for grave reflection and philosophical investigation.

The movement to which we refer in one that tends to the dissolution rather than to the disruption of the British Colonial Empire in British North America. It is neither impried by vindintiveness nor fraught with violence. It is carned in its tone, but its earnestness gartakes of the wharneter of deliberativeness; it reasons, even though it may reason wrongly, and proceed from measuret premises to erroneous deductions. It is on this account that the Montreal address is entitled to a putient, and—we were almost saying—a measure the attention at our hands. It breathen no heatility agained the British Crown and people; on the contrary, it emphatically records the conductand kindly feeling of the Canadian people to both; it makes no vehement protestations of affection, for a democratic form of government; but simply rests its preference of republican institutions upon local and peculiar conductions; it advises acparation from England, as it suggests americation to the United States, from the motives by which are motives of acif-interest and self-advancement.

There was a time when as singular a document of treasure or of blood. If, indeed, with colonial dependence or independence there were indiscolarly bound up metropolitan prosperty or decay if it were tolerably clear that the preservation of conial empire would ensure the preservation of metropolitan greatness, and that the latter would, warne with the extinction of the former,—then such suggestions as the Montreal address contains would find no place in the directions, no sympathy in the feelings of people in England. They would one and all identify their interests and prosperity with that which their foreinthers were content to regard for and by itself, viz; the augumnacy of lengths powers. But the difference between them and their forefathers is, that they will count and ponder on that more vulgar balance of profit and loss which was forgotten by the generation which hailed the commencement and lamented the conclusion of the great American war. Is the retention of Canada profitable, will its loss be huttisf to England, is the question which Englishmen of the present day win put to themselves as the converse of this question which Englishmen of the present day win put to themselves as the converse of this question which Englishmen of the present day win put to themselves as the converse of this question which Englishmen of the present day win put to themselves as the converse of this question which Englishmen of the present day win put to themselves as the converse of this question which Englishmen of the present day win put to themselves as the converse of this question which Englishmen of the present day win put to themselves as the converse of this question where Englishmen of the present day win put to themselves as the converse of this question when Englishmen et al. ment. So far they roffer, in common with all our colonies, the effects of a bad, and obsolete colonias system. The change, however, is made. The colonists know that what has been done will not be undone, and that the grain cromed Western Ca-nada must compete in the markets of England with the grain crops of the United States, of Po-land, and of the whole world. They are sufficing from the revulsion. It has struck at their enter-prise, their capital, and their energies. They say prise, their capital, and their energies. They say that they have lost all the advantages, while they still suffer the burdens, of coloniats. Again, they complain of that which is to thom a grievance in, common with all other colonies. They are nobedies; they have no station, weight, or influence in Imperial councils and Imperial dignities. They are provincials, and provincials of a country which is but little known and loss appreciated in Great Britain. Their denators have no voice, their statemen no name in the parliament and political of a semi-populated province; or, if known, known only to be correed by the power or ridiculed by the sneers of officials at home. Aguin, they complain that, while on the other side of the American lorder every sign of mercantile prosperity, and every indication of natural entergies. der every sign of mercantile prospersty, and every indication of natural enterprise manifest themselves, on their side all his poverty, stagnation, and inertness; on the former innumerable railroads tesselate a country teeming with abundant harvests and busy with a thousand mills, while on their side a sterlility of an untilled soil is no less disheartening than the laziness of inactive hands or the want of capital to employ them. Of these three grievances thetwo former are real, the latter is only imaginary; and of those which are real, the first is only temporary. The prosperty which was forced by protection. Will revive, stowly indeed but surely, under the influence of competition. The energy and industry which have made the United States prosperous night have made Casada no less prosperous; the British Constitution has not checked them; the Colonnal-fibe has not stifled them. The English capital which showed so readily into the thankless treasuries of Indiana and Pennsylvania would have guished into the coffers of the Canadian fields his distribution for the propersor of the Canadian fields his distribution for the coffers of the Canadian fields his distributions. nisation and her large elements of the potent Irish colonists—has grown beyond the supes of his man anguine wellwishers within a very laref period of time. The principal impediment in the progress of the Annexation movement in Camada, has been the fear entertained by a large, portion of the inhabitants, that separation, in any form, would not be consteaumed by Great Britain, and that if it were strempted, it would be resisted and put down by military force. EXECUTION OF SMITH.

At a very early hour yesterday morning, large groups of people were to be seen making their way towards the New Jail, the place appointed for the execution of Smith, a soldier of the Ride Brigade, for shooting Eastwood, a private in the same regiment. The number of persons assembled to witness the fearful scene must have been over 3000, a large portion, we are ashamed to say, being women and children.

A few minutes before ten o'clock, the prisoner was led from the cells to the scaffold, preceded by the Sheriff, and other officers of justice. The unhappy man was extended during his last moments by the Rev. Messrs. Grasett and Mitchell, rimaters of the Church of England. The prisoner mounted the scaffold with a firm step, and seemed to survey the multifude ground him with much composure of mind, but he did not speak. He then knell down upon the drop, and the rope having been adjusted by the executioner, a prayer was read by Mr. Grassett, in which the prisoner seemed to join with feeling. After having engand for a few moments in derection, the signal was given by the Sheriff, the drop fell, and the unhappy man was hunched into dermity.

We are assured that Smith, for some days previous to his execution, gave strong evidence of deep and sincere repeatance for the crume which he committed; he freely acknowledged the justice of the punishment accorded to him for his crime, and seemed to repret that he did not plend guilty when arrained at the Bar of Justice. He middle to the minister who attended thin, that is would not have committed the murder had he not been under the influence of strong drink at the time, a fact which was not stated at his trial. It appears that he had attend to the minutes of strong drink at the imit, and seemed to repret that he that he are into of strong and saily excited passions, and whom a file the influence of strong drink, to have less all central over them. The control over them Siz.—I have great pleasure in informi g you of the great good your; zoelient COLORI LOZENKIED tave done me. In Deventuer, 1843, I caught a severy cold from riding two or three miles, one very westinght, which settled in my longs, and quite took away my voice, so that I could not speak above a whisper from that time until December last. I tried at kinds of imedicance, but they were of 55 avait. I was then advised to try your Lozenges, which I did only to please my friends; but before I had finished a 2s. 3d. tim, my voice, to my great joy, come back as strong as ever.

THE SALVE, prepared from the original recipe procured from a original fakim. The Proprietore, prompted by the very fluttering reception it has not with in the Methopolis, nave determined on extending its usefulness to all other parts of Canada y and, for that purpose, have established agencies with the principal Chies. They flatter thems was that when its wonderful properties shall become more generally known, they will meet with that encouragement which the introduction of such a valuable medicament into a country justly critice them. The contracted limits of an obvertiement necessarily precludes their sustening into any edunate detail of its merits, but, for the information of the yability, they intend to publish, from time so time, such attachments of zures as have or my concern, and for the present will content the and complete success.
