Bixty thousand men are out of work. The social Democratic agitators have organized committees to help the starving. Bread is given out in exchange for tickets previously distributed at Socialistic meetings. In consequence of this arrangement the Socialists are having enormous success with their agitation in spite of the bitterness of the weather. All the meetings are crowded with workingmen, who want the bread. Violent speakers are present, and incite the men to riot in case the Government makes no eilort to help them. financiers have excited general apprehension. Outside of Royalist and Socialistic circles the arrest is regarded with a feeling closely akin to panic. Every-body feels that the worst will come out as soon as Herz shall come before the examining magistrate.

There are three counts in the indictment against Cornelius Herz. The first concerns the 600,090 francs received by him from Charles De Lesseps, the second 2,000,000 francs received by him from Baron De Reinsch, the third menacing letters written by him with the intention of black-mailing Baron de Reinach.

M. Andrieux told the Parliamentary commission of loquiry to-day, that some years ago he received from Brazil a letter signed "Amal" in which Baron de Reinach was accused of having hired the writer to poison Cornelius Herz. When the letter was shown to him Reinach pretended that he had wished merely to frighten Herz into leaving Paris. The letter from "Amal", however, was in no way jocular, but apparently meant business.

Miller; "we have under consideration other offers which make us independent of the Port Stanley route."

"Is it true that the syndicate has been asked to build and operate a road from Port Burwell to Tilsonburg."

"Yes, and the offer is a good one. The parties interested are very anxious that we should take hold. Bonuses for its construction have been already passed by the various municipalities, and this will be supplemented by the Government grant, and it is said it will only need $30,000 additional to complete it. As far as the syndicate is concerned the terms are more favorable to us than those of the Port Stanley lease, which requires us to pay $28,000 a year. The other people do not ask a rental."

"Would you make Port Burwell your coal harbor in case you accepted the offer?"

"Yes; Port Burwell possesses a better harbor than Port Stanley does at present. It has a draft of water sufficient for our purposes. If we adopt the Port Burwell route instead of Port Stanley we will in all probability make Ashtabula our shipping port on the other side instead of Cleveand."

"And what town or city will be your distributing center for coal in place of Londiers."

"And what town or city will be your distributing center for coal in place of London?" the reporter asked.
"Woodstock, I think," said Mr. Miller.

"Woodstock, I think," said Mr. Miller.
"By the way," he continued, "we have received another offer equally as good. We have been asked to purchase the Erie and Huron Railway, running from Rondeau to Sarnia, and are seriously considering it. Rondeau has a good harbor. If we decided upon the Port Burwell route we may run our boats to both harbors. By this means we could supply ecal to both the western and & eastern sections of this part of the Province by the lake route. This would be of great advantage."

Province by the lake route. This would be of great advantage."
"Would not the large outlay necessary to purchase the Eric and Huron Railway be a drawback?"
"Nor at all. The capital behind us is unlimited, and if we can make working expenses on it that is all we want. Our immense traffic in coal would assure us a return. We have already entered into a railroad contract for 400,000 tons, as has been publicly stated, and that is a big thing in itself."
"Could you fulfill this contract as well by the other routes as by the Port Stanley?"

"Could you fulfill this contract as well by the other routes as by the Port Stanley!"

"Equally as well. The Ohio coal mines from which we draw our supply have an annual output of 1,250,000 tons, and new mines are constantly being opened up. We shall be able to supply the whole of Western Ontario, and this means a big traffic."

Mr. Miller repeated that his a light of the state of the service of merchandise.

Apropos of the Port Butwell offer, Mr. W. S. Lawson, of Tilsonburg, was in the city yesterday to urge Mr. Miller's acceptance of it. Bonuses of $103,200 have aiready been passed. Rev. A. Browning, the elequent preacher, conducted special services during the past week at Queen's avenue. The attendance has been very large. One of his topics was found in the text Matthew viii., 34: "And behold the whole city came out to meet Jesus and besought him to depart out of their coasts." He said: "Gadare lived by its hogs. The quadruped hogs outside supported the biped hogs inside. Christ came and saved two of their men at the expense of 2,000 hogs. The whole city was aroused. Hogs meant revenue, money, luxury. The men were of no account; let them perish but save the hogs. And so the whole city came out and asked Christ to get away as fast as he could. This is the language of the State with regard to the liquor traffic: We must have revenue—money we are after. Let the distillers, brewers and saloon-keepers live, they bring so much hard cash; but let the thousands of men perish. This was the voice of the majority of your voters on the 7 o'clock bylaw. Hogs before men. This is the vardict of too many churches—fine buildings, large collections, large-salaried preachers. Great men sit at ease in cushioned pews and warn the preacher they hold the money bags, and he must take care how he preaches, or he or they will leave. Outside men are perishing. Hogs before men! This is the language of too many Christians: "I must look after my business. It will never do to offend customers by making religion prominent." Hogs before men! This is the language of too many Christians: "I must look after my business. It will never do to offend customers by making religion prominent." Hogs before men! If Christ saved two men at the expense of 2,000 hogs, to save twenty would mean a loss of 40,000 hogs, and that would be commercial revolution. "Don't disturb the old state of things! leave us as we are; let our men and our hogs alone!" Get out of the old ruts if they are wrong, cost you what it may. BUSINESS ACROSS THE BORDER Summary of Dun & Co.'s Weckly Revie

New York, Jan. 20.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade.

New York, Jan. 20.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: Severe weather appears to account in part for somewhat of a shrinkage in business, in many branches checking purchases and in others output on delivery, yet owing to the same influence stocks of winter goods have been cleared off, resulting in orders for apring goods being more liberal.

The business failures during the past week for the United States number 290 and for Canada 42; total, 332, as compared with 340 last week. For the corresponding week last year the figures were 328, representing 274 in the United States and 54 in Canada.

THE COST OF ARMIES.

It is a somewhat remarkable coincidence that both Germany and France have just made officially public the army expenditures during the last twenty years.

It is no wonder that all Europe is set to thinking when it is published that since 1871 Germany has spent $3,000,000,000 on her army, and France, during the same paried $3,050,000.000.

1871 Germany has spent $3,000,000,000 on her army, and France, during the same period, $3,050,000,000.

The magnitude of such sums can only be understood by those who know their purchasing power in human necessities and in acts of peace and industry.

And these mountains of treasure have been expended during a period of profound peace, while monarchs and statesmen have been assuring the people that there was little possibility of war.

The Reason Why So Many Mothers Are Happy.

There are times when a mether's heart swells with pride and gratitude, and she often tells her friends why she is pleased and happy. As a rule, the mother's joy is deep and unbounded when her baby is gaining in flesh, bone and musele; she notes with pride that it sleeps and rests well, and that the glow of health is continually showing up in the little face.

The happy mether knows well that this condition has been brought about by Lactated Food. She remembers that before Lactated Food was used her baby was wasting away—was peevish and fretful, sleepless and irritable. The great and happy change was effected by special elements of nutrition in Lactated Food, which are not found in the ordinary foods of our times.

The City of London has secured the con-trol of the London and Port Stanley Board at last, now that the twenty years' lease of the Grand Trunk Railway Company has exat last, now that the twenty years' lease of the Grand Trunk Railway Company has expired.

This change took place yesterday afternoon at the general annual meeting of the shareholders in the mayor's office. Those present were: James Egan (in the chair), Mayor Essery, T. S. Hobbs, W. J. Reid, Major Beattie, Frank R. Leonard, Ald. Taylor, Joseph Jeffery, E. J. Parke, Q.C., Join McClary, Wm. Bowman (secretary), City Solicitor T. G. Meredith, W. R. Meredith, Q.C., M.P.P., of London, Mayor Oille, of St. Thomas, F. S. Miller, of Cleveland, his solicitors, Mossrs, Ivey & Hellmuth, and Chief Engineer Hobson, of the G. T. R. After the annual report had been laid on the table, Mayor Essery moved, seconded by Mayor Oille, of St. Thomas, that the following be the directors for the eneuing year: Ald. Chas, Taylor, Wm. C. Coo, R. Carrothers, James Fitzgerald, Henry Dreaney and George Shaw, and Messrs, Joseph C. Judd, Frank E. Leonard and F. A. Fitzgerald.

Thomas S. Hobbs and W. J. Reid were appoilted scrutineers and announced that the motion was adopted upon Mayor Essery's vote of 7,813 shares out of a total of 11,218. The mayors of London and St. Thomas are ex-officio members of the board.

THE PROPOSED LEASE.

Under the head of general business came the proposed lease of the road to the Cleveland syndicate.

Mayor Essery moved that the meeting adjourn until Saturday.

As the majority of those present believed the lease was to be ratified then and there this came as a surprise. Mr. Ivey made a gesture indicating annoyance and murmured dissent.

THE MAYOR'S OBJECTIONS.

Mayor Essery said they wanted the lease according to the arrangement made the previous evening—the money paid up first, the new lease arranged afterwards, and when that money was in the city's hands then anything they could do to assist Mr. Ivey they would. The mayor repeated his assertion that under section 3 in the lease passed Jan. 9 the lesses could expend any amount they pleased in repairing the road and charge it to the city. Mr. Miller said last night that they would expend sixteen times the first two years' rent if necessary to put the road in repair. Then Mr. Ivey nudged him and he (Mr. pend sixteen times the first two years' rent if necessary to put the road in repair. Then Mr. Ivey mudged him and he (Air. Miller) tried to qualify the statement by adding, "Or if it took the tenth part of the year to arbitrate it." The whole difficulty hinged on that clause, which by its original wording might cost the city twenty years' rental. He (the speaker) had also asked that the excursion cars be as good as now used by the G. T. R. on regular trains. It Saturday were too early he would put it off until a later date to allow the lessees time to put up the money.

Mr. Essery—Those gentlemen (the ayndicate representatives) knew 24 hours before what was required of them, I ask them themselves, and not somebody else to put up the money, as provided in section 28.

them themselves, and no solvest of section 28.

Mr. Ivey said it was agreed last night that Mr. Essery should assist him in getting the money back from the Molsons Bank in the morning. The nine gentlemen present would back him up, and he defied Mr. Essery to contradict it.

Mr. Essery said he did contradict it.

Mr. Essery said he did contradict it.

Mr. Jeffery—I have no personal interest in this question. It does not matter to me whether this city has 5,000 or 50,000 population; my business extends over the country. But this lease is of vital interest to the manufacturers of the city. The only way to get the money is to get it from the Molsons Bank by the execution of that lease as passed manimously by the council. You will not find a man who is not anxious for it to go through.

Mayor Essery reiterated his objection to clause 3. "The lessees under it could make repairs of $200,000 and we would have to foot the bill," he said.

Mr. Jeffery—It is far more important to the city than to the syndicate that it be repaired. The road must be put in good repair.

paired. The road must be put in good repair.

THE LEASE LAYS OVER.

Mayor Essery asked Mr. Ivey what day would be most convenient for him on which to hold the adjourned meeting.

Mr. Ivey preferred Monday.

The meeting then adjourned until Monday at 2 p.m.

THE OFFICERS ELECTED.

The sharcholders' meeting having adjourned the new board of directors met for the first time, Ald. Judd in the chair. Officers were elected as follows:

President—Mayor Esserv.

Vice-President—Frank E. Leonard.
Secre ary—Wm. Bowman.
Solicitor—Edmund Meredith.

The latter will be asked to get the papers and documents referring to the road from the former solicitor. The board adjourned to meet at 2:30 p.m., Monday.

FREDERICK FINTER.

A few short months ago Mr. Frederick Finter of Cedar Gate, Ottawa, Ont., suffered exeruciating agony. His case was a very critical one; his hopes of life were very feeble and slim. The skill of experienced medical men was of no avail; and, the ordinary and every-day patent medicines gave no measure of relief. Mr. Finter tianks God for his wonderful and almost miraculous deliverance trom death through the agency of Paine's Celery Compound. Mr. Finter's letter, which is dated Dec. 22, 1892, reads as follows:

the agency of Pane's Celery Compounds.
Mr. Finter's letter, which is dated Dec. 22, 1892, reads as follows:

"I consider it a duty to acknowledge the great good that I derived from your valuable remedy, Paine's Celery Compound. For four years I endured terrible agony and misery owing to pains in my head and chest. Life was a burden to me, and no living mortal could attempt to describe my sufferings. I was treated by doctors and used many patent medicines, but nothing gave me relief until I used your Paine's Celery Compound. I thank God for the day it was brought to my notice in the Ottawa papers. I have taken three bottles of the medicine; and, to-day I can truly say that I feel like a new man. I feel certain that if the suffering people of Canada would only try Paine's Celery Compound, they would be cured. I will recommend the remedy whenever I have the opportunity, as it is the best ever given to sufferers.

Mr. Finter is vouched for and recommend the leads a recommend the remedy whenever I have the opportunity, as it is the peate ever given to sufferers.

Mr. McClary said it was a question of the greetest importance, and private individuals had put up money rather than see it blocked. Mr. McClary sagested a scheme of two draft leases by which the difficulty might be overcome.

Mayor Essery—I don't want any checks or bonds or double leases. If your check is good go over to the bank and get it cashed. Mr. Jeffery—I can get the gold at once. But if we pay our $25,000 over to you we could not compel the Molsons Bank to pay over the deposit in the bank unless the lease delivered to the bank is the one passed the night of Jan. 9.

Mayor Essery—I know what I am doing. Put the money in the city treasurer's hands, unconditionally, and then we are prepared to go on.

Mr. W. R. Merethit said he had a suggested as sheins to and ratifies the draft lease produced, from the L. and P. S. R. Company to Frank S. Miller and others, subject to the condition that on or before the day of —, 1893, the $25,000 mentioned in London, Saturday, Jan. 21.

A MOVE IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION It was a significant and pleasing episode which presented itself at the meeting of the Toronto Presbytery a few days ago, when several Congregational ministers appeared before that body for the purpose of having a friendly and informal talk with their Presbyterian brethren concerning the practicability of union between the two denominations. The cordiality with which they were received, the concurrent views expressed, and the harmonious results ar rived at, form a chapter in Canadian church history, which is novel, and seems likely to be productive of important developments in the near future. We understand that this is the first appearance at the surface of what has, for some time, been a strong undercurrent of thought and feeling among the ministers and leading members of the two religious bodies concerned. Besides the yearning which every Christian heart instinctively feels for closer union with all "partakers of like precious faith," there has been an approximation, both in matters of doctrine and church polity, between Presbyterians and Congregationalists which an have but one issue in the natural course and order of events.

"Mountains interposed flake enemies of nations that had else, Like kindred drops, been mingled into one."

So of religious denominations. The gradual melting down and disappearance of the dividing mountains, must, of necessity, have the effect of bringing together those whom untoward circumstances have kept

The Presbyterian and Congregational denominations emerged alike from the move-ment known in church history as the Protestant Reformation. Doctrinally, they were in agreement from the outset. The Westminster Assembly of Divines, by which the Confession of Faith was framed, included representatives from both bodies.

oncerned. The Declaration of Faith issued by the Congregational Union of England and Wales in 1833, and a similar document adopted by the National Council of Congregational Ministers and Churches 50 years later, viz., in 1883, and accepted by the Congregational Union of Canada in 1886, are in substantial agreement with the Confession of Faith as liberally interpreted n these latter days.

Doctrinally, therefore, it is, as it has been, plain sailing. The dividing lines have been those of ecclesiastical polity. Congregationalists have maintained the absolute independence of the local church. Presbyterians have upheld the authority of kirk sessions, presbyteries, synods and general assemblies. But on both sides there have been modifications. In the constantly enlarging liberty of popular government accorded to individual ngregations in the Presbyterian body, and the felt necessity for some plan of united and constitutional denominational procedure on the part of Congregational ists, there may surely be found a basis of union. Neither body now claims exclusive scripture authority for its polity. There used to be both high-church Presbyterians and high-church Congregationalists, but both these classes of extremists have disappeared. The general opinion prevalent n both bodies is that, within the lines of certain great ecclesiastical principles which are laid down in the New Testament, there is a margin of liberty in adopting church polity to the circumstances and necessities of the passing times.
It is in the smaller towns, villages and rural districts that union between these two denominations would bear the happiest fruits. How often do we see two rival churches and ministers in places where, as the old Scotch song has it, "There's nae room for twa." Let the "kindred drops" mingle into one and there would be a decent stipend for a single minister, while the other could be spared for some other field. Energies that had been expended in competition would be combined for useful Christian work. The fire that had been worse than wasted on friends could be directed with telling effect against the foes of God and man. A spirit of concord and good will would pervade neighborhoods that had been needlessly split by religious feuds and small sectarian jealousies. The great and paramount interests of practical religion would gain immensely by such a fusion of Christian people into a loving and coworking brotherhood. Canada has already won a proud pre minence among Christian nations by her chievements in the line of church union. In no other country, as yet, have the scattered fragments of Presbyterianism and Methodism been consolidated into greater units. The success of these movenents has been marked, and the march of these two mighty denominations through our land is like the tread of two vast battalions in the "one army of the living God." Who knows but that one part of Canada's mission among the nations may be to lead the van in the great work of Christian union? A nobler mission could not be fulfilled. We wish "godspeed" to the project for union between Presbyteri-ans and Congregationalists which is now in its incipiency, and trust that the good work may go on until all existing divisions amon

Christians shall be healed. "WIVES AND DAUGHTERS." "Wives and Daughters" for the current

ONTARIO'S FIRST WOMAN LAWYER. Another outpost has been won in the ermission now finally conceded to women o practice law in the Province of Ontario. Miss Clara Brett Martin is the first woman n Ontario to enter the sacred inclosure. To Sir Oliver Mowat much of the credit is lue, for had he not thrown the full weight of his position as Premier, and as Attorneyeneral, head of the legal profession, into the balance, the right now granted might have been long withheld. This victory for that which is equal and just must hasten the time-not far distant, we believe, in this Frovince-when the women of Ontario, equally with men, will cast their votes in every description of election, as some of their number now do in municipal elections. - [Wives and Daughters for January.

ABOUT STRIKES.

ABOUT STRIKES.

One does not like to say a strike is never justifiable. But a strike, like a revolution, needs a good deal of justification. Take the Homestead mill strike, at Pittsburg, Pa. It is now over, having largely failed in its object. At lowest, twenty lives were lost. The State of Pennsylvania was put to great expense. The money loss on both sides will amount to millions. Worse, animosities bitter as those of the pit have been engen dered. These quarrels between capital and labor are as wicked as they are wasteful. The only alternative we can see is the establishment of some system of compulsory arbitration-that is, where some system of profit-sharing does not render compulsory arbitration unnecessary. Women everywhere, and particularly Women's Christian Temperance Unions, should use their good offices as mediators between capital and labor. They could do much, by pen and voice, and the passage of well-worded resolutions, to create the right sort of public opinion, and at the same time to increase their own influence for good in our woman's era .- [Wives and Daughters for January

DEAD MILLIONAIRE. Jay Gould, the New York millionaire, i dead, "worth" perhaps $70,000,000. As during his life, so since his death Jay Gould makes "copy" for writers innumerable. Odd, though, that hardly one paragrapher out of a thousand finds a good word for the dead plutocrat! One does indeed point out that Jay Gould was fond of his im-Westminster Assembly of Divines, by which the Confession of Faith was framed, included representatives from both bodies. All through the ages that have transpired since the Reformation, the Congregationalists have kept step and tally with their millions, and not a dollar left to any public Presbyterian brethren so far as doctrine is concerned. The Declaration of Faith issued by the Congregational Union of England man, starting out with nothing, dies at 56 after amassing $70,000,000, thoughtful people should ask to whom this really belongs, and whether the conditions under which such accumulations are possible are right and reasonable ?-[Wives and Daughters for January.

IS THE CHURCH ONLY HALF CONVERTED A convention of Christian Prohibitionists is to convene at Philadelphia on Jan. 24, to consider the attitude or the church towards prohibition, and to devise means whereby action may be quickened and concentrated. What a vast power for social reform lies unused by the church! There is force enough within the church, if properly combined and properly directed, to enact prohibition and make it as workable as th average of other enactments. Why cannot this force be properly combined. Why cannot this force be properly directed? Wherein ies the difficulty? Is the church itself only half converted? A convention similar to that called for Philadelphia should be held in every State and every in Province, to consider the attitude of the church to wards prohibition and to devise means whereby action may be quickened and con-centrated."—[Wives and Daughters for

"THE OLD ARK A-MOVERING ALONG." Since Wives and Daughters was last issued, a stirring contest has taken place in London, Ontario, in favor of the closing of all liquor-selling bars at 7 p.m. every night of the week, as at present on Saturday nights. The voting was simply a plebiscite, or expression of opinion, and the voting took place on a separate slip at the annua municipal election. The Women's Christian Temperance Union of London is numerically strong, and growing stronger every year. To its members must be attributed the splendid result, that, for what was thought by many to be almost as radical an issue as that of prohibition, no fewer than 2,757 votes were cast for early closing. Of the genuine votes cast, it is believed a majority were cast for early closing, as several hundred "personated" votes are thought to have been put it against the early closing. The opponents of early closing spent money like water— every artifice of electioneering was resorted to, and yet the Forward Movement came within a mere handful of votes of carrying. The enthusiasm of the friends of the tem perance movement runs high, and they have been greatly inspirited by the mag-nificent vote polled, even with deficient organization, and against everything that plenty of money and complete organization could do on the opposing side. One significant thing was the fact that, in all the meetings, though publicly invited to do so, not a soul ventured to stand up and say one word for the liquor traffic. On the next occasion no detail of organization and of necessary vigilance on the part of temperance people will be neglected; that done the result will not be doubtful.—[Wive and Daughters for January.

The London Hunt Ball a Splendid Success.

Brilliant Gathering in the Grand Opera House.

The Programme Opened by Lieuten ant-Governor Kirkpatrick.

Youth and Beauty in Brightest Garb-A Pretty Scene—A Glance at the Ladies' Costumes—Names of the Guests.

The auditorium of the Grand Oper

The auditorium of the Grand Opera House has been the scene of many fashionable gatherings upon social or theatrical occasions, but seldom has it presented a more dazzling appearance than last night. It was "the event of the season"—the Hunt Ball. Society was there in brilliant garb and happy mood. It was the consummation of weeks and months of pleasurable expectation and elaborate preparation, and it was one that fulfilled the devoutest wishes of all concerned.

The Opera House never looked prettier. The temporary floor had been erected over the seats in the pit on a level with the stage and was encircled by a railing draped with bunting. Within this inclosure extending from the rear seats to the back of the stage, the dancing was carried on. Although not as roomy as the City Hall it was much more cosy, compact and comfortable, the surroundings were brighter, the spectacle more striking and beautiful. And then between dances or during breathing spells, the ample corridors of the Temple afforded room for promenading, and its many sequestered nocks the opportunities of a delightful tete-a-tete.

Though seats sold at $1 apiece the dors of the Tempie anorded room lot promensading, and its many sequestered nooks the opportunities of a delightful tete-a-tete.

Though seats sold at $1 apiece the balcony was crowded with spectators, who leveled scores of opera glasses on the floor beneath. Viewed thus it was a pretty panorama of shifting beauty—a blaze of color, richandvariegated—a brilliantsetting in which each radiant creature was a jewel. While the masculine onlooker was content with broad effects, the eyes of the fair sex found an unlimited field for admiration and criticism by individual inspection of the ladies' toilettes. Many of the costumes were exquisite productions of the dressmaker's art; all were handsome and tasteful. The more uniform and somber hue of the gentlemen's evening dress was here and there relieved by the scarlet jackets of the Hunt members or the showy uniform of the military.

From midnight to 1:15 o'clock supper was served in the banqueting hall of the Temple on the upper floor. Gaslights with colored globes illumined the spacious apartment, which was nicely decorated. The menu was in keeping with the company and the occasion, and the good things were served by a staff of waiters to the guests who streamed in and out.

The affair was lent eclat by the attendance of Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Kirkpatrick, the former opening the ball. It was 9:30 p.m. when the majority of the guests had arrived and were in their places on the floor for the commencement of the dancing programme. The initial number was the lancers, and the following composed the first set:

the first set:

The programme included 24 numbers, the popular waltz predominating with the polks, laners and schottische respectively in order. The music was supplied by the Grand Opera House Orchestra, which was stationed in an alcove in the balconv overlooking the pit. The quality was admirable and the work of the organization reflected great credit upon the members and upon the talented leader, Mr. Fred. L. Evans. The day had begun to break when the last dance had been tripped off and the coupes came to carry home the tired though happy guests. happy guests.

There is no necessity of our advertisements becoming monotonous, because we are not confined to one line, but we are liable to speak often of a good thing when we are anxious that you should know about it.

TOPICS OF TO-DAY.

M. Robin, a noted French scientist, states that he has discovered a valuable antidote for nervousness in a solution of 5 grammes of phosphate of soda in 100 grammes of sterilized distilled water. More efficacious, however, than any decoction or medicine is the power to forget one's self, to go out of one's self in some thought for others, or some intellectual interest. No "cure" for nervousness is equal to this.

A factory for the manufacture of petrified human corpses has, it is alleged, been discovered in Fresno, Cal. At least four petcovereds Freeno, Cal. At least four petrified people are said to have been manufactured and shipped to museums from this place. It may be remembered that a petrified man created considerable talk in Utah last fall, and that reports of the curiosity were printed in Eastern papers. The thing was seen by natural history experts and pronounced a fraud, but in netted considerable money for the "miners" who discovered it. The objects were very carefully made, the bones of the arms and legs being hollowed out, and in one case one arm and a foot was broken off to show the internal structure. The fake factory, it is said, stole a genuine mummified man, a dried body found on the plains, from the Health Officer of Fresno, fixed it up a little, and shipped it to a museum in the East.

‡‡‡ Few people are aware that Queen Victoria possesses a fine herd of wild boars at Windsor, which is kept in an outlying corner of the Home Park. It is the only herd of wild boars in Great Britain, and was formed by Prince Albert, who was very fond not only of shooting, but also of eating wild boar. Wild boar was first introduced on the royal Wild boar was first introduced on the royal table during the reign of King George IV., and has been a favorite winter dish on the sovereign's table ever since. A wild boar's head invariably figures upon the Queen's sideboard on Christmas Day, and she is in the habit of sending a wild boar every Christmas to the Priuce of Wales and her other married children. The meat tastes something like pork, but with a very pronounced game flavor. Wild boar shooting is the favorite form of sport of Emperor William of Germany, of the King of Saxony and of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, each of whom possesses extensive preserves

The plan of using separate tires for car wheels is considerably discussed at present by railroad men, and is regarded by many as representing the correct principle of con-struction. The fact is well understood as representing the correct principle of construction. The fact is well understood that, for a long time past, the practice has prevailed on many railways of having the tires of locomotive driving wheels of a separate metal hoop, which is shrunk on the center like a carriage tire and held in place by suitable methods. It is stated that in Europe the wheels of cars also have been somewhat extensively made in this manner. In the United States the method which has been adopted is that of having a solid wrought iron center for the wheels, this being surrounded with a steel tire two and seven-eighth inches thick and of the dimensions approved by the Master Car dimensions approved by the Master Car Builders' Association. The tire is held to the center by peaning or relling its under lip into a groove, thus avoiding the neceslip into a groove, thus avoiding sity of bolts or retaining rings.

The capitol of our Dominion is distingishing itself, through its Board of Trade, a the appreciation of economic truth. Mr. A. Mr. Pratt's paper contained the following pertinent "Questions for the board":

Thes. Crotty's Remarkable Recovery-Helpless, Tortured and Deformed by Inflammatory Rheumaticm-Taken to Eis Home from a Hospital to Die When Relief Comes—The Particulars of the Case as Investigated by a Telegraph Reporter.

It is admitted on all sides that this is an age of wonders, and there is no reason why wonders should not be accomplished in medical as well as it other branches of scientific research. Of late scarcely a week passes but what we read in Canadian and American newspapers of remarkable cures accomplished through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for pale people. We confess that we have not paid much attention to their worth until lately, when more than one marvelous cure in our midst has been brought to our attention, convincing us, as well as others, of the priceless value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Among the cases thus brought to our notice is one which we consider it our bounden duty to chronicle. The case is that of Mr. Thomas Crotty, a young man well known in the city of Quebec, who has been brought back from the very brink of the grave to restored health. The subject of this sketch is the son of Mr. Thomas Crotty, who resides at No. 63 St. Patrick street. Thomas Crotty, jun., is 29 years of age and for the past eight years has been a martyr to inflammatory rheumatism, in fact so much so that for the past year he has been a deformed cripple. Last winter he was removed to the Hotel Dieu Hospital for treatment. Every day he gradually grew worse, and his sufferings, according to the good sisters in charge, were excruciating. The very flesh left his body, and from his chest downward he became paralyzed. His arms and legs were twisted into a misshapen condition, and the poor fellow was an object of pity to look upon. During the month of May last he became blind and deaf, and was unable to move even his head without causing intense pain. His digestive organs refused to act, and the only nourishment he could partake was milk and that had to be given him with a spoon, and at one time his mouth had to be forced open while the poor fellow was being apoon-fed. Finally his life was despaired of by the attending physicians Drs. Vallee, Catellier and Turcette, who admitted that they could do nothing for him, and said t but otherwise his condition was apparently growing worse. It was at this juncture that the members of the family had their attention arrested by one of the remarkable cures published in the Telegraph, resulting from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Crotty asked his mother to procure some. The good woman never for a moment thought they would be of any use, but determined to gratify him. By the time the second box was used it was seen that there was a very slight change for the better, and this gave hope to persist in the use of the Pink Pills, and Crotty continued taking them until he was brought so often to the attention of the Telegraph, that we determined to investigate the mat so often to the attention of the Telegraph, that we determined to investigate the matter for ourselves, and one of our reporters was dispatched to see Crotty, who we knew very well for years, as he was one of the first boys when the Telegraph was started twenty years ago, to sell the paper, and we have known him ever since and watched his enterprising career, and the majority of the citizens of Quebec will recognize in him Thomas Crotty, the book agent.

MR. CROTTY'S STATEMENT. MR. GROTT'S STATEMENT.

When it was found that Mr. Crotty was getting better it was decided to remove him again to the Hotel Dieu Hospital, and there our reporter found him reading a newspaper and looking quite cheerful, and apparently very far from the grave. In the course of a long interview Mr. Crotty corroborated what the reporter had already heard, adding that he never expected to be alive at present, and his friends who say

The Better I like it.

"Yes, I have used it for years, and the longer I use it the better I like it; in fact, I would use no other," said a bright, happy looking lady to her friend when riding on the street car along Dundas street the other day. They had seen the advertisement of Pure Gold Baking Powder on the boards as they passed along in the car. The reporter flaving to get off the car at this particular moment did not hear the end of the converversation.

Faithfulness at All Times Will Alone Erring Victory—Able Address by Mrs. Clara Hoffman, Mis-gouri's Noted Lady Orator.

The First Congregational Church was crowded last evening, the occasion being a lecture entitled, "Our Legacy for the Future," by the gifted and elcquent State president of the Missouri W. C. T. U., Mirs. Ciara Hoffman.

The lecture, which was under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. of this city, was replete with pathetic and thrilling incident, such as had come under the speaker's own observation. In the absence of Rev. Mr. Agiver was to Toronto-Rev. W. J. Clark officiated as chalrman.

Rev. Mr. Clark briefly referred to the macyoidable absence of the pastor. He added that although his hearers failed in added that measure passed, the temporadded that although his hearers land in getting their measure passed, the temporary defeat would lead to more organized work. The lecturer was then introduced to the large assemblage.

to those who carry the same blood in their veius—to some, who suffer for sins they did not commit. This is the law of heredity. Like begets like, not only with the blade of grass and with every animal, but it is true everywhere. Herbert Spencer does not talk nonsense always. Not long since the speaker had listened to the sermon of a pastor who for 48 years had held that appointment, and as she looked on his zongregation and then on his face sho said to herself, "There is a likeness." During those namy years had he not always sympathized with the sorrowing and had he not wedded the younger members of his flock? The reason why so many are tormented in the United States about bad servants—she presumed there was not so much of the same trouble in Canada—is because there are not better masters and mistresses. So is it everywhere with teachers and schools. In Christian lands and nations we see

Dr. Kerr, of London, and the late Dr.
William Carpenter, have given their opinions as to the effect of vice and drinking on posterity. The latter authority has said that the drunkard injures his offspring far worse than himself. A boy who had a tendency to murder was brought before the doctor, who closely questioned the lad. Admission was made by the boy that he had frequently determined to kill his little brother, but could not tell why.
The parents were then asked if they had been in the habit of using intoxicants.
"Yes," was the reply of the father, "but not to excess. I was never intoxicated in my life." "My good man," replied the doctor, "you have cursed your own child."
You may say, said the speaker, that this is exceptional. Perhaps it is, but I know of instances in the States where little children are so injured—and one child actually

The man who violated the law in this instance was one of our "respectable citizens." In many places the license fee, has been advanced, but the higher the license, the stronger the hold of the evil one on the community, every time. Moberly (Missouri) is high-licensed and is the worst city in the State. Why not license lying? Some time after the occurrence referred to the speaker read in a New York paper of a young man t detected in the act of giving a girafic to-bacce, although the animal didu't particularly desire it. This offender was compelled to pay a fine of $300; but then the victim was to be faithful at all times, in the dark and

WONDERFUL PROGRESS.

The year 1892 has been a wonderful year to the women of Great Britain. Its greatest triumphs are the opening of St. Andrew's University to women and the generosity of the faculty in offering to the women students a share of the bursaries or scholarships, one half of which is reserved for women students exclusively. The council of the Royal Geographical Society has agreed to admit women as fellows on the same terms as men; and the British Medical Association called a general meeting for the purpose of considering the admission of the 140 registered women physicians in England. The important place assigned to women at the Church Congress and the decision of the Foresters' Club to admit women on the same terms as men are striking proofs of the tendency of the times to acknowledge on the one hand women's intellectual power and capacity for scientific research and on the other their right to mingle with men as equals in the more practical affairs of life. GOSSIP OF A DAY.

Alcohol is rot. After a careful study of all the latest and most reliable suthorities on physiological science, we find that alcohol, being the excreta of animalculæ, the refuse product of the decomposition of grape juice, corn, malt, apples, or other starchy substances, is the very ashes of death, therefore the enemy of life.—[W. LADY HENRY SOMERSET.

Lady Henry Somerset, the well-known WOMEN AS ECONOMISTS.

The ability of women to save money is doubted by some skepties of the other sex. Their disposition is supposed to be in the direction of spending rather than saving, and perhaps some of the harsher critics speak from unpleasant experience. Woman is by nature endowed with a love of pretty things, not for personal adornment alone, but also for the beautifying of her home. An attractive gown, a "love of a hard" or a sparkling jewel will not necessarily bring more joy to her heart than a set of handsome curtains, a hearth rug of becoming pattern, a comfortable chair, a bet of handsome curtains, a hearth rug of becoming pattern, a comfortable chair, a pleasure to her to surround herself as far as she can with the things which she sees and admires in her trips abroad.

But her love for the artistic and beautiful fed one not prove that her tendencies are toward extravagance. Thanks to the conditions of the present time, many of the things which she admires may be secured at a comparatively small cost. Never before has it been as possible for a woman of turnisher home prettily and yet sent furnisher home prettily and yet sent before has it been as possible for a woman of turnisher home present time, many of the things which she admires may be secured at a comparatively small cost. before has it been as possible for a woman to furnish her home prettily and yet sensibly, to dress herself and her children becoming y with a reasonable expenditure of money, than it is now. Of course a woman's success as a domestic financier depends largely on her training. If she has learned to value things only by their price marks, and her teaching in the direction of good taste and economy has been neglected, she will subject herself to the criticisms of those who love to discover faults in her sex.

Our losity was excited to the utmost to see the inside of the famous gin palace, and they crowded in, but in an orderly manner, and were shown to their appointed room, each apartment being conspicuously numbered. The place was brilliant with gas, and with an immense fire in each room, in ornamental open grates, quite as brilliant as the old gin palace; tables, small and large, and chairs and benches were scattered about; busts of great and good men were standing in niches and corners; a few pictures, maps. etc., were on the walls; the better sort of the dear and the cheap periodicals, monthly and weekly; also, there were several sets of chess and draughtsmen. A more complete picture of comfort the men had never entered on, although it wanted the bottles and barrels and shining taps of the gin-shop.

So! that was their master's gin palace!

A comfortable asylum, where they might enjoy each other's society, hear the news, and be well lighted and warmed, all at his expense. "They might have knowed that he never would countenance a liquer traffic—where were their wits to have believed each at him?"

"The coffie, too, that was at his expense, wall, it warn't bad."

Had! it were deadly good."

"Yes, it were; and so wers the bread and butter. But about the beer?"

"And the gin?"

Nobody could say any more than that they had passed their words to their good master, and they must put up with the evening coffee for a month.

"And at the end of the month we will talk again," said Mr. Danesbusy, appearing just as the last words were spoken. "Perhaps we may enter on a fresh agreement then. Did you find the coffee to your liking?" liking?"
They had never tasted the like—for

Mr. Dunesbury laughed, He sat down for a little while and conversed cheerfully with the men; not about his hopes and schemes, he had done talking of them for a month, and now left them to their own working; but about indifferent topics of interest. After that, he passed into the other rooms successively.

"I think it will answer, William," he whispered, as they were crossing the well-lighted hall to leave.
"So do I," answered William, "I did not see a dissatisfied face among them."

"No; but you do, now."
"Yes, thank God."

Arthur pressed his arm with true affection; but what he would have said more was arrested; for, on going out into the street, they found themselves in the midst of a they found themselves in the midst of a crowd of women.

News of the asteunding truth had been carried to them that the new place was no drinking place but one to keep their husbands and sons from drink. The tidings had spread from cottage to cottage, from house to house, and the excited women, full of joy and thank ulness, had flown to the new place, and stood flocking round it, eager for more particular confirmation. Even the respectable Mrs. Gould had gone, and she was the first to address Mr. Danesbury.

and she was the first to address Mr. Danesbury.

"Oh, sir," she said, almost in impassioned tones, "I don't know how to forgive myself. I gave ear to the wicked, disreputable report that this was to be a gin shop; and after watching your goodness, as I had, all through so many years! We shall never thank you enough, sir, for opening it what it is,"

"We all joined in the delusion sir, more shame to us for doubting you," eried another. "We never thought it was going to be nothing but a gin palace."

"Yes," smiled Mr. Danesbury, "the report did get about. Not from me; I certainly never said it was going to be a gin-palace. But when I found that you had picked up the notion, I did not contradict it.

"Well, sir, I suppose we jumped at the thought through seeing of it a-doing up so nice. I hope all the blessings in the world will rest upon you, sir, for trying to desomething to reform our toping pigs of something to reform our toping passible husbands,"

"Perhaps I shall try something to reform you next," said Mr. Denesbury.
The crowd looked at him wonderingly.
"My good women," said he, in a low, clear, kindly tone, which reached the ears and the consciences of all, "how many of you have done anything to induce your husbands not to tope—except in the way of scolding and abuse? Have you—I speak to you all individually—made his home comfortable and peaceable? have you kept if Intrable and peaceable? have you kept it clean and cheerful; have you ever met him with kind words? I fear not."

They were fearing not also, just then; and coarcely an eye dared to meet that of Mr. Danesbury.

"Boss Mr. Danesbury! forever bless Mr. Danesbury!" was echoed around, "we shall never know another gentleman like him."
Arthur raised his hat, and, passing his arm within his brother's, walked away.

GONCLUSION.

It was alonely day in June; the sun shone on the green trees, and the biue sky was without a cloud. All Eastborough, high and low, rich and poor, had gathered round the church, save those who had been able to get inside it, for it was the marriaze-day of Arthur Danesbury and Mary Heber. In deference to the recent meiancholy deaths in the family, the wedding was as quiet as possible. No ceremonious breakfast was given, and Mary was plainly attired, for they were to go oil from the church now, a small party only; and the officiating clergyman was Mary's brother, the R.v. Henry Heber.

"May all good luck and presperity attend them!" ardently uttered oid Mra. Harding. "If any man ever deserved it in this world, it is Arthur Danesbury."

"He does that," acquiesced the listeffers. "Only think of having loved this young lady for years, yet he put aside his own wishes for the sake of his family."

"For them two good-for-nothings, poor lost young fellows! It's not many as would consider his brothers before himself, and help them to the money he wanted to marry upon."

"Not more for their sakes than for his "The this "Hede was "Hedel was "He help them to the money he wanted to marry upon."

"Not more for their sakes than for his father's," rejoined Mrs. Harding, "Had he breathed a wish to marry, the old gentleman would have lived upon a crust himself but what he should have been enabled to do it all locked up in his own breast. He deserves happiness now, for he has waited for it patiently, and done his duty by everybody before himself. Ay, and happiness will be his; he is one who may sit down under the shadow of his own vine and his own fightere, as was promised to the obadient under the Old Dispensation."
"Hush! here they come! Look! they are first, she leaning on his arm. How pretty she looks with her flushed rosy cheeks, and

And then when the post-boys nad cleared the throng, and put their horses into a can't ter, a perfect shower of old shoes flew after the carriage for good luck; some alighting on it, some beside it, some over it amid the horses; hundreds they looked, whirling forward through the air. It seemed as though every man woman and child had brought with them their old shoes, to throw after the bridegroom and bride.

Just as lovely a day, only hotter, arose a month later, in July. Preparations were making for a feast at Danesbury House. A large tent was erected in the adjacent field, and tables upon tables were set out in it, for all the workmen and their wives were to dine there, and spend a joyous holiday. Indeors a table was laid for guests. Mr. and Mrs. Danesbury, who had just returned home, had some visitors staying with them; Lord and Ladv Temple, their young children and Mr. and Mrs. St. George, the two latter having arrived by thes morning's train, the otters, including Arthur and his wife, the previous night. A few intimate friends were expected from the neighborhood, and the first to enter was Mrs. Philip Danesbury. Following close upon her, came William and his wife; William with a clear bright countenance, very different from what it used to be; and next arrived old Mr. Pratt, bringing with him a tall gentlemanly young man, with a fresh color and intelligent countenance. Mr. Danesbury, calm, noble, kind as ever, met them on the steps.

"May I introduce somebody else, as well as mysolf?" demanded the old doctor, in his quaint way, as he shook hands heartily with Arthur.

Arthur took the young man's hands. "It is not your grandson?"

"Yes, it is. He is come to stay a fortnight with me, out of the poisonous smoke and smells of London. He tells me he once saw Mr. Arthur Danesbury."

"Yes, "repided Arthur, looking kindly at him; "it was in Mr. St. George's office, the day he was about to enter on his new employment. How have you got on?"

"Yes," repided Arthur, looking kindly at him; "it was in Mr. St. George's of

"Yes; undoubtedly Mr. Danesbury was wise enough to hit upon the right course, when he bound the men to him for a whole month," interposed Squire Hanson, a neighboring gentleman and a magistrate. "I had my doubts about its succeeding; I confess it, for I was in his confidence almost from the first; but I am rejoiced to be able to say that my doubts have been dispelled, and his hopes realized."

"All the men who had embraced the proposition to patronize my gin-shop," con-

"It will do them no good," said Arthur Danesbury, "even if they should confine themselves to a moderate quantity. But you very rarely find a workingman to do this. Whatever may be his grade. I pray yon not to mistake me," he hastily added: "I do not imply that a steady workingman takes too much with his dinner, in the meaning we give to the torm 'too much'; but his taking it at dinner leads him to take it afterward. Suggest to an artisan to leave off his beer. Leave off my beer! he will answer you; 'I should never have strength togo through my day's work.' There lies the fallacy. It is a most mistaken conclusion. Beer gives a passing excitement, which lasts for the moment and appears like strength, but the effect goes speedily off, leaving the man weaker than he was before and insupportably weary. Inquire of any workman whether, after drinking beer, he does not feel a lassitude creeping ever him at his work, an inclination to sit down and be idle. He does; and he believes he wants 'aupporting,' and sends for another pint and drinks it, to give that support; and so it goes on, beer and lassitude, beer and lassitude, and beer again all the day through."

But allow me to put in a word myself, although it is interrupting Mr. Danesbury. Workingmen, you who read this—and I hope a great many of you will read it—have you ever tried to do without beer at your dinner? Never; you have always believed it to be as necessary to you as the dinner its self. Oh, try it now! Substitute water; make the effort, and give it a fair trial; if you find my theory wrong and yours right, take to the beer again. Do not drink the water for one single day; that would be of no use. For the first day and the second, and perhaps for five or six days, you will make a wry face over the water, and gulp it down, as you will say, "against the grain," and protest that you dislike it, as compared to your much relished beer. But persevere. If you have fought the battle for so long, you can light it still, and you will find that you are losing

Temple. "There were so many."

ECHOES AND ETCHINGS.

KEEPING TO THE RIGHT.

KEEPING TO THE RIGHT.

The following extract from Boswell's "Life of Johnson" may serve to fix the date of the present custom of walking on the right-hand of the footway:

"In the last age (says Johnson), when my mother lived in London, there were two sets of people—those who gave the wall and those who took it; the peaceable and the quarrelsome. When I returned to Lichield, after having been in London, my mother asked me whether I was one of those who gave the wall or took it. Now it is fixed that every man keeps to the right; or, if one is taking the wall, another yields it, and it is nover a dispute."

The period to which this referred is 1737.

THE SECRET OF WARM FEET.

A life insurance company, whose advice under the circumstances may be taken as sincere, tells its clients that the golden rule in cold weather is too keep the extremities warm. The first and most important rule for the carrying out of this idea is never to be tightly shod.

Boots or shoes that fit clearly remainded.

for the carrying out of this idea is never to be tightly shod.

Boots or shoes that fit closely prevent the free circulation of the blood by pressure; but when, on the contrary, they do not embrace the foot too firmly, the space left between the shoe and the stocking has a good supply of warm air. The second rule is never to sit in damp shoes.

It is often supposed that unless shoes are positively wet it is unnecessary to change them while the feet are at rest. This is a great fallacy, for when the least dampness is absorbed into the sole in its evaporation it absorbes the heat from the foot, and thus perspiration is dangerously checked. This can easily be proved by trying the experiment of neglecting the rule. The feet will be found cold and damp after a few minutes, although on taking off the shoe and examining it it will appear to be quite dry.

EGAINS FROM REGULAR! HABITS. An English scientific philosopher lately made a half-playful, half-serious defense of the routine life of the man of "regular habits."

He insisted that in this busy age, when so many duties press upon an active man, and there are so many things which unavoidably call for the exercise of attention. judgment and decision every day, it is the part of wisdom—a real conservation of energy and nervous force—to settle as many as possible of the routine matters by a fixed habit of life.

HE GAVE IT AWAY.

HE GAVE IT AWAY.

It was at a hotel table and they looked suspiciously like a bridal couple, but their conversation seemed to disprove the theory. He had explained in rather loud tones that he had sewed the loop on his overcoat with white thread, and she had told him that if he'd had any ingenuity he could have made it black by drawing it through the ink bottle, so that everybody could see they were "old married people," for a bride would have repreachfully asked him why he hadn't tet her do it.

Then they began to order their dinner.

"I'm sure I don't know," she returned airily. "I don't know the difference between a redhead duck and a blue eyed

This flippancy disconcerted him for a moment, but he seemed to remember something, and went on:
"Well, how do some broiled qualls strike you?"
"Broiled or stewed, it's immaterial to me," she answered nonchalantly.

Then he became cross and delivered himsel of an opinion

"See here, Alice, you've got to decide. I don't want to go and order something for our first dinner—"

And then he suddenly paused as Alice moaned.

"Oh, hush! I knew you'd forget. You've given it away after all my attempts to seem so old married! Oh, Raiph!"

And the hearers thought again of the stupidity of man and how it ruthlessly destroys all that the fluesse of woman accomplishes.

A Man Made Happy.—Gentlemen,—
For five years I have been a great sufferer with Dyspepsia; the pain in the pit of my stomach was almost unbearable and life only seemed a drag to me. When I would go to sleep I would have horrible dreams, and my life became very miserable, as there was no rest either day or night. But with the use of only two bottles of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetrable Discovery this unhappy state has all been chapged and I am a well man. I can assure you, my case was a bad one, and I send you this that it may a well man. I can assure you, my case was a bad one, and I send you this that it may be the means of convincing others of the wonderful carative qualities possessed by this medicine, that are specially adapted for the cure of Dyspepsia. A lady customer of mine had the Dyspepsia very bad, she could scarcely eat anything, and was troubled with pains similar to those I suffered with; and she cured herself with two bottles of Northrop & Lyman's Vege-TABLE DISCOVERY. I wish you success with your medicine, as I am fully convinced that it will do all you claim for it.

Having arrived at years of discretion and discrimination, why can he not so order his life as to have these and kindred things come and go in a somewhat settled order? To eat at regular hours the things him; to rise, bathe, dress, exercise, work, rest, recreate and sleep after a regular order, is not to make a treadmill of life. It is to lay out a smooth road for journeying with the least possible friction and waste. "To choose time is to save time." A considerable proportion of the worry and waste of life comes from a needless jumbling of work and clashing of duties:

Whatever we may think of the method, the large majority of men who accomplish great things and live to a good old age are men of regular habits. It may be escuarging to such to know that there is a scientific basis for their sticking to the ruts.

Cleanliness in Handling Milk.

There is an important lesson in the results obtained by the use of the separator, a machine that by centrifugal force, and mechanical devices, separates the cream from the milk. The lesson comes from the elimination of another element than the cream, the impurities, many of which would not be detected by the eye, though shown to be in such quantities, even in milk that is supposed to have been carefully bandled, as to make one wish not to think of them as incorporated in butter. These impurities are varied in character, ranging from earth, to the dry, dead skin that is removed from the udder by the process of milking. Cleanliness in Handling Milk.

removed from the udder by the process or milking.

A large percentage of foreign matter gets not the milk before it is removed from the etable. The milker sits down, and, after making two or three passes across the adder with his hand, to brush off any loose dirt that may be clinging to it, begins miking, quite unconscious, it would seem, othe very untidy condition of things. If the milker would let a ray of sunlight fall upon the space between his hands and the pail, he would be somewhat surprised and more tified at the thick shower of small imhe would be somewhat surprised mortified at the thick shower of small mortified at the thick shower of small impurities that would be seen constantly settling down into the milk pail. A thorough preparation should be made before milking. In the first place the floor upon which the cows stand should be thoroughly swept down into the gatter every day. The cows should be carciully carded and brushed every day when standing in the stable. This is not so important when they are in the pasture, but even then it pays.

carded and brushed every day when standing in the stable. This is not so important when they are in the pasture, but even then it pays.

Before beginning to milk, a thorough releaning of the sides, udder and under portion of each animal should be given. For this purpose a broom is exceedingly convenient. The cow's sides can be easily swept down with thie, then, taking the flat side of the broom, a thorough rubbing can be given the udder and belly. With a piece of cloth the udder and belly. With a piece of cloth the udder and teats can be carefully wiped—the whole operation not occupying more than a minute for each cow. It is best to clean the whole herd with the broom first, then follow with the cloth. By this time the dust will have settled to a considerable extent, and the work can proceed rapidly and neatly.

It is prescapposed that the milker's hands and pails are perfectly clean. There are still other chances for milk to become contaminated. It requires very careful washing, scalding and airing to keep the pans sweet. The simple pouring in, and out again, of boiling water is not enough. They should be kept in boiling water for ten minutes at least—then thoroughly dried and covered. Milk set in open pans often receives dust and impurities from the surrounding atmosphere and from the ceiling. The milk-room should be thoroughly cleaned and whitewashed, and its windows covered with fine notting.

Another source of trouble is the contamination by cdors. Milk and butter are peculiarly receptive of odors, and all sources of these should be removed. It assuredly requires constant care and effort to make dairy productions first-class, but their increased value pays richly for all the extra trouble, while in the matter of cleanliness, whether there be increased value on not, pride in one's work and a sense of duty towards one's customers, ought to induce one to keep things sweet and pure.

For the purpose of maintaining the common roads the inhabitants living in the district are obliged to work three days in each year, or pay an amount equivalent to the compensation of the laborer for three days.

The consul at Havre says that French pavements increase in excellence with age. In France, he says, all roads have perpetual attention. If from weight, rain or other causes, a hollow, rut, or sink is formed, it is repaired at once. Where the space to be repaired is of limited area, the rolling of the new coating is left to the wide tires of the heavy carts, but in the case of extended areas a steam roller is brought into use. Every carrying and market cart in France is a roadmaker instead of a rutmaker, for it has tires usually from four inches to six inches in width.

Value of a Pedigree.

The breeders of this country may be roughly divided into three classes, those who blindly worship, those who equally blindly despise, and those who intelligently appreciate a pedigree in stock. The value of a pedigree does not consist simply and solely in a long list of names, the longer the list the greater the value, nor is it to be despised because some think names alone give value, but it consists in the frecord of the characteristics of the ancestors of any given animal. It can do no one any good to know the names unless he, also, knows for what the names stand; without such knowledge a pedigree is as unintell gible as a page of Homer to a person who never studied Greek. But a pedigree is valuable, when each name is significant of the characteristics of the animal for which it stands. It then gives a history of the ancestors of which the pedigreed animal is an epitome. It tells what that animal's breeding possibilities are, and in the hands of an intelligent breeder enables him so to mate the animal as to correct not only the apparent, but the latent defects, and to make improvement a matter of science rather than a game of chance. Bad pedigrees, and there are bad as well as good ones, are as useful in their way as the good ones. They teach what to avoid, while the good ones may teach what to follow. Without pedigrees, capable of being translated into the history of the ancestors of the animals, such a thing as reliable breeding is an impossibility. With their aid there still remains uncertainty enough in breeding, for no man can absolutely foretell in what way heredity will act, and whether it will be the characteristics of the sire's sire, or of the dam's great, great grandsire, which will mode the animal to be produced. The ideal pedigree, therefore, is not necessarily the longest one, but the one in which every animal is possessed of the desired characteristics. When such a pedigree is found, fluence, but sometimes there sion over them to early ones.

THE HORSEMAN.

The past season of 1892 has added two The past season of 1892 has added two more to this exceedingly oxclusive circle—Martha Wilkes, 2:08, and Bello Vara, 2:082. To examine the speed lines of Maud S, and Nancy Hanks is like repeating an off-told tale, but the lessons of comparison are always valuable, and in the variety of the blood lines which produces speed there are always elements of instrucspeed there are always elements of instru-tion and hope.

It will also be well to note that Martha It will also be well to note that Martha Wilkes has shown flights of speed, which, had they been maintained, would have placed her record close to the champlon mark. What Marvin may yet succeed in doing with Sunol will also be a subject of active speculation, while the extraordinary experiment of training the nineteen-year-old exqueen, Maud S., will be watched with special interest.

At Cleveland, O., July 30, 1885. Maud S. trotted in 2:08\(\frac{3}{2}, \) being the first mare or trotter of either sex to pass beyond the 2:10 line. Up to the close of the season of 1890, Maud S. enjoyed her solitary grandeur, but in 1891 she was joined by those two great 5-year-old mares, Sunol, 2:08\(\frac{1}{2}, \) and Nancy Hanks, 2:09. Sunol has not reduced her record since, while the invincible Nancy has reduced her record to 2:04 and become the queen of the trotting turf.

the queen of the trotting turf.

The marvelous Sunol, 2:08‡, by Electioneer, dam Waxana by General Benton; second dam Waxana by General Benton; second dam Waxy by Lexington; third dam by Eclipse, runs so quickly to the thorough bred on the dam's side that the showing of trotting speed is necessarily limited, though what there is is good. General Benton was a successful sire of speed, producing such good ones as Sallie Benton, 2:17‡, four-year-old champion at that time. As a brood-mare sire he was a distinct success. In addition to Sunol, his daughters have to their credit Truman, 2:12; Starlight, 2:26; Cecillian, 2:22; Novelist, 2:27, and Tiney, 2:28‡, all at two years old, and a large number of other fast ones. But in estimating the influence of the brood mare in all the Electioneers the incomparable greatness of Green Mountain Maid, the dam of the greatest sires, must alweys be borne in mind.

Nancy Lee, the dam of Nancy Hanks, was by Dictator, dam Sophy, by Edwin Forrest; second dam Sophronia by Parker's Brown Pilot; third dam by Bertrand; fourth dam by Lance. Dictator has proved himself to be as great a brood mare sire as he is a direct sire of speed, thus taking the highest rank as a sire. The perfect sire of the future will be the one who not only produces high speed with regularity, but whose sons and daughters do so. Breeding science is rapidly leaving the day when daughters of sires who were only famous for their daughters, will be in demand to breed to sires who are only famous for their daughters, will be in demand to bred to sires who are only famous for their sons. The all-round producing sire is the stallion for the future. Dictator has attained this proud position, and Happy Medium, the sire of Nancy Hanks, is following, through his daughters, rapidly in his footsteps. Edwin Forrest should also have his fair share of credit, while the thoroughbred blood on the maternal side, still further back, undoubtedly adds its full quota to the marvelous stamina which enables Nancy to sustain her highest flights of quota to the marvelous stamina which e ables Nancy to sustain her highest flights
