Don't neglect the eyes. Lost sight is irrevocable. A dentist can replace a lost tooth with an artificial one which may pass for the tooth of nature, but no oculist can restore the eye once sightless to its normal state. Save your eyes from being overtaxed by using spectacles to relieve and strengthen them. We can fit almost every eye with the lens required to aid the sight and spare its optic nerves. Parties in town or country can have their eyes tested at their own homes if sufficient notice is given us at our store.

Epps's Cocoa

BREAKFAST-SUPPER.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided for our breakfast a support and delicately flavored beverage which may save us many doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."

self-help

You are weak, "run-down," health is frail, strength gone. Doctors call your case anemic—there is a fat-famine in your blood. Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil, with hypophosphites, is the best food-means of getting your strength back—your doctor will tell you that.

He knows also that when the digestion is weak it is better to break up cod-liver oil out of the body than to burden your tired digestion with it. Scott's Emulsion does that.

Local and Special News.
Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, cures skin eruptions, restores appetite, and gives refreshing sleep.

Coughs, colds, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis, and all lung troubles are quickly cured by Haygard's Pectoral Balsam.

For the complexion use Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It brings blooming health to wan cheeks.

Haygard's Pectoral Balsam cures coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles.

Equally safe for young or old, Ayer's Sarsaparilla cleanses the blood from all impurities.

Think it over.
Have you ever heard of a medicine with such a record of cures as Hood's Sarsaparilla? Don't you know that Hood's Sarsaparilla, the One True Blood Purifier, has proved, over and over again, that it has power to cure, even after all other remedies fail.

Minard's Liniment cures colds, etc.

Minard's Liniment cures diphtheria.

Experience has Proved It.
A triumph in medicine was attained when experience proved that Scott's Emulsion would not only stop the progress of Pulmonary Consumption, but by its continued use, health and vigor could be fully restored.

Of Interest to Catholic Readers

Joseph Shaw Lowell contributes to the June issue a thoughtful paper entitled "The True Aim of Charity Organization Societies," by which term he means, as he defines it, a society for organizing charity. The first organization of this character was started in London, England, in 1849; but the society soon found its way across the ocean, and there are at the present time one hundred and ten organizations of the kind in the United States.

Lowell divides the population of the world into two classes, not on the basis of poverty and riches, though, but of character and life. "The workers and the idlers," she says, "constitute the two classes into which human beings are divided. The workers are those who usually serve their fellow men; and they are workers whatever be their occupation, if this condition of useful service is complied with. They may spend all night making bread; they may lie for ten hours every day on their backs in the dark, hundreds of feet under ground, picking out coal; they may set type all night in a newspaper office; they may sew all day, or wait on table, or wash clothes, or cook, or run errands; they may plan railroads; they may superintend factories; they may write poems; they may sing, or act, or preach and teach—they are always workers, if what they do is of use to the world."

That is a very good definition of the true worker, and no less true is Mrs. Lowell's characterization of the idler as one who lives on the worker, whether he be rich or poor.

She would have the Charity Organization Societies bear this distinction of classes in mind and aim at making those with whom they deal workers, and not idlers, and to educate them to a higher standard of living if they happen to have a low one. She would avoid taking "short views," however, and she considers another mistake lies in taking a negative position—in telling people not to give carelessly or heedlessly, instead of telling them to give wisely and thoughtfully.

The aim of a Charity Organization Society should be, she adds, to get people to do far more in every way than in their distress than they have ever thought of doing for those thus placed. The principles of such organizations, she remarks in concluding, may be summed up in two texts: "Man shall not live by bread alone," which is applicable to both poor and rich, and "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

A writer in the Quarterly Review, after noting the fact that we possess a body of writings dating from the earliest ages of unquestionable genuineness, which prove the existence in the very first centuries of a clearly defined and widely diffused Christianity, pays this tribute to the antiquity of the Catholic Church. "Historians," says he, "may devote their ability to tracing the modifications, the development, the expansion of these ideas; but they must recognize that the Catholic conception of Christianity exists, in a somewhat inchoate form it may be, clearly and definitely as early as this." The problem of the origin of Christianity is still to be faced by the student of the subject, but the fact remains that the Catholic Church, in its origin, is not at all clear; "but it is reduced to smaller dimensions when we realize that Catholic Christianity, using the term in the sense Baur affixed to it, had developed by the end of the first century." The value of this tribute is enhanced when it is borne in mind that the publication in which it appears is a pronounced Protestant one, and recollecting that it is not only testifies to the antiquity of the Catholic faith, but also to its unchanging character; and thus refutes those who charge the Church—as many of her opponents do—with having invented new doctrines in the course of time, and added to the teachings of her divine founder.

An article whose perusal is recommended to those individuals who are given to denouncing Spain for her treatment of Cuba is the one which Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor contributes to the current issue of the Cosmopolitan under the title of "The Capital of Spain." Mr. Taylor writes very entertainingly and logically of Madrid and its people. He compares the city to Paris in some respects, and to our national capital in others. He speaks of "the dearest maidens and demure damsels, dressed in sombre black, their glossy hair wrapped in the graceful folds of lace mantillas, picking their way through the crowded streets at the hour of morning Mass." He tells us that the senate chamber is an old monastery

There was a time when text-books were selected upon merit. If one confidential informant upon this point today from superintendents and principals throughout the country, I believe that it would be clear that merit is of secondary importance. Indeed, if one will but get an agent to tell him his experience for ten years, he will be convinced without other testimony. I could unfold a startling array of facts to sustain the assertion that the majority of superintendents of small cities and counties owe their positions to 'pulls' organized by publishing-houses to whose books they were friendly. "Nobody grieves more over these evils and defects of the public school system, or desires more ardently to see them remedied, than American Catholics, who have only the best wishes for our State schools, and who can not but feel a sense of gratification while reading these Atlantic articles, in knowing that our Catholic schools are wholly free from the evils which, even the public school teachers admit, beset the public schools."

General Foreign Notes.
(Sacred Heart Review.)
France furnishes all Europe and the greater part of America; with all their more costly fashions, not to mention many of the cheaper kinds. It has been computed that, exclusive of amateur work, there are 1,500 artists who support themselves by painting fans. The most expensive ones are painted either on very thin sheepskin, or swanskin, and there are but two factories where it is prepared. The skin is reduced to the thickness of cigarette paper. Over this is passed an almost transparent white paper and it is on this that the artist paints his water-color sketches. These fans cost from three hundred to three thousand francs. Though more fans are made in France, fewer are used there than in any other country. Statistics, dealing as they do with every subject under the sun, inform us that the average French woman uses one fan in ten years, while the Spaniard wears out ten fans in one year; but a Spanish fan does more work in five minutes than a French fan could do in a year.

The increase of leprosy in Iceland is beginning to assume alarming proportions and the question of building a spacious hospital for the reception and care of the lepers becomes more and more imperative. The Icelandic government has decided to send Dr. Bjornson to Bergen to study the treatment of the malady in the asylum there. The Danish Catholic mission in Copenhagen is about to send several Sisters of St. Joseph to Iceland to take care of the lepers. Father Sveinsson, the Icelandic Jesuit, preacher at St. Andrew's College in Ordrup, near Copenhagen, has collected in France more than 15,000 francs to be devoted to this same charitable work.

The recent reception by the Pope of 350 sailors and fifty officers of the British squadron lying at Civita Vecchia was an interesting and unique event. The arrangements for the reception were made by Mgr. Stonor and the Duke of Norfolk. On their arrival at the Vatican the sailors attended Mass in the Sixtine chapel in the presence of the Pope. After the Mass the officers were presented to his Holiness, and on leaving the chapel the enthusiasm of the blue-jackets manifested itself in loud cheers for Leo XIII., to which he responded with repeated benedictions. A good dinner was served to the visitors, and the Vatican galleries and gardens were opened for them. In the afternoon they listened to a sermon by Canon Moyes in the Church of S. Sylvester, and after being driven around the city and served with refreshments, they took the train for Civita Vecchia.

Rev. Patrick Wynne, who was ordained at Cincinnati on the 17th ult., and who came to Lowell, with the intention of singing High Mass in St. Patrick's Church there on Sunday 28th, was stricken with pneumonia and taken to St. John's hospital, where he died on the very day he expected to officiate in St. Patrick's Church. His funeral took place from that edifice on Tuesday 30th. ult.

Sir Andrew Clark said: "I call perfect health the loveliest thing in this world, and alcohol even in small doses will take the bloom of, will injure the perfection of loveliness of health, both mental and moral; I go still further and say, alcohol is not only no helper of work, but a hinderer of work, and every man that comes to the front of a profession in London is marked by this characteristic, that the more busy he gets, the less in the shape of alcohol he takes, and his excuse is 'I am very sorry, but I can not take it and do my work.'"

ALL THE PEOPLE

Should keep themselves healthy special care should be given to this matter at this time. Health depends upon pure rich blood, for when the blood is impure or impoverished, disease of various kinds are almost certain to result. The one true blood purifier is Hood's Sarsaparilla. By its power to purify and vitalize the blood it has proved itself to be the safeguard of health, and the receipt of remarkable cures afforded proves that it has wonderful power over disease. It actually and permanently cures when all other preparations fail to do any good whatever.
