With "Paisley Flour"
you really can!

Perhaps you once tried to make cakes and pastry at home and were not successful.
Some ways are difficult, especially for beginners, but the "Paisley Flour" way is so easy you can hardly go wrong. Paisley Flour is mixed dry one part with eight parts of ordinary flour. This done you are sure of light and well raised cakes and scones, and pastry free from doughiness.
Begin to-day with one of the recipes in the "Paisley Flour" tins and you will find that
"you really can."
Sold in 22c, 14c, and 5c tins. The 22c tin contains 14 ozs. and will raise 7 lbs. of ordinary flour.

CHAPTER XVIII.
The Viper in the Breast.

Once with him in the carriage, she laid her head upon his breast and wept with an anguish Robert felt was this time only too genuine. He did not question her until they were at home. Then she told him all; and Robert listened gravely, with that inward passion which reveals itself without words. He did not reproach Ambrosia. He felt that her imprudence had been punished cruelly enough. He believed her fully when she declared she had done nothing, said nothing, looked nothing, to merit such words. He had only a passing thought of the many women in the room who had done, said and looked, and who had yet escaped all condemnation; and the injustice of circumstances made him sigh.

As for St. Ange, he felt for him a contempt which scarcely required hatred to increase it. He talked the night away with Ambrosia, soothing her, reasoning with her, advising her. But he longed for the morning. He wanted to kick the wretch out of his life. He was angry at Will for bringing him into it; angry at himself for enduring the man so long. How many quarrels he had caused! How much suffering and heartache had had their rise in his hateful presence! He felt his own wrongs bitterly also; for he had really been generous to the creature, and yet he was accused of stealing his ideas! Miss Saltar had snatched the words to Ambrosia, and she would not hesitate to say them to others.

All night he kept his sorrowful session with Ambrosia; and when at length she fell asleep with exhausted nerves, he was more alive than ever he remembered being before. Sleep was his last thought and last necessity. He was in a fever of insulted manhood. He radiated anger from every point. His eyes were on fire, his hands twitching. His controlled passion dominated every other desire. He wanted no food, no papers or letters. He wanted nothing but the lover which would bring the measureless villain to his presence.

St. Ange entered the office insolently and ready for the fray. Robert said only:

"The time has come for us to part. There is the money I owe you."

Nerves at High Tension

Slight extra strain means collapse—Restoration obtained by using DR. A.W. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.
The successful man and woman are often of the high-strung nervous type—keen and active—but with too little reserve force.
A little extra worry and anxiety and snap out the nervous system. Weeks and months are often required before energy and vigor are regained.
Rest helps, so does fresh air and exercise, but the blood must also be made rich and red by use of DR. A. W. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.
Mr. Wm. Branton, Victoria St., Stratford, Ont., writes:—My nervous system seemed all unstrung. I could not sleep, had no appetite, my digestion was poor and I had jerking of the limbs. DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD helped me and I continued until I had taken twenty-four boxes. This treatment has made a radical change in my condition, building up the system and strengthening the nerves. DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD, 50 cents a box, all dealers or Edman-son, Bates & Co., Toronto.

"It is far too little. You have always underpaid me, and you have stolen my ideas quite long enough."
The wickedness of the two charges almost strangled Robert, though he was somewhat prepared for them. But he did not design to answer them. He turned to his desk and began to write. St. Ange had now his opportunity, and whatever his wicked heart could devise, his wicked tongue uttered. And Robert felt that he could have nothing to say to such abuse; could not enter into controversy with so vile a foe about the honor of his wife and the integrity of himself. Under the circumstances, defense would have been excuse; and excuse would have been self-accusation. But his position was a moral piety, in which he took lash after lash with apparent indifference; because he knew right well that retaliation would be unpeppable degradation.

But oh, how he suffered! The almost miraculous strain under which he took his punishment was a year's aging, and all the time his body winced and trembled, his conscience reminded him that it was his own fault! Even after his tormentor had gone away, he sat for two hours thinking—and thinking, without definite idea either—the past or the future. He appeared to be writing, but he did not make a letter. In a troubled, torrid way he was feeling all the wicked and cruel positions St. Ange could put Ambrosia and himself into—feeling savagely his own blindness and indifference—trying to calculate the advantages he had permitted this stranger to take not only in his domestic concerns but in his business. He knew that both alike were at the mercy of a scoundrel's scornful word and smile.

For some hours he endured such self-reproach and remorse as spirits who have outlived their opportunities may feel; and in the whole affair he could find for himself no comfort but the fact that he had at least preserved his self-respect and kept his temper under an outrageous temptation to degrade his reputation by words or acts which would bring him down to the level of his foe.

"I answered him never a word, Ambrosia," he said, when his wife questioned him. "That is a little comfort to me; but, six, I could take a year to cease him and then not be satisfied."

CHAPTER XIX.
"Clear Shining After Rain."
At noon.
Lulls us to rest with songs and turns away
All shafts of shelterless, tumultuous day—Rossett.

During the first day of acute humiliation Ambrosia had received a little comfort from the practical sympathy of Clara. She called very early in the morning and offered to come at once to Dr. Carter's house. But Ambrosia felt that this would be a false step.
"I have done nothing, Clara," she said, "that calls for the support of your presence. If you made this change, every one would say I anticipated neglect or scorn. I am sure it is best for Robert and myself to be sufficient for each other."
"When I shall go to Mayberry, Bessie has been too absolute for some time. I will not any longer appear to sanction the crude cruelties and insolence of her youth and inexperience. When she is older, she will likely be sweeter; now she has all the acrid rancors of her years."

"Are the young necessarily cruel?"
"There are beautiful exceptions to a general rule; yet young girls are generally without pity. There is no question about it. Their want of experience makes them hard to sorrow; they cannot understand. They say the most scornful things to their friends; they even hurt and humiliate their own mothers. They are assertive and aggressive, because their instinctive selfishness prompts them to taking all and giving nothing. A young girl is a cruel creature, Ambrosia, but a young matron is frequently much worse. Bessie's conduct last night was a piece of brutality, and I have told her so. What right had she and Miss Saltar to put St. Ange in such a position. It was an interference with Doctor Carter's household and business that was unwarrantable. I do not say that she contemplated St. Ange's insult to you; she thought of nothing but the little ripple of interest it would give to her party. People who talked of it would naturally talk of her. That was as far as her reasoning went. How much St. Ange's wife would suffer at the time from the shock or afterward from anger, she declined to take into consideration. And yet, had any one so interfered in her affairs, she would have babbled about it as an inconceivable outrage."

"I am sure Uncle Madison was angry at her last night."
"He is very angry, indeed. Jack poor fellow, thinks and speaks as directly as I can. Come to Mayberry with me for a few days."
"No, dear, I will not run away from a mouthful of bad words. Words will not slay me. And Robert has been so kind and just in the matter. Perhaps this very trouble may draw us close together again. If so, I will thank God for it. At any rate, I will take what opportunities it offers."
"That is right. Bessie and Jack, Will and Louisa are talking of Europe this summer. They will make a party of their own. Bessie may find some changes when she comes back. She had been so tyrannical in her home, that her father is beginning to rebel against her."

"Clara, you do not believe anything wrong of me, do you?"
"I believe in your innocence to the uttermost. I am sorry that for any cause you showed St. Ange more attention lately. I must tell you that some accuse you of flirting with him."
"Who of our set has not flirted with him? And if I did so, it was for the purpose of outwitting Robert's love."
"Well, my dear, a bad road never leads to a good place; and in flirting you cannot go on with what you never begin. There ought to be no suspicion about a wife's conduct."
"You are so old-fashioned, Clara. My dear, purity and honor are never old-fashioned. When they are so, good men and women may break their hearts and go out of the world."

Louisa and Will followed Clara; and Will's anger at Bessie's and Louisa's womanly criticisms of her conduct were a little consolation.
"Bessie has such a high opinion of herself," said Louisa, "and the world has caught this opinion from her. But I wish she had fewer virtues and more amiability. I will tell you something about Bessie. After her last ball, I found her writing a description of it for the Home Journal, and she had incidentally remarked that she 'looked lovely.' Think of such courages!"
Ambrosia smiled; and Will put his thumb in his vest and strutted out with an affection of weariness:
"Oh, for an age so sheltered from annoy
That I may never know how change the moons
Or hear the voice of women's defamation."

It struck Ambrosia, however, that Will and Louisa treated the affair with two little interest. Yet it was a difficult visit to pay, and very likely they felt relieved when it was over. Then the day went wearily on until Robert's return home. And he was silent with wrath and not inclined to talk before dinner had lubricated his feelings. Then it was different. He told Ambrosia all he had longed to say to St. Ange, and found solid comfort in this explanation of himself. Still there was an unhappy, restless atmosphere in the house and a weight on each bosom that sympathy did not lighten.

On the third morning the premonitory unhappiness was explained. The doctor found in his morning paper a letter from St. Ange, claiming the discoveries already linked with Dr. Carter's name, and boldly accusing the doctor of taking advantage of his poverty to appropriate experiments he himself was incapable of making. For this end, he averred, he had been poorly paid and kept in poverty; every advantage having been taken of his being a stranger without friends and without knowledge of the peculiarities of Northern life and practice.

8876.—A DAINTY DRESS FOR THE LITTLE GIRL.

Child's Yoke Dress.
For lawn or dimity, with lace or embroidery for decoration, this design will be found very effective. It is also suitable for cashmere, poplin, challis, silk or wash fabrics. The pointed yoke portions may be finished in round or square neck outline, or with a collar. The fullness of the skirt is arranged in box plaits over the front and back. The Pattern is cut in 3 sizes: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 years. It requires 2 1/2 yards of 36 inch material for the 3 year size.
A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.
Suitable materials for any of these patterns can be procured from AYRES & SONS, Ltd. Samples on request. Mention pattern number. Mail orders promptly attended to.

8880.—LADIES CORSET COVER.

A well shaped corset cover of simple construction is here illustrated. The shield shaped sleeves trimmed with lace are an attractive feature but they may be omitted. The pattern provides for either tucks or gathers in the front, and a tape inserted in a casing at the waistline adjusts the fullness about the waist. The materials used for these garments are linen, batiste, lawn, dimity and China silk. The Pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 inches bust measure. It requires 1 1/8 yards of 36 inch material for the Medium size.
A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

CHRONIC BRONCHITIS

Cannot be cured with ordinary soothing syrups. The disease must be attacked at the root to eradicate the irritation of the lungs, heal the wounds and strengthen the respiratory organs. The composition of of Tar and Cod Liver Oil and other Medicinal Extracts marks it amongst all other remedies as the true specific for the diseases of the throat, the bronchial tubes and the lungs. Here are a few conclusive proofs:

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

That, I think, must be news. So many people seem not to know it. There is an otherwise well-bred young girl among my acquaintances who is forever talking about how homely her nose is. Now the nose is not a Grecian, neither is it anything so startling that people would think about it if they were not so frequently reminded of it.

Indeed, the nose itself is not half so bad as her habit of talking about it. It is perpetually "What would you do if you had a nose like mine?" or "I really think I would be almost good looking if it were not for my nose." Her friends are kept continually protesting and comforting until they learn to steer carefully clear of the subject of noses in particular and personal appearances in general.

Aside from the fact that this habit of running one's self down is bad policy, because it concentrates other people's attention to deficiencies they might otherwise not have thought much about, it is also bad taste because it holds people up for comment and reassurances at the pistol point of common decency. And people as a rule somehow seem to resent such hold-ups. The girl who is always referring openly to some deficiency in herself probably thinks she deserves praise for frankness, but as a matter of fact, she deserves blame for indulging in frankness at the expense of making other people feel awkward and uncomfortable.

She wants people to know that she is not conceited and that she fully realizes that she is decidedly plain or overgrown and awkward, or that her nose is too large or her skin is sallow, but since this opportunity to prove her own self-knowledge and lack of conceit involves the discomfort of others, she would do well to forego it.

To keep one's deficiencies is desirable. To keep quiet about one's knowledge is equally so.

Improve your deficiencies when you can.

Ignore them—that is, don't think about them and don't force other people to, when you can't.

Admit your deficiencies if you are ever taxed with them, but never unnecessarily drag them into the limelight.

There seems to me some pretty healthy rules to follow in this matter.

Ruth Cameron

When You Think

Of the pain which many women experience with every mouth it makes the gentleness and kindness always associated with womanhood seem to be almost a miracle. While in general no woman rebels against what she regards as a natural necessity there is no woman who would not gladly be free from this recurring period of pain.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well, and gives them freedom from pain. It establishes regularity, subdues inflammation, heals ulceration and cures female weakness.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence strictly private and sacredly confidential. Write without fear and without fee to World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

If you want a book that tells all about woman's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 31 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing copy, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to-date edition, in paper covers. In handsome cloth-binding, 50 stamps.

Household Notes.

A tasty salad is made of cold-boiled oyster plant, cut in pieces, pieces of cold-boiled beets and sprays of cauliflower, dressed with oil and vinegar or with mayonnaise.

It is an excellent plan to cut the stems of flowers with a sharp knife rather than a scissors. Scissors compress the stems and close the tiny pores to the life-giving water.

If a simple brown frame for a photograph seems too dark, it may be greatly lightened by introducing a tiny moulding of gold just inside the inner edge of the frame.

New shoes should be allowed to stand over night in a pan in which just enough olive oil to cover the soles has been poured. They will last much longer and will never squeak.

Embroidered table linens should never be folded when put away, but rolled in a long roll with tissue paper rolled up with it. This will save a great amount of pressing.

When making lemonade one of the lemons may be peeled and run through a meat chopper with a small piece of the peel. This will give the lemonade a delightfully piquant flavor.

Clear soup should be strained without forcing through a folded towel, laid on a colander; otherwise particles of egg used in clearing will be forced through and spoil the soup.

Keep a bottle of coal oil on the shelf in the bath-room, and make it a rule that each member of the family, when the bath is finished shall wipe out the tub with an oiled rag.

To take away grease out of goods, rub the spot with lard. Rub the goods in the hand as if washing. Let stay in three hours, and then wash out in cold water, using plenty of soap.

In making a shoe bag or laundry bag that is to hang flat against the door, use brass rings instead of loops for slipping over the nails. They will not pull out as the loops may.

When preparing fish for broiling, split it open down the back. After washing and drying on a cloth, rub the fish well with oil and flour. This prevents it slipping from the broiler.

For toast to be served with poached eggs, cut out the centre of slices of bread with a round biscuit cutter; toast these rounds either in the oven or over the coals before buttering them.

Rice should be thoroughly washed before cooking, as this cereal nowadays is often coated with a preparation to improve its appearance. It will cook better if it is soaked for 30 minutes.

Minard's Liniment Co. Limited, Gentlemen.—Theodore Danais, a customer of mine, was completely cured of rheumatism after five years of suffering by the judicious use of MINARD'S LINIMENT.

Wants the Cash.

San Francisco, Feb. 25.—Jack Johnson has turned down Hugh McIntosh's offer of a $30,000, split 60 and 40 to meet Sam Langford. Johnson says he is willing to fight if guaranteed $30,000 for his end of the purse, but not otherwise.

He also objects to Eugene Corro, the London referee whom McIntosh suggested as the third man in the ring for a battle to take place in London or Paris in May or June.

Rev. Canon Dunfield Laid to Rest.

At 3 p.m. yesterday the funeral of the late lamented Rev. Canon Dunfield took place from the Rectory (St. Thomas's) to the cemetery on Forest Road. For an hour previous crowds of citizens had been wending their way towards the Parish Church, and by 2 o'clock the place was filled with visitors. The body of the Rector lay in the chancel, covered with choice flowers and wreaths from hundreds of friends all over the city. Amongst those who were present were His Excellency the Governor, Lady Williams, Capt. Goodridge, A.D.C., Mr. Fitzherbert, Private Secretary to His Excellency, Sir E. P. Morris, Premier; Hon. W. R. Warren, Speaker of the House of Assembly, and the members of both branches of the Legislature; Chief Justice Horwood, Judge Johnson, Judge Emerson and representative clergymen from all the religious denominations. Rev. Henry Uphill, Rector of St. Mary's, read the opening sentences and Psalm of the burial service. Hymn 283 was then sung.

"God of the living, in whose eyes Unveiled Thy whole creation lies; All souls are thine; we must not say That those are dead who pass away; From this our world of flesh set free, We know them living unto Thee."

The Lesson 1 Cor. 15: 20 was read by Rev. G. H. Bolt, M.A. Hymn 451 was then sung: "Jesus, my Shepherd, here I know, He knoweth all my needs; And when the living waters flow His flock He gently leads."

The organ then pealed forth the Dead March in Saul, the whole congregation standing the while. The procession then passed out of the sanctuary to the cemetery in the following order:

- Choir of St. Thomas. Theological students. Clergy in robes. The Hearse. Relatives of deceased. Church Warden of St. Thomas's. His Excellency the Governor, A.D.C. and Private Secretary. Officers of the C.L.B. Church Lads' Brigade.

After these came the general public of all classes and creeds. The procession advanced from the church down Military Road and Forest Road to the cemetery. Both sides of the street were thronged with a vast crowd of sympathetic people—men, women and children. Rev. Canon White read the committal prayers at the graveside. Then followed the hymn which had been a favorite with the deceased, "Jesus lover of my soul." Rev. F. Colley, of Carbonear, pronounced the Benediction.

Sealers Notice.

All men who intend leaving for the sealfishery should take with them one or more bottles of "Stafford's Liniment," the Queen of Liniments (at 14 cents a bottle).

You will be surprised with its marvellous results. When rubbed to the wrists, arms, ankles and legs, it will not only enable you to travel on the ice faster, yes, faster even than the seals themselves, but it will relieve the tired muscular tissues of the limbs, the result of excessive walking and hauling. Once you have applied it to your wrists and ankles you will never again think of proceeding to the fishery without a good supply. It is worth its weight in gold. It should always be in every household as it is also one of the best preparations for the following diseases:—Zarchie, Headache, Toothache, Faeache, Neuralgia, Wounds and all Skin Diseases, as Itch, Acne, Ringworm, Barber's Itch, Eczema, Hay Fever, Burns, Scalds, Excessive Sweating on body or feet, Diphtheria, Croup, Catarrh Sore Throat, Laryngitis, Hoarseness, Quinsy, Mumps, Bronchitis, Pleurisy, Pneumonia, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Colic, Cramps, Wind, Diarrhoea, Florida, Piles, Rheumatism, Lombago, Sciatica, Strains, Bruises, Sprains, Corns, Warts, Tender Feet, Chills, Bolls, Bites of Animals, Stings of Insects, Chapped Skin, Worms, Poisoned Wounds, Carbuncle, Swollen Muscles. This Liniment can be used internally as well as externally. Prepared only by DE. E. STAFFORD & Son, St. John's, Nfld.

An attempt to assassinate King Alfonso was narrowly frustrated yesterday at Alcazar de San Juan. An anarchist plotter had made plans to kill Alfonso when he arrived at a point on the Royal train when coming from Spain. Only a few hours before the train was due at Alcazar de San Juan the authorities learned of the conspiracy and arrested the would-be assassin just as he was leaving his home to go to the railway station. He had been chosen by lot to attempt the life of the King. The train arrived fifteen minutes after the anarchist had been arrested. The prisoner was brought to Madrid, and the authorities expect to ascertain the names of the leaders in a widespread revolutionary conspiracy. The prisoner attempted suicide after his arrest.

Wednesday, March 8, 1911.

In the Assembly.

Another quiet session was that of yesterday afternoon. Proceedings opened at 4.30.

Mr. Kent asked the Minister of Agriculture and Mines on Monday for reports from Agricultural Societies, and also from Messrs. Downey, Devereaux and Seymour on agriculture, and they will be tabled shortly. Information asked by the same from the Minister of Public Works for expenditure on roads at Conception Harbor from March 1st, 1910 to date was given him, as well as particulars of amounts paid to Messrs. Sullivan, Treahy and Larrey, of Conception Harbor, for same period.

Progress was made in committee on the Crown Lands Bill and Agricultural Resolutions.

The Explosives Bill was referred to committee when Mr. Kent took exception to the arbitrary power conferred on inspectors in their relation with manufacturers and those dealing in explosives, and wherein a penalty of $500 may be imposed for infractions of the law.

The Premier replied that inspectors would be well instructed in their duties by the Government Engineer, and would make no unreasonable demands on dealers in or handlers of explosives. There were the courts to appeal to.

Mr. Kent held that Mr. Hall had already too much work to attend to this business. He thought also some provision should be made in the Bill to protect owners and holders of explosives against unreasonable enquiries from unskilled inspectors.

The Bill passed with some amendments and will be read a third time to-day.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on the Motor Vehicle Bill.

Mr. Bennett denied the right of the Council to tax owners of motors who resided in places outside the city and who used only the district roads, the Council had no jurisdiction over them. The Council would be acting within its rights where the streets or roads of the city were concerned but not elsewhere.

The Premier was only asked to bring in the Bill, but would take no responsibility for it.

Mr. Kent agreed with Mr. Bennett. All cars should be registered, but that was a matter of detail. The principal question was the fee, and that section dealing with it should apply to any car owner using the city streets.

Mr. Squires contended that motors go to Conception and Trinity Bays use the roads and damage the bridges, and suggested that the tax should be placed in a fund at the Public Works Department and that a proportionate part should go for the upkeep of the roads and bridges of the districts through which the cars pass.

Mr. Bennett agreed with Mr. Squires, but the Premier thought to make such a division among districts and settlements would not be feasible but would be absurd.

The Speaker had seen the effects of cars on bridges and roads in his district, favoured a Government tax, and as only the main line roads were used, thought that in future the sums collected should amount to at least one-sixth of the special grants. He would impose a nominal tax on owners of cars using them as a means of livelihood and a heavier tax on those driving for pleasure.

Mr. Kent believed the Council was only looking after their own interests within their own jurisdiction, but he thought that the benefits of the Act should be extended to other parts of the country. The Committee rose and reported progress.

The Education Bill went through Committee Stage.

The Colonial Secretary laid on the table the P. M. G.'s report for 1910.

The House adjourned till 3 p.m. to-day.

More May Leave.

Besides the five officers who have quitted the police force the past two days, it is rumoured that several others will tender their resignations intending to take up more remunerative avocations. This is a serious matter for the city, as with the exception of the non-commissioned officers only a few of the rank and file now left have been in the force for long.

The great trouble is the low rate of wages, and unless something is done to increase the stipend paid the men St. John's may be minus an adequate police force in the near future.

The Reception announced to take place at Government House, on Thursday, the 9th instant, will be postponed until further notice in consequence of the death of Canon Dunfield.

SEALERS ENTERTAINED IN T. A. HALL.

An annual entertainment by the "Picnic Party" for the sealers has now become a recognized institution, and therefore when last night's show in the T. A. Hall opened up there was a fairly large attendance of the bone and sinew. When the curtain went up the men had the pleasure of seeing a veritable variety show with the Big Chief as "Bro. Johnsting" and the others of the party taking the chorus parts of the solos delivered by Messrs. Morison, Watson, Piccott, Devereaux, Seymour, Parsons, Blandford, Cashin and Squires. The Premier was to the fore and told how busy he has been for some time past at the work of saving the country, but forgot to state that his trips to the Hague and Washington had cost his audience and the rest of the country the tidy figure of $9,500, which would crop the crews of three fair sized steamers. The men "didn't" enthuse worth a cent, and the plaudits uttered by the Premier didn't awaken anything like the response of 4 years ago in the British Hall. The same speech has been declared by the Premier annually during the past four years before the sealers, and other audiences have been similarly jaded, so that a sigh of relief went up when all the hot air was exhausted. The sealers, who have been reading in the Telegram the misdeeds of the Government and have been noting their propensity to squander the taxes rung from them, now see the other side of the shield, and the speech as far as applause went fell upon stony soil. That the Premier was painfully conscious of this was evident to all present. Messrs. Morison, Watson, Piccott, Devereaux, Parsons, Seymour, Blandford, Cashin and Squires contributed select pieces, but there was nothing new in them and they were also unproductive of applause. First a few moving pictures were thrown on the screen it would have relieved the monotony, but this was forgotten. The sealers waited patiently hoping to hear some explanation as to why the Government sent to Greensport policemen to have several men brought like criminals in chains to the Court House in St. John's before Judge Conroy because they made a laudable attempt to have the Sabbath Day kept. The men further expected to be enlightened as to why those men were not tried before the Magistrate in their own town. Several were heard to say that this matter will have to be answered at another time. The show was anything but the success the Government anticipated.

A BROKEN-DOWN SYSTEM. This is a condition (or disease) which doctors give many names, but which few of them really understand. It is simply weakness—a break-down in the vital forces that sustain the system. No matter what may be its causes (for they are almost numberless), its symptoms are much the same: the more prominent being sleeplessness, sense of prostration or weariness, depression of spirits and want of energy for all the ordinary duties of life. Now, what alone is absolutely essential in all such cases is a new vitality—VITAL STRENGTH & ENERGY.

To throw off these morbid feelings, and experience proves that as night succeeds the day this may be more certainly secured by a course of the celebrated life-restoring tonic—THERAPION No. 3.

Tells How A Berth

This is the thickest proposition ever we struck, said Mrs. Tucker getting a berth for "Jim" Tucker. Mrs. Tucker sat at the head of the old square table, her hands crossed and resting upon it. She was in a flannel dress, with the collar flaring at the neck, and she wore a best brooch, the big one with the tail of a deer in the center, her eyes sparkling and span new, and Tucker in a whisper told the captain what last Saturday night at St. John's.

She looked like a queen at the head of the table, and her face showed she was working her brains for what were worth.

"They're a pretty generous set them captains," says the "Cute Man" without taking his eyes from the paper, "and I haven't the shadow a doubt but you'd strike a berth Jim if you went about it the way."

Mrs. Tucker looked anxiously in the face of the "Cute Man" while he spoke his voice. She was anxious to see way out of the difficulty, and now he was done talking and had nothing, she turned away from him with disgust.

A ray at the door announced the rival of a new-comer. Mrs. T.

Tells How Mrs. Tucker Got A Berth For "Jim."

This is the toughest proposition ever we struck, said Mrs. Tucker, this getting a berth for "Jim."

Mrs. Tucker sat at the head of the old square table, her hands joined and resting upon it. She was toggled off in her Sunday dress, with the white frilling at the neck, and she wore the best brooch, the big one with the head of a deer in the centre; her apron was spick and span new, and Tucker told us in a whisper that she grabbed it last Saturday night at Steers Grab Sale.

She looked like a queen at the head of the table, and her face showed she was working her brains for what they were worth.

Scattered around the table were Tucker, Delaney and myself, while the "Cute Man" sat over by the stove on a stool and was reading the Telegram. Mrs. Tucker's eyes glared at Delaney's eyes glared at Tucker. The Cute Man looks no paper, he is one of the many who'll go a mile for the "lend" of a paper, and one of the first to grumble if the paper isn't out on a holiday.

"It's getting a pretty hard show for a St. John's man," says Tucker, "to know that there's no berth for you or your son if you be so unfortunate as to be born south of Cape St. Francis. Why they tell me the captains have all to do with it this year, and the owners are leaving it all in their hands."

"They're a pretty generous crowd, them captains," says the Cute Man, without taking his eyes from the paper, "and I haven't the shadow of a doubt but you'd strike a berth for Jim if you went about it the right way."

Mrs. Tucker looked anxiously in the face of the Cute Man while he pitched his voice. She was anxious to see a way out of the difficulty, and now that he was done talking and had said nothing, she turned away from him with disgust.

A rap at the door announced the arrival of a new-comer, Mrs. Tucker swept across the floor like a snow-sweeper and admitted Jim.

He sauntered in with his cap in his hand and enough snow on his boots to give forty children the whooping cough.

"Well, Jim," says Tucker, "what luck?"

There's a chance, said Jim, with Capt. Barbour if all his crew don't come, but he won't be able to give us an answer afore Wednesday.

The Cute Man drew over near Jim and scrutinized him, looked him up and down, as if to see was there anything wrong with him. He beheld a fine able-bodied young man, fully six feet two in his stocking vamps, well proportioned and evidently as strong as a lion.

"What's wrong with you?" asked the Cute Man. "Why don't they give you a berth? Do you refuse to be vaccinated or have you palpitation of the heart? What's wrong with you?"

He turned Jim around. What's the matter that you can't get a show?"

"We have no time to waste dealing with such questions," said Mrs. Tucker, "what we want is a berth and we're not going to lose time looking for reasons just now. Ye men ain't worth a collier's curse on a job of this kind, and I intend to start out on the warpath myself in the morning, and by hook or by crook, Jim's got to get a berth or I'll know the reason why."

Mrs. Tucker slept little; she planned and planned her cutest plans, and at daylight she was on the go. Great men, she said, never let sleep bother 'em when there's anything big on, and 'tis just the same with me. Who'd ever think 'twould be so hard for a St. John's man to get a berth, and yet these outboard men say that we are hard on 'em. I'd like to see the boot on the other foot and the St. John's men going down to the outport and grabbing up every thing. Do you think they'd allow it? Well, I guess not, and I'm beginning to think that there were no good around here. We simply howl that all's, but as the Yankees say, 'there's nothin' to it."

A bang of the door that meant business and Mrs. Tucker stumbled over the gallery and nearly carried away her left eye against the railing, but she sprang herself by catching the post, and tore her forty-five cents pair of gloves in the effort. I wish said she, that all half-fools like Jim were exported; why can't they get a gait on and get jobs for themselves; why am I cracking my neck about it, simply because I'm "half-off" myself. Tucker never did give me much trouble, but he'd be in the Poor House to-day if it wasn't for me. Half the men in the country would be on the rocks if they hadn't us women to guide 'em.

She headed straight down Duckworth Street, and met many she knew, but none of them was worth their salt, as far as getting a berth was concerned. The thought occurred to her that she'd go down and see Sir Edward. She was slightly acquainted with him. She had heard him "spout," as she said herself, the first time when he spoke out of poor Owen Keen's window on Adelaide Street. She remembered that night as if 'twas yesterday, and she recalls the speech often vividly in her mind. Times were different in St. John's then, and there was a more brotherly and sisterly love, not on the surface like enamel on a stove, but a true, good feeling more solid than the stove itself.

"I'll go down and see him, anyway," said she, "and if I don't get the berth itself 'twill be a good excuse for me to get a peep at the Court House on the inside. And think be to goodness, said she, I was never inside a Court House, or one belonging to me, in all my life, and 'tisn't every one that's got that to say."

When she arrived at the Court House 'twas half-past ten, and she entered the Duckworth Street door. Everything was extremely quiet, not a sound to be heard, of a human being in sight.

"What time do they come to work around here? Why there's Tucker he has half a day's work done by this time. 'Tis great to have a Government job."

She moved along cautiously through the long hall and peeped into the Supreme Court. How silent it was and the atmosphere seemed to make her feel a sense of dread. There were the judges' seats, the jury box and the witness stand. The clock ticked a mournful tone and struck the half-hour, as much as to say beware. She closed the door, but the sharp click of the knob seemed to frighten her. This is a dreadful place, she says, and goodness help the poor unfortunate that has to stand his trial. Turning around she spied an old friend in the person of Mr. Burke.

There is HEALTH and STRENGTH in every cup of EPPS'S COCOA. Children thrive on "EPPS'S." GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING

"Hello," says he, "Mrs. Tucker, what are you doing here, paying the license for your crackle or trying to get your coat out of pound?"

"Hello, Jim," says she, "is it yourself? Why you're looking as smart as you did twenty years ago? I'm looking for Sir Edward," says she, "but there's no sign of anyone like him around these quarters."

"Oh, you're in the wrong part of the ship, go down over the hill and go in by the door leading from Water Street."

Mrs. Tucker set sail after thanking her guide, and soon was trudging over the hill. At the bottom of the steps was a number of sealers, joking and laughing as gay as larks on a summer's morning. They had struck their berths and she wished she was as happy. She climbed the steps and was soon at the door of Sir Edward's office; and now that she had reached her destination she felt dismayed. She rapped at the door and a boy came. "Is Sir Edward in," she asked, half doubting whether the boy would tell her the truth or not.

"Come inside, ma'am," said he, "and take a seat. He'll be along in a few minutes."

Mrs. Tucker entered and took the seat pointed out, and the boy went out and closed the door. She gazed around in astonishment; she was in the Premier's office; books and papers were strewn around on all sides; big long glass cupboards were chock full of books, and she pitied Sir Edward for having to learn them all off by heart. She wondered who was the happiest, the sealer with his berth and his well-filled pipe, or the man occupying the responsible position of Premier. She decided in favour of the former, and was just going over to examine the carpet when she heard footsteps approaching the door. She slipped back in the chair, joined her hands and put on a face like the last rose of summer.

"Good morning," said Sir Edward, "I hope I haven't kept you long waiting."

"Well, Sir Edward," said she, "I'm here on a mission which I have no use for, but necessity knows no law I came down to see if you would be good enough to give me a berth for 'Jim,' a berth to the ice I mean."

Sir Edward said, "The Government's not sending any steamer to the ice as far as I know; I am therefore powerless in granting your request."

The answer was so business-like that it knocked Mrs. Tucker out for the moment, but she soon regained the use of her tongue.

"I know the Government don't, as a rule, send steamers to the ice, but I know that you can use your influence and get 'Jim' a berth if you will."

"My dear madam," said Sir Edward, "I have carried a constituency for the last twenty-six years; I've carried my point at the Hague; I've made forty speeches at dinners and otherwise in the one week; I've talked three-parts of the country into my way of thinking; I've done all this, but get a berth to the ice, that task is too heavy for me and I am utterly unable to accomplish it."

There was an awkward silence during which Mrs. Tucker pulled off her glove and let the strings of her bonnet loose. Sir Edward noticed this and realized he had struck the limit in persistency.

"I'll tell you," said he, "we are looking for a man to fill the vacancy in the Savings Bank. It's a hard job to get

Now Cured of Rheumatism

Cost him $100.00 for medicines which failed—Cured by DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Mr. James Clark, Middlesex, Sask., writes: "I suffered for four years with rheumatism in my shoulders and could not lift my arms above the head. I tried nearly all the advertised remedies but none of them gave me relief. It cost me at least $100.00 for medicines before I used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

"With the use of this medicine, I soon found relief. I followed up this treatment for six months and was then quite free from rheumatism. While using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills I also used Dr. Chase's Backache Plaster when so stiff that I could scarcely bend. They always found the weak spot and gave relief while the internal treatment was bringing about a thorough cure."

The success of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills has been phenomenal. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Dr. Chase's Recipes will be sent on request.

a man to take it, and maybe "Jim" would be good enough to fill the position."

Mrs. Tucker was too shrewd not to see the joke. Sir Edward was no stranger to her, and she was bound to get square with him.

"Well, I have an idea, Sir Edward," said she, "that a man to fill that job would require to have a glossy bald head, nice white whiskers and his face well groomed; he would need to be able to walk good and solid, with a pair of heavy well shined boots, and have an aristocratic cough and a lot of hanged-on relations. Our 'Jim' has none of these qualifications, therefore 'twould be useless to appoint him."

Sir Edward seemed to enjoy her brilliancy, for he laughed heartily. You're the proper kind of woman for a job like this, said he, and you certainly deserve to win. I'll tell you, said he, there's a vacancy in the night boat, send 'Jim' down and we'll give him the berth.

Mrs. Tucker smiled her sweetest smile, stood up and thanked the Premier.

"I have come out triumphant," said she, "I have secured a berth for Jim, not to the ice, but a Government Berth for life."

She hailed Mike Kelly and drove home as proud as a successful candidate after the declaration of the Poll.

Marquis a Smugler.

A Dangerous Smuggling Game Carried on Along Italy's Frontier.

Marquis Gino Capponi, a member of a famous old Florentine family of that name, has been arrested at Varese, Italy, under extraordinary circumstances.

To retrieve his family fortunes, the Marquis, who is now 54 years of age, placed himself at the head of a powerful band of smugglers, mostly of Neapolitan origin, operating on the Italo-Swiss-Austrian frontiers with ramifications in most of the big Italian towns. The Marquis was condemned by the criminal courts last May, but managed to elude capture by fleeing to Lugano. He continued to superintend daring incursions of his armed bands into Italy, carrying cargoes of contraband tobacco, choice lace, watches, coffee, sugar, and huge quantities of saccharine, which were distributed by parcel post to hundreds of agents.

For several months hardly a night passed without an exchange of shots between the Customs guards and the smugglers, who usually number from thirty to a hundred, and who, to enter Italy must scale or penetrate a thick fence of metal net work twelve feet high extending all along the border line, and wherefrom numerous bells are suspended, whose least tinkle serves to arouse the guards.

The captured Marquis foolishly led in person one such expedition, into

Our London Letter.

LONDON, Feb. 15, 1911.

Another voyage over! Again we have sighted land and sent the mystic Marconigram thrilling across the waves to those we've left behind us!

Again we have had the usual concert, which winds up the voyage, the proceeds of which always go to the fund for deceased sailors' orphans. The chairman on the occasion was Mr. Alex. Robertson, than whom no fitter could have been chosen. His remarks in introducing each performer were witty and to the point, and as the newspapers would say, he filled the role "with much acceptance," and while the songs and music flowed, drowning the sound of the fretting and foaming ocean, the flowers from "Grave Hill" conservatories nodded and exhaled their perfume as if in appreciation of the gifted singers from the same dear soil!

[I might add that the flowers were sent by some of the "Newfoundland Highlanders" to young lady friends on board, and decorated the tables the whole way across.]

Meanwhile a picture of the snow-clad hills we had so recently left, and the winding frost-fringed river seemed again to our hearts the "dearest spot of earth." Not the "Olyde side" with its "Kyles of Bute," its "clock lights," its "Dumbarton Rock" and its castle, its "Wallace Sepulchre," its Dunoon or Loch Lomond, can obliterate for one moment the love of "Home!"

Glasgow is, as usual, "bonny, busy and prosperous"; Harry Lauder is singing here to packed houses for the past month, and every seat is booked in advance for weeks yet! It would be well if some of the people who make so much fuss about the state of our streets at home could see the thoroughfares of this mammoth city at night! I think their comments would cease in favour of our own! The debris could be gathered in abundance, and it was evident that the reprehensible spitting is still largely indulged in! Then, too, I think their insinuations re the intemperance of St. John's would be justly silenced. Though a considerably large seaport town, we are as the "Garden of Eden" to some of the cities this side the "Herring Pond!" A walk through any of the streets here of a Saturday night would convince us of the injustice to ourselves of such reproaches.

And now London! The chief topic in the newspapers, and at the "House" is the Reciprocity Treaty between Canada and the United States. Joseph Chamberlain and his son Austin think that Canada might have waited till the Imperial Conference in May. And some go so far as to say, it's the first "wedge in the cleavage" of the Empire and that eventually Canada will be drawn within the "orbit of Washington." However, who can blame Canada? Her appeals to Britain had been repeatedly ignored; and to quote the newspapers she has now "banged, barred and bolted the door of Imperial preference." Meanwhile London life throbs on—the same throngs seem to pulsate through the city only in increased thousands; the same fruit vendors appears to stand up and down Ludgate Hill; the same flower-girls, the same miserable sellers of cheap and portable wares; the theatres are crowded, the hotels likewise, and we wonder where will the crowds stow away for the Coronation; the horse "bus" with a few exceptions has given way to the motor bus and taxi cab, and the latter can now be seen in waiting lines, where the "Hansom" stood before.

To give the reader some idea of the substitution of the motor for the horse, the "London General Omnibus Company" at one blow put aside 900 of the beasts for the horseless vehicle! Of course this is according to the order of the "survival of the fittest"; but no one could have imagined there could have been, in three short years, such a radical change as this.

One hundred and fifty proposals of marriage in two weeks, eighty of them in one day—is the record of Miss Stella Cooley, a working girl in Denver, Col. Miss Cooley two weeks ago put an advertisement in the personal column, saying she was a girl who was reared on a farm and knew the value of a dollar, and would like to marry a man, a farmer preferred, who would appreciate her.

which the Italian officials poured a volley of musketry, disabling one and obliging the fugitives to drop over a ton of tobacco and saccharine. Another of Capponi's gangs succeeded in rushing the frontier, and got nearly as far as Bergamo, when they were pounced upon. They had in their possession three million contraband cigars and cigarettes.

Solely from the wages which she received as a domestic in fifty-two years continuous service in a fourth avenue household, New York, Marie Spiekol, who died eight months ago, saved a fortune of $32,000. Numerous relatives have written from England for a share in the estate. The woman was 81 years of age when she died.
