suffering from throat or lung trouble.

Lowell's First Client.

James Russell Lowell studied law and took an office, but never had a case at court. The Rev. Edward Everett Hale told, however, the story of Lowell's first client. The poet had laid aside his law-book for the nonce and was polishing off a sonnet when the door opened and a strange man appeared with a look of doubt or trouble in his eyes.

Lowell hastily hid the sonnet in a pocket, sprang up with all the alacrity of courtesy he could command, offered a chair to the visitor, took his hat and put it on the table with as much reverence as if it were a retainer, drew up a chair opposite, pulled out a brand new notebook and, waving his pencil in a soft, inviting, confidential way, began: "Well, sir, I am all ready to take notes of your case. Please tell me everything, even the most trivial circumstance."

The stranger stood at him with open mouth for a minute, then grinned most amiably as he answered: "I'm the painter of your sign, sir; come to get my little bill."
