BRITISH STEAMER ARGONAUT LOST.

AMERICAN SCHOOLS ATTACKED.
Constantinople, Aug. 9.—Advices received here from Tarnus, Asia Minor, say that a mob has attacked the American mission school at that place, and threatened the missionaries. No details of the affair have yet reached here.

DECISION DELAYED.
London, Aug. 9.—It is stated that the judgment in the prohibition case—the appeal of the Province of Ontario from the decision of the Canadian Supreme Court that appellants had not the right to pass a prohibitory law regarding the import, use and sale of liquor—will be delivered in November next. The long vacation will elapse before the case will be finally adjudged.

NOT SO BAD AS REPORTED.

London, Aug. 9.—The Times prints a dispatch from Hong Kong, asserting that the riot at Fatsan yesterday was not a serious outbreak. The dispatch says the Wesleyan hospital was damaged, but that the missionaries will remain at their posts. Neither the Foreign nor the Colonial Office, nor the Wesleyan mission here have received any news regarding the reported attack upon the British and American missions at Fatsan yesterday.

DIVING AFTER MONEY.

London, Aug. 9.—A dispatch from Melbourne says that divers have left there for the scene of the wreck of the steamer Caterham for the purpose of attempting to recover the 11,000 sovereigns in specie on board the steamer. The dispatch further states that it is now known that the total number of lives lost in the disaster is 64, many of the Chinese passengers and crew being saved. Of the Europeans on board only four, previously mentioned, survived.

BRITISH RED-COATS IN CHINA.

Shanghai, Aug. 9.—Great indignation is expressed here because British troops were not sent to escort the British consul at Foo Choo to Ku Cheng, whither he will proceed to inquire into the outrages there. The Ministers at Peking, it is asserted, do not seem to realize the gravity of the situation. It is considered highly advisable that British troops should be sent from Foo Choo, as the victory has not a sufficient force of troops at his disposal to realize the arrests of the persons guilty of having committed the outrages.

A SOCIETY SCANDAL.

London, Aug. 8.—An action for damages for slander which commenced before Justice Hawkins in the High Court of Justice this morning is exciting comment in society circles. Mrs. Jacoby, wife of the brother of Mr. J. A. Jacoby, M. P. for the Middle District of Derbyshire, asks the court to award her damages against Countess Cowley, wife of the earl of Cowley, who is alleged to have charged that Mrs. Jacoby was the author of anonymous filthy letters that were circulated in 1893 in the Badminston District, the best known hunting district in the West of England.

London, Aug. 9.—A swell crowd of people assembled this morning in the court room of the Queen's Bench division in expectation of some interesting developments during the second day's hearing of the suit for damages brought by Mrs. Jacoby against the Dowager Countess Cowley, whom the plaintiff charged with slander in alleging that she had written anonymous and obscene letters to various parties. But the crowd was disappointed, for it was announced that the case had been settled privately and that both parties had agreed to withdraw the allegations made.

GERMANY'S VICTORIES.

Berlin, Aug. 9.—Celebrations in commemoration of Germany's victories during the Franco-Prussian war continue to be held in various parts of the empire. At Jena 500 veterans of the Thuringian Regiment, the Ninety-fourth, held field services before the warriors' monument, near the Forsthaus. Pastor Kirms, of Berlin, preached a sermon to the veterans in the historical marketplace and Major-General Frank held a review. Eight hundred veterans of the Bavarian Jäger Battalion of Pilschach were also present. Rudolphe, where a demonstration was held before the Germania monument.

THE SEAL SLAUGHTER.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 9.—The statement made by sealers that the seal herds in Bering Sea are being rapidly depleted does not create surprise among officials who have to do with Bering Sea affairs. A communication received at the State Department from W. P. Roberts, United States consul at Victoria, B. C., says that during last season the catch was the largest ever made in a single year. The number of seals brought to Victoria during last season were 94,475 by British vessels, and 874 by American. Of those taken by the British vessels 25,341 were killed in Bering Sea. The males numbered 11,705, and the females 14,636.

JOSEPH THOMSON, EXPLORER.

Joseph Thomson, the famous explorer of Africa, who died the other day in London, was only 37 years old. He was the son of William Thomson, of Gatehouse, Dumfriesshire, Dumfriesshire, and was born at Pentonville, London, Feb. 14, 1858. He obtained his early education, as so many eminent Scotchmen have done, in the parish school of his native place, from which he went to the University of Edinburgh. There he studied for natural history which he had early displayed, led him to enter the science classes, in several of which he gained honours, carrying off the gold medal in geology and zoology. He went to Africa for the first time in 1878. Among his best-known books are "Through Masai Land," and "Life in the Atlas Mountains."

DIGGING FOR BODIES.

Sixteen Thought to be Killed—Slow Work.

New York, Aug. 9.—The workmen engaged clearing away the debris in the collapsed building at West Broadway and West Third streets at 5:30 a.m. unearthed a right foot, on which was a shoe. This is said to be the right foot missing from the body of Peterson, which was recovered last night. Soon afterwards the workmen found the shoe which had been torn from Peterson's other foot.

At 7 o'clock another body, the fourth victim of the disaster, was recovered. It had not been identified. It was horribly disfigured.

Ton after ton of debris was removed by the 60 workmen by the shovelfull. Many times they came up clots of blood, and then renewed their efforts to reach the body from which it flowed. Blood was scattered everywhere, showing that many of the men supposed to be buried beneath the pile of ruins were dead before they reached the cellar in their fall. The work was slow, for every pound of the great pile must be turned over. Contractor Calligan said that judging from the way things looked this morning it would be at least several days before the debris can be turned over. All night long and up to the present time the friends and relatives of the men supposed to be buried beneath the pile of ruins were at the scene anxious to have it clearly determined as to their fate.

Contractor Parker and Jefford Sells, the foreman of the work, were arrested on the charge of causing the death of John Burke, but were subsequently released on $15,000 bail each.

It is feared that sixteen men have been killed.

The bodies of two more victims were discovered in the ruins shortly before noon. One was identified as that of Michael Flynn. His body was withdrawn from beneath a mass of wreckage on the first floor. The other body was unidentified.

Laurier's Latest.

Great Demonstration in Honor of the Liberal Leader.

Extraordinary Position of the Ottawa Ministers.

An Able Exposure of Their Twisting And Turning on the School Question.

Sorel, Que., Aug. 9.—Over 8,000 persons gathered in the open air yesterday afternoon to welcome and to listen to an address by Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, leader of the Liberal party of Canada. The demonstration was in the open air, and Mayor Morasse, of Sorel, occupied the chair. He delivered an address of welcome in which he said the state of the Liberal party was not only a man to be welcomed, but also a patriot, whose noble talent, whose superb eloquence, whose broad views and frank character has deserved for him the honor of being chosen as the leader of the Liberal party, and have made him an honor, not only to his native Province, but to the country at large as well.

After addresses by A. Brunet, M.P., and J. G. Macdonald, M.P., Mr. Laurier was presented with an address of welcome from the Liberal Association of Sorel.

The leader arose he stood for some minutes unable to utter a word. The applause was so hearty and prolonged that it seemed it would never stop. When he was allowed to speak, he said he was glad to be in Sorel, which they had embodied in their address. This was a great gathering and he was glad to meet seven of his colleagues in the promotion of the welfare of this great country. He was glad to meet that large gathering of farmers, merchants, mechanics and laborers. What a crowd had there assembled! Because their minds were troubled with unrest and anxiety, caused by the decision, weakness and tergiversation of the Government in regard to the school question. (Loud applause.) A session of Parliament had just been held for the reason which neither the Government nor its friends could give. The Government had decided upon a session, but a session had been decided upon; but a session had been decided upon. The call of that session had been lighted, and the Liberal party had been called upon by Ministers, Deputy Ministers and the Conservative press at the time it was called. The session finished amid sadness, disappointment, recrimination, and accusations. The Government's friends that their solemn promise was a false one. (Cheers.) Why had the Government broken its promise? The Government at Ottawa only knew. One thing was certain, and that was that the two Ministers who went back after their three days' strike had gone back to get up a strike that fell from the Government table, but the presence of those Ministers in the Cabinet, and any action that they might take would make not a slightest difference in the question. The present Government would never settle the question. It had never intended to settle it. (Applause.) They had sowed joy and had reaped tears. (Loud applause.) The reason the session had been called was in order that legislative force might be given to the remedial order, that justice should be accorded to the Catholics of the Province. The Government had been called upon to do this. Col. Oulmet spoke very strong language and made a dire threat, as became a soldier. (Laughter.) He called religion to his aid and the Supreme Being that if executive effect were not given to the remedial order by Parliament at the session which was then coming on he would do it himself. Heaven had witnessed lots of queer things, but not many queer things than the conduct of Mr. Oulmet in this respect. The Government had seen him go back to it after three days had expired. (Applause and laughter.)

CONFEDERATION ALL RIGHT.

To talk seriously, it was a fact that the session which had been called had been called for the purpose, as the Government had solemnly assured the public at the outset of giving legislative force to the remedial order. The situation continued in the history of Confederation. That was a circumstance of solemn moment. He had always been, and would always be, a friend of Confederation. He had the fullest faith in the Government of our country if they were honestly administered. (Applause.) If anxiety and distrust prevailed today, it was not the fault of Confederation, but of the men who were now administering the affairs of the country. (Applause.) These men were the incarnation of hesitancy, tergiversation and vacillation. It seemed as though their virility had been buried in the grave with Sir John Thompson. Was any further proof necessary than the fact that a session was called to settle the school question, and that no attempt at all at settling it was made during the session? Had not Mr. Oulmet, when in Vercheres, called on God to witness the declaration he made that it would be settled? And had not that declaration been proved to be false?

JUSTICE ONLY DESIRABLE.

Turning to the repeated statements of the Conservative press, especially of the sanctimonious portion of it, such as the holy Minerve, that he had been silent on the school question, the Liberal leader indulged in a little banter, which was greatly enjoyed by the large crowd. He had expressed the same views on the school question on many occasions and in many parts of the Dominion. He had pointed out that the men in power had shuffled and dangled with the question for years. He told them now, as he had done before, that this school question could not be settled by an appeal to Catholics or by an appeal to Protestants or by an appeal to Catholic prejudices or by an appeal to Protestant prejudices—it could only be settled by a statesman who had the courage to discuss the question in the same terms before both Catholics and Protestants. (Loud applause.) Our constitution guaranteed to our people every right to which they could lay claim; to every minority, every right to which it could legitimately and fairly lay claim. (Applause.) Every reform that had been accomplished by Liberals, the Liberal Catholics of Quebec and the Liberal Protestants of Ontario. (Applause.) In support of this statement Mr. Laurier spoke of the patriotic memories of men whose names are enshrined in Canadian history—Nelson, Brown and Blake, the father of Hon. Edward Blake, and others. The race of Canadian Protestant and Catholic Liberals had by no means died out. The school question could only be settled by an appeal to the sentiments of justice which existed in the hearts of both Protestants and Catholics. (Applause.)

ANGERS OUT, WALLACE IN.

It was a significant fact that Mr. Angers had stepped out of the Cabinet while Mr. Wallace remained in it. Mr. Angers was in favor of separate schools in Manitoba? Because he felt and he knew that the Government did not mean what it said. (Cheers.) (Mr. Laurier would be accused by the holy Minerve and others who proclaimed their ardent love of religion, when it paid them to do so, that he was a man of no religion. He did not boast of being very religious, but he considered himself a man of religion, as was religious as Mr. Oulmet, or Sir Adolphe Caron, or the present editor of La Minerve at election times. (Applause.) The statement that Liberals were not a religious party, that they resorted to for political purposes. Other Canadian public men had been reviled as he had been reviled by the Conservative press in the same fashion. Mr. Laurier, who was an ardent devotee of religion, the day might come when justice would be meted out to him as well as it had been to Fournier. (Cheers.) There was one thing which he would never do. For no reason whatever would he do or help to do anything of which his conscience, as an honest man, did not approve. (Applause.)

Mr. Laurier, quoted, amid derisive cheers, an article in the Montreal Gazette of July 29, stating that the Government of Canada had opened negotiations with the Government of Manitoba for a view to settling an error that had been made in issuing the Federal Council. That was a strange admission to make. Having contrasted the action of the Attorney-General of Ontario, Sir John A. Macdonald, with the Attorney-General of Quebec, Mr. Casgrain, in their conduct in bringing men to justice like McGreevy, Connolly and St. Louis, and spoken of the evils of protection, Mr. Laurier concluded by stating that the Liberals got into power they would see that such a tariff was levied as would benefit the masses of the people, and not a few monopolists. From the Liberal party monopolists would receive no consideration, no quarter. (Cheers.) I am a British subject," he said, "and I am proud of it, but I frankly say that as a matter of business, I would get an American dollar rather than an English shilling for the same amount of work or produce."

Speeches were also delivered by Hon. Mr. Macdonald, leader of the Quebec Liberals; Mr. Andrew D. Gault, of Woodstock; Mr. Chouquette, M.P.; Mr. Tarte, M.P.; Mr. Barthe, M.P.; and O. Desmarais, M.P. The great demonstration closed with a rousing cheer for the Liberal leader and the Queen.

Mr. Reeve's Leg and Arm Broken, but His Hearing and Reason Restored.

East Moriches, L. I., Aug. 8.—Seldon Reeve, who is 86 years old and has been somewhat demented and very deaf for several years, jumped from the second-story window of his home this morning. Dr. Skidmore, who was called in to set the old man's leg and wrist, which were broken, is puzzled over the effect of the accident on Reeve's system. He has, the doctor says, recovered his faculties. He can now hear a low whisper, and his mind, his daughter says, seems perfectly clear. He said to her, "Why, Mary, I must have been out of my head if I jumped out of a window."

Claims $250,000

An East End Lady Heir to a Large Amount of Money.

Interesting Story of the Ups and Downs of Life.

And the Vicissitudes of Pickle Fortune—A Touch of Romance—Born in British Guiana—Claims a Demerarian Sugar Plantation.

An East End lady, a native of British Guiana, South America, claims heirship to an estate valued at $250,000. Her story is a remarkable one, and well calculated to illustrate the ups and downs of life to which some people are subjected.

The lady in question is Mrs. Sarah Leonard, who resides in a modest white cottage on the east side of Charlotte street. The estate is situated in the neighborhood of Demerara, British Guiana, and as the plantation has been improved and growing in value since it was willed to Mrs. Leonard's mother in 1824, it is now extremely valuable.

Early in the century U. B. Frazer, a native of Inverness, Scotland, and a lawyer, went out to Demerara to seek his fortune. He found it by becoming interested in sugar plantations, when sugar was not selling at 30 pounds for the dollar.

When prosperity came he married a native woman—the grandmother of Mrs. Leonard. A son and daughter were born. As the boy grew up the father became anxious about his education, and in 1834 he started with him for England, to place him at school. The boat they took turned out to be one of the ships that never returned, and Mr. Frazer and his boy were lost at sea. But like the canny Scot, he was, he had provided for just such an emergency by making a will. This will was in Mrs. Leonard's possession up to a few weeks ago. A lawyer who is working on the case has it now.

The estate went to Mr. Frazer's wife, and on her death was to revert to her daughter, the present claimant's mother. This lady married and went to England, where she died when only 19 years old, leaving a baby—now Mrs. Leonard. Among her personal effects was found a copy of the will. In it were provided for several relatives in Scotland on the grandfather's side, and a singular fact mentioned by Mrs. Leonard is that these relatives have proved the will and entered upon the inheritance of their share of the inheritance.

During Mrs. Leonard's childhood she was supported in England on money collected from the estate in Demerara. She was at this time living with her uncle in England, who was himself well off, and unmarried. At times Sarah (Mrs. Leonard) would speak to her uncle about the Demerarian estate, and he would tell her that whatever happened, he had enough for them both, and she would be his heir.

"But there is many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip," said Mrs. Leonard, yesterday, and she smiled slightly as she told the story. "My uncle got married, and the slip in this case was their child—a slip of a girl. She came to her fortune, and I went back to my native place in British Guiana. At 15 I married—I did not know then as much as I do now—and my husband got a lawyer interested in the case. But my husband was only a mechanic, and the lawyer wanted cash in advance. This cooled our ardor until we could set the money together, and in the meantime my husband died. His name was Belgrave, and he was a West Indian, a native of the Island of Barbadoes."

By her first marriage Mrs. Leonard had one child—a boy. The lad took his stepfather's name, and now, as Harry Leonard, is editor of the People, Cleveland, Ohio. He is a well-known Londoner, having learned the printing trade in this city. "Then Mrs. Leonard grew thoughtful, and a shadow passed over her features. "Everyone is said to make one mistake in his or her life," said she. "And," she continued, "the mistake of my life was marrying a British soldier."

She married George Leonard, a soldier then stationed with his regiment at Barbadoes. They afterwards moved with the regiment to the Bermudas. Then on his discharge—purchased in a huff three weeks before his time expired—Leonard, with a few other soldiers, who are now well-to-do citizens, came to London. This was 12 years ago. Since then Mrs. Leonard's life has been one of vicissitudes and trouble, and no one, knowing the circumstances, would blame the modest appearing lady for expressing a desire to draw a veil over her immediate past.

"I have seen the sunniest scenes and the brightest side of life," said Mrs. Leonard, as she lost sight of the present in the contemplation of the past and smiled—a melancholy smile—"And with a sigh—"I have fathomed the gloomiest depths of human misery."

Mrs. Leonard's circumstances have up till now precluded any efforts towards claiming her property. But she kept close charge of the will, and now that her son is fitted by his position to do so, he is fighting to prove his and his mother's claim.

Mrs. Leonard shows the traces of white blood in her partly Indian veins. She is well educated and refined, and uses excellent language. She is a charming conversationalist, with a naturally sunny temperament, sadden by trouble. She leaves for Cleveland shortly to assist her son's lawyer, and give him any information in her power.

HOLMES' DEATH PIPE.

How He Turned the Gas On and Asphyxiated His Victims.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—The pick of a workman in the Holmes Gas uncovered a strange construction last night, which carried more terrible suggestions of the conspirator's work. In the closet room in the second floor, where Holmes used to sleep, there is a gas pipe running over the floor, and beneath the boards is a cut-off. The pipe runs directly to the windowless room, where it is believed Mrs. Conner was murdered. The cut-off is believed to be Chicken Thieves Operating.

South London Roosts Are Suffering Considerably.

One Cleaned Out Entirely—Some Valuable Birds Stolen From Mr. Ed. Taylor's.

Several chicken roosts in South London—and more especially those near the outskirts of the ward—have been visited by thieves lately and many valuable fowls taken. At one place there were over 100 birds, and all the visitors left was the house and run.

Last night Mr. Edward Taylor, who lives on the Wortley road, near the base line, lost three very valuable hens. Mr. Taylor is a great lover of poultry. He likes the best breeds and lots of them, and has a flock of over 300. As a safeguard against thieves Mr. Taylor has an electrical apparatus arranged, whereby, if the chicken house door is opened during the night, an alarm in the house will sound. About 2 o'clock this morning the alarm went off, and Mr. Taylor went to the room, but took no weapons with him. He saw three men among the chickens, ordered them away, and they gladly went, each one with a bird in his arms.

High Constable Schofield was notified and Detective Ward ordered to investigate. He went to Mr. Taylor's, but the only clue he so far has secured is the size of the men's feet. Several parties living in the neighborhood are suspected, and some arrests will probably be made in a few days.

AUCTIONEERING MARKET PRIVILEGES.

Fruit Spaces Sold on the New Fruit Section.

Corner Allotment Brings a Good Price—Ald. Jones Gives His Services—About Half Sold.

No. 3 committee recently decided to utilize the north side of the Market Square, commencing at the Market Lane and ending at the City Hall, as a fruit market, and to confine all dealers in that commodity to this particular section. The sidewalk has been marked off into sections, each section being designated by a broad red arrow and the number of the space marked plainly thereon. Each strip is about eight feet wide, extending back twice that distance. The fruit will be placed neatly abutting the sidewalk, and the customers may walk along the sidewalk from end to end and inspect the goods. Realizing that there would always be a struggle for the best positions, the committee decided to sell some of the best sites at auction. The corner space at the Market Lane brought $25 and was knocked down to Chauncey Smith, No. 2 was sold to W. J. Jones, No. 3 and four happened to be in front of an auction room and were not disposed of. Five and six went to Smith Bros. at $5 and $4 respectively. Seven and eight sold at $3 each to J. A. McKee. The balance of the spaces were not sold, being retained for the general fruit-selling public. The money paid insures the privilege of selling on the spaces sold for one year from the date Jones gave his services gratis as auctioneer, and Ald. A. B. Powell, chairman of No. 3, was present.

A HELPLESS CROWD.

The Straits in Which a Discredited Ministry Finds Itself.

There are thirteen Cabinet Ministers at Ottawa drawing $7,000 per annum apiece (Premier gets $8,000), with another $1,000 each for seasonal allowances. The balance of the salaries, together with what they require for expenses from day to day. Behind these fifteen Cabinet Ministers are three semi-detached Ministers, drawing $3,000 a year and no allowances. Yet these thirteen Cabinet Ministers, with their three semi-detached colleagues, whose united salaries alone aggregate over $100,000 a year, not including seasonal allowances, mileage or expenses, are abusing the leader of the Opposition like a pickpocket because he does not settle the Manitoba question and pull the Government out of the hole into which they have fallen. What are these thirteen Cabinet Ministers and their three half brothers paid for if it is not to do the business of the country? Is the principle of Ministerial responsibility, like so many other principles that formerly controlled our public men, at an end, and must our people look to the leader of the Opposition rather than to the Government, for guidance and advice? If these sixteen salaried men are incompetent and incapable of doing the work which the country pays them for doing, let them step down and out, and make way for others who are prepared to take their places and assume the responsibility which public office entails.—Dundas Banner.

A New Locomotive

Forerunner of Electric Railway Equipment.

Significance of the Consolidation of the Baldwin and Westinghouse Interests.

Be Made Will Revolutionize the Business of Transportation.

(Philadelphia Press.)

The evolution of electricity as the successor of steam in the field of railway mechanics already fills the public mind with conjecture, and recent experiments in different sections of the country have foreshadowed the advent of a contrivance for moving railroads by electrical power.

to find a means of meeting competition from the cheapening of traffic by the equipping of steam roads with trolley has only demonstrated that necessity is the mother of invention, and that the electric locomotive is probably not far in the future.

Speed is said to have obtained its highest development with the machinery of steam locomotives, as constructed according to advanced models. What it may be with the rotary power of the electric motor is almost without limit. In that important requisite the electric locomotive will pass its predecessor.

which the steam roads now have to

GREAT CHANGES IMPENDING.
Recently attention was called to the possible addition of electricity as the motive power of the elevated railway trains of New York. The management of the Manhattan Elevated Railway Company is desirous of superseding the steam locomotive on its elevated lines and for some time there was a rumor that the company would adopt what is known as the Westinghouse magnetic-traction system, in which the electric current is taken up from a series

While the introduction of this system of traction on the elevated roads was under discussion, it became known that the officers of the company had decided not to adopt it, and that among the reasons that shaped their conclusion was the advice of the Westinghouse company not to do so, pending possible developments in other quarters. This seemed to signify the advent of the electric locomotive.

George Westinghouse, jun., the president of the Westinghouse company, was asked why this advice was given to the elevated railroad people by a company interested in making such an important contract. He admitted having given this advice, and said that he did so because the improvement in the development of electricity as a motive power were likely to be very great in the next two months, and the revolution which the substitution of electricity for steam on so great a system as the elevated would surely have suggested the imperative necessity of utmost caution and commercial prudence before making the formal agreement.

AN ELECTRIC LOCOMOTIVE.

Mr. Westinghouse was very greatly impressed with the belief that the near future will see some astonishing developments in the use of electricity, not only as a motive power, but in other ways. He said that he was satisfied that within the next twelve months the development would be th more startling, on a greater and more comprehensive scale, more suggestive of the remote possibilities of the use of electricity for commercial purposes, perhaps, than had been all the developments in recent years put together. It is believed that Mr. Westinghouse had at that time in view the prospective design and construction of an electric locomotive, which development

"THE EGOIST"—A NOVEL BY GEORGE MEREDITH.

Everything in this world has two handles, and when George Meredith wrote his story of "The Egoist" he laid hold of him by his humorous handle; although if pathos ever had a form this poor egoistical gentleman "who would desire to clothe himself at everybody's expense and is of that desire condemned to strip himself stark naked," might be taken for the actual person. But the Comic Spirit conceives a definite situation for a character and rejects all accessories in pursuit of him and his speech. Would you enjoy a true diversion? Take a run at his heels when he is tracking down some game. Follow him never doubting, though his lead take you through some strange and solemn places, where the genus, it would be supposed, could not flourish. But the Comic Spirit is a spirit, and therefore haunts the spirit in men with an unerring instinct to detect any nestling of the obese hag Bathos and her squat brood, Inflation, Sentimentalism, Pretentiousness and Dullness. Still your acquiescence in the true comicality of the sport is not wooed through the impressionable senses, as in the outer struggling world where we have violent crashes, grinning clowns and loud guffaws to make the correctness of the representation convincing.

The notable humor is hot upon the scent of a comedy, not visible to the naked eye, but at present being played in the quiet, well-bred drawing-rooms of ladies and gentlemen, where all is dignity and decorum, and civilized men and women do not, figuratively speaking, withdraw chairs suddenly to allow others to seat themselves with a bang upon the floor. No! what we have now to consider is comedy in the essence—comedy through a distillatory to relieve it of all buffoonery, horse-play and tangible manifestation in the flesh; to wit, the ludicrous contortions and antics of a strong egoistical soul on a social gridiron, which through very love of self he heated and welded together, while those for whom it was prepared escape free!

All this, George Meredith says, is very amusing, and ought to produce in us the "horiferous laughter of reason" which is like "the magical great gale of the shifty Spring deciding for Summer"—h'mm! It is right here, however, that Candor calls a halt! and bids me confess that, however much reason may have been laughing, the crows' feet and the twitching muscles of the mouth were not noticeably disturbed. But take care! A covert little sneer of this sort is a tacit admission that still clinging to us are certain shreds and particles of the primitive egoism, a grain of sand centuries old, which, lodging in the eye, obscures the vision and renders us dull and slow in the recognition of our individual countenances in the mirror which the faithful author holds up before us: A perilous thing for ourselves and for civilization for the remedy of our rightful affliction, this monstrous, monotonous use of the letter I, is through the winepress of Comedy, and not in Science, nor yet in speed, whose name is but another for voracity. Then let us invoke the divine spirit of Comedy, that she may come and dwell with us, correcting all self-glottification, little complacencies and droll priggisms, and enabling us to read ourselves swiftly and comprehensively.

If this be the truth—and who will gainsay it—does it not behoove us to make haste to develop the humorous faculties that we may no longer be tripped up and made fools of by our egotisms, and that when we are most unconscious (oh, bitter thought!) or ludicrous, as you will? This insensibility to our own asininity is the sorrowful feature of the peculiar disease from which we all suffer more or less, a swollen and wind-blown condition of the letter I!

The specimen chosen by Mr. Meredith for our instruction and warning is a full-grown male egoist, in all his spots, not so much as an eye-lash or toe-nail missing. Behold him! a consistent human being! a perfect incarnation of all that egoism was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, and if on beholding certain traits stand forth strangely familiar, purge them out of your soul; but if, on the contrary, gazing long on that human obelisk lettered all over with one significant little letter, no inward thrill or vibrating chord whispers of a far distant kinship with the grotesque figure, shudder and turn away sorrowing, for your case is worse than that of the first, for no human being can be entirely free from egoism, and there is nothing egoistical which cannot be found in the person of Sir Willoughby Paternre. "You may as well know him out of hand as an English gentleman of our time, of wealth and station; a not very flexible figure, do what we may with him; the humor of whom scarcely dimples the surface and is distinguishable, but by very penetrative, very wicked lips, whose fits of roaring below at some generally imperceptible stroke of his quality, have first made the mild literary angels aware of something comic in him, when they were one and all about to describe the gentleman on the heading of the records badly (where brevity is most complimentary) as a gentleman of family and property, an idol of a decorous island, that addresses the concrete, imps have their freakish wickedness in them to kindle detective vision. Maliciously do they love to uncover ridiculousness in imposing figures. Whenever they catch sight of Egoism, they pitch their camps, they circle and squat, and forthwith they trim their lanterns, confident of the ludicrous to come—so confident, that their grip of an English gentleman in whom they have once spied their game never relaxes until he begins insensibly to frolic and antic unknown to himself and comes out in the native steam which is their scent of the chase. Instantly off they scour, Egoist and imps!

All the foregoing is a clumsy and hesitating attempt to condense and remould into more infantine phraseology such portions of the brilliant and labyrinthic prelude to "The Egoist" as seem to bear most directly upon the motif of the story. For no writer living has the present reviewer a profounder respect or heartier liking than the novelist George Meredith, who will surely then not take it for anything savoring of disrespect to designate his habitually anathematized prelude to "The Egoist" a fearsome libration, to attempt which is to adventure in a thornwood.

We are told in our Mother Goose there was once a wise old man who jumped into a bramble bush and scratched out both his eyes. How precisely like some of us that old man must have been! We leaped gaily in the prickliest prelude on record as though it were just some ordinary everyday sort of prelude, and there had our eyes scratched out for our pains. A fearfully distressing state of affairs, but for which there was an heroic remedy, for we are told of the nimble old gentleman and his beaux-yeux that "He jumped into that bramble bush, And scratched 'em in again."

So "scratch 'em in again" seems the only thing left for us to do, and, taking heart of grace, we make another dash and grope round on the ground where our lost orbs, like gooseberries, lie grazing up at us pathetically. What we saw the second time, or thought we saw, after having found them and readjusted, the first portion of this review essays to relate. Once through the surge and well launched into the rest of the book, the intelligent reader will find it impossible not to follow with breathless interest the fine analysis of this consummate egoist, Sir Willoughby Paternre, who is after all a fine fellow with a leg it takes nearly four pages to describe, "the leg of a born cavalier"—and a handsome, gallant, high-born air that captivates all the women save one, and of her more anon!

Sir Willoughby Paternre, it will be clearly seen, is not a mortal, but a fanciful creation of the author's brain, or rather one of those literary experiments of which we have the prototype in the composite photograph. The author has gone out into the highways and byways of life to gather together every feature and phase of egoism, which he has at last fused into one solid figure, which we can by no possible stretch of the imagination take to be a man.

But the Egoist is great in the way that many of Balzac's creations are great—as a living, breathing embodiment of one strong characteristic. Yet always, what is best of its kind, one admires, even though the kind be disagreeable, and so, in spite of all, we must look upon this one thoroughly consistent character as a very artistic achievement, and respect him accordingly.

There is but little space left in which to touch upon other personages of the story, which is almost to be regretted, for Mr. Meredith's genius is not limited to describing disagreeable people. Some of his nobler characters are indescribably winning, and worthy to be loved. Take the simple picture of the lad Crossgry for instance, "a rosy-cheeked, round-bodied rogue of a boy, who fell upon meats and puddings, and defeated them with a captivating simplicity in his confession that he had never had enough to eat in his life." And we have Clara Middleton, "the dainty rogue in porcelain," who is compared to a Mountain Echo! and "those delicate flowers, the ladies of the court of China, on rice paper." Picture such a girl! Betrothed to a monster of an egoist, "the least fitted of all women to drag a log, but who wanted comradeship, a living and frank exchange of the best in both, with the deeper feelings untroubled." Needless to say, she did not get it, and her distress and pitiful efforts to escape the toils, when once she discovered the true nature of the man she was to marry, conjure up a vision of dainty Tiny betrothed to the rich old moll, stupid and blind, for all his black velvet coat and fur, coming soon to take her away to live with him deep under the earth and never to see the warm sun again, because He did not like it. The world was the principal topic of dissension between the egoist and his lady. "His opinion of the world affected her like a creature threatened with a deprivation of air." He explained to his love that lovers do of necessity loathe the world. We abhor the beast to adore the divinity. This gives us our oneness, our isolation, our happiness. Do you see, darling? She shook her head; she was young. She might, Willoughby thought, have let herself be led. She must be up in arms as a champion of the world, spoiling his secret bower song, he delighted to tell over to her. She would not burn the world for him; she would not, though a purer poetry is little imaginable, reduce herself to ashes or incense or essence, in honor of him, and so, by love's transmutation, literally be the man she was to marry. She preferred to be herself, with the egoism of a woman! She said it. She said: "I must be myself to be of any value to you, Willoughby."

"The Egoist" is known to have its detractors, but we claim that whatever others may say of it it is a comedy, deliciously, spontaneously and irresistibly humorous. The George Bell Publishing Company have got this novel, out in a cheap edition, paper cover, and

Short of Money.

Three-Quarters of Board of Works Appropriation Expended.

Wards One and Two Have Already Exceeded Their Estimate.

Ald. O'Meara's Joke—How the Money Was Spent—Frontage Rate for Macadamized Roads.

Nearly three-quarters of the appropriation of the Board of Works has been expended, and the committee must now call a halt in earnest, or stand a good chance of closing the year with an overdrawn account. At last night's meeting the city engineer presented a report from which the following figures were culled:

No. 1 ward.....$2,557 57
No. 2 ward.....2,838 47
No. 3 ward.....2,234 62
No. 4 ward.....3,389 59
No. 5 ward.....3,361 60
No. 6 ward.....3,019 07
Total.....$17,449 92
Outstanding account.....$1,550 00
Total.....$18,999 92
Appropriation.....$27,000 00
Balance on hand.....$8,000 00
The estimated expenditures of each ward at the beginning of the year was as follows:
No. 1 ward.....$2,450 00

No. 4 ward.....3,350 00

No. 6 ward.....3,340 00
From this it will be seen that wards 1 and 2 have exceeded their estimates. This is the way it was spent:

ALD. O'MEARA'S JOKE.
Ald. O'Meara had been thinking deeply.
"What has the road roller been doing?" he asked.
And the engineer replied where it had been yesterday, where it would be today, and where it was expected to-morrow.
"Because," said Ald. O'Meara, still in a thoughtful mood, "if it would be inclined to move that we do it up in plaster of paris for the next nine months to keep the wind from blowing on it. There is going to be no use for it, as there is no money to spend." Mr. O'Meara continued to argue that the roller had not been worked as hard as it might be, and he said that the engineer drove the machine around the block once or twice, and then let it rest like a tired horse.

Finally it was acknowledged by the engineer and chairman that the delay in the work of the roller occurred while the engineer waited for material to roll.

At the request of Ald. O'Meara the grader and roller will be put to work on Talbot street. No new material will be required there.

Chairman Wm. Heaman intimated during the course of discussion that no more streets would be macadamized with new material unless paid by a frontage tax.

T. P. Webb's claim for $5 damages because of lack of gravel against the street car track at the Market Lane was read and referred to the chairman and engineer to report.

Robert McFalls, Ridout street south, sent in a claim for damages because of an alleged defective sewer on Ridout street south. This was also referred to the engineer and member for the ward.

Pending the purchase of a storage lot, the new road roller will be housed in a shed in the rear of No. 1 fire station.

NEW REGULATIONS AFFECTING OUR FACTORIES.

An act passed at the last session of the Ontario Legislature, which has just gone into force, provides important amendments to the Ontario Factories Act. In future no boy or girl under 14 years of age can lawfully be employed in any factory, except in the business of canning or desiccating fruit and vegetables and the work incident thereto, in the months of July, August, September and October. The place where these children may be employed must be separate from any department in which the cooking is undertaken. No child under 14 must be kept employed in a factory for more than ten hours a day. Sub-section 1 of section 15 of the Factories Act has been repealed, and a provision has been inserted enacting that all dangerous parts of mill gearing or other machinery, vats, pans, reservoirs, mill races, flumes, openings in floors or walls, bridges, etc., shall be as far as practicable securely guarded. Two or more persons occupying the same room or premises for carrying on any work or business within the meaning of the Factories Act, and employing in the aggregate six persons or more—no one of such persons employing so many as six—will each be held responsible for providing proper water closets and the other requirements set forth in the 11th and 12th sections of the Factories Act. Besides the present requirements as to fire escapes, in future there must be provided, in as many rooms above the ground floor in factories over two stories high as the inspector may deem necessary, a wire or other rope. This rope must be not less than three-quarters of an inch in thickness, and of sufficient length to reach from the room in which it is kept to the ground below, and every window of every room must be provided with proper fastenings to which one end of the rope may be securely fastened. The object is to make the facilities for the saving of life from high factories as complete as possible. Recent disasters in the United States have proved the necessity for these precautions. It is enacted that factory-owners shall, as far as practicable, secure their employees from danger by machinery, whenever notified by the inspector. When a fire, accident or explosion has taken place in a factory, in which any person employed has sustained bodily injury, or has been killed, notice must be sent to the inspector within six days of the occurrence, under penalty of a fine not exceeding $30. Bakehouses and bakeries henceforth come under the provisions of the Factories Act, and the Lieutenant-Governor in Council is empowered to prohibit the employment of girls under the age of 18, and of boys under the age of 16, in factories the work in which is deemed by the Lieutenant-Governor to be dangerous or unwholesome. The time for laying information in respect of offenses under the Factories Act shall be within two months, or where the offense is punishable at discretion by imprisonment, within three months, after the offense has come to the knowledge of the inspector. The act empowered the Government to appoint a female inspector of factories, and recently that most desirable appointment was made, thus bringing Ontario legislation for the proper conduct of factories up to a level with other progressive countries.

TOO PROGRESSIVE TO STAND OP-PRESSION.

The London Free Press, with that fine regard for consistency—in others—characteristic of it, takes the ground that the "Advertiser" did not voice the views of the Liberal leaders when the other day it said:

"In agriculture our people excel. They are intelligent, thrifty, progressive, and the farmers of Ontario hold the first place among all the farmers of America."

The "Advertiser," it need scarcely be said, speaks for itself, but it most decidedly holds that the estimate of Ontario farmers given in the above quotations from its columns is entirely consistent with the Liberal platform, which calls for the greatest freedom to buy and sell possible, and for economical government such as Canada has not witnessed at Ottawa for years past, as well as with the views of Hon. Mr. Laurier and his lieutenants.

Our farmers are intelligent, thrifty and progressive, or they would not have been able to hold their own during the reign of the trade restrictionists and the carnival of boodling which has prevailed at Ottawa. Ontario farming land is second to none on the continent, and it has been worked with a will, with a frugality and with an intelligence by our farmers, which have enabled them to stand excessive taxation and an immense addition to the public debt of the Dominion. It has enabled them even to stand combine rule. But because of their unrivaled situation, and the productivity of their labor, are they to be asked to tolerate such mis-government as has been exposed again and again in Parliament within recent years? Because our farmers have kept their heads above water by working hard, and by having their wives and families working hard also, is it to be expected that they will longer submit to scandalous waste of their taxes, entailing altogether unnecessary burdens on every worker in the land?

High tax journals jump at every acknowledgment of the favorable natural position of this Province and of the ability and thrift of our people as an excuse for keeping the trade restriction policy intact, and for palliating mis-government at Ottawa. But the people are too intelligent not to understand the situation. They will not continue to submit to be robbed merely because they are not as hard up as they might be in a land less richly endowed by nature and by intelligent cultivation.

POINTS.

If women rode their wheels in two-fold fashion like a large number of men wheelmen, what guys they would be counted. Brace up, gentlemen!

In appointing Mr. Josiah Wood, M.P., to the Senate, the Dominion Government has "filled a long-felt want." The want belonged to Mr. Wood.

And now Chicago claims to have passed New York in population, and wants a new census to show the world that she is the biggest city in America. If Chicago could only hire some of those enterprising gentlemen who took Canada's manufacturing census, she need have no fear of the result.

With Mr. McGreevy's example before him, the defaulting customs' collector at Berlin went to unnecessary trouble in fleeing the country. The mercy of the Dominion Government is always tender towards such as he.

Mr. Clarke Wallace, like the youth in the song, stands between love and duty—love of his salary and duty towards the Orange order.

The Berlin, Ont., News man berates women's skirts, and pins his faith to bloomers.

The brutal butchery of missionaries by the Chinese almost makes one regret that the Japanese were called off before they finished their job.

Old men, fat men, men troubled with asthma, should never run to catch a street car. Better to walk or to wait than to run risks.

Even his opponents, after reading Gladstone's speech on the Armenian question, must admit that there's considerable life in the old man yet.

In the absence of his colleagues, Sir Adolphe Caron has assumed four portfolios. There is nothing remarkable in that. Sir Adolphe generally runs the whole Cabinet, anyway.

Count Okuma, one of Japan's foremost statesmen, says that his country will not adopt protection. Another reason why Japan is entitled to be called the Britain of the East. Doughty little Japan seems to fear no competition—commercial or military.

The Chicago Chronicle coolly announces its belief that Holmes did not murder anybody at all, and that the so-called revelations are fakes. Coming from Chicago, people ought to have known better than to believe them in the first place.

WHY NOT?

The London "Advertiser" is surprised that ladies who bake their own bread are not enrolled as manufacturers. They certainly have as good a right to the title as milliners.—Petrolia Topic.

IMPROVED CROP OUTLOOK.

The recent rains have greatly improved the outlook for the harvest over a large part of Ontario. They came too late, of course, for the hay, but spring wheat, oats, barley, corn and roots have been wonderfully benefited, and there is now a promise that the crops will not fall below the average of former years. Fall wheat and barley were short in the straw and also in the head, but the heads are exceedingly well filled with a plump berry. Oats are late enough over the greater part of the country to have richly shared in the bounty of the rains, and the straw will bulk well when cut. Corn is more extensively grown for fodder now than it was eight or ten years ago, and the curing of it for ensilage is far better understood now than then, so that the shortness of the hay crop is not so serious a matter as it was in the days before the introduction of ensilage. There is this fact to be borne in mind also, that while the rainfall has been lighter than usual, especially in the western and northern counties, the nights have been cool and the dews heavy, and these are compensating advantages of no mean value. Altogether the farmers of Ontario feel now more sanguine than they had any reason to be four or five weeks ago.

LAKE WATER HAS BEEN LOWER.

The old inhabitant gives consolation to the fearful one these days. Some people believe that the lake levels have recently become permanently lower, and assert that they never have been so low at this season of the year. Col. Peter Van Wagner, who lives on the shores of Lake Ontario, near Hamilton, and who is probably the oldest inhabitant in that part, informs the Hamilton Spectator that this view is incorrect.

"Seventy years ago," he says, "the water in Lake Ontario was considerably lower than it is now, and it gradually rose until it attained the level it has held for a number of years past. When he was a boy the inlet at his father's farm was a hay meadow, as was also the inlet near the water works. The point of land east of Van Wagner's beach ran out far enough to form a bay, in which boats took shelter from easterly storms. In subsequent years the water began to rise, and at one place it killed off some oak trees that were estimated by the rangers on them to be 150 years old. This caused the wise men of those days to conclude that at least that time had elapsed since the lakes had reached that level before, as oaks will only grow on dry ground."

So much for Lake Ontario. Do any of the old residents in this neighborhood remember the time when the water of Lake Erie was lower than it is today?

THE NEW PRINCIPAL.

The appointment of Mr. George Parkin, of New Brunswick, to the principalship of Upper Canada College is commented upon favorably by the Toronto papers, although the Globe drops a regretful word over the treatment accorded to Mr. Dickson. The mistake that was made in that connection cannot, perhaps, be remedied now, but the new man will have to justify his choice by popularizing the college and making it pay expenses. It will not do to look to the Ontario Government for an endowment. Mr. Dickson would not have had the least trouble if he had had access to the annual interest on $100,000 or $200,000 to fetch in money up to college. It is possible that Mr. Parkin is a better teacher and a better financier than Mr. Dickson, but that remains to be proved. In any case, a resentful feeling has been aroused among the Presbyterians, and to some extent among the Methodists, on the ground that there is too much of the Church of England element in the board of trustees, and that Mr. Dickson was unfairly used because he did not belong to the same church as the majority of the board. The portion of the Canadian population that can afford to patronize so expensive a school as Upper Canada College is limited, and it is doubtful if the sons of the adherents of one church can fill the class rooms and dormitories.—Hamilton Times.

EDISON'S DEFINITION.

Congressman O. M. Hall, of this State, tells this story of Edison: The latter appeared before the committee on patents to make an argument on some proposed bill. Mr. Hall, prefacing his question with an apology for the ignorance of the committee concerning electricity, asked Edison if he could tell the committee what electricity is. "Oh, yes," said the wizard, "it is a mysterious fluid about which nothing is known." The argument then proceeded.—St. Paul Globe.

REMEDIAL ORDER BLUNDERING.

We never believed, and do not now believe, that the Manitoba Government ever intended to deal unjustly or even ungenerously with the minority. The interference of outsiders has made it much more difficult for the parties most interested to settle the matter in a conciliatory spirit.—Canada Presbyterian.

HINDSIGHT, NOT FORESIGHT.

The decision of the Government to explore Hudson Bay after having given the railway a bonus is much like leaping first and thinking afterwards.—Toronto Star.

The Canadian Magazine for August appears in a handsome new cover, and is handsomely illustrated. It is a splendid midsummer number, intensely Canadian in its subjects. A good feature of its makeup is that none of its articles or stories are either long or dry. The frontispiece is a fine portrait of Lord Salisbury, the new British Premier. "Bigamy Under the Canadian Code" treats of a matter that interests many Canadians. It is by an Ottawa lawyer. Another good article is that on "Woman Suffrage in Canada," any yet another, also illustrated, describes "A Futile Day," among the Northwest Indians. CATHOLICS AND TEMPERANCE.

More Help Comes from Secular Than from Religious Papers.

New York, Aug. 9.—The Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America continued its convention yesterday. The principal speaker of the morning was Rev. Father Zurcher, of Buffalo, speaking on the subject of temperance, the reverend father said: "We have reluctantly come to the conclusion that we cannot expect half the help we need from Catholic newspapers. It is a fact that we receive vastly more assistance from the secular press than we do from the professed religious journals of our own denomination."

Father Zurcher, when he mounted the platform, had a bundle of Catholic papers in his hand, and he here read whisky advertisements and total abstinence editorials from the same pages. "Here is a two-column advertisement of somebody's pure rye whisky," he shouted, "and here, directly opposite, is a portrait of Archbishop Corrigan."

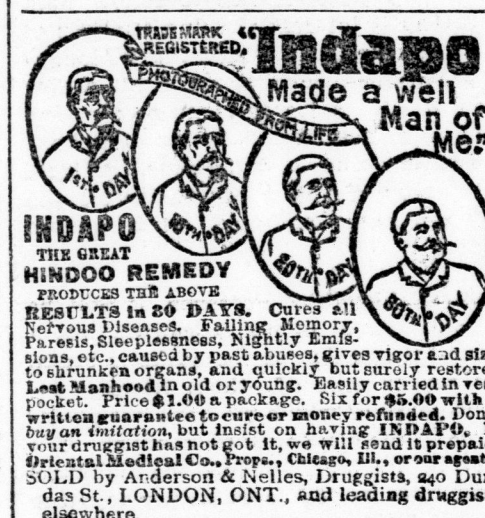

Father Zurcher called upon his hearers to extend the right hand of fellowship to Commissioner Roosevelt in his efforts to enforce the excise law.

Every Bone

In my body ached with the dreadful rheumatism which followed a severe cold. My sufferings were awful. I could not dress myself or comb my hair. My husband had to carry me up and down stairs. I was scarcely able to nurse my little one. Within two weeks after I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, I felt better. Shortly I was able to walk up and down stairs without help and finally I was cured. My friends thought I was going to be a cripple, but thanks to God for his blessing on Hood's Sarsaparilla, I now enjoy good health. Mrs. J. B. Blackburn, Lower Five Islands, Nova Scotia.

SAFER THAN LIGHTNING-RODS.
Each day adds some new virtues to the long list of those already credited to the pneumatic tire. The latest of these is that the wheels of a bicycle being encased by a band of indiarubber and dry air—which is a perfect insulator—the rider is completely insulated from the earth, and, consequently, is impervious to the attacks of the electric fluid. Thus, day by day, it becomes more and more a fact that life without a pneumatic tire is neither safe nor worth having.

Anyone who suffers from nervousness during a thunder shower has now only to go into a barn or the cellar and seat himself upon the saddle of a pneumatic-tired bicycle to be perfectly safe from lightning stroke. As the chances a man on a bicycle being struck by lightning have been carefully calculated to be about one in a billion, this will, of course, be some pessimists who will deny that this newly discovered virtue of the pneumatic tire as a lightning insulator amounts to very much. [Scientific American.]

A GREAT STRUGGLE.
Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 9.—For the third time this year Joe Patchen defeated Robert J. In the toss for the pole Patchen won. On the second score the two went away neck and neck. Like a double team they paced away to the three-quarters, when Geers pulled out. But Curry called upon Patchen, and into the home stretch they came, with Patchen a half-length ahead. Geers took to the whip, but it was of no avail. Patchen meanwhile was going well within his speed. Time, 2:04.1-2. The second heat was simply a repeat of the first, but in the third heat Patchen fell back at the three-quarters pole. Robert gained a lead of two lengths going round the last turn, but Patchen came up on the outside and finished in what is claimed to have been a dead heat, though the judges gave the heat to Robert J. In the fourth both horses broke at the first furlong pole. Patchen recovered first, and took a good lead down the back stretch. Robert came on even terms at the lower distance stand, but fell back and broke into a run, which left him finished the mile all out. The attendance was 10,000. Summary:

Match race, purse $2,000: Joe Patchen, blk. s. 1:21.1; Robert J. b. g. 2:21.2. Time—2:04.1-2, 2:04.1-2, 2:05.1-2, 2:06.1-2.

FLYS.
McIlroy, the Guelph Maple Leafs' clever third baseman, is slowly recovering from his injury received in London. Some weeks ago, and will probably be in harness again before many days.

Gayle, of Detroit, shut out Terre Haute on Wednesday in the Western League series, without a hit or a run, the latter feat has been accomplished this season. The score was 4 to 0.

Globe: The only weak spot on the Crescents' team is in the box. They import a Wood.

In Burton, Dunn and Tierney, the London Alerts have undoubtedly the best base-men in the Canadian League.

Frank Thompson, a new man, will make his debut in a trial game against the London Alerts in the box at the Toronto Crescent Athletic Club, of Toronto.

SUMMER COMES
With the flowers and sunshine. Birds pour out their melody and the chirp of the grasshopper will soon tempt the fisherman to stretch forth his hand and grasp the shadow of his flight. The playful mosquito will do her nicest to soothe weary pleasure seekers into the slumber of slumber, and the stinging, itching corns will remove every semblance of comfort, make sad the songs of the birds, and evoke cloudiness in the soul. When the brightest sunshine cannot dispel Corns are the most in the flesh, but Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor removes them in 24 hours. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor is the best.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE?

A New School on Colborne Street Next Summer.

Trustees Differ and Go In for Wagers—The Old Building To Be Repaired.

To be or not to be—a new school at Colborne street next summer? That is a question of more than the ordinary interest, now that the $34,000 debenture item has been side-tracked for six months.

At a meeting of No. 2 committee on education last night Chairman Blackwell brought up the question of repairing the school before the holidays, and thus making it fit for occupation.

"We will not put any more repairs on it whatever," said Trustee Martyn, chairman of the committee.

Trustee Anderson—But you must. Because a new building is expected in a year or two is not to mean that we are to let the walls fall down now.

And then there was an abundance of talk about what repairs were really necessary.

Trustee Martyn ventured the statement that the new school would be erected by next summer, and he was flatly contradicted by Trustee Blackwell.

Mr. Martyn—I'll bet you on that. "All right," said Mr. Blackwell, "I'll stake you a dollar, and when all mine is up I can get more."

The other trustees were silent spectators to this "wager," but they had visions of oyster suppers, etc.

Trustee Anderson, who had been watching the proceedings and saying very little, wound up the debate by saying that the erection of a new school at Colborne street was nothing less than a fad among two or three trustees. "And mark my words," and he bounded his fist on the table, "the man who votes for a new school will never be returned at the polls."

It would be a pity if the school to day and learn what repairs are absolutely necessary.

Just as the committee was about to adjourn Trustees Turner and Anderson declared that they would not vote for one of the latest additions to the wheelmen's ranks. Being on the works committee and having all the schools visited, they jokingly resolved to recommend the board to purchase wheels for them.

The Secret Out.

"I cannot marry where I do not love every power of my being revolts. What is to be done, then? Help me, some good angel, help me in my fearful emergency."

"I may not see you, I may not write you, openly, but I can think and pray and talk to Mildred, who now and then may say a word to you. Happy Mildred! Yet she does not feel herself free. She yearns for just what I long to leave; sees my wealth, and thinks that nothing is more desirable; sees my lover and wonders that I can let an instant in my faith to him. Poor, mistaken, uneasy-souled girl! Yet how generous she is! how noble and how devoted! She makes me feel small sometimes, there is such a sweep to her nature. Could our places be exchanged—Great God! what thought is this which drives madly through my brain? Has my desperate situation made me mad? I really begin to think so."

"We are of the same height, we are of the same age, we are of the same build, and our features and expression are so alike that I never lose the uncanny sense that I am looking at my own picture in the glass when I survey her. How is it with others? To see, we changed places today, went to Mrs. Olney's, and putting Mildred's clothes on, I dressed her in time. Then, sealing her behind the window curtain, where only her dress would be visible, I sent for the girl who does the up-stairs work, and gave her something to do which would keep her quite a long time in the room. And then I talked to her, and while I talked I watched her face to see if she showed any perplexity or confusion. But thought she is a bright enough person, I noticed no hesitation in her manner nor any mark of suspicion, and gaining courage from this, I made the request that Mrs. Olney should come up, and when she did I received her as I thought Mildred would, and asked her about a certain matter concerning which Mildred desired some information. The result was surprisingly satisfactory, and I saw her go out of the room without showing the least change in her look or manner that she had any doubt about my being the person I professed to be. Carried away by this success, we planned a greater test yet. Pulling down the veil over Mildred's face, I led her down stairs, and knocking at your office door, I led her in. You were alone, you remember, and placing myself as sentinel at the door I allowed her to pass me and address you as if she were Genevieve Greteux. In the pleasure you experienced, you held out your hand, and I watched you while she tore off her veil and stood looking at you, straight and full, in the broadest spot of light the room afforded. You did not pause or shrink, and when she declared with that proud poise of the head which seems as natural with her as with me, 'I shall see you no more till I am a free woman,' I knew by your smile and triumphant gleam in your eye that even love could be deceived by such similarity as there was between us; and the vague hope and half-formed purpose that had suggested itself to me as the only solving of our fearful riddle, took on color and became an actually contemplated plan."

"Mildred is like a bird that has found its wings, a flower that has inhaled its first breath of sunshine. If I falter she buoys me up; if I speak of the awful consequences of detection, she laughs and asks if your image is growing pale in my sight or if I fear to trust her, who has certainly the most difficult part to play. I can but answer no to the first question and no to the second, but the last is the more doubtful of the two, and she sees it, and proposes that I put her to the test before the final decision is made. I have agreed to this, and tonight she is to take my part here as I took hers in Mrs. Olney's house."

"What an evening! Mildred came early and we again changed dresses. This time it was an afternoon costume of mine she put on, and I must say she looked exceedingly well. When I talked to her for half an hour, giving her the minutest instructions possible as to how she was to conduct herself with my mother, and afterwards with Dr. Cameron. She is an apt pupil, and showed such readiness that I could hardly realize that she had not been used to these surroundings all her life, and when the time came for her to descend to what certainly seemed to me a most trying and desperate ordeal, she looked so brilliant, and glowed with such happiness, I had no step her and suggest that she tone her spirits down a little, as I had not worn such a face as that since I was a school-girl. Whereupon she became deliciously demure, and had her revenge by asking me in a whisper if Dr. Cameron ever did me the honor of kissing me, and when I answered 'Sometimes,' she murmured, 'Then pray heaven this may not be one of the times, for I shall certainly blush like mad since no man has ever touched my lips in all my life.' At which acknowledgment such a pang went through me I cannot call her back, for I seemed for the first time to realize her supreme innocence and the dreadful temptation to which I was exposing it. For I can see that, mingled with all her dreams of splendor, ease, and adulation, is a very romantic but decidedly fervent admiration for the man who alone can bring her these. She has never heard him speak, but that is not necessary when the eye is satisfied as hers has evidently been in the one glimpse she had of Dr. Cameron in front of my house the other day."

"It is incredible. She has come back, and in so joyous and proud a mood she seemed to float rather than walk into the room. I have done it, I cried. I have sat on the library sofa and talked with father and with mother—she called Mr. and Mrs. Greteux, father and mother!—and have been in the parlor and had a few words with Dr. Cameron. I did not dare to prolong the conversation, much as I would have liked to, she naively added. 'And see! here I am, alive, and only the least bit frightened and confused. I—I think I startled mother a trifle at first. She is so commanding in her ways I did not feel quite at home with her; but it wasn't anything serious, and with just a little practice, I am sure I can pass for a very decent sort of Genevieve, even with her. As for Dr. Cameron, I leave you to find out at your next interview whether he was dissatisfied with his bride or not.' 'He certainly won't be,' I replied, 'if you looked as you do now.' And then we laughed, and then we seized at each other, long and noisily, and before our glances fell our course was decided upon and the die cast."

"We had planned in case Mildred failed in her daring impersonation to pass it all off as a joke. Thank God I did not have to so compromise the dignity of my love for you. I am not so light-hearted as Mildred, but I am fully as happy. Do you think of me with the same fervor that I do of you? Do I fill all your thoughts as you fill mine? Do I give impetus to all your aspirations? Let me trust so, or I shall never find courage to carry out the delicate and dangerous undertaking whose only aim is to make four human beings happy and satisfied."

"I shall not tell you how I propose to free myself till the hour comes at which I can bid you come and take me for I am yours. Either I fear you will hesitate to accept so great a sacrifice (though sacrifice is what you expect, even what you demand); or else I dread some hitch or failure in our plans that will throw us all back again into despair. Whatever be the true source of my hesitation, I feel that silence as to our scheme is best, though I know you will rejoice in its success and welcome with all your heart the woman who was willing to give up her very identity in order to be your bride."

"My mother wished to dignify the ceremony of her daughter's marriage by a long string of bridesmaids. But I put the veto upon that, as I feared Mildred could not hold her own amidst the chatter and scrutiny of so many women. So now everything is to be simple as it will be rich. No save Mr. Cameron is to be my best man, and Dr. Cameron is to have no assistant. I won these concessions from my mother by letting her follow her own wishes as regards the supper, music and decorations. Miss Mildred will have a splendid wedding, and from the gifts which have already arrived I judge she will have a magnificent display of presents."

"I say this all for the pleasure of adding that I do not envy her in the least."

"Mildred works night and day at the rich gowns which, if all goes well, she, not I, is to wear. They are beautiful, but not as beautiful to me as the one new dress which I have allowed her to make for my own wearing on the day you take me to your heart. I have a strange conscience about this matter. Though I could load the poor dressmaker down with gifts, to be made by myself, I feel that I am, in some instinct of delicacy withheld from me from this, and I provide no more for Julius Molesworth's bride than would rightfully be hers if she were in truth the poor dressmaker's daughter. I identify she takes. I know that this will I please you best, as by this single-heartedness and devotion to you I, I best satisfy myself."

"I have angered Dr. Cameron by my repeated refusals to see him of late, but it cannot be helped. Mildred will make it all right when she comes to take my place, and I should feel the faintest of the false if I let him touch the hand henceforth dedicated to you."

"Only a few days now and our destinies will be decided. Could you move on so calmly in your calling if you knew what awaited you so speedily?"

Rev. Mr. Jeans, who was appointed by the Bishop of Huron to the incumbency of Thorndale and Grace Church, Leesboro, has entered on his duties, and has been favorably received by the two congregations.

Threshing has commenced in the neighborhood of Leesboro. Fall wheat is not turning out very well. Barley is a good crop, yielding well.

A correspondent of the Evangelical Churchmen writes: "Though Wardville is declining in population, 28 adults having removed during the first year of Rev. Mr. Johnson's incumbency, it has increased its obligation to the mission fund, and the members are doing all they can for the support of the church, and it is pleasing to record that there is no debt on church or parsonage."

Mrs. Charles F. Smith, Port Huron, is spending a few weeks with Mrs. Albert Tavernier at Komokax.

HORSES AND HORSE-RACING

Elements That Shall Enter Into Judgment of Horses at Provincial Shows—Speed Not to be the Sole Merit.

The following circular has been issued by the Department of Agriculture: Several applications having been made to this department by various agricultural societies for an interpretation of section 23 of the Agriculture and Arts Act, 1855, the following decision is given to the officers and directors for their guidance as being the evident intent of the Legislature when passing the act.

By section 9 of the said act, the object of such societies, as relating to live stock, is confined to two things: (a) the purchase or importation of valuable animals; and (b) awarding premiums for excellence in the raising of stock, etc. Sub-section 3 of this section declares that none of the funds shall be expended for any purpose inconsistent with the above.

The opinion of the Legislature, as expressed in section 23, was that horse-racing, as ordinarily conducted, is inconsistent with the objects above set forth. It is presumed, therefore, in awarding premiums for light horses of any class that form, soundness and style shall always be considered as well as speed, and that horses shall be placed first for speed alone, if in the judgment of the officers or judges it is deemed desirable to test the speed of the contestants, it is competent under this clause to do so, but the prizes must in every case be awarded on general excellence, as possessing the above characteristics. Neither is it intended that purses shall be prepared of offerings from owners of contesting horses, but that premiums shall be offered in the ordinary way.

It is hoped that the operation of this clause will do away with the professional race horse at our agricultural shows, and tend to promote the development and encourage the breeding of sound, stylish, right-stepping horses, so much in demand in the great horse markets of the world.

JOHN DRYDEN,
Minister of Agriculture.

A LIFE SAVED.—Mr. James Bryson Cameron states: "I was confined to my bed with inflammation of the lungs and was given up by physicians. A neighbor advised me to try Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, stating that his wife had used it for a throat trouble with the best results. Acting on this advice, I procured the medicine, and less than a half-bottle cured me. I certainly believe it saved my life. It was with reluctance that I consented to a trial, as I was reduced to such a state that I doubted the power of any remedy to do me any good."

Burches are said to seldom receive more than 2 per cent of the value of their booty from the buyers to whom they dispose of it, if it happens to be in any other form than coins.

A Prominent Lawyer Says: "I have eight children, every one in good health, not one of whom but has taken Scott's Emulsion, in which my wife has boundless confidence."

The New York fish commission has gone into the business of raising insects for distribution along trout streams, so that the speckled beauties may have something to eat.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Fitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Fitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Dr. H. Fitcher is on every wrapper.

A DEATH BLOW.

A Plank Rebounded from the Planer

And Laid Malcolm Grievies Low—Lingered Thirty Hours and Died—A Bright Young Man.

After lingering in great pain for a little more than a day, Malcolm Grievies, a Wellington street youth, died in great agony about 10 o'clock last night.

On Wednesday afternoon Mr. Grievies was at work in his usual capacity running a planer at Wortman & Ward's factory. He had just fed a piece of wood into the machine, when it rebounded and with terrible force, struck the unfortunate young man in the abdomen.

He was knocked a considerable distance by the force of the blow and sustained internal injuries, from which the medical attendant, Dr. Jarvis, saw at a glance there was no recovery. It was merely a matter of time and 30 hours after he was conveyed to the family residence at 253 Wellington street, he expired.

Deceased was 22 years old, and the eldest son of Mr. Jonas Grievies, tailor. He was a member of Christ Church, and took a prominent part in young people's work. He was employed previously at Dennis Wire Works and was a general favorite with his fellow-employees and all who knew him.

THERE IS NOT a more dangerous class of disorders than those which affect the breathing organs. Nullify this danger with Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil—a pulmonary of acknowledged efficacy. It cures soreness and lameness when applied externally, as well as swollen neck and crick in the back; and, as an inward specific, possesses most substantial claims to public confidence.

The force of men at work on the Springbank Railway was considerably increased yesterday. The rails are now laid to a point west of Woodland Cemetery. The cemetery is being filled with a great deal of labor. It is being filled with stones obtained from the river. The motor car and two flat cars are being used in connection with the work.

Mrs. Foster, of Kent street, has just recovered from a serious attack of La Grippe. This is the second time she has had of the influenza, the first of which attacked Mrs. Foster about three years ago, and left her with a very troublesome cough, accompanied with chronic bronchitis, and a complication of other diseases, which made it almost impossible for her to attend church without disturbing the congregation by coughing, and, indeed, Mrs. Foster assures us that so bad were the spasms that she often feared she would burst a blood vessel during one of these severe attacks. It was very natural that under such circumstances numerous friends would recommend as many different "cure alls." She tried Cherry Pectoral, Tar, Linseed and other preparations, but was growing generally worse when a friend who had been benefited by Barkwell's Bronchial Balm advised her to try that, and in a few days she was out of bed, and the best feature is that she is now entirely freed from all symptoms of the Bronchitis, of which she never hoped to be cured. Mr. Millar, a neighbor, also had a bad cough and was completely cured by the same preparation. zxx

A DEATH BLOW.

A Plank Rebounded from the Planer

And Laid Malcolm Grievess Low—Lingered Thirty Hours and Died—A Bright Young Man.

After lingering in great pain for a little more than a day, Malcolm Grievess, a Wellington street youth, died in great agony about 10 o'clock last night.

On Wednesday afternoon Mr. Grievess was at work in his usual capacity running a planer at Wortman & Ward's factory. He had just fed a piece of wood into the machine, when it rebounded and with terrible force, struck the unfortunate young man in the abdomen.

He was knocked a considerable distance by the force of the blow and sustained internal injuries, from which the medical attendant, Dr. Jarvis, saw at a glance there was no recovery. It was merely a matter of time and 30 hours after he was conveyed to the family residence at 233 Wellington street, he expired.

Deceased was 22 years old, and the eldest son of Mr. Jonas Grievess, tailor. He was a member of Christ Church, and took a prominent part in young people's work. He was employed previously at Dennis' Wire Works and was a general favorite with his fellow-employees and all who knew him.

THERE IS NOT a more dangerous class of disorders than those which affect the breathing organs. Nullify this danger with Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil—a pulmonary of acknowledged efficacy. It cures soreness and lameness when applied externally, as well as swelled neck and crick in the back; and, as an inward specific, possesses most substantial claims to public confidence.

Great wedding sale of furniture now going on at Keene Bros'. We are offering great inducements to new beginners; biggest values ever offered in London. Don't forget the place. KEENE BROS., 127 King street, opposite Market House.

London and Environs

—The steamer Thames will run but two afternoon trips, at 1:30 and 3:10, after Monday, August 11.

—The Seventh Band gave the usual open air concert in Victoria Park last night and delighted a large crowd of people.

—Joseph Carroll, of Brooke, was admitted to the City Hospital here to be treated for typhoid fever the other day.

—The London Street Railway Company have awarded the contract for 75 uniforms for conductors and motormen to Geo. F. Burns, merchant tailor.

—Clergymen at Grimsby Park will play a game of ball, Dr. Pete Wood, of London, will pitch for the benedict.

—The old lady, Mrs. Cannon, who committed suicide by drowning a few days ago, is not, as some supposed the mother of Mr. T. W. Cannon, of 428 Dufferin avenue, and is in no way related.

—Mr. W. H. Oak, 387 William street, traveler for Burns & Light, received a bad cut by being caught in the elevator yesterday. Dr. George Wilson dressed the wound, which required five stitches.

—The Expositor has received a letter from E. J. Gillett, of London, Ont., returning thanks to the head bursar and the nurses of the John H. Stratford Hospital and the attendant physician for services rendered him.

—Ex-Ald. Wyatt, Mrs. Wyatt and daughter, of London, Ont., are in the city on a visit, and are the guests of ex-Ald. R. Wyatt, Smith street. Mr. Wyatt is delighted with the appearance of Winnipeg, and notices a great change since his last visit in 1882—Winnipeg Free Press.

The force of men at work on the Springbank Railway was considerably increased yesterday. The rails are now laid to a point west of Woodland Cemetery. The crib at the cemetery is involving a great deal of labor. It is being filled with stones obtained from the river. The motor car and two flat cars are being used in connection with the work.

—A correspondent at Kent Bridge (Kent) writes: "The professions are represented by Dr. McGregor, a graduate of the Western University, who has lately located in the village. He is acquiring a good practice, and at the time of our visit was considering the erection of a block residence and office." Dr. McGregor's many London friends will be glad to hear of his continued success.

—St. Alban's Company, No. 100, of the Church Lads' Brigade, under the command of Capt. Thomas Hogg and Lieut. P. A. Sands, are holding their annual camp at Springbank. The lads spend their time in military training during a certain portion of the day, the greater part of which they are at liberty to enjoy themselves as each may see fit. Friends and visitors, who are very numerous, witness grand assaults upon the well-supplied tables, which shows that the lads are in good health. They have received an invitation from the Labor Day committee, per Mr. Joseph T. Marks, requesting them to give an exhibition drill in the afternoon of Labor Day, which has been accepted.

Mrs. Foster, of Kent street, has just recovered from a serious attack of La Grippe. This is the second siege she has had of the influenza, the first of which attacked Mrs. Foster about three years ago, and left her with a very troublesome cough, accompanied with chronic bronchitis, and a complication of other diseases, which made it almost impossible for her to attend church without disturbing the congregation by coughing, and, indeed, Mrs. Foster assures us that so bad were the spasms that she often feared she would burst a blood vessel during one of these severe attacks. It was very natural that under such circumstances numerous friends would recommend as many different "cure alls." She tried Cherry Pectoral, Tar, Linseed and other preparations, but was growing generally worse when a friend who had been benefited by Barkwell's Bronchial Balsam advised her to try that, and in a few days she was out of bed, and the best feature is that she is now entirely freed from all symptoms of the Bronchitis, of which she never hoped to be cured. Mr. Millar, a neighbor, also had a bad cough and was completely cured by the same preparation. zxx
