Economy
Ford car economy in first cost, in fuel cost, in maintenance cost, makes it the car for the owner of today.
The secret of Ford car economy is the Ford engine, simple and powerful, using a minimum of gas and oil for a maximum of mileage. Ford car sturdiness of construction throughout gives it the endurance which assures economy of maintenance as well as of operation.

DISTRICT AND GENERAL

Alvinston brass band, now defunct for several years, is being resuscitated.
Mrs. Margaret Philips of McGillivray, celebrated her 97th birthday on Friday.
Eleven persons in Canada paid income tax in 1919 on incomes of $200,000, or more.
Rain, electric and wind storms caused much damage in sections of central Ontario on Saturday.
A mail carrier on one of the Kent county rural routes was sentenced to three months in jail for tampering with mail matter.
Thomas Fenby, a well-known resident of Euphemia township, died on March 16 after a lingering illness, aged 63 years.
A gas well was shot by the Vacuum Co. in Dover township, near Chatham, Saturday, which has a flow of 800,000 cubic feet.
A fine of $15 each and costs was imposed on four men who attended a recent banquet at Campbellton with liquor in their possession.
Burglars entered W. H. Cuddy's hardware store and Keyser's pool room at Strathroy on Wednesday night and got away with a quantity of goods.
The section hands on the railways have been notified that a reduction of wages goes into effect on April 1. The new schedule will be 35 cents an hour.
Dugald McPhedrain, a well-known resident of the north part of Dunwich township, died on Sunday, March 13th, after a brief illness with pneumonia.
George E. McCraney, K.C., ex-M.P., was found dead near his home at Saskatoon. He was born at Bothwell 53 years ago and was a son of the late Daniel McCraney.
A little girl in Pennsylvania was killed by the explosion of a toy balloon which she was blowing up. A section of the mouthpiece was forced into the child's throat by the force of the explosion.
James Jones, a wealthy farmer, of Zone township, was found in his barn hanging from a rope which had been tied to a beam. His son, upon discovering the body, cut the rope and called assistance from neighbors. Jones died a few days later.
Michael Hillyard, aged 26, was caught in a belt which he attempted to put on a pulley while sawing wood on the farm of Dr. Gardner near Mt. Brydges on Saturday and received injuries which resulted in his death in the Strathroy hospital on Sunday.
William Chantler, whose son, a pupil at one of the Windsor public schools, recently had four alleged sound teeth extracted by Dr. Bienn school dentist, has instructed a firm of solicitors to institute action for damages against the dentist and making the school trustees responsible.
At a meeting of the beet growers of the Alvinston district held last week it was decided to take a test case to court in the matter of the bonus paid them on their sugar beets last season by the sugar companies. It is expected the case will be heard in Petrolia about April 18th.
Dr. David Gibb Fleming, who passed away at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Herbert S. London, in Toronto, Wednesday morning, was born in Aldborough township 80 years ago. He received his early education in the public schools of Aldborough and Mosa and the Wardsville Grammar School.
The mayor of Petrolia advocates furnishing the chief of police with a blacksnake whip to keep kids off the street at night, instead of ringing the curfew bell, as requested by the local Council of Women. His Worship is right; but the whip should be used on the parents, instead of the kids, as he probably intended.
An effort is being made to have part of the site of the Battle of Moraviantown converted into a highway park. The Longwoods road, one of the Provincial highways, curves through the scene of the conflict close to the spot where Tecumseh gave up his life trying to avert the disgrace which later came to the British arms when General Proctor led his army in headlong flight eastward.

DEATH OF CHARLES TUCKER

Newbury, March 22.—The last link with the early days of this village was broken Saturday morning when Charles Tucker passed away, aged 74 years and 3 months. For several weeks deceased has been gradually failing till the last three, when he was confined to his bed. He died as he lived, quietly passing away as the dawn broke in the east, the faint daylight falling on his face which bore almost a smile as he quietly closed his eyes and the soul had gone on to join that of his wife, who had been waiting there for him since September, 1916.
The late Charles Tucker was born on the Gibb farm, just west of Wardsville, and moved here to the house in which he died about 66 years ago. He was much in public life, being in the council as reeve, and for the past 24 years had held the office of clerk. He was president of the Old Boys' Association from the origin till his death. He loved the village and would make any sacrifice or effort to maintain its beauty or aid in its progress. In his young days he was an athlete and never lost his interest in the sports of young people. As a neighbor and friend he could always be counted on to lend assistance. He was of a quiet disposition but never out of temper—everything was all right. He will be sadly missed, as no one living here now can remember the village without his familiar figure on the streets. The village flag floated at half-mast from the time of passing away of deceased till after the funeral. The late Charles Tucker was an ardent Conservative, and for many years a member of the Church of England. His father gave the lot on which the church now stands and he as a lad assisted in drawing brick when the church was built in 1863.
The funeral services were held in Christ church on Monday at 2 o'clock, Rev. R. J. Murphy, B.A., rector, taking the service. The church was filled with those who came to pay their last respects to a friend and a good citizen. The pallbearers were D. J. Batsner, Wm. Bayne, A. Holman, Dr. J. P. McVicar, Wm. C. King and Wm. J. Armstrong. Interment was made in the family plot at Oakland. The floral offerings from the "village" and friends were very beautiful. Much sympathy is expressed for the lonely daughter, Annie Laurie, who is left to mourn her father and dear companion. Among those from a distance attending the funeral were Miss Nellie Archer, Detroit; Miss Moyna Gibb, Blenheim, and D. G. Archer, Windsor.

DEATH OF COL. O'MALLEY
Col. Chas. A. O'Malley, one of the oldest and best-known pioneer residents of the community, passed away at the home of his son, Peter O'Malley, Wardsville, on Sunday morning, March 20. Col. O'Malley was a Fenian raid veteran, and in 1882 commanded the 25th Battalion, or Elgin Infantry, with a strength of 18 officers and 170 men.

Turbans, toques, tams, sailors, sport effects and elaborate picture hats comprise our most unusual selection this season.—Mrs. W. A. CURRIE.
THE HARVEST WAS GREAT
Last fall there was a great deal of indignation expressed by farmers and others of this section who visited London Fair over the numerous complaints lodged under the Motor Vehicles Act for speeding. Looking over the last "Quarterly List of Convictions" sent out by the county clerk, it is found that during the months of September and October the number of convictions under the act by Magistrates Chittick of London and Hawkshaw of Lucan totalled 590. The fine in each case was $2, and costs $8.25. Of the costs the magistrate received a fee in each case of $3.25 and the constable $4.50.
Many of those against whom charges were laid had the reputation of being very moderate drivers, and while they were ready to declare that they had not exceeded the speed limit, it did not enter any defense, choosing rather to pay their fine and costs than have to submit to the worse burden of loss of time and travelling and other expenses, which their appearance at court would entail.
The "List of Convictions" states that the fines were paid over to the treasurers of the municipalities in which the offences were committed.
The fast growing demand for Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules and RAZ-MAH for Asthma, which H. I. Johnston's drug store has experienced since securing the local agency, proves the value of the medicines.

DIED IN CALGARY

The many friends of the family will regret to learn of the sudden death of Mrs. W. S. Stuart at the hospital in Calgary on March 19. The cause of her death was blood poisoning following an operation. Mrs. Stuart was formerly Miss Mary Webster, B. A., and the daughter of the late Robert Webster and of Mrs. Ellen Webster of Appin. She is survived by her husband and four small children, her mother, and two brothers, David and Earl, of Ekfrid. Mrs. Webster has been visiting her daughter in Calgary for some time.

NOT A DANGEROUS COMET

Prof. C. A. Chant, head of the astronomical department of Toronto University, says the comet now driving for the world in violation of all the known speed laws, will not even be in sight for an ordinary telescope till sometime next month. We shall probably have the fireworks, but there will be no collision, Prof. Chant believes. "There is no chance of its striking the earth. The ordinary person will never know that a comet is anywhere in his vicinity at all. It will be nothing but a faint light spot at the best, with no visible head or tail."

Your Easter Hat is Ready

EASTER is the "dress-up" occasion for all womankind. It is the season of the year when a new hat is as necessary as a new pair of shoes, a new dress or a new suit. And we've prepared our stocks for an unusually busy season. Very choice straw weaves in novelty finishes and other fashionable effects trimmed and turned with a clever aptitude that denotes real style distinction.

GLENCOE'S NEW POSTMASTER

The appointment was made a few days ago William Albert Currie, junior, to the position of postmaster at Glencoe, in room of Robert Clapham, resigned, who has filled the position with splendid efficiency for some thirty-five years. Mr. Currie is a Glencoe boy who served overseas and was wounded in the recent war. He is a young man of aptitude and ability and his appointment will no doubt be generally acceptable to the community. Post Office Inspector Fisher's deputy was in town on Tuesday installing the new official.

NEWBURY

C. W. Blain of Silverwoods, Ltd., has gone to the hospital at London for treatment. Earl Blain is in charge. Mrs. Blain was also taken ill a few days ago, but is better.

Rev. R. J. Bowen, agent for the Bible Society, delivered an address in the basement of Knox church Tuesday night. The officers for the local branch are: President, Rev. Mr. Murphy; secretary-treasurer, John G. Bayne; members of executive—Rev. Mr. Farquharson, Mrs. Wm. Bayne, David and Earl, of Ekfrid. Mrs. Webster has been visiting her daughter in Calgary for some time.

Mrs. R. J. Haghigh has returned from Detroit and Harrow where she has been visiting for a time.

The construction of the hydro is progressing rapidly. The wires are strung south of the railroad. Mrs. John A. Smith was on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. W. A. Edwards, last week.

Rev. Mr. Farquharson will speak on "Reading" Friday night at the Young People's meeting. The public school re-opened on Monday morning.

Wm. June unloaded a car of wire fencing last week, and Isaac Saylor a carload of fertilizer. The merchants in town have agreed to close their places of business at 12.30 p.m. each Wednesday, commencing on April 6th, until October 1st.

KILMARTIN
Mr. and Mrs. John H. McFarlane of Detroit returned last week after spending some days with friends here.

The regular literary meeting of the No. 9 U. F. O. Club will be held on Friday evening next. There will be a debate: "Resolved that the invention of machinery has done more harm than good." Affirmative speakers, John S. McAlpine and Richard Coad of South Ekfrid; negative, Mitchell Innes and Neil W. Munroe of No. 9. A good musical program will also be given.

Miss Anna Dewar of Detroit is spending a week at her home here. Dan L. and Clarence McKellar left on Monday for Sarnia. They will spend the summer sailing on the lake.

The Secret of the Old Chateau

By DAVID WHITELAW.

(Copyright.)

How the Story Began:

Vivian Renton and Eddie Haverton, modern soldiers of fortune, have been gambling with Hubert Baxenter, a prosperous attorney in his London apartments. The two lose heavily. After their departure in the early morning hours, Renton returns to the house with the idea of recovering the lost money. He chloroforms Baxenter and makes a vain search for the money which is lying in an envelope on the desk, addressed to a hospital. Finally Renton starts to search the inert body lying on the hearth-rug and discovers to his horror that Baxenter is dead. The clock chimes half-past five.

He shuddered at the calm horror of the room. The ticking of the clock seemed to him so loud that he felt it would be heard by people outside. The sounds seemed to call out mur—tick—tick—mur—tick—tick. He crossed the room hurriedly and blew out the flame of the candle, and stood there in the gray light, trembling pitifully. He heard the tread of policeman on his beat, and for one tense moment the light from a lantern flashed on the windows and across the ceiling.

There would be workmen about and milkmen on their early rounds. They would take notice of a figure in evening dress which was seen leaving a house at that hour, and would remember it afterward to his undoing. He called to mind cases in which such evidence had placed the rope round men's necks.

Besides there was the body—he could not leave it there staring at him. He could just make out the shapeless figure on the white square of the rug. He knew that Baxenter had intended leaving for Paris in the morning, and that he had already sent his servants away—the cook, the butler, and his man to execute a commission for him in the country. After all perhaps the body would be as safe where it was as anywhere.

But some force was working within him, telling him to hide from the coming day his ghastly handiwork. Vivian told himself that he had not meant this—it was not the first time he had used the chloroform pad which he carried always in his little case in his breast pocket. It had been his intention only to drug the solicitor, and he felt a seething resentment against the fate which had made him a murderer in spite of himself.

With noiseless steps he crossed the room and opened the door, looking out furtively into the dim and lofty hall. The staircase, wide and carpeted, led away up into the gloom, and taking his courage in his hands, Vivian ascended. The stairs creaked and cracked like pistol shots through the silence.

He passed from the ghostly room to the gray dawn giving to the shrouded furniture and chandeliers strange and unwanted shapes and gleaming weirdly in the looking-glasses. Ascending further, he found attic crowded with lumber. A window grimy with dirt led out on to the roof, and Vivian saw that there was the hiding place he had been seeking. Among the chimney stacks and hidden by the cables, a body might be forever undiscovered.

He performed the task vaguely and as though in a dream. The burden was not a heavy one, but it seemed an eternity of unreal life before Vivian went back against a chimney stack and said that his labor was over.

Vivian crawled with a shudder back through the window and so down to the card-room. The air here was chill and the fire was long dead ashes. The man seemed to miss the figure that had been on the rug. He shivered and had recourse to the whiskey-bottle again and again.

The thought that was now uppermost in his mind was that he must spend the whole day in this house of death. It was now close upon eight o'clock, and, peeping through the blinds, Vivian saw that the life of the terrace had begun in earnest. Clerks were hurrying past on their way to the tube station, and the postman was at the house opposite talking through the area railings with a pretty servant-maid. He noticed all these things with a curious detachment.

The clerks, hurrying to their work, would be passing up till ten o'clock, and after them would come the nurse-maids with the children and the ladies off to their shopping. Each and every one of them would notice the man coming from No. 9. He felt that they could all stop and stare at him. No, there was nothing for it but to wait until darkness made escape possible.

At the same time, he told himself that he was perfectly safe where he was. Hubert Baxenter was supposed to have left, and none could suspect the tragedy which had taken place in the night.

But he must be silent, and the blinds must be left down, and he must allow himself neither fire nor light. After midnight the road would be clear, and in the darkness he could leave unperceived. He was glad that he had removed the thing from the rug; the long white fur was flattened down at places and he ruffled these with his foot.

For some time the man sat motionless in the silence of the darkened room. The hours passed slowly and he must have fallen asleep, for he awoke to find himself on the Chesterfield with the afternoon sun cutting bright patterns on the carpet. The clock pointed to a quarter to two. He counted on his fingers that there were five more hours at the least.

Vivian was feeling hungry, and making his way down to the kitchen, he found a few biscuits and refreshed himself with these and a glass of water taken from the tap. As he drank, a shadow fell across the window, and the tumbler all but dropped from his nerveless fingers. He stepped back carefully to the door, and ascending to the bedroom window, peered cautiously over the blind.

Two men were at work in the garden, and Vivian watched them with a cold clutch at his heart. Suppose they had a key to the house and were to come in! But saner judgment told him that they were hardly likely, and that they were gardeners and would use the side door. Nevertheless, their presence was an added terror to the imprisoned man. The tick-tack of the clock came through the folding doors. It still spelled out murder, but not loudly—only very slowly, like a long drawn out whisper.

He went back to the room facing the road, and, crossing to the bureau, casually picked up the envelope addressed to the hospital. The peculiar crackling noise given out by its contents awakened his curiosity and caused him to open it. He gave a little gasp of pleasure as he thought how useful this windfall would be in assisting him to leave the country, and, again, more to pass the time than anything else, fell to examining the drawers of the desk and bureau.

There were many papers, legal and private, and a few jewels—these latter of no great value and barely worth the taking; Vivian tried to leave these as being articles easy of identification. A glance at the numbers of the bank notes told him that they had mostly been won from Eddie and himself, and no one would ever know they had left the possessor to their original owners.

He was about four o'clock when he made his great discovery. He was putting back into its place a little envelope to the right of the pigeon-hole in the bureau, when, unknowingly, he must have released some hidden spring, for another drawer, cunningly concealed in the panelling at the back, sprang out. Vivian's nervous system was already shattered by the work of the night and he fell back, his heart beating strangely, and it was some moments before he could bring himself to touch the papers which had now been exposed.

There were but two. One was evidently the last will and testament of the man who now lay dead on the floor, the other—a parchment yellow with age and creased with much usage. It was folded lengthwise and was endorsed in an angular hand-writing. Vivian took this over to the light which came thinly through the blinds.

At first, as he read, he showed no particular interest in the matter set forth in the cramped, faded calligraphy on the parchment. It was when he had reached the second folio of the document that a look of interest came into the keen eyes. After that he read to the end without raising them.

And, when he had finished, he dropped down in the easy chair and sat, the parchment sheets hanging down in his listless hands, his eyes fixed, unseeing, on space. From the street outside came the movement of the life of the afternoon, the rumble of vehicles, the shrill laughter of children. The only sound within the room was the eternal ticking of the clock. "If I only dared—"

The man in the chair breathed the words.

—A fortune in it, perhaps—and a lost identity—at one stroke! If I only dared!

He rose to his feet and took a blotting-pad from its place on the desk, and, choosing the spot where the waning light was strongest, placed it on his knee and commenced to write.

Word for word he made a copy of what he had been reading—a very rough copy—partly in a shorthand of his own, for the light would not last long now and he dared not risk a candle.

The scheme, if what was nebulous in his brain could be called that, necessitated, above all, that the original document should be returned with the will to the secret drawer in the bureau. It was necessary that, when the heir to the dead solicitor came to take possession, they should find intact and unaltered, showing no signs of having been tampered with.

It was all but dark when Vivian put away his fountain pen, and, folding what he had written, placed it in his breast pocket, together with the top part of the blotting pad. He examined a little diffidently in replacing the drawer, but at last he told himself that all was as he had found it and that No. 9 Mortimer Terrace showed no signs of his stay. The bank notes were safely in his possession, and nothing remained for him but to take the first opportunity of leaving the house.

He noticed with a keen satisfaction that with the coming of night the fog had again settled down over the district, and although not so dense as before, still would serve as a curtain to cloak his departure. He buttoned his coat closely round his throat and felt his way out into the hall. He had his hand on the latch, when he started back and stood motionless with fear.

There came the creak of the gate and then footsteps on the gravel path. Vivian had, for the moment, lost all power of movement. Had the person coming up the path possessed a key, the gate that Vivian was planning would have had but a short life. The steps came to a stand on the top of the flight of stone stairs that led from the door to the garden. To the man on the mat the time seemed an eternity; his nerves were in no fit condition for this.

There was a rattle at the door and with a wave of relief flooding over him, Vivian could just discern a white envelope—a circular—being pushed through the letterbox. He nearly shouted with laughter as he heard the postman's steps die away down the path.

It was a small matter in itself, but Vivian returned to the room he had left and drank off the remainder of the whiskey. He told himself that he must pull himself together; it was not usual for him to be frightened at a shadow. But then Vivian Renton had never killed a man before.

To a Discouraged Man.

You would resent it if anybody should intimate that you were not the author of your own success; that it had been due to outside influence; to pulls, or to outside capital. You claim that there is nothing mysterious, no secret about the success you have had up to the present time; that it is due solely to your own effort, your own hard work, your own intelligence.

Now, what reason have you for thinking that a larger success, a success magnified a thousand times, would have any special secret back of it?

The same processes you have employed, if extended, accentuated, intensified all along the line, will increase your success tremendously. This matter lies in your own hands. Nobody else can do this work for you.

If you have accomplished all that you have done without any remarkable effort, without any remarkable strain, without thinking so very much about it—what could you not do if you should fling into your endeavors all the force you could muster—the whole weight of your being? If ordinary efforts have accomplished what you have accomplished—what would not extraordinary efforts do? What could you not do by putting your whole heart into your work, bringing a super-enthusiasm to it, coming to it with a determination to be a winner, not of an artisan? Perhaps only half of you has been in your efforts in the past; think then what you could do if you were all there!

Don't think so much about the big boom that may come to you from some mysterious source; just better your best each day. Concentrate a little more, have more courage, more self-confidence, intensify your application, your dead-in-earnestness, and before you realize it you will have multiplied your powers tremendously. —O. S. Marden.

Completing the Job.

Man has circumnavigated the globe, has penetrated the Arctic and the Antarctic in the two poles and has explored the great depths of the ocean—no indeed by visiting them, but with his sounding instruments. But he has never yet attained the summit of the loftiest peak. That task is about to be undertaken. If it shall be accomplished, no grand problem of geography will remain unsolved. Under the patronage of the British Royal Geographical Society and the Alpine Club an expedition is to be organized that will next year attempt to climb Mount Everest, the un conquered giant of the Himalayas and the highest mountain in the world.

Although Everest is in latitude twenty-eight degrees north, which is only four and a half degrees from the tropic of Cancer and therefore free to the Torrid Zone, it is situated in a region of such altitude, roughness and isolation, and in such a climate, that no white man has ever yet within forty miles of the base of it. The difficulties that the expedition will encounter even before the actual ascent begins are almost inconceivable, yet they will be multiplied with every stage of the climbing. Intense cold, blinding storms, avalanche falling rocks, crevasses and deceitful snow bridges over chasms are not the only discomforts and dangers that will be experienced; and all the time the diminishing supply of air for the lungs as greater heights are attained will render success almost, perhaps quite, beyond human power.

The summit of Everest is, as trigonometrically ascertained, 29,141 feet above sea level. That makes a perpendicular of more than five and a half miles to be overcome. The greatest height hitherto attained in the Himalaya region, and probably anywhere in the world, is 24,500 feet, reached by the Duke of the Abruzzi on the Bride Peak, which is the third highest of the range.

The expedition is not to start until next year. Preparation for it will take a long time. Heretofore the government of Tibet has not permitted access to Everest from points where approach is easiest. It has now given permission, and we are about to see whether it was obstructive human laws that kept man from completing his knowledge of his terrestrial dwelling place by reaching the "roof of the world," or whether it is human endurance that is unequal to the task.

Inaccurate Thermometers.

Even thermometers become old, and consequently inaccurate, with age. Mercurial instruments reading too high and spirit instruments too low. In the former case the bulb appears to shrink, thus forcing the quicksilver too far up the stem. This gradual shrinkage is supposed to be due to the fact that the external pressure on the bulb may be considerably higher than the internal pressure, the air as far as possible having been removed before the glass is sealed.

On the other hand, the spirit thermometer is sealed with the bulb covered in a freezing mixture, in order to lock up in the glass as much air as possible. The instrument thus starts with the internal pressure which in time appears to be reduced either by expansion of the glass under the internal pressure or by leakage.

The pearl industry has taken up the X-ray as a money saver. Oysters are radiographed without the shells being opened, and those containing no pearls are not considered. Those showing signs of small pearls are put back to give the jewel a chance to grow up.

An hour later the man closed the door of No. 9 Mortimer Terrace softly behind him and walked quietly, out into the darkness.

TORNADOES AND FLOODS CAUSE DAMAGE TO ONTARIO TOWNS

One Farmer Killed and Another Fatally Injured Near Kincardine and Considerable Damage Done to Property— Floods in Northern Section of Port Hope.

Kincardine, March 20.—Hugh J. McArthur, aged 50, was instantly killed, and Wm. Ferris, aged 47, was so badly injured internally that he is dying in the hospital here, when John M. Bowie's barn, on the 1st concession of Bruce, was flattened out by a wind storm here yesterday morning. Mr. Bowie was injured in the head, shoulder and hip, but though the barn was entirely flattened out, several head of cattle and horses that were in it were not injured.

About 10 o'clock a strong wind came up from the southwest over Lake Huron, while simultaneously a blow came from the northeast. Meeting in this district, they formed a regular cyclone, whirling sticks 50 to 100 feet in the air. Thousands of dollars' damage was done over an area of some four by eight miles, centring about Tiverton, and reaching from the first to the fourth concession of Bruce. Some particulars of the havoc follow:

John Drummond—Barn completely blown down.

C. S. Wood—Barn blown down.
W. G. Cole—Barn blown down.
Duncan McKenzie, Colin MacDougall, D. S. McLaren, John McKinnon, D. J. Patterson—Barns badly damaged, roofs carried away.

Capt. McKay—Barn completely blown down.

Malcolm McIver—Barn unroofed.

Ross McKenzie—Kitchen carried completely away.

Some twenty other farms and places damaged.

Port Hope, March 20.—Yesterday's heavy rain turned the Ganaraska River into a torrent, with the result that the business section and the northern part of the town were completely flooded.

Every business place on the north side of the main street suffered, and in many places water rushed to a depth of five and six feet. Two sections of the Midland railway were undermined and the rails toppled into the river. Traffice will be tied up for several days.

Water flowed through the Nicholson file factory to a depth of six feet, and the damage to stock and machinery is very heavy. The Cosmos Chemical Co. are also very heavy losers. Their whole ground floor was flooded, and more than twenty barrels of oil were carried down the river.

Hundreds of logs from the Port Hope veneer factory were carried away, and a portion of Spiers & Tye's sawmill was wrecked and a large quantity of shingles and lumber was lost.

About eight thousand dollars' worth of stock in the Port Hope file factory was badly damaged, and the north part of the flume at the lace factory was carried away.

The streets adjacent to the river were all undermined, and concrete walks and crossing were smashed up. The damage is estimated at one hundred thousand dollars.

Orono, March 20.—A heavy down-pour of rain, accompanied by an exceptionally severe electrical storm, caused extensive damage in this neighborhood last night. A returned soldier who recently settled near Kendall lost a horse, which was drowned when a bridge caved in, while his wife narrowly escaped drowning, being rescued with difficulty from water up to her neck.

Three washouts occurred on the C. N. Rys., at Mileage 37, Mileage 48, and Mileage 81. At Mileage 48, just east of Orono, the rails and ties were five feet in the air.

Leskard mill dam gave way, and a dam on the 8th concession of Clarke township was torn to pieces. Laing's bridge, on the 4th concession, also collapsed.

The barn of Allan Cathcart, near Kendall, was struck by lightning and burned, together with feed, seed, some implements and live stock. The loss is about $3,500, with a little more than $2,000 insurance.

Easter Eggs in the Making.

Probably not one person in a thousand who buys Easter eggs knows how they are made.

Most of the eggs are made by machinery. First a soft, jelly-like mass of sugar and other ingredients is boiled in cauldrons, and then, when still soft, it is cut into oblong or brick-shaped pieces of many different sizes by machinery. These pieces are thrown into huge copper cauldrons, with wide-open, gaping mouths.

When the soft sugar bricks are thrown in, the kettles begin to revolve, and the pieces rolling around and around shape themselves into eggs, and grow harder and harder, although the inside still is soft. And, after the "shell" is formed it is colored to suit the taste.

The great fancy eggs are made of sugar crystals. The crystallized sugar is moulded into egg shape, in moulds the size of just half the egg, and then the two halves are sealed together, and the delicate sugar flowers and pictures are put on and colored by hand.

The fluffy little Easter chicks are made of real feathers, which are glued to a body generally made of papier-mache, although sometimes of wool, cotton or wood.

The putting on of the feathers is a delicate task, and is mostly done by girls who stand all day pasting little soft feathers on the forms, as the bodies are called. Then the bodies are turned over to the men who color them after the glue is dried.

These men are excellent workmen and sit with their brushes and paint chickens all day, sometimes using an air-brush to color the delicate little feathers. After they are colored they look exactly like a crowd of fluffy little chicks.

Then they are dried again and placed in long rows on shelves, after which they have little chocolate eyes put on them.

In order to uncover an area 1,000 by 1,300 feet of asbestos-bearing ground, 600,000 cubic yards of over-burden has to be removed at the King Mine, Thorford, Quebec.

Recently Albert, King of the Belgians, fell heir to an island in the lake of Como, Italy. He offered it to the Italian government on condition that it should become a residence for artists. The Italian undersecretary for the fine arts is now carrying out the King's wishes and believes that the community will be ready for painters, musicians and poets by next summer.

Easter Morn

Bloom on, brave wind-flowers, in your sheltered nooks;
Lift high your golden crown, fair daffodil;
Sing, sing your maddest melody, O brook—
The world but yesterday was grey and chill.

Narcissus nestling in the tender grass,
And violets blue as are the skies above,
Hark to the rapturous song in winds that pass:
"Two things there be immortal—Life and Love!"

O lily, lifting up your fragrant breath
Where snowflakes spread themselves but yesterday,
You softly cry: "Where is thy sting, O death?
O grave, where is thy boasted victory?"

The Easter Lily

THIS is the tale of a lily bud that would not bloom as a lily should. The little girl gave it her kindest care, she wanted it so for Easter Day; but ever the flower seemed to stay stiffly wrapped in its little green hood. On Easter Eve not a sign of white. The little girl looked, then turned away. She didn't have even a word to say, but she cried herself softly to sleep that night.

At twelve o'clock, or a quarter of, fairy Raindrop and fairy Light and fairy Beauty and fairy Love (the four good fairies that set things right) came and worked in the dark of the night. They climbed the stalk and the tall green stem and dusted the leaves and polished them; they slowly opened the tight green bud, and smoothed out its petals creamy white; two of them carefully lifted up the fair frail bell of the lily cup, filled it with sweetness, all it would hold, then powdered it deep with shining gold.

"The little girl stirred in her sleep to say, 'I wanted my flower for Easter Day.' Then her eyelids moved, for she dreamed she heard tinkling laughter and whispered word, flutter of wings and silver cries—'Quick, be quick, or she'll open her eyes!' And deep in her dreams again she stirred. The fairies fluttered around the room, and hid themselves in the fireplace, and clung to the gauzy curtain's lace, waiting for dawn of day to come; and the little girl slept with a smile on her face, and the tall white flower was fair in the gloom. At peep of daylight she wakened wide. 'Easter is here,' I think," she said.

She sat up straight in her little bed and thought of the lily plant, and sighed. Then day broke over the edge of the wood, and a ray of sunshine came peeping through and shone on the spot where the lily stood.

"Oh, most beautiful—look!" she cried. She could scarcely believe that it was true, yet there was the lily, brave and new.

"Everyone come," she cried, "and see what a wonderful thing has happened to me!"

The flower nodded away in the sun. The fairies folded their tired wings—dear little helpful, happy things—and silently, softly stole away. And the little girl sang all Easter Day!

WHEN PEACE CAME

By Alva Audrey Merritt

Easter dawns! And as I watch the glory of the heavens my soul is filled with joy and reverent wonder. The Master Artist is at work. Purple and silver mists veil the sky. These slowly disappear and dull blue and rose and palest gold transform the east. Rose-bosomed clouds hide the rising sun; but at length, through crimson vapors, the sun shines forth, casting a radiance over valley and hill and mountain, caressing every tree and shrub, gilding alike the gorgeous homes of the wealthy and the shabby homes of the poor.

In the treetops just outside my window the birds twitter drowsily. An early robin begins to warble joyously; now other birds blend their notes with his, and day is ushered in by a multitude of feathered songsters.

From a distant part of the town come the sweet, solemn chimings of church bells. As I listen I think of other towns, of other churches, in a far-away land.

A ray of sunshine steals in at the window and rests upon a mass of lilies beside my bed and as I gaze at their loveliness and breathe their sweet perfume I think of other lilies—the lilies of France.

The merry laughter of a child floats up to me from the street below. My heart is filled with joy as I listen. Like the tinkling of bells, like sunshine dancing on the waters, like the rustling of leaves in the breeze, is the laughter of that child.

Many times I have watched the sunrise, many times I have listened to the songs of the birds, but this is Easter Day! The sunrise is more beautiful, the birds' songs sweeter, the sunshine more golden, for upon this morn I have found new strength and courage. New life is stealing through my veins. Hope is born anew.

Three years ago I watched the dawn of Easter Day from a shell-hole in No Man's Land. Severely wounded, I prayed to God to let me die, for I knew that I would be badly crippled if I lived. But the thread of life was strong, my life flickered like a flame, but the hand of God shielded it from the breath of death.

Through blinding, bitter tears I watched the glory of the Easter heralds, and I cursed my fate, cursed, and cried like a child. Then unconsciousness blotted out everything.

One year later the Easter sunshine awakened me from a troubled sleep. I was lying in a snowy bed, my head rested on soft billowy pillows. I was at home in my old room.

I glanced about. Ah! everything was the same. There was my cluttered desk, here was the big cork arm-chair, there were my college trophies and pictures of college chums. But, no! The room was not quite the same; something was missing. Then I remembered. My old snow shoes that had decorated one side of the wall were gone. Who had taken them away? Ah, in a flash I knew—myself. I glanced down at my legs, my body and I turned my face away from the Easter sunshine and wept tears of agony.

The door opened quietly; some one was coming toward me with quick, light steps. A hand caressed my hair, a voice murmured, "My son! My loved one!" Then a pair of arms encircled my neck, a soft cheek rested against my rough one, and tears like summer rain fell upon my face. "Mother," I sobbed, "mother! mother!"

Well, I have found peace at last. And the old rebelliousness against Fate is gone now. I have found healing in the Easter sunshine, in the beauty of the lilies, in the laughter for a little child!

Ah, some one is coming! "Mother," I cry gladly. Her hand caresses my hair, her tears fall upon my face. But I smile and whisper, "Dry your tears, dear. I have found peace and courage and strength to-day! Though my body is crippled my soul isn't—it is free to climb the heights!"

An exquisite smile is upon my mother's face now! I hear her voice saying, softly, sweetly, "My son, you have been very near to God! Then gently she draws my head down upon her breast just as she used to do when I was a little child, and her tears fall upon my upturned face, and as they fall they heal my anguish heart. Ah, now I face the future unafraid, for I have found peace and courage and strength.

Concerning Rabbits—and Eggs.

Easter eggs which are pretty and novel may be decorated as follows: In several small cups, set in hot water, melt up odds and ends of Christmas or birthday candles of different colors. Having previously boiled the eggs in soda water, on each egg draw with a pencil, lightly, a rabbit, a tiny chick, a flower, or anything that will be somewhat appropriate.

Then, with a small camel's-hair brush, apply the melted wax, which cools rapidly, the design standing out like a cameo. Next have ready lukewarm dyes of any color desired, and dip in the eggs. Dyeing the eggs will not affect the wax.

Many artistic results may be obtained. Thus a pure white rabbit with pink eyes, on a yellow or purple egg, is very attractive; or a yellow chick on a tuft of green grass on a pink egg is lovely.

Success consists in finding the shortest line between two points: where we are and where we want to be.

EXPLOSION OF GRAIN DUST WRECKS CHICAGO ELEVATOR WORTH $10,000,000

Southern Section of City Rocked and Every Window Shattered Within Mile Radius—Heavy Damage Caused to Nearby Towns.

Chicago, March 20.—An explosion of grain dust rocked the entire southern section of Chicago early Saturday night, wrecked one of the world's largest grain elevators and broke every window within a radius of a mile.

Of the nine watchmen who were trapped in the structure by the blast, two are known to be dead and four are missing.

The elevator, which consisted of a series of steel and concrete towers was built at a cost of more than ten million dollars and was operated by the Armour Grain Company.

The explosion was due, it was said by officials, who made an early inquiry, to fire that started in a loading chute. The blaze set fire to the dust-filled air and the resulting blast rent asunder the big tower, releasing thousands of bushels of grain.

The explosion hurled great concrete blocks for hundreds of feet and derailed a freight train which was standing on a track beside the elevator.

Heavy damage was caused in nearby towns by the explosion. Windows were shattered in Hammond, Whiting and East Chicago. The heaviest sufferer was Whiting, where it was reported every window in the downtown business district was broken. The property loss there, according to merchants, will reach $100,000.

Normally about 5,000,000 bushels of grain are stored in the elevator but at the time of the blast there was only about 500,000 bushels. This was destroyed by the fire.

The explosion took place just after 150 employees had quit for the day. According to one eye-witness there were three separate explosions, the last being the most severe. The explosion tore the entire top off the elevator. This was of light steel-concrete construction and was designed so that the force of any blast would be sent through the upper part of the elevator—like the mouth of a great cannon. So great was the force of the blast, however, that the tower itself was shattered, great pieces of concrete from its sides being thrown about in all directions. Early estimates put the property loss at more than $6,000,000.

A Russian Easter Service

Dramatic and awe inspiring was the midnight Easter mass at the cathedral of St. Isaac in Petrograd. There was in it even perhaps a touch of the barbaric. In his reminiscences Lord Frederic Hamilton, formerly of the British diplomatic service, gives a striking account of the splendid spectacle:

We were always requested to come in full uniform, and we stood inside the rails of the iconostasis, behind the choir. The time to arrive was about half past eleven at night, when the church was wrapped in almost total darkness.

Under the dome stood a catafalque bearing a gilt coffin. The open lid showed a strip of silk on which was painted an effigy of the dead Christ, for it should be remembered that no carved or graven image is allowed in a church of the Eastern Rite. As the eye grew accustomed to the shadows, the tens of thousands of unlighted candles, outlining the arches, the cornices and the other architectural features of the cathedral were just visible. The wick of each of these candles had been touched with kerosene and was surrounded with a thread of gun-cotton, which ran from candle to candle.

At half past eleven the only light was from the candles round the tier, where black-robed priests were chanting the mournful Russian office for the dead. At about twenty minutes to twelve the blind was drawn over the dead Christ, and the priests, feigning surprise, advanced to the rails of the iconostasis and announced to an archimandrite that the coffin was empty. The archimandrite ordered them to search round the church, and the priests walked up and down with gilt lanterns; while they did so, the catafalque, the bier and its accessories were removed. The priests announced to the archimandrite that their search had been unsuccessful; whereupon he ordered them to make a further search outside the church. They went out and so timed their return as to arrive before the iconostasis at three minutes before midnight. Again they reported that they had been unsuccessful. As the first stroke of midnight pealed from the great clock, the metropolitan of Petrograd announced in a loud voice, "Christ is risen!" At an electric signal given from the cathedral, the artillery of the fortress boomed out in a salute of one hundred and one guns; the gun-cotton was touched off, and the swift flash kindled the tens of thousands of candles running round the building. The enormous congregation lighted the tapers they carried, the "royal doors" of the iconostasis were thrown open, and as the choir burst into the beautiful Russian Easter anthem the clergy appeared in their festival vestments of cloth of gold.

And so the Easter mass began. Nothing more dramatic, more impressive, could possibly be imagined than the almost instantaneous change from intense gloom to blazing light; from the plaintive dirges of the funeral service to the jubilant strains of the Easter mass.

NOTABLE OPINIONS

There is a very serious risk of decay in civilization of any people by the control passing into the power of those who do not increase knowledge, and whose interests are immediate rather than permanent. The will to ease undermines character, and without striving against nature or man there is always deterioration.—Prof. Plinier Petria.

The days are admittedly, if not evil, at least perplexing; but we have high authority for the belief that in the evil days there lurks an opportunity for those who would "walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise," and it must be the earnest hope of all good citizens that this coming year the time may be redeemed and the opportunity brought up.—J. A. R. marriott, m. P.

A better world is desirable and possible, but change of external conditions will not alone produce a better world. The national policies of Christian countries have been and still are lamentably deficient in the Christian spirit. The war has immensely diminished the prestige of Christian civilization in the non-Christian countries. You must restore the prestige by showing that great as the calamity has been you are going to have something better, more stable, more moral, more Christian in spirit.—Viscount Grey.

Paring a corn is both risky and ineffective. It is much better to use Holloway's Corn Remover and eradicate them entirely.

Burglars entered the butcher shop at Watford one night recently and robbed the till of $11. The residence of E. McGillicuddy in the same town, was also entered by burglars while the family were at church.

Following a recent medical inspection in the schools at Mt. Brydges, the ladies of that district have decided to circulate a petition asking the county council to appoint a staff of nurses for the schools of Middlesex.

The death occurred in the hospital at Toronto of Miss Irla-Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Campbell of Dutton. Miss Campbell was a stenographer in Toronto and also secretary to the head of the Foresters' Society.

Magistrate Arnold of Chatham has decided that a parent cannot keep a child out of school for the purpose of taking music lessons. Three parents appeared in the police court last week charged with this offence under the provisions of the new School Attendance Act passed by the Ontario Legislature. The magistrate held that while there were certain things for which a child could be kept at home, such as illness in the family, music lessons was not one of them, and he therefore imposed a fine of five dollars and costs $16.50 in all upon each of the offenders, who are all residents of Howard township with children attending the Morpeth school.

SALVAGE OF SUNKEN SHIPS WOULD BE UNPROFITABLE

During the war it was predicted that great fortunes would be made when peace came by the salvage of submarine-sunk merchantmen, many of which carried valuable copper and even bullion cargoes. Little salvage work has been undertaken, however. Divers sent down in English waters recovered some cargo from one ship, but there has been no large enterprise for the raising of sunken craft. Commodore J. W. Young, in charge of the British Admiralty salvage section, says that due to the present enormous cost of salvage operations it would cost almost $10 to raise $1 in value. Some of the ships have been under water for six years and are in a condition where salvage work is almost impossible.

"What are your hopes for the future?" asked the solemn man. "I have none just now," replied the youth. "Tomorrow is my girl's birthday, and what is worrying me is the present."

METCALFE COUNCIL

Council meeting was held Monday, March 7th. Members all present. Minutes read, approved and signed.

Moved by Taylor and Hawken that the following orders be paid:—John McMahon, $100. Bateman-Denning drain; Mrs. R. Dennis, $150, part of township grant to S. S. No. 8; H. Eastbrook, $2, repair Edgar bridge, div. 1; W. T. May, $52.76, tile for Perry drain; A. Freer, $52, two sheep killed and four worried by dogs; Municipal World, $11.09, dog tags and owners' statement books; Mac Toohill, $10, one ewe damaged by dogs.

Moved by McNaughton and Taylor that no action be taken re George Chittick's claim for damages to auto, $54, alleged to have been damaged opposite lot 4, con. 5-6, on January 21st.

Estimated expenditure for roads and bridges for 1921 was $6,000.

By-laws No. 269, 270, 271, 272 and 273 were read a third time and passed.

Council adjourned to Monday, April 4, at 1 p. m.
Harry Thompson, Clerk.

"MY LAST WORD"

To the Editor of The Transcript:
Dear Sir,—When I had carefully read and re-read the exuberant effusion which appeared in your last issue, I rubbed my eyes, shook my head and asked myself, "Is this the letter of a Christian gentleman?" and I congratulated myself that I was not a self-constituted, dictatorial, would-be village reformer.

First:—Regarding the charge of "shamelessly using a private letter," I will not be so ungentlemanly as to say "This is not true," but it is a gross mistake, as the letter was neither marked "Confidential," "Private" or "Personal," and I have shown it to numbers, and one and all agree that it was no private letter but one calling upon me to "speak out" or my silence would give consent to pollution and filth!

Second:—As to "playing to the gallery," etc., I treat this portion of the letter with the silent contempt it deserves.

Third:—Regarding my going to the show (chiefly at the invitation and expense of some of my own church members), I have only to say that if those who attended are to be classed as "publicans and sinners," my place was there, as the Master sat down with them, and those who objected were the self-righteous Pharisees. How can I condemn any picture on hearsay evidence? I consider the presence of a minister occasionally has a deterring effect on wrongdoing. It is one of the ways by which sport is kept clean. The last time I was in the show was the 19th of January.

Fourth:—Some films which have not on them "Passed, etc." are American and passed by that Government and sanctioned by ours. The British films are acknowledged to be the best. What we should agitate for is either the entire abolition of the import duty on the British film or the imposition of a higher tariff on the U. S. film entering Canada.

Had Mr. Leonard asked my friend and his minister to call a meeting of the three clergy and himself we could have discussed the whole matter in a Christian spirit and not rush into print and evidently find great pleasure in impaling the Anglican rector, whom he will find as anxious as he to put a stop to "filth and pollution."

I never found any good results during my 38 years' ministry in commencing to discuss any local controversial subject in the press. There is nothing to be gained by setting the members of one religious community against another.

Sixth:—The letter signed G. Waterworth does not touch the subject. He would be well advised to keep out of it.

Damnunt quod non intelligunt.

Yours faithfully,
T. J. CHARLTON.

Editor's Note.—For obvious reasons this controversy is now closed so far as these columns are concerned.
It Testifies for Itself.—Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil needs no testimonial of its powers other than itself. Who ever tries it for corns or colds, for cuts or contusions, for sprains or burns, for pains in the limbs or body, will know that the medicine proves itself and needs no guarantee. This shows why this Oil is in general use.

THE OLD GOSPEL WAY

In years that's past, the old ox cart
Was the lone traveler's way.
With thirty miles left in the past
He'd travelled for a day.
Now airships, autos, railway cars
Are running night and day;
But sinners, when they find the Lord,
Travel the "Old Gospel way."

There was a time when bows that bent
And spears put men to flight;
When destinies were turned by these
As men went forth to fight.
But now torpedoes, bombs and shells
O'er ships and forts are lord,
But he who puts Satan to flight
Takes the "Old Gospel sword."

In ages past upon a stone
Law was produced for men,
Then later still on bark or skin
They wrote with ink and pen.
But now 'mid wheels that buzz and hum

The papers fly—But say:
The Word of God, written for men,
Reads just the same old way.
Years past when men desired to talk
They must be face to face;
A traveler then was thought a treat,
To get news from some place.
But now they talk from shore to shore.

To all the country's host—
But he who speaks of God speaks through
The "Blessed Holy Ghost."
New things may come, old things may go,

All things may change down here;
But as to getting right with God,
Brother, we need not fear.
As long as men transgress God's law
And from Him turn away,
That there will ever be a change
In the "Old Gospel way."

The New Twenty-year Capital Return Policy

(Issued by The Canada Life)

A Young Man and His Future

He takes his first step in business affairs, is examined by the doctor, and creates an estate of $5,000.

He improves the shining hour and impresses upon an important person that he is in possession of an "estate."

His tendency to save and invest is noted by his employers.

He finds his savings of great assistance in buying a home.

And as time goes on he is enabled to enjoy many of the good things of life.

Absolutely guarantees the return at the end of twenty years of all annual deposits, with accumulated profits, after giving you insurance protection for twenty years.

Easily Understood:

1st. Deposits are made yearly. This is what you are saving, and at the end of 20 years the Canada Life guarantees the return of every dollar paid in.

2nd. Your life is insured from the day you make the first deposit,—for $5,000, or whatever amount you decide.

3rd. Dividends are paid at stated intervals in addition to the return of all deposits at the end of 20 years.

4th. These dividends may be used to reduce the amount of your yearly deposits, or be allowed to accumulate at interest for 20 years.

5th. The cash value of Policy and Dividends represents a valuable asset, useful in business, and your "estate" is protected by the insurance.

6th. At the end of Twenty Years you can draw out all you have paid in, along with the accrued dividends—

---OR---

you can draw a Special Cash Guarantee, together with the Accumulated Dividends, making a substantial sum, and leave the $5,000 Policy fully paid for and continuing to earn Dividends as long as you live—

---OR---

this Special Cash Guarantee may be applied to increase the amount of your policy to more than $7500.

An Immediate Estate

The great advantage over any other form of investment is that a small percentage paid yearly creates immediately an estate of $5,000, or more.

These active, progressive years of life in which you are earning the most money are the years in which premiums can be more easily met.

CANADIANS AS MEAT EATERS

Anglo-Saxon peoples are the greatest meat eaters. Australians, New Zealanders, Americans, Canadians and British in that order, stand a long way above others in the consumption of meats. Germany, before the war at any rate, was the nearest "runner-up."
The total consumption per head of all meats in the different countries before the war has been carefully estimated. The figures are now of considerable interest in Canada as bearing on the future of national production in the livestock industry. They show the yearly consumption to have been:—

	Lbs. per head
Australia	282
New Zealand	170
United States	170
Argentina	140
Canada	137
United Kingdom	126
Germany	111
Italy	101
France	79

The death occurred at Appin on Sunday, March 20, of Lydia Hill, widow of the late Harmon Kitchen. The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon to Strathroy cemetery, service being held at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Wm. R. Stephenson.

A strong south-west wind was blowing when the sun "crossed the line" and spring was officially ushered in on Sunday night. According to a bit of weather lore the prevailing winds for the next three months will be from that quarter—not a bad prospect.

The mails are flooded these days with circulars and advertising matter from wholesale liquor dealers at Montreal, who are endeavoring to unload their stocks before the first of May, when the law prohibiting the export of liquor from Quebec comes into force.

In a couple of hours' canvass by four ladies on Tuesday afternoon some seventy-five names of citizens were secured for membership in the proposed horticultural society for Glencoe. The requirement is fifty or more, so that it looks as if the organization were an assured thing.

F. W. Biggs, Minister of Public Works, and J. G. Lethbridge, M.P.P. for West Middlesex, have instructed their solicitors to bring action against Webster brothers of Strathbury for alleged slander contained in certain charges made recently to Premier Drury in connection with their official duties.

What proved to be interesting at the Presbyterian Y. P. meeting on Monday evening was a debate, "Resolved that the Apostle Paul's character as a leader was greater than that of the Apostle Peter." The affirmative was upheld by Frank Brown and Arnold Aldred, and the negative by Misses Jessie McAlpine and Margaret Morrison. The judges, Mrs. Strachan, Mrs. Paton and Mr. Holland, gave their decision in favor of the negative.

Card of Thanks

I wish to express my deep gratitude to the friends who showed such wonderful kindness to my late father throughout his illness and to me in my weeks of nursing and in the hour of bereavement. Also for the beautiful floral offerings from the "village" and from friends far and near.
ANNIE LAURIE TUCKER.

TOWN AND VICINITY

Tomorrow is Good Friday and a public holiday.
The hockey boys are giving another dance on April 4th.
Robert Clanahan is again quite ill and there is but little hope for his recovery.

Steps are being taken to establish a horticultural society in Glencoe. A good thing: push it along.
John Tait has bought a portion of the old American hotel and is having it taken down to be rebuilt as a residence.

In the spring a married man's thoughts turn not lightly to the ashes he ought to have carried out during the winter.

The annual meeting of the Glencoe bowling club will be held on Monday evening, March 28th, at the office of W. D. Moss.

The town council has a new and simply-constructed road grader on the job, which appears to be doing very effective work.

Mrs. (Dr.) McLachlan, who recently returned from the hospital in London, is making favorable progress towards recovery.

A number from here attended the box social at Pratt's Siding on Friday night, given by the U. F. O. of the school section here.

Miss Minnie Mitchell and Miss Phemias Harris are the new postmaster's assistants. Both have had experience in the work.

J. G. Lethbridge, M.P.P., has been appointed a member of the committee on cattle for the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto.

George A. Elliott of Parkhill has been appointed to act as census commissioner for West Middlesex when the census of the Dominion is taken this summer.

The man who has failed to conduct his own business successfully is the fellow who is more than ready to undertake the conduct of the largest proposition in sight.

The following have been appointed overseers on the provincial highway in this section:—Ekrfid, John T. McLean, Ross McEachren, Mosa, Roy Henderson, Isaac Saylor.

J. G. Lethbridge, M.P.P., on invitation of the Strathroy Chamber of Commerce, addressed a meeting of that board on Monday evening on Ontario hydro-electric problems.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hollingshead have arrived from Winnipeg and are visiting relatives in Dutton and Glencoe. Mr. Hollingshead has disposed of his business in Winnipeg and will locate in Ontario.

Mrs. Duncan McCallum went to town to attend the funeral of a sister. In nine days' time she buried a second sister, and while preparing to return home was taken ill herself. Little hope is held out for her recovery.

The ladies of the Guild of St. John's church will hold an apron sale and talent tea in the schoolroom on Saturday afternoon, April 2nd, at three o'clock. Home cooking will be on sale. Cup of tea and cake, 10 cents. All welcome.

ANOTHER VICTIM OF RHEUMATISM

Entirely Well After Six Weeks' Treatment With "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

MR. AMEDEO GARCEAU

32 Hickory St., Ottawa, Ont.
"I was for many years a victim of that terrible disease, Rheumatism. In 1913, I was laid up for four months with Rheumatism in the joints of the knees, hips and shoulders and was prevented from following my work, that of Electrician."

I tried many remedies and was under the care of a physician; but nothing did me any good. Then I began to take 'Fruit-a-tives' and in a week I was easier, and in six weeks I was so well I went to work again.

I look upon this fruit medicine, 'Fruit-a-tives', as simply marvellous in the cure of Rheumatism, and strongly advise everyone suffering with Rheumatism to give 'Fruit-a-tives' a trial."

TO ALL Whom It May Concern

THE Parliament of Canada has recently passed a bill regulating the taking of the vote on the Referendum in Ontario on April 18. The points to remember are as follows:

1. Every British subject by birth or naturalization, man or woman, resident in the Dominion of Canada one year previous to February 1, 1921, and resident in the Province of Ontario for two months previous to same date, is entitled to vote, unless otherwise disqualified.
2. Voters' Lists used in the last provincial referendum are the lists to be used in this Referendum, subject to revision. Every voter in an urban polling division must be on the list, and will presumably be on the list only in the division in which he resides.
3. In incorporated cities and towns of 1,000 population or over, arrangements will be made for receiving applications from any who are not now on the list on March 29 to April 4 inclusive—except Sunday—when for six clear days officers will sit to receive such applications.
4. In rural polling divisions the voter must be either on the list or be put upon it as a resident and be vouched for as such by another resident.
5. Both affirmative and negative sides have the right to select scrutineers.
6. Women have the right to vote.

BUFFALO IN NORTH WESTERN CANADA

ONE HERD OF 1000 HEAD HAS BEEN SEEN.

Range of Wild Buffalo Lies in North Alberta and Southern Part of Mackenzie District.

For years Indians in the northern regions of Canada have declared that at least one herd of wild buffalo was thriving in the district of Mackenzie. White nomads coming casually into contact with civilization told similar stories. Sometimes details were added.

The white men usually contended that the animals were not true buffalo, but a species to which they gave the name of wood-buffalo. Generally, however, their information as to the numbers and condition of the animals, and the particular territory in which they roamed was nebulous.

The settled communities on the fringe of the lonely lands placed little credence in the tales. Civilized Canada indeed was convinced that the herd of wild buffalo to the north was a myth—a variation of Indian legends that had grown with the passing years since the last of the vast herd of buffalo that once thrived on the prairie lands had disappeared.

The myth has been dissolved. A real herd of wild buffalo has been discovered, numbered with as much exactness as possible, their condition and habits noted, and the extent of their range approximately measured. F. H. Kitto, of the natural resources intelligence branch of the Department of the Interior of Canada, spent the greater part of last summer in acquiring this information in the buffalo territory. He was fortunate enough to be able to secure several snapshots of the buffalo through most of his attempts to secure close up pictures were frustrated by the rapidity with which the animals fled whenever Mr. Kitto or any of the guides got within reasonable distance of them.

Continue Search Next Summer. Mr. Kitto, who is no stranger to the north country, having done a great deal of exploring and surveying there, devoted his whole attention to the effort to verify or disprove the wild buffalo story. Having obtained visible proof of the existence of one herd, he began the search for another which the Indians declared was in existence still further north. He was compelled to abandon this search by the approach of winter, but hopes to be able to resume it early next summer and believes that it will be successful.

The range of the wild buffalo, according to Mr. Kitto's preliminary report, centres in about latitude 60 degrees north and longitude 112 degrees west. The territory lies in the northern part of the province of Alberta and the southern part of the district of Mackenzie. It is bounded on the south by the Peace River, on the east by Slave River, on the west by the Caribon mountains, and on the north by Great Slave Lake.

He estimates the herd with which he came into contact as numbering 1,000 head. This figure he reached after the most careful calculation extending over a period of some weeks. Eliminations were made from day to day, according to the locality covered, so as to avoid the possibility of counting the same groups more than once.

The range of the range of which he was able to cover a small section—but he is not now so strongly inclined as formerly to disregard the assertions of the Indians that there is another herd of 1,000 head there.

In the summer season the buffalo scatter through the woods, feeding in the marshes and meadows and frequenting the sand hills for protection against the flies. During the winter they gather in big bands for protection against the wolves and stick pretty closely to the grassy meadows. They seem to find no difficulty in getting through the snow to their feed.

A Unique Memorial.

The monument erected to the memory of Wolfe and Montcalm, that stands in the Governor's Garden in Quebec, is said to be the only one, at least on this continent, commemorating both the conqueror and the conquered at the Battle of the Plains of Abraham in 1759. The monument bears the epigrammatic Latin inscription:

Mortem Virtus Commune
Famam Historia
Monumentum Posteritas
Debit

Valor gave them a common death; History a common fame; Posterity a common monument.

Silence in Court.

The judge adjusted his plince-nez, and laid down his quill-pen.

For a moment he pondered in correct judicial manner then his worshipful eyes rested upon the prisoner.

He coughed.

"I seem to know your face," he remarked.

"Yes," returned the prisoner with a smile. "We was boys together!"

The judge nodded.

"Nonsense!" he exclaimed.

"Oh, yes, we was," persisted the prisoner. "We're both about the same age, so we must have been boys together."

NURSES

The Toronto Hospital for incurables in affiliation with Bellevue and Allied Hospitals, New York City, offers a three years' course of training to young women, having the required education, and desirous of becoming nurses. This Hospital has adopted the eight-hour system. The pupils receive uniforms of the School, a monthly allowance and travel expenses to and from New York. For further information apply to the Superintendent.

The Wolf Cubs.

God planted in the small boy a horror of all that is dull and slow and conventional. He made him a creature of restless energy, with an inquisitive, eager mind, a sensitive little heart, and a romantic imagination. Don't oppose God's plan! Work with it—discover it—guide it! That is the Wolf Cub idea.

In 1914, in response to continual demands from boys under 12 years of age for admission to Boy Scout troops, Sir Robert Baden-Powell answered with the plans for the organization of the Wolf Cubs. And in doing so the Great Father of Scouting also met the need for a scheme of recreational education that would teach the small boy those first lessons in loyalty to the right, self-control, respect for authority and kindness to others, that are the fundamentals of good citizenship. The programme of the Wolf Cubs, paralleling the plan of Scouting for older boys, has been built up about the natural activities and impulses of the boy of eight to twelve years of age. The small boy likes to play; to wolf, or bear; to bark, growl; to pursue, being pursued. Very well, let him play at wolf and you play at wolf with him. And into the play weave the fundamentals of loyalty (to his Pack), obedience (giving in to the Old Wolf), and self-control (not giving in to himself). In a few words, this is the theory of the Wolf Cubs.

Wolf Cub organizations and packs may be formed in a manner similar to the way in which Boy Scout troops are formed. Instead of a Scoutmaster there is a Cubmaster, who may be either a man or a woman, and instead of a Troop Committee there is a Pack Committee. Further particulars regarding the organization, registration and chartering of Wolf Cub "Packs" and with reference to this most interesting branch of the Boy Scout Movement may be had upon application to the Boy Scouts Association, Bloor and Sherbourne Sts., Toronto.

Minard's Liniment Relieves Distemper

A mother elephant was dragging from one spot to another in a shipyard an extraordinarily heavy timber that she had been unable to pick up. Two chains were fastened to her collar, each joined to a huge hook, which was fastened into the end of the log. As she toiled along with her burden her half-grown baby elephant walked beside her.

The Things You Do.

It isn't what you talk about that makes you rich and great, it isn't what you dream about that happens while you wait, it isn't what you long for most that soonest comes to you. The only things that count, my son, are just the things you do.

So do not spend your precious times in talking people blind, They do not care to hear you though they may say they don't mind, And do not dream, unless at night, when slumber comes to you, For nothing counts at all, my son, except the things you do.

CHILDHOOD CONSTIPATION

Constipation is one of the most common ailments of childhood and the child suffering from it cannot thrive. To keep the children well the bowels must be kept regular and the stomach sweet. To do this nothing can equal Baby's Own Tablets. They are a mild but thorough laxative; are absolutely safe and never fail to relieve constipation and indigestion; colds and simple fever. Concerning them Mrs. Jules Fauquier, Nomin, Quebec, writes:—"My baby was terribly constipated and suffered day and night. I was advised to give him Baby's Own Tablets and from the first they helped him and now at the age of thirteen months he is a big, healthy, happy boy." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Elephantine Humor.

In order to see the elephant at his best, says a writer, you must go to India. There he is used as a beast of burden, and his intelligence comes out strikingly. It is said to be the only animal that will work unattended. But for all that he is not fond of labor, for he will keep an eye on the boss, and when the whistle blows he will drop whatever he is doing and run for the feeding place—a trait that he is said to share with some human creatures. We do not believe that animals, intelligent as they often are, have quite the sense of humor that human beings have; yet here is an authenticated story of one small elephant's prank that clearly points to a sort of mischievous humor.

A mother elephant was dragging from one spot to another in a shipyard an extraordinarily heavy timber that she had been unable to pick up. Two chains were fastened to her collar, each joined to a huge hook, which was fastened into the end of the log. As she toiled along with her burden her half-grown baby elephant walked beside her. She came at last to an incline where she had to exert her entire strength to drag the log up; and while she was leaning forward the baby elephant suddenly dropped and yanked the hook with his trunk and canted it out of the log. The result was that the old elephant was thrown forward on her head, with her heels up in the air. The little elephant made straight-way for the woods near by, as hard as he could gallop.

The mother got herself together quickly, looked all round and started after the youngster, with her trunk upraised. She caught up with him in the woods; and the men working at the shipyard heard his squeals as her trunk descended on him again and again. Finally the two of them reappeared; the little elephant was walking dejectedly at his mother's heels and holding to her tail.

A Little Wisdom.

Those who take great pains take great profits. A silent man for words are never brought into court. It's hard to pay for clothes that have been worn out. He who saves in little things can be liberal in great ones. More trouble lies in having nothing to do than much to do. A-many things remain impossible till they are attempted. Before you run in double harness, be sure of the other horse. 'Tis better to put the shoulder to the wheel than the back to the wall. He who loses money loses a little; he who loses a friend loses more, and he who loses courage loses most.

RHEUMATIC PAINS HAVE DISAPPEARED

As a Result of Treating the Trouble Through the Blood.

The chief symptom of rheumatism is pain. The most successful treatment is the one that most quickly relieves and banishes the pain. Many rheumatic people suffer pains that could be avoided by building up the blood; when rheumatism is associated with this blood it cannot be corrected until the blood is built up.

Mr. Ed. Hall, Mata-Dien, N.S., suffered from rheumatism for years, but was more fortunate than many victims of the disease, for he found a remedy that so built up his entire system that he is now free from rheumatism. Mr. Hall says: "I was taken down with rheumatism, and at times was under the treatment of several of the best doctors in Cape Breton, but they held out no hope for my recovery from the trouble. I was confined to bed for three years and a helpless cripple from the trouble. I could not move, and had to be turned in sheets. My legs and fingers were drawn out of shape, and sores developed on my body as the result of my long confinement to bed. I was in this serious condition when a friend advised the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I began taking them. The first benefit I felt from the pills was an improved appetite, and then I began to feel stronger, and was finally able to get out of bed and go about on crutches. I continued taking the pills for months, slowly but surely getting new strength, and finally I was able to lay the crutches aside. I will always be lame, as the result of my long stay in bed my left leg has shortened somewhat, but outside of that, I am feeling fine and able to do my work as Fishery Overseer. I may add that when the rheumatism came on I weighed 140 pounds, and when I began going about on crutches I only weighed 67 pounds, and now I am at normal weight. There are many here who know and can vouch for the truth of these statements."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine. By mail, post paid, 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Freezing Points of Fruits Are Measured Electrically.

In an attempt to evolve methods of preventing the spoiling of fruits and vegetables by freezing while in transit or storage, the U.S. Department of Agriculture is conducting thousands of experiments at the Arlington, Va., laboratory, to determine at what temperatures these products freeze. The experimental apparatus consists of a large tank in which brine is circulated, and thermocouples, which possess the peculiar property of generating weak and variable currents of electricity when they are subjected to changes in temperature. These variations are registered by delicate meters. So sensitive are the thermocouples that they will detect a difference of temperature of .0001 deg. In service, a test specimen of fruit and a thermocouple are placed in one of 12 cups in the lid of the brine tank. By watching the specimen and the meter closely the exact temperature at which freezing begins is determined with great accuracy.

No Place for Hilarity.

The storm was increasing in violence and some of the deck fittings had already been swept overboard when the captain decided to send up a signal of distress. But hardly had the rocket burst over the ship when a solemn-faced passenger stepped on to the bridge. "Captain," he said, "I'd be the last person on earth to cast a damper on any man, but it seems to me that this is no time for letting off fireworks."

Dishwashing Machine is Effective.

As proving the very real efficiency and desirability of the mechanical way of washing dishes, a series of tests recently conducted by a resident of White Plains, N.Y., are extremely interesting. The electrical dishwasher was placed in this particular home on trial, and the skeptical "prospect" started his tests with a determination to prove the general worthlessness of the device. Count was made of the number of pieces of tableware used by the family of two adults and two small children, for each meal, and the operations of handling and washing, both by hand and by machine, also were counted and timed. It was found, furthermore, that the machine's capacity for washing the inside of bottles was more than human, and that greasy pots and pans, with the aid of a washing powder supplied with the apparatus, promptly became spotless without any of the usual unpleasant effort. As the machine's capacity was sufficient for the dishes of two meals, it was a simple matter to reduce the number of operations still further. As a result, the housewife's total gain amounted to two hours a day, or even more.

The Future of Brazil.

Brazil, which is most wholly in the tropics, has the opportunity to upset the belief that no people can reach the very highest civilization in a tropical climate. The census, just completed, credits Brazil with 30,500,000 people, which makes it the second American country in point of population. Some modern men of science, most of them British, maintain that when means have been found to utilize the heat of the sun as mechanical energy the tropics will become centres of production and therefore of civilization. If that should be true, what great resources of minerals, timber and land, and its great navigable rivers?

Hear, Hear!

Mr. Gasbag Jones stood on a soapbox at the corner of the street.

A huge crowd surged around him. Surely his heart should have been glad!

But he was dissatisfied. He tried hard to be heard, but it was all in vain.

Every attempt he made to speak was interrupted by some member of the audience.

At last, stamping his foot in great anger, he belleted at the top of his voice:

"Every time I open my mouth a stilly fool speaks!"

And the crowd agreed with him entirely.

Royal Fractions.

There is a general opinion that the Queen of England is a person of considerable strength and determination of character. That opinion is reflected in a number of more or less amusing stories. One of them relates that the Prince of Wales, while visiting the British forces at the front, saw in a dugout the pictures of his royal father and mother. Under the King's was written, "George, the fifth"; under the Queen's, "the other four fifths."

"There's a big yellow tomat," the other said, "that fetches my plants out and then sits and actually defies me."

"Why don't you hurl a brick at him?" asked the first speaker.

"That's what makes me mad," was the reply. "I can't. He gets on top of my greenhouse to defy me."

HARDWARE NEWBURY

MELBOURNE

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Carruthers were made very happy on the 18th inst. when a little son, James Alexander Drury Carruthers, arrived in their home.

Miss Davidson, a former teacher in the continuation school here, now of Mount Brydges, came over with about twenty-five of her pupils and gave a concert here in the Woodman Hall in aid of the public library. J. G. Leith-bridge, M.P.P. of Glencoe, was chairman and gave a very interesting address, explaining the hydro situation for the rural districts.

About six weeks ago the Epworth League of the Methodist church entered a Bible contest. Walter Lewis and Fred Capon being the captains. The contest was declared closed by the pastor, Dr. Brown, and when the points were counted Walter won by a small majority. The losing side entertained the winners to an entertainment and lunch at the last regular meeting.

David Williamson, who was injured about a week ago as a result of an accident at the Victoria Hospital, has returned home. Although his hand and three fingers have been saved he will be laid up for some time.

L. W. Beach has been ill for about one week and is improving as rapidly as his many friends would wish.

Business in this village has been very dull as the roads have been almost impassable for weeks. The heavy rains which visited this district a few days ago did them good. The road scraper was used on the Longwoods Road, which has made it a great deal better, while the side-roads and concessions are improving.

Mrs. James Showers spent a few days with her father, who is seriously ill.

A number of people attended the millinery openings here on Saturday afternoon.

MODEL CENTRE

(S. S. No. 7, Ekfrid)

School closes on Thursday afternoon for the Easter holidays.

The U. F. O. met in the school house on Friday evening, March 18. A large crowd was out, despite the bad roads. An excellent program was given and enjoyed by all those present. It included violin selections by Mr. Highwood, Archie McFarlane, Dan Leitch and Emerson Campbell; vocal solos by Stanley Humphries, Sidney Hartley and Mr. Highwood, and readings by Mr. Highwood. Another interesting feature of the program was a debate: "Resolved that conditions at the present time are more conducive to happiness than they were fifty years ago." The affirmative was upheld by William Graham and Milton Halm, and the negative by Mac. McNaughton and William Angus McCallum of Walkers. The judges gave their decision in favor of the affirmative.

The U. F. O. have decided to have one more literary evening for the present time, which will be on Friday evening, April 1st. The committee who have charge of the program are Mary McLean, Margaret Eddie, Wm. Graham and F. Murray.

Miss Florence Mawhinney is spending a few days at David F. Eddie's.

STRATHBURN

The fishing season has arrived and some good catches are reported.

We have heard of the smooth salesman and the smooth politician; but have you seen the provincial high-way?

A number from here attended the Wardsville ball and report a good dance.

D. H. McRae motored to London Monday.

About 125 of the friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Treastin gathered at their home on Friday to spend an evening with them prior to their departure for their new home in Glencoe. Mrs. Bert Simpson read an address and Misses Martha McRae, Margaret McIntyre and Mary Bell Duncanson on behalf of the community presented Mr. and Mrs. Treastin and their daughter with a reading lamp and victrola record. Mr. Treastin made a suitable reply. He thanked everyone for this tangible expression of friendship and expressed his pleasure at having so many of his friends and neighbors send the evening at his home. Dave McIntyre acted as chairman and introduced a program consisting of speeches, solos, etc.

Miss Anna Bell McRae gave an instrumental and Miss Muriel Weekes and Miss Dell McIntyre sang solos. Solos were also much appreciated from Savil Simpson and D. H. McRae. Nat. Currie, Daniel McKenzie, D. S. McEachern and Duncan R. McRae gave addresses expressing their own and the community's regret at Mr. Treastin's departure. After the program dancing was indulged in until morning. An added and pleasing feature of the program was later given when little Margaret and Kenneth McRae gave an exhibition of waltzing that was truly marvelous for children of their years. Joe Creagan of Wardsville supplied the music in his usual generous and capable manner. Joe is deservedly popular here and this community always gives him the glad hand. After wishing Mr. and Mrs. Treastin and daughter a happy future everyone went home feeling that they had spent an evening that would long linger in their memory.

Worms, however generated, are found in the digestive tracts, where they set up disturbances detrimental to the health of the child. There can be no comfort for the little ones until the hurtful intruders have been expelled. An excellent preparation for this purpose can be had in Miller's Worm Powders. They will immediately destroy the worms and correct the conditions that were favorable to their existence.

KNAPDALE

The U. F. O. held another social evening in the school on Wednesday, March 16th, and drew a full house. It being the night before St. Patrick's Day, Irish songs were quite in order.

An interesting feature was the debate, "Resolved that Eastern Canada offers greater opportunities to the farmer than Western Canada," the affirmative being upheld by Allan McLean and Leonard Hillman and the negative by George Goldrick and John Leitch. The debaters became so enthused over their subject that the clock was forgotten. The judges started to count points, but not hankering for an all-night session decided the result a tie.

All the invalids in this section are able to be around again.

Dan McNaughton had three fingers of his left hand badly cut one day last week while buzzing wood at Alex King.

The sand roads are now drying up fine. The heavy rain last week helped wonderfully.

The Knapdale orchestra will now be out of commission for some time, owing to Mr. McNaughton's injury. They were unable to play at Pratt's Siding on Friday night.

The warm sunshine and the spring rains are starting things to grow. The wheat is green and green, and with favorable weather a good crop is assured.

THEIR HOME TOWN (The Fourth Estate) When people want to interest distant friends in their home town, they send away copies of the local paper.

When anyone wants to know what kind of a place a distant town is he sends for a copy of the local newspaper. When the merchants are full of courage and advertise freely, many people living outside of town who see the paper get the impression that it is a wide-awake little business town. Wedding invitations printed in the latest style and with neatness and despatch at The Transcript office.
