Felt Wretched Until He Started To Take "Fruit-a-lives"

804 CHAMPLAIN ST., MONTREAL.
"For two years, I was a miserable sufferer from Rheumatism and Stomach Trouble. I had frequent Dizzy Spells, and when I took food, felt wretched and sleepy. I suffered from Rheumatism dreadfully, with pains in my back and joints, and my hands swollen. A friend advised 'Fruit-a-lives' and from the outset, they did me good. After the first box, I felt I was getting well and I can truthfully say that 'Fruit-a-lives' is the only medicine that helped me". LOUIS LARRIE.

BOASTING DOESN'T PAY.

Odd, isn't it, how the simplest things in nature can teach lessons as deep as life itself?—how birds, fowls, animals, exhibit most of the characteristics of man himself?

In a poultry yard within the limits of Milwaukee is a little old hen that has no laid an egg for months. And as if conscious of her feathered frailty, she has attempted to conceal her weakness by pretending she is one of the best layers in the barn yard. Let any hen lay an egg and leave the nest and this one cackles the loudest and longest of any in the neighborhood.

One who watches her can't help being reminded of many men and women, who brag loud and long of the attainments of others as if they themselves were the ones to be praised and had done the good deeds.

One is inclined to doubt if boasting is ever a good thing, if it is not always foolish, even though one has something of which to be proud. If one boasts of wealth, or what or what one possesses, the mere fact of mentioning it results generally in lowered estimation of the one speaking. If one feels one should have credit for ability to acquire wealth, one will be more likely to be given that credit if one keeps still and does not shout aloud the claim. If it be beauty a modest pretentious bearing will bring more admiration. If it be handsomeness of dress or appearance, mention of the fact immediately arouses resentment and comparisons with others, possibly of better appearance. If it be personal ability, it will be quite as quickly discovered and appreciated if one makes less pretension.

After all, the individual good qualities each one of us has do not amount to much when viewed impartially. They amount to still less when one tells of them oneself. If of value, one's good quickly discovered and appreciated. Deeds alone speak best. The boaster shows himself little by his mere act of calling attention to his supposed strong qualities.

The steamer was just putting off from the pier when a stout gentleman came tearing along, flourishing his stick and shouting excitedly:

"Stop! Put her back—put her back! There's a party—between 60 and 70—wanting to go." The captain, seeing that there were very few passengers aboard, thought it worth while to "put back." The old gentleman thereupon stepped on board and collapsed into the nearest deck chair and wiped his streaming brow.

The captain waited with his eyes scanning the pier.

"How long are they going to be?" he asked. "Where is your party of 60 or 70?"

The heated gentlemen looked up in wild surprise.

"Oh," he said, "I'm the party. I'm 66, today, sir."

CAPTURED GUN FOR VICTORIA CROSS

The "For Valor" Badges to be Moulded From German Bronze Gun.

Ottawa, Dec. 26.—A bronze gun, captured by the Canadian troops overseas from the Germans, will be used by the British authorities for the manufacture of Victoria Crosses. The gun in question was captured by the 58th Canadian Infantry Battalion, and Sir George Perley, in a letter to General Meuburn, minister of militia, states that he has agreed to its being turned over to the British authorities. Sir George says that it has been in the past the invariable practice to manufacture Victoria Crosses from bronze guns captured from the enemy.

Modern guns, however, are necessarily all made of steel, and it is becoming increasingly difficult to obtain the older weapons of bronze.

Sir George Perley, in authorizing the handing over of the captured gun, pointed out the desirability of letting it be known that Canada, and particularly the Fifty-eighth Battalion, had provided the trophy. In response the British war office wrote a letter explaining the warm thanks of the Army Council to the dominion government for having met its wishes in the matter.

Voting Practically Completed.

Canadian Headquarters in France, via London, Dec. 26.—(By W. A. Wilson, special correspondent of the Canadian Press) With ground covered with snow in the biting weather of a Canadian winter, the Canadian troops polled their final votes today. When the polls opened this morning over ninety-six per cent of the available vote within the Canadian ranks had been taken and numerous polls in various units had been closed with a full vote reported. By 8 o'clock tonight, when the voting ceased, it is expected the number not having exercised the franchise will be practically negligible. Attention is now centered upon Canada and today's elections. While the front is quiet, that quietness is only comparative. The morale of the enemy troops, on the whole, is good at present. Their attitude during the past fortnight has been aggressive though general indications still point to a continuation of a defensive policy on their part. Indeed, while Germany is undoubtedly concentrating additional forces in the western theatre and is reported to have brought new troops from Russia to this area, prisoners captured on our front declare that the enemy is apprehensive of an offensive by us.

HOLLAND'S GIN PLANTS

TO BE DENIED GRAIN

FOR THEIR PRODUCT

Amsterdam, Nov. 14.—The 200 distilleries of Schiedam, which produce vast quantities of gin and other liquors, have been notified by the government's grain bureau, the Telegraf reports, that after this week no more grain will be supplied for conversion into alcoholic products. This means the paralysis of one of the industries for which Holland is best known abroad. Thousands of men will be thrown out of employment.

TO HELP GERMAN PEOPLE TO FREEDOM

Appeal Made To American Citizens of Texton Parish of Descent.

New York, Dec. 21.—An appeal to American citizens of German birth and descent to join its campaign for helping the United States to win the war is made public by the executive committee of the Friends of Germany Democracy. Franz Sigel, son of General Franz Sigel, of civil war fame, is president of the organization.

"This war is not a war on the part of America against the German nation," the appeal stated. "It is rather a war against a peculiar system of society and government. This system of society and of government unhappily dominates the German people to their own and the world's undoing."

The committee declared that "a majority of the German people, if properly informed about their own government and its misdeeds, will not wait until the German nation is completely crushed by force of arms, but will sooner or later rise against the Kaiser and the Junkers and establish a democratic government in Germany."

"President Wilson has very clearly pointed out," the statement added, that the war must go on until the triumph of democracy is complete, American citizens of German birth or descent must now realize that they are face to face with a known fact, and not with an open question. America and her Allies are going to win this war against the Emperor and the ruling classes of Germany."

"During the last seventy years over five million Germans have come to America. We find that the principles for which many of our immediate ancestors, or we ourselves suffered exile, are threatened by the very powers which forced us as a people out of Germany. We must rally with our fellow Americans against the tyranny which has so long cursed the country of our fathers, and which now rises as a dangerous threat against the liberty of the whole world."

"The friends of German democracy urged our German people in America, by every means in their power, to assert themselves on the side of right in this conflict."

ALLEGED BANDIT HAS BEEN CAUGHT

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 26th.—Niagara district of late has been terrorized by a gang of robbers, believed to be black-hand foreigners, who robbed their compatriots by the wholesale, securing between $5,000 and $6,000 at Port Weller, near St. Catharines, Welland, Niagara Falls, Port Colborne, etc.

Niagara Falls police have two men in custody who are believed to be members of the gang. They are Spaniards, Benjamin Alvarez and Bartholomew Palmer. Early Sunday morning, it is alleged, these two and another, who has escaped, held up two other Spaniards on a lonely road in the outskirts of the city and relieved them of $1,150. One man had his money in his boots, while the other carried his in the breast of his coat.

In a statement to the police the victims said one of the prisoners, who boards at the same house as they, offered to show them safely over the bridge, as he had a passport, but instead of taking them to the bridge he led them to the city outskirts and two masked men suddenly poked revolvers in their faces and demanded money. The two fought the robbers till almost beaten into insensibility. Alvarez and Palmer were arrested at their boarding house later. They had no money on them.

WHAT PROVINCES ARE DOING TO IMPROVE FOREST SERVICES

Ontario, British Columbia, Quebec and New Brunswick Keeping Ahead of Times.

Ontario thoroughly reorganized its forestry service and put it on a par with other up-to-date provinces where forest services are under expert technical direction. New Brunswick is also owing into line. A well-qualified forester, Mr. P. E. Cavanagh, has been appointed as the head of the forest service and is now making a survey of its forest resources as a basis for laying down permanent lines of forest policy. In this work, the Commission of Conservation has been assisting the province in an advisory capacity.

British Columbia and Quebec have long been in the fore-front of the provinces that have had an efficient technically qualified forest service. Although Nova Scotia's forests have been nearly cut over, an efficient forest service would be an investment for the province that would pay for itself many times over in conserving and utilizing the forest resources remaining. Two-thirds of the land area is better adapted to forest growth than to any other use and should be re-forested.

The New Pathe Period Designs

The Crowning Glory of a Superb Achievement. Wonderful Music housed in Beautiful Furniture.

The new Pathe Cabinets are art-objects of beauty,—worthy temples of the music that pours from them. The very loveliness of their artistic appearance is a delight to one's aesthetic sense and enhances the pleasure of their possession.

In the development of sound-producing instruments, nothing has been more "out-of-tune"—more discordant—more jarring than the plain—often ugly—boxes in which many makers housed their instruments.

It is therefore fitting that the Pathephone, which has attained such signal superiority in musical and mechanical directions, should also lead the way in the beauty of its appearance.

Their creation is the result of that same thoroughness which, during twenty-five years of restless striving after improvement upon improvement, has characterized Pathe methods.

Men who have made the art of decoration a life-long study were commissioned to design a series of Pathephone Cabinets that would be worthy of the great name of Pathe.

Exquisite examples of furniture periods most famous in history were selected as the models for the Pathe Period Cabinets. The result is a collection of instruments unique and beautiful.

The following designs are now ready. See and hear them at your local Pathe Agent.

"QUEEN ANNE," "LOUIS XVI," "SHERATON," "ADAMS," "WILLIAM & MARY."

Remember, in addition to being the most beautiful instruments in the talking machine world, the Pathephones are the most perfect, possessing these exclusive features: The Pathe Sapphire Ball, instead of sharp needles that wear and rip the record. No needles to change. The loud and half-tone Sapphires.

OLD HENS FOR EGGS.

(Experimental Farms Note.)

For Profitable early winter egg production the early hatched pullet is three times better than the late pullet, four times better than the yearling hen and thirty times better than the "aged" hen.

Early pullets are best for winter eggs. This has been demonstrated many times. The Poultry Division, Experimental Farm, has collected figures for several years and when the three months (November, December & January) only are taken into consideration the relative profitableness of the four ages is as noted above. If the six winter months were considered the contrast would not be so striking for the hens and the late pullets were just beginning to lay when the experiment closed. However, if eggs alone are to be considered we cannot afford to feed birds until towards spring before they produce or only at a loss. Certainly there is no excuse whatever for keeping in our country houses late pullets whose eggs cost more than they are worth and birds that are absolutely useless as breeders.

This summary is of results that extend over four years and are taken from several of the farms of the system so that the figures will indicate fairly well what may be expected for these three months.

These figures show that early pullets hatched before May 1st, produced eggs at a cost for feed of 18¢ cents. The late pullets (hatched after May 15th) at a cost of 56 cents. The year old hens at a cost of 82 cents, and for every dozen eggs laid by the hens in the aged class the cost of feed was $5.73.

Again these facts should be emphasized (1) that for profitable egg production birds should lay before February. (2) Early well matured pullets are the only birds that may be expected to do this. (3) Late pullets as a rule will not pay to keep. (4) For eggs, hens are not profitable. (5) If we have a good flock of early pullets, for the time being depend up on them for breeding. (6) It is a national loss to keep birds that eat a dollar's worth of feed to produce fifty cents worth of eggs.

POULTRY FEEDING

(Experimental Farms Note.)

The problem of economical production with feed at the present prices, is a question that has been worrying producers during the past few months. The question of what to feed is one that requires more careful consideration than ever before. Feed is high; therefore the flock should be culled closely and nothing but the most vigorous birds retained. They should not only be fed heavily, but should be fed such foods as will give results. For this purpose it is necessary to supply cereal, animal, vegetable and mineral feeds.

Cereal or grain seeds should form the principal part of the ration and for best results a certain proportion should be ground. The question is what are the best and most economical feeds to use. During ordinary times, a mixture of corn, wheat and times, a mixture of corn, wheat and conditions milling wheat should be conserved for human food and only the lower grades used for stock feed. Lower grade wheat, oats and corn, buckwheat and barley these are all feeds that may be used to advantage. The extent to which each is used will depend on prices.

For ground feed, "Buckwheat screenings" may be used to advantage, also mixtures containing bran, cornmeal, ground oats or other similar grains.

Vegetables or green feed is absolutely necessary to keep the fowls in thrifty condition. For this purpose, sprouted oats is one of the very best. It not only supplies succulence, but grain feed as well. Mangels, turnips, cabbage, small potatoes or other similar waste products may all be used to advantage.

Animal or meat feed is a form of food that poultry keepers frequently neglect supplying. It is not possible for a hen to produce eggs profitably on an all grain ration. Sour milk is usually available on farms and no animal feed will give better results, as it not only keeps the birds in good tone. If milk is not available, beef scrap, blood flour, green cut bone or similar feeds must be supplied to take the place of the grubs and insects which the birds get on range.

Mineral feed. Lime for the egg shells and mineral salts for the growth of bone must be supplied. Small quantities may be obtained from such feeds as clovers, but it is necessary to feed oyster shells or something similar to supply lime in sufficient quantities for a heavy egg production.

FIFTY YEAR BOYCOTT.

Paris, Dec. 19.—On Dit, a weekly gossip paper, says that one of Col. House's intimates declared just after a conversation with Andre Tardieu—"Germany doesn't consider that she will have a good peace unless she dictates the commercial treaties. President Wilson told us before we embarked for Europe:—When our armies are in force on the western front I will address myself directly to the German government and people will say to them:—You're going to accept a just peace, a peace which the free people desire. You will receive Belgium and the invaded districts of France as well as Serbia and Roumania. You will give back Alsace Lorraine. You will give the guarantees which are demanded of you. We await your reply."

"If you say no, I will have a law call for the senate and the house of representatives for forming German citizens and Germans naturalized since the month of August, 1914, to enter American territory for fifty years. Besides, that, the sale of goods of German origin or bought from Germans will be prohibited in the territory of the United States."

CONSERVATION AND UTILIZATION OF LAKE MANURE

(Experimental Farms Note.)

All investigators go to show that lake manure has no greater value when fresh than the solid material and that the former is more readily lost through drainage and leaching. Hence it is that every precaution is taken here to ensure minimum loss of plant food constituents in the manure and is the chief reason for applying manure to the land, where practicable, as quickly as possible after it is produced.

At the Central Farm, Ottawa, the liquid manure is absorbed by means of filter, usually cut straw, and a certain load of mixed liquid and solid manure is gathered it is taken directly to the field and is spread on the land either by hand or by means of the manure spreader, as convenient. This method is carried on consistently throughout the year although during occasional winter seasons this system may be disorganized for a time due to the depth of snow or other causes. The contour of the land at this farm which varies from fairly level to gently rolling lends itself admirably to the foregoing plan of procedure.

The manure is always applied systematically in definite cropping systems or crop rotations. The amount and frequency of application vary according to the duration of the rotation, but, without exception, in the regular farm rotations, six tons per acre of fresh manure is allotted to each year of the rotation. For instance, in a three year system, of hood, grain and hay crops, eighteen tons is applied for the hood crop. In four-year rotations twenty-four tons is the quantity used. For a five-year rotation the amount is thirty tons of which fifteen tons is applied for the hood crops and the balance is spread in lighter dressings for the clover and timothy hay areas.

Where manure is applied for cultivated or hood crops the importance of incorporating the manure thoroughly with the soil as near to the surface as practicable is closely observed.

table parings or sprouted oats.Night.

Full feed scratch grains.

The scratch grains should be a mixture such as lower grade wheat, oats, and corn, barley, oats and corn, barley oats and buckwheat, or whatever grains are cheapest at the time. So far this season, oats have been the cheapest grain food, so it is advisable to use them to as great an extent as possible.

The present indications are that corn will be greatly reduced in price. When this happens it should be used extensively, as, supplemented with a high protein feed such as sour milk or beef scrap, it is one of the most valuable of feeds.

Besides the foregoing, a hopper of dry mash, such as ground buckwheat screening three parts, blood flour or beef scrap one part, is kept constantly before the flock, also hoppers of oyster shell and beef scrap. If sour milk is available the beef scrap may be omitted or green cut bone may be supplied in place of either. A good time to supply this is at the noon feed when a mash from the kitchen scraps in which is mixed the green cut bone, at the rate of about one half ounce per bird and dried off with the meal mixture, may be fed.

Because feed is high in price, don't stint the flock. It takes a certain amount of feed merely for maintenance. It is only the feed over and

COMPARATIVE PROFIT

IN THE CROPS ON A THREE YEAR ROTATION

The shorter a rotation the more labor or required to work a given area and the greater should be the profit to the farmer. Three years is the shortest term in which a rotation, as generally understood, can be conducted. That is, after breaking sod only two crops are grown before hay is again the crop. The only method to follow in the rotation, if the soil is to be handled as to get the fullest benefit from its latent fertility, is to put a hood crop or some kind on the turned down sod and by the rough cultivation during growth of the crop, so pulverize it and improve it with air as to increase the economy of the next crop. The rough cultivation during preparing plant food and fitting the soil for not only the growing crop those of succeeding years.

Those of the extra profit view to the greatest production possible, but rather to the securing of such a flock as any amateur might go out and purchase. The flock consisted of twenty-six birds four of which were three year old Black Leghorn hens, six White Leghorn pullets and one Black Minorca pullet hatched in May of 1916. It was hatched in May of 1916 and the balance were cross breeds, Black and White Leghorns, hatched in June. They were not put into a winter quarters until well on in November and it was December 7th before the eggs were laid.

How the Flock was kept.

An old wood shed, closed by a door, was utilized as a poultry house. In the fourth side, fifteen inches from the floor a line of windows two feet wide was placed and above an opening about eighteen inches wide was made across the entire front. In this frame covered with light cotton was hung. This frame potatoes were raised, which that year had a market value of 50 cents per bushel for large, and 20 cents per bushel for small a total value of $134.15. The total cost of crop including fertilizer was $46.00 leaving a profit per acre of $88.15. On the portion of the field where 1000 pounds of fertilizer was applied the yield was 279 bushels per acre of marketable and 3 1/2 bushels of small, a total crop value of $146.17, at a total cost of $54.18 leaving a profit per acre of $91.94.

In 1915, Banner oats were sown, seeded with 10 pounds Red clover and 4 pounds timothy seed per acre. The yield of oats was 521-3 bushels, valued at 60 cents per bushel, $31.40. The kitchen waste such as vegetable parings at 60 cents per bushel, $19.44. On the area where also scattered.

In the winter, as it is always dark before the night feed which consisted of mixed grain was given, an electric light was turned on for a couple of hours and the fowl allowed to scratch to their hearts' content. Water was also supplied at the night feeding. Before turning off the light, the water pan was emptied so as to prevent its freezing solid through the night.

As the flock from the time it was put in the fall until it was disposed of in the summer, never got outside the house, and as no rooster was kept there was no cause of annoyance to the neighbors.

The methods followed were such as almost any city dweller could follow. A very small space for a house and no yard room are required. By buying pullets in the fall and selling them when poultry is high in the early summer, the most will be had out of the flock without interfering in any way with either your own or your neighbour's back-yard garden.

This mixed flock of hens and pullets laid, in the six months December to May, 118 dozens of eggs which were sold at seventy cents (70¢) a dozen in December, January and February, sixty cents (60¢) in March, fifty cents (50¢) in April, forty cents (40¢) in May, giving a total revenue of $84.42.

The cost of feed and litter for the same period was $26.13.

Thus twenty-six hens and pullets turned $26.13 worth of feed and the table scraps that would otherwise have been wasted from a household of four persons, into $84.42 worth of eggs or a profit over cost of feed of $58.29.

"My friend," said the solemn individual, "what are you doing for those who come after you?"

"Doing for them? I'm trying to dodge the pest," replied the man who was harassed by bill collectors.

"But I am so unworthy, darling," he murmured, as he held the dear girl's hand in his.

"Oh, George," she sighed, "if you and papa agree on every point as you do on that, how happy we would be."

PROHIBITION.

By the order-in-council, passed under authority of the War Measures Act, prohibiting the importation of alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes, Canada has to all intents and purposes total prohibition. The order-in-council prohibits the importation of liquors (all beverages containing more than 2 1/2 per cent of alcohol) after Jan. 31st, and the transportation of liquor into any part of Canada where the sale of liquor is illegal after April 1, 1918.

INTOLERANCE.

The Imperial League of this city has a fine story, which has been quite noticeable from time to time. The League has now gone on record as "unanimously" opposed to even the "rumored admission" of Sir Wilfrid Laurier into the union cabinet. The Times has no reason to believe Sir Wilfrid would at present consent to enter the cabinet; but there is no more reason why he should not be acceptable than in the case of Joseph Howe when the latter decided to enter Sir John Macdonald's cabinet after the country had endorsed confederation, which he had so bitterly opposed. If now Sir Wilfrid Laurier should feel free to pursue a similar course it would be a great gain for the cause of Canadian unity.

All the intolerance is not confined to Quebec province—more the pity. One of the finest things said since the result of the elections was announced was said by the Hon., N. W. Rowell, Liberal-Unionist, in Toronto. He said:—
"This is now the hour for reconciliation. If Quebec really accepts the decision of the Canadian people and co-operates in carrying out the law of compulsory military service, national unity will be re-established in Canada, and if the sons of Quebec go forth to fight with the sons of the other provinces in the common cause, there will be developed such a spirit of unity and co-operation as will bind together races and provinces in the Dominion as they have never been bound together before. Let us all earnestly hope that this result will be achieved."

Quebec will not be conciliated by a boycott, nor by an exhibition of intolerance equaling or surpassing her own. This is a time for kindly counsels and the larger view of national duty and responsibility.—St. John Times.

RESTAURANT KEEPERS FINED.

Prosecutions have been instituted in a number of cases against restaurant keepers who have failed to comply with the requirements of the Order in Council restricting the use of beef and bacon and requiring that substitutes for white bread be provided in all public eating places. Action is pending in other cases.

O. Henry Stories

VI.—Phoebe

By O. HENRY

YOU are a man of many adventures and varied experiences, I said to Captain Patrick Malone. "Do you believe that the possible element of good luck or bad luck—if there is such a thing as luck—has influenced your career or persisted for or against you to such an extent that you are forced to attribute results to the operation of the fabled good luck or bad luck?"

This question for almost the dull-insignificant of legal phraseology was put while we sat in Russell's little red-tiled cafe near Congo square, in New Orleans. Brown-faced, white-haired, finger-ringed captain of adventure came of age to Russell's for the cognac. They came from sea and land and were chary of relating the tales they had seen—not because they were wonderful than the fantasies of the Annals of print, but because they were so different. And I was a perpetual wedding guest, always striving to cast my buttons over the finger of one of these mariners of fortune.

This Captain Malone was a Hibernian creole who had gone to and fro in the earth and walked up and down in it. He looked like any other well-dressed man of thirty-five whom you might meet except that he was hopelessly weather-tanned and wore on his chain an ancient ivory and gold Peruvian charm against evil, which has nothing at all to do with his story.

"My answer to your question," said the captain, smiling, "will be to tell you the story of Bad Luck Kearny. That is, if you don't mind hearing it."

My reply was to pound on the table for Russell. "Strutting along Tchoupitoulas street one night," began Captain Malone, "I noticed, without especially taxing my interest, a small man walking rapidly toward me. He stepped upon a wooden cellar door, crashed through it and disappeared. I rescued him from a heap of soft coal below. He dusted himself briskly, swearing fluently in a mechanical tone, as an underdog actor recites the gypsy's curse. Gratitude and the dust in his throat seemed to call for fluids to clear them away. His desire for liquidation was expressed so heartily that I went with him to a cafe down the street, where we had some vile vermouth and biters."

"Looking across that little table I had my first clear sight of Francis Kearny. He was about five feet seven, but as tough as a cypress knee. His hair was darkest red, his mouth such a mere slit that you wondered how the food of his words came rushing out of it. His eyes were the brightest and lightest blue and the hopefulness that I ever saw. He gave the double impression that he was at bay and that you had better not crowd him further."

"Just in from a gold hunting expedition on the coast of Costa Rica," he explained. "Second mate of a banana steamer told me the natives were panning out enough from the beach sands to buy all the rum, red calico and perfume in the world. The day I got there a syndicate named Incorporated Jones gets a government concession to all minerals from a given point. For a next choice I take coast fever and count green and blue lizards for six weeks in a grass hut. I had to be notified when I was well, for the reptiles were actually there."

"Then I shipped back as third cook on a Norwegian tramp that blew up her boiler two miles below quarantine. I was due to bust through that cellar door the way up the river, roasting about on a lower coast packet that made a landing for every fisherman that wanted a plug of tobacco. And now I'm here for what comes next. And I'll be along, I'll be along," said this queer Mr. Kearny. "I'll be along on the beams of my bright but not very particular star."

"From the first the personality of Kearny charmed me. I saw in him the cold heart, the restless nature and the valiant front against the buffets of fate that make his countrymen such valuable comrades in risk and adventure. And just then I was wanting such men. Moored at a fruit company's pier I had a 500-ton steamer ready to sail the next day with a cargo of sugar, lumber and corrugated iron for a port in—well, let us call the country Esperanto—it has not been long ago, and the name of Patrick Malone is still spoken there when its unsettled politics are discussed. Beneath the eager and true were perfumed a thousand repeating rifles. In Agnus Prius, the capital, Don Rafael Valdivia, minister of war, Esperanto's greatest hearted and most able patriot, awaited my coming. No doubt you have heard, with a ripple of the last-thought was and uprising in these little people's republics. They make but a faint clamor against the din of great nations' battles. But down there under all the ridiculous uniforms and petty diplomacy and senseless countermarching and intrigues, are to be found statesmen and patriots. Don Rafael Valdivia was one. His great ambition was to raise Esperanto into peace and honest prosperity and the respect of the serious nations. So he waited for my rides in Agnus Prius. But one would think I am trying to win a recruit's prize. No; it was Francis Kearny I wanted. And so I told him, speaking long over our execrable vermouth, breathing the stifling odor from garlic and tar-paper, which, as you know, is the distinctive flavor of cafes in the lower slant of our city.

"I spoke of the tyrant President Cruz and the burdens that his greed and insolent cruelty laid upon the people. And at that Kearny's tears flowed. And then I dried them with a picture of the fat rewards that would be ours when the oppressor should be overthrown and the wise and generous Valdivia in his seat. Then Kearny leaped to his feet and wrung my hand with the strength of a roanabout. He was mine, he said, till the last minnow of the hated despot was hurled from the highest peaks of the Cordilleras into the sea."

"I paid the score and we went out. Near the door Kearny's elbow overturned an upright glass show-case, smashing it into little bits. I paid the storekeeper the price and he said: 'Come to my hotel for the night.' I said to Kearny: 'We'll tomorrow at noon.'"

"He agreed, but on the sidewalk he fell to cursing again in the dull, monotonous, glib way that he had done when I pulled him out of the coal cellar. 'Captain,' said he, 'before we go any further it's no more than fair to tell you that I'm known from Baffin's bay to Tierra del Fuego as "Bad Luck Kearny." I'm it. Everything I get into goes up in the air except a balloon. Every bet I ever made I lost except when I copped it. Every book I ever sold on bank except the submachine. Everything I was ever interested in went to pieces except a patent bomb-thrower. I tried everything I ever took hold of and tried to run I ran into the ground except when I tried to lose. And that's why I thought I'd tell you.'"

"'Bad luck,' said I, 'or what goes by the name, may now and then tangle the affairs of any man. But if it persists beyond the estimate of what we may call the "averages" there must be a cause for it.'"

"There is," said Kearny emphatically, "and when we walk another square I'll show it to you."

"Surprised," I said, by his side until we came to Canal street and out into the middle of its great width.

Kearny scolded me by an arm and pointed a tragic forefinger at a rather brilliant star that shone steadily about thirty degrees above the horizon.

"That's Saturn," said he, "the star that presides over bad luck and evil and disappointment and nothing good and trouble. I was born under that star. Every move I make up bolts Saturn and blocks it. He's the hoodoo planet of the heavens. They say he's 73,000 miles in diameter and no soldier of body than spit, pea soup, and he's got as many despicable and malignant rings as a big city. Now, what of a star is that to be born under?"

"I asked Kearny where he had obtained all this astonishing knowledge."

"From Aristotle, the great astrologer of Cleveland, O.," said he. "That man looked at a glass ball and told me my name before I'd taken a chair. He prophesied the date of my birth and death before I'd said a word. And then he cast my horoscope, and the children's system scored me in the solar plexus. It was bad luck for Francis Kearny from A to Z and for his friends that were implicated with him. For that I gave up $10. This Saturn was sorry, but he respected his profession too much to read the heavens wrong for any man. It was night time, and he took me out on a balcony and gave me a free view of the sky. And he showed me which Saturn was and how to tell it in different balances and longitudes."

"But Saturn wasn't all. He was only the man higher up. He furnishes the bad luck that they allow him a gang of deputy sparklers to help hand it out. They're circulating and revolving and hanging around the main supply all the time, each one throwing the hoodoo on his particular district."

"You see that ugly little red star about eight inches above and to the right of Saturn? Kearny pointed it. 'Well, that's her. That's Phoebe. She's got the charge. "By the day of your birth," says Aristotle to me, "your life is subjected to the influence of Saturn. By the hour and minute of it you must dwell under the sway and direct authority of Phoebe, the ninth satellite." So said this Aristotle. Kearny shook his fist viciously skyward. "Come here, she's done her work very well. Ever since I was astrologized bad luck has followed me like my shadow, as I told you. And for many years before. Now, captain, I've told you my hand-icap as a man should. If you're afraid this evil star of mine might cripple your schemes, let me see what I can do. I told him that for the time we would banish both astrology and astronomy from our heads. "The man's feet value and enthusiasm of the man drew me. Let us see what a little course in diffidence will do against bad luck," I said. "We will sail tomorrow for Esperanto."

"Fifty miles down the Mississippi our steamer broke her rudder. We sent for a tug to tow us back and lost three days. When we struck the blue waters of the Gulf all the storm winds of the Atlantic seemed to have concentrated there on us. We should surely be swept on those leaping waves with our guns and to start our arms and lumber on the floor of the Mexican Gulf. "Kearny did not seek to ease off one iota of the burden of our danger from the shoulders of his fatal horoscope, as he weathered every storm so grimly, smoking a black pipe, to keep watch alight rails and sea water seemed but as so. And he shook his fist at the black clouds behind which his hateful star winked its unseen eye. When the ship cleared one evening he reviled his malignant guardian with grim humor. "On watch, aren't you, you red-headed vixen? Out making it hot for little Francis Kearny and his crew—according to Hoyle. Twinkle, twinkle, little devil! You're a lady, aren't you—dagging a man with bad luck just because he happened to be born under your beam was floor-walker. Get busy and stink the ship, you one-eyed banshee Phoebe! H'm! Sounds as if she's a milkmaid. You can't judge a woman by her nose, can you? I can't make the remarks to Phoebe, you be—blast ed!"

"For eight days rain and squalls and water-pouring beat us from our course. Five days we went as a milkmaid. I was as in Esperanto. Our Jonah swallowed the bad crew of it with appalling frankness, but that scarcely lessened the hardships our cause was made to suffer."

"At last one afternoon we steamed into the calm estuary of the little Rio Escondido. Three miles up this we crept, feeling for the shallow channel between the low banks that were crowded the edge with gigantic trees and riotous vegetation. Then our white gave a little lurch, and in five minutes we were ashore, and Carlos—my brave Carlos Quintana—crashed through the tangled vines waving his cap madly for joy."

"A hundred yards away was his camp, where 300 chosen patriots of Esperanto were awaiting our coming. For a month Carlos had been drilling them there in the tactics of war and filling them with the spirit of revolution and liberty."

"My captain-comrade told me about Carlos, while yet my boat was being lowered. 'You should see them in the drill by companies—in the column—lined in the march by four—they are superb! Also in the manual of arms—but, alas, performed only with sticks of bamboo. The guns, captain—say you've been brought guns?'"

"'A thousand good rifles, Carlos,' I called to him. 'And two Gatlings.' "Valgame Dios!" he cried, throwing his cap in the air. "We shall sweep the world!"

"At that moment Kearny tumbled from the steamer's side into the river. He could not swim, and the crew threw him a rope and drew him back aboard. I caught his eye and his look of pathetic but still bright and undaunted consciousness of his guilty luck. I said myself that, although he might be a man to shun, he was also to be admired."

"I gave orders to the sailing master that the arms, ammunition and provisions were to be landed at once. That was easy in the steamer's bows, except for the two Gatling guns. For their transportation ashore we carried a stout daisiot."

"In the meantime I walked with Carlos to the camp and made the soldiers a little speech in Spanish, which they received with enthusiasm, and then I had some wine and a cigarette in Carlos' tent."

"The small arms and provisions were already ashore, and the petty officers had squads of men conveying them to camp. One Gatling had been safely landed. The other was just being hoisted over the side of the vessel as we arrived. I noticed Kearny darting about on board, anxious to have the ambition of ten men and to be doing the work of five. I think his next bubble over when he saw Carlos and me. He popped out as swinging loose from some part of the tackle. Kearny leaped impetuously and caught it. There was a crackle and a hiss and a smoke of scorching hemp, and the Gatling dropped straight as a plummet through the bottom of the flatboat and buried itself in twenty feet of water and five feet of river mud."

"I turned my back on the scene. I heard Carlos' loud cries as if from some extreme grief too poignant for words. I heard the complaining murmur of the crew and the maledictions of Torres, the sailing master. I could not bear to look."

"By night some degree of order had been restored in camp. Military rules were not drawn strictly, and the men were grouped about the fires of their several messes, playing games of chance, singing their native songs or discussing with voluble animation the contingencies of our march upon the capital."

"To my tent, which had been pitched for me close to that of my chief lieutenant, came Kearny, indomitable, smiling, bright-eyed, bearing no traces of the buffets of his evil star. Rather was his aspect that of a heroic martyr whose tribulations were as slight as a shower and glorious that he even took a splendor and a prestige from them. "Well, captain," said he, "I guess I'm dead and comrade on in cause de liberte."

"On the morning of the 14th we began our march toward the sea following a range of mountains, over the sixty-mile trail to the capital. Our small arms and provisions were laden on pack mules. Twenty men hurried to pack Gatling guns rolled them smoothly along the flat, alluvial lowlands. Our troops, well-shod and well-fed, moved with alacrity and cheerfulness. I saw my three horsemen were mounted on the tough mountain ponies of the country."

The objection was filed with the clerk of the Executive Council by Hon. Wm. Currie, M. P. P. who will no doubt furnish our town council the reasons given by those who oppose the council's request.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your hair! Get a small bottle of Dandruff right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Many little, colorless and acrid scales of dandruff—that awful scalp. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, eventually producing a fearful loss and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to wither, loosen, and fall out. A little Dandruff—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a small bottle of Dandruff from any drug store. You cannot use hair powder until you have Dandruff. It is the only hair preparation that will save your hair. Try it!

With the Fingers! Says Corns Lift Out Without Any Pain

Some corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn can shortly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply directly upon the corn a few drops of Freestone's Corn Remedy.

It is claimed that at small cost one can get a quarter of an ounce of Freestone's Corn Remedy, which is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This new drug is an ether compound, and while sticky, does the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue.

This announcement will interest many women here, for it is said that the present McLeod foot-year is putting corns on practically every woman's foot.

PROGRESS ON THE VALLEY RAILWAY

Completion of This Important Work Promises for Early Next Spring.

Fredericton, Dec. 26.—At the meeting of the directors of the St. John and Quebec Railway Company, this month the report submitted covering considerable portion of the work done during the summer and the present state of construction on the railway, reported to the government that eighty per cent of the work of construction has been done and under the difficult conditions that accompanied all railway work, this year, the progress had been satisfactory.

At the meeting of the directors, C. O. Potts, chief engineer, reported that the concrete abutments at the Nepesic river were approaching completion, only the abutment on the west side now remaining to be done while the foundation of this has already been completed. There was very little other concrete work to be done on the road, he said, even that at the quarries being nearly finished.

The Bedford Construction Company, sub-contractors below Gagetown, have completed the long fill across the Otanogog mouth and are now hauling the riprap material to the embankment. Grading nearly finished.

The grading over nearly the whole road is almost finished. There is but little more excavation except at Woodman's Point where the heavy rock cutting will yet take some considerable time for completion. A new water supply pipe has been laid at Westfield in co-operation with the Canadian Pacific railway. This work was done by Contractors Powers and Brewster.

The chief engineer also said the most of the right of way claims were in progress of settlement. "There were some few which would be submitted to arbitration."

The president and general counsel of the company, Hon. W. P. Jones, reported on the existing relations between the Prudential Trust Company and the railway. Hon. Mr. Jones has been giving very close attention to this matter which has always been much involved and in doing so has had the close interest and co-operation of Premier Foster. When the present directors were appointed to the board the Prudential Trust Company had repaid the St. John and Quebec Company a very large amount, and it was necessary before any further sums were paid to the railway that much construction work should be done. Up to the present time the government, represented by the railway company has not received any sum from the Prudential Trust Company, which has about $600,000 derived from the sale of bonds in its hands, since it came into power but now as sufficient work has been done to overcome the balance against it, progress estimates are being sent forward to the Prudential Trust Company for payment out of the monies in their hand on account of construction work.

The chief engineer also reported that sidings and shelters had been built on that portion of the railway now under construction, namely: At Gunders, Babbitt, Logues, and Hawshaw, also that freight platforms had been built.

Partial Subsidy Payment.

The secretary-treasurer, E. S. Carter, reported having received a subsidy check from the Dominion government of $278,000 which however, is only a partial payment. This amount was applied to reduce the construction indebtedness incurred at the Bank of Montreal. The authorized issue of bonds at the last session of the legislature amounting to $1,000,000 to provide for the completion of road has not been placed on the market and when it is will be reduced by the amounts of the subsidy and other received from the Prudential Trust Company.

Mr. Carter also reported having had a very satisfactory interview with Hon. J. D. Reid, minister of railways and canals, with respects to the rail situation. For some months the sub-contractors on the road have been inconvenienced—if not delayed—by the scarcity of rails and only by the most diligent efforts on the part of the chief engineers who succeeded in securing a few miles of second hand rails, was the work of grading and filling able to go on.

The Canadian Government Railway management undertook to provide rails for the Valley Road between Gagetown and Westfield at a cost of $81.50 per ton; but owing to the demands upon the different steel companies for raw material for munitions it was not possible to provide the new rails which were to replace the old, consequently the management of the government road was unable to carry out its contract as promptly as was necessary.

The minister of railways, however, recognizing the importance to the province of New Brunswick as well as to the Transcontinental road of having the Valley Railway completed as soon as possible, assured Mr. Carter that the rails necessary to make the connection would be forthcoming as early in the spring as they would be needed.

This was most satisfactory news as, fearing that it would be impossible to secure rails anywhere else the government at its last session took authority to commandeer the rails upon the Northern Sea Board Railway between Bathurst and the Gloucester country mines. This, however does not seem at all likely to be necessary now.

Little Winter Work.

The construction work upon the railway is about ended until the spring open up. Apart from some rip rap work and cleaning up there will be nothing of importance going on except the blasting in the big rock cut at Woodman's Point. Of course, the time for the completion of the road depends upon the general conditions that will be prevailing next spring, particularly with regard to labor but it is hoped to have the line completed as early as possible in 1918.

NOT NECESSARY.

A tight-fisted old man, feeling very sick, asked a friend to recommend a physician. The friend named a certain specialist.

"Is he very expensive?" asked the sick man.

"Well, not so very. He'll charge you $4 for the first visit, and $2 for each one after that."

The old fellow soon afterwards walked into the office of the physician named by his friend and upon being admitted to the consulting room plunked down $2, remarking:

"Well, doctor, here I am again."

The physician calmly picked up the money and put it in a drawer which he locked securely. The sick man looked on expectantly, awaiting the next move.

"Well, I'm ready to be examined," he said at length.

"I don't think it's necessary," replied the shrewd specialist. "There's no need to do it again. Keep right on taking the same medicine. Good-day, sir."

The Ultimate.

Re-Do you know what I am going to say to you? Deep ki.

Njs—Drop what?

Re—Everything—happiness and love and work and God knows what else is all so provincial. Even our dreams, but them be what they will, are provincial—yes, even our sufferings.

Njs—And what is there that isn't provincial?

Re—What! Art and death? No, and I feel! Only death.

Njs—Yes, I understand.

Re—You don't love me, Njs.

Njs—I love you very much. Really I do love you, only there is something that is more than love—something still higher.

Re—What's that, Njs?

Njs—No, there is something still higher.

Re—Than life, death and love?

Njs—Than all combined. There must surely be something; otherwise the whole thing would be so meaningless. From the Russian Play "Njs."

Grass on the Lawn.

Grass seeds germinate in from fourteen to eighteen days. A quart of seeds is sufficient to cover 300 square feet—15 by 20 feet. Five to six bushels are required per acre.

Do not sow grass seeds in hot, dry weather, particularly in July or August.

Poa trivialis is good for shady lawns under trees.

Festuca rubra is most suitable for hard wear and for dry or sandy soils. Sharp scum and applied lightly over lawns in the autumn—that is, over lawns on clay or loam—encourages the growth of the grasses.

Lawns that are frequently watered need more fertilizers than those that are not, as the water washes away much plant food.

END STOMACH TROUBLE. GASES OR DYSPEPSIA

"Pape's Diaphepsin" makes sick, sour, gassy stomachs surely feel fine in five minutes.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach-head-ache, you can get relief in five minutes by neutralizing acidity. Put an end to such stomach distress now by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diaphepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder caused by food fermentation due to excessive acid in stomach.

TO SAVE NEW BRUNSWICK FOREST SERVICE.

The chief power behind the circulating dollar in New Brunswick is the productive forest. To reduce the lumber cut automatically reduces the amount of money that is available for everyday business. It also means the reduction of provincial revenues, and the amount thus forfeited, would have to be raised by other kinds of public taxes. Employment likewise would take a permanent slump from which nothing could revive it.

In order to keep New Brunswick's forests contributing their utmost in money and employment, in thriving towns and busy industries, a movement is under way to have the Provincial Government reorganize the system of fire protection on all the timber lands. Fire has robbed New Brunswick of vast quantities of timber, from which no citizen derived a penny of benefit nor day's employment. The plan proposed by the Chief Forester and strongly supported by public bodies such as the Commission of Conservation and the Canadian Forestry Association, is to establish a system of fire districts, each in charge of a competent forester. Instead of locally-controlled fire wardens, as at present, there would be a centrally-controlled body of qualified men, under constant supervision and discipline. Such a system of fire rangers has been proved as the only workable and economical plan by Quebec, British Columbia and Ontario.

The rangers would perform their duties according to schedule, giving close account of their time, distances covered, fire uncovered, fire damage, etc. They would be assisted by observation towers, telephone lines and other auxiliary aids in controlling outbreaks of fire. To encounter the best rangers to remain with the Forest Service from year to year, the Chief Forester plans to utilize them for supervision of the cutting in fall and winter. This involves a new department for New Brunswick. It means that the Government would have much more thorough oversight of the quantities of logs cut on licensed lands and could make sound provision for the most careful treatment of the forest by laborers.

A feature of the plan of Forest Service reorganization now being considered by the Government is that with very little more than the present expenditure, New Brunswick can have a well-organized Forest Service second to none in Canada.

GOOD BUSINESS

"This clock of yours who answers the telephone is very whimsical."

"It is that."

"He fairly coaxes at you."

"Yes, he just calls him up four or five times a day. At first I thought I'd stop it, but now I guess I won't. Watching out for her keeps him keyed up to a jolly pitch."
